"NANCY BROWN"

Nancy Brown is coming with not one, but scoes of pretty girls, stylish, wearing beautiful millinery and stunning examples of the modiste's art, to sing themselves into favor.

A big cast of players, a dozen catchy songs which are famous throughout the whole country as well as several new ones, which are just creeping into popularity, a chorus of pretty girls. There is rollicking mirth and laughing song: there is a threehour swish of skirts, of changing cenes, convulsing climaxes and situations that are t 'oarlously funny. An expensive and artistic production will be seen when the Wells, Dunne & Harlan Company headed by Miss Marble the favorite comedienne present Nancy Brown. When Arthur C. Aiston announced a new production three years ago in "At the Old Cross Roads, the public knew that it must be a meritorious play, or Manager Aiston would not be connected with it. As a consequence the play was given a cordial greeting from the start all over the country. Manager Alston has spared no expense in the way of proper stage environment, correct costuming and properties. The company contains such well known people as Estha Williams and James M. Brophy, and some members of the original Broadway cast and several others of equal note. A great deal of interest is being shown in the engagement of this company, and the Indications are that the sale of seats, which opens at Greenwall's opera house Friday night, Jan. 19, will be an

DRAMATIC NEWS

One of the New York successes to be presented here during the coming sea-"The Duke of Killicrankie," in which Miss Rose Coghlan will appear. This comedy not only enjoys the distinction of having been the most pronounced hit of last season in New York, but otherwise enjoyed a successful run of nearly two years at the Criterion and Wyndham theater in London. Of the author, Robert Marshall it may be said that there are few among our dramatists who equal him in the art of dialogue. "The Duke of Killicrankie" is an example of a play in which the dialogue moves just as we would expect it were the characters real. We are interested more in the brilliant verbal exchanges than in any intensity of plot.

For Paul Gilmore's new spectacular comedy romance, "Captain Debonnair, his manager, Mr. Jules Murry, obtained furniture which was used in Quebec and New York at the period of which the play treats, the latter half of the Seventeenth century. This is an illustration of the care taken to make "Captain Debonnaire" historically correct.

Kyrle Bellew, the English Actor, will be seen in "Raffles, the Amateur its familiar wedding march: Pue- | Cracksman." This play, filled as it is with novelty, and sustained by action, might well win success with a mediocre company, but, presented with wellchosen players, it is almost impossible for even the most hardened theatergoer not to become enthused at the merits of the performers.

"The Fortune Teller" is the kind of a beauty show which is in great demand at this time. The number of managers ! who have this season made productions which require the services of the young woman who can sing, and are pretty as well, has been unusually large, but it is said that the Messrs. Aborn, in their production of "The Fortune Tellers" have a coterie in their chorus that would be hard to excel, either as to grace, beauty or vocal accomplishments.

Miss Mildred Holland will appear here in "The Lily and the Prince." Her performances are always invariably of such dignity, strength and brilliancy that to witness them is to indulge in an artistic treat. She is one of the most finished artists upon the Ameri-

THE OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Mr. Isaac Brock, 117 Years Old Last Birthday.

TSAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLen-I nan county, Texas, has lived for 117 years. For many years he resided at Bosque Falls, eighteen miles west of Waco, but now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas. Some time ago, by request, Uncle Isaac came to Waco and sat for his picture, holding in his band a stick cut from the grave of General Andrew Jackson. Mr. Brock is a dignified old gentleman, showing few signs of decrepitude. His family Bible is still preserved, and it shows that the date of | troubles. his birth was written 117 years ago.

TN speaking of his good health and Lextreme old age, Mr. Brock says: "After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper thing for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate. For 117 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States.

"I have always been a very healthy man, but, of course, subject to the affections which are due to sudden changes in the climate and temperature. During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds and diarrhoea.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only, reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy. "It exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it keeps me in good appetite; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for his disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe and found it to be just the thing." In a later letter, Mr. Brock writes:

"I am well and feeling as well as I have for years. The only thing that bothers me is my sight. If I could see better I could walk all over the farm, and it would do me good. I would no be without Peruna."

Yours truly, Ison Brock

When old age comes, it brings with it catarrhal diseases. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people. This remedy of the age for catarrhal explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to many old people.

The popular outcry against this monstrous New Jersey verdict is easy to understand. Men are joining in it even though no man has or ever will quite understand some phases of the woman's side of the case. But every woman, ignorant or educated, of supreme purity or depraved viciousness, does understand, and understanding justifies this poor, ignorant Italian woman, who took the only means she knew to rid herself of a loathed persecution. There is observed every once in a while that the characteristics of the masculine of the stone age have not yielded entirely to the influence of civllization. There are some who are outspoken in their opinion that there are types of men below the scale of the brute; that comparison with the dumb animals of creation is insulting the ani-

This type is not confined to men of ignorance or of the lower class. It is tempermental, and the woman sufferer is usually the woman of his class.

The difference between the Mrs. Tolla, class and the woman of a higher social scale is the latter knows better how to defend herself. She has weapons put in her hand by society, education and better environments that are as effective as the knife or the bullet in ridding her of an offensive persecution. But all the more and because of this better protection, the woman of the higher social scale is rallying to the help of her weaker sister, who is the victim of the law.

It is not unusual to hear women say to each other: "No man will presume in his attentions if the woman is the seated at the round table and at the right sort." To give in detail the experiences of even one woman who has to earn her livelihood would not be believed except by other women workers. The woman protected by certain social distinctions and caste is comparatively safe. But stories could be told of men's conduct there that would bring horror to every upright conscience. No one denies that there are women of weak and wrong intents. But the commonly upheld theory that men await invitations before offering unbecoming conduct is untenable. It is preached most by those who desire to appear more superior than the test of the world. No man can understand the loathing that certain of his attentions creates when they are unwelcome. His vanity quite precludes his understanding. That this loathing is strong enough to prompt murder is easily believable by every woman who has passed the nursery of life. That explains, too, that petition of 181,000 names that went from the state of Ohio to the New Jersey governor, and the other petitions of hundreds of thousands that are being forwarded from every state in the

The effort made by certain sentimentalists to compare the cases of Mrs. Rogers of Vermont and Mrs. Tolla somewhat fail in convincing. Mrs. Rogers was as depraved as a human being can well be. The object was sordid, to secure life insurance with which to marry the man with whom she had established illicit relations. It is frequently said that Fort Worth's lack of city improvements is because the town has grown with such incredible rapidity that the city administration has been situated as the mother of a fast-growing girl, whose skirts persisted in remaining chronically short in spite of letting out tucks

However, most girls with energetic mothers manage to have their legs "kivered" even though she may be bare-legged and bare-footed.

The municipal government has been busy for years letting out municipal hems and tucks. But part of our city anatomy is painfully exposed. When a woman says "I am racked with pain," the word "racked" recalls the days when they stretched the tender bodies of women on the rack with rope and pulley until the very joints cracked.

Fancy an attendant saying to the tortured woman, "Please smile and look pleasant." And yet the woman "racked with pain." is expected to smile through her agony and to make home happy. She can't do it. It is against Nature. Generally speaking, the racking pains of ill-health such as headache, backache and "bearing-down pains" are related to derangements or disorders of the organs distinctly feminine. When this condition is removed the general health is restored. and with health comes back the smile o nome without offensive questionings or examinations by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It must be remembered that the footlights destroy many of the usual shadows of the face and reverse the others. To counteract the glare of the footlights, quite a little work is necessary about the eyes. Put a little rouge under the eye and on the upper lid below the brow, to give fullness. A dark blue line is drawn just over the upper eyelash and down at the corners of the eye. The lashes are dusted full of blue paint. Underneath the eye a light blue line is drawn to join the dark blue corners. Then a red dot is put at the inside corner. Shadows and lines about the eye denote age.

HUGE RESERVOIR FOR OKLAHOMA

tain Park Venture

Special to The Telegram.

LAWTON, Okla., Jan. 13 .- Six billion cubic feet of water is to be the capacity of an irrigation reservoir soon to be constructed by the Otter Creek Irrigation Company of Oklahoma, near the town of Mountain Park. This is a greater storage capacity than any other irrigating enterprise in the United States at present.

In speaking of the great project Mark Roberts of Mountain Park, general superintendent of the company and one of the most thorough and practical irrigation men of the west,

To Dam Otter Creek

"The company proposes to build a dam across Otter creek, four and a half miles above the town of Mountain Park. At this point the creek, which is a bold running stream, flows between two granite bluffs, forming a deep canon a mile and a half long and only about two hundred feet wide. The bluffs on either side are several hundred feet high and of solid rock. This granite can be taken out at small cost for building the dam.

To Have Granite Foundation "When completed the dam will be sixty feet high and 200 feet long. It will rest upon a foundation of solid. flawless granite. Grooves will be cut in the walls of the gorge, into which the courses of masonry will be dovetailed, forming a structure which nothing but the overturning of the supporting mountains can displace.

Valley Will Form Reservoir "The waste water will pass around the mountain nearly a mile above, and no water will flow over the dam, even in times of the most exceptional rainfall. Three creeks come together just above the canon where there is level valley or 6,000 acres. When the dam reaches the height of sixty feet this valley will be converted into vast reservoir, with a storage capacity of 6,000,000,000 cubic feet of water. Reservoir to Be Largest Known

"This is a greater storage capacity than any other irrigating enterprise in the United States has at present. The drainage area of the three creeks is about two hundred square miles, most of it granite mountains, and a part of it is covered by one of the government's forest reserves. The run off of this area is so rapid that most of the rainfall will be gathered into the reservoir. It is in a semi-arid belt, first commandant where irrigation can be most successfully applied."

Had Been Abandoned

This project embraces the dam site and drainage area included in what was known as the "Otter creek project," which was inaugurated about two years ago by engineers in the service of the United States reclamation service. It was abandoned as being less practicable than what is known as the "Navajo project," which lies about forty miles west of the Otter Creek

Supply for Foothills

The Otter Creek Company proposes acres of available lands lying south of the very foothills of the Wichita mountains. To the west the altitude is gradual, so that the flow from the sources of the streams whose waters are to be utilized is of sufficient strength and nearly enough perennial to supply an inexhaustible reservoir of water. To the south stretch hundreds of thousands of acres of level prairie lands of rich soil.

Plan Is Available The plans of the company have received the indorsement of competent engineers in the service of the United States and practical irrigation men from all sections of the country. Congressman John H. Stephens of Texas, who resides just across Red River from the project, and Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, while they have no stock interest in the concern, are lending the project their influence and

To Consolidate Towns

The company has adopted an unique plan for selling stock. They have secured an option of a body of land lying between Mountain Park and Snyder, which have been rival towns, lying only two miles apart, and this will be platted into town lots and placed on the market. The company will also purchase a large number of vacant lots in each town and by these methods consolidate the two towns into one large town, the headquarters of one of the largest irrigation systems of the country. Purchasers of lots obtain interest in the irrigation

SCORES OF BILLS FOR INSURANCE

Congress Flooded With Measures to Give Relief

Special to The Telegram. WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13.-All sorts of remedies have been suggested for that attack of bad insurance under which the country is laboring. He isn't the only doctor. Fred Landis of Indiana and Butler Ames of Massachusetts each has chosen publicity as his

Dr. Morrell of Pennsylvania has introduced not fewer than five bills dealing with the insurance problem. One provides "for the extension of the sovereign visitorial power of the United States" so as to include the inspection, supervision and control of every life insurance corporation, any part of whose assets is invested in the capital stock of any trust company or banking association; also the inspection of the trust or banking associations by the comptroller of the currency, who may appoint receivers for such institutions, as in the case of national banks.

He has another remedy, entitled, "a bill to place all insurance companies under the supervision and control of the department of commerce and labor." Another Morrell bill places insurance companies and all subsidiary trust and banking companies under the supervision and control of the treasury department and under the national banking act. Another bill is "for the protection of the workingmen of the United States and their families," by requiring insurance companies to refund one-half of the payments when policies lapse by reason of non-payment of installment premiums. Deferred Dividend Tax Suggested by Wisconsmite

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 13,-Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host declared that $10,000,000 in deferred dividends are being withheld by the big insurance companies from Wisconsin policy holders. He recommends a state tax of 5 per cent on such unpaid dividends and believes another special session of the Wisconsin legislature to take up insurance would be justified. He "The best remedy that can be offer-

PARIS, Jan. 13.—Apropos of this engagement of Alfonso XIII. to Princess Ena of Battenberg, there is a romantic historical fact which is generally unknown to the public. The mother of this young princess was herself sought in marriage by the prince imperial, the ill-fated son of the Empress Eugenie, who perished so tragically in Zuiuland. They were to be wedded on the prince's return from that fatal expedition.

In memory of this incident connected with the life of her only son, Empress Eugenle has just settled an income of 100,000 francs ($20,000) upon the child of the woman who should have been her own daughter-in-law.

A Vision of Pretty Feet

When people speak of the "cult of beauty" they are apt to think of the face, or, perhaps, the figure of a woman, but they do not, as a rule, take such details as the hands or feet into consideration. And yet it is a wellknown fact that the perfection of the Parisienne's charm lies in that very attention to detail which is apt to be lacking in the women of other nation-

If a visitor to Paris wants to see a regular beauty show of feet, let him go to the Palais de Glace (if he can gain admission) on the day when the Skating Club meets. There he will see the pick of our aristocracy who have any pretension to liking exercise disporting themselves upon the ice in the most fetching of short skirts and with the prettiest of shoes twinkling about on silver skates. ASTOR MAKES DOLLARS FLY

William Waldorf Builds Palace in England

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

By Cable to The Telegram

LONDON, Jan. 13 .- Mr. William Waldorf Astor, who is laying out an estate at Hever Castle, near Tunbridge Wells, is making the dollars fly with amazing prodigality. His declared intentions are to restore the castle to its old-time giories. But as the ancient pile is one of the few places of historic Interest in the county of Kent, his project is not viewed with favor by learned antiquaries and the people living in the neighborhood.

It was at Hever Castle that King Henry VIII, courted Anne Boleyn, who was afterward executed by his majesty's command on Tower Hill, consequently it is held that the castle is, or should be, open to the public.

This was the case at one time. But Mr. Astor wills it otherwise. He has actually induced the local authorities to close an old road and allow him to construct a new one further away from the castle. He wants privacy and Intends to gain it at all cost. * Watchmen consequently bar the main entrance to the grounds, and state policemen in the pay of Mr. Astor are employed to keep inquisitive or any other strangers away.

Even gentlemen farmers in the district have been snubbed. The other day a carriage and pair drove up to the watchhouse and a gentleman alighted. The cockades in the coachman's hat indicated the owner's rank. The watchman touched his hat. "No admittance, sir," he said. "But I am Lord ---, and I have come to visit Hever Castle," urged the visitor. Impressed with this, the watchman consulted a superior. a royal prince," he said on his return. This wholesale disregard of public feeling is making the millionaire more unpopular than he was before.

"It's selfishness incarnate," is the verdict of alarmed archaeologists. He is building a large power station-for himself; he has constructed a series of villages-for himself; he has laid out a model farm-for himself. But this seizure of an old historic pile itself is regarded as sacrilege, this silence and secrecy is looked upon as a choice specimen of "moneyed snobbery."

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Mrs. George Law, the handsome American widow, who was made a great deal of last season, has invited the Hon. Mrs. Walter Chetwynd, a great friend of royalty, and a very striking personality, to accompany her on a trip to New York, Chicago and the west.

Mrs. Chetwynd has practically decided to go, her only objection being the leaving of her little daughter in London. If she does go she will certainly impress New York by her stately carriage, her marvelous complexion and her animation.

She talks and dresses more like a Parisian than an Englishwoman. Her skin is the envy of every woman in London. She can face the early breakfast glare with equanimity and she has dimples. Mrs. Chetwynd is a great favorite with the king and queen, all her relatives having occupied household positions at court.

She is a sister of the present Lord Monson, and so has an American sister-in-law, Lady Monson having been Mrs. Ternure of New York. HOW THEY KEEP CZAR'S FOOD PURE

Army of Cooks and Tasters Employed at Palace

 "I'm afraid there may be a little formaldehyde in that roast beef, your imperial highness," said the head chef of the palace of the czar of all the Russians, "but I was very suspicious of the alleged strictly fresh beef offered on the market." "All right, chef," replied the czar, "I'll stand for formaldehyde, but be sure that there's no strychnine, carbolic acid or rough on rats mixed up

 One might imagine from reports of the czar's enforced seclusion and the fact that death by poison is one of his many great fears, that a conversation something like the above might take place in the imperial palace. But the fact is that Nicholas partakes of an extraordinarily extensive menu, and expends enormous sums to procure it and also to secure himself from the sudden death ingredients that so many of his faithful subjects would like to enter into the imperial bill of fare.

To begin with, Eugene Kratz, head chef of the palace, ranks as a general in the Russian army and his salary is about $50,000 a year. He bosse all the imperial kitchens. About the only time Kratz does manual work is when the czar's appetite becomes passe, and, as Alexander sighed for a new world to conquer, Nicholas craves for something new to eat.

Then Kraiz gets busy. He hikes to his private kitchen and thinks and experiments-mixes, stews, bakes things which no cook book ever thought ofuntil he finally satisfies himself that he has got something that will "hit" Nicholas fust right.

But he doesn't call Nicholas in and say: "Try a spoonful of this, Nick, I'm sure you will like it." Oh, no, nothing like that. The imperial tasters are ordered to the front.

First come the under chefs and each gets a taste. As to whether or not they really approve from a gastronomic standpoint-according to Victor Hurtzler, who served two years in the winter palace kitchen, and who is now chef of a San Francisco hotel-that does not count.

The idea is to see if any of these under chefs drops dead or falls into convulsions-a sort of case of trying it on the dog. Then the under chefs get into the tasting line, and next a major of the army. No fatal or serious results following, then is served to the czar a dish that fits a king and would kill a peasant.

The czar frequently submits a menu for the day, and when it is under preparation 800 men are hustling in the kitchen enveloped in delicate The breakfasts vary much, but caviar and pate de foie gras are never absent. The czar falls to on break-fast at about 8 o'clock. At 11 he is ready to go into the game again. This time it is salads, soups, cold meats, ices and desserts.

That seems pretty tall eating al-ready, but the 5 o'clock dinner is the real thing. The cooks have beeff steaming over it all day. The major on duty partakes of every dish, after which it is placed in an elevator having a closed shaft. Everything in readiness, the major enters dinner and the major are lifted direct. ly to the dining room into the presence of the czar. The major again goes through the tasting performance, and, nothing happening to him, the imperial family sits down to dinner.

This dining room is made of cast fron and sealed between meals like a bank vault. It is entirely bomb proof. The czar starts in on dinner with a number of appetizers, then "bortsch" soup, hot and cold mean half a dozen entrees, hot and cold fowls, many different vegetables, puddings, ices, cakes, wine, tea and vodes. The number of courses are always the same. Nicholas never misses on of them. However, he seldom ead between meals.

OUR LAY SERMON

Is the bad boy disappearing, and the bold, bad girl fast taking his place? Such is the remarkable declaration made by the clerk of the juvenile court in the city of Chicago, who has held that position for the past five years. The statement was made before an organization of women, and in the course of his remarks the speaker said:

"During the first six months following the estab-Hishment of the juvenile court only six delinquent girls were brought before the bar. The year before last the number was increased to 384, and it is growing constantly. I believe when the totals are made for last year the number will be found to reach nearly 600. Young women, and all, ought to work day and night to create a public sentiment which will cause the extinction of these infamous dance halls in which nearly all those girls started on their downward career."

Whether the Chicago man is correct or not, it is morally certain that the parents of this broad land of ours are entirely too lax in the attention given the daughters that many of them are permitted to journey rapidly down the road that leads straight to de-

While there is a constant and proper effort to bring the boys up in the straight and narrow way, too little attention is given the girls, who are believed to be artless and innocent and in no danger from coming in contact with the world. And if all men were as good and pure as these young girls are, and there was no inherent depravity in the boys that are permitted to constantly roam the streets, there would be more -foundation for this popular conception. But, alas for the frailty of all things human, the girl is the only hope of the situation, and too often becomes contaminated from her associations.

This is a day and time when many young girls foolishly imagine that they must be just a little bit fast in order to appear chic and interesting. They begin by loitering at the front gate with some caller, progress to an indulgence in slang phrases, extend operations to moonlight strolls and buggy rides, and one indiscretion soon leads to another. In this way the work progresses until many girls are led into things that develop into ruin and degradation.

And the girls are not so much to blame in the matter as are the parents who seem indifferent to existing conditions, and permit these things to go on directly under their own observation. If parents would do their plain duty in the premises there would be fewer girls encountered in compromising situations, and there would not be such reports of female deprayity as come from Chicago, which has long been regarded as a very hotbed of vice and all forms of cor-

Too many girls are permitted on the streets at all hours in our larger cities. You can find them there at all hours of the day and many hours of the night, and at all ages ranging from the little one just able to toddle to the miss who is launching forth in search of conquest. And if it is important that boys should be kept off the streets, it is far more important that the same regulations should be prescribed for the

All girls are not alike. There are some who cannot be led from the straight and narrow path, but there are others who in a spirit of fun or adventure can be easily persuaded. Unfortunately, the parent never knows the ordeal his girl has been subjected to until it has become a grim reality and too often he does not know it at all. Girls should be very careful in their conduct, realizing that one false step is usually sufficient to accomplish the most direful results. A very safe rule for the young girl is to make a confidante of her mother in all things. Let her resolve very early in life that she will have no secrets from her mother, but tell her all that comes into her life, and if she does this she will rarely come to grief. The mother knows the ways of the world and can warn of the consequences of little indiscretions that may seem wholly devoid of danger to the younger mind. No mother is going to advise her daughter to do what is wrong and improper, and it is best that mothers should cultivate such a procedure on the part of their daughters. And when the shadows of evening are drawing their sable curtains over the close of the day, see that your ewe lamb is safely housed for the night. Remember that darkness covers a multitude of sins, and safety lies in extending the proper and necessary protection. It will be too late when the wolf has broken into the fold. The way to avoid trouble is to pre-

STRAINING AT TECHNICALITIES

Because Judge Williams has seen fit to express an opinion concerning the injustice of the cotton differential, which places Houston upon the same basis as Galveston as a cotton market, the esteemed Post charges him with the prejudging of the case, and seeks to disparage his candidacy for railway commissioner. While the Post did not say just exactly what The Telegram suggested as the Houston idea, it is too palpable to admit of any form of argument .-

The Telegram begs the question. No one has offered any objection to an expression of opinion from Mr. Williams. That is a right of every American citizen, a right and privilege not to be controverted, and if Mr. Williams had contented himself with merely an expression of opinion he would not have been criticised, certainly not by the Post. But he went further than that; he volunteered to say publicly what he would do in a given case where he might be called upon to act as a judge or arbiter as between contending interests, and before he had heard the evidence upon which such contention would have to be decided. As the Post said before:

"The Post's criticism of Mr. Williams is that he decides, off-hand, a case before he has heard the evidence. It must be remembered that the decisions of the railway commission are made after hearing evidence under oath, as in a court of law. And it is well to bear in mind the very material difference between interested newspaper assertions and testimony delivered under the solemnity of an oath. Does not The Telegram know that if any such discriminating conditions really existed as has been charged by the Galveston-Dallas News, and reiterated by Mr. Williams, it would be a very easy thing to correct them in the courts?" But The Telegram does not seem to think much of the courts, for it says: The courts are very often convenient vehicles for tying up matters of difference, but they do not always serve the purpose of granting relief from obnoxious and oppressive conditions. There are many loopholes and technicalities in the-law, and wise men have learned that an appeal to the law is not always the safest expedient when the desired result can be attained in a more proper manner.

When a disputant tries to cover with an argument like that-with the contention that the courts of the country cannot be trusted to faithfully adjudicate the differences between citizens-It gives the case away. -Houston Post.

The Post jumped on Judge Williams because his expression anent the Galveston-Houston cotton differential could be construed into an unfriendly declaration against Houston. The Telegram went after the Post for the reason that its criticisms were unjust to a leading citizen of Fort Worth, and a gentleman who is a candidate for state office. Judge Williams is clearly entitled to his personal opinions, and may express them with impunity. He has stated what he would do under certain conditions, but he has not yet said he would debar Houston or any other interested point from offering "evidence." In fact, it is to be presumed he would also be willing to hear "evidence"

The Telegram thinks that an appeal to the courts should be made as a last resort in all contentionsthat settlement of all controversies should be made outside the court room when possible. This is not based. on a lack of faith in the courts as proper arbiters of matters that cannot be disposed of outside their circle, but upon the fact that litigation is both a very costly and uncertain procedure.

When a disputant seeks to attribute motives to its opponents that do not exist-like the lawyer who attempts to put the answer in the mouth of the witness-it shows a weakness that is extremely disap-

West Texas cotton growers still have much of their last year's crop in the fields, and in the vicinity of Stamford, it is reported that pickers are receiving as much as $1.25 per 100 pounds for gathering the fleecy staple. The greatest trouble with West Texas as a cotton country is that it annually makes more than it can harvest conveniently.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

No federal appointment in this city has ever given such general satisfaction as the appointment of A. L. Sharpe to be collector of customs. Mr. Sharpe has never been active in local politics and hence has escaped the opposition that must always be faced by leading politicians when they become candidates for public office. But he is a republican of true principle and old-fashioned ideas, and the enthusiastic support offered him by democrats is simply a tribute to his worth as a man, not a sign of Mr. Sharpe's political indifference.-El Paso Herald.

One reason El Paso is so proud of her new collector is owing to the fact that he is an El Paso man. Heretofore the rule has been to give this fat office to some rank outsider, while the hungry at home went without pie.

It is hard to get the producer to hold down the cotton acreage when the staple is bringing such a high price. The general disposition this year will be to plant a very large cotton crop, and let the matter of price take care of itself.

PUBLICOPINION

The brilliant new life of Lord Randolph Churchill by his son, Winston Churchill, leads the Chicago Tribune to these remarks on Lord Randolph's career which it will be remembered ended suddenly after he had been five months chancellor of the exchequer (having previously been an able parliamentary leader and a secretary of state for India):

Lord Randolph Churchill was an aristocratic democrat. He ardently desired the welfare of the masses, but he sincerely believed that the governing classes were better fitted by training and nature to rule. He had no faith in the ability of the liberal party to accomplish any good for the country, but he had no patience with the blunders, the slowness and the inconsistencies of the conservatives. When he assumed the office of chancellor of the exchequer he believed that he had it in his power at least to lighten the burdens of the people. He proposed slashing reductions in the expense of government, the suppression of ostentatious waste, and an honest endeavor toward economy and a just distribution of taxation. He was met by the force of inertia in party councils. Economy was a good watchward for a campaign, but not a principle of action. His plans were not approved. The bright dreams faded. Embittered, despondent, he gave up the fight. The lesson of Lord Randolph Churchill's life is that political wild oats must be reaped as well as any other. A man without a party is independent out of office, in office he is helpless. If he wishes sincerely to obtain power in order to use it for good he must be careful to attach to himself loyal supporters, just the same as if he wishes power for merely personal ends. Enemies are not assets, and friends are not when won by derision of their weaknesses. Party government requires mutual concession and patience beyond the reach of discourage-

To maintain this combination is the only way to maintain existing rates, for they have no basis in equity or right reason. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special to The Telegram. WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13.-Following is the "official" statement regarding the case of Mrs. Minor Morris, whose recent visit to the white house has been the occasion for so much newspaper comment. It is made by Assistant Secretary Barnes;

"Mrs. Morris called at the executive office and asked to be allowed to see the President. At the time Secretary Loeb was engaged with the President, and Mr. Barnes saw her. Upon inquiry as to the nature of her business she stated with considerable reluctance that her husband had been unjustly dismissed from a branch of the war department; that she did not propose to have anything to do with the secretary of war concerning it; but that she wanted the President to take it up and see that justice was done.

"She was inforced that the President could not give personal attention to such a matter, and that the decision of the secretary of war would be final. She insisted that she must see the President and when told that that was out of the question, she asserted in boisterous manner that she would not be prevented from seeing him and that she would remain where she was for a month, if need be, unless she saw him sooner.

"She was allowed to remain for some moments. When Mr. Barnes returned to the reception room, shortly after, he found her pacing excitedly up and down the room, and informed her as quietly as possible that she could not see the President, and that it would be useless for her to remain longer. She replied in a loud voice that she would see him, and that she would stay there until she did. She was then advised to drop the matter and to go away quietly.

"This, in still louder tones, she refused to do. She was then told that she must either leave the office at once voluntarily, or it would be necessary to have her put out of the building. At this she shrieked at the top of her voice, 'I will not be put out,' rushed to a chair, threw herself into it, and shouted: 'Don't you have any hands laid on me; I am going to stay here.

until I see the President.' Screams Echoed Through Mansion

"Mrs. Morris' piercing shrieks were heard throughout the building, and it became necessary in the interest of order to have her removed. She was accordingly taken in charge by a police officer, who had witnessed the whole affair. He asked her to go with him quietly. She refused and told him that if she was removed she would have to be dragged every step of the way. Before applying force the officer asked her to leave the office quietly. She shricked her refusal to each request, and was then led from the

"She struggled violently with two police officers, striking, kicking and biting them, all the way from the office building to the eastern entrance of the white house. As soon as she was outside of the office building she threw herself on the ground, and it became necessary to carry her. The officers repeatedly asked her to stand up and walk quietly with them, so that they would not have to use force, but she refused to do so and defied them in shrieks that were heard throughout the white house.

"She was finally removed to police headquarters, where she was charged with disorderly conduct, After her arrest she produced an envelope addressed to the President, which she asked to have delivered to him. This envelope was found to contain a lengthy poem on the subject of insomnia, which she said was her own composition. She stated to the officers that she had not slept for seven nights past.

"There is no truth whatever in the statement made by many of the morning papers that a negro laid hold of Mrs. Morris and assisted in carrying her. One of the colored messengers of the office followed the policemen and gathered up such small articles as were dropped in the woman's struggles, but there was no other foundation whatever for the statement."

"I know, Robert-husband, I know. . The end is here. But what has happened? Tell me everything, that I may comfort you the more. Tell me, Robert, for the dear Christ's sake!" At those words the man stiffened.

"For the dear Christ's sake!" The great fires round his soul had burnt his lust away. There was no more regret or longing for the evil past. All the joys of a sensual life seemed as if they had never been. Now, the pain was the pain of a man, not who knows the worst too soon, but who knows the best too late.

A vivid picture, a succession of thoughts following each other with such kinetic swiftness that they became welded in one single picture, as one may see a vast landscape and torrent, champaign and forest, in one flash of the storm sword, came to him

And, at the last, he saw himself seated at a great table in a noble room. There were soft lights. Silver and flowers were there. Round the board sat many men and women. On their faces was the calm triumph of those who had succeeded in a fine battle, won an intellectual strife. The faces were calm, powerful, serene. They were the salt of society. He saw his own face in a little mirror set among the flowers. His face was even as their faces. Self-reverence had dignified it, self-knowledge and self-control had turned the lines to kindly marble, defiant of time.

At the other end of the table sat a calm and gracious lady, richly dressed in some glowing somber stuff. She was the grave and loving matron who slept by his side.

CHAPTER IX At Walktown Again

The news came to Walktown, the final confirmation of what had been so long suspected, in a short telegram from Basil, dispatched immediately he had left Downing street.

Mr. Byars and Helena had been kept well acquainted with every step in the progress of the investigation. Every since Gortre had left Walktown, after his holiday visit, his suspicions had been ringing in the vicar's ears:

Then, when the matter had been communicated to Sir Michael and Father Ripon, when Spence had started, and Mr. Byars know that all the powers of wealth and intellect were at work, his hopes revived. The vicar's faith had never for a single moment wavered. In the crash of the creeds his deep conviction never wavered.

The light burned steadily before the

Nevertheless his courage had been failing him. Life seemed to have lost its sweetness, and often he humbly wondered when he should die, hoping that the time was not too long-not without a tremulous belief that God would recognize that he had fought the good fight and kept the faith.

In his own immediate neighborhood the consequences of the "Discovery" nearly broke his heart. He had no need to look beyond Walktown. Even the great political events which were stirring the world had left him unmoveed. His own small corner of the vineyard, now, alas! so choked with rank, luxuriant growth, was enough for this faithful pastor. Here he saw nothing but vice suddenly rearing its head and threatening to overwhelm all else. He heard the Holy Names blasphemed with all the inventions of obscene imaginations, assailed with all the wit of full-blooded men amazed and rejoiced that they could stifle their consciences at last. And this after all his life-work among these folk! He had given them of his best. His prayers, his intellect, much of his money had been theirs.

How insolenty they had exulted over him, those coarse and vulgar When Basil had first told Mr. Byars of his suspicions the vicar can hardly have been blamed for regarding them sadly as the generous effects of a young and ardent soul seeking to find an immediate way out of the impasse. The elder man knew that fraud had been at work, but he suspected no such modern and insolent attempt as Basil indicated. It was too much to believe. Gortre had left him most

But his interest had soon become quickened and alive, as the private reports from London reached him. When he knew that great people were moving quietly, that the weight of Sir Michael was behind Gortre, he knew at once that in all probability Basil's suspicions were right. A curious change came over the vicar's public appearances and utter-

It was felt acutely in Manchester. All the wealthy, comfortable, easygoing folk who grudgingly paid a small pew-rent out of their superfluity became alarmed, horribly alarmed, The Christianity which had sat so lightly upon them that at first opportunity they had rushed into the Unidenly a very desirable thing.

Then the vicar got up and locked the keen expert in, and student of, human affairs, and withal a psychologist. He saw his opportunity. His words lashed and stung these renegades. They were made to see themselves as they were; the preacher cut away all the ground from under them. They were left face to face with naked shame

What puzzled and yet uplifted the congregation at St. Thomas' was their vicar's extraordinary certainty the spiritual darkness over the land was shortly to be removed. It was commented on, keenly observed, greatly wondered at.

"Mr. Byars speaks," said Mr. Pryde, a wealthy solicitor, "as if he had some private information about this Palestine discovery. He is so confident that he magnetises one into his own state of mind, and Byars is not a very emotional man either. His conviction is real. It's not hysteria."

And, being a shrewd, silent man, the solicitor formed his own conclusions, but said nothing of them. The church continued full of worshippers.

When the news from Basil came, the vicar was sitting before the fire in his lighted study. He had been expecting the telegram all day. His brain had been haunted by the human nature there was a Divine pity for this wretched pair. He could not help it. It was part of him. He wondered if he were not erring in feeling pity. Was not this, indeed, that mysterious sin against the Holy Ghost for which there was no forgiveness? Was it not said of Judas that for his deed

This good man, who had given his vigorous life and active intellect to God, knelt humbly at his study table and happiness not of this earth filled all his soul. At that supreme moment, when the sense of the glorious vindication of Christ flooded the priest's whole being

Two hours later the vicarage was full of people. The news had arrived. Special editions of the evening papers were being shouted through the streets. Downing street had spoken,

There was a sudden unanimous rush of people to the vicarage. Each big, luxurious house all rour ! sent out its eager owners into the night. They came to show the pastor, who had not failed them in the darkness, their joy and gratitude now that light had come at last. How warm and hearty these Northcountry people were! Mr. Byars had never penetrated so deeply beneath the somewhat forbidding crust of manner and surface-hardness before. Mingled with the sense of shame and misery at their own lukewarmness, there was a fine and genuine desire to show the vicar how they honored him with suppressed emotion, a faint seb was heard. This, to many of them there, was the greatest spiritual moment they had ever known. Confirmation, communion, all the episodic milestones of the professing Christian's life had been experienced and passed decorously enough. But the inward fire had not been there. The deep certainty of God's mysterious commune with the brain, the deep love for Christ which glows so purely and steadfastly among the saints still on earth-these were coming to them n

And, even as the fires of the Paraclete had descended upon the Apostles many centuries before, so now the Holy Spirit began to stir and move these Christians at Walktown.

The vicar offered up the joy and thanks of his people. He prayed that, in His mercy, God would never again let such extreme darkness descend upon the world. Even as He had said, "Neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done." He prayed that all those who had cast into spiritual darkness, or who had left the fold of Christ, might now return to it with contrite hearts and be in peace. Finally, they said the Lord's Prayer with deep feeling, and the vicar blessed them. And for each one there that night became a precious, helpful memory which remained with them for many years. Afterwards, while servants brought coffee, always the accompaniment to any sort of function in Walktown, the talk broke out into a hushed amaze-The news which had been tele-

Houston and Texas Central will be increased in this city following upon the changes in the Santa Fe yards, made the subject of agreement when a Third ward car line was proposed across Seventh street, are taken as further steps in this direction. Men who, though not railroad officials, are yet in position to be ac-quainted with the practical demand in this direction, look upon the idea as one sure to come in time. In this connection they point significantly to an immense brick arch encased in the masonry of the south side of the Fort Worth Union Depot, now used by the Central and Santa Fe trains, as a provision for the changing of that structure in time to one used for eight purposes. This idea, in fact appears to be the dominant one. Should the additional trains be added to those centering at the Texas and Pacific station, it is declared another track covering will be built at the south side of the present building, affording greatly increased trackage for passenger use The "L" to the station building, it is said, would be then extended to Front street, affording ample room for the ncreased business and practically loubling the present size of the "L." These changes easily effected, it is urged would alone be necessary to put the station in position to be the meet-

At this time, 1882, two passenger trains ran each way daily on the two roads, making a total of eight trains each day. In signing railroad tracks, and when the fire was the contract I felt I was partly keeping my promise made to my musical friends fast year, to bring on the Then the fire hose burst (some said greatest musicians before the public that no one would have to go away from home to hear them. No intelligent reader of the daily press needs to be told that Bauer is accounted to the ground and not a tear was shed among the world's greatest pianists. His name is known all over the civilized world and he is looked upon even by his rivals as beyond criticism. From the local music teachers these re a few of the expressions:

Wilbur MacDonald-The most colossal figure in the musical world today. When in doubt as to the meaning of a word or its use educated people go to the dictionary. Pianists in similar quest turn to Harold Bauer. To us he speaks the word of authority on

Miss Izora Spencer Williams-I consider it a very great privilege to have Harold Bauer. To have him at the prices fills me with amazement. He is one of the highest-priced pianists in concert. It is a treat for which I am looking forward, with eagerness. Jacob Schreiner-Bauer in Brussels was considered by the critics and musicians to be the greatest among the planists visiting them. I place himaway up above the top-notchers. Professor Maximilian Bauer-I venture that every music teacher will have cause to be grateful for this engagement of Harold Bauer. He is so wonderful in his mastery of his instrument and so fascinating in his interpretations that music students will be inspired to better and harder work.

Miss Rose Howard-The privilege of hearing Bauer myself and to know that my pupils will hear him is almost too good to be true. We wait long for these visits and there should be such attendance as will assure the coming of others equally as famous. Guy Richardson Pitner - Bauer stands in a niche by himself. To compare him with Paderewski, of De Pachman or any famous player is impossible. Bauer is Bauer. He is great on lines impossible for any other musicians to follow. For Miss Estelle Burns I give a personal belief that Fort Worth has not heard in many a year, if ever, a more beautiful voice or seen a more beauti-fu! woman. In estimating her singing, voice, interpretations and selections, she will have to be compared with the queens of song.

Such a program, Harold Bauer and Miss Burns, will be of a degree of merit never equaled in Texas. Believing this as firmly as I do. ask the support of every man and woman who loves music Tickets are on sale at Ross & Heyer's Music Store, 711 Houston

Insurance Inquiry Has Left Some Questions Open

NEW YORK, Jan, 12 .- That the state nsurance investigation which has brought out the truth of the corrupt alllance between business and politics should end with the story but half told is considered in New York a public

The legislative investigating committee considered its duty complied with when the frauds of the big life insurance concerns were laid sufficiently bare for the legislature to form a scheme of legislation by which the great fiduciary concerns shall hereafter operate in the interests of their policy

Out of the tangled mass of evidence hang a thousand strings which lead to greater and more important truths concerning Wall street financiers and state and national politics.

Thomas F. Ryan, who bought the controlling interest in the Equitable from James H. Hyde, and who is a financier-politician, might explain why he paid, as he says, $2,500,000 for 502 shares of Equitable stock, par value $50,200, that is limited by law to 7 per cent dividends. Ryan's legal earnings on this investment cannot be more than $3,514 a year. The interest on $2,500,-000 at 4 per cent is $100,000. Is Mr. Ryan sacrificing $96,486 annually for the privilege of merely controlling the $413,000,000 assets of the Equitable society? Why?

George B. Cortelyou, chairman of th republican national committee, spent the $150,000 contributed by the "Big Three" in the last Roosevelt campaign. Should he not be made to say whether he knew that it belonged to the policy holders and was contributed contrary to law and in violation of a sacred trust? Did he have any part to play in the scheme to foist Hyde upon America as the French ambassador? What did he do to carry out Platt's admitted theory that politicians are under a moral obligation not to attack the interests that support them? Frank W. Higgins, governor of New York state, reappointed Supt. Hendricks after he was aware that Henaricks had persistently defended corruption in insurance. Why? United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew has never explained what he did Equitable. He recommended that Hyde's salary be increased to $100,000 Senator Platt, the collector of the "boodle" for fifteen years, owes some thing to the American people. What is going to be done about him?

Benjamin B. Odell, former governor and the ostensible boss of the republi. can party in New York state, might further explain the coincidence of his having received from Hyde $75,000 in settlement of his shipbuilding claims on the same day that he abandoned his fight against Depew for re-election to the senate.

Francis Hendricks, . state superintendent of insurance, who has been affixing the seal of the state to fraudulent and perjured statements, has much to explain. Who received the millions from the

WITH THE NEW BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

"The House of Mirth," by Mrs. Edith Wharton, portrays life in certain "sets" of higher society in New York city in its seeming endless round of pleasure, showing the reader that some of the women do not smoke cigarettes, play bridge or flirt with the husbands and brothers of their friends; but, as a whole, the volume intended to show side-lights on the history of one Lily Bart is composed of snatches from the lives of naughty people handled in a nice way and with lapses of scenery that are quite suggestive, if one is to judge from the conversations indulged in at the opening of certain chapters. But neither is the tale impossible, nor the characters overwrought, and, ending as it does in such a consistently natural way, the last thread in the weave of the plot having been disposed of in a manner satisfactory to the writer and admissably relieving to an ordinary reader, the novel ends almost as it begun, while the after feelmgs of the reader are an unusual wonder concerning the heroine and the pity for others, the larger part of whom are so unfortunate as to be compelled to eke out a miserable existence on ten thousand a year.

The characters are not over-appealing, being for the most part folks with little to do beyond amuse themselves by intrigue and winning each others' money; but the skill of the writer has lent a fascination to small talk, receptions, balls, dinners, theater parties and other rapid-fire functions that makes them seem really worth while as a vocation in life

The story is simple. Lily Bart, whose mother had a love of "not living like a pig," which drove Bart to financial oblivion and, shortly after, to his grave, returns to New York and after the death-of her mother, of whom it is related that "she died-of a deep disgust," is taken under the wing of an aunt, Mrs. Peniston, who "thought the country lonely and trees damp. and cherished a vague fear of meeting a bull." Miss Bart is minded to take the advice of a matron friend and marry Percy Gryce, an alleged collector of "Americana" and pale, apronstringed and wealthy. She wavers in her choice and hears an avowal of affection from Lawrence Selden, who runs away to Europe because he hears scandalous gossip concerning certain financial transactions between herself and the husband of one of her bosom friends, in which he supposed she knowingly allowed the man to speculate in the street for her and agreeably pocketed the winnings, or rather, lost them at bridge.

Approached by a charwoman who has seen her coming down the steps at "The Dominick," where Selden Itved, Miss Bart pays cash for a package of letters written to Selden by a former flame and taken from his waste basket by the charwoman, who thinks were written by Miss Bart. She seals the package and lays it careful- | charm and humor of the tales. (New ly away. Later, in a tour of the continent, after a stormy scene with her aunt, in which she confesses that she has lost heavily at bridge and in which her aunt becomes furious, the writer of the letters does her a great wrong, but the letters are not brought forth, for the probable reason that they were written to Selden, meaning that an exposure of them would also expose him. Returning to New York, after a stormy scene with her hostess, she finds her aunt dead and the will leaves her the pitiful sum of $10,000, which breaks her heart so much that she really and truly battles along with herself, keeping the truth from Selden until, following her death from an overdose of chloral, Selden finds that the check was made payable to the married man who thought he could buy Lily and whom she thought was speculating with her own

The bit of womanly sentiment in the plot is the package of letters. They are never used and she burns them without Selden ever really knowing anything of the sort of heroine he had known, or that she had loved him better than life. So, at the end, Selden, with the reader, is still guessing.

TOLD BY UNCLE REMUS

The genial Joel Chandler Harris, when asked recently to write more Uncle Remus stories, replied with characteristic modesty, "But do you really think that people want to hear any more from old Uncle Remus?" There is no doubt as to the answer most people would make to this question, especially if they could peep into this new volume before answering. Old Uncle Remus loses nothing as time goes on; he is the same tender-hearted, sensible old fellow, with the never-failing treasure of stories. The little boy in this volume is the "little boy's little boy," and a dreamy, beautiful child, but according to old Uncle Remus, entirely too pale and beautiful. All the fun and mischief have been disciplined out of him by his exceedingly modern mother, and to the old man it seems necessary to wake him up, to make him more normal and healthy. He succeeds first in winning the little fellow's confidence and getting him to laugh. Then he tells him story after story, beguiling him, amusing him, but slyly interpolating much homely wisdom, and arousing the dormant imaginative faculty in the child's mind. The stories concern the sly Brer Rabbit, who retains his clever faculty of getting the best of all bargains; sly Brer Fox, old King Lion, Astute Brer Wolf, contented Sir Crow, little Mister Cricket and all the other amusing creatures. The last story is slightly different, telling the story of the hard-headed woman and the long-suffering husband who bewitched the ax and the pot, and the hard-headed woman's punishment. The makeup of the book is beautiful, and the numerous illustrations by Frost,

Conde and Verbech add much to the

EDITORIAL WILD OATS

A collection of Mark Twain's writings on the subject of his experiences in sundry journalistic capacities is printed under the title "Editorial Wild Oats." Some of these were first published as far back as 1875. They include "My First Literary Venture," once he was left in charge of the Hanonce he was left in charge o fthe Hannibal Journal, during which period he set all Hannibal by the ears. Then he got a job as associate editor on a paper in Tennessee, the humor of which consists in the exaggerated account of the trials of southern editors who were daily shot at. He also tells "How I Edited an Agricultural Paper," and his famous paper on the "Killing of Julius Caesar Localized," is here reprinted. The humor of many of these papers still retains its quality. (New York; Harper & Bros.)

THE LINE OF LOVE

"All the world loves a lover," and therefore, all the world should feel a debt of gratitude toward James Branch Cabell, who has followed "The Line of Love." His book, a most handsome one, with illustrations in color, follows love through some of the centuries. Quaint and impassioned love stories are recalled, cast into new form-they are not revived, for most of them are deathless-but they are newly pointed The first one is the old story, "The Episode Called Adhelmar at Puy-The date of it extends from April 14, 1355, to Oct. 23, 1356. It was first told by Nicolas de Caen and was told in desasyllabic couplets. Mr. Cabell's task has been to retell it in readable prose. The second episode deals with "The Love Letters of Sir John Falstaff, beginning March 2, 1414. The third deals with "Sweet Adelais," Sept. 29, 1422, and the other love episodes treat of "The Conspiracy of Arnaye." "The Castle of Content" and "In Ursula's Garden." In his "Envoi" the author says, and this gives a taste of the quality of his style:

For they loved very greatly, these men and women of the past. Nature tricked them to noble ends, lured them to heights of adoration and sacrifice. At bottom they were, perhaps, no more heroical than you or I; indeed, Melite was a light woman, and Falstaff is scarcely describable as immaculate; Villon thieved, and Will Sommers was but a fool; Matthiette was vain and and Adelais self-seeking, and the tenth marquis of Falmouth, if you press me, rather a stupid and a pompous ass; and yet each in turn it was granted to love greatly, to know at least one hour of pure magnanimity.

The book is charmingly made, befitting its subject, and the illustrations are highly artistic. (New York; Harper & Bros.)

THE BIBLE BEAUTIFUL

The Bible Beautifu Huril, is a history of Biblical art. The early Christian artists, we are told, regarded the Bible as a single book. Their first care was to show the relations between the Old Testament and the New. In the process of time they developed a complete pictorial plan, which extended from Genesis to Revelation, from Creation to the Day of Judgment. With this great motive as an inspiration, they fashioned their mosaics, carved their cathedral fronts, designed their stained glass and frescoed the walls and ceilings of their churches. Century after century they labored to translate the sacred story from one form of art into another, until at last he world's noblest literature was in a measure matched by the world's noblest painting. The aim of the author of this volme has been to trace the development of Bible illustration from the crude pictures of catacombs to the great art which is illustrated in the reproductions of the famous paintings here used as illustrations. The story is carried through the art of various countries, and is brought down to the work of the present day. By covering so much ground in even this cursory way, the reader is able to get a sense of the continuity of the subject, and some readers will realize that Ruskin's belief was true-that no one can in any large sense understand the Bible itself until he has learned to read the art commentaries on it. The pictures of this volume are many and the reproductions in most cases very well done. (Boston; L. C. Page & Co.)

HOW TO STUDY PICTURES

"How to Study Pictures," by Charles Henry Caffin, is a book for every lover of pictures, for those who would look at and enjoy pictures with understanding. In this volume Mr. Caffin has recorded the evolution of modern painting, from the Byzantine traditions which prevailed before Cimabue down to the latest possibilities introduced by the pointilliste method of Monet. Through these pages the reader is helped to acquaintance with a majority of the greatest artists, their points of view, and their methods of rendering what they saw in the way they felt it; and is guided to a general insight into pictorial methods and motives.

It is the aim of the book to present a fairly comprehensive bird's-eye view of the whole field of painting; sufficient, if study must stop there, to enable one to recognize the landmarks of the subject; but offering, if further study in detail is possible, a convenient groundwork for investigation. This aim has been admirably realized. Twenty-eight double insets, full-page helpfully illustrative, and a complete index and glossary add to the value of the work. (New York; The Century

BLUE LIGHT PRODUCES SLEEP Strange discovery of Swiss scientist.

The fact that colored rays may be used as an anesthetic is the interesting announcement of Prof. C. Redard of Geneva, Switzerland. Frank C. Perkins, who tells of the discovery in an article, "Blue Electric Light as an Anesthetic," in the February Technical World Magazine, says:

"The apparatus employed is simple, consisting of an electric incandescent lamp, with a blue globe and a reflector, together with a blue veil used for covering the face of the patient and excluding all traces of sunlight while the rays are doing their work.

"Doctor Redard claims that after the patient has attentively fixed his eyes on the blue rays for two or three minutes he will become unconscious, after which a small surgical operation—such, for example, as the removal of a tooth -can be performed without causing the slightest pain.

"The awakening from the effects of the rays is quite gradual, and no dangerous or even unpleasant symptoms are noticed" .

TOM WATSON'S FOR JANUARY Tom Watson's Magazine begins the year 1906 with unabated vigor. Mr. Watson's editorials open with a ringing denunciation of the steel magnates in Pittsburg who, with an army of one thousand men and in open defiance of law, tore down the home of the Widow Lot, who had refused to sell her property at the demand of the corpo-Among the sturdy and brilliant editorials that follow is "How the Rascals Play the Game," an expose of Wall street and capitalist methods in politics and high finance. The short stories in the body of the January number show a remarkable improvement over the magazine's fiction of a few months ago, some of them classing with anything in the older magazines. Among the articles is a fearless and detailed exposure by Tilden Sempers of the frauds perpetrated upon farmers by the manufacturers of condimental farm goods. In "Government Aid to Railways" the disclosure of the government's free gift to railroads of enough land to make several entire states is both a surprise and an alarm. The January number is especially strong in humor, and to the departments has been added one on "Books," written by Mr. Watson himself. Of the old departments, "Letters from the People" and "The Educational Department"-the latter conducted by Mr. ing the real feeling of the people on the questions of the hour. ECONOMIC BASIS OF CRIME

If anything is known as to crime and punishment, it is that punishments have little or no effect to lessen crimes. Were not this the case, the sea of blood that has been spilled, the oceans of tears that have been shed, the wails and sighs and sufferings of the endless train of victims that has ever been moving onward to gallows and block and prison pen, long ago would have banished crime from the world. But while lawyers and judges and preachers have been sentencing and punishing, thinkers and philosophers have learned something of the brain of man and have collected some facts upon which lawmakers and judges may some day be wise enough to act. No one can know what effect hanging may have, either to cause or to prevent homicide. Some believe that the brutality of the state breeds murders, while others maintain, with the law, that it terrorizes men into respect for life, or at least into fear of punishment and vengeance. Although the effects of punishment for crime cannot absolutely be demonstrated, yet it is a matter of proof that more so-called crimes are committed in hard times than in good times; more are committed in winter than in summer; more are committed when bread is scarce than when it is plenty. No one can determine how many or how few crimes will result from a hanging, but they can estimate almost exactly the number of robberies that will result from a given rise in the price of bread. The physical needs and conditions of man have been shown to have a direct bearing upon his actions, and this rule affects all the manifestations of his body and his mind.

As the number of wild animals depends upon the fruitfulness of the year, so human reproduction and all the manifestations of life can be traced to the same cause. If robbery and burglary are prevalent, there is no certainty that these can be diminished by increasing penalties and stimulating the vigilance of the police; but it is perfectly sure that increasing wages and furnishing occupation for men will materially diminish the number who gain a precarious living by force and pillage.-Clarence S. Darrow, in The Culturist. ,

Because of the excellent condition of the range in some of the storm-bound regions, the losses have been much less than they would otherwise have been. Good grazing throughout the summer and fall had placed the stock in prime condition and they were prepared to weather a severe winter. Near Corona, Pastura, Ancho and other points all the efforts of the sheepmen have been of no avail in warding off losses. Near Alamogordo there have also been some losses. Efforts which have been made to move the sheep farther south have been unsuccessful, because of the deep drifts. Brush and the branches of small trees have been cut to serve as fodder for

H. R. Walker, the City of Mexico stockman, has imported a large number of blooded Holstein-Friesian cattle from Northern Illinois for the purpose of breeding up stock. He declares that for all purposes the Holstein strain is extremely efficacious in improving the quality of stock.

Freight Bureau Wanted

New Mexico cattlemen have been taking much interest in a project before the railroads doing business in the territory to create a new freight bureau, to have the publishing power for all New Mexico tariffs. El Paso would be taken from its present bureau, in which it stands on a parity with Rio Grande crossing points. Cattlemen in New Mexico are inclined to the belief that the change might be beneficial, inasmuch as it would give a bureau particularly established for the consideration of New Mexico tariffs and uninfluenced by the interests of other states. There is much misunderstanding as to the exact purpose or probable effect of the change. El Paso Movement Light

Cattle movements through this city are extremely light. Bad weather is prevailing for hundreds of miles in every direction, and the stockmen are in no mood to handle their stock. Moreover, on several lines, there is so great a scarcity of cars that it would be practically impossible to handle the cattle if the cattle were ready to be Seeking Their Own

Governor Still Non-Committal as to Legislature

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 13.-While the governor is still non-committal on the subject, the developments of the past several days would now seem to indicate that he will likely call a special session of the Twenty-ninth legislature to convene some time in March, but whether it will be only to cure the defect in the Terrell election law or will the call embrace other matters has not as yet been made apparent. During the past week or so the governor has called two elections to be held in different representative districts in the state to fill vacancies caused by death and resignations, and he has requested that election be held in two other districts to fill vacancies that have occurred. The governor wants to keep the legislature intact so that when he decides to call that body together there will be no hitch along

Bell County to Have Local Option Election Soon

Special to The Telegram. TEMPLE, Texas, Jan. 13.-The forces are lining up for a local option election in Bell county, which, it is predicted, will be held within the coming sixty days and a battle royal is in prospect. Bell county has been a dry county, in name at least, since September, 1903.

A meeting of the Bell county Law and Order Society was held here today, there being a large attendance present from every part of the county. None of the proceedings were given out, but it is learned from authoritative sources that discussion of the coming election formed the principal business of the meeting. Both sides profess confidence in their ability to win.

Profit-Taking Wipes Out Portion of Yesterday's Advance-B. R. T. Very Strong-Close Irregular

Special to The Telegran NEW YORK, Jan. 13 .- London cables reported a strong market for Americans. The local market opened firm with a majority of the issues showing fractional gains. Trading was fairly active during the first hour, but there was considerable profit-taking in evidence, which imparted a somewhat irregular tone to the market. Interest converged around the Steel issues. United States Steel preferred advanced almost a point in the early trading, while Republic Iron and Steel opened at 38, but soon eased off under profit-taking. There was also considerable interest attached to the movement of Amalgamated Copper. The stock advanced a point, crossing 115, and thus verified the tip that has been in circulation on the street for the past week. It is now predicted that the stock will reach 120 the forthcoming week. Missouri Pacific was the most active of the rails, advancing 1% points during the

Wheat Prices Advance on Heavy Buying-Corn Firm-Oats Shade Higher-Provisions Strong

Special to The Telegram. CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13.-Wheat was firm, advancing slightly for the day. Locally sentiment is friendly and the feature was the early buying of nearly one million bushels by one commission house. At the advance there was considerable wheat for sale, which checked any further upward movement. Heavy rains in the Argentine were reported by a private cable and Liverpool was firm with continued advices of unfavorable conditions in India. Liverpool at the close was 1/8d higher. Local receipts were 28 cars, with 23 expected on Monday. Northwestern receipts 142 cars, as compared with 384 a year ago. Total primary movement 564,000 bushels, against 527,000 a year ago. Clearances 495,000 bushels. World's shipments for Monday are estimated at 8,-800,000 bushels.

Corn opened firm and ruled steady during mid-session and was advanced toward the close. A total lack of pit pressure, small country acceptances. and clearances in excess of 1,000,000 bushels were the influences. Seaboard clearances this week have exceeded primary receipts by upwards of 2,000,-600 bushels and indications point to a decrease in the visible on Monday. The cash market was steady to 1/4c lower. Liverpool closed %c lower. Local receipts were 323 cars, with 301 expected for Monday, which includes 50 cars, estimated as covering Sunday in-

Oats gave a very interesting exhibition of strength today. Upward of 1,-000,000 bushels were dumped on the market the first hour by three or four houses and the aggregate selling was larger than for a long time past. Local longs were influenced bearishly, but in spite of this the market held firm, slightly under 32c, and the close showed but a slight change for the day. Local receipts were 179 cars, with 219 cars expected on Monday. This estimate includes 59 cars to cover Sunday inspection. Clearances 47,000 bushels.

Provisions continue to show remarkable strength. Prices for the product made fair gains today, notwithstanding the unfavorable 10-cent decline which had considerable opposition from cash buyers. There was a fair demand. Lard led on buying credited to exporters. There was selling by packers at the advance. Estimated receipts of hogs Monday 58,0000 head, and 240,000 head for next week.

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Jan. 13 .- The cotton market opened firm with prices at an advance of 2 to 5 points from last night's finals, in response to the favorable advices from the foreign market, cables reporting prices a shade better than expected, and an increased demand for spots.

Shorts covered during the initial trading and there was also good buying for long account, the greater part of which was for March delivery. There were further rumors of a corner in that option.

Prices advanced steadily, reaching a net gain of 10 to 11 points before the end of the first hour. It was rumored that a great deal of the covering was for the account of the bear leader, however, this was officially denied. Prices at one time touched a net gain of 13 to 14 points, but realizing in the late trading caused a slight recession. The close was steady with prices at a net advance of 9 to 10 Spots were quiet and 10 points high-

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 13 .- The cotton market opened steady with prices 7 to 8 points above last night's closing figures. The market ruled quiet during the initial trading. Following the call prices eased off 4

Reports from New York stated that the bear leader was covering and this caused renewed buying here, in which both sides took part. At one time the near positions sold at a net advance of 16 to 17 points. Final prices, however, were at a gain of 11 to $2 points.

LIVESTOCK

MARKET REVIEW FOR WEEK The general live stock market has witnessed an increase in supplies on all varieties of stock except horses and mules. The totals are as follows for the week: Cattle, 14,800; calves, 1,-580; hogs, 20,000; sheep, 1,500; horses and mules, 375. The general tone of the market has been in the direction of increased strength. Beef and feeder steers are stronger than a week ago, good to choice cows are higher, calves and bulls are higher. Canner cows have made no improvement. The earlier days of the week showed the gains in the steer market. Since the middle of the week there have been no increases in prices. Friday saw the best steers of the week on sale and also the best cows and calves. The first sold at $4.75, the cows at even $3 and the calves at $5.50. Saturday's sale of calves was a dime better than this, but the calves were no better.

run has changed hands from $2.50 to The cow and helfer market closes 10c higher for the veil on all that show killing qualities. The extreme range on killing cows is $2.35 to $3.50,

Feeder steers sold up to $3.25 for good, fleshy, stock, and the general on helfers $2 to $3. The best calves are stronger for the week, and this means heavy calves with flesh, as well as choice veilers. Bulls have had a good outlet, with a very broad demand. All fat bulls are sought after by packers, and the competition between speculators absorbs the thin and medium supply. The high price for the week was $2.60.

Hogs have come to this market in the most liberal quantity in its history, and prices have risen to meet the demand on everything good to choice. The most of the week heavy packer tops have remained around $5.40, closing the week at $5.421/2. A tremendous rush of mast hogs did not swamp the market, until it forced in a most undesirable class of hogs, below 160 pounds in weight. These have weakened fully 25 cents during the week. Pigs closed the week easy to 10 cents lower.

Nearly all the sheep on the market have been delivered under contract, and the week closes 10 cents lower.

TRADE NOTES

R. A. Morris of Portales, N. M., said there has been twice as much grass in that country this year as any previous season. Rains have been frequent, grass cured in fine shape, cattle are in good condition and a world of feed is in sight for the winter, he remarked. When horses are made to undergo an unusual strain for a few days they should be fed with light food, and when rest is secured heavier foods may be given. The aim in keeping stock should be to secure the largest and most rapid gain in the shortest time; this is especially true with hogs. Next to printer's ink, a satisfied customer is your best advertising me-

When you buy a pedigree be sure you have plenty of sheep with it, and let that be of the right quality. Few things in sheep husbandry are of more vital importance than the proper selection of ewes. Our advice is to start with purebred inimals and the best at that. Pedigree is no recommendation for cull animal of any kind.

The sheep is one of the greatest aids in building up the worn-out lands. MARKETS ELSEWHERE

THE ALPINE COUNTRY

ALPINE, Texas, Jan. 13 .- Roy Stillwell has sold his McKinney Springs ranch to Mr. Stockton for $1,000. Mr. Stockton will use it for a goat ranch. It is reported that John Holland has sold one of his ranches near Valen-

Bob Serna bought a carload of cows and calves from W. S. Blevins and T. N. Crenshaw, and shipped them to San

Al Billingsly bought two carloads of cows from Ben Pruett and Joe Espey, one car from Jackson & Harmon and one car from Jim Wilson. They were shipped to El Paso. He also bought five cars from P. H. Pruett, which he has not shipped yet. Bob Serna bought three cars of steers and cows from J. G. Rheininger

W. A. Sowell has just completed a house on his four sections of land, two miles from town. There were twenty-one sections of land in the Kokernot & Kokernot pasture put on the market last week. fifteen lof them were awarded to clients of one man, the other six being awarded H. L. Kokernot.

There are about eight families in Alpine at present being recent arrivals from Mangum, Okla., and each have been awarded land in Brewster county. There are yet more families from there to come, and it has been suggested when they all arrive and get located that they be called the "Oklahoma Squatters."

The heaviest snow for several years began falling on the night of the 7th. Heretofore the snows for this winter nave been warm and stock has not Goat raising has never been tried to

LLANO COUNTY CATTLE J. D. Hemphill of Elgin, Texas, was in town and viewed the market. He said that down in his country the farmers had about everything their own way and there was virtually no range left. The best cattle now that comes to his section, he says, are driven in from the Llano country, and these cattle are as fine butcher stuff as any fed cattle. In the mountains of the Llano country there grows a weed which bears a bean and which the cattle devour voraciously, and which seems to give the meat of the animals a firmness that even corn does not excell. They are always fat and are easily driven, and, consequently, when they arrive they are in prime

the city and is looking out for a lo-cation near the stock yards, to be used by him for feeding purposes. He wishes to ship in and feed near the yards. He formerly resided in Oklahoma, but is satisfied now with Texas. DALLAM COUNTY RANGE

R. P. Hutton is sheriff of Dallam county, but is also, being an intelligent man, interested in stock, stock farming and its kindred industries. He Jones Sons., Bagwell 145 said that the fall rains had injured the Edger Kerr, Ector 103 grass materially, and, therefore the wished, and cattle of course were more more or less drawn. He had been J. L. G. Gause, Bedias 259 absent from home for a few weeks Anderson & Gallion, Arapaho.... 74 and was not clear in his own mind B. Torreon, from El Paso south to Chihuahua, is all cattle ranches, with plenty of stock in sight, but from Chihuahua to Torreon farms and orchards are in evidence. Arriving at El Paso Mr. Hutton says he had to deviate from his usual course on account of the immense fall of snow in New Mexico, which blocked all railroad traffic.

THE ABILENE COUNTRY

J. M. Radford, one of the best known citizens of West Texas, was found at the Worth Hotel, and said: "While I am not all stockman, still I have some interests in that industry, and as an old residenter of the west I wish to add my word to the story of the general prosperity of that section. I have lived in Abilence since 1884, and have never seen the country and people in anything like as good condition as now. While stock are not as numerous and ranches are not so extensive, still what there are was never in better condition. Grass simply can't be beat. Lands have taken an upward flight and I fear that they will soar too high. But most people believe that they are only upon a correct

"Mr. Chandler sold some six or ten thousand acres of the Ferguson & Chandler ranch down in the Tecumsen neighborhood for $10.15 an acre, and several parties told him he had made a mistake and had sold too cheap. You know that that is rather a rough country. Our country will go into stock farming and then you will see some of the best cattle on the Fort Worth market that ever appeared here."

LOST AND FOUND

It's a new toilet soap, a discovery of the adoption of the medicinal proportions of the Lemon. It stands to reason and appeals to everybody at once that the ingredient of a lemon is healthful, and we know its cleansing qualities. Hence we grasped the usefulness and superior qualities of a soap containing the extract of lemon. This soap is unexcelled for clearing up the complexion; will cure blackheads, blotches and pimples and leaves the skin soft and smooth after using. Cures sunburn and tan, and unequaled for the scalp and hair. Costs

PEELER PROMISES A "SQUARE DEAL"

Austin Man Is a Candidate for Speaker of House

Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 13.-Colonel J. L. Peeler of this city, who was a member of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth legislatures and who has been prominently mentioned all over the state for speaker, has just decided to become a candidate for that position. But few, if any, members of the house were more popular than Colonel Peeler. It will be remembered that on ac-and representatives of the Twentyninth legislature presented him with a watch and it is believed by his numerous friends in the state that he will be successful. It having just been learned that Colonel Peeler would be a candidate for speaker he was interviewed today

MANY WANT COPIES OF AGRICULTURAL REPORT State Commissioner Has Numerous

Requests for Volume From

Points Outside Texas Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, Jan 13.-From the number of requests made upon the state insurance commissioner for copies of the agricultural report which has just been issued by the department, the report is apparently in great demand. The commissioner had several thousand copies of the report printed and handsomely bound and this supply is fast becoming exhausted. Yesterday thirty-five requests were received for copies of the report from farmers situated in different parts of the state, and it appears that the fame of the report has extended beyond the confines of Texas, as daily requests are made from farmers and others interested in the state of Texas asking for copies of the work. This agricultural report is one of the most complete which has ever been issued by this department and contains a great deal of valuable information on modern methods of farming and truck growing. It also includes a number of interesting papers from persons who have made a study of farming on a scientific basis. The statistics in the report are also very valuable to persons contemplating coming to Texas, and shows in an intelligent way the different resources of the state. It is likely that another batch of the reports will have to be printed to supply the increasing demand. PULLMAN CO. PAYS.

THE STORY OF AN AMATEUR THEATRICAL AND WHAT RESULTED THEREFROM

My neighbor Bruce was swept into the abyss of amateur theatricals without ever knowing what hurt him. His daughter Bella had read a portion of one was astonished and several of Bella's admirers, who were present, declared it was a revelation. One, a Mr. Dodd, got a word into Bella's ear the next Sunday evening: "You've done it," he said, "the whole town is agog! Take my advice and get up in Pauline -it will revive the glories of a lost library.

There was not much opposition, except when Uncle Ned was about. Perhaps it was his early agricultural training that made him shout "Good gourd!" in his astonishment. Mr. Dodd became director, all four of the admirers of Bella wanted to play Claude-including Dodd, of course. They got over it by inducing Cousin Jack Hunter to come down from Albany and assume the role. The dresses were all done; the back parlor had been dismantled and converted into a stage. They became so familiar with their parts that after a week's rehearsal they called each other by their stage names. Hunter was known as Claude all over the neighborhood, while Jenny Dalton was caught several times blowing her breath on the window pane and writing with the knuckle of her little finger

Madame Deschappelles. Mr. Bruce spoke of the matter on the street as a "Attle nonsense of the girls, you know." The birthday came on Friday, and Tuesday was to be the full-dress rehearsal. The parlor was full of critics and they all talked very loud and fast during the entre acts. The next morning Bella awoke with a headache and wondered if it was a forerunner of sweet fame. The maid handed her a little note. It was from Jenny Dalton, and it ran thus: "My dear Pauline, has anything been arranged about the tickets? I shall want some for my friends. Tell Dodd to send me 50. How I do hate that man! Did you notice how he tried to confuse me last night?"

'The mean, contemptible thing." cried Pauline, getting up and opening her writing desk. "She wants to pack the place with her friends and get all

Then she wrote: "My Dear Mother Deschappelles: What can you be thinking of? If we are all to have 50 tickets apiece, how'll we make room? Don't be cross, and Of course Bella had to tell Mrs. Hopkins, her near relative and admirer, and in reply that heroic aunt with an executive turn of mind, exclaimed: "My dear, you were quite right; her friends would override everything. If necessary, tell her she's not needed. I'll read the part myself!" Then followed another note from Jenny: "My dear Pauline: I can't possibly come, and I'm afraid I shall have to give up my part. Isn't it too badjust as the thing is coming off, too! However, I can't stand any more of Dodd-he had no business in the piece, "It's an infernal plot!" said Dodd.

"Let's postpone the performance week and get all new people?" "Never!" cried Pauline. "Why, it's On the evening of the performance Jenny Dalton came in her costume and all made up ready to fulfill her duty. Then they had to pacify the hired substitute in which Dodd lost his head and declined to have any thing more to do with the affair, and also it was discovered that cousin Jack, or rather Claude, had not arrived. Bella, beside herself with anxiety. rushed to the front door to look for him, and encountered Uncle Ned. She kissed him and told him of her worry; and he made things very disagreeable in the hallway with his "Good gourd!" and damning the whole thing, so that Mr. Bruce had to lug him off to the

At 9 o'clock the play opened without any Claude, and when in the great love scene, Dodd, who had to double the part, first of all made a foolish speech of apology, during which there was an audible hiss from the wings; Whenever Madame Deschappelles appeared there was a tremendous clapping of hands. Bella was miserable to the extreme, and wicked, too, for she had placed that hiss, and passing Miss Dalton in the wings, she exclaimed: | stage.

Billy Plimmer was one of England's greatest fighters and one of the few Britishers that ever held a world's championship title. He was a great ring general and possessed all the attributes of a fighter. He weighed only 110 pounds but was as stocky built as any little man that ever wore a glove. After winning the championship of England he sailed for America. After a couple of hard battle he met Tom Kelley, the Harlem Spider, and knocked him out in ten rounds, winning the title of world's champion on the out-

One of Plimmer's greatest battles in America was a four-round bout with George Dixon at Madison Square Garden, New York. Plimmer won and he was at once the most talked of ring character in the world. Plimmer, however, made himself solid when he fought Boston Johnny Murphy at New Orleans, which resulted in a draw after 25 rounds of fighting. I shall never forget reading of that battle. Before it started Plimmer was in horrible physical condition. He was so sick that he had to be helped into the ring, but gamely insisted on going on. Never has a pugllist shown more nerve. Round after found he kept coming back and Murphy was unable to give him enough. When the fight was over and he was given a draw he was assisted to his room by his seconds. Everyone who saw the battle declared him the greatest man England had ever

Can you imagine a prize fighter holding the championship and never having seen a fight? Such is said to have been the case with Tom Sayers, who was England's premier fighter in the middle '50s. He won the title from Bill Perry and held it until 1869 without ever witnessing a battle. Sayers was so discouraged with the outcome of his battle with John C. Heenan, at Farnborough, England, that e packed away his fighting duds and ver went into a ring again or never oked on at a fight.

The French women, who were really the ploneers in motor cars and in motor fashions as well, long ago decided that there is simply nothing that can compare or compete with the leather garment, and this both from the point of style as well as that of comfort. For one thing, it is light in weight, flexible almost as cloth, and it is absolutely wind proof, the sine que non where motoring garments are concerned.

While abroad the wind shield of glass permanently fixed in the front of the machine is looked upon as an absolute essential-quite an indispensable part of the machine, in fact. Over here its use is not by any means so universal. For one thing, it is claimed that in case of accident the flying glass is capable of doing much damage, and that its presence is a constant mehace on this account. However, it would seem that, except for racing purposes, just some such shield were at least advisable, for it assuredly does add much both to the comforts and the pleasures of winter

The tailor has been turning his attention to the possibilities of smart motor costumes, and there are some gowns altogether in leather that exhibit the extreme of the tallor's art to a delightful extent. One such example is in a soft brown leather, with a coat closely fitted and following those charmingly becoming lines that characterize the Louis Quatorxe modes. The skirt is cleverly built in sections, each section taking the form of a circular flounce, and that soft mottledbrown calfskin that is known as yetta simpler, more modish and altogether to match at the edge. suited to its purpose could bardly be

LLUPTRATING THE COMPORT OF FURS

That leather is far and away the most suitable for motor wear the French motorists long ago decided, and they were the ploneers in this field. Being at once wind and weather proof-and windproof is a quality that is most essential to motor wear-the lining is usually selected with a special view to warmth and comfort. There are some with wadded linings and some with flannel linings. The one illustrated has a padded silk lining throughout that adds much to its comfort Paletot in Dyed Caracul, Collar and Cuff Natural Fur.

The charm of Persians, as the Persian lamb cloth is termed by the trade, is well depicted in this smart garment. That the all-over, or surtout as the French designate those all-enveloping gar-ments which cover one practically from head to heels, is one of the best selections for general motor use is a point of fashion that the experienced tourist avails herself of. The fronts are rolled back in revers to display a handsome vest, usually either in hand-painted or embreidered chiffon, lace or some of those exquisite masses of needlework that are so much sought after at the present time. Below the waistline the coat may be of any length that the wearer hooses, or what will best suit her style. The extremely slender girl leans to a succession of little rippling basques, while ber plumper sister beams upon the well and closely fitted lines that best accord, after all, with this design. Dinner gowns are now being made with the coat for the upper part, and a charming one that owes its inspiration to Paris is in a changeable velvet; they are the very latest nuance in this fascinatingly fashionable fabric of a porcelain blue and yellow. This is fashloned over a skirt of porcelain blue chiffon, backed with pale yellow mousseline de sole, and the foundation slip is of white satin liberty, well stiffened with princess haircloth above the hem. The coat follows that conspicuously short - waisted Directoire model, the broad, squat revers covered with a yellowish lace that was, doubtless, coincident with the premier introduc-tion of the mode, and the long talls, characteristic of the style, bung clear to the hem of the skirt, lined with a change able blue and gold satin messaline. Bias bands of the velvet barred the skirt from knee to hem, each band following a slightly wavy line, and edged with that quaint little bordare richelles that is another revival from the days that are past and a century gone. The vogue of bridge whist has brought forth the little bridge jacket. In many respects this follows the fitted lines already referred to. There is usually as open neck, and oftentimes even a slight decolletage to those, and the sleeves are conspicuously short. Only in rare cases do they even cover the elbow point, and it is quite the thing to have them stop short of even this length. The so-called cotilion jacket is displayed in real laces of all kinds and characters. There are charming ones on the finest of Irish crochet, the real thing that at its best is as filmy as tulle, and a long way removed from the work of Italian and Syrian peasants that, while it does of a truth employ the crochet needle, and the same thread is so stiff and coarse and altogether unattractive that one wonders why the thing finds any sale at all. One who has known the real Irish crochet on its native heath will never accord even a passing glance, much less any interest, to the imitations that pass current on this side of the Atlantic.

However, to return to those bewitching cotillon jackets. heart of little Mercy.

But in the great house on the hill there had been and yet was a beautiful Christmas tree hung full of glittering baubles and toys. And Mercy had enfoyed listening to her Aunt Hilda's description of the holiday festivities going forward in the mansion. The New Year had filled the great house with guests from the city, and the gay house party would continue for another week.

One morning, just as Mercy and her mother were eating their simple break fast, Hilds ran in on her way to town, whither she was bound on an errand for her mistress. "Oh, my!" she excialmed. "there are great doings to be held at the mansion tonight. And, dearle" turning to Mercy-"if you want to get a peep into the big place, just you come slipping up by the back path at balf-past nine, and I'll be on the back porch to meet you and take you where you can look into wonderful-real kings and queens and fairies, you know. And after you've seen into the ballroom I'll take you up the back stairs and give you a sight of the children's Christmas tree that still stands in the big nursery -all full of its pretties and goodles. But It's to be stripped tomorrow and carted out, so if you don't and knelt behind a thick clump of lilae get a peep of it tonight you'll not have

"Oh, that will be lovely!" exclaimed lit-tle Mercy, all eagerness. "But wou't the Bolmes children be in the nursery when to come up by yourself, will you?"

"Oh, no," laughed Mercy. "There is nothing to make me afraid, Aunt Hilda.

Besides, the grounds are walled in and the park is safe." "And God watches over my good little daughter by night, as well as by day," said Mercy's mother. Then the arrangements were completed for Mercy's visit to the big house that night, and Hilda took her leave. To Mercy the day dragged very slowly, indeed, for she was so anxious for the night to fall. Was she not to catch a glimpse of that great, sparkling world of which she had beard so much and had seen so little? Then why should she not be a bit impatient?

"And I'll see the beautiful Christmas tree, too," she confided to her rag dolly. "And I'll see the lovely rooms, the grand ladies and gentlemen and the pretty Holmes children, who Aunt Hilda says are so good and sweet-although they be very rich. Then, best of all, I'll get to hear the music played by the orchestra that Aunt Hilda says is coming from the city. Oh, it will be so, so nice! But— how much I wish mamma could see and hear it all!" Then the little girl sighed and inwardly made: wish: "Oh, if we mamma and I-could live in the beautiful house and hear the music often, I should be so glad."

At last the night fell, to Mercy's declock made their slow round to the figure 9. Then Mercy's mamma wrapped her little girl in her own big clonk, kissed her and let her start towards the big house on the hill, for it was a walk of about thirty minutes. The night was dark, the clouds were gathering over the sky, and Mercy's path lay through the park, whose tall and abundant trees shut out any light that might come from the moon and stars. But, unafraid, Mercy trudged on her way, stopping at a little ravine to the ballroom. They are giving a fancydress ball, and the costumes are to be catch her breath before climbing the steep bill at whose summit stood the great mansion whose windows sent out so many brilliant lights.

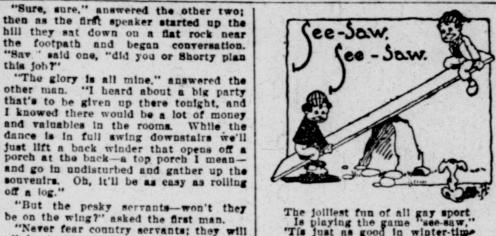

During this brief pause Mercy heard low, muffled voices from behind her, and something told her there was cause for fear. Quickly she stepped from the path bushes. She had scarcely hidden in the black shadow when three men came creeping down the path she had just left and paused in the spot where she had sto ned. Being only a few feet away from them.

"No; they are to be allowed to sit in the ballroom till after the grand march. That will take place at balf-past 9. The children will be sent to bed at 10," explained Hilda. "After you have seen the slights you may sit in the servants' hall some seen lookout bereabouts, too."

Being only a few feet away from them, they said.

"Now, pals, you stop here an' wait till 1 go up to the house and reconnoiter," spoke one of the men in a voice that caused Mercy to tremble—it was such a wicked voice. "I'll be back in a jifty. You keep a keen lookout hereabouts, too."

Hilds tripped and up the hill on the opposite side, safe and sound. Then Mercy heaved a little sigh of relief. The three ourglars came from their hiding and one of them said lightly, "One of the servants from the big house. Pretty close call for her—but she never knowed it. Now to the field of action."

Then the three housebreakers started. single file, up the bill toward the big they went. Mercy also crept from her hiding and took a path which wound round the hot houses and led by a circuitous route to the spreading front lawn. As she ran softly through the snow she felt that perhaps she should have gone in the opposite direction and overtaken her aunt, whom she knew would continue all the way to their home; and she knew also how frightened her dear mother would be when Hilda would enter and ask for their little Mercy. But her first duty was to save the people at the big house, those who were in present danger. Then she would have time enough to go home round the stables and get to the back porch, climb a post, and then everything is easy. Jim, you stay on the ground to and explain the cause of her delay. two gentlemen came leisurely from the drawing-room into the ball. On beholding Mercy they stopped, and one of them turned and looked at the butler as though waiting for an explanation of the strange pale little girl's presence. "Beggin' your pardin, sir—" began the servant, bowing to the gentleman; but Mercy interrupted him. "Are you Mr. Holmes, sir?" she asked, turning to the gentleman and throwing the great cloak from her head and shoulders. Then, on being assured that she addressed the master of the mansion, Mercy told in rapid words of all that had happened in the ravine back of the house.
While she was giving the information her excited little voice attracted the attention of several guests who were lottering about the drawing-room, waiting till all the guests were assembled to begin the ball. They flocked about the strange child and listened with amazement to her wonderfully coherent story. Without doubting the truth of the child's words

Mr. Holmes hurried to the telephone and set it to work. Within a few minutes the stable grooms were stationed about the ground at the exits, watching for any chance persons who might seek to depart. The butler was bidden to guard the front door, while Mr. Holmes, with several of his male guests and two strong footman, took themselves upstairs, where, heavily armed, they secreted themselves behind curtains in the room through which the burglars must enter from the porch at the rear. Mr. Holmes had requested that the music begin in the ballroom and that the guests should conduct themselves as though nothing unusual was expected to happen, and soon the sounds of gayety were heard from the ballroom.

But the story must not be made too long by giving details of the capture of the three burglars; suffice it to say that they were taken into custody without harm to either captors or captured. They ran right into the net set for them in the upstairs room, and, with revolvers in their faces, they threw up their hands and surrendered. Then, in a few minutes they were handed over to the police, who had been summoned by 'phone from the town, half a mile distant. Just as the excitement was quieting down-all the guests having now assem-bled in the great main hall-Hilda came running in in great distress. "And let us show the little heroine of the hour our appreciation in some way," ventured a beautiful lady, dressed like a fairy, as she held up in the form of a receptacle her dainty lace handkerchief into which the gentiemen's purses were quickly emptied. With thanks on her lips and tears in her eyes Mercy was allowed to go with her Aunt Hilda to her mother, who was almost beside herself with uneasiness about her child. THE BOYHOOD OF GEORGE WASHINGTON. It is not necessary to tell the children when and where George Washington was born, nor to go over the successes of his grand and active life, for every school history contains the data of his political career. But much pertaining to his boyhood—and a wholesome and splendid boy-hood, too—is not generally known. Of course, the little story of the hatchet and the cherry tree is known to all the Eng-lish-speaking world; but here the child-hood of the "Father of Our Country" seems to close. Be it known, then, that the great George Washington, in his youth, was a boy like many other boys of his time and like many another boy of the present day. He was large and strong for his years, being a born athlete. He loved the things of nature, was a skilled shot and a brave hunter. When very young George developed a liking for surveying, a line of work in which he became so proficient that when he was only 16 years old. William Fairfax

The Sincerity of Fred's Bravery.

She had scarcely hidden in the black shadow when three men came creeping flown the path.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR. Fred declared he was not afraid of anything in the shape of man or beast. But Fred was only talking big—bragging a bit (as boys are often wont to do) to his little sister Jen.
"" 'bat, not afraid of elephants?" asked

"Elephants!" repeated Fred with a shrug of his shoulders. "Well, I guess not. W'y, what's there about an elephant to be scared of?" "His trunk," ventured Jen.
"Trunk and valise and traveling grips—all wouldn't scare me," said Fred disdaintally. "Uh, I'd ride on an elephant if I had one."

"Nor a camel, nor a a big black bear?" continued Jen, in tones of awe.
"Of nothing, I tell you," asserted Fred.
"Besides, there ain't any animals in these woods now. Only squirrels and chipmunks. I only wish there was some-thing big and dangerous. It's tame round here now for boys and men. Of coursegirls and women—they wouldn't be safe if big animals roamed these woods; but giris and women could stay at home."
Then Fred swaggered along the road chewing a bit of bark and looking wise. "But if some fairy was to call a big black bear out of the forest, I guess that wouldn't be so funny," said Jen, whose mind was ever full of fairy lore. "I read once of a boy who didn't believe in fairies and, to make him change his mind, the fairy queen turned a stump into a huge animal, unlike anything that

N-o-w, hat do you say to that Mr.
Fred?" And Jen shook her head by way "I think that you are silly to read and believe such stuff," answered Fred, sarcastically. "As for fairles-well, they live only in books and foolish kids'

"What couldn't happen?" asked Fred.

And on -on the two sped, never once looking back, but supposing the animal was at their very heels. Just as they were on the point of collapse there appeared in the road in front of them—coming over a hill—their own father, accompanied by his bired man. Fred, being the faster runner of the two, reached his father first, and grasping his hands, he panted out, hoursely: "Papa, there's a rhinoceros—com-ing—after us! Look——" and he pointed down the road over which he had come at such speed. By now Jen had come up all out of breath, and she, too, clung to her father for protection. She was crying and could not speak.
"A what?" asked their father, looking in vain to see something.

Then Fred looked about them, and seeing no rhinoceros in sight, he explained: Well, it's down in the woods there. We saw it as plain as day-running through that hedge brush by the road."

And then their father began to laugh, and he laughed and laughed till the children wondered whether he had not sud-denly lost his mind on hearing that so terrible a beast was running loose in the woods near their home. And the hired man laughed, too, pointing toward a thicket and saying: "There he is—your rhinoceros. Look lively, now, or he'll

"You see, thet old black animal is one I bought from neighbor Jones this morning, and as the pen I put him in was not quite strong enough to hold him against his will, he broke out and went wandering in the woods. You shavers run along home and tell your mamma of your narrow escape from danger while Sam and I tackle the beast in his lair." And patting each child on the head, the good man laughed again, and, with the hired man, went in the direction of the

Argument of Missouri Attorney General in Supreme Court Pleases the Spectators

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.-H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company will have to answer the questions asked of him by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, unless it can be shown that the materiality of these questions is at this time being actually considered in the

The corps of trust lawyers fighting for Mr. Rogers before Justice Gildersleeve in the supreme court today grasped at this straw and asked to be allowed until Monday to produce a memorandum dealing with this point and to produce court records as exhibits. This concession was granted them, but it is believed that this will avail them nothing, as Attorney General Hadley showed clearly that the materiality of the questions involved had been decided by the supreme court of Missouri, and there is now pending merely the legal attempt to force a witness to answer who claims only peronal privileges, refusing to answer on the ground that to do so would inminate him.

Demonstration in Court The hearing before Justice Gilderleeve was marked by the most marked demonstration that has been seen in a local court in years. At the conclupsin of Hadley's argument he was reeted by an outburst of applause hat startled the court officers. This applause came from an audience comosed almost wholly of lawyers praccing before the New York bar and who were capable of appreciating the remarkable legal ability and perfect rasp of the case by Attorney General

Hadley Willing to Camp

Before the court convened, Attorney Seneral Hadley announced that he was eady to camp in New York for a year if necessary, and that he would not be compelled to return to Missouri to ake up the revocation of the license the New York Life Insurance Comany, as that matter had been disosed of in a way to leave him entirely Lawyer Woolman opened the proceedings before Justice Gildersleeve by stating the case of Mr. Rogers' refusal to answer questions. He took up the first section of the answer of Mr. Rogers, declaring the questions asked to be immaterial and irrevelant.

They strike at the very heart of the controversy," argued Mr. Woolman. In regard to the objection that reporters were present, Mr. Woolman subjoined to his answer to show cause order dealt in generalities and did not even touch upon the points at issue. Hagerman Speaks

Lawyer Hagerman made the first argument for Mr. Rogers, contending that the Standard of Indiana, and the Waters-Fierce of Missouri had a right mutually to agree to separate their selling territories in Missouri. He said that Mr. Rogers was asked questions which related alone to companies outside of Missouri and that the relationship between the two companies and the Standard Oll Company was immaterial, with no legitimate bearing on Lawyers Rowe and Curtis then followed, Mr. Curtis taking up the single question of the right of the attorney general of Missouri to demand answers of Mr. Rogers to questions on matters relating to companies not involved in the case under trial in Missouri. He read the affidavit from Mr. Rogers attached to the order to show cause in which he declined to answer this. Reporters and Artists Galore

There were about twenty newspaper representatives and sketch artists present and cameras had been placed n the room to take pictures of persons appearing and because sensational newspaper articles have been heralded throughout the country. Purely private affairs ought not to be thus needlessly exposed to public view.

Mr. Curtis dwelt with emphasis upon the indignity to his client by subjecting him to the humiliation of flash light photographs. Later, in answering this one point, Mr. Hadley pointed out that Mr. Rogers "was the only an in the room who was not astonished when the flash light exploded."

Goes Into Detail Attorney General Hadley then wound up the proceedings which had drawn out to more than two hours, by presenting such a clear, lucid and compreheusive review of the entire case

HOLLISTER CASE PLOT THICKENS

Chicago Woman's Movements Before Death Unaccountable

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13.—The most brutal murder in the history of Chicago, the strangling of Mrs. Bessle Hollister, is tonight still in mystery, although at first, as told in the dispatches to afternoon papers, it apparently had been solved by the confession of Richard Ivens, 368 Belden avenue: that he had assailed and murdered the woman. Ivens told a revolting tale of crime and took full responsibility on his own shoulders, yet the police working on the case through the afternoon found that all clews pointed toward the belief that accomplices aided in the murder and that at least two men had a part in killing Mrs. Hollister.

Sensations Multiplied Sensation followed sensation during the day. The discovery of the body of the woman after a twelve hours' search, the arrest of the murderer, his confession and the climax in the late afternoon, when William Hollister, brother of the slain woman's husband. drew a revolver in the coroner's inquest and attempted to kill the murderer. He was prevented and disarmed only after a furious battle.

Three Confessions Made The murderer made three confessions. The first was at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The second was written in great detail immediately afterward and was read by Ivens to the police authorities and a dozen newspaper men. The third was made in testimony at the coroner's inquest.

Suspicion Is Aroused Gross discrepancies between the second and third versions are noted and were the first points to give rise to the suspicion that Ivens was not telling the truth in his story of the murder and that he was trying to defend accomplices.

Tracing Movements Fails An effort to trace Mrs. Hollister's movements in detail after she left her home at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning to the time of the crime as given by Ivens at 7 o'clock in the evening failed utterly. Gaps of hours yawned in the account and could not be bridged. It was soon found that the murderer's statement failed to account for im-

Ivens Says After Dark

According to Ivens' story he met the woman at 7 o'clock, seized her, stifled her cries, dragged her across Belden avenue, took her into an ard next to the barn, where he attacked her and then strangled her with a piece of copper wire, which was afterward found wrapped three times about

The mystery of the woman's movements during the day was not cleared up and the belief grew more strong that she had been way-laid in the afternoon by Ivens and others, dragged to the barn and detained there, being ficers in the state when they have murdered at some hour in the nightwhen, no one knows.

Two Lapses of Time Where was Mrs. Hollister between 3:30 and 7 o'clock, when the crime is supposed to have taken place? There Is also a gap between 10:45 and 8:30 o'clock, when her movements cannot be traced. Franklin C. Hollister, husband the slain woman, affirmed the belief that the mystery had not been cleared up when he recovered himself sufficiently to talk briefly to a reporterhis first interview. "It was too horrible to have been done by only one man," said he. "I believe the fellow had accomplices. I could not go to the coroner's inquest, for if I had I surely would have killed the man. I can't talk of it-I can't talk."

ALL AGAINST "PROTECTION"

English Election Defeats Premier Arthur Balfour

MAJORITY NEARLY 2,000

Winston Churchill Returned as Member of the House

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

of Commons

Special Cable to The Telegram. LONDON, Jan. 13 .- The defeat of Premier Arthur Balfour, running on the conservative ticket, in the eastern division of Manchester, by the liberal and free trade candidate, Mr. Horridge, and the election of Winston Churchill, besides the announcement of liberal successes in nine other of the eighteen contests going on today is hailed by the liberals as a clear proof of their assertion that the country is rallying agaisnt "protection."

The defeat of the former premier by nearly 2,000 votes in such a constituency as Manchester, where the conservatives have hitherto been able to show immense majorities, will unloubtedly have a great influence on the rest of the country.

Today's contest in Manchester was enlivened by the opposition of two such men as Winston Churchill and Arthur Balfour in different divisions of the city, and the victory of the former had been regarded by the liberals as a foregone conclusion, although there was some fear that the retired premier might manage to poll plurality. No individual politician the kingdom has made such rapid strides during the last few months toward a predominant position as has Mr. Churchill. Lt has been partly a matter of skillful stage management as in the dramatic publication last week of his brilliantly written life of his gifted father and partly the effect of forciful and magnetic personality which has captured the most crusted old Manchester merchants for the liberal cause. In Manchester, Winston Spencer Churchill used all his influence against Mr. Balfour as to the crucial issue of the campaign, a contradiction the tale Lord Randolph Churhill could never have conceived as among the remotest political possibilities.

Mr. Balfour invited his old constituents to return to him to parliament on the strength of his record of earnest devotion to the public service. Mr. Churchill, upon whom in the Sixth division of Manchester the brunt of the liberal work fell, though he stood for none of them, concentrated his attack against Mr. Chamberlain rather than the former premier. He said: "The only thing I have against Mr. Balfour, who with my father, founded the 'fourth party' and for whose character and attainments no man in England could feel greater admiration than myself, is that he does not cut entirely loose from influences he must suspect, even if he does not know, to be selfish, undemocratic, and in the interest of privilege rather than of the public at large." Both the person and the program of Balfour went to second place when the former premier admitted that the first task of the unionists, if returned to power in the pending election or a subsequent one, would be to carry through onservative legislation on fiscal lines. As the cardinal doctrine of Sir Heny Campbell-Bannerman is that the free trade system is the ark of the ovenant which must remain untouched by the tariff propagandas, Mr. Balfour's hint of a modern impost for the sole purpose of eliminating anomalies from our existing system and giving it greater efficiency without alter-Ing its essential nature was the signal for a concentration of fire upon

Chamberlain. What many of the old line whigs had hoped was that Mr. Balfour would offer some statesmanlike proposal for bettering the condition of the working classes without adopting either retailiatory or preferential tariffs. His failure to do so has left men like Devonshire and Goschen in a cruel predica-

They must choose between what they regard as reactionary conservatism of Lord Hugh Cecil and the semi-socialistic radicalism of David George, the two leaders who, if they live twenty years, will fight out the great battle of the future in British politics. Nothing remains for men of their stamp but a cautious opportunism. They denounce both programs and both plexity when John Burns declares in facor of the abolition of the house of lords and when Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman says that the unionists governments of Devonshire and Goshen in spinning tights have left "an accumulation of public mischief absolutely appalling in its ramifications."

Clyde Liner on Shoals Near Atlantic City

PERSONS ABOARD

The Cherokee Threatened With Total Destruction by the Heavy Sea Waves

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 13 .-Because of the absence of a custom officer at Atlantic City with authority to pass steamship passengers, the life guards of the life saving station were prevented from rescuing the passengers of the Clyde line steamship Cherokee, aground on South Brigantine Shoals. Sixty-three persons are now on board the steamship in the gravest perils from a forty-mile gale which is constantly growing in velocity. Besides the ten aassengers and crew of forty-five men, a life saving crew of eight is on board and the life boat in which they made their trip to the vessel was washed in and dashed to pieces against the steel pier of the Brigantine

The waves are so high that they are breaking over the smoke stack of the Cherokee. The passengers and crew are below under battened hatches to prevent the steamer's hold from filling with water. The hausers of wrecking tugs which sought to get the steamer off have parted and the tugs have put to sea to prevent being driver ashore by the gale. All work of jettle soning the cargo has been abandoned

Impossible to Signal It has been impossible to receive of transmit signals to the steamer, owing to the terrible storm of rain and wind. The steamer is too far out to operate a gun line and buoy. The last message was received at 3 o'clock, but if crew went out to the Cherokee Fri. day. The seas now breaking over the steamer threaten her complete dstruce tion. It is feared that it will be impos, sible to effect a rescue of the passen gers and crew even with the help of the ocean-going tugs. The passenger

TOBACCO RAISING TO BE CONTINUED Company's Experiment Proves a Success in Lavaca County and Farmers Will Take it Up

HALLETTSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 13. -The Lavaca County Tobacco Company, which was organized about two years ago, in order to further demonstrate the success of the government obacco experiment here, that this section was well adapted for the culture of Cuban tobacco for cigar fillers, having accomplished the object for which it was formed, will now turn the matter over to the farmers of the section, promising to provide a market for all tobacco raised. A number of farmers will engage in the culture of this tobacco the coming year, as crops of a value from $100 to 3200 per acre can be raised in this county. C. J. Hudging, who has had charge of the field work of the tobacco company, has planted large seed beds and expects to put in quite a large crop. The tobacco company during the past year has manufactured this home-grown tobacco, turning out a splendid grade of cigars, which have been put on sale all over the south, west and central part of the state, as far north as Dallas and west to San Angelo, and from Houston to the Rio Grande. The product of this Texas tobacco is expected to increase steadlly, as the tobacco is of the same grade as much of that which is imported from Cuba. The manufacture of cigars will continue, and inducements are open for more factories. Nearly every business firm in this city has taken an active financial interest in promoting this industry. The Texas Leaf Tobacco Growers' Association, which held its last annual meeting in Houston recently, has, through its secretary, William Blakeslee of this city, entered a formal protest to the removal of the import duty on Philippine tobacco. NEW POLICY IN ENGLAND

Recruiting Coolies for South Africa Must Stop

SO SAYS PRIME MINISTER

High Officials Likely to Resign if Liberals Win in Coming Election

BY ALBERT HEDGES.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—During the closing days of the campaign leading up to the general elections a new issue has been injected into the politics of the United Kingdom. And while the conditions are such that there is not a shadow of a chance that it will affect the general results of the election in case the liberals win, as everyissue gives promise of looming up large and strong in the politics of the empire if not in world politics.

It is nothing more nor less than the announcement of Prime Minister Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman that the recruitment and embarkation of Chinese coolies for South Africa must be stopped forthwith. It is freely predicted that in the event of the defeat of the conservatives and the triumph of the liberals many of the leading British officials will resign, and give up all attempts to pacify that territory which has so recently been the storm center of the world and which gives promise of becoming the storm center of the world in the not far distant future.

Danger is Predicted

The Daily Telegraph has predicted that in the event of the forceful stoppage of the recruitment of the Chinese lles for South Africa that there is a danger of the South African colonies breaking away from the British empire just as the American colonies broke away more than a hundred years ago. It will be interesting to watch events and see how close to truth the prediction of the Daily Tely graph comes during the next year or

Parliamen Dissolved

Parliament having been dissolved by the king on the 8th of January, the privy council, at which the royal procmation is signed, being held early on the afternoon of that date, the writs were issued forthwith. The writs for the metropolitan constituencies were received on the same day, the nominations taking place on or before yesterday (Jan. 12) and the polling within three clear days of the nominations. The writs for the various provincial constituencies were not received until the 9th of January. The earliest lings in the boroughs, therefore, begins today and the latest Jan. 18, while in counties the earliest pollings will take place Jan. 17 and the latest Jan. 27, except in the case Orkney and Shetland, for which there is a special time allowance.

The writs for the metropolitan division were delivered by hand to the sheriffs of London and Middlesex by the pursuivant or messenger of the great seal. In the other cases the writs were sent by post. They were handed to the postmaster general or his deputy, a formal receipt for them being given. He immediately forwards them to the various returning officers under the special care of the local postmasters whose receipts and cer-tificates are forwarded to the postmaster general. Few Uncontested Seats

Among the most notable features of the general election is the exceedingly small number of uncontested seats and the large number of real three-cornered fights. The number of threecornered fights so far is thirty-ninesix in London, twenty-two in English provincial boroughs, two in English county constituencies and nine in

Many Labor Candidates

At least one hundred labor candidates are in the field and the majority are standing for English boroughs. A very considerable change in the personnel of the new house of commons is inevitable owing to the large proportion of present members. who are not seeking re-election, and the great number of candidates who have never sat in the house before.

Hard Work in Ireland In Ireland all parties are well prepared for the general election. For the Irish borough constituencies the dates of nomination and polling range between Jan. 13 and 18, and for the counties between Jan. 17 and 27. Twenty nationalist conventions for the selection of candidates were held before the end of December alone, and every candidate was required to give a pledge that if returned to parliament he will attend constantly at Wsetminster during the sitting of the house. The nationalist leaders have been making urgent appeals for funds. They fear that the unionists will put up candidates for a number of safe nationa' it seats in order to exhaust the financial resources of the United Irish League. The official nationalist organ is making the most earnest appeals to friends of Ireland all over the world to cable funds to aid in the campaign without delay.

Manifesto Aided Liberals The effect of the two electoral manifestoes issued by the United Irish League of Great Britain and by the Duke of Devonshire to the Unionist Free Trade League has been in favor hough strange as it may appear, the point of view of the two bodies is diametrically opposite. Electors of each league who find themselves in a constituency which has no candidate of their own particular kind are recom-mended to vote for the official liberal candidate as the second best. This is regarded as a remarkable triumph for Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. In the Irish manifesto an alliance with the labor party is foreshadowed. And yet a thousand and one things may occur to split such an alliance right in two in the middle so that it should not be taken with greater weight than the usual pre-election manifestoes which are for the passing hour and for the purpose of influencing the vote.

Question is Home Rule The keynote of the United Irish League's manifesto was "Discomfiture of Unionists." John Redmond drew up the manifesto at the meeting of the executive council of the United Irish League. It declares that the first duty of the Irish voters in Great Britain is to "aid to the utmost in the discomfiture of the great coalition which has inflicted such immense injuries on their own country." Where labor candidates are sound on the home rule question the Irish voters and Irish supporters are recommended to support them. The followers of Lord Rosebery are excluded from the latter category, and the manifesto promises special advice to voters in constituencies where there is a choice between a unionist and a Roseberyite.

Advised Liberal Support The Duke of Devonshire, liberal unionist, in his manifesto, virtually support the liberal candidates rather than the protectionist unionists. By side issue he deals the strongest blow yeet delivered against Mr. Balfour's election tactics. The duke asserts that there is no indication that the opinion of the country has changed since the rejection of the last home rule bill, and that it is in the highest degree improbable that the government of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman will incur the risk of introducing another such measure in the next parliament Therefore, he says, the question of free trade versus protection must be the paramount factor in the coming election, and that there must be no deviation from free trade. Premier Gives Out Policy

Inasmuch as the triumph of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and his followers appears to be taken for granted the following statement of his program and policy will be found significant and interesting:

Ireland-"Those domestic affairg which concern the Irish people only should be placed in their hands." South Africa-"The government has issued instructions to stop forthwith the recruitment and embarkation of eco'ies from China and their importation into South Africa." India-"We shall make ourselves a garty to no steps that involve any invasion of the sacred principle of the subornation of the military to the civil authority. Herre-"We have resolved to ask the king to appoint a royal commission to inquire into the question of canal com-

Foreign-"The government adheres to the policy of the entente cordiale, and welcome the der friendship between Britain and Germany. They approve of the Japanese treaty, and are bound by the closest ties of race, tradition and fellowship Trade Unionism-"We shall amend the law of combination so as to give freedom and - security to the trade Armaments-"The growth of armaments is a great danger to the peace of the world. No nobler role could this country have than to head a

WHY'S THIS SALE A DAILY SUCCESS

Although our ten days' special sale of all winter goods has been in force and effect seven days, Saturday was one of the liveliest of them all. Why do similar sales frequently languish and fall flat? We believe it is because merchants do not always sufficiently appreciate the importance of exercising the same frankness and friendly sincerity in business dealings as in the every-day associations outside of the realms of commerce.

A mere quotation of low prices does not attract the buying public beyond the stage of curious investigation. There must be back of the promises an agency of such undoubted responsibility as to safely protect the patron from all risk of wrong prices or disappointing qualities. When this safeguard has become to the people a fact established beyond question, then every price quotation bears a significance, carrying as it does 100 per cent of information and

The splendid success of this sale is very gratifying, as an evidence that the foundation principles o four business are rightly laid. TAX COLLECTOR TO END TERM

Many Candidates Seek to Succeed J. W. Walker

> County Tax Collector J. W. Walker is satisfied to retire from his office after having served two full terms, election this year. This is an open secret at political headquarters in the big county building.

There will be candidates galore for Mr Walker's place, however, and they are already coming to the front; and it looks, even this early in the year, as though there will be a red-hot contest for this office. There are now five names that have been placed on the candidates' blackboard of persons wishing to succeed Mr. Walker. Knox Anderson, chief clerk under he present collector, is an aspirant

He is familiar with the run of the office: is a young man of pleasing personality, and it is claimed for him that he has a good following all over the county. NEWS BOYS PAY MANY EXPENSES

Summer Trips, Doctor Bill and Other Outlays Met

The Telegram has two newsboys prothers, who are establishing records are Roy Evans, 11 years of age, and Frank Evans, 10 years of age, of 1512 South Jennings avenue. They have been selling The Telegram for two years. During this time they have purchased their own clothes out of the money that they have earned from their sales and have done a number of other things beside. Roy, the elder of the two, has been roubled with deafness for some time and has paid the doctor his entire bill of $15. He is still paying him visits and is as prompt in paying for his treatment as any other patient. Roy on the other hand has started a savings account lately, and already has had $16 credited to his account since the opening of school last fall. It is the custom of the boys to take a trip for pleasure every summer. Last summer they bought new clothes before their departure and went to Hillsboro and Ennis for a visit of a week each with their grandmothers. They paid the entire expenses of the trip out of money that they made selling The Telegram and took some spending money with them. They moved in their present home on March 28, and in April they presented their mother a beautiful art square for the parlor at a cost of $25. They paid $5 down on the purchase and promised to pay the remainder at the rate of $5 a month. Instead of four months elapsing before they paid for the carpet only two months passed. The lads both declare they enjoy selling The Telegram. They come direct to The Telegram building from school, sell their papers and return home.

In addition to the pleasures and other benefits received by direct outlay of their receipts from paper sales, both lads have been prize winners in 93 | the contests given by The Telegram | The special 10 per cent assessment, | their acquaintance.

also been among those securing the benefit of theater parties and declare their record will keep them in line for future affairs of the same sort to be tendered the newsboys.

He is back again to stay, and has bought an interest in a manufacturing plant in Calhoun street. He said to Man About Town Saturday night tha the had made his last and best move-back to Fort Worth, his first love.

Saturady night another wanderer from Fort Worth arrived from the west and says he too has come to stay. Terry King left this city several years ago and went to El Paso, where he has been engaged in business up to a short time ago, when a yearning for the old town and the people here forced him to wind up his affairs in the pass and, hike back home. He has accepted a position with the Burton-Peel Dry Goods Company.

"Fort Worth will never reach the climax of its possible greatness until some plan is adopted to build a good streets and sidewalks." said John Laneri to Man About Town.

"Take Fort Worth from one end to the other, and more poor sidewalks and more poor streets will be found than in any other city in Texas. Hemphill street from Daggett avenue to Cannon avenue is a fair specimen of the streets and sidewalks on the south oide, mud nearly shoe-top deep covering both in wet weather. PACKING PLANTS GROW STEADILY

Local Market Is Offered for Texas Canners

Texas canners will no longer be shipped to the northern canning plants. Instead the cattle of this sort will be used in the local plants and the finished product shipped.

Early in February Armour & Company will begin the erection of a canning factory. First official announcement of the proposed enlargement of the local plant was made in The Telegram at the first of the year, but the exact time has just been made known. The plans for the proposed factory are being prepared in Chicago and they will be forwarded to Fort Worth in about a week or ten days, at which time more definite, details about the plant will be available. The canning factory will cost about $500,000 and will furnish employment for about 300

Swift & Company have already built a canning factory here and when Armour & Company install their plant there will be two large factories here which will take charge of the stock best adapted for canning. There will be an abundant supply of this kind of meat in the vicinity of Fort Worth and both of these large concerns have recognized the need of canning establishments here to utilize the beeves of the canner variety which are so plentiful upon this market.

Plants Have Grown The addition of two large canning factories to the already extensive plants of Armour and Swift here calls attention to the remarkable developments at these two plants since they were established here in 1903. As will be remembered the corner stone of the two plants was laid on March 2, 1903. Now the estimated value of the two plants is about $5,000,000. In addition to this they have a pay roll of about $2,000,000 per year for labor, to say nothing of the vast sums expended for the cattle and stock butchered at the plants. The capacity of the plants is about 1,500 head of cattle, 1,200 calves, 1,500 sheep and 5,000 hogs per day each, and while it is not often that either is operated to its full capacity, the output is enormous. The plants turn out all the products of beeves, hogs and sheep and all of the bi-products, as well, and ship food to all parts of the United States. They also handle an export trade of considerable proportions. A large percentage of the product of the local canning plants will be exported to European countries.

About 3,500 people find employment directly at the packeries of Armour & Company and Swift & Company now, and the establishments have been enlarged every year since they were built. The rapid increase in the facilities of the plants has been due to a recognition of the natural advant-It has been found that this business could be handled more profitably here than at other points. Fort Worth has trunk lines of railroad which facilitate the distribution of the products, while cattle can be bought here to better advantage than at the more distant markets. Natural Advantages Here

The advantages to this city and the surrounding country, however, are of prime interest and these are far greater than those who first started the movement to bring the packeries here realized. It will be remembered that the Board of Trade did much toward securing the location of the packing plants here and that a donation of $100,000, $50,000 to each company, was made, together with a two-third interest in the plant then in existence This has proven the best investment Fort Worth ever made. Not only have thousands of laborers been brought here to secure employment, but men of all pursuits have also come to share in the revenue and the city has become the recognized center of the packing industry in the south-

Many wealthy cattlemen have come here to make their homes and have invested in property here, while thousands of cattlemen have visited this city regularly to market their stock. In providing a nearby market for the cattle and stock of this section Fort Worth did much for the stock men. They are able to secure better returns for their cattle, by reason of the fact that they are able to look after the marketing in person, without the expense and loss of time incident upon a trip to Kansas City or Chicago and they are able to keep more closely in touch with the prospective purchasers and thus become better acquainted with their needs.

Hog Receipts Increase Thus far the source of supply has not been equal to the demand for some classes of products, notably hogs. Both concerns have had to purchase a great many hogs outside of the state and ship them here to be butchered, but Texas farmers are rapidly discovering that there is a chance of good revenue in raising hogs and the state is becoming a hog raising state This fact is to be noticed in the steadily growing receipts of Texas

During the first ten days this year the receipts of Texas hogs at the two plants showed an increase of about 45 per cent over the corresponding period of last year and the late months of 1905 showed quite a large gain over the earlier months.

Canners Plentiful A large number of cattle have been offered for market in Texas, however, which were not fat enough for the taste of the eastern consumers but which were just the kind for canning purposes and these so-called canners will be made use of when the two canning plants get down to business. The canning factory of Swift & Company is not yet in full blast and Mr. J. B. Googins, the manager, does not know what its capacity it. This will be developed as the year progresses. What interests Fort Worth and this section most is the fact that a market will be provided for cattle, which are not fattened and there will be no difficulty in securing a bountiful supply. Neither Mr. William F. Cargill, general manager of Armour's plant here, or Mr. Googins, who is in charge of Swift's establishment, are given to talking of the extent of their enterprises and it is apparently the policy of both concerns to do things rather than talk about them. They have been constantly enlarging and developing the plants and it is good news for this city that there is an additional half million dellars shortly to be ex-

The members of the union here are much interested in this measure and declare that the government has not installed the club rooms as provided for by the last congress and that where they have been installed there has not been a sufficient trial to declare that the system is a failure. THE BURCH & PRINCE MONSTER 10 DAYS SALE

A Most Phenominal Success. Crowds Still Coming.

Everybody in Tarrant county who read newspapers or take any interest in current events, know that Burch & Prince, at the Busy Store, are now conducting one of the most gigantic special sales in dry goods, shoes, millinery, ladies' tailor-made suits, notions, etc., ever held in Tarrant county. Yesterday a reporter for this paper dropped in the store to see how the big sale was going, and found the house crowded to the doors with shoppers, each politely waiting his or her turn to be walted upon by the army of busy salespeople. This sale is being conducted by Mr. G. B. Gay, the most successful promoter of special sales in the world. Mr. Gay knows how to advertise, and, in this particular case the job was well and thoroughly done. The result is now being seen in the crowded store. Many customers were heard to exclaim, "Isn't this a bargain?" and

The reporter was struck at once with the smooth and magnificent system under which the whole great concern was moving. Taking it all in all, it is a model sale, and the people of this city and country are fortunate at being able to attend it, and get some of the rare bargains offered. Take advantage of this monster ten days' sale. You cannot afford to miss it.

CITY POLL TAX CAUSES DISPUTE

Question Raised by Man Moving From Arlington

City poll tax receipts Saturday were sixty-nine, making a total of 1,932 poll tax receipts issued by W. J. Gilvin, city collector. The receipts have been somewhat better during the week just passed, but there is still a large percentage of the voting strength of Fort Worth not qualified. The city is not issuing any exemptions and it is necessary for everyone desiring to vote to pay their poll taxes.

A question arose during the latter. part of the week relative to the right | street, opposite Hotel Worth.

These Undermuslins are the product of the Sterling Manufucturing Company, and are unexcelled in fullness of size, durabiltiy and daintiess, embodying the newest ideas of the French hand-made lingerie. Since the order for these goods was placed with the manufacturers, cotton has advanced more than ten dollars per bale; cotton fabrics are costing from 10 to 20 per cent more making it impossible for even the largest dealers to buy the raw material for the price of the finished garment as here offered.

This being the very first printed advertising of this new store, this line of merchandise has been selected for exploitation-not for profit so much as advertising purposes, well knowing the extreme lowness of the prices and the worthiness of the goods will make permanent customers and friends.

The intelligent ones, who resolutely desire to help themselves are exercising excellent judgment in looking into the future of a state with plenty of elbow room, as has Texas, and the future of a city that offers the richest rewards to industries and enterprises, as does Fort Worth. Never in the history of the colossal southwest has general prosperity been so much in evidence as with the openfing of 1906. With a very few exceptions, this is true of all localities, more especially of Fort Worth. With the closing of 1905 Fort Worth bank clearings show an increase of nearly 50 per cent over the year of 1904. The postoffice receipts show a gradual monthly increase. There is, of course, no such thing as "mob law," but to all true citizenship "mob lawlessness" is too prevalent. Plainly speaking, it is noth-

Our laws are adequate to meet the demands of justice. We of Texas and the southland respect law and order. We believe in the triumph of justice and we condemn in no uncertain terms all forms of mob violence. WHOSE HAND MIXED THE POISON THAT KILLED HER OLD HUSBAND?

A Story of Love, Intrigue and Unsolvable Mystery-Girl Bride the Only Person Who Can Tell Anything of the Revolting Crime girl bride? Was it the slender white hand of a woman-or the clumsier fingers of a revengeful man?

A simple German girl, just 23, with innocent hazel eyes and a wild rose complexion-the dead man's wife-is the only living soul who can tell anything about the crime. Her past sad history and her awful, dreamless sleep beside the dead have made this young girl a marked figure.

Suspicion pointed strongly at her as the one who would benefit most by the old man's death. He was known to have made a will leaving everything to and intrigue in which the dead man was the prime mover. Frederick Schaefer reared from childhood his niece, Ida Beisinger. She was looked on as the sole heir to his fortune of about $10,000.

Four years ago he took her to Europe to visit the little German village where he was born.

There they met a handsome young German, Gustav Meintel, with whom Ida Bisinger fell madly in love. But Meintel, the village cobbler, was it up altogether. He started Meintel in the grocery business to get him out of his sight-still the face of the pretty German peasant came between him and the man he had bought for his nieceas he would have purchased any other thing she asked for.

Then came a bitter quarrel with the Meintels. He drove them from his home and demanded that Meintel repay every cent he had put in the grocery store. Meintel refused to pay, and angry words passed between the two men. A few weeks later pretty Mary Rapp, then only 20, reached Parkersburg, the

KNOT IS SLIPPED IN ARMY RED TAPE

Technicality Overlooked in Soldier's Leaving Post

SHERMAN, Texas, Jan. 13.-After being held in jail several days, William D. Drake, charged with desertion of the army, was released on instructions from the war department. Drake enlisted here recently and was sent to San Antonio for assignment, was subjected to a second medical examination at the post and was declared unfit for army service. Application for a discharge on account of disabilities was made in the regular way and, pending the arrival of the discharge, Drake left the post and returned here.

The post commander held that as the discharge had not been received Drake was absent without leave and ordered his arrest.

The war department seemingly overlooks the technicality supporting the desertion charge and ordered the young

HEAVY VOLUME OF STOCK SELLING

New York Prices Attacked But Stand Steady

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 .- A rather unexpectedly heavy volume of selling for various accounts appeared in the stock market this morning from the start. The dealings were in very large lots around the opening and by the way in which pressure was applied in many leading quarters it looked as though desperate efforts were making to break prices. About the only weak stock was Consolidated Gas, which showed little resistance to pressure and its weakness was to an extent an unfavorable influence on the rest.

London sent over a range of prices for American stocks tending upward on the whole and followed up the dealings over there by limited purchases

Hopes with regard to the bank statement were fully realized. An increase of $12,237,650 in reserves was shown which was all accounted for by the gain in cash of $15,603,500. Loans increased $383,300 only and deposits increased $13,463,400. The statement nade a rather poor balance in the changes in cash and loans and deposits. The gain in cash was $8,000,-000 in excess of the amounts shown in it is presumed that the statement today corrected some of the defects of last week's exhibit, which failed to refleet fully the improvement in the position of the banks at that time.

Immediately before the appearance of the bank statement the market advanced all around, but on the publication of the statement there was a heavy realizing movement, which supposedly carried prices back to the lower levels of the first hour.

In the Street The number of shares of stock sold today was 978,545, against 740,130 the same day last year.

The total par value of bonds sold today was $2,623,000, against $4,918,-000 the same day last year.

SOUTHERN MEETING HAS LITTLE EFFECT

New York Cotton Unaffected by Resolutions in New Orleans Meeting

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.-Trading throughout the week has been comparatively quiet, with trading largely of professional character and prices have moved with a narrow limit, closing within a few points of last week's closing level. The feature of the week has been the gradual narrowing of the differences between March and May, with further talk of a squeeze in the mer month by Wall street, but it is the general opinion that Wall street is not anxious to take over very much spot cotton. The Southern Cotton Association convened in New Orleans Thursday and, while resolutions have been passed favoring higher prices, it has had but little if any effect on the market. Prices today were steady at the opening, showing a gain of 2 to 8 points from the previous close, following steady Liverpool advices and on some covering on the part of local shorts and buying by commission houses. The range of values was small, however, and trading during the day proved inactive. Week-end statistics were considered

RUSSIA TROUBLED FROM ALL SIDES

Bureaucracy and Liberty to Excess Says College Man

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.-Professor George F. Wright of Oberlin College, who has just returned from a five months' stay in Europe, two months of which were spent in Russia, traveling through the unsettled portions of the country by sleigh or drosky, studying actual conditions and conferring with the officials who are endeavoring to improve these conditions, sums up the result of his observations by declaring that while he finds that there is too much beauracracy at the top in Russia there is undoubtedly an excess of liberty at the bottom, but that the bourgeois will ultimately gain control of the government.

While Americans are reading of the better educations under treatment and more liberty for the peasants of Russia, the student of society finds that the freedom which has been given to the village communes is the right to direct the school affairs of the district and has been responsible not merely for low standards of education in many districts, but for the transportation to Siberia of more than 50 per cent of the exiles who have been sent to that country within the past ten years. Students Parading

Students in Moscow and elsewhere are parading and shouting for liberty, insisting that they want one or the other of Patrick Henry's alternatives, when, according to Professor Wright, all they want is an opportunity to force all teachers out and the right to bring into the universities any fireband revolutionist or demagogue who may suit their fancy.

Stead Talked to Czar "I met Mr. Stead in Moscow," said Professor Wright. "He had had several interviews with the czar and also with the leaders of more conservative thought in that city and St. Petersburg, but it was easy to see that he was very such disheartened. He told me that the one suggestion which he had received which had lightened the burden of his trip had been made by Lewis Nixon of New York. Tammany Plan Proposed

"When Mr. Nixon, together with other foreigners who happened to be n Moscow and St. Petersburg at the time had been called into consultation, he declared, Mr. Stead told me that the problem could be simplified very considerably if they would only start : lot of branches of Tammany hall throughout the empire and just run things on the Tammany policy, managing affairs as that organization does, where it has to face the difficulties of differing creeds, a cosmopolitan population and a whole lot of the difficulties which confront Russia today.

Much Exaggeration "A lot of exaggerated nonsense is talked and written about Russia," continued Frofessor Wright. "If there are frequent disturbances and if there have been frequent disturbances for years past, these have occurred nearly always in the annexed states on the border of the empire proper. Remember that here is a territory in which eleven languages are spoken. Within the borders of the empire are from 60,-000,000 to 70,000,000 of Slavs and undoubtedly there is a pan-Slav move-

Russia Too Lenient

"As a matter of fact, Russia has been, and is, altogether too lenlent with criminals. Capital punishment was abolished in the empire 250 years ago. Russians are natives of the land of extremes and can kill and slaughter if need be, while laboring under some strong excitement, but be he prince or peasant he cannot contemplate the killing of a man in cold blood.

Problem Not Peculiar

"Much is made of the use of their native language by Finns and Poles and this problem is discussed as though it vere peculiar to Russia. Yet surely any sensible man must see that only one legal language can be permitted in a country. There must also be a language in use in the army, which all shall understand, so that everyone may respond at once to the orders of he officers. Any different system would be an absurdity.

"But is Russia alone in having this problem? Has Great Britain no Irish problem; have we no Philippine problem? Does either Great Britain or the United States act very differerently from Russia?

Finns Had Good Time "As a matter of fact, the Finns have had a very snug time of it at Russia's expense. They have had to do nothing for the defense of the empire: have not been called upon to go out of Finland, yet have had open to them every opportunity of rising in the Russian service."

INTERESTING FACTS

For Nearly Every Man, Woman or

Child A short time ago we published an article recommending to our readers the new discovery for the cure of Dyspepsia, called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and the claims then made regarding the wonderful curative properties of the remedy have been abundantiy sustained by the facts. People who were cautious about trying new remedies advertised in the newspapers and were finally induced to give Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a trial were surprised and delighted at the results. In many cases a single package costing but 50 cents at any drug store made a complete cure, and in every instance the most beneficial results were reported. From a hundred or more received we have space to publish only a few of the latest, but assure our readers we receive so many commendatory letters that we shall publish each week a fresh list of genuine, unsolicited testimonials and never publish the same one twice. From James Yemmelsler, LaCrosse,

Wis .: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are doing me more good than anything I ever tried, and I was so pleased at results that I gave away several boxes to my friends who have also had the same benefits. From Jacob Anthony, Portmurray, New Jersey: I have taken Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with the best results. I had dyspepsia for six years, and had taken a great deal of medicine, but the tablets seem to take right a hold and I feel good. I am a farmer and lime burner, and I heartily recommend to every one who has any trouble with his stomach to use these

From Mrs. M. K. West, Preston, I have received surprisingly good effects from using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I gave one-half of my from indigestion, and she had the same good results. From Mrs. Agnes K. Ralston, Cadillac. Mich.: I have been taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I am very much better, and feel very grateful for the great benefit I have received in so short a time. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure for all forms of Indigestion. They are not claimed to be a cure-all, but are prepared for stomach troubles only, and physicians and druggists everywhere recommend them to all persons suffering from Nervous Dyspepsia, sour or acid stomach, heart-and delivered addresses and held mass meetings at which time they advised all voters of the necessity of taking out their poll tax receipts in order that they may vote. Mr. Peteet said that they had been cordially received in the different places and the result will have a salutary effect on the voters in general, who appear to be indifferent in the matter.

RY. CROSSING APPROVED

Brazos Valley and Central May Intersect at Corsicana Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 13 .- The railroad commission yesterday issued an order approving a contract between the Trinity and Brazos Valley railway and the Houston and Texas Central railway for the construction of a non-grade crossing at Corsicana. between these two roads for the construction of an overland crossing at Mexia, where the tracks of these two roads cross each other. This last mentioned crossing is what caused the Houston and Texas Central to apply for a writ of injunction in the Fiftythird District court some time ago to restrain the railroad commission from inforcing its order directing the construction of a crossing at grade by the Trinity and Brazos Valley road. Now that as agreemest has been reached between these two lines in the matter, it is likely that the application for a writ of injunction will be dismissed.

There has been quite a contest against the Trinity and Brazos Valley in the construction of these crossings at different points in the state, but it appears that the matter has been settled. The hearing on these propositions some time occupied two days of the time of the railroad commission.

PURE FOOD SHOW MAY COME HERE

In this day and time of hurry, pellmell rush for wealth the American people have created a habit of grasping everything in sight when hungry, gulping it down and "chewing it on the way back."

The best men in the grocery business, medical profession and many others have been trying for years to stop the adulterations of food stuffs. They have in a way suppressed it to some degrees, but the American manufacturers are so quick and inventive that they hardly get one thing stopped until they have half a dozen others equally as good to take the place of the former adulterations.

The object of the "Pure Food" shows all over the land this year is to teach the people to eat only pure goods. The pure food show consists of a series of booths so arranged as to display the food articles.

The Dallas show is designed to be the best yet put on in the south. It will have thirty-eight large, handsome booths, all decorated in varied colors, by professional men. In each booth cooking will be done and the tempting viands given away free. Each firm has samples to give away, also free. The Hughes Brothers Company will give away ten large iced cakes free daily, one cake to a lady. Many booths will give away valuable prizes. The Dallas Concert Band will discourse music all during the show. It has been arranged that on Tuesday night, commencing at 10.30 o'clock, a ball will be given on the second floor and a midnight supper be spread. On Wednesday night another ball for the wholesale men, manufacturers' agents, traveling salesman and city drummers will be entertained. On Thursday night an open ball for all will be given.

A committee of retail grocers will attend from this city. Monday night they go to arrange with Director E. H. Hyman for a suitable show for Fort Worth. Director General Hyman has given these shows in all the principal cities of the southern states and they have proved hugh successes everywhere. It is hoped should Fort Worth put on a show, to outdo them

ANOTHER ARREST IN ENVELOPE CASE

Two Hearings Set for Monday Morning

Complaint was made in Justice Terrell's court Saturday afternoon against W. H. Land, proprietor of the Mohawk hotel, corner Fifteenth and Calhoun streets, charging him with theft by bailee of over $50. A warrant was issued and Land arrested and taken before Justice Terrell, who fixed his bond at $350, which was given. Hearing of the charge was set for Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

This arrest followed that of E. M. Jackson, who was arrested in Dallas Saturday morning on a charge or theft of over $50. Money and securities $18,-000 in value are alleged by M. C. Mc-Graw to have been left at the hotel. The charge against Jackson is also set for hearing Monday.

The complaining witness against both Jackson and Land is M. C. Me-Graw, president of the Kennedale Canring and Preserving Company. He asserts that he stopped at the Mohawk leotel Friday night, depositing in the hotel office for safekeeping the money

When arrested Jackson is reported to have had in his possession all the property reported missing with the exception of $250 in cash and negotiable caper for $300. He is said to have had $6.15 in cash. Saturday afternoon he declared the valuables given him were in envelops and that he had not even looked ins'de them to see what they contained, but supposed they were papers pertaining to the Kennedale canning factory.

PAUL HAGGARD HAS BAD FALL

Storage Plant Engineer Hurt. Other North Side News

Paul Haggard, chief engineer at the North Fort Worth Ice and Cold Storage Company plant, was seriously injured Saturday afternoon while repairing some pipes near the roof of the building. Mr. Haggard had mounted a ladder and was about twenty feet above the floor working at the steam pipes when the ladder slipped from under him. He instinctively grasped the steam pipe near his head to keep from falling. The steam pipe was very hot and began burning his hand so seriously that he loosened his hold and fell. It is supposed that he struck on a pump, near which he was found unconscious a few minutes later by other men employed at the plant. A physician was summoned at once and after a few hours the injured man partly regained consciousness and was taken to his home in Lake avenue. At a late hour Saturday evening Mr. Haggard had regained consciousness and the doctor had pronounced him in no danger. His hands were not seriously burned and it is thought that he will soon be able to resume his the city by the McQuatters Company. Although there was a quorum present, it was decided best to wait until the entire council was present before accepting the plant. Transfers in Six Days Reach Nearly Quarter of Million

The real estate deeds filed at the office of the county clerk for the year 1906 have amounted to almost a half million dollars for the two weeks. The total amount for the past week was $212,230.12, while for the first week of the year the total was $273,202, making a total of $485,432.01.

The past week has been another good week in the number of deeds filed, and also for the total value. There were not as many deeds of as large amounts filed as the week before, but the number was somewhat larger, as there were 136 deeds for the past week against 111 for the first week of the year. Not only has the amount of the deeds filed at the county clerk's office been large, but the real estate men of the city have experienced a prosperous week's work, as there have been several large deals closed for downtown property and there are several more in the air now which will undoubtedly be closed within a few days. ZANE-CETTI SUIT AGAIN MISTRIAL

Strip of Land in Grandview Addition in Dispute

The jury in the case of Zane Cetti vs. the city of Fort Worth failed to agree after deliberating nearly twelve hours, and was discharged by Judge Irby Dunklin of the Forty-eighth district court Saturday afternoon. The case had been on trial in Judge Dunklin's court all the week.

This case has been in the civil court of appeals, taken up from a verdict in the lower court, the higher court reversing the district court and remanding the case for a new trial. The suit involves the question of the dedication of a strip of land 60x 1,026 feet in the Grandview addition to Fort Worth, known as Seventh avenue, in the Eighth ward.

The land was owned in 1890 by Mrs. Harriet Cetti, mother of Zane Cetti, and was sold by her to Mc-Anulty et al. for $30,000, one-fourth of which was paid in cash, the balance being secured by vendor's lien notes. Drew Pruett purchased the land in March, 1890, from McAnulty et al. and assumed the payment of the lien notes.

A few days afterward Pruitt, joined by others who owned adjoining property, laid out the Grandview addition platting and subdividing it into town lots and laying out streets and alleys, Seventh avenue, the land in controversy, being one of the streets. This evenue includes forty-two feet off the Cetti tract, which was, after the street had been designated, bought by A. B. Wharton and improved.

In January, 1894, suit was brought on the vendor's lien notes to foreclose against the makers of the notes and those claiming the land under conveyance from them. Judgment was given in favor of Cetti, the Pruitt dedication of the street being disregarded, and in 1903 Zane Cetti began suit against the city to recover that portion of the Cetti property embraced in Seventh avenue.

AT HIGH SCHOOL

MANY GRADUATES

From present indications the Fort Worth high school will graduate more students this year than in any previous year. Fifty-two students are now on the roll. There have been larger classes in the past, but it is believed there will be more graduates this year because the students are making grades far above the average.

Graduation exercises will take place about June 1, the exact date not yet Texas Cotton Products Company vs. being settled. The class for 1906 is a wide-awake one and is doing some original things.

In September the class was organized and the following officers elected: President, Edwin P. Arneson; vice president, Miss Virginia Frost; critic, debt and foreclosure; reinstated on Robert Moodie; secretary, LeRoy Borden; treasurer, Josephine Woods; class prophet, Miss Adelia Darter. Since its organization the class has had an active history.

A sextet composed of Misses Darter, Masterson, Vance and Messrs. Borden, Arneson and Stokes, has been formed and has been heard at various school

A change in the graduating exercises will be made this year. Instead of the usual orations and essays there will be more music. The class will also present a play at the final exercises, something no other class has done. The play has not yet been se-lected, but will be in the near future. One having many characters will be chosen in order that as many as possible of the graduates may take part. The outside numbers to be on the program have not been arranged.

Scholarship Contest A good-natured but keen contest is on between Miss Virginia Frost and Edwin Arneson for the valedictory honors and scholarship to the State University. Both contestants are averaging 98 per cent or better. There are fifteen boys in this year's class, an unusual number. Generally there are but four or five. On the whole the 1906 class claims t has done more than any graduating which he charges is up to this time class. It has averaged higher grades, done original things and kept in perfeet harmony. List of Members

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and puriffer in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose. Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onlons and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teetle and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which cellect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh. All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Swart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion. sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possble harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit,

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the tenefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bow-els, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat: I also believe the liver is greatly benefite by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores. and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

DINING ROOM OF ALICE ROOSEVELTS FUTURE HOME

ISS ALICE ROOSEVELT, who has been for several years past the most talked about girl in the world, will, as Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, be the mistress of a home whose hospitalities will keep the President's daughter quite as prominently in the public eye as she has been at any time since she made her first formal bow to society just three years ago. Architecturally speaking, this plain, almost homely mansion is anything but imposing, and is, indeed, impressive only by reason of its bigness, but the attractiveness of the home-like interior more than compensates for the deficiencies of the exterior, and it is assuredly most advantageously situated. It is not more than four blocks from the White House, and is surrounded by beautiful residences occupled by persons whose names are well known to newspaper readers all over the country. Just across the street is the house recently purchased by Thomas F. Ryan, the New York financier-a house that was for many years occupied by another White House belle almost as popular as Miss Alice Roosevelt, namely, the beautiful Harriet Lane Johnston, who a broad, easy stairway ascends, with several turns to the floor above. On the floor of the main hall are a number of bear skins and other rugs, and the walls are adorned with a collection of weapons which have seen service in the hands of fighting men of many lands and periods. Some of these quaint specimens of arms and armor are souvenirs of Mr. Longworth's recent trip to the Orient, during which Miss Roosevelt is reputed to have said the all-important "yes." On the opposite side of the hall from the study a passageway communicates with the kitchen and other culinary departments.

The main or parlor floor of the mansion is given over to three splendid roomsa drawing-room, boudoir and dining-room. The rooms, which are ranged, so to speak. three abreast, are each the full depth of the house, and all are connected by wide doorways hung with portieres, so that the trio may be used in conjunction on the occasion of any social function.

The drawing-room at the north end of the house is an unusually large apartment, but the sense of exceptional size is lost owing to the presence of : number of large pieces of furniture and a grand plano, the latter provided in deference to the tastes of the future mistress, who is as accomplished an artist on the plane as Representative Longworth is on the violin. The rugs, upholstery and window hangings in the drawing-room are red, s color scheme that is rendered doubly ef fective by contrast with the white wood work. The walls are hung with numer ous paintings, including several old masters, and an atmosphere of warmth and cheer is imparted to the room by a wood fire crackling in a wide open freplace faced with white tile and surmounted by a large gold-framed mirror.

Adjoining the drawing-room is the dainty boudoir which has been fitted up to: the bride. This cozy private reception-room where the President's daughter will receive ber women friends is calculated to captivate the feminine heart. In furnishings and decorations it is a triumph of the French school so popular with members of the fair sex. The gold outlines of the furniture stand out in relief against the pale pink satin of the upholstery, and the doorways are framed in panels of yellow satin, richly embroidered. A beautifully enameled writing is a profusion of brie-a-brac to which the future mistress will add some of the wonderful fans which were presented to ber in the Far East. Three immense windows, forming a bay, make up one side of the boudoir, and the room ; in consequence flooded with light.

Beyond the boudoir at the south end of the house is the dining-room, one of the most artistic and attractive apartments in the bouse. The room is large enough to accommodate from 20 to 30 guests, yet so arranged that it will appear none too large when there are only two at table. The furniture including table, chairs, sideboard and serving tables, is of black walnut, heavily carved, and displayed in the room are a number of superb pieces of silverplate and several colonial candlesticks. The window hangings are of green and tan, and these same colors predominate in the immense tapestry which occupies the major portion of the wall space at one side of the room. The third and fourth floors of the new Longworth house are given over to the sleep ing rooms. Here, as elsewhere through out the mansion, everything is in refect taste, and there are a sufficient number of guest chambers to enable the mistress of the home to entertain a good-sized house party should she wish to do so. A VIEW OF THE DINING ROOM AT WHITE HOUSE HERE can be little doubt that the Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Obio, will prove the most brilliant event in the history of the White House. A number of nuptial ceremonics have been held in the historic Presidential Mansion during the century that this famous bome has focused the attention of the American people, but none have approached in significance or universal public interest the event which will draw the eyes of the world to the first residence of America in February of this year.

How We Hear Our Own Voices.

That a man does not hear his own voice as all the rest of the world hears it is souvenir a piece of the wedding cake, shown by an interesting experiment. If incased in a white satin box on the a person records on a phonograph a few cover of which was a hand-painted design, sentences pronounced by himself together with others by his friends, and causes the machine to reproduce these at the end of a brief period, it generally happens that he easily recognizes his friends' voices but not his own. On the other hand, the friends recognize his voice perfectly. This singular fact proves that everyone hears his own voice dif-

Dr. Bolton of Texas, to Have Charge of Investigation of Historical Nature

Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 13.-Letters received by Professors Garrison and solton from Professor Jameson, director of the bureau of historical research of the Carnegie institution, bring news to the effect that the bureau is at last ready to undertake the examination and description of the Mexican archives.

In the summer of 1900 Professor Garrison and Miss Casis went to the City of Mexico, where they spent several weeks in copying important documents in the archive general. Since that time his other engagements have prevented him from returning to the work, but it has been continued by Misses Casis, Rather and Austin (now Mrs. Hatcher) and Drs. Bolton and R. O. Clark. Meanwhile Professor Garrison has been endeavoring to get the Carnegie institution or the congressional library to assist in the enterprise, and the institution has finally decided to take it up.

Being now no longer dependent on private energy and means and proceeding under competent management, the work will doubtless go forward rapidly and satisfactorily.

Dr. Bolton's fitness for the task he has undertaken has been well proved by the results of researches he has already made in the archive general, which have been published in the quarterly of the Texas State Historical Association, and the institution is p be congratulated on securing his sevices. Reports on other foreign archives similar to that which Dr. Bolton is to make on those of Mexico are being prepared for the Carnegie Institution. That on England has been assigned to Professor C. M. Andrews of Bryn Mawr College: that on Spain to Professor W. R. Shepherd of Columbia University and that on Cuba to Luis M. Perez.

SANTA FE ROAD TO CREOSOTE TIES

Will Use Steam Process for Protection of Wood

The new creosoting plant of the Santa Fe railroad at Somerville, Texas, will be completed and ready for operation early in February. This plant will have a capacity of 10,000 ties per world. It cost approximately $1,250,-

This part of the process takes about two hours. When it is completed valves are opened and the oil remaining is let out into an underground tank by gravity. Upon the pump pressure being removed the compressed air in the wood cells of the timber expands and forces out the liquid creosote which would otherwise remain in the pores to work itself out in time. A vacuum is then created in the cylinders so as to bring away the loose oil around the ties. Then the doors of the cylinders are opened, the trams and their loads removed, and the cylinders are ready for another charge. It takes about five hours to complete

BELIEVES IN FORT WORTH

Vice President Fickinger Thinks City Has Great Future

Vice President Fickinger of the Frisco believes that the city of Fort Worth is destined to be the greatest city in Texas and that the surrounding country will prosper in proportion. The farmers of Texas and this part of the state in particular are reaping a great deal of benefit from the packing houses located in Fort Worth and they could reap more if they were prepared to furnish more of the raw material used by the packeries. It is the opinion of Mr. Fickinger that the farmers should awaken to the advantages which are now within such easy reach and he believes that they will do so. With the railroad facilities, the packing houses and the geographical position of this point, he is of the opinion that Fort Worth will go by all the rest of the cities in the state and in time become the greatest city in this great

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways-sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges shaper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. SAMPLE ROOM TO BE OPENED

Fort Worth Men to Incorporate New Industry

The new wholesale sample room which was announced for this city some time ago will be opened in the Larimer building, 1209 Main street, occupying the second floor, a week from Monday. The sample room will be under the managership of R. A. Love, who says that this room will be the first one of its kind established in the United States.

The new sample room is backed by a company composed of local men, at the head of which is William Monnig. Papers will be sent to Austin this week to incorporate the company and the capital stock will probably be in the neighborhood of $19,000. The directors of the company will be William Monnig, R. A. RANGE CATTLE FAT

Sterling P. Clark, who is connected with the loan department of Cassidy Southwestern Commission Co., returned from his ranch Friday night. His place is located in the northwest corner of Runnels county, and takes in the southwest corner of Taylor county. He says that grass was never finer, not so much rain having fallen there as in this section and that cattle are fat and "sassy." In fact, he says he has cows that would make good beef now. There are worlds of good farm land, and it is rapidly being taken up at from $10 to $30 per acre, and it will not be a very long period before a "ranch," as the term is now understood, will be a thing of the past, and stock farming the sole method of raising cattle and sheep. Where he is located is an ideal country for this purpose and no part of Texas will surpass Runnels county. He has some 700 head of white-faced cattle on his place and they as fine as can be. He has been living in the Panhandle for the last fourteen years. Owing to an accident that made him a cripple, he has sold his ranch holdings and retired from actual business. He said: "Up to a few weeks ago the range was in splendid fix and cattle were holding their own remarkably for the season, but the recent cold rains and snows have had a bad effect, injuring the grass and causing the stock to shrink more or less, but not as much as some anticipated. Our country can't be beat in the Panhandle for cattle and stock farming, and besides, we have a lawabiding people, pretty girls and stout boys, with whom we can safely leave the future of the country."

RED SUNDAY OBSERVED

Eighty Large Assemblies Arranged-Kaiser to Thwart Proposed Display

By Cable to The Telegram BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—The socialists of Berlin have just made it known that, like their brethren in Dresden, they will arrange a mass meeting and a monster parade in this city to protest against the present government on Sunday, Jan. 21.

Meeting Was Postponed It was originally intended to have the the protest Jan. 16, but for two reasons it was thought best to postpone it until the Sunday after because socialistic working men, though willing to march in the procession, do not care enough for it to sacrifice a day's wages and because Jan. 21 is the anniversary of "The Bloody Sunday" in Russia, a fact which will come in handy for the speakers. Eighty Meetings to Be Held At noon Jan. 21 eighty large meetings will begin in all parts of the city and at a certain hour the masses will begin their march toward Kalser Wilhelm's palace, where the leaders intend to arrange what they call an orderly demonstration. Kaiser Has Other Plans The kaiser has planned to thwart these plans so far as possible without resorting to violence. He has ordered that the square in front of the palace be kept clear of all persons. The whole police force of the city will be on hand to maintain order. No permits will be given to parade, and if the socialists try to display red flags these will immediately be taken away by the police and the bearers arrested. Berlin Garrison Increased The garrison of the city has been considerably strengthened and every regiment will be ready to emerge from the barracks on a moment's notice and have received orders to use ball cartridges from the very first shot.

Prince Will "Show Them" "I am going to show the socialists," Von Buelow declared "that when I told them in my last speech in the reichstag that if they intended to attempt any disturbances it would be at the cost of many broken heads, I meant just what I said."

What Kind of Financier Are You?

To sell a lot of ground for $50 less than it would bring if 50c were expended in advertising it? It is very common-if not very wise-financiering.

To sell a shop or store for $1 worth of advertising would have found the man willing to pay $500 more for it-that is "near-sighted" financiering.

To allow a house or apartment to remain tenantless for three months, when 30c worth of advertising would have rented it in three days-is not a GOOD way to "manage property," but It is a very usual way!

Through all the little affairs of daily life we are apt to thus trample upon all of the Financial Commandments - making ourselves the poorer, and nobody else the richer. LINER ADS. WILL HELP YOU

MACHINE SOLVES DIPPING PROBLEM

New Device for Treating Cattle on Exhibition Here

Worth Live Stock Exchange a maexhibition at the dipping pens located relegate the old process to a place among the "has beens" and relieve the. operation of disinfecting of some of its seemingly cruel features.

"We claim," said S. G. Hamlin, secretary and assistant general manager of the Seabury Live Stock Spraying Machine company, who is installing the machine here, "that this machine and the method is probably one of the greatest inventions for the live stock interests of the United States,

"As soon as their merits are known they must of necessity take the place of the barbarous dipping vat now in use as the Seabury machine not only dispenses with the torture of the dipping process, but more effectively treats the cattle, and above all, entirely does away with the loss which has always been a consequence of dip-

Any Kind of Dip

"Any kind of dip can be used and will maintain its strength better than in vats, but, as recent government experiments have proved crude oil to be effective and economical, and our own experience has verified the same, we prefer using Beaumont crude oil and water. Our machine is the only known method of holding the oil and water always in the proper solution and proportion, being made possible by our automatic mixing device, which admits of the application being anywhere

Under 20 Pounds Pressure "The oil and water are both heated by exhaust seam to a temperature of about 80 degrees, where they are thoroughly mixed and applied to the animal through the sprays, under a twenty pound pressure, each animal passing through 200 gallons of sprayed liquid as it goes through the machine. The possibility of smothering or injury is entirely done away with, as the machine is but sixteen feet in length and the spraying itself creates oxygen.

"In passing through the machine, each animal carries off approximately one-half gallon of oil when sprayed for mange or scab or lice and about one gallon when sprayed for fever tick the oil being evenly distributed over

"Demonstration has proved it to be the most efficient way of disinfecting cattle, and is the only solution that will kill scab and lice at the same time and it does with one spraying what would require two dippings with lime and sulphur, sulphur and tobacco or other dips, except when dipped in Beaumont crude oil, and leaves the cattle clear and clean. It is not only the safest way of disinfecting, but the work can be executed in about one-tenth the time required to dip, as the machine easily handles 3,000 to 4,000 head a

Only Humane Way

"The first essential is, of course, effectiveness of treatment; but next to that is the fact that it is the only humane way known of disinfecting cattle. The laws require disinfection, and the humaneness of this treatment cannot help but commend itself to every cattle owner. The mildness of the mals being put through the machine in the spring when many are too weak to swim through the vats. It also eliminates the possibility of their swallowing any of the liquid and cattle begin feeding immediately after being sprayed, so that the loss incident to putting live stock through the dipping vats is done away with by the use of the Seabury machine. We have sprayed 15,000 head during the year since the company has been organized, among them three weeks old calves and none have died or been injured.

"Some 600 dairy cows put through the machine showed an increase volume of milk at once, instead of the usual decrease which follows dipping. "Cattle sprayed, say in May or June, were cleaned of lice and mange or scab with one spraying, and as the oil stays on the hide from six to eight weeks, it keeps the flies away from the animal and kills all germs or nits, and cattle so sprayed have been shipped in October and November, passing government inspection as clear and clean. Our humane and effective method has so commended itself to our government officials in the bureau of animal industry as to procure for us the official endorsement of the secretary of agriculture, which is the best evidence of its merits, and it is probably upon this endorsemest that the government was induced to order from the Seabury Spraying Machine company three of its machines, to be placed at points of export.

"I forgot to say that it consumes from three to ten minutes for an animal to pass through the machine. "A machine will be placed at Fort Worth and one at Amarillo and probably at other cattle shipping centers in the state.

Machine Is Movable

"The machine, as you see, is o wheels and can be hauled from point to point on the range as desired, after the manner of a thrashing machine, and thus can be used on large ranches and moved from place to place where the cattle are usually corraled and that at no very great expense or loss of time. Chutes will, of course, have to be constructed, but after the first year the machine will only have to be backed into position and go to work. "A machine complete weighs something like 3,500 pounds. The cost of manufacturing the machine is so large that they will not be offered for sale but will be let upon a royalty basi to be determined hereafter.

Headquarters in Denver.

"The Seabury Live Stock Spraying Machine and Manufacturing company has its offices at 946 Equitable Building, Denver, Colo. L. D. Sweet is general manager; S. G. Hamlin, secretary and assistant general manager, and H. C. Harding, superintendent of the company for Texas

"A thorough test of the capabilities of the machine will be given at the stock yards in Fort Worth during the coming week under the control of the Fort Worth Live Stock Exchange and very stockman and others who may be interested in the success of the cattle business are invited to come and see the successful working of the greatest machine ever introduced for the benefit of the cattle raisers and

The following excerpts from letters received by this company from some of the cattle owners who used machines last spring in the Fort Morgan and "Muddy" districts of Colorade, verify the facts as above set forth: "I fully believe that the oil is the stuff for scab, and I know that the machine does the work in the quickest and most humane way possible." "I have just come off the range, and I have been unable to find the least sign of mange on anything that went through the sprayer last spring." "So far as I am concerned, I shall never use anything else but the sprayer, for several reasons: First, we can put through all the way from ten to twenty head in the same time we could It is the only humane treatment I have injured; third, I think the oil is the only thing to use and the sprayer the only safe way to use the oil. The sprayer and oil cannot fail to satisfy any one who will try it."

"It is the quickest and most efficient way, besides the oil having a good effect on the animals, keeping flies off, etc.' "When we have to 'dip' we will use the sprayer."

"The speed, effectiveness and ease with which the work is done should commend it to all cattlemen." "Having had a good deal of experience with the different ways of dipping cattle for mange, I have given the matter considerable attention and can say that your machine is the quickest, easiest on cattle, as well as the most effective I have tried or had "I was present while about 8,000

head were run through the machine last spring, and do not think one head was injured in any way." "We are satisfied in our minds that this is the solution of the problem of ridding the range of scab and lice, and as it seemingly keeps away the horn flies and other insects it should prove profitable to spray cattle for this

CITY GAINS IN VOTING STRENGTH

Has Within 93 Votes of County Electoral Strength

A total of 5,457 poll tax receipts have been issued up to the close of business Saturday night by the county collector. Of these 2,682 were paid by city voters rendering exemptions and 2,775 had been paid by voters in the outside precincts. This gives the county a lead of only 93 votes over the city. The lead of the county last week was over two hundred.

Payment of poll tax for the present year shows a marked improvement over the year previous. For instance, on October, 1905, 314 poll taxes had been paid, while in October, 1904, 315 had been paid. On Nov. 1, 1905, 636 polls were paid, while for the same time in 1904 only 357 were paid. Dec. 1, 1905, the poll payments ran up to 2,066, while on the same day of the year previous only 1,269 had been

The total polls paid up on Jan. 1, 1906, was 3,016, against 1,941 paid up to the same date in 1905.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE IS CURABLE

This Paper Has Positive Knowledge of a Number of Cases

The diseases which ranks second in the list of mortality with the great white plague, consumption, and which has been deemed equally incurable by both medical practitioners and the laity is Bright's Disease and its companion malady, Diabetes. That they are now positively curable is known to comparatively few people, but if the method had been emblazoned across the front pages of newspapers and expatiated upon in the columns of medical journals as alleged cures for consumption have been, one of humanity's greatest scourges would have been rendered inocuous. Unfortunately, the new specific for Bright's Disease, Fulton's Renal Compound, comes under the head of proprietary medicines and medical ethics forbid a recognition of its merits and newspapers refuse to take a strictly utilitarian view of it as the diseases for which it is a remedy do not appeal to the sentimental side of readers to the degree that consumption does. The Herald takes the view that having positive knowledge of cures being effected by this agency, its duty to its readers and to humanity in general is to state the facts. The this specific and knows of two cases in which it has effected permanent cures and of two others in which persons who had practically abandoned hope of recovery are regaining their health after a few months' treatment. We are not authorized to publish the names, but will furnish them to any one who is sufficiently interested to inquire and desires proof of our statement. This paper is not pecuniarily interested and this statement is made solely with a view of aiding such people as may be afflicted with these diseases and have despaired of recovery. Should any such receive benefit, we will feel amply repaid for diverging from the beaten journalistic path to
