For some time she has been an ardent horsewoman, riding through the streets and lanes of Berkeley with as much ease as her most fortunate sisters, who have the gift of sight. Tonight she created considerable comment by appearing at the local skating rink on roller skates. Announcement of the opening of the De Zavala school, now being completed in the eighth ward, to take place Feb. 16, was made at the City Teachers' Institute, held at the high school Saturday morning.

Professor B. F. Webb read a paper on "The State of Higher Education," discussing what the state owes the people beyond high schools. In this discussion Professor Webb urged that in order to reach its own ideal the state should favor the educated in order that they in turn may favor the uneducated.

Mrs. Charles Scheuber read a paper on "The Library and the Public School," outlining things that closely connect school and library. Mrs. Scheuber said that unless something prevented a course in "How to Use the Library" would be given in the fall, and that a course of lectures for all grades would soon be arranged at the Carnegie Library.

Martin, who, with Mack Bergman represented the Fort Worth association at the national gathering, said today:

"The entire Texas delegation worked together for much of the time at the convention, which meets in January, 1907, to the city of Dallas. In doing this the Fort Worth delegation felt that this city has much to gain by bringing this gathering of representative American business men to Dallas, situated as this city is. Our constant thought during the meeting was the advertising of Fort Worth and in this, we met with a hearty co-operation from all the Texas delegation, the entire membership assisting in keeping Texas well in the forefront of discussion at every possible point. At this meeting, which was attended by some 400 delegates and more than a thousand other persons interested in the grocer and butcher business in the United States, many new contracts or orders for business were brought out for the benefit of all concerned. Probably not a member attended this convention but went back to his business imbued with better ideas for conducting it and making it a success. I think I can say that I have not enjoyed myself more in the same length of time for many years."

Fair Actress Risked Life to See Mount Vesuvius in Wild Eruption

Miss Mildred Holland, the talented American actress who risked her life to see Mount Vesuvius in wild eruption, spent last summer in Italy. While there she found time to write to her many friends at home. In one of which she wrote the following: "Last week we visited Vesuvius while it was in eruption. It is one of the most inspiring sights I have ever witnessed. The guide, after we had gone about three-fourths toward the top, informed us that it would be dangerous to go any further. I was obstinate, as I had twice visited Italy for the sole purpose of looking down into the crater, which gushed forth such ill smelling fumes and flames, and I was determined to go ahead, even if I never returned again. Just like a woman to be foolish at times, but think what a great disappointment to me it would have been to return to America, and when asked by my friends the question, if I had looked in the crater, and then have to answer in the negative, no, no. Well, I went up and gazed into the roaring crater and was satisfied. I can assure you that I will not do it again. A few hours later, after we had descended to the bottom of the volcano, we were informed that the path near the top which we had taken had fallen in about fourteen feet from the mouth of the crater."

27 BODIES ARE TAKEN FROM SEA

Valencia Victims Found Floating on Placid Waters

By Associated Press. VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 3.—The total number of bodies recovered from the Valencia is now twenty-seven, five more, three of men and two of women, having been found floating on the top of the water over a mile from the scene of the wreck by the United States revenue cutter Perry. The bodies, which returned to Bamfield last night, after a day spent in cruising near the scene of the wreck, reports having landed Lieutenant Stromberg and his sailors from her crew to relieve the searchers on shore, who are now thoroughly exhausted. The sea was smooth, though a heavy surf rolled on shore, and the wreck of the Valencia could be plainly seen from the deck of the Perry. The outline of the steamer shows in the plain, and her boilers and cylinders, from which the hull has been broken away, can be seen above the water at low tide. The wreck is not more than 100 yards from shore. The cutter Perry says the course she took is indicated in the kelp. The bodies recovered by the cutter were all picked up when cruising over a mile from the wreck, each body picked from the steamer's deck. The corpses were all nude and were mutilated. None has been identified. The tug Wyndia is to bring the bodies to Victoria today. Four bodies now await identification here, and six more are expected today.

This morning, when he awoke, he felt beneath his pillow and noticed that he had lost his money and his fingers. He has been working steadily in a restaurant for several months and had been saving up every cent. "What were you saving up for, William?" asked a sergeant. "A look of shyness overspread the face of the policeman."

PRESIDENT TURNEY'S SUCCESSOR

Hon. W. W. Turney of El Paso, president of the great organization of live stock men known as the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas, is out in a public statement to the effect that he will not accept the position again, and while such action was generally expected, from the fact that a change had to be made in the constitution and by-laws last year to permit President Turney to again accept the honor, a considerable little flurry has already been precipitated among cattlemen as to who shall be his successor. President Turney has made the association an ideal presiding officer. He is a man of fine executive ability, a brilliant and successful lawyer and public man, and his occupancy of the presiding officer's chair has been characterized by marked and signal ability. In fact, Turney has raised the standard of service so high that it is going to take more than an ordinary man to measure up to the requirements of the situation, and it is no wonder that the cattlemen are just a little bit exercised as to the choice of his successor. So far there are three names that have been mentioned in this connection, with the probability of several others being added before the list is complete. Among the list of eligibles is plenty of good material, and it is certain that the next president of this great association will be a man in every way qualified for the position. Colonel C. C. Slaughter of Dallas, who is one of the most prominent cattlemen in the state, has been suggested as a possible candidate. Colonel Slaughter is a gentleman who has been identified with the live stock industry of Texas and the southwest for a long time. He owns large ranch and cattle interests, and is able and progressive. Should he be honored with the position the affairs of the association will be in competent hands. A. B. Robertson of Colorado City has been suggested as the best man for the position, and he is one of the best known cattlemen in the state. Everybody in Texas knows Sug Robertson, and all concede him a position at the very head of the brainy men who stand forth as the representatives of this great industry. No man in Texas is better posted as to live stock conditions, and no man in the southwest has done more for the advancement of the live stock interests. H. E. Crowley of Midland is another gentleman who has received very favorable mention for the position of president of the association. Ed Crowley is a representative Texas cattlemen, and one of the most active and energetic workers in the ranks of the association. He has served his people in the state legislature and made a record there that will ever stand to his credit. He is young, ambitious and full of mettle. Should he be chosen as the successor of Turney he will make the association a model officer. But these are not all. There is Ike Fryor of San Antonio and Richard Walsh of Palo Duro. These gentlemen are now serving in the capacity of first and second vice president, and have proven their fealty and devotion to the cause of the stockmen. There is Bash of Colorado City and a score of others who are fully capable of measuring up to the requirements of the situation, and it can be set down as an accomplished fact that the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas will elect as its next president a man who can be depended upon to keep the affairs of the organization well to the front. Fort Worth is interested in this matter, from the fact that Fort Worth is the headquarters of this great organization and will ever feel an abiding interest in all that pertains to its welfare. The election will be held at the Dallas meeting next month, but it is expected

THE GREATEST OF THESE IS CHARITY

Dr. George C. Rankin, of Dallas, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate and one of the prohibition leaders of the state, has finally determined that he will not again be a candidate for the position of chaplain of the lower house of the Texas state legislature. In his public declaration to that effect, the learned Dallas divine takes occasion to promise that he will get even with those members of the regular session who were responsible for his former defeat. He says: "I shall never again put myself where that gang will have an opportunity to make a football out of me. If I have to fight them and their kind I will do it in the open field, where they can not use a few designing politicians as a means of accomplishing their end. More than that, I owe a few fellows a debt, who took a hand in that affair, and I intend to pay every farthing of it—but not as a candidate for chaplain or any other office." The remarks of the reverend gentleman on the subject has caused the religious editor of the Houston Post to skirmish around the sanctum for a fitting rebuke, and he quotes St. Paul to Dr. Rankin in the following approved and familiar manner: "Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not. Recompense to no man evil for evil. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Dearly beloved, forgive it yourselves; but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12: 17, 18, 19, 20, 21." No doubt Dr. Rankin feels the defeat of his legislative aspirations very keenly—much more so, in fact, than the world has been prone to believe. If the iron had not entered his very soul he would not have delivered himself of this fierce and venomous philippic. With the memory of that defeat still burning in his heart, the great Dallas preacher forgets the teachings of the Master he is capable of serving so well, and gives full play to all of the old Adam there is in his nature. He forgets that the greatest of human attributes is charity, and that charity is sufficient to cover a multitude of sins. This remarkable declaration on the part of Dr. Rankin well illustrates the fact that the man of God is always out of place when he begins to dabble in politics. It also serves to pretty thoroughly demonstrate the further fact that the last state legislature made no mistake in its choice of a chaplain. The man of God who has political enemies to punish himself instead of leaving it to the Master he professes to serve, is hardly the man to offer up invocations for an unregenerate state legislature.

HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE

In a review of the threatened fight over the chaplaincy of the lower house of the Texas state legislature during the impending special session, The Telegram spoke of Dr. Josephus Johnson of Austin as a possible candidate against Dr. George C. Rankin of Dallas. The editorial referred to was reproduced by the Waco Times-Herald, and attracted the attention of Dr. Johnson, who addressed the following communication to the editor of the Waco paper: Austin Texas, Jan. 30, 1906.—Editor Times-Herald: My Dear Sir—I am just home after an absence of two weeks at the bedside of a friend and find a letter from a Waco friend calling my attention to your "Comments on Fight for Chaplaincy," taken from Fort Worth Telegram. I am aggrieved that you should thus bring me into notoriety. I am not, have never been, nor will I be a candidate for anything in the gift of the legislature. I cannot answer for Dr. Rankin, but he can take care of himself. I am a plain preacher and am not in politics in any manner, shape or form. I have my political convictions, but am seeking no position other than my pulpit. Can I hope that you will regard as publicly this reflection upon me as you have given it prominence and send me your paper containing same. I know you cannot recall the wrong you have done me, but I hope you will be willing to try to correct the impressions you have made. Most respectfully yours, JOSEPHUS JOHNSON.

The mention of the distinguished Austin minister in this connection by The Telegram was predicated upon an item published in an Austin paper of recent date to the effect that he was being favorably mentioned for the position. Dr. Johnson's positive denial of any aspirations in that direction or any intention of becoming a candidate for the position are eminently proper, and show that he is a man of God who has the proper regard for his high and holy calling. The Telegram respectfully commends his declarations on this subject to the prayerful consideration of any other ministers of the gospel who may feel impelled to enter into a scramble for this position. Incidentally, it may be repeated that Dr. Rankin also disclaims any designs upon the position, but that does not imply that there will not be a number of applications for the job.

The Armour packing house is to be greatly enlarged, in addition to the building of the new cannery plant that is to cost $400,000. The packing business, like everything else in Fort Worth, is constantly growing.

If the trial of the big packers at Chicago can be prolonged a short time longer the packers will be able to prove by Commissioner Garfield that there never was such a thing in existence as a beef trust.

Whether the ground hog saw his shadow or not, Texas is being blessed with one of the mildest winters on record, and the near advent of gentle spring insures the fact that there is not much possibility of different conditions.

Advices from New York are to the effect that Texas is preparing to investigate the Standard Oil trust. But the silence that reigns down in the vicinity of the attorney general's office with regard to this proposition is positively painful.

Texas is preparing to plant a bumper cotton crop this year, and more cotton mills are a public necessity. Fort Worth should set the balance of the state a shining example by building the biggest cotton mill in all the state of Texas.

When Nick and Alice are safely married they will not be any more interesting than ordinary married folk. The fact that they are to be wedded in the White House and she is the President's daughter, is what is adding zest to the occasion.

Governor Lanham has again opened up sufficiently on the subject of the proposed special session of the state legislature as to give out the information that it would be called for either March 12 or 19. With the proper and persistent effort the real facts in the case may yet be dragged to the surface.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

When nearly all of the Texas cattle can be slaughtered at home the business and the business and the shoes we wear will be made at home and lots to ship away.—Sherman Democrat.

Fort Worth ought to have the biggest tanneries in the country, and the biggest shoe factories. There are facilities here for both that will not much longer remain neglected.

"Cyclone" Jim Davis is said to be a candidate for the legislature on the democratic ticket. What has become of "Stump" Ashby?—Denton Herald.

"Stump" Ashby is living quietly in Tarrant county, attending strictly to his own business, except when in the course of human events it becomes necessary for him to get out on the hustings and expose some of the sophistries contained in the usual Davis prohibition argument.

A Chicago court has been busy for weeks endeavoring to determine whether or not Commissioner Garfield promised the packers immunity. The question of whether the packers are guilty seems to have been lost sight of altogether.—Waco Times-Herald.

It now begins to look very much as if Garfield will be the instrument for preventing the conviction of the packers. The testimony now being adduced at Chicago has a very strong tendency in that direction.

Speaking of qualified voters, Dallas came under the wire last night as a easy winner. Tarrant, Tarrant, Bexar third, McLennan fourth, Harris fifth and Galveston sixth. Dallas and Fort Worth, the north Texas cities, landed the goods. And yet Dallas should have listed 20,000 qualified voters instead of 15,000. And now build sidewalks.—Dallas Times-Herald.

Fort Worth and Dallas, the twin sisters of north Texas, can always be depended upon to land the goods. They are setting a hot pace for all Texas. And Fort Worth is building sidewalks.

Forty-five volumes containing the signatures of 1,000,000 women who oppose United States Senator Reed Smoot of Utah are now being bound. Unlike "Pads and Patches," the volumes will be presented free to United States senators. Women's ways surely lead men, even statesmen, along devious paths.—Galveston Tribune.

But in this instance men are not being led along devious, but proper ways. The women of the country are doing the proper thing in the fight, they are making up Reed Smoot in the United States senate.

The packers at Fort Worth are wanting more hogs in Texas. If the packers will pay enough to give the risers a margin of profit, old Texas will furnish them with all the hogs they want.—Bonham News.

For the past two weeks the Fort Worth packers have been paying more for hogs than was paid in any other market in the United States, and still the cry goes up for more hogs. All the hogs sold on this market are affording a liberal margin of profit for the producer.

The Fort Worth Telegram is persistently working for the establishment of a cotton mill in its city. The Telegram is on the right track. More cotton mills are needed all over Texas.—McKinney Gazette.

The Telegram believes Fort Worth affords an ideal location for one of the largest cotton mills in the state, and earnestly desires to see such an enterprise established here during the present year. And as the Gazette truly says, cotton mills are needed all over Texas. More cotton milk talk and less reduction of acreage palaver should be the order of the day from one end of the state to the other.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The eastern papers still teem with caustic editorials upon the sectional legislation that passed the house the other day, making one state of Arizona and New Mexico. The western members have been surprised to see the slight interest taken in this great question by the western press. When it is too late the western people will probably realize the great injustice that has been done them. The Washington Post last Monday morning printed the following editorial which is a fair sample of many editorials upon this question printed in non-partisan papers in the east. The Post never predicts, but if it were given to that had practice it would say that the legislative action of Wednesday is likely to be the last sectional victory the east will ever gain over the west in the American congress. New England has twelve members in the United States senate, and you may throw all New England into either Arizona or New Mexico, and it would require a search warrant and a posse and a writ to find it. Fling the six New England states, one at a time, into different quarters of the proposed state, and they might ceaselessly tramp around for a twelve-month without any one of the coming in contact with any other one of them in their bewildered wanderings. The excuse is that the two territories are deserts; but either of them, skillfully managed, will yield more agricultural products than all New England. "President Roosevelt is the leader who fought the battle and gained it. Had he been even neutral, the committee on rules would have beaten three score. Never in the history of the American congress was one mistake made to breed another. If the committee on rules determined they would not do justice to Oklahoma and Indian Territory unless, at the same time, they were permitted to visit injustice on Arizona and New Mexico. The 'insurgents' with a backbone, though beaten, have not been in public estimation. It was not for them old Jacob pronounced the curse; 'Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel.' The committee on rules is smart enough to know, or at least to learn, that the very best way in the world to make an enemy to humiliate him. The 'insurgents' who yielded to the persuasion of that committee will have a considerable load of humiliation to lug during the rest of the session. "The senate has the bill, and the senate has not as yet abolished what was once the inalienable legislative right to offer, debate and vote upon amendments. One amendment to this monstrousity that the senate should consider is a proposition to make two states of Arizona and New Mexico as soon as each shall have a population requisite to entitle it to two members of congress under the present apportionment. New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island surely could not oppose that in daylight and it is not possible that Delaware could oppose it in the dark, even. We are not quite positive that this suggested amendment is constitutional, but are confident that it is not half as unconstitutional as that legislative Caesarian operation by which West Virginia went to the state. "In the old days, northern statesmen who adhered to the south were 'doughfaces.' The western statesman who sides with the east on a sectional question is not yet christened. This statehood bill is as sectional as the fugitive slave law, and the west is going to be in a rage over it one of these days, if the scheme shall be fully consummated."

SUGAR

The domestic sugar industry has nothing to fear from the opening of our market to the Philippine product. That market has already been opened without injury to Hawaiian sugar and Porto Rican sugar. It makes no practical difference here what concessions we grant to our own dependencies so long as against Cuba and the rest of the world—from which we get nearly half of our annual supply—we enforce a duty ranging from 80 to 100 per cent of the present Dingley rate.—New York Tribune.

IN MANY GUISES

A Story of an Exciting Dash for a Fortune by an Actor-Adventurer. Copyright, 1905, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

While Dr. Vernet ate his breakfast he watched me, but without manifesting suspicion. Bendant stood behind his chair. Sir Charles and Fulton were in earnest converse twenty paces off.

WHAT WILL CURE THIS GIRL DYING OF THE HICCOUGHS?

MISS JENNIE LUPY.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 2.—Miss Jennie Lupy, a beautiful 16-year-old girl, is dying at her home, 83 Orange avenue, of hiccoughs. For nearly a year she has suffered intermittently with hiccoughs, but recently she was so severely attacked by them that she was put under the influence of morphine to alleviate her suffering.

He bowed and stretched out in order to render me the indicated service. In a flash I had caught his wrist in my left hand, and with my right I seized a heavy carafe of water and hurled it at his head. Next second, I leaped across the table, caught him in my arms, when, guided by Vernet's own instinctive clutch to arm himself, I plunged my hand into his breast pocket and found a revolver.

Oppressed with a wild and hideous sense of unreality, I stared stupidly before me. A smoke wreath, growing transparent as I gazed, hid away a living face. Just as I stood within the room, a black statue of horror, scarcely conscious of what I did, I raised my pistol and pointed at his breast. He did not move. I fired and he fell.

At the sound Marion's eyes opened. She looked up at me, I uttered a cry of agony, and, throwing away my smoking weapon, I sank on my knees beside her. "Are you hurt?" she breathed. "No—no—but you—you are dying."

But I have recorded these chapters of my story, show them to some one after me, when I am dead, that, racial as I was, and abandonedly selfish, I was yet capable of passion and of constancy, and that no desecrated bastion of the softer sex has inspired the invincible solitariness of my life.

MANY CHILDREN HEAR HOW KING ARTHUR FOUND SWORD EXCALBUR

Of the Battle With the Black Knight, the Healing of Arthur

"And so Sir Miles rode out to seek his adventures!"

Fifty children sat solemnly in their chairs in a semi-circle around Miss Kate Parfman, kindergarten, in the upper room of the Carnegie library Friday afternoon, and stared gravely at her.

"He rode and rode and rode," continued the narrator, "through woods and plains and over hills, till he came to a green lawn, where three maidens were playing ball. They were all dressed in white and they threw the ball back and forth from one to the other."

A look of interest manifested itself upon the small faces.

"Ping-pong!" suggested one, doubtfully.

"No, not ping-pong—just ball," said the story teller, smiling. "And Sir Miles asked them if they knew of any adventures. And they told him yes, they knew of the greatest of all adventures."

"Go to that bridge, and smite on the shield of the Black Knight," said the story teller, smiling. "And Sir Miles asked them if they knew of any adventures. And they told him yes, they knew of the greatest of all adventures."

sheld you see there, and you'll get adventures enough," they said.

So Sir Miles rode on, and found the big bridge, with a big black shield hanging on it. And what do you suppose was painted on the shield?

"Keep off the grass!" suggested an innocent cherub.

"No, not that. It was, 'Whoso smites me, smites me at his peril.' And there was a big hammer—a great big sledge hammer—lying near it. And Sir Miles took up the hammer and smote mightily on the shield.

"Then a great big knight, dressed all in black armor, came out and said, 'What are you doing? Take off your shield and hang it on that oak tree.' On the oak tree were hanging very many shields, which belonged to other knights who had been beaten. But Sir Miles said 'No,' he wanted to fight.

"Then the black knight said, 'You're too young to fight me. Go and hang up your shield.' And what do you suppose Sir Miles said?"

"'I'll knock his head off!'"

"This came from an eager-faced little boy of eleven years, who was sitting on the edge of his chair gathering in every word that flowed from the lips of the narrator.

"Well, he didn't say it that way," smiled Miss Portman. "He said, 'Up, up, up, fight, though catfish knight, or I will show the black knight the gr-r-ground!'"

"So the black knight rode to one side of the grass and Sir Miles rode to the other, and they fought their spears, and ran together so hard that the spears shivered, and broke in pieces.

"And the black knight blew a whistle so out came running—"

"Oh, no. It was two little pages, and each one carried a new spear. So Sir Miles took one, and the black knight took the other, and they ran together again, and the black knight smote Sir Miles so hard that he was lifted clean off his horse, and fell on the ground.

"But up he jumped, and drew his sword, and the black knight drew his sword, and they ran together, and they fought like lions. And they were both grievously wounded, so that the blood ran down on the grass. And by and by the black knight smote Sir Miles on the head and stunned him. And without waiting to help him up, or dress his wounds, or do anything, he dressed up anything, he took his shield, and hung it on the tree and rode on into his castle.

"So then Sir Miles' esquire helped him on his horse, and he rode with great difficulty down the road, making much doer that he had been defeated.

And the Finding of the Magic Brad—Told by Miss Katherine Portman

and was about to unlace his helmet to cut his throat. But Arthur caught him by the knee and turned him over, and got up and then they wrestled, and wrestled and wrestled.

Merlin Appears

"And by and by the black knight threw him down again, and just as he was about to kill him old Merlin jumped up."

"What are you doing the magician?" shrieked one who had evidently followed the story before.

"Yes, and nobody knew how he got there. He just happened. But he touched the black knight on the hip, and he was struck by paralysis, and couldn't move. So he tumbled over on the grass."

"Arthur jumped up, and he was awfully mad. He scolded Merlin, 'Merlin, what are you doing? For my sake, that isn't fair! That's not a square deal!'"

"Never you mind," said Merlin. "You've been hurt enough for one day. You come on with me."

"So Merlin took him and carried him to a cave in the woods where there was a hermit who knew lots about medicines. And he put him to bed, and dressed his wounds."

Enters Queen Guinevere

"And that day a beautiful princess, whose name was Guinevere, was riding in those woods, and she heard a beautiful lady had just been brought to the hermit's cave. And she came, and saw him, and fell in love with him. And she said for her own dear sake, and put salves on the wounds, so that next day he was as well as he could be—just as well as he could be."

"So the black knight wanted to go back and fight. But all his armor was cut and broken, and his sword and his spears were all broken, and he had nothing with which to fight.

"So Merlin had tried to get a beautiful sword, in the Land of Faery," said Merlin, "and Arthur said, 'You can show me.' So they set out for the Land of Faery."

The Search for Excalibur

"And on the way, Merlin was telling Arthur of a wonderful sword in the middle of a lake. There was a beautiful lady, with an arm all dressed in white samite reaching up out of the middle of it, and many knights had tried to get the sword, but as they came near the arm and the sword disappeared beneath the water."

"By and by they got to the Land of Faery, and came to the Magic Lake. And walking along the shores of the lake, there was a beautiful lady, all dressed in green. Her hair was black as jet, and her eyes were black as coal, and her skin was whiter than ivory.

"So then Arthur saw her, he sprang from his horse, and bent low before her. 'I am Arthur,' he said. 'And I am the King of the Britons,' she said, bowing graciously. 'Have you come searching for a good sword?'"

"Arthur said he had. So she blew a little horn, and hanging on a belt, and the sound it made was like the sound of an echo among the hills at sunset. And at the sound of the horn, a beautiful lady, all dressed in white, came from the other shore and sailed toward them. The box of the boat was made of silver, and the oars were made like two great swans' wings of brass, and it moved like a swan over the waters.

"So the lady stepped into the boat, and the Lady of the Lake stood in the prow, and the boat sailed away over the waters, all by itself."

Excalibur

"In the middle of the lake was the arm reaching up, just as Merlin had said, and it held by the hand a great sword, which dazzled the eyes. And Arthur stepped out after the sword, and took it in his hand, and the arm let go, and sank down through the water, and the sword was gone."

"On the handle of the sword was written 'I am Excalibur,' in letters of gold. And the sheath was even more wonderful than the sword.

"So then the boat sailed back to the shore with incredible swiftness, and Arthur took the sword to his waist. After thanking the Lady of the Lake he got on his horse and rode back, the way he had come, to the Bridge of the Black Knight."

Arthur Is Feasted

"And the three maidens saw him coming, and knew that he had been wounded in the previous fight. And when he came to the bridge, they came again, they made him sit down on the grass, and they brought out hit golden chalice, which was full of food and wine to drink for him. They felt sorry for him, thinking that if he went back to do battle again with the Black Knight he would surely be killed.

"And after they had feasted him, Arthur went and smote again on the shield. And the black knight came out, and when he saw Arthur he was mad with rage, because that Arthur had beaten him by magic.

"So without stopping to parley they sprang at each other with their swords, and fought for long. And the black knight became grievously wounded, and his blood ran down upon the grass like dew. But Arthur was not even scratched. The black knight couldn't touch him. And by and by he got the black knight down, and put his knee on his throat, and unlied his corselet, and—"

"Did they wear those th—" The small boy who rose to make the excited query was pulled sharply down into his seat by his sister, who put her hand over his mouth.

"Unlied his helmet," proceeded the narrator, "and raised his anger and was about to cut his throat, when the knight spoke.

"I am King Pellinor," he said, "who have been one of the enemies of thy reign. Now say me not, Arthur, and I will be forever thy vassal and thy friend."

"So Arthur said, 'And day would I rather be thy friend than thy slayer.' So King Pellinor rose then up and became a friend to my knights. And King Pellinor did it, and they became fast friends.

"Then Merlin told the king that the sword Excalibur was a magic blade, and that so long as one wore the sheath he could not be wounded. And Arthur swears a mighty oath that nevermore they would fight, and that he would wear the sheath, since it gave him great advantage over other poor knights. And he did not such might to defend them. And King Arthur became known as the greatest and courtliest, and most famous king in all the world. And he was always called 'The Good King Arthur.'"

So the tale ended. Mrs. Charles

STREETS BEING WORKED

Winter Wear Repaired by New Cover of Gravel

Much work is now being done on the South Side by Street Commissioners in repairing the streets. Thus the winter had left in bad condition in many places.

Graveling has been done to some extent on Magnolia. Twelve men are now at work on that street with a number of teams, finishing the work.

South Main street has been gravelled to the Trinity and Jessing streets from Magnolia to the end of the avenue at the railroad crossing. Several other streets have also been worked over in this locality.

BUSINESS METHOD IN LABOR AFFAIRS

Trades Assembly Head of Able Body

Since the organization of the Fort Worth Trades Assembly in 1901 with eight labor unions affiliated, there has been a steady rapid growth in the strength of the Assembly. There are now thirty-three labor unions affiliated with the Trades Assembly, which represents at least 3,500 wage earners whose weekly wage amounts to nearly $100,000.

The Trades Assembly is the business organization of the labor unions. Through its various committees, its stimulus to better work, closer organization and the need of patronizing union industries. The Assembly is composed of representatives from each labor union who are selected according to their ability. Each union is allowed three delegates to the assembly, but this organization consists of about ninety members. The earning body of at least 3,500 men represented means that the organization has a wide representation of the laboring class.

Work of the Assembly

One of the chief things the assembly does is to see that the laboring class gets regular scale of wages and hours of employment. In this matter the Assembly has been successful in getting the unions live up to these contracts in every detail. Thus it promotes the general welfare and prevents dissatisfaction.

Whenever a labor union that is affiliated with the Assembly is unable to settle a question of any kind it can, and generally does, refer it to the Trades Assembly for settlement. When a union is unable to settle a question, the committee is generally appointed and the suggestions made in it carried out.

No Strikes Ordered

The Assembly is a conservative body. Not once has it caused a strike or a lockout. Several times it has been called upon to settle strikes which might have developed into serious trouble in the way of strikes, lockouts or boycotts.

Standing committees are always working for the co-operation, assistance and advancement of the unions. It also helps the unions in their efforts by bringing to bear tremendous influence.

In urging an increased wage for the meat packers and country peddlers, it points out that the price of commodities has increased fifty per cent in the last few years, while the standard of living has increased everywhere because of higher civilization of other classes urged by labor.

A point urged by the body is that about 95 per cent of the laboring men spend all their earnings. This means that they are not saving and cannot make possible more lines of business and encourage competition because of the fact that there is no surplus.

Sometimes the increase asked by a labor union seems unjust and abnormal. To settle such questions the Assembly has a committee of the labor organizations, the Trades Assembly is maintained. Its officers at present are: President, E. H. Taylor, secretary, C. W. Barnes, financial secretary, Richard W. Barnes, financial secretary; Richard W. Barnes, financial secretary; Richard W. Barnes, financial secretary.

The Trades Assembly, as well as each individual union, also keeps in touch with the American Federation of Labor, the National Labor Council, the city, general organizer of the Federation, serves also to maintain the efficiency of labor's organization.

MARKET OUTLOOK

Marked Shortage of Full Fed Cattle in Texas

Wayne W. Greck, of the firm of Campbell Bros. & Rosson, said in response to inquiries relative to present condition of the market:

"There is an abnormal supply of short-fed cattle being marketed in Chicago and Kansas City at present, and while there is also a fairly liberal supply of choice-fed native cattle, the range of values seems to indicate there is a preference for those cattle that can be bought around $3.80 to $4.25 in St. Louis and Kansas City. Texas-fed cattle in St. Louis have sold as high as $4.25 this year, but they were extremely good and extra thick fat. The Fort Worth market has sold steer cattle as high as $4.75 this year, but they were thick fat, cornfed and weighed 1,400 pounds. Texas-fed cattle in the northern markets have to compete with native short and full-fed cattle, and the fact that there is a conceded shortage of full-fed cattle in Texas, and St. Louis is dependent to a great extent on the Texas complement, most authorities are encouraged by the present outlook.

"Reports from some parts of South Texas are very bright for fat cattle on the early spring market, but information is lacking from shipper that a very large section of Southwestern Texas is dry, and unless they have early rains the movement of fat cattle will be late. New Orleans will be favored with heavier shipments from now on, on account of the Fort Worth packers. Mexico has been so such an extent that New Orleans dealers on this market are left practically without margin. The Southern Texas cattle people are raising very few calves of the year have only been fair killers, but have brought exceptionally strong prices. Our sales by St. Louis today are fully 15 cents higher than the opening of this week, and hopes, to say the least, are entertained that the future market will realize upon the present predictions that now seem to be justified."

Conditions in Mexico

Ike Harners and J. R. Driggers, prominent stockmen from Chickasha, Okla., who have been in the city since seed oil mill and feed, passed through Fort Worth on their return from Mexico, where they have been prospecting. They reported that everything seemed to be in very fine condition down in the sister republic, but that the cold weather had reached farther down into the interior of Mexico than usual. On the verge of the valley of the City of Mexico the cold was extreme for that locality and that besides stock, the heavy packers who at the very best are poorly protected from the weather, were suffering greatly and were in a destitute condition. The Mexican government, however, was taking prompt steps to alleviate the distress and that proper relief would be at once given them.

Conditions Favorable

S. R. Overton, from Hennessey, O. T., was a visitor on the market Wednesday with a car of stock, and reported that the market here had been better than other citizens of that prosperous section of Oklahoma. Should the winter continue its present mild aspect everything will be much earlier than usual, as usually is expected, and much stock to be shipped to market.

Baylor County Cattle

Panther Bros., of Seymour, substantial and influential stockmen of Baylor county, who have Tuesday on their return from Kansas City, accompanied by A. E. Clayton, also of Baylor county. They had nothing but good words for the market and range conditions on their ranches, and were not behind any part of Texas in this respect. The winter has been mild, by the way, so far and there is no much fear felt for any great amount of very bad weather for the balance of the season. Cattle are holding their own and will not lose any great amount of flesh from this on. Mr. Clayton said that he had gone along to keep the boys out of trouble and felt that the boys would be very glad to be in his hands. He had not failed in the performance of his duty. The boys had been very good and gave him little trouble, and he felt very much pleased of the good results of his self-imposed task.

Corn-Fed Stuff

E. P. Slade, member of the firm of Johnson, Key & Slade, breeders and feeders in the territory of Minco, on the Rock Island, was down with a car of beefs, averaging 68 pounds, which were put through the market by Cassidy-Southwestern for $3.10. They were corn-fed and the price was so satisfactory that Mr. Slade invited those in sight to dine with him at his expense.

Cattle Doing Well

Colonel J. W. Corn, the genial Tarleton county breeder, was on the market looking for a bargain in "shorts," and he found it, having run up against a man, Y. D. Taylor, from Bastrop county, it being agreed that the Bastrop man should have the privilege of driving the swine through the creek so as to fill up the shrinkage in the market. The price was marked, "fifteen miles southwest of Fort Worth and is penetrated by the Texas & Pacific and Frisco, but my station is on the latter. Grass is very good now and has been most of the winter, even with all the wet weather we have had. Cattle are doing well, and I am 'grassing' a goodly number of steers now. There is no finer water than that supplied by the creeks that run through my pastures, and the timber on them gives my stock ample protection from the bad weather in winter. You see me limping, eh? Well, had a fire at my house some time ago and I tried to ladder to help me put out the fire, but it 'spread' with me and let me down hard, and I have been laid up with my back ever since. I am getting better, but it will not be the spring opens I will be as spry as my fat yearlings."

SCHOOL GIRLS FORM TEAMS

Revival of Athletics at the High School

Since becoming a member of the Central High School Association a short time ago the high school has had a wonderful revival in its athletics. Almost every student is not only taking interest but is planning to enter athletics in some way.

Never before have the high school girls taken any great interest in athletics. There is now a great awakening and the girls are planning to do many of the same things in athletics as the boys of the northern and eastern schools. Almost every class in school will have a basketball and tennis team. These teams will play among themselves for the school championship and then pick the best players in the school to compete with the teams of other schools. There have been fully a hundred girls declared an intention to play tennis, and almost an equal number for basketball to the boys.

E. G. Leake will have charge of the teams and practice will begin Monday. Mr. Leake is a University of Chicago man and has the experience and ability to coach the teams.

Boys' Sports

Keeping pace with the great interest displayed by the girls in their athletics is that of the boys, who are planning to do things themselves. Baseball and track teams will be organized next week and practice will be held daily. Two temporary nines have been organized and they have a practice game every school day. Many of the boys who made the team last year are back, and the prospect for a very fast team is better than ever before. The schedule has not yet been arranged, but it is settled that several out-of-town teams will play in Fort Worth.

Track Team

There has always been much interest taken in the track team by the high school, and this year it is keener

BUSINESS METHOD IN LABOR AFFAIRS

Trades Assembly Head of Able Body

Since the organization of the Fort Worth Trades Assembly in 1901 with eight labor unions affiliated, there has been a steady rapid growth in the strength of the Assembly. There are now thirty-three labor unions affiliated with the Trades Assembly, which represents at least 3,500 wage earners whose weekly wage amounts to nearly $100,000.

The Trades Assembly is the business organization of the labor unions. Through its various committees, its stimulus to better work, closer organization and the need of patronizing union industries. The Assembly is composed of representatives from each labor union who are selected according to their ability. Each union is allowed three delegates to the assembly, but this organization consists of about ninety members. The earning body of at least 3,500 men represented means that the organization has a wide representation of the laboring class.

Work of the Assembly

One of the chief things the assembly does is to see that the laboring class gets regular scale of wages and hours of employment. In this matter the Assembly has been successful in getting the unions live up to these contracts in every detail. Thus it promotes the general welfare and prevents dissatisfaction.

Whenever a labor union that is affiliated with the Assembly is unable to settle a question of any kind it can, and generally does, refer it to the Trades Assembly for settlement. When a union is unable to settle a question, the committee is generally appointed and the suggestions made in it carried out.
