men worthy of the people' trust. He has never sought or accepted office with a desire of self aggrandisement or for merely personal considerations of any kind. On the contrary his whole public life has shown him sinking self out of sight, and pushing to the front achievements won by honest and faithful effort for the public good. The vulgar ambition to merely shine in the habiliments of official station, is as foreign to the nature of Charles K. Bell as the composition of "Spring poetry' is out of harmony with the strong lines of his practical intellect. has been tried. In the office of county to come when he was young and at recently laid aside the plough and whe hoe, and was a fledgeling in the law, he proved himself so worthy of his trust, that the people who had trusted and tried him pushed him up to a field of wider opportunity and he was elected to the important office of district attorney. In that place he proved himself again worthy, and the people made him in turn a state senator, a district judge, member of the congress of the United States, and then attorney general of Texas. In all these places of trust he labored so faithfully and so intelligently that when he voluntarily retired from each.

isfactory and patriotic service in return for the people's confidence in him. "But it is said by some who favor other candidates for governor, 'Judge Bell is being supported by the raifroad interests of the state, and therefore cannot be safely trusted in the gubernatorial chair.' This argument is not based on truth, but it is the slogan of the discomfited politician who has been driven to the last ditch, and seeks to rally to his support those who can be misled by the deceitful battle cry. Why should the railroad interests support Bell in preference to his competitors? And who are meant by the 'railroad interests?' Is it the army of workmen engaged in the service? If so, which one of the candidates does not earnestly desire that vote? Is it only a few railroad officials in Texas that are referred to? If so, that vote is too small to form a factor in the election, And why should the railroad interests favor Bell in preference to the other candidates? Will any of the other candidates fail or refuse to deal justly with the railroads of the state if elected governor? Is it possible that any man aspires to that high office who would not, if elected, use the strong arm of the law to protect every personal and property right in this state from unlawful interferences, or harm? Bell will do it; let his opponents name him who will not. But this flimsy and insincere partisan device is not intended for sober minded people; it is meant to catch the unwary. It is hoped by insinuation to impress some honest voters with the belief that Judge Bell leans to the side of railroads and other corporations as against the people. And why should he learn that way? He is one of the people, sprung from the laboring classes, has always been dependent on the plain honest people for whatever has come to him, has never in any capacity been in the employment of a railroad or other corporation, and as ance of his future course, and to that repel the vain and groundless charges or insinuations that he will ever be found untrue to the interests of the people who trust him, whether those interests are jeopardized by the unjust actions of railroad corporations, or any other agency, public or private. He will never, however, be unjust consciously to any interest under the protection of the law to please others or to promote his own political advancement. And if there be a voter in favor Bell is not his man. "Judge Bell performed other valua-ble services in congress while a member, and always acted with those who stood for the rights of the masses of the people as against unjust exaction and his record there was creditable and distinguished. He served his district in local affairs with great industry and success. Through his influence and diligence he secured the appropriation for the stately postoffice building that adorns our city and serves her people's convenience, and also secured the establishment of a branch of the federal court in our city for the convenience of west Texas. But he is not a man for spectacular effect, and it is not in his nature to seek popular applause or approval by advertising his services. He has always

Frisco and Brazos Thought to Be Planning New Line Waco to Palestine

*pecial Correspondence. PALESTINE, Texas, May 5 .- Guarded secrecy is maintained by the Chicagoans registered at the New Lindell hotel in this city, Messrs. H. L. and O. E. Erisman and Dr. H. H. ### MONEY TO MEND A BROKEN HEART

Pittsburg Musician Sued for Breach of Promise

Special to The Telegram. PITTSBURG, Pa., May 5.-A shattered romance of two continents, in which Wensel Jiskra, the famous Pittsburg musician, is accused of breaking the heart of a girl he woed in his European home and of refusing to keep his alleged promise to marry her after she had come, for his sake, from her own home to Chicago, has been brought to light through a breach of promise suit filed by Miss Elizabeth Basta, wherein Jiskra is asked to give $100.000 as heart balm.

The story, as it is beginning to go the rounds, is one of a forbidden courtship in ancient Prague, which culminates in prosaic. During his student days in the city of Prague, according to the story told by Miss Basta, the two fell in love with east other. Jiskra's millionaire father and the girl's parents as well, objected to the proposed match. The two did not know just what was to be done under these difficulties, and Miss Basta says that she came to America two years ago because of the parental opposition to their match and that the agreement was that Jiskra was to follow her to this country, where they were to be

Everything seemed to be going on well before the quarrel came, according to the fair plaintiff's statement Jiskra has not kept his alleged promise to marry the Chicago girl. With the new field for his musical activities which America offered him and with the incoming of his reputation, he came to think less of his old world sweetheart, it is alleged, and finally there came the open breach.

As the suit is for the recovery of a small fortune as balm for a wounded heart, it has aroused not a little gossip among the admirers of the gifted musician who lives in Pittsburg.

MONEY IS CHEAPER

Cutlook in Wall Street Promising for Better Prices and Easier Financial State

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, May 5.—In spite of the many adverse influences with which the bull party in Wall street must contend, a combination of physical and political accidents promise to make money so cheap in Wall street this summer as to enable them to succeed. They are in the humor to unload their stocks as quickly as possible, but the fact remains that in order to unload they have decided to attempt one more bull movement. Peace in the coal fields is an encouraging feature.

The technical condition of the market is perfect for a bull campaign, for in addition to the stocks being in the strongest possible hands, there is a very large short interest. The gold movement is the key to the situation. Counting the gold that will come from the Klondike before June, there should be a total of $6,000,000 in San Francisco, which is at least $30,000,000 more than will be needed on the spot. It must be remembered that in order to rebuild the city, not gold in San Francisco, but material purchased elsewhere will be wanted.

Repeal of the mortgage tax law by the New York legislature has disclosed another source of gold. There has been a great horde kept out of circulation by lenders who took this action for the double purpose of forcing borrowers to renew the loans at a higher figure and to create sympathy

But the most sensational feature has scarcely been mentioned. Owing to the political agitation in France, the police society have appointed trustees to sell their property there and invest the money in the United States. One of these trustees, who is a prominent New York financier, said today that he believed $100,000,000 in gold would come to New York for investment at once when Governor Higgins signs the repealing act. This, with the natural ease of money in summer. is expected to reduce call loans to 2 per cent and under.

WELCOME ROYAL

German Club Providing Attractions Few in Number But Large in Quality

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 5 .- "Welcome, alumni, back to the University" will be the tenor of the invitations to be sent out by the German Club. The length and number of festivities for commencement have been cut down to two days, and the small number of attractions will be more than made up for in quality. The authorities of the university decided to limit the festivities to two days, and then found that their greatest trouble came in providing a suitable and befitting reception for the alumni who return to visit their Alma Mater each year in June. The German Club, through its president and board of directors, came to the rescue of the officials, and now propose to give the final German on Monday evening preceding the final reception as a reception to the alumni at the Driskill hotel. Program Arranged

Those having in charge the matter of arranging the program have etpressed themselves as being very much delighted with the proposals made them by the students. President Thompson of the Alumni Association has hailed the scheme with delight and he thinks that such a plan will be more in keeping with the duty of the students and university to entertain their old students than any that had vet been proposed. It begins to now take on a phase of a real dignified reception and it is believed that this will be added as a permanent feature of the annual commencement exercises. The only feature to be added to the university life to make it a fixture on the program is to gather together as generous a student body as the olie they have at present. The affair will be a most elaborate one. All former students of the university will be given tickets as soon as they arrive in the city, and the best that there is to be in store during the commencement. The entertainment will open with a reception in the parlors of the Driskill hotel and will be followed by dancing in the dining halis. The president of the German Club will lead, followed by his board of directors in the same order as the president of the final hall and his chairmen. It has already been conceded quite as much an honor among the student body to be a member of the board of directors as to be chairman on the staff of the final recention. There will be nothing lacking to make the affair a most huge success and it is believed that with every available means provided for the comfort of those attending, and the fact that they are to be the guests of the present student body on a grand scale will lend much to make it the biggest event of commencement. Many of Alumni Expected

Final arrangements have not beed made for the reception, but the aid and encouragement the officers of the German Club are receiving from the authorities of the university and the officers of the Alumni Association bid fair to the prediction that the alumni will find a more cordial and royal welcome than they have ever received. It is hoped that the success will be such that a larger number of former students than usual find their way back to the university each year as a result of their generous offer.

Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.) LONDON, May 5.-John Burns, the labor leader and member of the cabinet who is drawing $12,500 a year as president of the local government board, confided to some friends during the recent holidays that he intended to spend exactly $2,500 per annum and save $10,000 as a provision for his future and that of his family. This announcement which has, of course, leaked out, is considered extremely interesting in view of the speculation as to what he would do with his income. Mr. Burns remarked a few years ago that no man was worth an income of more than $2,500 a year. NEW LAMP INVENTED

OIL CO. HIRES PRESS AGENT

Standard Doubles Pay of Its Twelve Directors

TURNS MARKET

Company Pours Millions Into Wall Street, Buying and Prices Rise

NEW YORK, May 5 .- The Standard Oil Company, the richest and most powerful corporation in the world, started for cover today and the pace was fully as fast as some of its allies into the open field occupied by the independent producer and the small dealer. It doubled the pay of its twelve Grectors, making them the highestpaid directors in the country, because, in the future, they will have to work overtime. It is seriously considering the dividing of its shares in order to bring its quotations out of the six-hundred column into that of one hundredodd occupied by railroad and other feature stocks. To cap the climax, the corporation, which has rivaled the sphynx for silence, has actually employed a press agent, and they consider his services worth $20,000 p.year. All the "hurrah" of the Standa d Oil trust was confined to its sensctional manipulation of the stock market on Friday, when its turned its millions into Wall street and bought until stocks actually rose in the face of the President's bearish message. Today brought no further defiance of the President and no direct contradiction of Commissioner Garfield. The reason given in No. 26 Broadway was that the directors took Saturday off.

There was a general weakness of Standard Oil issues in view of the change of front from unqualified defiance to signs that the corporation at last realized that it could no longer fool the public all the time. St. Paul railroad opened down 11/2 points and Amalgamated Copper lost a full point. In spite of the prospective settlement of the coal strike, the stocks in which Standard Oil has a control did not re-

rectors in the world. Directors Make $80 An Hour

The directors meet every work day from 11 to 1 o'clock, which makes their salary under the new schedule $80 per hour. There are thirteen directors in the company and the cost of these meetings to the corporation is more than $600,000-a year. The directors are: John D. Rockefeller, G. W. Rockefeller, John D. Archbold, C. R. Pratt, W. H. Titford, H. M. Flagler, H. H. Rogers, C. W. Hardness, O. H. Payne, F. Q. Barstow, J. A. Moffatt, E. T. Belford

Press Agent Gets $20,000 a Year

Most amazing to those who have followed Standard Oil policy is the appointment of Joseph I. Clarke as official press agent at a salary of $20,000. The public could more easily conceive to keep the news of its affairs out of the papers, but that it should pay any such amount to gain publicity is almost staggering. No move could show more decidedly the company's change of front. For years reporters who have been sent to No. 26 Broadway have It is said that Henry H. Rogers did not know what a reporter looked like until Attorney General Hadley of Missouri hauled him before a referee and with the aid the courts brought out unwilling testimony. During this proceeding Mr. Rogers spent much time in the ante-room, which was filled with reporters, and in time his shyness wore off even to the extent of exchanging stories. This was the origin of the press agent agreement.

He established offices today in one of the suites allotted to M. F. Elliot, who issued the Standard Oil defiance way as they were before unwelcome. The company realizes that its policy of silence was ineffective and did more harm than good. The mystery is to be put aside, but no further than Mr. Clarke can help. The enormous doings of the great corporation will be detailed for the asking, or at least one would think so after a visit to the new press agent, but it will be the doings that will reflect credit on Standard Oil and nothing of the other side. A more detailed statement in defense of the Standard Oil Company will be issued on Monday or Tuesday. In the meantime Mr. Elliot's statement must stand. A Little Food for Thought

No one in authority probably has ever suggested that on account of the anti-trust suits having been brought by the attorney general against the packers of Fort Worth that it would be the means of them withdrawing from the state, but in case such action was taken-what would be the result This, probably we have never thought of. It means millions of dollars loss to the stock raiser and the farmer of Texas. The packing houses coming here are a Texas institution. We are not narrow enough to use the word "Fort Worth." I will give you a few items where the producer derives the benefit. First, we will take veal calves. The majority of them reach Fort Worth in from twelve to twenty hours after being taken away from their mothers. Their condition is first class, they are not bruised as they are from long shipping, therefore their meat is in better condition eastern division; J. B. Paul, general | and is more salable in the eastern markets and the packer can pay more money for the animal. Who gets the benefit of this? The producer. Another item, the minimum weight on calves within the state is 16,000 pounds. To the northern markets it is 22,000 pounds. The shipper gets the advantage of 6,000 pounds, which is quite a little item in itself on a thousand or so loads of calves. Then we will take hogs. They are worth as much on the Fort Worth market as they are in Kansas City or St. Louis which means a saving in freight and shrinkage to the producer of $1 per head. There are from 2,000 to 6,000 hogs per day sold on the Fort Worth market. This means $2,000 to $6,000 to go back to the producer to be spent on his family or to betterments on his farm. Who dare say this is not a good thing? As for cattle, there are times when they will sell for more money on the northern markets than they will here, but that is only at short intervals when there is a fluctuation and our market is out of line. Ninetenths of the time, however, they will net the producer from $1 to $2 per head more and often $5 and $6 on the Fort Worth market than they will by shipping them north.

I take the position the packing houses being located in Texas has been the means of advancing the price of lands from $8 to $12 per acre. Why It has been the means of bringing thousands of northern farmers into Texas who have purchased this land at what they considered a cheap price. They are turning their attention to diversifying the crops and what we term 'stock farming," raising good hogs and cattle and feeding their corn, hay, sorghum and such other feeds as are raised, to their live stock instead of marketing them at the time they are harvested when as a usual thing all farm products are cheap. By utilizing their crops in this way they secure a good price for same through their cattle and hogs. There is an endless chain along this line which would keep me talking to you all night if it wasn't for having such a dreadful headache, thinking of the probability of some of these grafters getting back in office. Prosecution is a legitimate procedure. Persecution is another thing and the limit. I often pinch myself to really see whether or not I am dream-HORNS AND HOOF.

F. E. ALBRIGHT DIES SUDDENLY

Death Follows Acute Stomach Trouble

at 5:20 o'cloc Saturday afternoon at his home, No. 511 East Bluff street. During the past few days he had complained of acute stomach trouble. Not feeling well after dinner he did not return to his office, remaining at his home. Shortly after 5 o'clock he asked for the evening paper. Mrs. Albright stepped to the front door to get it. When she returned he was dead.

Judge F. E. Albright died suddenly

Judge Albright was born in Kentucky Dec. 20, 1845, removing at an early age with his parents to Murfysboro, Ill., receiving his education in that state. After acting as county attorney from Murfysboro for two terms Judge Albright served in the Illinois state legislature from the Fifty-first senatorial district, a district largely republican, from 1875 to 1878. Here he cultivated intimate friendships with Joseph Cannon, present speaker of the house; Senator Cullum and John A. Logan. Judge Albright enjoyed a large law practice in his district of Illinois and rose rapidly to the top of his profession. Such was his recognized legal and judicial ability that President Cleveland, during his first administration, appointed him chief justice of the then territory of Dakota. Remaining in this office but a short time on account of the ill effects of the severe climate on Mrs. Albright's health, they removed to San Antonio, where after but a short time Mrs. Albright died. In October, 1889, Judge Albright located in Fort Worth and had practiced law up to the day of his death. In September, 1893, he married Mrs. John A. Mimms of this city and had lived in the family residence in East Bluff street since that time.

Q. T. Moreland says Judge Albright was a strong character, a wholesouled genial friend, always bright and cheerful and one who absolutely refused to be worried by petty annoyances. He was a man of varied acomplishments, well read and well versed in the great literature of the world, also the political history of the United States. He was a skilled debater with few equals in Tarrant county as a stum speaker.

Left surviving him are his wife, one sister, Mrs. Wiseheart, and three brothers, Frank and Emmett of Fort Worth and an elder brother residing in Humboldt, Tenn.

idge Albright was in stat below the medium height, but had the physique of an athlete, always enjoying the best of health and vigor. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence.

No. 511 East Bluff street. The pall bearers will be J. W. Swayne, R. L. Carlock, T. J. Powell, Judge Irby Dunklin, C. M. Templeton and Q. T. Moreland.

and W. A. Hanger.

Miners Now Ask Reinstatement by Operators

Special to The Telegram.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 5.-There will be no strike in the anthracite coal fields if the operators will agree to give every man his old place and reinstate those who have been dismissed because they obeyed the suspension order of President Mitchell. This was determined today when the "First. That we agree to work on the basis of the award of the anthracite strike commission of 1902 for such period of time as may be agreed upon between the representatives of the anthracite coal mining companies and our scale committee provided that all men who suspended work on April 1 or since then or who have been dismissed because they stated they were to refuse to work if a strike were declared are reinstated in their for e positions and working places.

"Second. That the scale committee proceed at once to meet the representatives of the coal companies with a view of securing agreement upon this "Third. That the convention remain in session until Tuesday and the scale committee shall report to the convention at that time. "Fourth. That the suspension of work shall continue until an agreement has been made and its terms approved by the convention Mr. Mitchell immediately sent a telegram to George F. Baer of the operators' organization informing him of the action taken and asking for another conference. Mr. Baer replied this evening that the operators will (meet the scale committee in New York at o'clock next Monday afternoon.

Finest Specimens Ready-to-Wear

THERE hasn't been a dull moment in this department of Ready-to-wear; good weather and bad, it has been just the same. Women have gone shopping as usuallooked everywhere-ended up here. We feel pretty well proud of the fact that the great care we've exercised in the selection of stocks has resulted in the hoped-for approval. But you can't get better goods; there are few places throughout the South where you can get as good, and another point-what you buy here you know is good-but it's more-it's a purchase of economy. You can't buy garments of like value for as little as we ask anywhere. We don't say that from our own standpoint, and experience alone, but we're told it by so many customers. Lots of them find they do better here than in large eastern cities. # "TOO MUCH SOCIETY" SAYS CAPT. PADDOCK

Prepares Article for Publication in The Veteran

HE QUOTES PAPERS

Anneals to Organ of U. C. V. to Plead With Richmond to

Be Decent in 1907

Asserting that too much prominence is given purely social events at Confederate reunions, giving excerpts, quoting newspapers in New Orleans printed during the recent reunion there and emphasizing the contention that these reunions, as such, are not conducted in the interest of the veterans, Captain B. B. Paddock has prepared the following article, which will be published in the Veteran:

Editor of the Veteran: I submit the following excerpts from the reports of the New Orleans reunion and Veterans' Ball, as printed in the columns of the local press:

"The auditorium was well filled with an audience that positively refused to pay any attention or heed to the speakers, to the committee reports or the transaction of business on the platform. Time and again Chairman Lee rapped for order, but never once was his call heeded."-Times Democrat report of the New Orleans reunion. Veterans and their wives, sorely disappointed in their anticipations of participating in the chief social function of the reunion, moved as a solid procession back through Royal street. It was unfortunate that the veterans, the guests of the city, should have been the ones to have been denied taking part in an event arranged for their special benefit."-Times Democrat report of the veteran ball.

"The spectacle of a white-gloved member of the reception committee rudely kicking and cuffing refined heads of the as-Extract from a eard from a Daughter of the Confederacy to the Times Democrat about the veterans' ball.

"Sponsors, maids, veterans and sons, who by every law of hospitality, should have been among the first admitted, were among those who failed to participate ."-From the New Orleans Picaune account of the veterans'

These extracts, Mr. Editor, emphathat I have long made that the reunions of the Confederate veterans, as latterly conducted, are not for them, and that society events are the leading features of these gatherings. conclude it bad taste to criticise the conduct of your host, but my interest in the Veteran exceeds my concern for what my host may think of my criticism. Can you not exert the influence of your columns, which every veteran reads, to induce the people of Richmond, in which city we assemble in 1907, to eliminate from the entertainment every feature of a social gathering and devote their energies to affording the association an opportunity to transact their business without interruption by an uninterested, curiosity seeking multitude? No one who at-tended the reunion and felt an interest in its proceedings can be otherwise disappointed. The addresses were unheard, the reports of committees received, adopted, and ordered printed, in total ignorance of their contents. If this is to continue the association may as well disband without delay. The veterans should have a hall in which they may be able to deliberate and transact their business without interruption. They care little for entertainment, but, if any is offered, it should be in such character that they may participate. Roomy quarters for the several states and ice water would cost less than a ball and be more acceptable to the veterans. B. B. PADDOCK, Captain Commanding Fifth Texas

Veteran a Stock Farmer

The veterans and other visitors to the reunion at New Orleans are still drifting back to their homes, many of them having taken advantage of the reduced rates to visit their old homes east of the Mississippi and renew the acquaintance of places where they spent their boyhood days and from which they marched forth to war to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind

"Yes, I am just getting back," said W. R. Hodges, "and I had a pleas. ureable time. My command was Company H, Second Alabama cavalry. I am a stock farmer sure enough and believe that it is the most independent and profitable business that one can go into for a living.

"I live at Ranger in Eastland county and have 700 acres all about the town. I raise cotton, corn, milo maize and wheat and oats. From this I raise cattle, colts and hogs and sell the balance-if there is any balance. I have fifty head of Durham cattle, three good mares and Poland-China hogs. "Fruit is also one of my favorites and does well with us, generally, although this year it is not good. I have a native Texas apple that has not failed to make a full crop in seven "For thirty years I have made my own meat and raised my corn and never failed, and what I can do any one else can do. Why a man wants to farm and only raise cotton, and be forced to buy his meat from the packing house and his corn from Kansas, I cannot understand, when all he has to do is to try and he can have his

All this is of practical good and enables a farmer, not alone to do the necessary repairs on his implements, but know when his hands are doing it in proper manner. To The Telegram. NORTH FORT WORTH, Texas, May 6.—As there has been a great deal of comment on the supposed remarks I made in my talk before the convention of county and city health physicians at Austin, May 2, I wish to state the press has misquoted me in a few "Dr. Gallaway says an epidemic of yellow fever would be a good thing for North Fort Worth." This I did not say. It was said by another physician and I received the They also stated that I said I could not get the support of the board of aldermen. I did censure the health committee of 1905 for not doing their duty in trying to improve the sanitation of our town, but not a time did censure the aldermen of 1905 or 1906 as a whole, as we all know that this duty is invested in a committee of three, nor did I mention the healtn committee of 1906, as they as yet have not had the chance to show the people what they will do on this line. Another misquotation is in regard to how I would handle the packers. I did not know how to handle them. and this is one reason I went to Austin, to get information on that line. The advise of the state health officer was the same as I was quoted saying. I did condemn the past and present sanitary condition of our town. It is not what it should be, but with a little effort can be placed in as good condition as any city, and I hope the present health committee will realize their obligation more forcibly than the one of 1905. If not for the poor womtathers are not able to send them away to health resorts in the summer months, as others are, then for decency sake to the visiting public, that they may go away and speak a good

I hope the explanation made as to the misquotations will prove satisfactory to the excitable of our little

I will also state that what I did say on this subject at Austin I have not one word to "crawfish" with. Respectfully. CHAS. M. GALLAWAY.

NATURE STUDY

Every Girl Should Know by Name, the Birds and Trees in Her Neighborhood -Let the Girl in the Country Send Boxes of Wild Flowers to City School Rooms-How the Schoolgirl of Yesterday Spent "Enchanted Afternoons"-Study of the Stars Will Please the Maid With the Scientific

BY MARGARET SANGSTER (Copyright, 1906, by Jos. E. Bowles)

Nature study is supposed to be a books. In a way it may be true that the two kinds of study are not very much alike, but in another way they cannot be separated. Nature is around stretches the sky; we breathe the air; we have, whether we live in town or in the country, the sights and sounds of nature near us all the time. If we have only a little back yard with a small plot of grass and a pot or two of flowers, if our only acquaintance with birds is derived from a canary or a parrot in a cage, we still may study nature, although not with the same degree of interest that will be

I take it for granted that the girls who are studying nature are doing so to some purpose, Every one of us should know by sight and touch the trees in the locality nearest our homes. We should know them by their peculiarities of bark and branch and bud and leaf. We should know the flow ers that grow in our countryside, recognizing them by their peculiarities of root, stem and flower, of color and

We should likewise know the birds. Nothing is more absorbing than the study of birds. They are fascinating little creatures. Their habits, manners and customs are not so very opposite our own when we really penetrate their secrets. In a single rather small neighborhood in New Jersey a bird lover last summer counted no less than fifty-two varieties of birds. Their migrations, their nests, their patience in finding food for their young, the mother's and father's care in showing the young birds how to fly, all these are interesting parts of nature study. But it is not so much of this that I am thinking as I write to you, as of the way in which we may help one another in these days. Girls who live in the country ought to have a mission to their city cousins, and when spring and summer bring their pleasant days boxes of wild flowers and garden flowers, too, should be sent weekly to the schoolrooms where the pupils have no easy way of getting specimens for themselves. Schools in different parts of the country should exchange flowers, shells and other interesting properties of the nature study class, and it would not be at all a bad idea if there were a regular system of correspondence between Jean of the little village and Betty of the big city, all about the work each was doing in her study of nature.

Another helpful thing I recommend is the marking of passages in the poetry and prose that you read with an especial look to their bearing on nature. You will find that the poets care a great deal about the winds and the waves, the sky and the earth, and that real poetry is full of beautiful allusions to the phenomena of the world we live in. Tennyson whom you will study in your classes in English literature, has so much intimate knowledge of nature that his poetry is almost a guide book to the flowers of his native land. Longfellow, Whittier and Emerson have a great deal to say about nature. When you read the great masters of fiction you will find that they have whole pages devoted to descriptions of scenery and that some of them paint nature in words as if with the brush of an

When I was a girl we studied botany out under the trees. There was a particularly charming bit of woodland near our school and our nature study was always carried on out of doors. covered with a blanket shawl. Maybe you never heard of a blanket shawl, but if you had gone with Miss Jane and had been privileged to carry her Scotch plaid over your arm you would have known what a delightful and convenient wrap it was. The girls grouped themselves around on the grass near a brookside and as the lesson went on the brook sang and sparkled and the sound of its dullaby and the gleam of its waters made music and sunshine in our souls. We learned a great deal about botany in those enchanted afternoons, and we learned, too, a love of nature that is not gained by those who study it only in dried specimens between whitewashed walls.

You may be interested to know that we always carried a luncheon on the interesting part of the occasion. Girls who fell below a certain percentage in their studies were not permitted to take up botany in their work. The opportunity of studying nature was thus made very honorable and precious, and we held it as something worth striving

The study of astronomy captivates hose who have a scientific turn of mind. To learn the names of the constellations and to recognize some of the planets when they appear above the herizon is not beyond any ordinary mind, but the study of astronomy is, on the whole, too abstruse to be aftractive to very young girls. Definitions and formulas you may learn, but to grasp the principles of astronomy you require maturity and insight; for these you must wait. But you need not wait to learn by heart Addison's exquisite lyric that begins:

The spacious firmament on high, And all the blue, ethereal sky, And spangled heavens a shining frame, Their great original proclaim.

I knew a wee tot once, a dimpled creature with serious eyes, who did not want to take lessons in music. Lifting her little hand she pointed upward and said: "I would rather study astronomy." Although the child did not know it, astronomy and music and mathematics are all somehow akin to one another, and she who is proficient in any one of them may hope to become proficient in them all. One April day as I watched the birds, our little brothers of the air, busy with their housekeeping, I wrote a bit of verse that you may like in any month of the year, since, though it has an April measure, you may read it in May or June, and like it just as The Building of the Nest

They'll come again to the apple tree-

Robin and all the rest-When the orchard branches are fair In the snow of the blossom drest; And the prettiest thing in the world will be The building of the nest.

Weaving it well, so round and trim, Hollowing it with care, Nothing too far away for him, Nothing for her too fair; Hanging it safe on the topmost limb. Their castle in the air.

Ah! mother-bird, you'll have weary When the eggs are under your breast, And shadow may darken the dancing When the wee ones leave the nest;

But they'll find their wings in a glad And God will see to the rest. So come to the trees with all your train When the apple blossoms grow;

Through the April shimmer of sun and Go flying to and fro; And sing to our hearts as we watch again Your fairy buildings grow.

Rev. I. Z. T. Morris Has Attack of Smallpox

Suffering from contagion contracted while pursuing his life work, Rev. I. Z. T. Morris, a familiar figure in the humanitarian work of the state and known as the children's friend, is at the county pest house, having been taken there Friday night following development of smallpox.

His illness, as reported in The Telegram of Friday, caused many expressions of regret throughout the city, his life work of securing homes for friendless children carried on both individually and in connection with the Fort Worth Benevolent Home having made him known intimately to the Christian and charitable people at large.

Dr. Morris when communicated with by phone Saturday reported that his condition was much improved and that he expected to return to his home within ten or fifteen days. He feels that the illness was contracted while pursuing his work in south Texas, from which he has just returned.

Dr. Morris, who has devoted his life to the good of children, is 65 years of age and for the past ten years has been actively engaged in the work with headquarters in this city. His home is at Polytechnic Heights. E. L. Huffman of the Fort Worth Benevolent Home in speaking of Dr. Morris' career Saturday night, declared that his loss in event of a serious turn would be one felt throughout Texas. 'He is an indefatigable," said Mr. Huffman, "and a man who sacrificed everything to the cause he considered his especial work."

Wilson Large Among the Fire Fighters in Stricken City

Word has been received from Wilson Large, formerly of Glenwood, who is now in the United States navy and whose interesting letters have frequently been published in The Telegram, telling of his experiences at San Francisco during the earthquake and fire week there. Young Large was on both fire and patrol duty there, being a member of the marines. His letter to his parents is as follows: U. S. TUG ACTIVE, San Francisco, Cal., May 1.-Dear Father and Mother: am afraid you have been worrying quite a bit and wondering why I don't write. Well, to tell you the truth, this is the first time I have had to my self since the morning of the earthquake. The morning the earthquake happened we were sent down here from Mare Island with 10,000 feet of hose, and as soon as we arrived here we commenced to fight the fire. We fought it for seventy-two hours without a bit of sleep and hardly anything to eat, and I can tell you we were very nearly all in by that time. The first sleep we got was only three hours, and then we had to commence again. I went three days and nights without a dry stitch of clothes on. We had to keep ourselves wet to keep from catching fire. I have taken some big chances since I have been in the navy, but I took some this time that I would not take again for a million dollars. The first two days we worked along the south end of the water front of the city, where all the toughs hang out. We could not get a man to help us. They were all so drunk they could not even get out of their own way. We would go into houses and find four and five laid out on the floor so drunk they could not help themselves. We would get them by the heels and drag them out into the middle of the street. I have seen some horrible sights. but I have seen some here that beats them all. The people here were all dazed with the horror. I was standing guard one time in front of the Gerry building and a woman stepped up to me and asked me where the Ferry building was. Some of the people tried to save some of the most useless things. I saw one woman, and all she had was a piece of marble about two feet square and one inch thick.

After the fourth day they gave is rifles and bayonets and told us to patrol the city, and our orders were to shoot any man that refused to work or any one we caught looting. I saw one man carrying his wife down from on top of a hill. She was dead and he had her rolled up in a blanket, and when he got down to the waterfront, put weights to her feet and threw her body in the bay. We are still in the city and do not three weeks yet before we can leave. I will close now, as we are ordered out with the tug. Your loving sailor boy. WILSON.

WANT NEW IDEAS

Engineer Who Designed Filtration Plans Says Packers Are Willing to Pay

HOUSTON, Texas, May 5.-John W. Maxcy, the engineer who succeeded in placing a sewerage filtration plant in the big Fort Worth packery, has just returned from Chicago, where he conferred with the heads of the Swift and Armour packing companies. Regarding the result of his trip and of the work for the future, Mr. Maxcy said to the representative of The Telegram:

"I feel very much gratified at the fair and liberal treatment accorded me by these interests, as they seem to realize that I have done them a signal service and are willing to pay for it. "What pleased me most is that everything attempted by these people in developing a new idea is thorough, to the point and carried to a logical

To Establish Laboratory

"I am to have at Fort Worth a most omplete and modern chemical and pacteriological laboratory, with a staff chemists, bacteriologists and all ecessary assistants for a full investigation of the entire subject of packing louse wastes. I have authority to travel over the United States or go abroad at any time, to investigate any work or experiment, having bearing on this subject. "While on this trip I visited Columbus. Ohio, and investigated the sewage and water purification plants now being installed there, along strictly, scientific lines. Before undertaking the actual construction the board of public service of Columbus appropropriated $46,000 for experimental work n order to determine certain necessary facts before spending their milliondollar bond issue on a finished failure, as many other places have done. Each class of sewage and each locality requires a special study before permanent plans are adopted. This has been results on first experimental plant were in placing a similar sum at my disexperimental work and scientific investigations. This is a most interesting field for original research, opening up with its uncertainties great possibilities and complex reactions a terra incognita in the realms of practical science. I now have the opportunities for which I have labored for years, and I hope to make the best of it, and prove myself useful in this specialty.

Willing to Pay for Ideas

"I find that the great industries are willing to pay handsomely for ideas, but they must be partially developed, and their economic value demonstrated. "It is a popular idea that nothing is wasted about a packing house, but this is a great mistake. At the Fort Worth packeries alone there are $250,-000 of actual values going into the Trinity river each day, which, added to the maintenance and operating charges, makes a net loss of $300 per day. You might get an idea from this as to what their total daily losses amounts to at St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and other cities from this source alone.

"One of the prime objects of my experiments will be to recover these values, seek other values, as well as to inaugurate a complete system of records, determined from experimental data, which will not only add to the technical literature of the day, but be a guide to municipalities and others struggling with similar difficulties.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., May 5.-Alex Posey, the Creek clerk in the Dawes commission who does work for the government among the full bloods, runs across some interesting characters among the Indians. Some of these live far from towns, speak their own language, seldom get out of their own neighborhood, and still have faith in the treaties of the United States government with the Indians. One of these is Artus Hotiya, who cannot speak English. Recently Mr. Posey went to Hotiya's place to get information concerning a child of Hotiya who had died. In reply to questions Hatiya answered:

"You crossed the Wewoka creek this morning? It is spring and the water runs; you see fine green grass on the pararies; the grass still grows. Our people have agreed that so long as water runs and grass grows, we shall not have our lands divided nor our governments supplanted. I am not yet ready to give information." This speech was given in Creek and represents the dignity and faith of the old class of Indians who still resent the government allotment of lands. When it was explained to him that all the information wanted was such as would make possible an allotment for his child, Emma, he replied:

"God has given her an allotment in the graveyard. She is dead. The allotment there is all that she is entitled to. A grave is all the allotment that I am entitled to, and all that God intended that I should have. It is enough. The Great Father placed the Pacific on one side and the Atlantic on the other, and the land between he gave to the Indian. The white man came and he set corner stones and told the Indian that he must live between these. The Indian cannot live so. He is being stifled by the white man, who has disarmed him of his bow and arrow and driven from the forests the game. The end of the Indian is near, but I am not yet ready to contribute to hastening it."

Officers of the Columbia gave orders at the postoffice to hold all mail for the present. ### DAY IN 'FRISCO DISCOURAGING

Hungry in Golden Gate Park

ANOTHER SHOCK

ere Buildings Collapse and Workmen Have Narrow Escape From Death

BY ROBERT H. WILSON. DARLAND, Cal. May 5.—This has n one of the discouraging days in Prancisco's recuperation. The the returned this morning to e the terrible memories of three ago, and the refugees in Goldate park were again hungry and for food.

t sharp shock was felt in San and Oakland at 10:30 this wall of the Pacific Mutual ance Company's building, busing burying a number of walls of the hall of justice collapsed and the falling of great sections of brick and mortar filled the air with dust. A number of workmen on Montgomery street left their work and refused to go back for some time. In various places there were meetings of relief committees composed of women who rushed to windows and doors and then as the shock ceased almost instantly settled back in their chairs with blanched faces, saying "Thank God it is over." Little fear is entertained of any recurrent shock of a seriously damaging character and the tremors that are now felt are supposed to be the natural ef-in Golden Gate park was not due to shortage of provisions, but to a change in the system of distributing the provisions. When people applied for rations today they were told to get a blue card from Red Cross people which would not be honored until afternoon. They have been living from hand to mouth and their dependence upon the daily issuance of rations was pathetic. Many of them refused to leave the distributing points at once, pleading with those in charge to give them something to eat until they should secure their new cards. This was refused because the order was a military one and the subordinates had no discretion in the matter. These refugees sometimes walk a mile and a half to the nearest station, carrying cracker boxes and tin cans. They start early in the morning and it takes them half a day to get their rations and return. General Greely this afternoon grantone of the most extended interviews to your representative that has been given since he took command.

Following is official statement: General Greeley Talks "Headquarters Pacific Division, Presidio, Cal., May 5.-Impossible to say more than San Francisco will need all the supplies and every dollar which the generosity of American hearts can contribute.

"We are perfecting through officers arriving daily a system which will shortly develop the situation as regards the number of destitute. The last figures of mouths fed in San Francisco cover Friday, when 261,000 were reported. Every effort is being made to eliminate repeaters and imposters, and I hope the number within few days will be under 200,000. In Oakland and vicinity the estimate a few days since placed the number at 10,000, but I believe the number of destitute refugees will not exceed 30,-

"The average cost of rations now being issued is estimated at 30c, which would amount to $90,000 a day for the number last reported. The ration of the refugees has been cut to a basis similar to that of the army ration. The components are as follows: "Meat, ten ounces canned meat or fish, or fourteen ounces fresh meat to the ration. Bread, fourteen ounces fresh bread or 12 ounces of flour to the ration. Coffee and tea, one pound of coffee to fifteen rations, or one and one-half pounds of tea to 100 rations. "Vegetables, one and one-half ounces of beans, peas or rice or hominy to the ration; three-quarters of a pound of fresh vegetable, 80 per cent potatoes, 20 per cent onions to the ration. "Dried fruit, one ounce to the ra-

"Miscellaneous, 15 pounds of sugar to 100 rations; three quarts of vinegar to 100 rations, two pounds of salt to 100 rations; four ounces of pepper to 100 rations; four pounds of soap to 100 rations; and one and one-half pounds of candles to 100 rations." In a formal way, General Greely talked hopefully of the situation.

EXPLOSION PUTS MANY LIGHTS OUT

Strange Accident at Citizens Power Plant

The bursting of the main steam pipe in a boiler dome at the Citizens' Light and Power Company's plant Saturday night damaged one of the boilers to such an extent that many lights in stores and offices down town and also in the residence district were extinguished and candles were used as a sub-

George E. White, vice president of the company, stated that the explosion was caused by the threads in the joint of the pipe to the drum of the boiler becoming worn, weakening the joint to such an extent that it was unable to withstand the pressure of the steam.

The noise of the explosion was so terrific that it could be heard half a mile distant. It came without warning, but luckily no person was near at the time of the accident, Little damage occurred to the building, but there was much inconvenience attending the absencee of lights throughout the city.

The fire department, on hearing the explosion, rushed to the scene, but found it unnecessary to render assistance. A crowd numbering several hundred was attracted to the scene. It was stated at the company's plant that an effort would be made to complete repairs to the boiler and joints Sunday.

Austin high school made 8 points, the winning team from as senator of this state, and attorney Bryan piled up 61 points, 31 of which general of this state, in all of which powere won by Louie Hamilton, who sitions I can truthfully state he has filled with credit to himself and with The meet was attended by a large ability and great loyalty to the governcrowd of enthusiasts and college colors

"But perhaps(I am expected to speak of my services with him in the senate of this state. I recall now his labors in that branch of the legislature, although nearly twenty years have expired since I served with him there. We were then friends as now. I then found him faithful to his duties, ever laboring to discharge his duties to his constituents, and also giving his best Judgment and energies to the passage of wholesome laws for the government of the people and for the development of this commonwealth, which not in the very distant future is to be the great empire state of th eunion. "Judge Bell has always been a friend made twenty feet four inches, beating to our eleemosynary institutions. He could not otherwise be, owing to his great sympathetic heart which impels him to be kind to the afflicted whether of body or mind. During my services with him in the senate he always evinced a deep interest in educational affairs, and lent his aid and vote to the upbuilding of our state educational institutions and public school system. "As prohibition and local soption seems likely to be injected into the campaign, and may become somewhat of an issue, I can attest that when the laws prior to 1887 had been held by the courts to be defective, during the session of the legislature in that year a sub-committee of the senate was appointed to prepare a bill to cure the defects in the local option laws. Judge Bell was chairman of this committee and had control of the bill through its passage in the senate, and the bill became a law, and local option elections. as I understand, are to this day held under and by virtue of this law. the local option laws, as he seems to be the pioneer to a great extent in this legislation so far as this state is con-

"I know the course of Judge Bell on the subject. of railroad legislation when he was in the senate. He says in his speech in Hamilton that he is no new convert to the theory of regulation and charges of railroads. "Upon all questions for legislation before the senate when I served with him in that body, he was firm and outspoken, and at the same time conservative. I can speak here today to this audience with truth that I can count it an advantage to have associated with me the individual to whose character and personal worth I am now attesting. In all the positions he has filled as a public servant, he has discharged with fidelity without blemish on his good name. As an evidence of his faithful discharge of duty and sterling integrity, may be mentioned the fact that he has never been defeated when he has sought the suffrages of the people. Perhaps there is no better evidence of his personal worth than this, and should he be the choice of the people of this growing empire state for governor, I have the utmost confidence in his ability and patriotism to guide

the ship of state aright." Other Addresses

Following the address of Major Jarvis. B. P. Ayres discussed the record of C. K. Bell as district judge and district attorney. He paid a high tribute to the conduct of both offices, foreshadowing the conduct of state of affairs following his election as governor. He closed with a sketch of Judge Bell's personality which was received with continued applause.

W. A. Hanger next reviewed the work of C. K. Bell as attorney general, In opening he declared that while others might talk of questions that are settled or are settling themselves, Judge Bell has taken hold of the real issues and clearly defined his position on them. Among the real questions now facing the state, he declared, is the proper care of insane, who are at present in many cases forced to remain in jails and places unsuited for them. He also noted the importance of proper methods for providing for the expenses of the state. Judge Bell, by his service as attorney general, he declared, the man best fitted to meet these questions. He then told of the death of Tom Smith and the appointment of Bell as attorney general without solicitation and his service while in the office, commenting upon the $100,000 recovered to the state through anti-trust suits; recovery of land and strict enforcement of regulations regarding foreign corporations engaged n business here. The young men paid compliments to Judge Bell as the young man's friend. W. H. Slay and A. J. Baskin, both referred to personal and general incidents showing Judge Bell as one ready to aid the young men, and as one interested in schools for their proper education. Closing address was delivered by T. J. Powell, who paid perhaps the greatest tribute-one to C. K. Bell, the private citizen. In opening Mayor Powell declared to be the first citizen of the state is greater honor than to be its chief executive. but that when those honors were united the maximum was reached. In a beautiful simile he declared the daisy of modesty the flower in Judge Bell's manhood that most appealed to him. "Judge Bell is a man to who you would with satisfaction consign the care of your property and family when sentence in the address. Permanent organization of the club was next taken up. R. M. Wynne was elected president, Dr. W. H. Davis of Arlington, vice president, and Judge R. F. Milam, secretary. A committee comprising R. F. Milam, W. P. Mc-Lean, John Baskin, A. L. Matlock, B D. Shropshire, E. M. Daggett, T. J. After remodeling their place of business throughout, starting the fans, which will be kept going through the warmer months that are just now beginning, T. J. counter, either. "No," said Mr. Pitman. "Right in front is the place for water. It's treating your customers and strangers and the general public, whether they are smokers or not, with nothing more than common courtesy to place good, pure, cold water where it is easily accessible. And right there is where it is going to stay."

Pass your churches Sunday and mark the check animals, their heads in a most unnatural and cruel position, while the Christians are pouring out their souls in prayer and song to a merciful God. Only a second of time and that check would be removedthe poor, faithful animal comfortable. It is too much to believe that prayers would be more acceptable if founded

Drivers of delivery wagons, one and all, seem to feel they are on the race course, regardless of weather or condition of animal. Over-laden, cruelly treaty, ill-fed animals. Chickens piled in crates like vegetables or tied and left on sidewalks at stores and other cruelties are of such an every-hour occurrence the question "Is there a humane society?" is a most natural one. It is but too true, as you say, "Ecerybody is afraid of everybody else," and our poor animals must continue to suffer and the howls of the "humane" be tried because there is not enough independence in individuals to act, when, after they have organized as a society. Probably an election is in anticipation and they must make friends, not enemies, or their business is such as invite and need popularity. Why should they drive custom from their doors by such a trifle, as defending a horse or dog? Expressing indignation through your columns, that is always so fearless and independent, does not seem to reach the place where hearts should be. What can be done? Must out animals continue to suffer? "SOUTH SIDE."

Mesdames J. W. Hertford and Glen-Walker wired about 500 of their friends to meet them at Handley on Friday night and, judging from the number of guests dancing there every one must have accepted. The programs were little booklets ornamented with a view of Handley. Delicious punch was cerved on the veranda. The music was excellent, the floor good and everybody had a splendid time.

The guests were Messrs. and Mesdames W. W. Sloan Jr., Frank Boyd, J. H. Cameron, H. M. Hubbard, John Grammer, W. F. Sterley, Fred Deitrich, John Hanna, Loyd Pollock, Will McLean, Frank Weaver, E. H. Breakfast With Mrs. Swayne

Mrs. Swayne's birthday breakfast

last Tuesday morning was not only of delightful informality, but was attendwere original, others from the classics.

poem in negro dialect which was among the cleverest contributions. Mrs. Clough, when Mrs. George Jackson had given from Chaucer the quotations she had chosen, changed it and replaced it with few reminiscences of Mrs. Swayne as a girl, wife and mother. Mrs. Clough had been present at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Swayne and her closing words said that though surrounded and followed by many admirers, May had chosen the "Swayne" she had loved the best, which added a bit of sentiment to the applause that it called forth.

Mrs. B. B. Paddock was another of the guests who had known Mrs. Swayne from girlhood. She and Mrs. J. W. Swayne had met with Mrs. Swayne seventeen years ago when she organized the Woman's Wednesday Other guests who had known Mrs.

Swavne before she was married when she was Miss May Hendricks, were Mrs. Tidball and Miss Annie Shelton. The guests were seated at a long table, Mrs. Swayne and Mrs. Lively of Dailas being at one end, while opposite sat Mrs. H. L. Lathrop. Mrs. Swayne's right sat Mrs. Clough, to her left Mrs. * Tidball, the other guests being Mesdames Harris, Drew Preuitt, T. J. Penniston, B. B. Paddock, John C. Ryan, W. V. Galbreath, C. W. and George Jackson. The table was decorated with sweet peas, a large basket in the center supplemented by smaller baskets on either end. Broad bands of pink satin ribbon were crossed under the baskets. Five courses were served, strawberries with whipped cream, poached eggs on toast, tomato salad, broiled spring chicken on toast with Saratoga chips, German empire, although, of course, some adverse criticism is also heard. The portrait, which is declared to be an excellent likeness to the kaiser, is by Felix Borchardt, a Parisian painter, and shows the German war lord in hunting costume. It was ordered by the Figaro Illustre, which is forming a gallery of European sovereigns.

The order was originally only for a crayon sketch, but having succeeded in getting sittings, the painter asked the kaiser to sit for a full length por-

Instead of three sittings he gave the painter nearly a dozen, and personally suggested as well the pose as many details of the painting.

Young Bernhardt Angry While Mamma Bernhardt has been having an adventureful tour in the states, her dear son Maurice has been, as usual, taking exception to what the French press has had to say about the celebrated actress and has been challenging people right and left to duels. The latest object of Maurice Bernhardt's anger has been M. Henri de Weindel, editor of a prominent illustrated weekly. The divine Sarah's son sent his seconds to M. de Weindel, who is a keen swordsman and a crack shot. but that gentleman sent back word that neither he nor his paper meant any disrespect to the famous actress and the incident has been closed. Nobody in Paris takes young Bernhardt's ebullitions seriously.

* * * Pope Against "Associations"

Consternation prevails in governmental circles at the news from Rome to the effect that the pope has decided to positively refuse consent to the forming of public worship associations provided for in the law of separation between church and state. The recent troubles in connection with the church inventories arose out of the government's attempting to draw up a list of the church property which it was intended eventually to turn over to the Public Worship asscription which will be placed upon

To Erect Labor Monument "To the Glory of Labor" is the in-erect in the heart of Paris. A movement is on foot to set up a monument glorifying not only labor as represented by the workingman, but also to all great thinkers, scientists and others whose life work was devoted to the improvement of the laboring classes and the leading of humanity in general toward a higher ideal. A famous sculptor several years ago made a small model for such a monument and it is proposed to ask him to complete the work on a grand

Rameses' Heart Examined After more than 3,000 years a post mortem examination of King Rameses II.'s heart has been made by four French scientists.

Four ancient Egyptian vases containing the viscera of Rameses were recently acquired by the national museum (the Louvre.) The stomach, liver and intestines, contained in three of the vases, were reduced to powder enclosed in tightly bound aromatic bandages. But the fourth contained a hard oval slab, three inches long and one and a half inches broad. This is believed to be the heart of the ruler of ancient Egypt.

It was cut into sections with a saw. and thin slices were shaved off for miscroscopic purposes. Under the miscroscope the horny substance showed muscular fibres in a formation that is only found in the heart and tongue. Thus the nondescript horny object was identified as the heart of King Rameses II of Egypt, who died in 1258 B. C.

N N N Model is Decoy For Robbers

The story of a beautiful model who was decoy for a gang of "Apaches" is being told in the Montmartre studios. A young artiste from Munich settled in the picturesque Bohemian quarter on the Parisian heights to study its lights and shade. One of the subjects he wished to paint was the fair head and pretty face of a charming girl

Karl, of Prussia, the kaiser has shown that he has inherited the artistic gift of his British mother. The miniature which the kaiser presented to Princess Frederick Leopold of Prussia is an excellent likeness of the two children.

whose acquaintance he made in the course of his studies. She consented to sit for him in his studio on the fifth floor provided she could bring her mother. She accordingly brought with her a closely veiled female whom she introduced as her mother and who gave her consent to her daughter's sitting to the artist in a somewhat gruff voice.

When the artist had begun the portrait of the girl her "mother" threw off the disguise and ordered "hands up." It was the leader of a gang of robbers and the artist stood by helplessly while the marauders stripped his room of everything movable. To prevent him giving an alarm the leader of the gang threatened him with terrible things if he attempted to move. The poor artist lost many vafuable possessions and also the property of a Munich art society.

N N N Swindler Had Many Clothes An extensive wardrobe has been found in the possession of a swindler who passed as the Counte de Casmadard, who has been arrested for fraud at Poitiers.

He had 300 suits of clothes, 120 extra pairs of trousers, 380 waistcoats, 97 hats, 80 dressing cases and a fortune in jewelry. Representing himself as an attache at the French embassy in Madrid, returned from the Algeciras conference, he lived on credit in a magnificent style, and was never seen to wear the same suit of clothes twice. It has been discovered that he is identical with a certain Colonel de Miromesnil who recently bought $10,-000 worth of real estate in Paris and obtained credit for that amount. His real name is Cusas. Won $70,000 at One Sitting The past season at the Monte Carlo casino has made a record in favor of the bank, which has netted about half a million dollars more than last year. Despite the management's great winnings, there have been some great coups on the part of players. A young Polish noble, Count John Sobansky, won at a recent evening's play nearly $70,000. Out of his good fortune he made a handsome present to a lady who had been his mascot at the table.

Equitable Manager Loses Suit Mr. Piexotto, manager for France of the Equitable Life Insurance company, has lost the suit brought against him by M. Duboin which rose out of the recent insurance scandals and has had to pay a fine of 3,000 francs.

When the scandal first broke out in America M. Duboin organized among the French policy holders a defense syndicate for the purpose of safeguarding their interests. M. Piexotto addressed a complaint to the minister of the interior, alleging that M. Duboin's action was slanderous. An inquiry was ordered and the court decided that no action could be taken against M. Duboin. As soon as the decision was given M. Duboin sued Mr. Piexotto for libel, and has just won the case.

The discussions in the United States | so, and the award of the commissenate over the Hepburn-Dolliver bill drag their slow length along. While the speeches would be wearisome to the farmer even if he had time and opportunity to read them, covering as they' do mainly constitutional questions, none the less is this discussion perhaps one of the most important, able and far-reaching that has occurred in the senate of the United

The point around which the discussions have turned has been the court review; that is, the demand of the corporation senators that the circuit court must pass on every point covered by the decisions of the railroad commission, if the corporations so desire. When this discussion first began Wallaces' Farmer contended that the commissioners were the sole judges of the "justness and reasonableness" of a rate, and that for the circuit court to presume to pass upon the justness and reasonableness of a rate was an invasion of the rights of the legislature; that the fixing of a rate by the interstate commerce commission was in fact a legislative act with which the courts could have nothing whatever to do, unless it should be unconstitutional or unlawful because confiscatory.

The corporation attorneys and newspapers came down strong on that section of the constitution which provides that no person shall be deprived of property without due process of law, apparently forgetting that there were two sides of that question, and that the property of the farmer should be protected by the laws quite as fully as the property of the railroad. The clearest light on this phase of the queston has come from a source unexpected, at least to the farmer, namely, from Senator Bailey, the junior senator from the state of Texas. He incidentally remarked some days ago in the course of debate that while the supreme court was a branch of the government entirely distinct and separate from the legislative department, the circuit courts are the creation of congress itself; and his proposition was that the circuit courts should be deprived of the right to issue injunctions against railroad rates going into effect. This brought on the great debate of the session, Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, and Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, taking the opposite side. In a speech delivered April 10, which was listened to with profound attention by the full senate, Senator Bailey made emeat of his opponents, showing that from the very beginning the doctrine which he announced incidentally has been upheld by the supreme court. In other words, that the circuit courts, being the creation of congress, their jurisdiction must be determined by congress itself. The application of contention can be best stated in the words of Senator Bailey:

"I do not believe that the courts are the best tribunals in which to settle the question, but I know that under the constitution we cannot deny a common carrier the right to a trial the courts. I am not so sure, however, that such ought to be the law. I say that because the books are full of decisions which hold that when the railroad wants to condemn a citizen's property in order to construct and operate its line it has the right to do sioners appointed upon its application may be final. It has frequently been held that such an award is taking property according to the due process of law, and that the ascertainment by those commissioners of the just compensation which the law requires is conclusive, or can be made conclusive, upon all parties."

Stripped of its legal verbiage, good law is after all good sense, of which the farmer in the quiet of his home is quite as good a judge as the lawyer among his books; and our readers will therefore appreciate the following from Senator Bailey's speech:

"The truth is, and the truth must always remain, that from the power and right of the railroad to condemn my property for its use results my right to condemn the service of the railroad to my use. The railroad comes to my homestead, consecrated by a thousand associations of mother and father, of wife and children, and mocks me when I talk about the sweet and tender memories of my childhood and plead with them to go another way. They tell me that private interest and private sentiment must vield to this great public convenience; and when I refuse to agree with them about the compensation they apply to the county judge, and he appoints, in many of the states, three commissioners to view the premises and assess the value of my land. I plead with these commissioners; but they read me the cold, unfeeling letter of the law, and tell me that private property shall not stand in the way of public progress and convenience. They find that I am entitled to so much. If I am dissatisfied, they tell me to appeal to the court, and I appeal, but pending that appeal they pay me what the three_commissioners have awarded me, and they enter upon my land, tear down my fences, or, if I stand in their way, they raze my house, and I must litigate with them in the courts the question of whether they have paid me enough for my property. I have in mind-and I am permitted to make a statement from my professional experience, as the senator from Wisconsin did from his-I have in mind one case where the owner of a splendid farm said, 'Keep out of this bottom and build on the tableland, and you can have the right of way for nothing.' They said it would cost $3,000 to change the location of their line, and upon the mere consideration of the cost refused to make the change. The railroad offered $1,000 for the right of way, and the owner, demanded $5,000. Under this disagreement commissioners were appointed, and these commissioners assessed the damages at only $1,500. In that state of the case the railroad paid the owner of the land the $1,500and if he had not been willing to accept it they could have deposited it in the court-tore down his fences, and built their railroad through his when the case was tried a jury of his countrymen said the damages were $5,000. How did the owner of the farm obtain the additional $3,500? He obtained his judgment against the railroad, and collected it like other judgment collectors. "I open the door of the court and authorize any railroad or any person dissatisfied with any rate or regulation established by the commission to go into the court and allege that the commission has not fixed a rate which or regulation which is just and reasonable. I give the court the power to hear and determine that question, and I only provide that what the commission has one shall remain effec-tive until they have proved that what the commission has done is wrong."

The conclusion of Senator Bailey's remarks will also prove interesting reading to the man who has followed this discussion:

"Mr. President, I do not believe that this legislation will lead to the end which some men fear. I believe that the ultimate effect of it will be to promote a better understanding between the railroads and the people. I believe that when it has made the railroads do the people justice the people will feel less resentful toward the railroads; and we shall deal with these questions with more of reason and less of passion. It will take the railroads out of politics, and we will hear no more about 'railroad senators.' I want to see every corporation driven from the politics of this republic, because corporations have no place in the politics. They are organized for profit and cherish no patriotic purpose. Politics are for men of flesh and blood, made in the image of their God, and not for corporations, which are the mere creations of the law.

"And if we could finish this matter with the concurrence of the senator from Pennsylvania and the senator from Wisconsin I would feel like the millenium had almost come. I would feel that the railroad and the shipper could work together in peace and with a good will toward each other. I would feel that we could have a new national emblem, which would combine the pitchfork and the big stick. I would look for a new day of justice instead of hate. I would feel that we were reaching an era in this devoted land where men are to be judged by how they act and what they think, rather than what they have; when intellect and not fortune, when conduct more than birth should be the measure of our esteem, and when an honest fame should be the goal toward which our ambitious youth should be taught to toil and hope. "Mr President, I am one of those who believe that such time may comeof course I am not so simple-minded as to dream that the old days of small fortunes and great contentment will ever come again to bless the land, but I do believe in the coming of a better day than this-when the man who knows that he is just and honest will feel that he is happier in his circumstances than the man whose riches have been corrupted through in-

"I pray for the time to come when we shall have a new standard to guide our children; when we shall teach them that justice is better than power, and lead them into the ennobling faith that truth shall conquer falsehood in every home where peace abides and in every land where men are free. # REVIEW OF EXPERIMENTAL STATION WORK IN TEXAS $4.98

Jrof. Craig Gives Out Comprehensive Statement

vice in Season So Farmers May Profit Thereby

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, May 5 -As the season for the publishing of bulletins by the state experiment stations is about drawing to a close your correspondent requested Professor John A. Craig, director of experiment stations, to review the work that had been done during the past year.

"You are right in thinking that the season for the publishing of our bulletins is about over," said Professor

Craig, "for when our farmers are busy with their farming operations they have very little time for looking into our investigations. We try as far as we can to make our bulletins seasonable, realizing that, when a man gets an idea just at the time when he can use it, he is very likely to put it into contend with in this because of the great extent of the territory of our state and the vast difference there is in the agricultural pursuits that are followed. It is important for us with the means at present at our disposal to issue bulletins or conduct investigaevery portion of the state. To do this properly it would be necessary to have substation in each portion of the state that is developing along distinctive lines and also have increased funds for investigation and the publishing of results. It may be advisable to state here that we are only permitted through the Hatch fund of $15. 000 from the federal government to use this for original investigation work and the publishing of bulletins confined to investigations. The conducting of useful and practical investigations takes time, careful observation and then after the results are obtained getting them before those that they will benefit in such a way that they may use them to improve their prac-There are very few investigaleast take a year to plan, carry out and work up into useful application and then these have to be duplicated again plies painstaking effort, continual weighing and recording of results and then a knowledge of the states conditions so as to make those results applicable to the work of the farm. Consequently the publishing of a bulletin has behind it a great deal of work that never appears on the surface to the ordinary reader.. A bulletin that is not completely reliable is more than worthless and reliability means that there has been back of it an immense amount of work that never comes to the surface. I mention these things, so that when we say we publish eight bulletins in a year as we will do this past season, it means much more than it would mean to write general articles just about ready for the press, which will make a total of eight for the year. 25,000 on Mailing List

"We have over 25,000 names on our mailing list and most of our bulletins are published in editions of this num-Of these bulletins we have published so far 140,000 copies, which with the edition about ready for press, will make 165,000 copies of bulletims sent out to our farmers and other interested in ours work. Considering the means available for this work our record seems a good one especially when compared with other states. It is to be remembered that it is very hard for our experiment stations to keep in touch with the various lines of agricultural effort over our west territory. To present this matter in another way let me say that the area of Texas corresponds to about the combined area of the seven states which I shall mention: Colorado, New York, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Each one of these states receive as much financial assistance as we do, or to be more explicit, they receive over $100,-000 for investigation work from the federal government and they also jointly receive over $100,000 from their state governments for the same pur-We receive $15,000 from the federal government and $6,000 from the state, making something less than $25,000 for investigation purposes. We have many more questions to investigate than they have in these other states and I will venture to say owing to the vast interests embraced by agriculture in our state we could, with such an amount as these several states get jointly, obtain better results for the welfare of our farming interests than they are able to do chiefly because our conditions are new and we could save our farmers a great many dollars by doing their investigating for them.

Cottonseed for Hogs

"The first bulletin that we issued this year, No. 78, on 'Feeding Fermented Cottonseed Meal to Hogs,' by F. R. Marshall, sought to determine the effectiveness of fermenting cottonseed meal to reduce the danger from feeding it. A thorough investigation was made of the Allison method. It was found that the fermenting of the cottonseed meal would reduce the risk, but more investigations along this line are called for. It was found perfectly safe to use a light food of cottonseed meal, so that it may be used to some extent for hog feeding when fermented and fed with corn meal. This means a great deal in the development of our hog industry and adds another strong argument in favor of its extension. A peculiar fact brought out by the investigation which was quite contrary to the general belief that existed among the packers and others, was that the carcasses of the hogs that received the cottonseed meal were firmer and therefore more acceptable to them than those of the corn fed hogs. Owing to the importance of this question another car load of hogs are now on experiment to try and find out to what extent cottonseed meal could be used prepared in this way and also to determine if the feeding of green stuff with the cottonseed meal would not reduce the risk from using it. Mr. Marshall is getting very encouraging results along this line, but as the experiod is yet moder wer assails of form until the beginning of our next

Cotton Breeding "The next bulletin issued, No. 79,

was on 'Cotton Breeding,' and pre-pared by R. L. Bennett. The improvement of the cotton plant, especially so as to increase its early maturity and productiveness is the subject of Professor Bennett's investigations. This work is altogether original on his part and consequently takes high rank among investigations of this nature. By elaborate experiment and careful observation he had found that a certain type of cotton plant gives much better results in these directions than another. That is, that the cotton plant with short joints and the first fruit limbs near the ground produces earlier cotton than that with long joints and the first fruit limbs some distance from the ground. It is easy to see that he has here a basis for selection by means of which much improvement may ultimately be made in the yields from the cotton crop. It has to be recognized that the cotton crop is and will continue for all time to be the main crop of the south and consequently the improvement of the plant so as to increase the crop is a subject of general and great importance. By selecting seed from the type of plant which Mr. Bennett carefully describes in his bulletin any planter may make a great increase in the yield of his crop and do it cheaply without having to send away for high priced seed.

Peaches in Texas

"The subject of 'Peach Growing in Teas' is embodied in bulletin No. 80 written by E. J. Kyle. This bulletin has been exceedingly popular because it not only treats of a subject of much interest to a large portion of our state but also because of the stage of development of this industry. This bulletin treats of almost every feature connected with the planting and care of a peach orchard. Owing to the adaptability of some parts of this state to this industry immense strides have been made in its development and while the natural conditions have enabled many to make marked success at peach growing, yet many others expended a great deal of labor and money in this direction without fully informing themselves as to the best practices in regard to planting and cultivation. In addition to giving details as to the preparation and laying out of an orchard, time to plant, pruning and cultivation, much good advice is given to the grower who already has established an orchard and wishes to make it as productive as possible. Advanced practices in orchard management are described; such as the benefits of cultivation, the growing of cover crops, the thinning of the fruit and many other matters of practical detail."

Alfalfa Testing

being used by our farmers led Dr. O. M. Ball to make it the subject of special investigation. After collecting a large number of samples being bought by our farmers for seed purposes from various states, he prepared bulletin No. 61. under the title of "Alfalfa Seed Testing." This bulletin describes good alfalfa seed and tells how to test it for purity. It is surprising the amount of noxious weeds are being introduced into our state through the purchase of alfalfa and other seeds. It would seem that for seed to be adulterated would be crime enough initself, but for it to be such exceedingly injurious weeds as Russian thistle, dock and half a dozen others equally injurious makes the matter of seed purchasing one of or prepare material on popular topics immense importance to our farming interests. Dr. Ball has had many letmation to draw upon. Up to this ters from parties sending him samtime we have issued seven bulletins ples indicating that they had actually since last July, which is the beginning seeded portions of their farm down to Russian thistle and other like weeds when they thought they were getting the very purest kind of alfalfa seed. Of course, these weed seeds are in the alfalfa seed because of careless cleaning. but from the results of Dr. Ball's investigation we have reason to believe that such weeds as bur clover and sweet clover have been actually mixed with the alfalfa seed for purpose of adulteration. Not only is the purity of the seed discussed in this bulletin, but also the methods of testing its vitality. After preparing his ground carefully and spending a lot of labor on it it is very disheartening to one to find that a very small proportion of the alfalfa seed sown germinates, but by taking the caution of testing the vitality of the seed, that is, testing the germination of it, in a way described by Dr. Ball in his bulletin such losses might be prevented. The investigation of alfalfa alone makes it seed law" in the state, so that the man who purchases seed may have some assurance as to its germinating and also as to its purity. Canada, Germany and other countries have very rigid laws in this respect and the fact of the matter is that because of their laws and the further fact that we have none relating to this matter is the reason seeds from other countries. They cannot sell such seed in their own country and consequently send it off to others. Just for the same reason states without feed laws are being made the dumping ground for worthless feeds that cannot be sold in such a state as Texas, where a feed law is in force.

About Rice Industry

"The subject of 'Maintaining the Fertility of Rice Soils' is treated of in bulletin No. 82 and prepared by G. S. Frans. This is a very thorough description of the food requirements of rice, rice irrigation waters and the chemical composition of rice soils. The treatment of rice soils is given considerable attention. This bulletin considering the development of our rice industry is a very timely one and will no doubt assist the rice grower in keeping up the productiveness of his

"The matter of increasing the fertility of the soil by inoculation is perhaps one of the most timely subjects which could receive the attention of an investigator. Mr. Ball took up this subject at an early state in its development, but found as a result of his careful and extensive investigation that the farmers were being vastly deceived in reference to it. Magazine writers and some prominent authorities in the scientific circles theorized and built up wonderful developments as to what night be done through soil inoculation. It is not necessary to go into the history of this subject further than to say that Dr. Ball has published the results of his investigations in bulletin No. 83, entitled 'Nitro-Culture.' He shows that the inoculating material which our seedsmen were selling to our farmers at a high price and which the department of agriculture was sending out was practically worthless for this purpose. In this bulletin he describes extensively his experiments with alfalfa, proving the worthlessness of this prepared inoculating material and also showing that the germ forming from bur clover will prepare land for the growing of alfalfa. His investigations have prevented a wasteful expenditure of money for worthless inoculating material. He is still conducting investigations along this line and promising results are being obtained for future

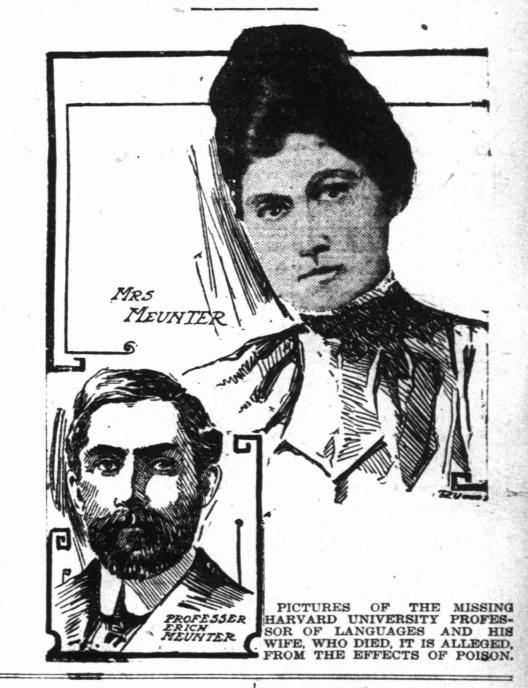

publication. Tomato Crop Important

"It is said that every American family eats on an average fifteen cans of canned tomatoes and that the total production of canned tomatoes runs over 150,000,000 cans for each of the past ten years. This represents the importance of the crop in one direction. The other would make mention of the great popularity of the tomato for consumption in a fresh state. There are communities in Texas especially adapted for the growing of early tomatoes and our sub-station at Troupe is doing all that it can by way of investigations along this line. The superintendent of the sub-station, W. S. Hotchkiss, and Edward C. Green prepared bulletin No. 84 on the subject of 'Tomato Fertilizers at Troupe.' The experiments reported cover two years' work with a great variety of fertilizers, also including some variety tests. It also found that acid phosphate gave more beneficial results than any other fertilizer, and that lime and wood ashes were valueless. It also found that the acid phosphate increased the early maturity of the crop, which is a fact of prime importance considering the great price which the early crop always brings over the latter.

Food Discrimination

"The bulletin in preparation is to be issued by the 'Food Control,' of which B. C. Pittuck has direct charge. Be-sides containing much general information regarding stock foods on the Texas market, it will contain nearly 1.300 analyses of these foods. It will place in the farmers' hands an accurate guide as to the foods to buy, so that he may get the greatest value for his money. It will show the analyses which the manufacturer guarantees and it will also show the actual analyses so that the feeder will be able to tell whether the statements of the manufacturers are reliable or not. This should be of great assistance to the farmer and of vast application to business done in stock foods in this state because of the by-products which come from such large interests as those of our cotton, rice, sugar and others. "I wish you would make a special note of the fact that any of these bulletins may be secured by forwarding a request for them to the Director of Experiment Stations, College Station. They are sent free."

BROOKS OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

Candidate for Governor Speaks at Greenville

7 - 49 ADDRESS LENGTHY

Railroads, Corporations and Local Option Urged as Important Issues

Special to The Telegram. GREENVILLE, Texas, May 5 .- . Judge M. M. Brooks of Dallas opened his campaign for governor of Texas here this afternoon before a large audience. Judge Brooks spoke in a tent and was enthusiastically received. Railroads, corporations and local option were presented as important issues by Judge Brooks, who was introduced by Wm, Pierson. In his introductory speech Mr. Pierson said:

Jan de i

"We have assembled from all over Hunt county and the several magnificent counties of north and northwest Texas, and several from more distant parts of our state, to proclaim and to assist in launching the candidacy for governor of one whom we know, and in knowing, love, trust and respect in the highest degree; and one whom all Texas has just cause to appreciate and honor.

"A native of the state of Jefferson Davis, and breathing the inspiration and determination of the hard and stirring times succeeding the close of the civil war, he grew into manhood with the fearlessness and singleness of purpose and character that has so peculiarly marked his career. "Fellow citizens, we can rely on his aithfulness and ability. Reared among us, having fought the battles of life with us, loving the good and common things of life, we can entrust the great multifarious and complicated affairs of government into his hands. He will keep the trust. We know his courage. For twenty years he fought for local option and moral reform when it was very impopular, and now in the face of arrogant corporate power he will stand for and in the interests of the plain people. Like the late lamented Governor James S. Hogg, the railroads cannot swerve him, and while he is a conservative in desiring to be reasonable and fair to all interests. yet with his splendid abilities he stands as the conservator of the interests of the people."

A summary of Judge Brooks' views as presented in his speech is as fol-

1. The duty of the governor is to advise the legislature of conditions of the state from broad standpoint of the interest of all the people, and make recommendations of legislation.

2. Public education-Public schools should be run six months in the year; the benefit of the text book law should be extended to all, including large cities. The Agricultural and Mechanical college, the University of Texas, the normal and industrial schools should receive generous treatment and support from the state, and brought to a high standard. Public school lands and proceeds derived from the lease, use and sale of same should be managed so as to produce best re-

3. Asylums-Management of the asylums should be brought to high and uniform standards of efficiency. Accommodations of insane asylums are inadequate and should be increased to meet the demands. Temporary accommodations should be furnished until adequate permanent additions can be made. The state should not suffer an insane person to be confined for one hour in a prison for common 4. State departments-An up to date, economical and uniform system of bookkeeping and accounting and inspection should be provided by state departments and all state institutions.

Do You Want to Know

What You Swallow? There is a growing sentiment in this country in favor of MEDICINES OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. It is but natural that one should have some interest in the composition of that which he or she is expected to swallow, whether it be food, drink or Recognizing this growing disposition on the part of the public, and satisfied that the fullest publicity can only add to the well-earned reputation of his medicines, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has "taken time by the forelock," as it were, and is publishing broadcast a list of all the ingredients entering into his leading medicines, the "Golden Medical Discovery" the popular liver invigorator, stomach tonic, blood purifier and heart regulator; also of his "Favorite Prescrip-tion" for weak, over-worked, brokendown, nervous and invalid women.

This bold and out-spoken movement on the part of Dr. Pierce, has, by showing exactly what his well-known medicines are composed of, completely disarmed all harping critics who have heretofore unjustly attacked them. A little pamphlet has been compiled, from the standard medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, showing the strongest endorsements by leading medical writers of the several ingredients which enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines. A copy of this little book is mailed free to any one desiring to learn more concerning the valuable, native, medicinal plants which enter into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines. uniform system of accounting and inspection for county officials. 6. Taxation-The constitution intends that every property owner shall contribute his just share of taxes in proportion to the value of his property. Judge Brooks does not believe the entire work of past legislatures and governors on this subject have been in vain, and does not favor the adoption of an entirely new scheme of taxation. Railroads and other corporations enjoying concessions from the government should not be put upon the same plane of taxation with the individual, the value of their charter rights and privileges should be estimated in taxing them. He approves the measures enacted by the last legislature taxing railroads and other corporations. There should be no tax on thrift; and he would, therefore, favor repealing the occupation tax upon useful callings, and make good the revenue thereby cut off by increasing the occupation tax upon the liquor traffic. 7. Corporations-Creation and operation of corporations should be so guarded as to protect the public and is not to be tolerated. Corporations must be uthities of the people and not permitted to become their masters. Reasonable and just safeguards and restrictions will not hurt honest and useful corporations.

8. Railroads-Consolidation of railroads should be restricted and kept strictly within constitutional limits. The power and jurisdiction to regulate and control freight and passenger rates is vested in the railroad commission and the governor has no authority to deal directly with such rates. No one advocates taking away the power from the commission and restoring it to the legislature. He favors the lowest rates which can be had, and would exercise all his influence and authority to that end. He will not make promises which

14. Prohibition of Liquor Traffic under local option is urged as an issue. Judge Brooks opposes the Willacy bill, would vigorously enforce the law and says liquor interests and railroads are arrayed against him and will be found in alignment for one candidate. 15. He stands for enforcement of all laws of the state, and says the constitution makes the governor the chief of the forces charged with execution of the laws. The law against murder is unnecessarily complicated, and should be stripped of its technicalities not necessary to the protection of innocence and made as speedy and easy of enforcement as the law against theft. Laws against minor offenses, including the gambling and the Sunday laws, are necessary to be enforced. Prohibition laws should be enforced with faithfulness and fidelity. He pledges the people to use with vigor and determination every means within his power to cause them to be effectually enforced. The anti-trust laws are not complained of as lacking in scope of their prohibitions or severity of punishment, but the complaint is that they are not enforced. Certain officers are charged with their execution, and the legislature may make additional provision for their enforcement, and as it is the duty of the governor "to cause the laws to be faithfully executed," no legitimate means necessary to the effectual discharge of that duty with respect to the anti-trust laws should be withheld from him.

Upon the views expressed in his speech he submits his candidacy to the people with confidence that they will give due consideration and exercise their suffrage to the best interests of the people.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE TO TEXAS

North German Lloyd Coming to Galveston

NEW YORK, May 5.-Galveston, Texas, has been considered the southern port for the erection of the United States immigration station, according to a statement made today by Frederick Von Pilis, director of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company.

He said the company plans to establish a line from Bremen to a southern port for the purpose of landing immigrants from the rural districts of Europe near the southwestern states and territories. He continued: "I discussed the matter with Commissioner General of Immigration Sargent and held an extended conference with Baron Speck Von Sternberg, the German ambassador, who is especially southwest, particularly of the state of Texas, and who will shortly make & tour of that portion of the country. "We will have Galveston as our American terminal port. If this is decided upon. Commissioner Sargent assured me that the government would, in all likelihood, proceed immediately to erect the contemplated landing station at that point."

Eggs by the Pound

In view of the fact that there has been introduced in the Iowa legislature a law making it manditory to sell hen fruit by the pound in that state, the following from the pen of E. T. Brown of Reading, England, furnishes food for reflection: In some parts of England, and on the continent of Europe generally, the system of selling eggs by weight rather than by number, is quickly coming into vogue. It is a system which possesses many advantages, and its more common adoption would be beneficial to producers and consumers alike. Under existing conditions there is little or no advantage in producing very large eggs; in fact, it is sometimes a mistake to do so, as it stands to reason a hen cannot produce as many large eggs as medium-sized ones, in proportion to the amount of food consumed. Provided the eggs are of average size, then there is no inducement to aim at increasing it, as no more money is procurable. The system of grading, which is universally adopted on the continent, overcomes the difficulty to a limited extent, as in this case the eggs are graded into three sizes, and, sold at different prices. All the eggs of a certain size and weight are classed as firsts, and command the highest price; the medium sized ones are called seconds, and realize a lower figure; while all the ones less than seconds are classed as thirds and fetch a comparatively low figure. While this system is certainly preferably to sending all sorts and conditions, all shapes, sizes, and weights mixed up together in the same box, yet the ideal method is selling by weight, at so many cents per pound. There would then be every inducement to encourage large eggs, and breeders would pay more strict attention to this very important point. If eggs were soid by weight, and not by number, some breeds which are now regarded as useless would command at. tention. The Black Hamburg, for instance, lays an enormous number of eggs, but they are too small for marketing purposes. No other breed equals the Black Hamburg in respect to the quantity of eggs produced, it being no uncommon thing for a hen to lay upwards of 200 per annum. There is authentic proof of an individual hen that laid 256 eggs in ten and a half months, a record of which any breed might be justifiably proud. For actual weight of eggs produced per annum the Black Hamburg outclasses all other varieties, but at the present time while eggs are sold per dozen, or so many for 25 cents, it is a breed that cannot be recommended. The system of selling eggs by weight is one that is worthy of the careful consideration of practical poultry keepers, as it is a fairer and more busi-Touching the Iowa law, the Chicago Chronicle says that dealers and purchasers of eggs in Chicago applaud the action of the lowa legislature, which has passed a bill requiring hens to lay eggs of a certain weight, in effect, although, of course, the bill specifies that the eggs on the market must come up to a certain standard. It is shown that purchasers of eggs are given the worst of it when they buy by the dozen, and the Chicago council may pass an ordinance requiring eggs to be sold by weight instead of by the To illustrate this fact, City Weign-

master Grein selected two dozen eggs at random, and there was a difference of what would constitute two eggs in weight. It is charged that the dealers sift their eggs, selling the large ones at fancy prices and working off smaller ones upon small purchasers. The idea of the bill is to remedy this injustice and gives housewives what they are paying for.

It is a well known fact among sheepmen that wrinkly sheep are the heaviest shearers. The trained eye of the breeder can soon determine which these are. Encourage This Trade A curious lawsuit came up in a

London court recently which involved a balance against a corn dealer of 4 shillings "for dried flies," "What on earth do you do with them?" asked the astonished judge. "They are used in the making of chicken food," replied the plaintiff, He explained that a bag of eighty-one pounds of dried flies was supplied to the defendant at 8 pence a pound, and, according to the custom of the trade, the gross weight was charged for. The defendant contended that he ought to pay only for the net weight. "You surprise me when you talk about eighty-one pounds of dried flies in bulk," said the judge. "Where do you find all these flies?"

"Where from?" "America." It is an export trade that deserves encouragement .- New York Tribune.

His Best Answer The meekest kind of a little boy joined a Sunday school class in a West Philadelphia church. He did not know the other scholars, and appeared nervous, half scared and ready to cry at any moment. The teacher, however, treated him kindly, and the lesson proceeded without any outburst. After a short reading from the Bible the teacher began to question the pupils on their last lesson, and asked: "Who led the children of Israel into Canaan?" As no one answered she looked from boy to boy. At last her gaze rested on the new boy. He started guiltily, and said, between sobs:

"It wasn't me, honest, teacher. ] just moved here last week from Ohio." No woman ever really respects her husband unless he shocks her once in a while by using cuss words.

A WONDERFUL CURE.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I had a bad case of catarrh and suffered with terrible Catarrhal Headache for about four years. My nose and head were in an awful condition. Nothing did me any good until I bought a bottle of Thurmond's Catarrh Cure from R. E. Clements of Goldthwaite, Texas.

I began using it according to directions, but my head and nose were so irritated that I could hardly stand to use it. After using it about one week I went back to the druggist, intending to return the bottle and get my dollar back, as he had guaranteed it to me. He offered me my money back, but begged that I try the remainder of the bottle, and assuring me that I could get my money back then in case I was dissatisfied in any way. Before I had taken all the bottle my nose and head healed up, my headache stopped, and I was cured sound and well, and have not had a headache since. I gladly give this testimonial, hoping the medicine will be used by all sufferers and help them as it has me. Respectfully,

Wall street men wrote to him for advice in regard to their future dealings and asked for their "lucky days and months" and from Chicago came letters from men in the wheat market seeking dates for rises and falls. The professor kept these secrets strictly guarded in his house on Parliament hill, and it was only after his death that he was known to have been a confirmed believer in astrology. The interest which is taken in the mystic by prominent men is also shown by the number of letters Sir William Crookes and Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent scientists who dabble in spiritualism, receive weekly from public personages.

ROYAL COUPLE TO LIVE IN FACTORY.

Kaiser's Second Son to Settle in Former Workshop

Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.) (BY MALCOLM CLARKE.)

BERLIN, May 5 .- That the kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel Friederich, and his young bride are going to live in a factory sounds rather incredible, but it is nevertheless a fact.

The young couple, who have already grown tired of Villa Ingenheim at Potsdam, which the kaiser furnished and decorated for them more according to his own taste, it is said, than according to the taste of his son and daughter-in-law, who have for some time been house hunting and are now said to have decided to make their future home in the castle of Caputs, an old building which for many years, was used as a factory of leather ware and linen goods.

By purchasing this old castle they will get back the property which came into the possession of the Hohenzollern family more than 300 years ago. but which since then has passed through many hands.

The original castle, part of which is still standing, was built in the middle of the sixteenth century by Kurfuerst Joachim, who called in the famous Dutch painter Gallus Kittner, to decorate four large halls in it. In 1605 the castle was lent to a Count Heinrich Von Bylaudt for three years, but in 1608 it again became the summer home of the Hohenzollerns.

King Frederick the Great sold the castle for 32,000 thalers to an English manufacturer counsellor of Commerce Smith, who used it as a factory of Turkish yarn and latter it was used for tanning and pressing English leather. Since 1820 it has been in the possession of members of the family Von Thumen.

In its present condition the castle is far from being a fit place for the home of the prince and princess and extensive repairs will have to be made, but the young princess has fallen in love with its old walls and there is little doubt that the kaiser will have cousin of the czar of Russia he has found scant mercy before the German courts. Evidently forgetting that he longer in Russia the prince treated a hotel employe at Dresden to a series of kicks because he didn't like his face, with the result that the man was injured for life.

His influential connections soon got him out on bail, but only under heavy bond, a police magistrate, after severely lecturing him, sentenced him to pay a fine of 1,000 marks on the condition that he promised to pay damages to the man who had been infured. To escape more than six months in jail, which would have been his sure lot if he hadn't paid, the prince paid the fine immediately, but when it came to arranging matters with the injured man, he absolutely refused to promise anything and a civil suit for damages was brought against him. Now the supreme court awarded the hotel employe an annuity for life of 2,600 marks, which the prince must and will pay as the czar has threatenunless he pays. ed him with all kinds of punishments

Revolutionists Lose Sympathy

Because of their recklessness the Russian revolutionists are losing the sympathy of a great many people who are anxious to see autocracy abolished. but who do not believe that crimes of the worst kind are the right foundation upon which to build a new order of things.

In order to maintain a full treasury for further struggle the revolutionists are taking into their service expert criminals. In addition to systematic attacks on banks, postoffices and government liquor stores forgery is being used on a large scale. During the past few weeks the proceeds of more than a dozen forged checks have been traced to the local "Red" fund in Odessa.

In Kieff and Kharkoff postage stamps are being manufactured on such a vast scale that the local postmasters declare that one letter out of every twenty bears a forged stamp. In Kieff a revolutionist, wearing the postal uniform the other day entered a store authorized to sell stamps where he sold and received payment for 100 roubles worth of stamps. Arrested two days later, he proved to be a locksmith, in no way connected with ordinary crime. His papers showed that he was an agent of the social revolutionaries. Revolutionists are also forging credit notes. A large number of forged notes issued in Harbin and supposed to be of Japanese origin have been traced to the Irktusk Reds.

A man named Guryeff tried by a Saratoff jury for uttering a forged check, got off with three months' imprisonment by pleading that the booty had gone to the Moscow revolutionists and furnishing the authorities with valuable information as a result of which a large number of conspirators in that city have been arrested.

the glamour of the best social customs of the Second Empire, and to cast their glamor upon all that he undertakes or superintends. A week ago the Marquis de Massa might, had he chosen to do so, have become president of another prominent Parisian club, the Cercle de la Rue Royale.

He was unanimously nominated at the recent election, but he refused to accept the presidency of this club in order a few days later to accept that of the Epatant, which as its proper name implies is devoted to the arts in general, but more particularly to that of the drama.

Within the last twenty-five years the Epatant has had for its presidents General Comte de Gramont, the Marquis de Vogue, member of the French academy, and at present it is under the direction of a leading representative of the imperial nobility, who is the grandson of Regnier, the famous jurisconsul and of the military hero, General MacDonald.

Works of Art Bought

All great countries should have millionaires. We no longer have any, or to be more exact we have never had any; and now we see our art treasure gradually falling into the hands of wealthy foreigners who consider it a point of honor to enrich their own country at the expense of others'. For the last few years we have witnessed the progressive dispersement of our most treasured collections of paintings, sculpture and other objects of art which had their origin in France during the eighteenth century Nearly all of the purchases have been made by wealthy Americans, who have sent the acquired objects over to their own country to be viewed by and to develop the taste of forthcoming generations of their countrymen.

enormous was the output of art at the period to which I have referred that during three years, from 1891 to 1894, every day without exception there was an auction sale of paintings. statuary, etc., with the result that the works of the masters of that time were scattered over the entire world. The only things which were not car-rled away were the monuments, work of our great architects such as Gabriel and Servandoni, which were in the nature of things rooted to the soil. Notwithstanding the fact that they cannot be taken away, these buildings attract the covetous glances of the wealthy foreigners, who are, after all, the only people who can afford to buy them.

IS DIVORCE LAW VALID

American Decision Causes Consternation in England

CHALLENGE LIKELY

Property May Be Attacked by Heirs Seeking for Advantage Over Children

Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)

(BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.) LONDON, May 5.-Consternation was spread over many homes when the new decisions as to the divorce law in America became public. When the federal supreme court ruled that a in another state, for by this decision thousands of marriages are rendered void and chilldren made illegitimate. There are several well known people here who have gone over to America to obtain a divorce, and have remarried on the strength of the decree so obtained, and if that marriage is not legal in any country the children are the sufferers. The situation is further complicated by a recent decision in the divorce court division in England, which has recognized the validity of a South Dakota divorce. Some consolation has been taken by the thought that unless a point is raised marriages made upon the strength of the validity of the South Dakota law will remain untouched; but such unions are not likely to remain unchallenged where heirs can obtain an advantage over the children who might be pronounced illegitimate, and in this case not a few will be able to resist the femptation of claiming property under the rights thus accorded to them.

It is to be hoped that the law will not be made retrospective. The whole question points, in my mind, to the fact that divorce is at all times incompatible with the Christian idea of marriage. That it may be desirable accasionally is undoubted, but are many things which appear individually expedient and yet are not compatible with the highest ideals for the individual and the nation. Wherever divorce is made most easy, the morale of a people is immediately af-

England Has Some Rich Ones

A sordid view of marriage is only a part of the obscured vision of the man with the muckrake, to which the president alluded in his celebrated speech on the taxation of the millionaire, "typical," he says, "of the refusal of men to see the lofty ideal, having their vision fixed only on what was vile." President Roosevelt's words have been echoed the length and breadth of this country. "The enormous fortunes of today," he is reported to have said, "both individual and corporate must be grappled with," and he has suggested a national scheme for progressive taxation and the transfer of fortunes swollen beyond healthy limits." His words have set people thinking, and although in England we do not possess a body of men who own wealth as great as any monarch, at the same time we have a fair share of rich individuals and of wealthy companies.

The total income tax of 471,526 persons who pay income tax directly was. in 1903 and 1904, according to vesterday's return 128,290,267 pounds. Out of this at least nineteen must be millionaires, possessing an income of at least 50,000 pounds per annum, which capitalized at twenty years' purchase means a million. But some of the mineteen must be much more than millionaires, for between them they pay tax on a total income of 1,968,442 pounds a year each. But although the population of the United Kingdom is well over 40,000,000, there are only 471,500 persons who own to the possession of annual income of more than 160 pounds a year. But although the exsitence of the multimillionaire cannot compare in numbers with the American plutocrats such as Rockefeller. Carnegie, Vanderbilt, Gould, etc., the men in England who are their nendants are Mr. Beit of South African fame, and Mr. Robinson, who also made his wealth in the same country; Lord Strathcona, the duke of Westminster, Lord Mount Stephen, Lord Iveagh, the duke of Devonshire and the duke of Bedford. President Roosevelt's words may annear ahead of the views of our day. but unquestionably in the near future they will be recognized to be not only justice, but the dictate of common

OUR LAY SERMON

Bexar Hotel News Stand.

God loveth a cheerful giver.-II. Corinthians, 9:7. The silver lining to the cloud of the San Francisco disaster is the readiness and alacrity with which hands were stretched forth from every portion of our common country to pour a full measure of relief into the lap of the stricken city. There was no waiting for a request to be formulated. The wires had hardly ceased ticking the first intimation of the great disaster before relief cohorts were at work in all the large cities of the country and the people were giving as only the American people respond under such circumstances. Long before the stricken citizens of the Golden Gate realized the immensity of their need, long relief trains were speeding clear across the continent on record-breaking time, each bearing a free will measure from the large hearted American people. And moneythe alleged root of all evil, was pouring in, in an almost unending stream.

And it was the spirit of the occasion that countedthat showed real sympathy for those in distress and disclosed the real brotherhood of man when the great tey came. Not one of all the large list of contributors ga, e grudgingly. The entire nation was anxious to do all it could for the stricken city.

God loveth a cheerful giver. And God must love the great American people. In this California instance every gift was given cheerfully and with no spirit of vainglory. When a Los Angeles paper claimed for itself a fuller meed of praise for the relief extended from that city than popular sentiment deemed it entitled to, a public meeting was called and the vials of righteous wrath unloosed on the head of the offender. There may have been an occasional rich man who gave for the sake of show, but John D. Rockefeller said in a public speech that the $100,000 he gave was no more in proportion than the dollar contributed by the man who was less able.

The larger cities have vied with another in the amounts given, but it was all done in the proper spiirt. New York and Chicago gave millions, but they were able to do so, and entitled to no more credit than the little hamlet that cheerfully sent in its humble mite. As Rockefeller said, it was not the amount given that counts so much as the spirit in which it was tendered. And the spirit in this instance was eminently proper.

The people of Fort Worth and all Texas responded nobly to the need for assistance in stricken California, and they gave cheerfully according to the Biblical injunction. And a few days later when the storm king held high revel at Bellevue, destroying many happy homes and scattering death and desolation in his wake, there came another opportunity to give. The first train out of Fort Worth after the Bellevue cyclone carried a car of provisions for the stricken people, and the telegraph wires were worked to get money to the God loveth a cheerful giver.

When the necessity arose for a contribution for stricken Bellevue, the people of Fort Worth and all Texas went down into their pockets cheerfully for the second time and came forth with what was needed for the exigencies of the situation. There was no growling and no complaint over the frequency of these charitable assessments. The amounts given were handed over with evidences of genuine pleasure over the fact that God Almighty had so blessed a portion of His people that they were able to contribute to the necessities of those who had been so sorely stricken.

It was a noble action. And who will not undertake to say that the returns from these gifts will be in keeping with the spirit in which they were tendered? God loveth a cheerful giver, and as God loves those who do His work, so must they be blessed and prosper according to their good deeds.

And when we consider it, is not the investment well worth the while in these days of avarice and money grasping? Is it not a good thing for the state and nation that men can find time to stop and think for a moment of the misfortunes of others and give freely and dieerfully of their substance for general relief?

Will not the strong perhaps become just a little less grasping and more disposed to give the weak an opportunity? Will not the weak and poor become just a little less envious and bitter toward the rich?

"It is more blessed to give than to receive," said the Master. And this nation of our and this great state Texas will doubtless reap a rich reward for the cheerfulness of the recent giving.

RELATION OF STOCK RAISING TO AGRICULTURE The state of Texas is making a remarkable reputa tion for the variety of products which it is producing. This is resulting from the wast variety of conditions which exist over its immense territory. So far the versatility of its industries from an agricultural standpoint are remarkable but when we consider the newness of the state we have to accept it as mere evidence of the possibilities of the future. The educational influence of the state, the agricultural college with its farmers' institutes and the different associations and the press are doing all they can to hasten the time when the state will have reached its development in all directions. As in the instance of all states in their early growth the several agricultural interests oppose each other instead of working in harmony. The attitude of the cattlemen toward the sheep rancher is but one instance of this. But Texas is beyond that point now, largely because of the intrepidity of those who see here vast possibilities by diversification. None the less sometimes it takes considerable nerve on the part of those advocating this to present the corolation of stock raising to other lines of agriculture. At a meeting of the Cattle Raisers' Association, the most influential and largest live stock organization in Texas, Professor John A. Craig, dean and director of the agricultural college of the state, presented this relation in this rather unique manner. "Those engaged in ranching do not think as a rule that they have any relation whatever with the truck grower, but let me indicate a line of thought which I think will indicate the existence of this. During the past year an estimate has shown that there were $191/2 acres in onions in this state. The entire crop was put at 7,384,000 pounds or over 300 cars of onions grown in the state of Texas. You may wonder what this has to do with our beef industry, but let me draw your attention to the fact that when a carload of onions leave Laredo to go north, there should be a carload of fat cattle leaving some other portion of our state with the steaks which are required to come under the eye of the consumer on the bill of fare as beefsteak and onions. Again when a shipment of eight carloads of cabbages leaves Corpus Christi, as was noted in the press early in March of last year, it will be well to remember that there must be a carload of cattle some where which is going to meet with this carload of cabbages and come before the consumer as cornedbeef and cabbage. When a ship load of eggs leaves Galevston, as it did in March of last year, having on board 1,656,000 eggs, all from Texas, going to New York, there should be leaving our stock yards an equivalent amount of ham to come before the consumer as ham and eggs. In other words whenever a hen cackles in the state of Texas there should be a pig squeal in yielding up the slice of ham that should be sacrificed. When you order pork chops and wheat cakes you incidentally bring together a practical demonstration of the Texas swine industry with the immense wheat fields of the Panhandle, Perhaps it has not occurred to you that there is any connection between our rice industry of the coast and the sheep rancher of the Devil's river country, but when the consumer asks for a lamb chop and rice curry he gives you a further demonstration of this corelation which cannot be refuted. When we talk about the immensity of the potato crop in Texas and the enormous consumption of potatoes, these should be items of interest to the feeders of fat cattle, for roast beef and brown potatoes are a popular dish. I might go on indefinitely hinting at this relationship, but I believe that you will be able to follow it out at your

SUMMER AMUSEMENTS

As the heated term approaches the citizens of Fort Worth have reason to congratulate themselves that in the matter of seasonable amusements and opportunities for innocent but hearty enjoyment, they are enjoying a great advantage over the residents of any other Texas city. This year the Fort Worth citizen who feels a desire to get out of the hot city environments and have a good time out where he can enjoy the fresh air, will have the choice of three places of recreation

Out at Handley, on beautiful Lake Erie, there has been established a pleasure resort that has won a warm place in the hearts of all Fort Worth people. The experience at Handley park all of last season constitutes a fond recollection with all Fort Worth people, and this season more pains and cash than ever will be expended to make this an ideal resort. The season at Lake Erie has already opened, and patrons of that resort are finding that all the promises of its management are being more than redeemed. The individual who cannot find comfort and enjoyment at Lake Erie must be too morose to appreciate any of the good things of life. There is no greater pleasure resort in all Texas, and its popularity is constantly growing.

Just north of the city a few miles on beautiful and breezy Rosen Heights, is the famous White City, of easy access. The Rosen interests have provided here some charming and elegant attractions and novel and up-to-date methods of amusement. A great deal of money has been expended in rendering the surroundings attractive and enjoyable, and the tide of pleasure seekers already turning in that direction demonstrates that the citizens of Fort Worth are not an unappreciative people. They are finding much to please them out at the White City, and Sam Rosen says before the season is half over there are going to be greater surprises than ever before.

At Arlington Heights, the terminus of the Fort Worth and Arlington Heights street railway, is beauful Lake Como, where a $10,000 amusement pavilion is being erected, and means provided for the best forms of amusement and enjoyment that the ingenuity of man can devise. The managers of the Arlington Heights enterprise realize they are up against hard competition in the other two popular resorts, and there can be no temporizing with that kind of a situation. They are preparing some joyful surprises and propose that Arlington Heights shall be remembered as the scene of the very best there is going.

And these three enterprises are great blessings to the people of Fort Worth. They answer a healthful and recreative purpose of decided advantage to every citizen. They are each and all deserving of the most liberal support and co-operation, and as the days grow warmer and the evenings longer, the tired and brain fagged citizen will gladly often hie himself to one or the other with a feeling of thankfulness that Fort Worth is blessed with three such necessary and popu-sideration of the Texas producers. While the production of cotton in this state last year showed a decrease of nearly half a million bales, the crop of the country as a whole showed an increase of more than the Texas decrease. This may simply be a matter of coincidence, but to a man up a tree it looks very much like conclusive evidence of treachery. The reduction of cotton acreage seems to have been preached with telling effect in Texas, while other cotton producing states took advantage of the Texas reduced acreage to plant cotton in their back yards and show a big increase in total production.

The tip comes from Austin that the attorney general of Texas is getting on his war paint and preparing to make the oil and lumber trusts take to the brush. His trip to Washington is said to be in connection with recent developments in the oil trust situation, but ordinary people do not understand why it was necessary for him to travel further than the state of Missouri. The attorney general of that state has developed evidence it is said, that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is owned by the Standard people, and that evidence ought to be all that is necessary in the present emergency.

The idea of holding the state democratic convenion out at Handley park is a good one, and is the next best thing to holding it in Fort Worth. And the people of this city should continue in the work of trying to land the convention, in spite of the few knockers who are ready to concede that it should be taken else-

What is the difference between the Fort Worth Live Stock exchange and the Galveston Cotton exchange? Looking straight at you, Editor Fitzgerald.—

"Fitz" is busy, and The Telegram will answer the interrogatory. The difference between the Fort Worth Live Stock exchange and the Galveston Cotton exchange is that the Live Stock exchange is located in Fort Worth and is being sued for alleged violation of the anti-trust law by the attorney general. The Galvestion Cotton exchange is located in the home of the attorney general and is not under investigation.

. . . . Fort Worth citizens-that is, some of them-became very much wrought up when the news came from Austin that the attorney general had filed a suit against the exchange at that place, charging it with violating the anti-trust laws. The exchange, no doubt, means much, financially to Fort Worth, but she should be very careful about how she attempts to protect alleged violators of the law.-Bonham News,

There is no disposition in Fort Worth to protect any violators of the law. There was simply a desire to know why Fort Worth institutions had been selected as object lessons, while no attention was apparently being made to complaints emanating from other sources.

The man with the hoe the other day was the object of many eulogies in congress and M. C.s from all over the country, the very foundation on which the civilization of the nation rests. All of which was very pleasant indeed to the farmer, but a little more legislation of practical benefit to him and a little less talk would no doubt be more appreciated by him.-Terrell Tran-

The congressional heart always warms to the farmer during campaign years, and recent developments at Washington indicate this year is to be no exception to the general rule. From now until November members of congress will find much joy in planting hayseed and other agricultural accomplishments.

In its Wednesday's edition The Fort Worth Telegarm has a very instructive editorial commending the federal government for punishing railroad officials who were found guilty of giving rebates. The Telegram's comment on the effort of the state of Texas to penalize the beef trust for violating the anti-trust laws will now be awaited with interest. Texas headquarters of the beef trust are at Fort Worth, in which city immense factories employing an army of laborers are conducted.—Beaumont Journal.

The Telegram is heartily in favor of enforcing all the laws of the land fearlessly and without favor, for laws are placed upon the statute books to be enforced. If there is a beef trust operating in this city it should be made subservient to Texas laws, and The Telegram believes it will be done. But the mere matter of allegation does not establish a fact. It requires proof always to insure conviction.

IDLERS NOTE BOOK

What Fort Worth needs is a hansom.

Strange that none of the speakers at meetings of the Factory Club, Board of Trade or even city council have been brave enough to boldly state this truth, but truth it is, even though it hurts.

All of us have recognized, in spite of our boasted packing houses, the flouring mills, the longest railroad time table in the state and the Mead system of artesian water works, that there is an absent quantity in our esthetic atmosphere. Perhaps we've spoken of it, but only behind closed doors, or in low tones when surrounded by a quiet circle of trusty friends.

Yet the truth, bald, uncompromising, and inexorable remains: This city needs a hansom and it needs it

Other cities have hansoms, not Texas cities to be sure, but that is no reason why Fort Worth should not lead in this important particular as it does in others. We have a depot with a heavenward pointing spire and a tile floor which challenges comparison with that of any city in the South. The incoming stranger, alighting from any one of the 132 trains daily, is greeted by this magnificent pile of brick even before he has finished paying the Pullman porter for brushing him off. If he, the stranger, walk through the depot and gaze up Main street, he will see towering high at the other end, the finest court house in any state below the line of the Ohio river. He will see a waiting line of cabs, hacks, busses, carriages, surreys and even broughams, but no hansoms will rise up before his anxious eyes. And then inwardly, instantly, immediately, even though he may not discern the immediate cause, he will be seized in his subterranean consciousness with a realization all he has heard of Fort Worth may not be wholly true after all. The city is there, just as the descriptive matter he read told him it would be, but something which he cannot specify yet undeniably misses, is lacking, and he starts out to see the town unsatisfied

Thus are we handicapped in the case of every visitor who arrives.

Supposing we had a hansom.

It might be a little off style as becoming a pioneer. The driver might be a little seedy in his looks and the cob could even be a little spavined, somewhat frowsy, and not overly swift in action, but think of the effect it would have on the incoming stranger at the

"Keb, sir," the seedy driver would shout, touching the brim of his dingy beaver, the moment the stranger got outside the depot doors, and instantly the visitor would recognize the genuineness of the Panther City's claim to being the real thing among the burgs of the Lone Star state. The psychic instant for making a cosmopolitan impression on the stranger's sense of eternal fitness would have been skillfully, unobtrusively, but none the less successfully seized, and half the game would have been won.

Do you suppose that after having been greeted by a hansom at the station a stranger could ever again refer to Fort Worth as a town? Oslerize the suggestion. To him it would be a city from that instant, henceforth and forever afterward.

Of course after having been met by the hansom, the stranger wouldn't ride in it. That would be spoiling the usefulness of the vehicle. Besides nobody rides in a hansom when they want to get anywhere. What

St. Louis has a hansom which for years has had a stand down on Financial row. It is hauled by a white horse, which sometimes takes it as far as Broadway, one block distant, to keep the wheels from getting sunk too far in the asphalt pavement by standing in

The hansom was used some during the world's fair year by visitors who had a weird idea the thing chants, seeing the old two-wheeler rumbling down the street, would walk out of doors as grocery clerks are attracted by a passing fire wagon, and remark to their acquaintances, "Ah, another stranger in town."

We have many worthy projects now before us for consideration and contribution (principally the latter.) We are building a Y. M. C. A., nineteen churches, a market house, an auditorium and a few other things, but in the multitudinousness of our endeavors, let us not for the sake of our future greatness overlook this immediate and pressing need. Let the hansom be torially dignified colaborers do.-Chicago

CRUISE OF THE CONQUEROR

A detective story, full of exciting scenes; a story of the sea, smelling of ting even unto death and introducng a modern villain—this describes ise of the Conqueror," a book me 300 pages written by G. Sid-Paternoster (L. C. Page & Co., England Building, Boston, Mass.,

The book is described as "being the er adventures of the Motor Piby the same author and shows that an ill-favored male specimen of humanity comes to life, after having umped over a high cliff of almost olid rock into the sea. while going at probably the rate of fifty miles an ir, the dive being into water several fathoms in depth. A kindly intending gentleman in merry old England has, so we are to infer from his direct statements, not had any desire for oring for many years following the noument to a possible tragedy, but through the working of that malady of the human mind called "motoring," become attached to the sport by water and it is his opinion that the sensation to be acquired by feeling the bounding billowy sea pushed out from under one's boat a fare more thrilling one. than even seeing telegraph poles gather themselves together and form into a veritable fence of the public highway or private driveway, while creeping over a broad, firm road in a sixtyhorsepower machine that is "let out Imbued with this enthusiasm, tradsferred to the water. Mr. Sutgrove, the kindly hearted hero telling his own with proper embellishments, put into his mouth by the author, constructs a motor boat of his own design, by the aid of his engineer Sanders, who probably does most of the work and a liberal share of the designing, too, and names her "The Good fortune again favors our good-hearted friend, Sutgrove-or, how else could he have lived to tell his story in such a fascinating manner? He escapes and plunges into the water to make his enemy hold to the belief that he is a dead one for good and all. Only, later, he revives to learn that the bird of a villain has flown over the bounding main, while the water is being dragged for his own dead corpse.

a villainous blunderbuss with true vil-

The body is not found and the supposed corpse, with true detective instinct, seeks out the Scotland Yard man and tells him the whole of what has occurred, much to the delight of that official. Sutgrove's wife is informed of the ruse and the newspapers publish accounts of his death; sad, half-column interviews and engraved plates showing the man who committed suicide by jumping into the very spot where his motor boat had finished second-all for the reason that she hadn't finished first and captured the international trophy.

The plot thickens. Mannering is recognized (by his boat) as the pirate who held up an Atlantic liner for a few hundred thousands in diamonds from South Africa. Later he vists Mrs. Sutgrove and Sutgrove appears in time to scare him to within a fraction of an inch of his life. The story would have been an admirable short story for magazine sale had the author at this point made his villain commit suicide and to his dying words say to Mrs. Sutgrove: "I allus loved yer, don't yer know it, kid? Git them diamonds outen de floater and keep 'em fer yer lit' gat I love-love-ye both, aaah.'

But the author, with a true insight into the possibilities of a good thing in the hand being worth a half dozen in the other fellow's pocket, digs on and on and gets the reader aroused to a pitch of man hunting excitement during the next and main portion of the novel, in which the villain is "chased to earth on the water and promptly escapes, or, at least, disappears, in much the same manner as he did in "The Motor Pirate."

The next question is, how long will it be until we are permitted to hear from the same Mannering in a new and more exciting guise? The author had best get a move on himself. Mannerhair is already streaked with gray and he is likely to get on a prolonged drunk, not the author, but Mannering, and die of the "snakes," which is not by any means the proper way for such a high-handed and enterprisingly ambitious villain to die-not at all. Probably, like "Don Q." we may next hear of Mannering as of one who always was, is and is not supposed to be ever going to die. He is a character worth the time to read and worth the effort to study, is

PEKIN DOGS

In "Round About My Pekin Garden," Mrs. Archibald Little, the author, gives a most interesting description of the quaint Pekin dogs.

The best ones are remarkably strong and sturdily built for their size, and though they have a waist the hind quarters are well developed. Their distinguishing feature, common to all Pekingese dogs, is their lion port and haughty, not to say arrogant, bearing. A Chinese connoisseur, Mr. Wang Yun, attached to the legation, has lately pronounced that the head should be large, the chest wide, the ears big. the neck short, the eyes prominent, the legs short, the two front ones bent so as to form a circle, the tail curled upward and not inclining to either side, the nose also turned upward. He considers yellow and white and black and white the best colors; next to these he puts the altogether black and altogether yellow, which last Chinese call golden-coated lions. After these come red and fox or wolf colors. Chinese say a dog has a jade button, the mark of high rank, when it has a small round white mark just over the top of the head. When it has four white paws they call it. "stood in the snow." Strange stories are told of the way in which the muzzle of these pets is reduced to the proper flatness. Each palace dog, for instance, is said to have a particular slave-girl, one of whose duties is to massage the beast's nose. Another practice is to hang up a piece of very dry meat against a The dog springs at the meat, but cannot bite it. So he hammers his nose flat, while his eyes pop more

Louis Joseph Vance, author of "The Private War" and "Terence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer." is now writing a series of stories for the Popular Magazine, based on the aventures of Faraday Bobbs, a bright, hustling young American who makes a business of going wherever history is being made, and there taking photographs for the public prints. It will be seen at once that such a character offers tremendous possibilities, and, if we may judge by the first two stories, published in April and May, Mr. Vance is making the most of his opportunities. The May number of this interesting publication contains a wealth of stories, long and short, which remind one in a way of the lives of famous men, inasmuch as there is always "something doing" in them. The novelette, "Rowdy of the 'Cross L,' " by B. M. Bower, is a tale of ranch life, in which the characters are drawn with amazing skill. Time taken to read it will be well spent. American

HOW MARK TWAIN WORKS

THE FAMOUS HUMORIST WORKING IN BED.

NEW YORK, May 5 .- "I have never reached the happy stage where I can smoke two cigars at once." said Mark Twain, as he lay reclining in his big mahogany four-poster, "but I have found as a compromise the scheme of smoking in bed."

HAZEL OF HEATHERLAND

"Hazel of Heatherland," by Mabel Barnes-Grundy (The Baker & Taylor Co., New York, $1.50), does not open in its first few lines with a description of landscape, nor the scenery of a morning room, nor yet the minute details of the bric-a-brac to be found in a modern hallway, but there is, on the second page, something worth while,

"Our garden on a June afternoon, when the sun is shining after a soft shower of rain, is the most perfect thing in the world. Its scents are the sweetest-the warm, damp earth, the freshly cut grass, the wet roses and honeysuckle and the whiffs of hay and meadow-sweet which creep through the little gaps in the hedge in the rear from the fields in the distance. Its colors are the lovliest. Could anything be more perfect than the creamy white of a butterfly poised above the flaming scarlet of a poppy? Or a purple pansy, with its eyes full of tears, turning its velvety face upward to the

In comparison to this, a few pages further on, we find a refreshing conversation. The gardener is talking to Hazel, who is telling the story. Casually mentioning a man's name and that of his wife, Hazel is surprised to hear the gardener say:

"Well, what of her? She seems a decent sort of woman. "That woman will go to hell. Yes, she may clean churches and polish up the brass on the font, but she'll go to hell all the same. Quite sartin sure, No woman call tell lies like her and keep out of hell-fire.'

The plot of the novel is simple, but strong, deep in spots and sparkling with brilliant passages, showing an insight into human character that savors of genius. Hazel tells the story herself. As she is the heroine of the story, this may appear strange, but it is not so. Hazel explains her likes, dislikes, struggles and victories in such a way that one appears to be only reading her dairy and one feels that she is due an apology from the reader for having become so intimately acquainted with her on such short notice as 389 pages of print.

Hazel has a proposal; she refuser the man; visits her aunt; become engaged to another man; finds that she cannot love the last and decides to reconsider in the matter of the first; her aunt has the sensible temerity to write to the first, who is an entire stranger to her, he comes and all is well.

The novel is chiefly valuable for its exhibition of the inner nature—the whys and wherefores of a woman's na-

Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis, $1.50) is used by Anne Katherine Green for another of her mystifying detective stories. The tale comprises events never even dared before in tales of society malefactors and loses none of the real detective story features, the identity of the guilty muderer and robber remaining in doubt until the last. A romance threads the story, this however not being the strong point of the author. Devotion of a bright-witted woman on the other hand is faithfully portrayed in a way that insures sufficient solicitude upon the part of the reader. Reading Advances Almost 6 Points. Market Very Active-Short Covering Prominent Feature

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, May 5.-The gradually mcreasing sentiment in favor of higher prices for stocks, connected with the fear of more favorable developments over the holiday and a rumor that there would be no strike in the anthracite coal regions more than overbalanced the one bearish feature of the day's news in the shape of a rather unfavorable bank statement, and caused an increasing desire among shorts to even up their transactions, resulting in a very active week-end don, with short covering a feature and substantial additions to the gains noted yesterday the general rule. In almost all instances opening figures were above the level of yesterday's closing and barring a slight reaction during the initial trading the trend of prices was upward throughout, the close being strong, with prices practically at the best, showing substantial gains, the most conspicuous of which was in Reading, which closed at the high point, 5% above final figures of the previous session. Tennessee Coal and Iron showed a gain of 414 points and Union Pacific closed a point higher, while substantial fractional gains were numerous. Yesterday there was an interchange of opinions and beliefs between some of the leading bankers and capitalists of Wall street. Nothing formal, but rather a grouping of ideas in a casual sort of way, and the upshot was a general argument on several propositions, viz: That the worst of the urgent liquidation has been seen; that there is no longer any danger, barring accidents, of any one of the big people being caught in difficulties; that more money generally than is needed there has been sent to San Francisco, a large part of which will return as soon as the panicky desire on the part of the San Francisco banks to strengthen themselves has subsided; that the losses, which fall upon the foreign inurance companies, will be financed on the other side rather than by the sale of American securities, and that the new conditions, arising from the inflow of foreign gold and the enorous liquidation brought about by the San Francisco disaster, will make the mey market easier, and make the furation of that ease longer than could have been hoped for a few weeks ago. There is no let up in general usiness, the crop outlook is good, andthere is nowhere in sight any evidence of abating of prosperity. These opinions are shared in by the long interests in the street. They do not mean that these people are now bullish and will resume operations for the advance. It means rather that they believe the turn has come and are able, therefore, to take a much more cheerful view of things. There has been about all the liquidation, they believe, which conditions require.

Bullish Statistics Cause Strong Foreign Market-Response on This Side Not What Expected

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, May 5.-More bullish weekly statistics than expected intimidated shorts on the other side of the water, causing them to cover, resulting in a firm Liverpool market and an unexpected sharp advance in prices. Although the local market exhibited a good undertone throughout and was rather active for a week-end session, the volume of business being probably the best of the week, while a slight increase in the outside business was apparent and encouraged the trade. On the whole, the action of the market was somewhat disappointing inasmuch as it was generally expected that shorts would cover extensively rather than hold over the holiday in the face of existing conditions, and their failure to do this caused a good deal of selling by the smaller longs, for the purpose of evening up commitments. However, shorts did cover on a small scale and the prediction by the bull leader of a sensational advance in the near future attracted some buving. which in connection with the covering, offset the liquidation, causing the market to present a steady aspect at all Weather reports indicated generally favorable conditions for the new crop, nevertheless distant options were in fair demand, and the price improvement for same kept pace with that of the old crop months.

On the first call prices were 6 points higher for July and 4 to 5 points up for distant options. In the initial trading liquidation caused a recession of 2 points, after which time fluctuations were narrow but generally upward, the high point being reached in the final trading, with July selling at a net gain of 8 points and distant options 7 to 8 points above yesterday's closing level.

The close was very steady with prices practically at the best. Spots were quiet at unchanged prices on a basis of 11.80c for middling. Sales, 1,460 bales.

Special to The Telegram. NEW ORLEANS, May 5.- The talent as a rule was surprised over the week-end cotton statistics, which were, contrary to expectations, generally bullish. The Englishmen recognized this fact and those who were short took occasion to even up their commitments without loss of time. Liverpool prices responded readily to the buying and advices sent over from that market were very satisfactory to the local bull crowd. The local market in turn opened firm and although trading was only moderate, the undertone was healthy diverted to the old crop months, and shorts were not at all eager to sell either these options or later ones, although it must be confessed the present outlook is favorable for the progress of the new crop. Wheat Market Quiet but Firm-Corn and Oats Sympathize and Prices Advance

Special to The Telegram, CHICAGO, May 5.-Trade in wheat was light, but the market held firm, inquenced by the strength in the May. Shorts in the current delivery were quite anxious and advanced the price 11/8c. There was little in the news to affect trade one way or the other, and influences were, as mentioned, chiefly of a local pit character. Liverpool closed unchanged. Local receipts were 4 cars with 9 expected Monday. Northwestern cars were 194 as against 98 last year. Total primary movement 318,000 bushels or double a year ago. Corn

Trade was moderate on strength in wheat, moderate receipts with light estimates for Monday and light offerings contributed to the firmness in the May. Shorts covered July in a small way. Conditions surrounding the planting of the crop continue entirely satisfactory. Liverpool closed from 1/8 c off to %c off, affected by the light clearances from this country the past week. Receipts were 153 cars with 141 expected Monday. Total primary movement 495,000 against 126,000 bushels last season. Clearances were 305,000 bushels: Oats

July oats were quite firm on covering and on a little buying induced by the prediction of frost tonight; otherwise there was little in the news or in the trade to attract attention. Local arrivals were 131 cars with 170 expected for Monday. Clearances 310,000 bushels.

Packing interests again absorbed most of the offerings in provisions, the selling being of a miscellaneous character. Part of the large selling was

CHICAGO GRAIN CATTLE AND HOGS

Steers Sell at Steady Prices-Cowa Hold Up Well-Hog Market

Steady Total yard receipts of cattle for the past week reached 9,425, with calves at 1,200, hogs 15,400, sheep, 2,100 and horses and mules 200. This makes a falling off of about 4,000 on cattle, and a loss of 1,600 on sheep. Calves gained 800, hogs 300, and horses and mules 70 for the week. Monday noted another shrink in cattle values, due to larger receipts here than the demand justified at a time when other markets were also filled up. The decline was from 5c to 15c, and the undertone so threatenig that several loads were ordered out without asking for bids on them. Tuesday had light receipts and the market steadied only to relapse again on Wednesday, when receipts rose almost to Monday's level. The market was quite uneven, some steers selling higher and some lower than on the day be-The unevenness continued on Eriday, with bulk sales going strong higher, while bids were so low on a train of good grassers that the cattle were ordered out in preference to selling here. However, the loss coming on Monday and Wednesday was in the main regained. No toppy cattle were in during the Bulls have remained for the most part steady with the bulk of arrivals going to the speculator trade. The trade in vealers was featured by the arrival of some of a choicer grade than usual. This brought the trade out of its lethargy, and $5 was paid for tops. The market sold off late in the week, prices appearing at the close about steady with the close of last week.

The record run of hogs was made on Wednesday, when arrivals reached 5,985. Supplies have been moderate on other days of the week.

The market started weakening on the first market day, and kept going lower all the week, each day showing weakness. Best corn-fed hogs are 10c lower than a week ago, with medium hogs 10c to 15c lower, while range bred hogs though corn-fed are 20c to a quarter to the bad. Pigs are a full 25c lower than last week. Best fat pigs are selling at $5, with good pigs at $4.75@4.85, and common pigs at $4.50. Sheep

The sheep market has been the rerun has been large, offerings have shown good quality and prices have ruled strong. Heavy grass wethers have made up the bulk of arrivals and have sold from $4.70@4.80. Lambs have not fared as well. The demand seems to be for a good class of heavy mut-

Vivion Commission Company FORT WORTH, May 5.-Cotton prices show further improvement today. Although bulls were accused of taking advantage of the strong market to liquidate a little May, July and the rest of the list were firm from opening to close of the session. The session closed with futures very steady, 2 to 8 points higher. May being up only 2 points while other months were from 6 to 8 points up. In New Orleans the close was 4 to 11 points higher.

Bulls had things going their way and, while they did not seem aggressive, they never let bears have any encouragement. Talk of squeeze in July was plentiful and the action of the market gave it a sense of credibility. Price cabled Liverpool last night that the market was in a strong position and the world was coming to see that the statistics are very bullish and the outlook was for spinners to take no less than 12,000,000 bales. That market was evidently impressed by his cable and week-end figures gave it confirmation as takings for the week were 232,000 bales against 248,000 bales last year, causing a sharp loss in visible supply. Whether spinners buy all their needs or draw on their reserve stock carried over from last season make no difference, a bale usually counts just as much whether at one time or another. The weather map showed rains to be heavy in Alabama. Louisiana and North Carolina, while Georgia received showers. The weather is not settled as forecasts call for showers in some sections tomorrow But as an immediate factor the weather is of secondary importance. The bulls are said to be preparing to make it hot for the shorts in July, and having made a reasonable success of their May venture are likely to be in better position to squeeze July. Improvement in stocks and the passing of the coal strike danger will help the bull position. It will not be surprising if prices move considerably higher during the next few days. The attitude of the bull leaders will de-

C. T. VIVION.

Ware & Leland FORT WORTH, Texas, May 5 .-The New Orleans cotton market was fairly active for a Saturday and its undertone was good on what was called by those bullishly inclined a very bullish visible supply statement. There is no dodging the fact that on the surface and when comparisons were not carried back too far, the statement was bullish. The variations showed a pleasing decrease to those who do not care to look at the figures expressing the actual amount of cotton in the visible supply. Spinners' takings of 232,000 bales for the week were larger than were generally expected and were called bullish, although they compared with takings of 248,000 bales this week last year. Liverpool really got cuite hysterical over the statement and closed 5 to 6 points higher when an advance of 2 points would have met the general expectation. There is plenty of cotton in the world, as the visible supply statement itself points cut. The total visible is 4,241,729 vs. 4,077,824 last year and 2,879,927 in 1904. There are affoat for Europe 295,000 bales of American cotton, against 385,-000 last year, 222,000 in 1904 an in 1903. There are plenty of features in the statement issued last night of similar character, which the bulls call bullish.

New York cotton: Bullish cables, week-end figures and covering of shorts for over-Sunday, imparted a firm tone to the market this morning. The English market was 5 to 6 points higher when due to come 1 to 2 points higher, and private cables attributed the advance to statistics. The weather map made a favorable showing again with moderthis morning. The English market was 5 to 6 points higher when due to come 1 to 2 points higher, and pri-

SIX GORED SKIRT 5339 To Be Made With or Without the

Fitted Girdle Every variation of the princess effect is in style this season and some very graceful and exceedingly charming skirts are the result. This one is quite novel and can be adapted to almost all figures, inasmuch as the girdle can be used or omitted as liked. In the illustration it is made of white linen with separate motifs embroidered on each gore, the effect of which is exceedingly rich and handsome but will be found available for all seasonable materials. Serge and veiling and wools of similar weight are greatly in vogue at moment as also are taffetas and similar silks, while for the linen and other washable fabrics of summer nothing could be smarter or more deirable trimming can take a variety

The skirt is made in six gores and is laid in inverted plaits at each seam, which are stitched flat for a portion of

was throbbing with political excitement. The committee requested me to go to Brooksville and help Colonel Telling out.

I liked the assignment. Telling was a fine old gentleman and had served many terms in congress. I had an ambition to succeed him when his days of public service came to an end.

In previous campaigns the colonel had won out easily, but there was a fight on this time. I noticed that the passengers on the train, most of them rural voters in the district, did not talk politics. Naturally, as my mission was to help Colonel Telling, I made several attempts to break through the taciturnity of my fellow passengers and succeeded in getting into conversation with a stolid agriculturalist. I gave him a pamphlet which indicated the measures our party had brought for-

He carefully put on his spectacles and read what we considered our best literary output.

"Great hot air," he said. "We have got to go some," I thought, "if that's the sentiment."

When I reached Brookville, Colonel Telling was there to greet me. Comfortably seated in his sitting room with the "usual" before him, the colonel said:

"My boy, it's going to be a hard fight, but I have two great cards in my hand that I think will win out. One-half of the folks who vote in this county live on my lands. I've cut their rents in two." "Brilliant idea that, colonel," I remarked. "What's your other card?" "My secretary," he replied, beam-I heard the rustle of a woman's skirts. "Miss Flint," said my host, rising, "allow me to introduce you to Mr. Hughes. He is going to help us out in this campaign. You had better dine with us.' "Oh, colonel," she replied, "I'd be delighted, but you know I am up to my ears in work fixing up that Miggins county squabble." Taking up some letters from the table, she left as hurriedly as she had entered.

I had had time to observe her. Tall, spare, sinewy, she looked Amazonian. "She's the peach of a secretary, said the colonel, "and what a politician She has our opponent up in the air all | secretary.

tions he can't possibly answer. And the way she handles the finances. This campaign is costing me one-half less than any of my other ones."

It was certainly a hot campaign Major Wright was giving the colonel the run of his life. Sometimes I addressed three meetings a day. I was called to the southern part of the distriet and wanted Colonel Telling's dugout to take me to the depot.

"It's gone, sir, Miss Flint took it," said Colonel Telling's man, "she said she'd be back in a few minutes.' Sitting in the colonel's office, waiting, aimlessly I picked up a blotting pad from Miss Flint's desk. On it read something. The markings were not very clear, but clear enough for me. Ten minutes later I was at the a tall young woman. "It was a forgery," I said. "Couldn't be," he gasped. "I have known his signature for years." "It was," I said, "call a policeman quickly. I will try and do the rest." Hurriedly the officer and I reached the depot. The evening train had not departed. "Ah," I thought, "Miss Flint, we are in the nick of time," but to my disappointment I discovered no female among those awaiting the train. Hoping she might still come I stood leaning against a pillar when a tall man, with a black mustach and fine bearing, passed me by, carrying a Vainly Miss Flint protested. So much so that she loosened her false mustach and it fell off onto the depot platform. In her valise we found the $10,000.

Did Colonel Telling prosecute her! Not much! In fact he didn't thank me a bit, for next day when the election was held, he won out in a walk, and attributed his success to the remarkable political ability of his private

His life had been cast in many curious places. Martinique was only the last of these, the most recent, and I brought him to New York was the road through the island.

I remember one evening he got fairly started upon this hobby of his and talked uninterruptedly for at least an hour-facts, details, descriptions at his finger-ends. Cecily, chin in hands, listened intent to every word, and I, with the remembrance of that evening still fresh upon me, can understand how he won the ear of even Wall street's suspicious denizens.

I had just come in from dinner one vening when there came a knock at the door and Tremaine entered. He was in evening dress and was seemingy much perturbed.

"My dear Lester." he began abruptly. in that quick, nervous way of his, "I'm in the deuce of a box, and I'm going to ask you to help me out. I promised Cecily to take her tonight to see the extravaganza at the New York and have the seats here, but at the last moment I find I can't get away. I've a business engagement that I can't afford to break, but Cecily will never forgive me if I disappoint her. Have you any thing on for tonight?

"No," I answered, looking at him in some astonishment, for it was evident what was coming. "Then perhaps you wouldn't mind taking Cecily? It would be a tremen-

"Not at all," I assured him, "but-"It isn't quite convenable?" he finished, as I hesitated. "Surely, we don't need to stand on ceremony and Ceclly doesn't care a hang for convention. She'll cry her eyes out if she has to stay at home, and I simply can't take

"Very well," I said, "I'll be glad to take her," and thanking me again, he hurried away. As we entered the foyer, I heard that murmur of surprise and admiration which I knew my companion must inevitably call forth. As for her, she was interested in everything. She looked around with half-open · ps smiling, pleased as a child, seemingly quite unconscious of the many curious eyes centered upon her.

"Oh, it is glorious!" she cried "I'm enjoying it, too," I said; and, indeed, I was, for her happiness was contagious. We went up to the promenade after the first act, and ate an ice together. The place was crowded, and Cecily soon became the center of attraction. Men strolled past merely to look at her and from more than one woman I caught a flash of the eye that said unutterable things.

Cecily chatted gayly, eating her ice, sipping her wine, looking at me with eyes that glowed like stars. Then suddenly, as she looked up, her face changed. I glanced up, too, and caught Jim Godfrey's astonished eyes fixed on mine. He bowed and passed on. "Who is that gentleman?" demanded Cecily eagerly, leaning across the table toward me. "You know him?" "Oh, quite well," I answered, more and more surprised. "His name is Godfrey. "God-frey," she repeated slowly, after me, as though fixing it indelibly in her memory. "And what is his busi-for a paper," I added, seeing that she did not wholly understand. "Oh," she said, and breathed a deep sigh of relief. "I see." Then, as she met my glance, she added, "I fancied that I had met him somewhere: I was mistaken. In New York Lhave met no one except you, missie."

"He's a reporter; he gathers news

But I scarcely heard her: my even had dropped to a pin at her throat: as she leaned forward, I could see it very clearly-an opal surrounded by a blazing ring of diamonds. I looked at it mechanically-then with a sudden, intent interest. For one link of that brilliant ring was missing; one of the diamonds had fallen out.

PART II-CHAPTER IV. The Problem of the Diamond "Well," began Godfrey next evening, as he settled back in a chair and looked around my room, "this is about the last place on earth I'd have expected to find you." 'And yet it's not so wonderful," I

"It's in your blood," he went on smiling. "It has been ever since that affair of Miss Holladay. But I'm glad you're here. I've an idea that we're

> "Tremaine had an important business engagement," I said, "which he couldn't break. He'd promised to take her to the theater. Rather than disappoint her, he asked me to take his

'You don't happen to know what this business engagement was?" and he looked at me with a queer smile. "No: I suppose that it had something to do with his railroad."

"His railroad? I related briefly the project in which remaine was engaged. 'Well, perhaps it was connected with hat," Godfrey said, when I had finished, "but indirectly-very indirectly. He spent the evening in Dickie Delroy's box at the opera. Tremaine, I understand, has been cutting quite a swath in society-it's easy enough to understand why. That's not the first time he's been in the Delroy box."

"But," I asked, astonished, "how did he accomplish it? "I don't know. More than likely, he's interested Delroy in his railroad scheme, and Delroy has become fascinated with him, just as you've evidently been."

"Yes," I admitted, candidly, "I have." "I saw at a glance that he's a smooth one. I believe that railroad business is just a blind—he doesn't look the man to waste his time building castles in the air.' "I don't believe it's a blind," I persisted. "His heart's too deeply in it. Besides, if it's a blind, what's his real

(To Be Continued.)

The New Malinette A new material has just been introduced call "Malinette" that looks exactly like the ordinary maline, but is waterproof, and therefore does not crush and fall with the dampness as ordinary tulle is sure to do. Women here are so delighted with it that it is hard for the popular stores to keep a sufficient supply. It is an ideal fabric for all sorts of ruchings, especially for wide ruffs, costs no more than any good maline, and outlasts it many

Laces and Sheer Effects

Laces and sheer effects of all sorts are, if it were possible, more popular than ever. There is a growing fad for "ombre" or opalescent effects, hence linings are usually in contrasting rather than matching colors and often two or three thin fabrics are used, one over the other, to obtain the desired effect. Linings of striped, checked or flowered taffetas are modishly employed under voiles and other transparent meshes.

Almost every gown one sees has the all of lingerie modes. There is an endless demand with these gauzy collars for a satisfactory stiffener.

"Tryune"

Dressmakers and up-to-date women here are using "tryune," a new patented device for holding up collars that is altogether satisfactory in wear and very dainty in appearance. In the form of silk covered elongated loops, round at both ends, it is guaranteed not to twist, rust or scratch the neck and it washes perfectly. If a heavier stiffener is desired the same material is made into a single "bone" and in this form is called "Lastikon." It is the slender double loop, however, that is being exported to Paquin, Doucet, Redfern, Poret and other famous Parpointed out. "I had to change my isian modistes.

The writer witnessed this battle. The fight was dramatic in the extreme. It is unparalleled, perhaps, in modern warfare for its spectacular features. It was a battle to the death between the most desperate savages known, all superbly intrenched, and the most civilized and determined fighters, proceeding under immeasurable difficulties. For the first 500 feet the sides of Dajo hill rise at an agle of 20 to 40 degrees. For the next 500 feet the ascent is from 60 to 70 degrees. The last fifty feet below the forts on the rim of the crater is almost straight up. The entire length of the trail from the American camps to the fortifications on the edge of the crater is not a mile, but in traveling this distance the assaulting forces had to ascend 1,200 feet in the face of a fierce rifle fire and the fire of lantakas, or Moro cannons, and a shower of huge bowlers, tree trunks, conch shells filled with powder and hursting when they struck, and a rath of javalins, spears and huge knives. The Moros had directed bamboo tubes so that they commanded the trail, which is about the size of a cow path. All that they had to do was to put their guns down these tubes and pull the trigger.

The assault of Dajo was caused by the fact that the Moros, having securely fortified themselves here, began to raid and pillage the surrounding country, killing the peaceful Moros, stealing their wives for slaves and burning their dwellings. On one occasion they fired upon and killed an injured American soldier who was being borne on a litter near the base of Bud Dajo. On another occasion they killed a civil employe, a stenographer.

Would Not Come In

About a year ago a hundred or so Moros had petitioned Colonel Scott, governor of the Sulu province, to be allowed to take up their abode in the mile across. The basin is very fertile and is filled with great trees. It has three fresh water springs and, although almost inaccessible, seemed a desirable place for the Moros to camp. After a few months' residence in the crater the Moros became noisy and troublesome and were ordered by Colonel Scott to come down. This they did twice, but as their numbers were constantly being recruited and they had completed their fortifications, they laid in an immense stock of provisions and war supplies and defied the Americans to come up and take them.

Colonel Scott, it is said, offered a pardon to all who would come down, give up their arms and swear allegiance to the American flag.

After the battle began, when I was there, Colonel J. W. Duncan, commanding the American forces, sent up an interpreter to plead for the fifth and last time with the Moro leaders to surrender or at least send down their women and children. But the Moros laughed at the Americans and jeered on the rim of the crater so that you could hear them way down on the banks of the Dajo, 1,200 feet below.

Religious Frenzy

A terrible dramatic element was introduced into the combat by the fact that in addition to a natural love for combat, the Moro has taken the religion of Mahomet, and turned and wierdly twisted it into a sort of wild, savage worship that teaches him that he who dies killing a Christian will go straight to the arms of the beautiful houris of paradise, cleansed of all sins whatever, so the American who did to die but who was not afraid of death if it had to come, stormed the great hill against these Moros who had sworn to die, and who did not run away. Just before the battle the Moros all took the oath from their sacred Hadits, or priests who had duly made their voyage to Mecca. then women, as well as the men, bound up their heads in white rags and swore to die killing the Christian enemies.

But as a matter of fact the American soldier was far more humane than the frightful exigencies of such a battle demand. Four American soldiers lost their lives and many more were wounded in the performance of humane work upon the battlefield. A hospital corps man was shot dead while applying "first aid" to a wounded comrade. Three others who would not shoot into the wounded as Kitchener's men once did, were cut down and killed by wounded Moros, who simulated death in order to get in a last blow.

Lawton's Attack

About 1 p. m. on March 8, Captain E. P. Lawton's men started up the narrow path, a third of a mile long, to the Moro fort at the crater. One could hardly have believed wat out of the less than 200 men who were stepping off as gaily as though going to shoot pigeons, there would be ten killed and thirty-five wounded. It is a hard trail, and weary. The red, volcanic rock break in one's hands as he endeavors to catch upon the soil and slips under one's feet. Now the men would grasp some huge root and pull themselves up through the forest. Again a man would stand upon his comrade's shoulders. On Colonel Bundy's trail the men say they had to form a pyramid to make the assault. But here it was gasping, choking work, and the hot sun suddenly burst from behind the threatening clouds.

How Steep it Was

If a man showed himself for a moment upon the bare red and vellow path he was at once fired upon by the Moro "snipers." So steep was the trail that one man was hit in the arm and a leg by the same bullet.

Thus the men toiled up and up and on and on for a thousand feet, and it took them almost two hours to do it. It was certain death to follow up the bare trail down which huge bowlders were constantly descending with frightful velocity. They had to cut their way with bolos through the woods at the side of the trail.

The day before Captain Wether!!! had made a reconnaissance to within twenty yards of the Moro trenches, He was discovered by a Moro, who charged at him at close quarters. But the Moro was shot by a brave sergeant who was with Wetherill. Both Americans escaped with their lives from the Moro fire drawn by the shot.

At Close Quarters When Lawton's men were within forty or fifty yards of the cotta the Moros began a fierce rifle fire. They rolled down great trees and bowlders and a perfect shower of big stones and javelins, krisses, barongs and spears shot down on the hillside beneath. The Americans struggled into the brush to the left, cutting their way with bolos to avoid the cleared space below the fort, and firing back as best they could. One American was killed here and several were wounded Avoided Entanglements About twenty-five feet below the edge of the hill the Moros had built a line of bamboo entanglements parallel to their trenches on the rim of the crater. Instead of trying to charge through these entanglements the men worked to the extreme left where, the hillside slanting up above them, they could see into most of the trenches. From their position they could infilad the entire fortifications. Two-thirds of the command was packed together in the bush below the fort like sardines. Those were desperate moments on that cliff-like hillside. 'They were there probably half an hour, working like madmen to mount a Colt's rapid-fire gun and prepare for the assault. Fancy

Pabst Beer A Clean Food

Purity and cleanness are essential for healthful beer, just as they are essential for any other healthful food. And purity and cleanness are watchwords in the great Pabst brewery at Milwaukee. Only the finest of malt and hops are used. A most important feature of the Pabst brewing process is the Pabst method of making malt. It requires eight days and doubles the expense of the old four-day method, still used in many breweries, but the eight-day Pabstprocess is the only process by which perfect malt can be made.

Next in importance to eightday malt is cleanness, and we might very well say just as important, for not only is cleanness desirable but necessary in brewing the best beer. And in this again Pabst excels; not only is the mammoth Pabst brewery a model of neatness in every department, but the beer from mash tub to keg or bottle is never touched by human hands. It passes through sterilized tubes and pipes into hermetically sealed sterilized tanks, and every known safeguard is established to prevent any possible contamination.

The ingredients of Pabst Beer are the purest and best money can buy, and it is given to the public only when science and the test of time show it to be perfect in age, purity and strength; the best beer brewed.

upon their heads, a consecration of the Hadjis. It was impossible to tell at the time which were women and which were men. Women were found dead outside the trenches where they had been killed while charging the Americans. They fought like fiends.

Hand to Hand

It was work; desperate, gasping and sweaty, bloody work. A private snapped his revolver five times at an on-rushing Moro, but each time it failed him. Quick as thought he clubbed his gun and hit the Moro, crushing his head as though it had been a toy balloon. The American was the better man in any kind of a fight with any kind of weapons. A Moro threw a child at a soldier and knocked him down with it, but before the Malay reached the American with his knife he was shot.

A Moro boy, apparently 11 or 12 years old, swift and supple, limber and ean as a deer, charged with drawn bolo upon six of our men and fell within two feet of them. A woman made a charge and fell pierced with bullets. Still figures leaped like tigers, with knives flourishing. One man with a baby under his arm and a bolo in his other hand leaped over the cotta and was shot in a dozen places before he touched the ground. Joseph Fitz of the gunboat Pampanga, climbed into a tree and emptied his revolver into the Moros in the trenches. This was the only way the Moros not yet killed

could be fired on from above. Dead Piled Knee Deep

In ten minutes it was all over and the Americans cheered wildly with victory-such cheers as only the battlefield may know. Five more of their men had been killed and many wounded, while the Moro dead were lying all over the rim of the crater and piled knee deep in the trenches. But the fight was not over. Besides the fight from the cotta, an attack was made from the lip of the crater on its eastern edge. A detachment under Captain Boles was sent along to clear this edge of the crater, while every house in the interior of the crater was shelled like a sieve with a Colt's rapid-fire gun. Even then it did not kill all the Moros, and some managed to strike with their dying the work of Lawton's column. The other two columns, under Captain Koehleh, Fourth cavalry, and Major Bundy experienced as trying times as did Captain Lawton's column, although his loss was the greatest. Captain White, commanding the constabulary, cleared the trail for Bundy's column and was himself wounded. Lieutenant Sowers, White's next in command, worked a sawed-off shotgun with wonderful effect on the top of the trail.

At dawn a half dozen Moro children played on the blankets of the soldiers. All round were the bloody, rigid dead. Near the children were the bodies of six American soldiers covered with a tarpaulin.

The number of Moro dead is variously estimated. The trench captured by Captain Lawton must have held 350 Moros. The other trenches held 150 and 450 Moro dead. Many more were killed in the brush and at the side trenches.

Weird stories from all parts of the battlefield were told the writer. Several Moros used the bodies of live children as shields. Others caught up young girls, it was said, and forced them to go in advance. Some soldiers saw Moros kill their own children or use them as shields in the fight. One soldier said that an American jumped down into a trench shooting with his revolver and stabbing with his bayo-Of course he was badly wounded. A Moro women threw her baby at a soldier and then made at him with a barong. She was shot down. A Moro threw his baby on a row of bayonets and as it stuck on one he killed the soldier behind the bayonet.
