30,000 PEOPLE ATTEND REGATTA Ariels of Baltimore Win the Eight-Oar Event

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—The eyes of the rowing world were turned toward this city today when the fourth annual regatta of the American Rowing Association took place on the Schuylkill river. The program included entries from Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, Yale, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Syracuse and other colleges as well as from many aspirants for the scholastic honors. It is estimated that more than 30,000 persons turned out to witness the day's rowing exhibition.

CRY OF FIRE CREATES PANIC Disaster Is Averted at High School Commencement

PALESTINE, Texas, May 26.—During the commencement exercises of the Palestine high school held in the city hall last night, an unknown woman who had become unnerved as a result of an electrical storm prevailing, leaped to her feet calling frantically to a girl in the balcony, "Come down quick."

HEART LOCATED IN CALF'S NECK Throbs Can Be Seen at Quite a Distance

DENVER, Col., May 26.—The veterinary department of the state agricultural college has just been presented with the most remarkable freak seen in this state. It is a calf about two weeks old, perfectly normal and healthy in every way, except that its heart is located in the dewlap of the neck.

MISSING TEXAN FOUND W. J. Watson of Grosburg Located in New York City

NEW YORK, May 26.—Further mystery was added to the case of William N. Watson, the rich and feeble old man of Logan county, Kentucky, for whom relatives have been searching for years, when today J. W. Bowles of Grosburg, who came to inquire of his kinsman, found him residing with a granddaughter, Mrs. Koehn, at 420 West One Hundred and Forty-sixth street. Bowles was refused an interview. It is alleged that Mrs. Koehn took him from his old home in Kentucky. The old man, who declines that the old man be seen, is the only tenant in the seven-story apartment house. Acting on the advice of his attorney, Dr. Rowles called at the house for the fifth time today and was refused an interview with the old man. Mrs. Koehn said that Mr. Watson knew of no such relative.

DAMAGE SUIT IS REVERSED Armour & Co. Win in Court of Civil Appeals

By their action on yesterday in refusing a rehearing in the case of Armour & Co. against Dumas, the court of civil appeals announced a very important rule of law concerning the relative rights of master and servant and the duties owing by a master to a servant employed during the construction of a building.

While struggling with Police Officer Sid Waller Saturday night, Sherman Dupree a negro about 25 years of age, was shot and instantly killed, he having been charged with making a murderous assault on Jackie Turner, a negress, who was in a serious condition at the city hall late Saturday night.

BAN PUT ON TOBACCO Presbyterian Assembly Forbids Ministers to Use Weed

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 26.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church, in its closing session tonight, refused to amend the church creed by striking out the words "cast into eternal torment" from the Westminster confession of faith. An overture from a church at Logansport, Ind., asking that this change in the confession be made, was turned down by the assembly.

MRS. TALIAFERRO IN JAIL LONGS FOR SISTERS' PRESENCE Woman Indicted on Charge of Killing Her Brother-in-law, Declares She Is Deserted by Nearest Relatives in Time of Trouble

Tarrant county grand jury returned an indictment against Mrs. Ella Taliaferro Saturday afternoon, charging her with the murder of the husband of her sister, Joseph Cree, who died as the result of a pistol wound received while at his home, 828 Humboldt street, just one week before the indictment was returned.

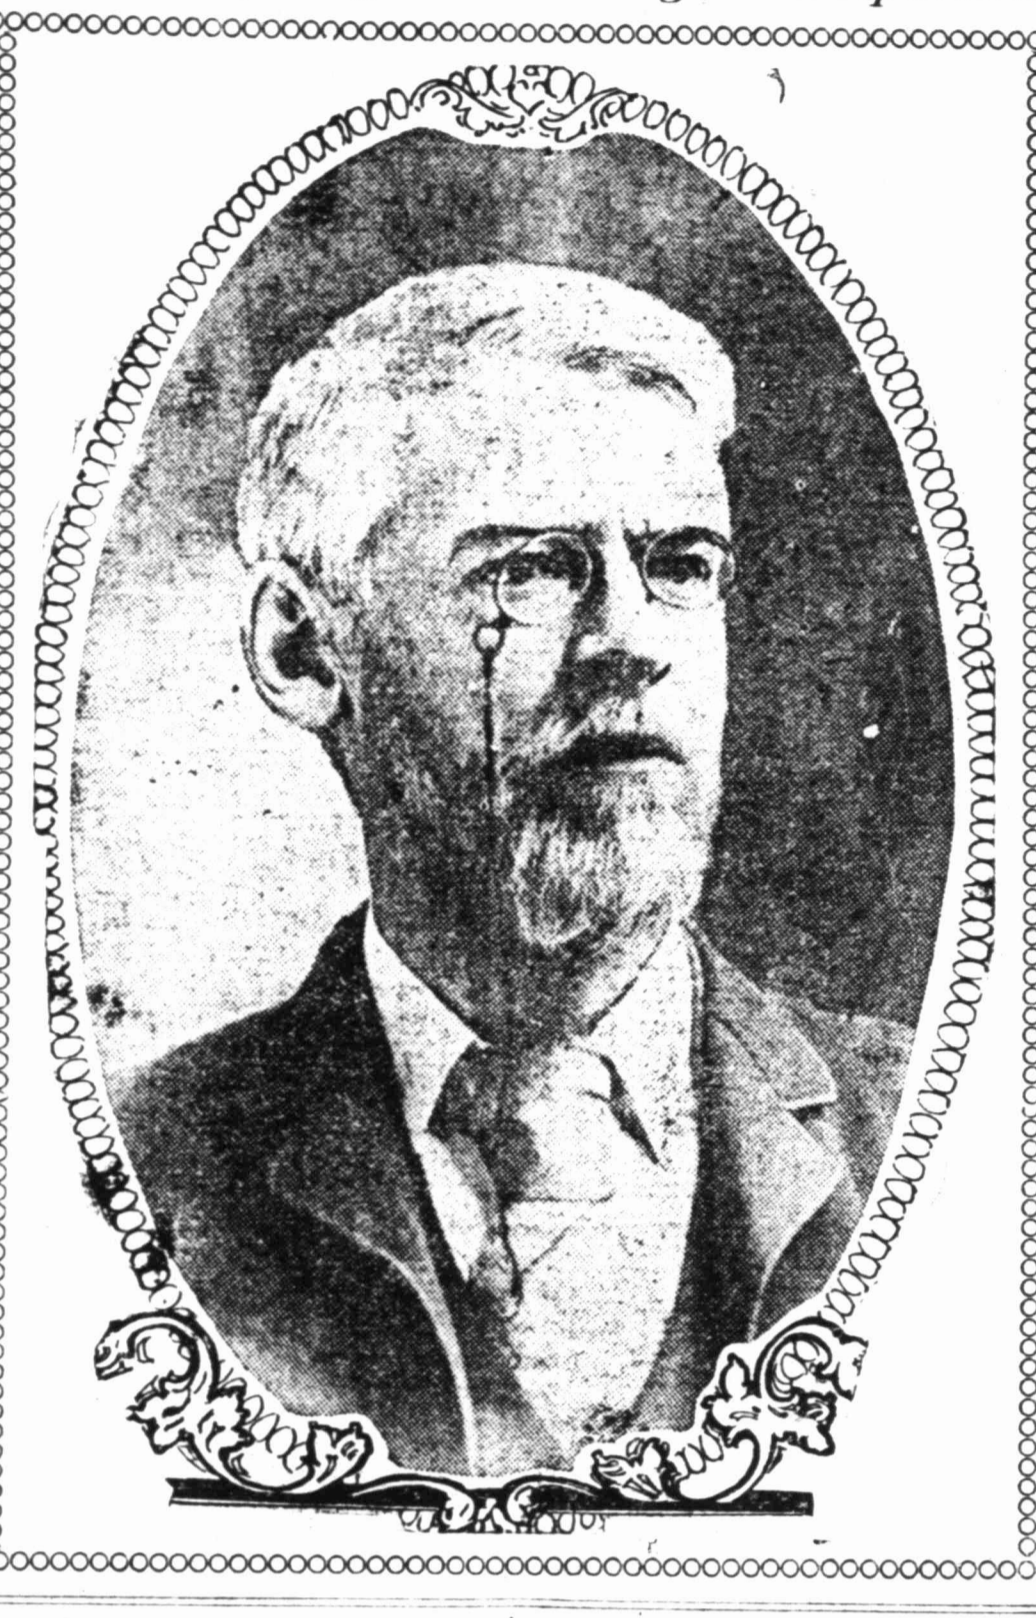

FIGHT TURNED OUT FIASCO Herrera and Battling Nelson Scored by Followers

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—Along the streets today one heard dozens of explanation of last night's fiasco. There were many versions. Some of them are silly, others seem to be fairly rational. Here are a few:

VERSIONS DIFFER Some Authorities Say Both Were Afraid to Fight Friday Night

McCarry knew he was up against a losing venture and he arranged with these fellows for a grand stand finish. "Fighting had started again in New York and Nelson has received an offer to box Jimmy Britt at Madison Square. He had to get out of this thing the best way he could."

BOMB THROWN IN OIL CAMPS

Many Changes to Be Made in Oil Leases NEW RULES OUT Lessees Are Forbidden to Own Stock in More Than One Company

Special to The Telegram. DENVER, May 25. The secretary of the interior exploded a bomb in the camp of the oil men of the Territory today when the new rules and regulations governing the leasing of lands in Indian Territory for oil purposes were received here. The new regulations go into effect June 1, 1920, and all leases now pending before the department either here or in Washington must conform with the new regulations under the new rules, the secretary has the right at any time to amend a lease when he thinks the provisions have been violated. Also each oil lease must be accompanied by a certificate from the interior secretary certifying that the lessee is financially able to carry out the terms of the lease and that he is not directly or indirectly associated with any other person, firm or corporation. In fact, the new rules require new leases to be made in one name and not in the names of many different companies, and under the provisions no company can take a lease when they own stock in another company.

AUSTRIA ORDERS MORE RED TAPE... Inland Postage More Expensive Than Foreign... Special to The Telegram. VIENNA, May 25. The Austrian postal department is acting fresh proof of being the most red-tapeish and retrogressive in Europe. In order to meet the extra expenditures due to the increased wages of postal authorities and employees, the authorities are considering the proposal to raise postage on inland letters by a fraction of a cent. This step, besides being reactionary, would create a large number of letters to be sent to Germany are now sent on the inland rates, but as postal arrangements between the two countries can only be altered by international agreement, the postage to Berlin would be less than to any Austrian provincial town. Business men in Austria are generally hampered in their undertakings by the bureaucracy who impose irksome conditions and no enterprise can be started without the consent of the local authorities.

GERONIMO TURNED DOWN... Taft Refuses to Let Chief Make Another Plea... Special to The Telegram. LAWTON, Okla., May 25. The secretary of the interior refused to grant Geronimo permission to go to Washington this spring to make another plea for his liberty. Geronimo has been there before and it would not be necessary for him to go again. This was the case of the secretary's letter regarding the matter. Quannah Parker, chief of the Comanches, and John Treppe, chief of the Kiowas, will shortly depart for Washington to lay matters of interest to the Apache tribe before the secretary and President.

STORY CUT, ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES... Author Has Filed Novel Suit Against Publishers... Special to The Telegram. DENVER, Col., May 25. A novel $10,000 damage suit has been instituted against Harper Bros., publishers, by Walter Dean Myers of this city, and the case is now being heard in the United States court. Davis alleges that the publishers mutilated and changed his manuscript to such extent that his reputation as an author, he considers, is damaged in the above amount. He told the jury that the story was cut from 10,000 words to 4,500, which changed the entire effect to such an extent that he had suffered much as a writer.

LANE CHALLENGES TO WITHDRAWAL

Makes Proposition in Race for Legislature DIVISION IS DISPUTED Declares Delegation of Place Number 2 to County Is Unenforceable Assumption by Opponent

A challenge to C. E. Stewart to withdraw from the race for the legislature is issued by W. P. Lane of this city, who agrees to take the step with Mr. Stewart if another candidate can be secured who will represent the opinions of Mr. Lane regarding the care of Confederate veterans and appropriation for the Confederate Home.

Class Division In discussing for class No. 2 I have not sought to usurp any political position that does not rightfully belong to me or any other law-abiding citizen of his people to fill that position, neither am I governed by that unwritten law of our country made by designing politicians for their own political usage, because such laws emanating from such sources have no jurisdiction over me.

Division of Votes There were 6,212 full tax payers residing in the city of Fort Worth and 451 outside of the city limits. There exist no good reason why I could not and would not represent the 5,441 outside the city as well as my opponent could represent the 6,212 inside the city.

Challenge Made Now here is the meat in the count, I want the office and my opponent wants it again after having served in that capacity for several years and in a contest held up throughout the county I have every confidence that I will win the victory, because I believe my views on certain vital questions which will affect the interests of the masses of our people, but in order to obviate any further political contest and as an evidence of my good intentions, I will agree to withdraw from the race in favor of any other representative citizen living in either the city or country whose views are well known to be friendly toward a liberal opposition for the Confederate Home, and for the building and equipping a home for the care of Confederate mothers and widows, provided my opponent agrees to withdraw from office in this contest will be fought on my part to a finish. Respectfully, W. P. LANE.

BAKERSFIELD BATHES

500 EARTHQUAKE BABIES

City Hitherto Noted Only for Its Oil Wells, Gains New Distinction and Wins Warm Corner in the Hearts of Five Hundred Refugee Mothers

"earthquake babies" were in a sorry plight indeed. But in the city of Bakersfield, 300 miles from the disaster, there were many mothers—mothers who shuddered as they held their own babies close, and whose hearts were full of understanding and sympathy for the little sufferers and their distressed young mothers. It was easy for the mother-heart to anticipate the greatest need of both, and that was how Bakersfield came to bathe the "earthquake babies."

It was planned to bathe every San Francisco baby that passed through Bakersfield, and no time was lost. Scores of little tubs, great bundles of soft towels, and big baskets of daintily sent soap found their way to a waiting room which had been reserved at the railroad depot, and all the mothers of the town turned out to do their little checking and bath the refugee babies. All things arranged at the station above by representatives and announced that Bakersfield would bathe all babies and guarantee that it would bathe them right; that there could be warm water, soap and sponges, and clean clothing for each little refugee, in addition to such help as could be lent their suffering mothers.

So it was that more than 500 tired, worn-out refugee mothers banded over more than 500 sticky, cross little bundles to the mothers of Bakersfield, and their babies rested their weary arms while their darlings were made clean and fresh and dainty. The 500 refugee mothers were scattering to all parts of the United States, but in the heart of each of them will linger for many years grateful memories of the city of Bakersfield.

TOM GREEN CO. STOCKMAN TALKS

G. W. Shields Says Cattlemen Are With Fort Worth

DEPLORES "RESOLUTIONS"

Says if Necessary, Meeting of Representative Cattlemen Will Assemble and State True Position

G. W. Shields, formerly sheriff of Tom Green county, a stockman, and as his friends say the next sheriff of the county of which San Angelo is the county seat, came up from that section Saturday. To a Telegram reporter he said: I am authorized by the stockmen of the Angelo country, and when I say stockmen I mean the genuine article and not hack-men, etc., of Angelo, to say to the people of Fort Worth through the columns of the Telegram and Stockman's Journal and also to the stockmen of the state and to the Live Stock Exchange and commission houses, and to the individuals who have been sued for hundreds of thousands of dollars by the attorney general's office of the State of Texas, that they look upon the whole proceeding as in the nature of persecution, that it is unbecomingly and should cease at once.

"That such action in a great measure endangers the welfare of the live stock interests of the state, both individually and generally, and if continued will certainly result in heavy losses to those engaged in the great industry.

"That if the people of Fort Worth and the commission men so desire that we will call a general meeting of all stockmen of the San Angelo country for the purpose of declaring that we are not engaged in this unbecoming warfare upon an interest that is a common part of our business, and will through this meeting declare that we are opposed as a class to what has already been done; that we have no money wherewith to assist the attorney general in pushing the suits he has brought, but that if needed we are ready to back the other side in any way that is needful be it either with money, influence or moral support. We wish it distinctly understood that we stand with Fort Worth and the commission men, first, last and all the time, and shall continue to do so just as long as they do not injure our interests any more than they have in the past.

"We realize that technically there might have been some little infringement of the law, but we knowing the commission men as we do in a business way, are satisfied that what was done was done unknowingly and without intent to do wrong or deprive any one of their just rights, in any way whatever. For the honor of our section and for the best interests of our fellow stockmen we deplore the action of those who, laboring under a mistake, no doubt, aided and assisted in the bringing of these suits, and desire to take this method of assuring the people of Texas that we in no wise have had any hand in the matter.

Your papers are also authorized by me individually to say that I carefully made an investigation of the facts relative to the meeting that was said to have been held in San Angelo, by stockmen in which said meeting a resolution was said to have been drawn up supporting the attorney general's department in its action in bringing the suits against the exchange and the commission men, and tendering them financial aid in prosecuting the same, and I could find the names of but three genuine stockmen who attended the case, and that not many people in the city of San Angelo itself knew anything about said meeting until it had been held, and the fact was that the public through the daily dailies, are also authorized by me to also say that what I have communicated to you as the sentiments of the stockmen of the Angelo country are true and that these sentiments were expressed to me personally, and I was authorized to give them to the Telegram and Stockman-Journal as a true expression of the feelings of all stockmen."

CROWD ATTENDS COMO OPENING

Arlington Heights Enterprise Successfully Inaugurated

Official opening of Lake Como took place Saturday at the handsome pavilion erected by the company on the lake front.

Mayor W. D. Harris, Captain B. E. Paddock and W. O. Allen, treasurer of the Arlington Heights Traction Company, addressed a large party of guests, including city officials, newspaper men, ministers and leading business men.

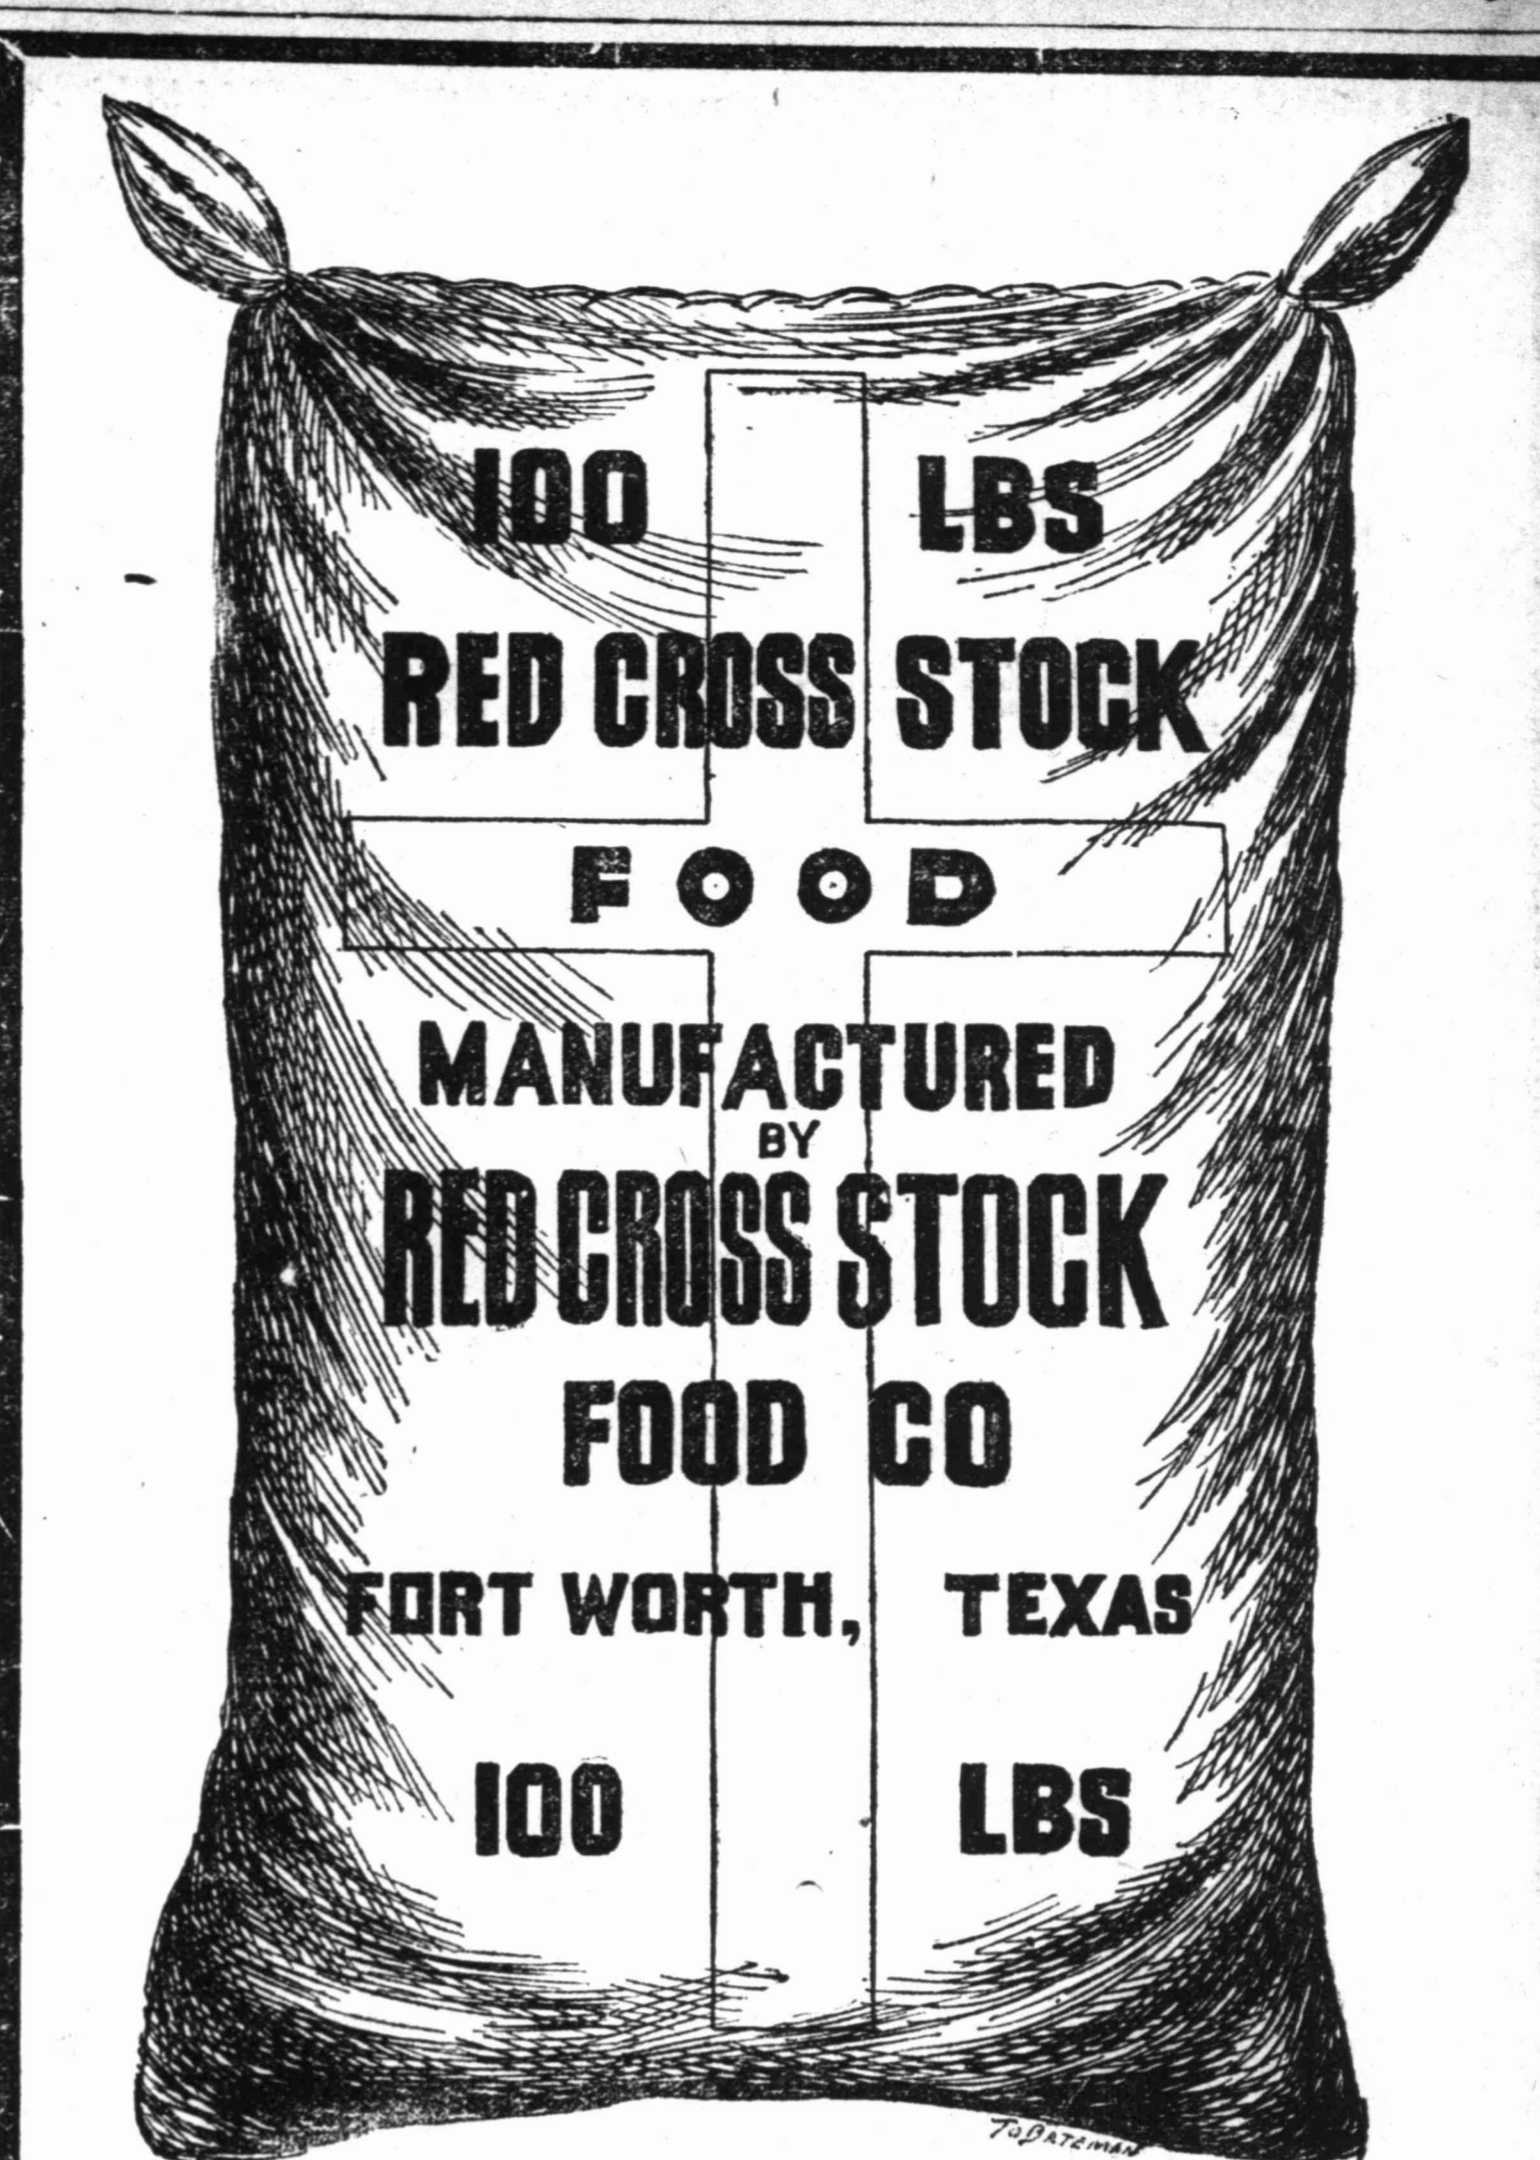

A special car for the guests of the company left the company's depot opposite the city hall at 2:15 o'clock, other guests following in later cars. Upon arrival at the lake a brief inspection of the grounds was made, the band played on the balcony of the pavilion.

All then assembled in the auditorium on the top floor of the pavilion where the opening exercises were had.

Mr. Allen welcomed the guests to the pavilion, told of the objects of the company and then introduced the other speakers.

In his remarks Mr. Allen referred to the natural surroundings, declaring that in his travels over the country he had found no place more suited for the purpose. He declared it would be the aim of the company to maintain a high class resort where people may come for healthful recreation and outdoor sports. He announced that the upper floor would be used as a skating rink during the week, the lower floor being for dances. On Sunday, he announced, the park would be open but that sacred concerts will alone be given.

Mayor Harris Speaks
Mayor Harris was first introduced and declared his pleasure at being present, asserting that pure ozone and pleasing surroundings would impel him to speak even though he had made no preparation. He paid a high tribute to the energy and capital that had caused the erection of the buildings and features, adding to the natural attractions of the site, and expressed pleasure at the announcement of Mr. Allen that the entertainment offered would be pure and wholesome and entirely free from objectionable features. He declared the belief that there should be such places on all sides of

ACTUAL EXPERIENCE

Teaches the Truth in All Things

The child that touches the red hot stove does not have to be told to avoid the stove; the man who is accustomed to pure water does not enjoy a draught from the stagnant pool, nor does a lady enjoy the eating of a hard, dwarfy peach half so much as she does the luscious variety. As it is with man, so it is with the dumb animal.

A food properly prepared, built on hygienic principles, a food that seeks the coat of your animals, reanimates them, giving them new life, a quicker tread, a hearty appetite and a fat producer, is the feed of value.

This feed is not manufactured from the offal of the mill, but is manufactured from the best of grain and alfalfa. We do not claim for it more than the actual feeding will prove, the most valuable feed on the market for horses, cattle and hogs.

AMUSEMENTS

Another week of excellent musical attractions is promised at the White City's White Rose theater this week in the Beggar Prince opera company. This afternoon and tonight the company will give "Said Pasha" with twenty-five persons in the cast and in addition to the regular productions Master Earl Laird, harp and piano soloist, will appear. Master Laird is a nephew of Miss Gertrude Hutcheson, prima donna soprano with the Beggar Prince company, and, although but 11 years old, is an unusually talented musician. For a boy of his age he plays the harp remarkably well.

During the week the Beggar Prince Company will continue at the White

F. A. WADE AS LORENZO IN THE BEGGAR PRINCE.

Rose theater in standard light operas, putting on "The Beggar Prince" after Sunday and alternating with "Olivette" and "Said Pasha."

The Beggar Prince Company is one of the best light opera organizations ever heard in Fort Worth. Some idea of the character of the organization may be gained from the fact that William Glover, leader of the orchestra, traveling with the company, conducted the orchestra in the Folly theater, London, for the original production of the "Chimes of Normandy," serving in the same capacity with the same production for 2000 nights, a record probably never equalled in light opera annals. Glover is a talented director whose soul is apparently wrapped up in his work. To the favorers of outside members of the company who have seen him at rehearsal the intense seriousness with which he works out musical effects appears paradoxical, striking in comic opera, but Glover has no thought for paradoxes.

He smokes a short and aggressive pipe and gives out directions, orders, criticisms and exhortations between chords as if he were working a graduation class for commencement day.

At the White City

Last Sunday's record breaking crowd at the White City is expected to be surpassed today, weather permitting. Every day the past week has witnessed the addition of new amusement attractions, the latest being the open air skating track opened Saturday night under the management of S. S. Harris, who was treasurer of the Majestic theater last season. One of the most popular attractions at the White City is the miniature railway, which, last Sunday, carried more than 1000 passengers around the grounds. There are now a large number of concessions open at White City, which are proving very popular with the crowds. Manager Jake Schwartz is planning still additional features, among them aerial swing with a ninety-foot tower. Another feature being planned for the White City when the lake now in course of construction is completed, is to have the water illuminated from underneath by electricity, producing a novel and beautiful effect.

Championship Race

Next Tuesday night the first race of a series of three races for the three-mile championship of the Southwest, to be contested for by Elmer Ball and Gilbert Teague will take place at the Fort Worth skating rink.

Elmer Ball defeated Gilbert Teague early in the season at the Summit avenue rink. About four weeks ago Teague defeated Ball at the Fort Worth skating rink, and last week repeated the stunt at the Lake Erie rink.

No little rivalry, therefore, exists between these two experts, and in order to prove the championship the series of three heats has been arranged.

There are many admirers of both who are willing to back their favorite in substantial form. Each contestant is confident of victory and enthusiasm galore is being manifested by the friends of both Ball and Teague.

THE PUBLIC EYE

Memorial Day

Editor Telegram,

Will you permit me to call attention, through your valuable columns, to a very serious matter?

I see there are to be, on the 30th inst., several "events," as harness race, etc., etc. I wonder if the promoters of these "events" appreciate gravity of their mis-use of the nation's holiday, to the memory of our dead heroes? Surely they do not. For all know that the celebration of this day is funeral and not festive. A day when we again hear "the bugle call," the rush and tread of our bravest, the about of victory, the cheers of the conquerors, the groans of the fallen, to whom death came in the hour and article of victory, such memories abide forever. Time ripens, mellow and hallows, but never dissipates them, and the shadowy hosts stand around us today, as their substantial forms were wont to do of yore, eloquent in their muteness. Their work is done, their glory secure.

Nearly half a century has gone by on airy pinions since they stood side by side in the serried ranks of war, their lives, their hopes, their missions one. Now they sleep the long, dreamless sleep beneath the daisy spangled sod. We live on to feel their glory and tell the rising generation of their doctory deeds. Let us solemnly keep their immortal memory now, share their glory and seal their fame anew. Not by mocking pageantry or gay festivities, but circumspectly.

Let the memory of the heroes of the

WEDDING A SURPRISE

Haskell Visitor Becomes Bride of Fort Worth Young Man

The visit of Miss Jessie Estella Dodson of Haskell, Texas, to the wife of Dr. C. E. Waller, 806 Tenth avenue, Fort Worth, ended in her taking up her residence there Saturday evening as Mrs. H. E. McQuaid, following the marriage of the young couple by Justice Charles T. Rowland in the Tarrant county court house late Saturday afternoon.

Mr. McQuaid comes from Richview, Ill., originally, but has been in the employ of the Southwestern Mechanical Company here for some time. The young people have been friends for the past two years and their marriage announcement comes as a surprise to their friends here.

Miss Dodson is well known in Fort Worth, having been formerly a teacher in the kindergarten schools here for two years, ending in 1905.

The young couple will reside with Dr. and Mrs. Waller at 806 Tenth avenue.

EVENTS OF WEEK

Master Moses Ramsey
Mrs. Ramsey gave a party at the Country Club Saturday afternoon for her son Moses that greatly delighted the hearts of the young and other folk present. The outdoor pastime of kite flying started the gayeties and until home going the pastimes were continuation of pretty gifts and surprises, ending with a fine supper with many cakes and bright candies.

Mr. and Mrs. Menefee's Dance

Mr. and Mrs. Menefee gave a large party at Lake Como Saturday night opening formally the pavilion for social purposes. Several hundred guests were present and the resort with its attractive decorations promises to become tremendously popular.

PUPILS PLAN PICNIC

Students To Leave Ledgers For Outing With Grocers

A picnic and barbecue will be held by the teachers and pupils of Nelson Draughn's business college in connection with the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association picnic at Hambley, Wednesday afternoon and night, May 30.

Various attractions are arranged for this picnic, that will assure the success of it, but the one that promises to be the most interesting is the ball game that will be played between grocers' team and the college team. Special cars will leave the Interurban ticket office at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Breakfast. The faculty of the Fort Worth Kindergarten College gave a breakfast in honor of the senior class Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the Touraine.

Cards with Mrs. Warwick. Mrs. Daisy Stevens and Miss Grace Lunham were the honorees of a delightful little party given by Mrs. Warwick Monday night.

A Skating Party. Monday night the young people spent a most delightful evening skating at the rink.

Farewell Luncheon. The senior class of the Fort Worth Kindergarten College entertained with a farewell luncheon at the Touraine Friday at 1:30 in honor of Miss Waco and Miss Hammers.

The Wags. Miss Alice Stewart entertained the Wags Thursday afternoon with a most brilliant party.

Cards with M. C. Carty. Mrs. Sam Cantey entertained her whist club Thursday morning.

Reception Thursday. The reception at the Worth Thursday afternoon in honor of visiting ladies was a pleasant feature of the meeting in the Worth of the Grain Dealers' Association.

Olives Embroidery Club. The Olives Embroidery Club met with Mrs. F. L. Jacard, and while their busy fingers were engaged with stitches the conversation flowed freely.

MISCELLANEOUS. A Skating Novelty. The employees of the Fort Worth National bank are planning a big skating party at the Lake Erie Rink for Tuesday evening, May 23.

Merry Makers. The South Side Merry Makers skated skillfully Saturday afternoon, and all kinds of fun thereby.

Beauty. Form Sublime to Those Who Take Vaucaire Galega Tablets. They are by far better than any liquid preparation.

Mr. Victor Patneude. "My Wife and I Consider Pe-ru-na a Household Remedy." - Victor Patneude.

In different seasons of the year, catarrh assumes different phases. Systemic catarrh is very common during warm weather and is sometimes the after-effect of some acute ailment experienced during the preceding winter.

Mr. Victor Patneude, 325 Madison street, Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes: "Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work."

"After I had taken two bottles I found that it was helping me, so I continued its use and it has cured me sound and well."

"I can recommend Peruna to anyone, and if anyone wants to know what Peruna did for me, if they will write to me, I will answer them gladly."

"I am glad to say that Peruna has cured my trouble with the bowels, and some said consumption of the bowels."

"One doctor said he could cure me. I took his medicine two months, but it did me no good."

"A friend of mine advised me to try Peruna and I did so."

Revised Formula. "For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Pe-ru-na be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Pe-ru-na that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character."

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
LONDON, May 26.—The Society of American Women in London the other day invited Dr. Emil Reich—philosopher of the fashionables—to expound his views on the American woman at a meeting in the Hotel Cecil. Dr. Reich has a comprehensive way of abridging the individualism of the audience which have collected of late at Claridge's hotel, and leaving some impression with a Reichian view of the universe, which to minds untrained to conventionalism, swiftly becomes absurd.

In the case of Americans, however, he met a number of shrewd and cultivated women on their own ground, and discoursed on a subject with which, we may take it, they were thoroughly familiar.

While admiring the beauty and equipment of the modern American woman, he assumes that she has lost some finer qualities in achieving greatness. He looks upon the pioneering American women as having established the continent of America; the wives of the settlers in the eighteenth century as the discoverers of the true nature of the Alleghenies as having been conceived by the women and not the men of America.

That conquering spirit he sees somewhat sadly carried to excess in the modern American woman, so that he finds her less human—less sympathetic—than she ought to be. It was a pleasure to me that Mrs. Squire Potter immediately pointed out one sympathetic quality in American women which is not exhibited with the same generous extravagance in any other country in the world. That is the generosity of women to women.

This fact, I should have been glad to see adorning Dr. Reich's string of wild manerred compliments, since it struck me as being the truest picture of the American woman received on that afternoon.

I should have liked him also to have pointed out that the helpful American husband, with his inflexible domestic qualities, sometimes struggled at by foreigners, is also a result of the pioneering difficulties of the early days rather than the design of the modern moment.

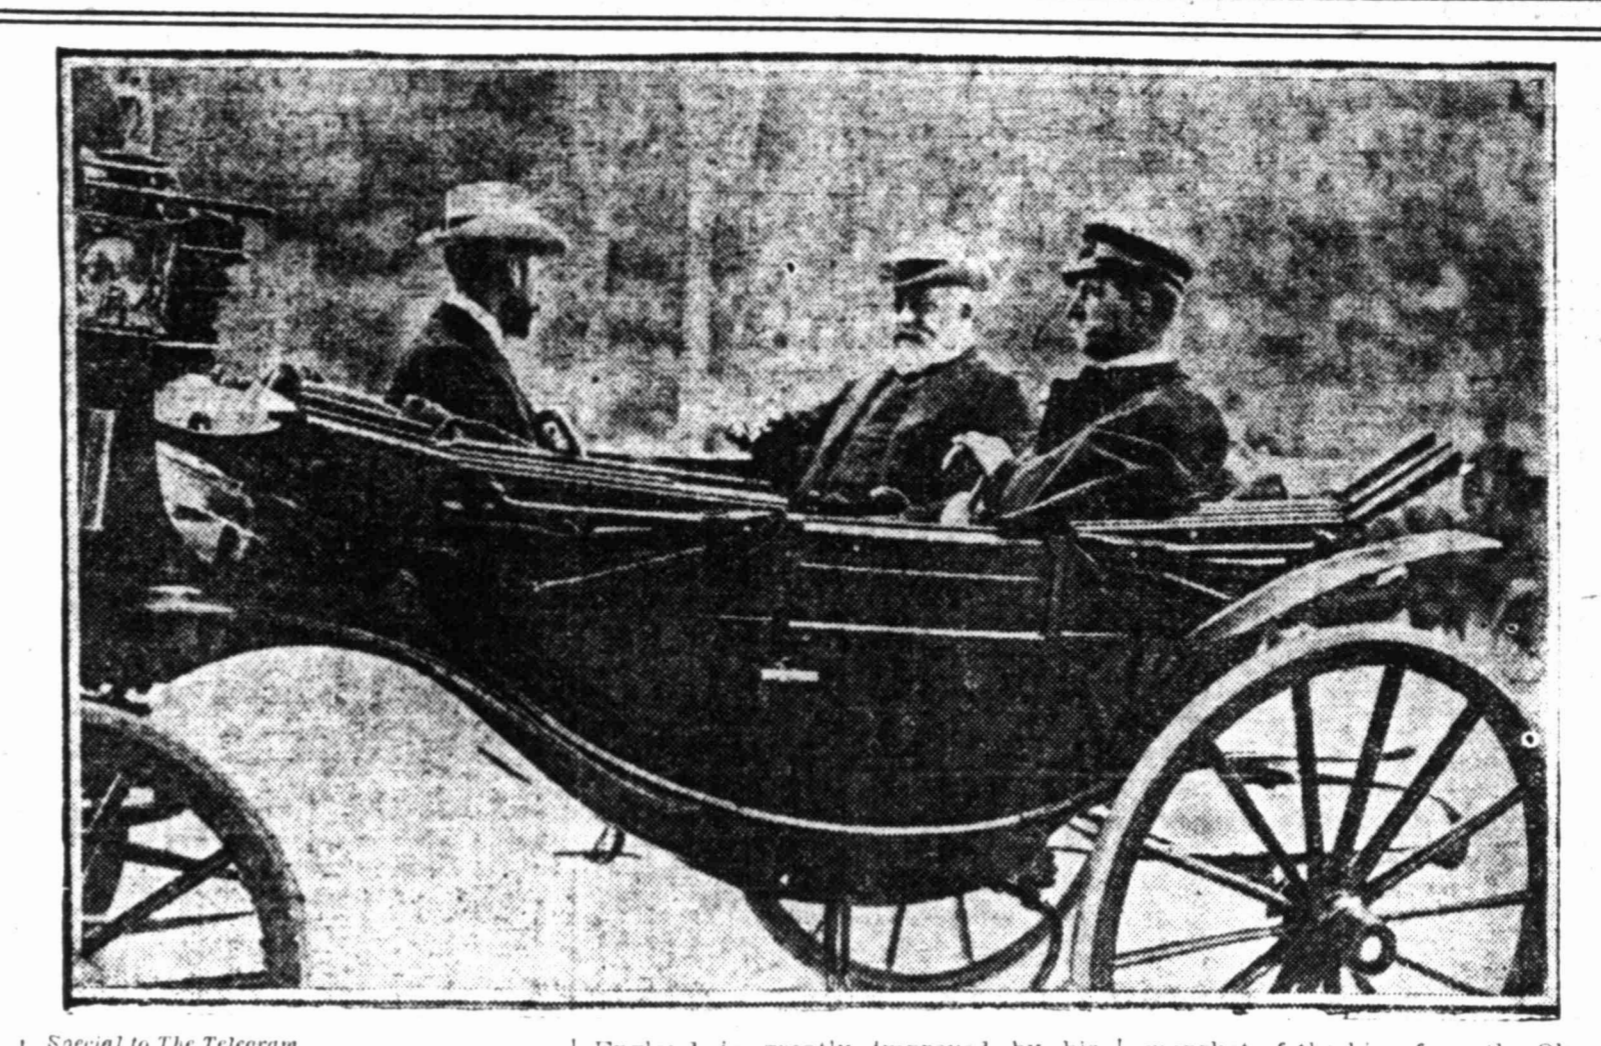

The present undomesticated Englishwoman, with the unhelpful husband considered so typical of England, is a result of generations of finely-trained women—just as the present resourcefulness of all American women is due solely to pioneering and more especially to the infamous magnitude of the American help. I have still to discover where the "loss in human qualities" in American women.

Unless, indeed, it be the sodic note of a traveling husband, whom Mrs. Webster Glynes, on the same afternoon, described as being content to cultivate the fine arts by proxy, by sending his wife and daughter to Europe for him.

Surely some day the cultured women of America will produce sons of such artistic seriousness that "art by proxy" will be inefficient for them. In the meantime, according to Mrs. Glynes, the men glory in a martyrdom whose halo they would not exchange for dual coronets.

Light Thrown on Report of King Edward's Death

(Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)
BY PAUL LAMBETH.
Special Cable to The Telegram.

LONDON, May 26.—The real facts about the recent scare caused by the rumor that King Edward had died suddenly in Paris, have only just leaked out. Many persons, of course, jumped to the conclusion that the rumor was spread by people interested in sending the prices of government stock down on the stock exchange, but the actual facts are as follows.

A business man named Joseph King, who is fairly well known in Paris and London business circles, dropped dead at once from a heart failure. His friends at once wired his agents in London the words, "King died suddenly this afternoon." The lady clerk who opened the telegram at once told every one in the office that the king was dead.

The rumor spread in an incredibly short time throughout the business quarters, and the next morning there was almost a panic in the newspaper offices and a distinct slump on the exchange.

These facts were gathered at the earnest request of the king himself, who was very much disturbed about the matter, and insisted on knowing how the report had arisen.

GRAND DUKES ARE DESERTED

Boris and Cyril Hunted by Bomb Thrower

(Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)
Special Cable to The Telegram.
BY PAUL VILLIERS.
PARIS, May 26.—Grand Duke Boris, the Imperial Don Juan, who has been adored by pretty girls all the world over, did not stay very long in this city, which he admires above any other in the world.

Neither did Grand Duke Cyril, the hero of the "Petropavlovsk."

And really one could not blame them; when they strolled along the boulevards, instead of being followed by an admiring crowd of lovely maidens, they were shunned as if they had the plague.

As soon as they appeared around a corner the street emptied as if by magic. The fact is that the police had to request them to either remain in their hotel or leave Paris, as they spread panic wherever they went.

The reason of this extraordinary condition of things is that it is believed the Russian anarchist who was killed by the explosion of a bomb in his pocket in the Bois de Vincennes the other day, intended the murderous engines, for he had one in each pocket for the grand dukes.

Nobody, therefore, dared to go with him in a hundred yards of his imperial Russian highnesses for fear of being blown with them in case another anarchist should meet with better success in the execution of his schemes.

PLAN AIRSHIP FACTORY

German Officers Seek New Weapon Against French

(Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)
Special Cable to The Telegram.
BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

BERLIN, May 26.—There is a strong conviction among higher army officers that it is worth a patriotic effort to make every effort to have the reikhsstag appropriate an amount of sufficient size to found and run a factory for the construction of an experiment with dirigible air ships.

Even since the French war department has succeeded in acquiring an airship which is in every way superior to any seen here it is realized that the French army, whose artillery is even now better than ours, is beginning another advantage which may mean disaster to Germany in case of war.

There are many services which may be rendered a fighting army by airships, which, floating at a height which makes them practically invulnerable, may drop large quantities of explosives on the troops of the enemy, his fortresses and ships.

Not only would the effect of such a thing be tremendous, but the moral effect can hardly be estimated.

It is worth remembering in this connection that the former international agreements, according to which no explosives may be dropped from airships, have expired.

DUNRAVEN IN FLIGHT

English Earl Hit by Failure of American Firm

Special Cable to The Telegram.
BY PAUL LAMBETH.

LONDON, May 26.—The Earl of Dunraven, whose efforts to win the America's cup, New Yorkers will not soon forget, has sustained one blow after the other of late.

The deaths of his two daughters were a great sorrow to him. Fortunately, his surviving daughter, Lady Eileen Wynnham-Quinn, is so devoted to her parents that she positively refuses to think of marriage.

Lord Dunraven's latest blow is a very large pecuniary loss. He inherited a fortune in an American printing concern, which came to grief, and this loss has seriously crippled his capital.

He has always lived in great state, is an excellent and lavish landlord and has no fewer than three large estates—one, Adare Manor, in Ireland, another in Wales and the third near London.

PARIS, May 26.—The police have captured the accomplice of Raoul-Walton, the anarchist, after a search lasting fifteen years. The man's name is Croset. He was recently arrested with two other men by the police. They were engaged in hiding a complete set of burglar tools in a quarry at St. Germain.

PARIS, May 26.—Threatened with blindness, a promising young art student named Edouard Ambrogio has committed suicide in the Latin quarter.

He was pitifully poor, but very ambitious and his work was greatly praised by his masters and fellow students. To buy his canvas and colors he frequently denied himself food, so determined was he to become a great artist.

But his sight began to fail, and on consulting an oculist he learned that he would inevitably become totally blind. This terrible news threw him into such deep despair that he shot himself with an antique revolver.

A despairing note which he left behind said that he preferred death to blindness.

PARIS, May 26.—The prize for audacity in prison-breaking must be awarded to Giuseppe Flore, an Italian.

If the story of his escape from Chalons-sur-Marne and his subsequent exploits is true.

Several years ago Jean Leblay, while studying at the school of pharmacy here, fell in love with a girl of good family.

The parents of both young people would not consent to a marriage, so they ran away and lived together in a little flat for four years. They were dreadfully poor, but happy.

At the end of that time M. Leblay's father persuaded him to return to his native city of Blois and wed a wealthy young woman, the daughter of a friend of his.

He drove to the house where they had lived together, and there learned that his little-loved companion had pined and died in deepest poverty.

BERLIN, May 26.—An electric station indicator is a blessing for railway travelers which has been invented by Herr Adolph Lichtenstein of Vienna.

It consists simply of a small box in each compartment, with a glass front behind which is a linen roll showing the name of the next station at night, and the changes are worked by an electric motor controlled by the conductor.

LONDON, May 26.—Austrians, knowing the extraordinary antipathy which Londoners have for Germans, are doing their best to push their goods at the Austrian exhibition, which is now in full swing at Earl's Court.

As a rule these annual exhibitions mean nothing more to Londoners than a pleasant out-of-door place in which to listen to bands and dine, and sitting down on the bench where he had spent so many happy hours watching the passersby in his student days, he blew his brains out.

LONDON, May 26.—The recent return of the Prince and Princess of Wales from their seven months' tour in India gave Portsmouth and London the opportunity the country loves of a right royal welcoming home.

JAPAN READY FOR RUSS. WAR

Mikado Seeks to Drive Russia From Coast

TROOPS AT FRONT

Conflict and Plans No Secret and Portsmouth Peace But an Armistice

BERLIN, May 26.—News of rather alarming nature comes from the Far East which seems to indicate that the outbreak of another Russo-Japanese conflict may come even sooner than predicted by M. Bashirow.

German consular agents report that the evacuation of Manchuria by the Japanese troops is going on very slowly. At New Years there were still, according to a conservative estimate, about 600,000 picked Japanese troops in the Chinese province and a German correspondent at Vladivostok who is known as a thoroughly competent and exceedingly reliable writer, always very guarded in his statements, takes his paper in this city that the mikado is not transporting his soldiers back to Japan, but is keeping them in Korea, where Seoul, Pen-Yang, Wihai and other places are being evacuated from its financial losses for whom immense permanent barracks have been built.

He also states that during a recent trip through northern Korea he had occasion to see strong fortifications which have been built by Japan. The fortifications at Tilien have not been destroyed, but occupied by young Japanese recruits, who are being drilled and made thoroughly familiar with the surrounding country.

Besides Japan has begun the construction of a merely military railroad from Mukden over Wihshu to Seoul which will be of immense strategic importance in case of a coming war.

That Japan keeps Korea tied hand and foot is beyond any doubt. The fate of that country is sealed. The death of the aged Emperor Li-Chai will make Korea a Japanese province. In Japan no one makes any secret of the aggressive plans of the government and the peace of Portsmouth is openly spoken of as a mere armistice to which the country agreed to recuperate from its financial losses. Russia is to be driven away from the Pacific coast at any cost and this Japan hopes to accomplish without any trouble. She is absolutely mistress of the sea, and her army considers itself absolutely invincible and in every respect superior to Russia's.

Russia has done little or nothing to prevent the success of her enemy's plans. General Grodekow has been sent east to reorganize General Linsvitch's demoralized troops, but he has no capable assistants. He can accomplish nothing, and it is considered a serious mistake by German military experts that he has placed General Finbergler in command of his left wing, because the Japanese plan of attack is clearly understood. Japan will never allow the Russian army to remain idle in Manchuria, but will incessantly be sending into Trowobalkalica. This will mean that the Russian left wing will be the most important and will have to bear the brunt of the battles, Russia, which is daily sending troops home, will be at an immense disadvantage from the start, as in the last of the war all decisions will be taken in the war department at St. Petersburg, which can know nothing about the true state of affairs.

The Russian diplomats hope to prevent a war by bringing the northern part of Sachalin to Great Britain, which country also intends to buy the southern part from Japan; but it is more than likely that Japan will sell her part to England, and England only to raise money for the second war with Russia.

ROYALTY ENJOYS TRIP TO INDIA

Prince and Princess of Wales Unbend to Holiday

LONDON, May 26.—The recent return of the Prince and Princess of Wales from their seven months' tour in India gave Portsmouth and London the opportunity the country loves of a right royal welcoming home.

A short time ago there was hardly a royal prince or princess left in England. Now the home-coming of king and queen, prince and princess brings the country to the heart again.

The prince adds lustre to his reputation with every new voyage—he is a man with some business to do in the world, and does it admirably. The princess has enjoyed something more than a parade of India, an India on show for her benefit. She entered right into the European life there, and made many more friends among the king's subjects than is possible in England.

It must be as pleasant—and infinitely more fun—for a royalty to unbend to a holiday as it is to any of the rest of us. The expanded under the delicious influences of new customs and sunlit countries, therefore why not much more a prince and princess?

They look very unburdened and holiday turned; and London gave them as much of a welcome as could be thrown into a drive to Marlborough house. The children chaperoned their parents—at least they had that pleasant appearance of looking after somebody.

It was good reading to hear of how they had climbed to the roof of the admiralty house at Portsmouth when they were disappointed in meeting the "Renown" because of a heavy fog, and saw for themselves the first lights of the homeward bound. Three figures dancing impatiently on a jetty in the morning describes their attitude before the pinnae appeared to take them out.

FAGAR OF THE PAWNSHOP

BY FERGUS HUME

FTER the episode of the Florentine Dante Hagar, lost her high spirits. She sent Eustace away to make his fortune, and to discover, if possible, the lost heir of Jacob Dix. By this act of self-denial, as it really was, she had deprived herself of all pleasure; she had robbed herself of what might have been a bright future; consequently she was less cheerful than of yore. Nevertheless, she felt convinced that Eustace loved her, and that he would return her gratitude—possibly her hand—by returning with Goliath at his heels. When that event took place she would recover at once her spirits and her lover; but at present the business of the pawnshop took up her undivided attention, and forced her to put away sad thoughts and melancholy considerations. Also, Providence provided distraction for her dismal humors by sending her a negro to pawn a peck of amber beads. Although Hagar did not know it at the time, this was the beginning of a second and rather more serious adventure.

It was drawing to night one August evening when the woman made her appearance, and the atmosphere of the shop was darker than usual. Still, it was sufficiently light for Hagar to see that her customer was a tall and bulky negro, arrayed in a gaudy yellow dress, neutralized by trimmings of black jet beading. As the evening was hot and close, she wore a wide-brimmed hat, and her dress was without a waist, but displayed her somewhat shapeless figure to the full in this decidedly starting costume. Her hat was a garden of roses—red, white and yellow—and she wore a large silver brooch like a shield, an extensive necklace of silver coins, and many bangles of the same metal on her black wrists. As a contrast to these splendors she wore no gloves, nor did she hide her coal-black face with a veil. Altogether this odd customer was the blackest and most fantastically dressed negro that Hagar had ever seen, and in the dim light she looked a striking but rather alarming figure.

On Hagar coming to the counter this black woman produced out of a bag two clasped sealskin satchel a necklace, which she handed silently to Hagar for inspection. As the light was imperfect to admit of a close examination, Hagar lit the gas, but when it flamed up the negroess, as though unwilling to be seen too clearly in the searching glare, stepped back heavily into the darkness. Hagar put the retrograde movement down to the natural timidity of a person unaccustomed to pawning, and took but little notice of it at the time. Afterwards she had cause to remember it.

The necklace was a string of magnificent amber beads threaded on a slender chain of gold. Each bead was as large as the egg of a sparrow, and round the middle of every single one there was a narrow belt of tiny diamonds. The clasp at the back was of the gold, square in shape and curiously wrought to the representation of a Mosaic Ethiopian face, with diamonds for eyes. This queer piece of jewelry was unique of its kind, and was valued rapidly and considerably above its price. Nevertheless, she offered, according to custom, as low a sum as she would collect.

"I'll give five pounds on it," said Hagar, turning to the counter.

Rather to her surprise, the negroess accepted with a sharp nod and then took out of her bag a scrap of paper, on which was written in a cursive hand, "Hagar's road." The name and address were so imperfect that Hagar hesitated before making out the pawn ticket.

"You've no other name but Rosa?" she asked, sharply.

The negroess shook her head and kept her eyes in the shadow.

"And no more particular address than Kensington?" she demanded.

"No, no more," she answered, with a shrug.

Again the black woman made a negative sign, whereat, annoyed by these gestures, Hagar grew angered.

"What, you speak," she demanded, "as if you were dumb?"

At once the negroess nodded, and laid a finger on her lips. Hagar drew back, as she gave the name of an address, and she wished to pawn a valuable and unique piece of jewelry. The whole affair was queer, and, as Hagar considered, might be rather suspicious. "Perhaps this is a trick," she thought, "and I am disposing of stolen goods, as the necklace seemed too fine for her to wear." For the moment Hagar was undecided as to whether to pawn the necklace, but she was acting well within the legal limits of business; and if the going did appear in the matter no need be attended to her for the transaction. Blinded by these considerations, Hagar made out the ticket in the name of Rosa, and took a new five-pound note out of the cash drawer. As she was about to give the ticket and money across the counter, she paused. "I'll take the number of this note," she thought, going to the desk. "The negroess can't be traced by the number of address, but the number will find her if it is necessary."

During this precaution Hagar's eyes had been scribbled down the number of the five-pound note, and returning to the counter, as if handing the ticket to her queer customer, she stretched out her right hand, as if to hand the ticket, but she had a sharp look at the woman's face, which she noted mentally as a check of identification if necessary; however, she said nothing, but tried to get a good look at the woman's face. The customer, however, kept well in the shadows, and swept note and ticket up to her, hurriedly. Then she bowed and left the shop.

Five days later Hagar received a notice from New Scotland Street informing her that she had a parcel of five pounds in search of a necklace of amber beads set with diamonds clasped with a negro's face, which was to be sent to the detective department without delay. Hagar, suspicious, and recalling the name of the woman in which the negroess had scribbled her face, Hagar was not surprised to know the circumstances which had led to the notice, and she wrote at once about the parcel, herself to the same. Within four hours a stranger appeared, himself to see the amber necklace, and she handed it to a woman who had pawned the same. "A fat little man, with a sharp nose and shrewd, twinkling eyes, surrounded himself as Luke Hagar used to do, and he asked her to relate the circumstances of the pawning. This the girl told in a straightforward manner, but without committing herself to her own suspicions. At the conclusion of the narrative she displayed the amber beads which were carefully examined by Mr. Hovel. Then he slapped his knee, and whistled in a thoughtful sort of way.

"I guessed as much," said he, staring hard at Hagar. "The negroess did it."

"Did what?" asked the girl, curiously.

"Why," said Hovel, "murdered the old woman."

"Murder!" The word had a grotesque and cruel sound, which caused Hagar's cheek to pale when it rang in her ears. She had connected the amber beads with robbery, but scarcely with the taking of life. The idea that she had been in the company of a murderer gave Hagar a qualm, but, suppressing this as a weakness, she asked Hovel to tell her the details of the crime and how it bore on the pawning of the amber beads.

"It's just this way, miss," explained the detective, easily. "This Rosa is a nigger girl of Mrs. Arryford."

"Oh, yes; I suppose she thought she might lose the beads if she gave a wrong one, but the address ain't right. It's the other end of London as Mrs. Arryford lives, rather," added Hovel, correcting himself, "seeing she now occupies a Kensal Green grave—Camden Hill, miss, a sweet little house in Bedford Gardens, where she lived with Rosa and Miss Lyle."

"And who is Miss Lyle?"

"The companion of Mrs. Arryford. A dry stick of a spinster, miss; not to be compared with a fine girl like you." Hagar did not deign to notice the compliment, but sharply requested Mr. Hovel to continue his story, which he did, in no wise abashed by her cold demeanor.

"It's just this way, miss," said he again, "the old lady, the old maid, and the nigger wench lived together in Bedford gardens, a kind of happy family, as one might say. Mrs. Arryford was the widow of a West Indian gentleman, and as rich as Solomon. She brought those amber beads from Jamaica, and Rosa was always wanting them."

"Why? The necklace was very unsuitable for one of her condition."

"'Twasn't exactly the cost of it as she thought about," said Hovel, musingly. "Cause I ain't a fool, miss. Last week Mrs. Arryford was found in her bed with a carving knife in her heart, as dead as a door-nail, and the beads were missing. Miss Lyle she didn't know anything about it, and Rosa swore she hadn't left her room, so you see, we couldn't quite hit on who finished off Mrs. Arryford. But now as Rosa herself owned these beads, I'm sure she did the job."

"What made you think that the beads might have been pawned?"

"Oh, that was Miss Lyle's idea; a sharp old girl she is, miss. She was very fond of Mrs. Arryford, as she well might be, seeing as the old lady was rich and kept her like a princess. Often she heard Rosa ask for those beads, so she heard Mrs. Arryford was killed and the beads missing she told me as she was sure Rosa had done the trick."

"But the pawning?"

"Well, miss," said Hovel, scratching his chin, "it was just this way. Miss Lyle said as how Rosa, to get rid of the necklace until the affair of the murder was blown over, might pawn it. I thought so too, so I sent a printed slip to all the pawnshops in London. You wrote that the beads were here, so it seems as Miss Lyle was right."

"Evidently by the way, she gets the money of Mrs. Arryford?"

"A Mr. Frederick Jevons; he's a nephew of Miss Lyle's."

"Hagar," said Hovel, "how did you find out Hagar's road?"

"Why, yes, miss," replied Hovel, on whom the antagonistic attitude of the two women was not lost. "She keeps the pawnshop at which Rosa pawned the beads!"

"Miss Lyle gave a start of virtuous horror, and her thin lips wreathed in a viperous smile. 'The wretch did kill my poor friend, then,' she said in a soft and fluty voice. 'I knew it!'"

"She pawned the amber beads, Miss Lyle?"

"Now don't you say the wretch didn't kill my martyred friend," snapped Miss Lyle, going to the bell rope, "but will have her in, and perhaps this young person will recognize her as the wiper who pawned the beads."

"It is to be hoped so," said Hovel, very dryly, no approving, of being spoken at in the third person, "but the negroess kept her face turned away, and I might not."

"It is your duty to recognize her," exclaimed Miss Lyle, addressing herself to the girl for once. "I am convinced that Rosa is a dangerous criminal. Here she is—the black Jesabel!"

As the last word fell from her mouth the door opened and Rosa entered the room, whereat Hovel uttered an exclamation of surprise. This negroess was rather short, and more than a trifle stout. It is true that she wore a yellow dress trimmed with black jet beading; that silver ornaments were on her neck and wrists; also that she was without the wonderful hat. Still, Hovel was surprised, and explained her ejaculation forthwith.

"That is not the woman who pawned the beads," she declared, rising.

"Not the woman?" echoed Miss Lyle, violently. "She must be! This is Rosa!"

"Yis, yis! I Rosa," said the negroess, beginning to weep, "but I no kill my poor dear missy. Dat one big lie!"

"Are you sure, miss, that this is not the woman?" asked Hovel, rather dismayed.

Hagar stepped forward and looked sharply at the sobbing negroess up and down. Then she glanced at the woman's hands and shook her head.

"I am prepared to swear in a court of law that this is not the woman," she said, quietly.

"Rubbish, rubbish!" cried Miss Lyle, flushing. "Rosa coveted the necklace as it was connected with some debased African superstition, and—"

"One old faith!" interrupted Rosa, her eyes sparkling fire at the old maid, "and one missy she did wish to git it me, but you no let her."

"Certainly not," said Miss Lyle, with dignity. "The necklace was not fit for you to wear. And because I persuaded Mrs. Arryford not to give it to you, you murdered her, you wretch! Down on your knees, woman, and confess!"

"I no 'fess," exclaimed the terrified negroess. "I no kill my missy, I no git dose amber beads for money. If dose beads mine, I sure keep dem; day a mighty big fetish, for sure!"

"One moment," said Hovel, as Miss Lyle thus about to speak again, "let us conduct this inquiry calmly, and give the accused every chance. Miss," he said, turning to Hagar, "on what day, at what time, was it that the beads were pawned?"

Hagar calculated rapidly, and answered promptly: "On the evening of August 23, between 6 and 7 o'clock."

"Ah!" exclaimed Miss Lyle, joyfully, "and on that very evening Rosa was out, and did not return until 9!"

"I went to see Massa Jevons for you," said Rosa, vehemently. "You send me, my poor, dear friend, a letter, please. I'll listen to the creature's lies! Besides, Mr. Jevons's rooms are in Duke street, St. James, whereas it was at Lambeth you were."

"I no go to dat gemman's house. You send me to da train Waterloo!"

"Waterloo!" said Hovel, looking sharply at Rosa. "You were there?"

"Yis, massa, me dere at 7 and 8."

"In the neighborhood of Lambeth," murmured Rosa. "She might have gone to the pawnshop after all."

"Of course she did!" cried Miss Lyle, vindictively, "and pawned the amber beads of yours." The conference she dismissed the detective.

"She did nothing of the sort!" interposed Hovel, with spirit. "Whosoever pawned the beads, it was not this woman, as you seem to think. I know that Rosa killed Mrs. Arryford."

"She wanted the beads, young woman, and she killed my friend to obtain them."

"No, no, dat one big lie!"

"I am sure it is!" said Hovel, her face aflame. "I believe in your innocence, Rosa. Mr. Hovel," she added, turning to the detective, "you can't arrest this woman, as you have no grounds to do so."

"Well, if she didn't pawn those beads—"

"She did not, I tell you."

"She did!" cried Miss Lyle, angrily. "I believe you are an accomplice of the creature!"

What reply Hagar would have made to this accusation it is impossible to say, for at this moment a young man walked into the room. He was good looking in appearance and smart in dress, but there was a haggard look about his face which betokened disipation.

"This," said Miss Lyle, introducing him, "is my nephew, the heir to the property of my late dear friend. He is resolved, as such he is, to find out and punish the assassin of his benefactors. For my part, I believe Rosa to be guilty."

"And I," cried Hovel, with energy, "believe her to be innocent!"

"Let us hope she is," said Jevons, in a weary voice, as he removed his gloves. "I am tired of the whole affair."

"You are bound to punish the guilty," said Miss Lyle, in hard tones.

"But not the innocent," retorted Hovel, rising.

"Young woman, you are insolent!"

Hovel looked Miss Lyle up and down in the coolest manner; then her eyes wandered to the well-dressed figure of Jevons, the heir. What she saw in him made her feel it difficult to say; but after a moment's inspection she turned pale with suppressed emotion. Stepping forward, she was about to speak, when checking herself suddenly, she beckoned Hovel and advanced toward the door.

"My errand here is fulfilled," she said quietly. "Mr. Hovel, perhaps you will come with me."

"Yes, and you can go also, Rosa," cried Miss Lyle, angered by the insulting gaze of the girl. "I am mistress here in my nephew's house, and I refuse to let a murderess remain under its roof!"

"Be content," said Hovel, pausing at the door. "Rosa shall come with me, and when you see us again with Mr. Hovel you will then learn who killed Mrs. Arryford and why."

Hovel calculated rapidly, and answered promptly: "On the evening of August 23, between 6 and 7 o'clock."

"The pawnshop girl!" said he, in astonishment. "What do you want?"

"I wish to see you," replied Hagar, composedly, "but it is just as well as our conversation should be in private."

"Why, you can have nothing to say to me but what the whole world might hear."

"After I have mentioned the object of my visit you may think differently," said Hagar, with some dryness. "However, we'll talk here if you wish."

"No, no; come in," said Jevons, standing on one side. "Since you insist upon privacy, you shall have it. This way."

He showed her into a large and rather badly furnished room. Evidently Mr. Fred Jevons had not been rich until he inherited the fortune of Mrs. Arryford.

"I suppose you will be moving to the Bedford Gardens house soon?" said Hagar, sitting composedly in a large armchair.

"Is that what you came to speak to me about?" retorted Jevons, rudely. "Not exactly. Perhaps, as you are impatient, we had better get to business."

"Business! What business can I have to do with you?"

"Why," said Hagar, quietly, and looking directly at him, "the business of those amber beads which you—"

"I stammered Jevons, drawing back with a pale face.

"Also," said Hovel, solemnly, "the business which concerns the commission of crime."

"A—crime!" gasped the wretched creature.

"Yes—the most terrible of all crimes—murder!"

"What—what—what do you—"

Hagar rose from her chair, and, drawn to her full height, stretched out an accusing arm toward the young man. "What I mean you know well enough!" she said, sternly. "I mean that you murdered Mrs. Arryford!"

"It's a lie!" cried Jevons, sinking into a chair, for his legs refused to support him longer.

"It is not a lie—it is the truth; I have evidence!"

"Evidence!" He started up with dry and trembling lips.

"Yes, through her influence over Mrs. Arryford, you did induce her to make you her heir. You are fond of money; you are in debt, and you could not wait until the old lady died in the course of nature. On the night of the murder you were in the house."

"No, no! I swear—"

"You need not; you were seen leaving the house. To throw suspicion on Rosa you dressed yourself as a negroess, and came to pawn the amber bead necklace at my shop. I recognized that the supposed black woman was missus the little finger of the right hand. You, Mr. Jevons, are mutilated in the same way. Again, I paid you with a five-pound note. Of that note I took the number. It has been traced by the number, and you are the man who paid it away. I saw—"

Jevons jumped up, still white and shaking.

"I did not kill Mrs. Arryford; I did not pawn the beads. I did—"

"You did both those things!" said Hovel, brushing past him, "I have two witnesses who can prove what I say is true. Rosa! Mr. Hovel!"

She flung the outside door wide open, while Jevons again sank into the armchair, with an expression of horror on his white face. "Rosa! Hovel!" he muttered. "I am lost!"

Rosa and the detective entered quickly in response to Hagar's call, and with her looked down on the shrinking figure of the accused man.

"These are my witnesses," said Hovel.

"I saw dat man in de house when my missy died," said the negroess. "I hear noise in de night; I come down, and I see Massa Jevons, with his face white as de room of my missy, and Missus Lyle hit him out by de side door. He kill my poor missy—yes, I think dat."

"You hear," said Hovel to the terrified man.

"I traced the five-pound note you gave me by its number," said the detective. "Yes, he paid it away at his club, with an expression of horror on his white face. 'Rosa! Hovel!' he muttered. 'I am lost!'"

HAGAR OF THE PAWNSHOP

ed herself, went hurriedly out of the shop. Her manner was so wild, her words so ominous of evil, that Hagar had it on her mind to follow her, and, if possible, prevent the consequences of her despair. She hurried to the door, but Mrs. Lyle had disappeared, and as there was no one to mind the shop, Hagar could not go after her. Luckily, at this moment Horval turned the corner, and at once the girl beckoned to him.

"Miss Lyle—did you see her?" "Yes," said Horval, with a nod, "she's on her way across Westminster bridge."

"Oh, follow her—follow her, quickly!" cried Hagar, wildly. "She is not herself; she is bent on some rash deed."

Horval paused a moment in bewilderment; then, grasping the situation, he turned without a word and raced down the street on the trail of Miss Lyle. Hagar watch his hurrying figure until it turned the corner; then she retreated to the back parlor and hurriedly opened the envelope. On the sheet of paper she found within the following confession was written:

"I am not a spinster, but a widow," began the document, abruptly; "a twice married woman. By my first husband I had Frederick Jevons, who passes as my nephew, and whom I love better than by my own soul. When my second husband, Mr. Lyle, died, I cast about for some means of employment, as I was poor. Mrs. Arryford advertised for an unmarried woman as a companion; she absolutely refused to have any companion but a spinster. To get the situation, which was a good one, as Mrs. Arryford was rich, I called myself Miss Lyle, and obtained the place. Mrs. Arryford had no relatives and much money, so I schemed to obtain her wealth for my son, whom I introduced as my nephew. Rosa, the black maid, had a great deal of influence over the weak minded mistress, and in some way—I don't know how—she fathomed my purpose. It was a battle between us, and Rosa was determined that I should not get the money of Mrs. Arryford for my son. Finally I triumphed, and Frederick was left sole heir of all the old lady's wealth. Then Rosa learned by eavesdropping the true relationship between myself and Frederick. She told the mistress, and with Mrs. Arryford I had a stormy scene, in which she declared her intention of revoking her will and turning me and my son out on the world as paupers. I begged, I implored, I threatened; but Mrs. Arryford, backed up by that wicked Rosa, was firm. I sent for my son to try and soften the old lady, but he was not in town, and did not come to see me till late at night. When he arrived I told him that I had killed Mrs. Arryford. I did so to prevent her from altering her will, and out of love for my dear son, lest he should lose the money. Frederick was horrified, and rushed from the house. I believe Rosa saw me let him out by the side door. I was determined to throw the blame on Rosa, as I hated her so. Knowing that she coveted the necklace of amber beads, I stole it from the neck of the dead woman and gave it to my son next day. I suggested that he should dress up as Rosa and pawn the necklace, so that she might be suspected. To save me, he did so. I obtained a dress that Rosa was fond of wearing—yellow silk trimmed with black beads, also the jewelry of the creature. Frederick blackened his face and pawned the beads in a pawnshop at Lambeth. I sent Rosa on a pretended errand to Waterloo station at the time. Frederick was pawning the beads, so as to get evidence against her that she was in the neighborhood. Then I suggested to Horval, the detective, that the beads might have been pawned. He found the shop, and I thought my plot had succeeded, that Rosa would be condemned and hanged. Unfortunately the woman who kept the pawnshop was clever, and traced Frederick by means of his mutilated right hand. I hate her. Frederick is now in prison on a charge of murder which he did not commit. I killed Mrs. Arryford. Frederick knows nothing. He helped me to save myself by trying to throw the blame on Rosa. All useless. I am guilty, and I am determined that he shall not suffer for my sin. Officers of the law, I command you to release my son and arrest me. I am the murderer of Mrs. Arryford. I swear it.

JULIA LYLE

Witnesses—
Amelia Tyke (housemaid)
Mark Drew (butler)

Hagar let the document fall from her hands with a sensation of pity for the wretched woman.

"How she must love her son," thought the girl, "to have murdered a kind and good woman for his sake! It is terrible! Well, I suppose he will now be released, and will enter into possession of the wealth his mother schemed to obtain for him. But he must do justice to Rosa for all the trouble he has caused her. He must give her an annuity, and also the necklace of amber beads which has been the cause of tracing the crime home to its door. As for Mrs. Lyle—"

At this moment, white and breathless, Horval rushed into the parlor. Hagar sprang to her feet and looked anxiously at him, expectant of bad news. She was right.

"Miss Lyle is dead," he said hoarsely. "Dead? Ah!" thought Hagar to herself. "I thought as much."

"She threw herself over Westminster bridge, and has just been picked out of the water," said Horval. "Dead!" said Hagar again. "Dead!" "As a door nail," replied the detective in a perplexed tone. "But why—why did she commit suicide?"

Hagar sighed, and in silence handed to the detective the confession of the dead woman.

KILLED BY HORSE KICK

Young Man Met Death by Blow in the Side

Special to The Telegram.
CORNICANA, Texas, May 26.—Robert Cates, a young man of 21 years of age, died near Richland, in this county, yesterday from the effects of a horse kick in his right side.

The young man went to a pasture to catch an old horse and had put the bridle on the animal when another horse came near and the horse that had been caught wheeled and kicked at it. The blow hit young Cates in the side, but he felt little pain from the blow at the time and mounted the animal and rode home. Late in the afternoon he began to suffer great pain, and died that night.

WHEN THE LAW WINKED

By R. F. Paine

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—A month and the living part of San Francisco still lights itself to bed with candles, still cooks in the gutter, still freezes in the packed, fireless homes, for it must be known that this "glorious climate" varies at 3 p. m. daily by reason of the fog-laden wind that would make a polar bear whinner with discomfort. The features No. 663 wore the awful majesty of the law.

Yesterday afternoon, a little girl sat shivering on the curbstone at Ninth and Folsom streets. The cold wind whipped her thin skirt about her bare legs and her smoke-begrimed knees knocked together. She was about 8 years old, and her trouble was awful; for before her, gazing down upon her and her little brother, who nestled at her side, was patrolman No. 663, a great fierce-looking fellow, with broad face, cheeks polished red by the weather, and one of those short, savage mustaches which make one think of a black-and-tan terrier shaking its tail. The features No. 663 wore the awful majesty of the law.

No. 663 was the law. To the little girl, the eyes of No. 663 glared with the vengeance of the law, his bright star looked big as the bottom of her mother's dishpan, and every shining button on his well-tailored uniform pierced her wretched heart and read her guilt, for by her side lay a great bag, big as herself, filled with loot. It was awful. Who would have looked for the law in this vast desert of crumpled walls and dusky ash hills? Yet, here was the law and here the tell-tale bag, with a track in the ash leading to nearby ruins, as proof positive as that made by a snail in the creek bottoms.

"You've been looting," said No. 663. The little girl almost shrieked at the word, for men and been shot or hanged to lamp posts for that, only a month ago. It was awful. Who would have looked for the law in this vast desert of crumpled walls and dusky ash hills? Yet, here was the law and here the tell-tale bag, with a track in the ash leading to nearby ruins, as proof positive as that made by a snail in the creek bottoms.

"Yes, been looting," said No. 663. The little girl almost shrieked at the word, for men and been shot or hanged to lamp posts for that, only a month ago. It was awful. Lightning Strikes Residence

Special to The Telegram.
WACO, Texas, May 26.—During a thunderstorm the residence of R. Davis at Provident Heights, a suburb, was struck by lightning. The bolt passed down a tree, through the dining room and out through a back gallery, tearing out two sections of lattice from the gallery as it left. Mrs. Davis was in the dining room and while shocked slightly was not injured.

Horse Theft Charged

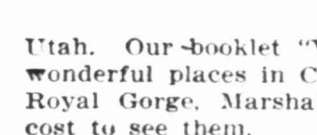

Special to The Telegram.
LAWTON, O. T., May 26.—Alva Johnson of Lawton, L. T., was taken from the county jail here today by Ryan, L. T., to be arraigned before the United States commissioner on the charge of stealing horses. Johnson was arrested at Walter last Sunday charged with stealing two horses near Addington, L. T.

Women Chew Finger Nails From Heredity, Says Doctors

"Heredity? Look at these finger nails of mine," said a physician of somewhat stolid exterior. "Observe that every one of them is bitten down to the quick."

"So you see that in my case the nail-biting habit is distinctly hereditary." "My curiosity as to this matter led me to investigate in the case of other persons all of them in my practice, who had the nail-biting habit, and I found that in every case I traced their immediate progenitors, on one side or the other, had the nail-biting habit."

THE MARATHON MYSTERY

BY BURTON E. STEVENSON
COPYRIGHT 1906, BY HENRY HOLT & COMPANY

An unknown man is killed at the Marathon, an apartment house. Godfrey, a reporter, and Simmons, his detective friend, find Grace Croydron, an acquaintance of the newspaper man, standing in the room with a smoking pistol in her hand. She proves her innocence of direct connection with the crime and is freed from suspicion.

Part II
Lester, an attorney who knows Godfrey, takes apartments at the Marathon, the two thinking that Tremaine, who lives there and who becomes acquainted with Lester, has some connection with the murder. Cecily, the woman companion to Tremaine, so Lester learns in the course of their acquaintance, keeps a small pet snake, called Fefe, whose species is such that a bite kills the person bitten in a very short time.

Part III
Tremaine visits the Delroys. Grace Croydron is there, Tremaine makes love to her and Drysdale, also one of the house party, becomes enraged as he is engaged to Grace. It is proposed to immerse a pearl necklace belonging to Mrs. Delroy in sea water, to restore its lost brilliancy, two men being engaged to guard it. The elder man thus engaged is killed and investigation shows that Drysdale was the only person supposed to be out of the house during the time just preceding the finding of the dead man. He is arrested, charged with murder and taken to jail in New York city.

Lester finds some clippings under a carpet in his room at the Marathon, the same room in which the first murder was committed. He thinks they have some connection with the first murder. He shows them to the newspaper reporter.

The two decide that Tremaine is the legal husband of Mrs. Delroy. Grace Croydron's sister, that Tremaine killed the two men, and that the first was a former criminal partner, who sent the clippings to Tremaine, following traitorous actions by Tremaine. It is announced that Cecily is to return to the island where she first met Tremaine.

"Ah," she said, with a little smile, "I was beginning to fear you, all that seemed so supernatural. But now I see where your information came from."

"It is correct, then?" asked Godfrey, a gleam of triumph flashing across his face.

"Oh, I understand! It was merely theorizing. Well, it was very cleverly done, Mr. Godfrey."

"And it is correct?" he persisted. "She hesitated yet a moment, but there was no denying the impertinence of his gaze."

"Yes," she answered, "yes," Godfrey leaned back in his chair with a long sigh of relief. He had won the battle.

"Miss Croydron," he said, "I'm going to reward you for your frankness by telling you something which I had intended to keep secret a while longer. Just to punish you. Your sister never ceased in buying the man off. Father paid him 50,000 francs, I believe—perhaps it was the fact that he knew her was not really Edith's husband—that he himself had committed a crime—which made him take it. In the following December he wrote father that he was about to sail for Martinique in a ship called the Centaur. He said he intended to buy a plantation at Martinique and make that his home. In February we learned that the Centaur had been lost, with all on board. After eight years, it seemed certain that he was dead, and Edith felt free to marry again."

"Was Mr. Delroy informed of this early indiscretion?"

"Pardon me for asking the question, Miss Croydron; but it was necessary. When was it you first learned that Tremaine was still alive?"

"One night nearly two months ago, Edith brought his letter to me. He demanded that she meet him in that apartment house. I knew she could not bear such a meeting, and yet he must be seen. I offered to go in her stead; I had some wild idea of appealing to his better nature, of persuading him—"

"She stopped, silenced by her own emotion. "That, of course, would not have altered the fact that your sister was Edith's," observed Godfrey.

"No; that was the terrible part of it, but we thought we would solve that problem after we had settled the other. I went. He opened the door for me. He did not look in the least like a second-hand, nor did he act like one. He listened to me with attention and seeming respect. I had brought $1,200 with me—all that we could gather together at the moment—and I pressed it upon him, urging him to take it and go away. He pretended to refuse the money, to protest that that was not in the least what he wanted, but I compelled him to take it. And just as I was hoping that I had prevailed with him, the door of the bedroom opened and a horrible drunken man staggered out. "Well, Vic," he cried, "so this is the gal, is it? She's a likely piece. I wouldn't give her up, Vic, no, not for ten thousand—"

"Go back to bed, you drunken brute!" cried Tremaine, and took him roughly by the arm.

"But the other shook him off. "Don't lay your hands on me, Vic!" he cried. "Don't dare lay your hands on me!"

"I saw a very devil spring into Tremaine's face. He looked about him for some weapon, and picked up a piece of pipe that lay beside the radiator. Thompson lurched heavily toward him. "Give it to me, Vic!" he asked. "You try it on an' I'll blow your game like I did once before down at Sydney."

He struck at Tremaine, but the latter sprang away and in an instant had brought the pipe down upon his head. Thompson fell like a log; then Tremaine snatched out a revolver—I dimly understood what was coming—indeed, I had my own revolver in my hand—and I fired at him; but my shot went wild, while his—"

"She stopped and buried her face in her hands, overcome for the moment by the terrible spectacle her words had evoked.

"She controlled herself by an effort; took down her hands—"

"He put his pistol away and stepped over very close to me.

"Miss Croydron," he said rapidly, "it will be well for you to say you did not know me. I have committed no crime—he was the aggressor—what I did was done in self-defense. One thing more—your sister has nothing to fear from me—I shall never bother her again—I promise you that."

"He was gone in an instant and then the janitor came and you and the detectives."

Appetite Is Important

It insures Perfect Digestion and Assimilation. of Food—The Best Appetizer.

Eminent doctors agree that food cannot be properly digested and assimilated unless there is a sharp appetite for it. The mere eating of food is not, in itself, of benefit. The nutrition which the food contains must be well digested and assimilated if permanent good is to be gained from it. Therefore the importance of the appetite!

There is no other such safe, sure means for creating a healthy appetite as Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer taken before or with meals, and it is an almost absolute guarantee of perfect digestion.

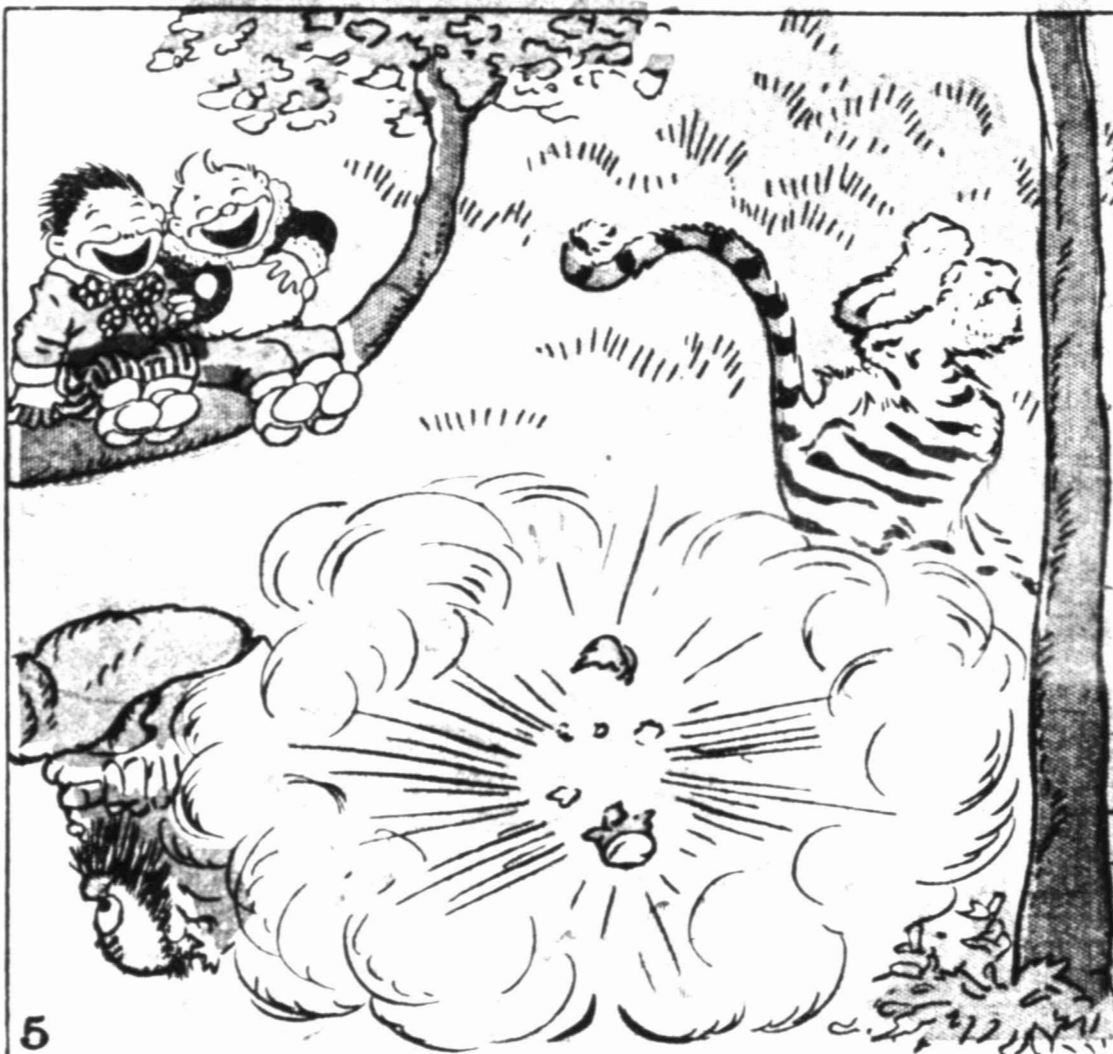

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is more than an appetizer and active aid to digestion. It is a food of highest quality, always strengthening and nutritious, rich in the vitalizing, predigested food elements of Pabst eight-day malt and the tonic properties of choice selected hops.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer nourishes the whole body, invigorates the blood and refreshes the brain. Always pure and delicious, brewed in perfect cleanliness; perfect in age, purity and strength.

HAND MADE LACE & EMBROIDERY

THE LINGERIE PARASOL

PHOTOS BY STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER BURTON

LINGERIE MODES TO BE A FAD THIS SEASON

The passion for embroidery is one phase of the fad for the lingerie modes...

When it comes to the lingerie waists there is no limit. In fact, it would seem as if no other style of waist is to be worn at all...

LINGERIE HAT

RACE SUICIDE INEFFICIENT.

Race suicide has not prevented the human family from making a fair showing...

How can any one imagine a prettier picture than the lingerie maid? If she does not tie up a heart in her bonnet bows...

One nice thing about the lingerie is that they are good for the tall and short maid alike...

SAILOR STYLE FOR THE SCHOOLGIRL.

TITTLE SUGGESTIONS.

To clean rusty flat irons rub them with a cloth wet in kerosene and then rub them over dry salt.

TOAST BETTER THAN BREAD.

Onion is better as an article of diet than ordinary bread, says Health, for the simple reason that it is better cooked...

SOME HINTS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Be sure to get dead white mohair for the white skirt. Cream color destroys the beauty of the lingerie blouse.

It is most uncomfortable to have your long gloves slipping down and showing a red elbow.

The more elaborate ones have a rosette of ribbon fastened where the elastic joins, with several long ends.

In the wardrobe of every woman who makes any pretensions to dress there should always be one white silk slip, made entirely separate from any gown...

HUSBAND BY RIGHT.

Old maids are unknown in Turkey, and the word 'spinster' has no equivalent in the language of the country.

Exquisite white brocade, the rose pattern in a faded yellow shade, makes this regal princess gown, the bodice portion of which drapes the figure in soft folds.

HINTS FOR THIS SEASON.

Evening gowns of chiffon velvet are extremely good style. Touches of rich old gold and black, used together, are a new note.

COME AGAIN.

Bill Collector—But you told me last week that you guessed you'd see me today.

BRESLIN cast a look about the room more than ten times...

LINDA ANTHONY clicked her eyes and pushed back her head...

A CASE OF DEDUCTION

BRESLIN cast a quick glance about the room. It was not more than ten seconds before the others became aware of the addition to their number, but in that time he had gained a comprehensive idea of the place.

"Then all clues seem to point to him," said Breslin. "I am very much afraid so." "You have no time lock on the vault."

BRESLIN CAST A QUICK GLANCE ABOUT THE ROOM.

he told the detective, "and found them open. I went back upstairs, called Judson, the young man who made enough of an inspection to tell what had been taken. Then we shut the bank doors and waited until you came. I thought it would be best to leave everything undisturbed."

"I can understand that," said Breslin sympathetically. "Perhaps you can give me the information I want. I thought I could obtain here some details as to this Taylor, who is supposed to have committed the robbery."

Bryne made a gesture of impatience. "That is trivial," he said. "Do you purpose making a case out of a love for flowers?"

MISS BYRNE GAVE TAYLOR'S ADDRESS.

"I was wearing one that morning," explained Clarkson. "I wear one every day. It is a very curious development of the chrysanthemum. Perival has a cutting. He is an enthusiast in a small way."

"I have the report of our San Francisco office that you made the last payment on the ranch you were buying ten days after the robbery, and Perival has confessed that you had promised him a place as head gardener. That was his bribe for letting you in and out of the bank."

A SIMPLE SOLUTION

LINDA ANTHONY heard a sharp click of her gate. Quickly laying down her trowel, she pushed back her blue-check gingham sunbonnet and looked in the direction from which the sound came.

"I did want to have him paint our house with some, but Hiram had promised the job to Mr. Elder before this man came, and he won't back out. You must have seen the new man go by your home — he boards past here, up at the Wilsons."

"Well, maybe I could manage it, if you had a special reason for wanting it done then. I had planned to do another job, but the man ain't in any hurry about it, so I think I can get him to wait."

At last she saw Mrs. Grimes coming down the street. Fortunately, she had on a huge sunbonnet, which shut off the view of Linda's house until she turned at the gate.

She started to get the money, but Mr. Ludlow stopped her. "Linda," he said, "I ain't satisfied with that old bargain now, and I'd like to change it."

"I want you, and nothing else will satisfy me now," Linda's face was a study. Surprise, incredulity and joy struggled for mastery.

"I should think no. No, I do exactly as I please and William has never once found fault with me. It would simply break my heart if he did. I told him that before we were married, and he said he never would. He has kept that promise at all events."

THE STRANGER IN TOWN WAS A PAINTER.

PLANTIN' YOUR FLOWER SEED? SAID MRS. GRIMES.

The Best Way

"To tell the truth," said the young matron to her dear old friend, "William is a little—well, I don't want you to misunderstand me and I'm quite sure that you won't. I would never dream of saying as much as that to anybody else in the world."

"No, O. O. does almost everything I tell him, but every once in a while I want him to do something and he just shakes his head or laughs, and then goes away and does exactly the opposite. And when he acts like that I can't coax him a bit. So you see I am afraid he is a little self-willed and it worries me at times. Don't you think it is perfectly awful for me to sit here and talk about my husband in this way?"
