BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, Oct. 13.—The high tower erected by the New York pool room interests to circumvent the Pinkerton plans of screening the course from the rooms agent. was dynamited today. The entire structure was completely demolished. The steel girders were twisted and bent into a shapeless mass. As a result the pool rooms did not get a line of information today and were completely outgeneraled by the Pinkertons.

The tower was sixty feet high and had been erected just across the railroad track from Belmont Park, from the top of which two spies armed with telescopes were able to obtain the results of every race and telephone the information out. There were 311,290 less bales of cotton ginned in the entire United-States up to this date this year than for the same period last year. Houston Official Declares the Strikers Failed to Confer on Their Demands

Special to The Telegram.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 13.-Vice President Fay of the Southern Pacific tonight issued a statement relative to the strike of the railway clerks which took place today over the entire Atlantic system. It was in effect that the grievance committee of the order had called on him for a conference and he had declined to meet them, telling them kindly to take up their grievance with the officers to whom they reported. This they refused to do and the strike was declared without the officials being advised what is wanted. That the trouble is the outgrowth of the recent Algiers strike. That the clerks have been paid better wages than most other lines pay.

Will Fill Places

It is also set forth that the company will at once proceed to fill the strikers' places. The strikers say the company refused to confer with them, that they want recognition of their union and less hours of work, for they are the poorest paid and the hardest worked of all employes. At Algiers about one hundred are out, thirtythree out at Beaumont, ninety at New Orleans, ten at Echo, twenty-five at Victoria and similar numbers at other

ENGLISH BUY TEXAS LANDS

British Spinners to Raise Cotton in America

NEED U.S. PRODUCT

Large Number of Plantations Will Be Bought in U. S. Loss to Growers

Special to The Telegram. GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 13.-Advices were received here from London to the effect that Lancashire spinners have received a report from the commission of the south recommending purchases of lands in the southern states for cultivation of cotton and a second deelgation of English spinners will soon arrive in Texas for that purpose. It will be remembered last fall a party of Manchester spinners made a tour of the south and visited this port and other sections of the country with the particular object to promote the movement of better handling and baling of cotton. In this they were encouraged by cotton men here and elsewhere in the state. Their visit to southwestern Texas resulted in the purchase of several thousand acres of cotton land to be immediately put under cultivation.

No Surprise in Move

That they should have taken advantage of the opportunity of studying the possibilities of buying and and raising their own cotton is not strange nor is it regarded out of the ordinary that they should have been impressed with the outlook that they are sending a second commission here with the more extended powers which will probably result in the acquirement of a number of large plantstions. The problem of finding suitable lands for cotton cultivation has been serious for English spinners and the British government have spent vast sums of money and sacrificed many lives in its African conquests hoping to get such lands. Depend on U. S. Product

Up to date none of these lands will produce the same quality of cotton which is produced in the southern states and so English spinners have to have American cotton to keep the mills going. American cotton painters have at last realized their position. It is natural that spinners should seek to raise their own cotton rather than depend upon American farmers, who in recent years received larger prices for the product than since the war.

Taft and Bacon are on board the battleship Louisiana with their wives. Funston started on the Virginia. Their departure was without ceremony. The only official notice of the event was the dinner given last night to General Funston, which was given by the Cuban Veterans Association and which was largely attended. Assuming the reins of government Governor Magoon issued the following

proclamation: Magoon's Proclamation

"The policy declared and the assurances given by Secretary Taft will be strictly adhered to and carried out. As provisional governor I shall strictly exercise the powers and perform the duties provided for by the Third article of the appendix to the constitution of Cuba for the preservation of Cuban independence and the protection of life and property.

"As soon as it proves consistent with the attainment of these ends, I shall seek to bring about the restoration of the ordinary agencies and methods of government under the other and general provisions of the Gu-ban constitution."

Mr. Morgan, the American minister, gave a largely attended reception last night at his residence. In addition to Secretaries Taft and Bacon and their wives, the guests included about all the army and navy officers here, as well as a number of representatives of both sides in the revolution. Even a few ordinary, harmless Cibans, who only pay the bills of war, were there. New Party Formed

The moderate party seems to have completely disintegrated. The remnants held meetings Thursday and voted to form a new party to be called the national republicans. Only nominally victorious at the polls and defeated in the field, their leaders were discredited and are denounced by those who were their closest political friends. A decree published in the official gazette today says the existence of the Cuban congress will be officially rec-ognized, but that the body will be declared to be in recess during the existence of the provisional government. The question of the salaries of the members will be held under consideration and will be made the subject later of special resolutions. Pending a decision no salaries will be paid. Greater Prosperity Is Seen by Wall Street Powers

MARKET FOR CROPS

Harriman Is Still Pushing His Plans Concerning Transcontinental Lines

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Oct. 18 .- The course of prices in Wall street for the past week has indicated that those in charge of the campaign for higher prices are simply marking time. They believe that there is nothing within the possibilities of the next few months to change the drift of prices or prosperity, which seems not to have reached its highest level. The possibility of revision of the tariff caused some uneasiness a few weeks ago, but the strong position on the steel trust

now makes tariff revision a matter of lesser consequence. Big Roads Planned Some leading spirits in the steel trust are advocating tariff reform and the investing public is being made familiar with the possibility of such reform and thus the frightening element of such a thing is minimized. The few men who make that high financial life into which investors may not enter, are still busy with the plans for trans-continental railroads. The scheme which Harriman is soon to issue, showing what is in the treasury of the Union and Southern Pacifics, in addition to what has heretofore been reported, is ready to be issued whenever the proper moment arrives. Harriman does not propose to waste such good stock market ammunition by letting it become public until conditions are ripe.

Movement of Crops The movements of crops have proceeded far enough to prove beyond a doubt their tremendous size. The estimate of $7,000,000,000 put on the value of the year's crops by an expert some weeks ago is proving rather low. Prices are holding up surprisingly well in grain, while in cotton the advance in market value of the crop is something sensational. The reason seems to be that the world has less of stocks on hand left over from last year than was supposed. In view of the shortage of stocks of grain and cotton a good market for the present crop is assured and Wall street feels that these must reflect higher prices for securi-

NSANE GERMAN MAY BE DEPORTED

E. Thiel, of Doubted Lunacy Now Insane

the afternoon of Aug. 28 there vas the novelty of five separate lunacy dals in the county court of Tarrant ounty. At the time of the trial those court room were in grave doubt to the accuracy of the verdict of e jury in one of the cases, and that was made the subject of some special vestigation by some of those who ought that it was possible an in-stice had been done. The man in estion is named G. E. Thiel and the uble seemed to be due at that time re to an inability to understand at he said than to any real defect the mind. His language was what called "Umbrian," or Hungarian man, and while some could understand some of the things he said, thers entirely failed to understand Thiel's speech, tho they were themelves German-speaking people. Subsequent developments make it lear that the jury did not err in its erdict and there is now no room for oubt that he is "as crazy as a loon." As well as could be understood, he as been in this country only about hree months, but that is based largely on statements made by the man himself in his seeming sane moments, for he had those moments when he was emingly as rational as anyone could

The element of doubt as to the time of his residence in the United States alses another question, and that is, tho should be charged with the care the man? If he has been in the lited States less than two years and can be established that that is a t, then the deportation of the afted man can be demanded of the amship company which brought him

The local United States immigration ector, H. W. Robb, has had his attention directed, informally, to the case and is now making some investigations to determine if it is a fact that Thiel is but a new-comer to the United States. It will be a most difficult matter to trace, in all probability, unless it can be found with certainty how the man came to Fort Worth, and about that there is some question. But this much is certain. A careful investigation will be made, and if the identity of the steamship company can be fixed and the further fact established that the mental condition of the immigrant, Thiel, was unsound at the time he landed in this country, he will be deported at the expense of the offending steamship company.

PLANNING A SLAV COLONY

Chicago Promoter Brings Russians to Texas

A Russian colony for Archer county is the project of Dr. C. C. Young of Chicago, who is now in Fort Worth. He is on his way to Archer county, where he and his associates are establishing a Russian colony. His associates are J. F. Hendricks, president of the bank of Melburn, Iowa, and F. W. Smith, a member of the board of trustees of the Baptist college at Colum-

Dr. Young, who is taking active management of the colonization, states that his firm has just closed a deal for the Club House ranch, consisting of forty thousand acres, situated in Archer county. This is almost contiguous to the Brigman ranch, which is now owned by his company, and which was purchased about five months ago. This is also a large body of land, and is now partly settled by Russians. The entire colony, Dr. Young states, will be of Russians exclusively, and many of them have already purchased small tracts. He will leave Monday for Wichita Falls, where he will meet a party of emigrants, and conduct them to their new homes. Others are expected to arrive within a few weeks, and in a short time it is expected that the greater portion of that vast body of land will be cut up into small tracts of from forty to one hundred acres and put in cultivation by Russian farmers. Dr. Young is himself of Russian

He has lived in the United birth. States for several years, and is the originator of the idea of establishing an exclusive Russian colony in Texas. He says that as a rule Russians are thore and systematic farmers and will practically revolutionize that section of the state in an agricutural way.

"Libraries in Public Schools" was a subject of discussion Saturday afternoon, and the wide scope it took proved of exceptional interest to every teacher present. When to begin the use of the libraries, how to secure them, the kind of books for them, were the three chief divisions of the subject, each of which was handled in a manner that indicated much thought and study on the part of thought and study on the part of those who took part in the discus-

The attendance at this meeting was unusually good, evidencing the interest felt by the teachers in the object for which the association was formed and both President Fincher and Secretary Ramsey are confident of the greatest good resulting. The program for the next regular meeting, it is promised, will be at least equally as interesting as that of the meeting just

WANT BIG VOTE POLLED

Plan a Record Vote for Candidate

Campbell Chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee G. A. Carden is very solicitous that the vote for governor to be polled by the democratic party in November shall be a large one, for the reason that the representation of the several counties in the next convention will be based on that vote. He has sent out a general circular letter on that subject and has asked that the county chairmen act. No action has been taken in Tarrant county, the there were current rumors Saturday that a meeting of the county executive committee was to be heid at the court house. Ben P. Ayres, the county chairman, was out of the city all of the day, and is not expected to return to Fort Worth until Sunday afternoon. No meeting will be held in his absence. It is, of course, certain that Tarrant county will act, thru the party executive committee, and the voters will be urged to go to the polls and vote the ticket, so the vote for Campbell may be a bumper vote for governor of all that have been cast in the late elections for that official.

Falling Off in Northwestern Movement Noted

RECEIPTS DECLINE

Corn and Oats Follow Same Line With Considerably Less Trading in Pit

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 13 .- Wheat opened quiet but firm and a shade above the previous day's close. There were items in the early market, information that warranted the improvement. Liverpool and Paris markets were both firm and somewhat higher, but of more importance as a bull motive was the fact of the northwestern receipts being so very much reduced as compared with those at the similar time last week and so much smaller than they were a year ago. That falling off in the northwestern movement was in the face of the most favorable weather and the condition of the roads excellent, but the old claim of insufficient railroad facilities for hauling grain was being made by the party in the trade who refused to believe that the shortage lies primarily with the amount of the season's production. There was considerable buying of wheat after the first hour for account of parties who have been for a long time identified with the most persistent bears and to some it looked like the throwing up of the sponge, or a considerable squeezing at least. December wheat rose to 75c and closed at 74%c or 75%c advance for the day

The Corn Market The market for corn was quiet, but yielded to the influence of the bullishness that had taken possession of the wheat traders. The more intimate associate of the corn market, otherwise oats, had a strong tone as well and helped, despite the small trade in the corn pit, to arouse a few more of the traders on the buying rather than the selling side. The market was near the top of the day's advance as the session was coming to a close. December left off at 42%c and May 43%c, an improvement of %c over the close yes-

Oats Hold Firm

Demand for oats was active at the start at %c better than the previous day's close and the firmness thus inaugurated was fairly well maintained, even after the volume of the trading had considerably abated. All but a very small fraction of the early advance was left at the close, the gain being measured by 1-16c.

Hog products market was firm without activity and the market was credited with having the support of the heavy packers. October lard was particularly strong and that gave tone to the rest of the list. Local run of hogs was 8,000 and their price 2½c to 5c higher. Hundreds of editors and representatives of the printers' craft met today, it being

Press day. Governor Lanham opened the big fair with the following speech: Lanham's Speech

"Among the many duties, ex-officio in character, which devolve upon the chief executive, custom has made it obligatory for him to be present and participate in the annual opening ceremonies of the Dallas State Fair. It is an institution of more than ordinary significance and extends beyond the limits of mere local importance. Its influence is far-reaching and its educational opportunities and practical benefits are comprehensive and widely distributed. Its location and facilities of approach are such as to make it easily accessible not only to those who reside in this immediate region, but generally to the people of the state. It was duly chartered by authority of the state as "The Texas State Fair and Dallas Exposition association," the original charter members being Alex Sanger, J. N. Simpson, Geo. W. Dilley, W. H. Gaston, W. C. Connor, J. E. Schneider, C. A. Keating, Henry Exall, Royal A. Ferris, J. P. Murphy and J. S. Armstrong. The. names and support of such representative and public spirited citizens as are these, could not otherwise than inspire confidence in the success of any enterprise they would undertake; and whatever managerial changes may have occurred, subsequent to its incorporation, the fact that these men originated and have stamped their impress on this great Fair association, will continue to give it strength and dignity. To those constituting the present management we are indebte1 for unselfish efforts in the bestowal of their time and attention to the end that the public expectations may be fully met and gratifying results assured in the exhibitions and entertainments that are to be here afforded. expressed the hope at its last opening that your fall of 1905 would prove to be the most satisfactosy and successful in its history, and I am glad to fully realized. #### State Is Prosperous

"It seems to me that the conditions are more propitious than they have ever been. The state is unusually prospersus and the people are exceptionally comfortable. This has indeed been a fruitful year. Progress and development are everywhere manifest. The wonderful capabilities of every part of Texas are being constantly discovered and applied. New resources previously unknown and their existence unsuspected, are being continually exploited and utilized. Industrial activity and material improvement were never so apparent. Values of property, real and personal, are increasing, prices are more remunerative, rewards of labor are more satsfactory and encouragement to worthy effort in every vocation and along all lines of business is stronger and more hopeful than it has ever been. The future 13 bright and our possibilities stagger computation.

Function of Fair

"The function of this great fair. among other things is to furnish practical object lessons of what is being done and what is going on in Texasto show what can be produced from the soil and what can be finished in the factory-to exemplify the expansion of agriculture and the improvement of modern cultural methods over the primitive and obsolete customs of the ancient farmer-to display the difference between up-to-date machinery for the cultivation of the land and harvesting of crops and the simple and clumsy implements which were formerly in vogue—to teach how labor can be saved, work lightened and results made more useful and abundant and to illustrate the remarkable changes that have taken place in the quality of all live stock and domestic animals

Man Arrested After an Exciting Career

Special to The Telegram.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 13.-Charles A. Butler, soldier of fortune, was held today for trial at Brownsville for bigamy and perjury. Three wives are alleged to have contributed to Butler's past happiness in his present discomfort. The story of Butler's life is romantic in the extreme. He is 29 years of age, has served in the United States army and navy, has fought in Cuba and the Philippines. He has also been a railroad detective and altogether has had rather an exciting career. All three of Butler's wives are said to be living. Butler was born in Butler county and it is there he fell in love with Celia A. Durr of Carverville, whom he married in 1899.

His Second Venture Mrs. Butler No. 1 has two children. Butler's second venture on the sea of matrimony, according to the complaint, was the daughter of a rich southern family. The young woman was Miss Flora M. Ramey. The wedding was celebrated at Pensacola, Fla. Miss Ramey fell in love with Butler when she saw him in the uniform of a United States marine. Despite the opposition of her family she ran away from home and April 16, 1904, married Butler. They came to Pittsburg after Butler's term of service in the navy exgheny.

The mother of Mrs. Butler No. 2 came north and is now living in Western avenue, Allegheny. Mrs. Butler No. 3 was formerly Miss Pearl West of Millbro, Fayette county. The third Mr. and Mrs. Butler's actions started an investigation and as a result the charges were preferred against Butler and his arrest in this city followed.

ON RAILROADS

Missouri Governor Is Against Government Ownership

SUGGESTS REMEDY

Would Hold All Lines Responsible to Federal Authorities, However

Special to The Telegram.

FARMINGTON, Mo., Oct. 13.-Governor Folk today outlined a plan of government supervision of railways as a substitute for the policy of government ownership as advocated by Wm. J. Bryan. A great crowd listened attentively to the governor and cheered him to the echo.

Governor Folk believes that the government should exercise a control over the railroads of the country, the same as it does the national banks, but the government, the state nor nation should not attempt to own the roads. To supervise the conduct of the roads, he advises a comptroller of corporations, whose duty shall be similar to those of the comptroller of the currency. On this point, the governor said: "A city or a town is a business corporation and all the municipalities of the state should have the power to purchase, own, operate any public utility, wherever they see fit to do so.

"Whether municipal ownership is wise or not, depends upon the conditions in each particular case. In some instances, it is manifestly the proper thing. In others, owing to different circumstances, it might be unwise."

Suggests Remedy "The need of more strict laws in the state and nation for control of public service corporations is manifest. If there were a comptroller of railroads appointed by the president, subject to removal at pleasure with absolute power to suspend directors or officials of interstate railroads violating the law, then appoint receivers to take charge of the road until its operators could furnish sufficient guarantee of more responsible management the result should be a remedy for the evils now existing in railroad affairs. "In other words, give the comptroller of railroads the power over railroads that the federal government exercises, thru the comptroller of the currency over national banks. The federal government can require a license from interstate railroads subject to revocation by the comptroller."

Brewery Clean Pabst Never Brews Beer on Saturday. Immense Plant, Always Glean,

Gets Weekly Scrubbing Scrub-day at the brewery! Readers of The Telegram didn't know there is such a day, did you? Well, there is at the big Pabst brewery in Milwaukee and it is nothing but "scrub-day." You might be surprised to see how thoroly the cleaning is done and to know that on scrub-day no other work is attempted anywhere in the brewery, except in the shipping department, of course, for the work there never Saturday is the Pabst scrub-day all the year 'round. If you were to visit the brewery on any Friday and were told that on the following day the vast plant would be shut down for cleaning you would say, "I don't see any reason why it should be, for it is clean now." Yes, that's so. The Pabst brewery is always clean-clean as the cleanest kitchen-because it is kept clean. The Pabst process of brewing beer is a perfectly clean process. But the weekly scrub-day is considered by Pabst an additional and important feature of the keeping always clean process. It is part of the enormous price paid for the absolute cleanness of Pabst Blue Ribbon-the best beer ever brewed.

Not a kettle boils, not a pint of beer is brewed in the great Pabst plant on Saturdays. In all parts of the brewery the cleaners are at work with scrubbrush and water. The walls and floors of cement and brick, every foot of space, every nook and corner from the great cellars below the ground to the top of the five and six-story buildings, is cleaned until it fairly shines. The very extreme of care is shown in cleaning and rinsing the brew kettles, vats and pipes-nothing but pure water, pumped to the reservoirs at the top of the brew-house and great storage warehouses and then filtered, being used.

This weekly cleaning is so thoro that we cannot even attempt to describe its effectiveness, and when you stop to consider that it represents merely a part of the Pabst watchfulness against any possibility of contamination or impurity in Pabst Beer then you will understand why we say Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is the cleanest beer brewed. It is the purest beer and the richest in food value, too, because made only from Pabst exclusive eight-day malt choicest imported hops and pure water. #### ROADS UNABLE TO MOVE CROP

Cotton Blockade Is Now On at Many Points

Millions of dollars worth of cotton in Texas cannot be moved to the compress on account of the prevailing car shortage of the different railroads, which are unable to furnish enough equipment to handle the great crop. Railroad freight men here say that by next month the greatest cotton blockade that has ever prevailed not only in Texas, but the entire south, will be on and no remedy at hand by the railroads to relieve the congested condition. Especially in Texas will the condition be extraordinary. In Fort Worth there is already a good-sized blockade and one cotton buying firm reports it has about one hundred and fifty cars of cotton blocked and is unable to move it. Compress platforms are filling up with the staple at every railroad point in the state and will probably remain filled up for some time to come. Discussing the situation, a leading railroad man Saturday said that he looked for still greater congestion in November, when the bulk of cotton begins to move or is ready for the market. "The fact is," he said, "there never was such commercial prosperity thruout the country as now prevails, and in consequence railroads are unable to handle expeditiously the business turned over to them, Railroads are utterly unable to get car equipage, despite the fact that orders for cars have been placed with factories many been in more than a year." Neil P. Anderson, one of the largest handlers of cotton in Fort Worth, has, it is sad, something like 26,000 bales of cotton that cannot be moved to compress. This, cotton, it is said, is lying at different railroad points in the state, tied up for want of cars in which to move it. The value of this cotton is placed at approximately $1,-480,000. Not only is this firm powerless to move cotton, but others are in equally as perplexing situation. Last year some seven hundred cars months and in many cases orders have of cotton were blocked in Fort Worth. and the prediction is made the condition will be much worse this season, Already some 300 cars are tied up here, and the situaton is daily becoming

DAN PATCH'S MILE AGAINST TIME, AS SEEN BY A WOMAN

BY MR. LOTAH K. STANBERY. Observer Landis may not really have een to blame, but it looks bad. Other weather men have O. K'd October when we needed the best in the shop and when the kind of goods they furnished is recalled the case ainst Landis grows darker.

for suspicion and every time I scooped a shovelful of dust and sand out of my eyes and ears I harbored dire bts of the weather man's loyalty. With a lightning track, Fort Worth the place, Dan Patch, the horse, a world's record for the king, a world fame for US-then for Landis to turn such a measly, shabby trick! We were all there, ma and pa, and sister and auntie (unmarried), grandma and the baby, and then Starter ewton. Know Newton? No. Well, what do you think of that!

We got there early, that is some of us did. Johnnie's sister Sue was late, came with a white organdie frock and-some pink roses tied on her hat. Sue was not up to the latest fashion notes, dark seal brown satin, shading into golden brown, with a hint of black at throat and foot, to be worn with finishings of narrow bands of white stitched leather extending from the shoulders to the knees.

Sue is blue-eyed and had some peroxide tints exactly where they belonged When she saw Dan she tried to sniff haughtily. She pretended she did not care, but anybody could see she was mortified to death. It was Dan's day and he set all the fash-

Sue did not know Starter Newton either and when she heard him give his concert, "Castlewood won the heat and the race. Time, 2:09 3-4, the fastest mile ever paced on a half mile track in Texas," she grabbed her pink roses and came near throwing him a

"My, how I wish he would give a concert," she said, while the betting

Sue was so taken up with Starter Newton that she almost forget to notice the gowns worn in the boxes. Finally she discovered a violet chiffon broadcloth, with pearl collar and belt, a violet hat, with Irish lace draped over it, a white feather boa fluffing up under a marvelous pair of dimpled cheeks, and a smile that left a man no chance—no more than the bookles did with his pocketbook. Sue forgot Starter Newton and his concert.

ing questions I gouged sand from my eyes and ears and shivered in my jacket. A south wind in October has penetrating ways.

While Sue in her organdie was ask-ging along in the track with no business in particular that I could see. Sue wanted to know. "Dan's pace maker." answered a man curtly. Funny how men feel toward a woman when she wants to know.

I attended 57 funerals, was in the pulpit every Sab-bath except three, made 1,060 pastoral calls, and the best part of it is I do not have any more "Blue Mondays."

plugged away with no further notice

Then Dan came on the track. One glance at the grandstand was enough. Where are all your people?" he whinnied at Al Lawler, who was standing near, The secretary of the Fort Worth conditions, that there were preachers who did not admire him and had said things about folks who did. But Dan would not have understood, so it was just as well. Dan has not yet met the folks who do not admire him.

The band played a merry tune. It was not "Lo, the Conquering Hero Comes," an oversight naturally.

Harry Hersey took Dan back from the wire and set him going. I do not know what their conversation was, but he came past the wire in a steady even stride. Sue watched him with all her eyes. Why, he isn't prancing a bit !Isn't he going to prance?

Prancing is not on the Dan Patch program. Passing under the wire a dozen strides brings him to the jog beloved of the feminine 'fraid spirits Then from the starters' stand, "Dan Patch will now start against the world's record on a half mile track The high wind is unfavorable and you must not expect too much. Harry Hersey of Minneapolis will drive Dan Patch and the pacemakers will be driven by Mr. Nash of Minneapolis and Al Lawler of Fort Worth.

The blanket that protected the soft satin skin from the wind was thrown aside. The bright eyes gazed full and strong, straight ahead. The attitude was of conscious power.

The pacemakers were restive. They wanted to share in the day's glory Reflected glory, but what of that. Is it not something to step alongside the most beautiful horse, the kindest mannered horse and the fastest harness horse in the world?

Dan took no note of his companions. He stood without so much as turning his head. The rays of the fickle sun shone for a moment on the shining satiny coat. The mane stood straight in the gale. The tail reaching to the ground swung to and fro as the wind swept the track from the south.

The wonderful rythmic rise and fall of the hind legs was watched for a brief moment as he passed the first turn, Around the second and the quarter is made in 0:30. The popcorn boys are holding their baskets motionless. The thousands hear and see only the brave and gallant horse nutting forth the best that is in him against tremendous odds. The half mile is finished and around he starts again. Every sound is hushed, but the thump, thump, thump, thump of the pacemakers' gallop. From Dan Patch, as he skims over the track of velvet with bounding tread, there come sounds scarcely audible. The wonderful precision of the hind legs are like the driving wheel of a mighty

DOGS VS. ENGINE

Animal Prevents Locomotive from Going Into Siding Special to The Telegram.

PITTSBBURG, Pa., Oct. 13.—Robert Hollarn, residing in Homestead, had a hearing there this afternoon charged with disorderly conduct. He is the owner of a vicious dog, which he took down town this forenoon to the Sixth avenue crossing of the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston railroad. An engine came down the tracks to go into a siding, but was prevented from doing so by the dog. Every time the engineer or conductor attempted to get off, the animal was ready to attack him.

After holding up the engine and crew for over thirty minutes. Detective Frank Bell happened along and taking in the situation, decided to go to the rescue of the crew and engine. The animal however, made no distinction between a detective and an engine with the result that Bell was chased four blocks. Ultimately he got several men to assist him and they succeeded in arresting Hollarn.

It was a quarrel with Colonel Mann, of Town Topics, who is the principal stockholder in the Tom Watson Magazine corporation; that caused Mr. Watson to sever his connection with the publication and to tell the colonel to find another editor in chief. He thought it was hardly fair to burden the magazine with twentyseven pages of Mr. Watson's personal spite against the editor of a Macon newspaper, against whom Mr. Watson has an old grudge. Mr. Mann said little, however, until Mr. Watson asked for money that was due him. Then Colonel Mann, the story goes, criticised the product of Mr. Watson's pen. The latter quickly resigned and with him went his son, John Durham Watson, who acted as associate editor.

Silveira With Cash Is Still

NEW YORK, Oct. 13,-It was eleven days ago today that Manuel Silveira, the Cuban agent responsible for the failure of J. M. Ceballos, of this city, sailed from Havana with his family and a million dollars of his principal's money, aboutd his own cattle ship, the Carmelina. And there is nothing but guess work as to his fate or whereabouts.

William Nelson Cromwell, counsel for the Ceballos company, said that gitive, but the lawyer and the members of the firm now take it for granted that Silveira has reached Venezuela with his treasure, and is hiding in that country. There is no extradition treaty between Venezuela and Cuba.

One of today's romances dwelt on the possibilities of a mutiny aboard ship with the sailors discovering the treasure, rising against Silveira, put-ting him and his family in a small boat, scuttling the ship and then going ashore with the booty.

THE WEST TEXAS RANGE IS PASSING

Cotton Is More Profitable Than Cattle

That the cattle industry of western Yexas is fast ebbing out is the opinon of John K. Rosson, who has just returned from an extensive trip thru that part of the state.

The large land owners and ranchers are cutting up their pastures in small farms or in tracts to suit the purchaser and the majority of the range country selling from $10 to $20 per acre. Cattle have been selling for such unasonably low prices during the past w years that the cattleman recoges that he can no longer continue in e cattle business on land that is alued at these prices and he also ecognizes that western Texas is beoming one of the greatest cotton pro-ucing sections of our state. "In visiting Baylor, Knox, King, Throckmorton, Haskell, Shackleford, and Jones counties," said Mr. Rosson, I saw cotton on sod land that, if it natures, will make at least a bale of cotton to the acre, and both in Jones and Shackleford counties I heard rehable men say they had cotton that would make better than a bale and a half per acre. It was selling yesterav on the streets for $10.75c and is etty staple as I ever looked at. uires an average of ten acres of land to support a cow the year 'round which is worth on the market $16 or $17 net.

"Supposing this land will raise on an average of half a bale of cotton per acre, which is a very low estimate, means five bale sof cotton produced on the same land that it takes to carry one cow, thereby bringing in a revenue of $250.

"I predict the range country is a thing of the past. After a period of five to eight years stock farming will be an issue and there will be as many cattle raised in that section as there are at present, but it will take at least that length of time for the farmers coming in the country at the present time to get their affairs shaped to handle cattle and other live stock as they do in the northern states at the present time. When this is done the business will be on a much more satisfactory basis from every standpoint to those who are interested. "I find quite a good deal of interest manifested in the raising of hogs and many are agitating the culture of sheep. As both hogs and sheep have been exceptionally high for some time and indications look favorable for strong prices to prevail for years to come, I would recommend the farmers to diversify their crops and raise a few sheep, hogs and cattle, get a good brood mare or two and raise a good mule or a good horse, either of which are worth from $75 to $125 at 2 years old. It costs no more to raise a good horse or mule than a beef steer and either of them are worth three or four

No goods were delivered until everything was sold, and then the fun commenced, everybody was anxious to know what he had bought and when some bidder would look into a bundle that he had paid a big dollar for and find a two-bit doll he would sneak on and say nothing, and there were many of this kind of cases. However, there were many good bargains secured, and a goodly sum in cash was realized by the express company.

Some people cannot help it, for peasimism usually comes from bodily disorders, and this cannot always be prevented. The stomach, for instance, is the most common cause of discontent, sour face, recklessness, disgust and lack of ambition. A bad stomachthere is the secret of many a failure. Anyone can have a good stomach, a strong stomach, a stomach that can take care of anything and everything that is put into it, no matter whether it is a very bad stomach now or not.

Then why not have it? Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. One ingredient of these little tablets digests 3,000 grains of food, and no matter how bad is your dyspepsia or indigestion, these tablets will digest everything in your stomach, thoroughly and completely, and better and quicker than a healthy stomach can do the same thing. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure quickly loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, nausea, heartburn, eructations, loss of vim and spirit, bad memory, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets around with you wherever you go and take them after meals. Then only will you realize what it is to enjoy a meal, and what perfect digestion means. Your whole body and your mind will feel the effects; your vim will increase, you will be more satisfied with what the world does, you will think happier and be happier and your face will be one of supreme contentment. That will bring you success and then more success. Your face will bring you dolcess. Your face will bring you dollars. Try it. It will cost you just 500 for a package of these wonderful Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, at any drug store on earth.

RACES WILL BE ANNUAL EVENT

Fair Association Made Over Three Thousand Dollars

The officers of the Fort Worth Fair Association were busy all day Saturday closing up the business of the race meet which closed Friday night. The footings now show that the net amount to the credit of the association after all the operating expenses were paid is $3,549. The total gate receipts were $17,794, which does not include receipts from boxes at the grand stand and from children and rigs after entering the main gate. C. F. Long, manager and treasurer of the association, and Carl R. Evans, vice president, were seen by a Telegram reporter Saturday afternoon, and gave out the statement that the race meet was a success in every way. The attendance at all times was good, and the best of order prevailed. The grounds were at all times under the strict surveillance of an adequate force of detectives and officers, and not one arrest was made. Mrs. Robert Newton, wife of Robert Newton, the official starter of the grand circuit races, and who accompanies her husband at all race meets, remarked Saturday morning that she had attended the races every day, and that she had not seen one man under the influence of whisky to the extent that he could be called drunk. This she considered phe-

"Practical horsemen," said Mr. Evans, "say the Fort Worth meet was the best they ever attended, and were well pleased with the manner in which the business of the association was conducted. Mr. Newton, who for the past three years was the starter in every heat on the grand circuit, is authority for the statement this meet was the smoothest, cleanest and best managed, with the best lot of contested races and best bunch of horses he ever saw on a half mile track. He also stated that he hoped to be with us again next season. This statement is highly gratifying to the management, coming as it does from such eminent authority. Therefore, the association is pleased with the results of the first meeting in every particular, and we believe that this meeting will prove of great benefit to the breeders of thorobreds in this section, and perhaps the influence will be felt all over the state. "The officers and directors of the Fort Worth Fair Association do not only hope to make this an annual successful horse meet, but have decided to make the association a permanent one, and add all the features of a great county fair. Plans for this movement are now maturing, and if the farmers and business men will co-operate with us we will soon have a county fair that will rival anything ever attempted in this portion of the state. So far every encouragement has been given, and it is not thought that any great trouble will be encountered in working the fair up to where it will be one of the recognized institutions in Tarrant county, "It is the intention of the Fair Association to hold two meetings each year, one in the spring during the meeting of the cattlemen's convention and the regular fall meeting, which will be made the principal annual event. We do not see any reason why two meetings cannot be held each year, and will at least make the attempt. "Mr. Hersey, the driver of Dan Patch, started in to break the record Friday, and had it not been for the high wind which was blowing against him on the home stretch, he would have succeeded. As it was, he made the third best mile record ever paced on a half mile track in the United States. The trainer of Dan Patch also stated that the track was equal to the best half mile track in the United States, with possibly one exception-that at Allentown. "Professor Cox with his band of twenty-four pieces furnished music for the occasion, and gave thoro satisfaction both to the fair management and to the visitors."

All the horses that were entered at the meet here were taken to Dallas Saturday. All were in splendid condition. The grounds at the Driving Club Park are now deserted, with the exception of the workmen who are kept there to clean up and put the grounds in condition for the next meeting.

The accident happened at the foot of the Trinity bridge, just north of the county jail building. The team was in a slow trot when the wagon jolted from the last plank of the bridge floor and the boy was thrown forward, hanging on the double-tree and over the left single-tree, his face being held against the tire of the wheel as the horses trotted on. The flesh on his left jaw was badly torn, exposing the hare bone for several inches. Among other consequent bruises he sustained a severely wrenched left shoulder and the left side of his neck is lacerated. Two More Games Now Remain to Be Played-23,000 Attend Event

Special to The Telegram. CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 13 .- Despite the handicap of a bad case of the heaves, which afflicted Isbell, Davis and Rohe today in the west side ball lot, the White Sox trimmed the fur off the Cubs in the fifth game of the great series for the world's championship and left them naked and whimpering on the sward. The score was 8 to 6, but that does not begin to tell the tale of the direful doings that ended only when the shades of night were falling so fast that a fly ball looked like a homing sparrow in the sky.

Twenty-Three Thousand Spectators

There were 23,257 fellow-citizens of the athletes present. They saw the White Sox in two hours and fifty minutes of freaky ball playing transform themselves from the "hitless wonders" ito the south side sluggers by driving the peerless Reulbach from the dirt pile in the middle of the lot in the third inning, chasing Pflester, the phenomenon, after him with a storm of hits ringing around his unprotected head in the next inning and garnering two doubles and two singles from Mr. Overall, who was second aid to the injured, and managed to last thru the game. Twelve hits were slammed out by the south side bats and seven of them were scattered among the 23,257 onookers. Of these useful doubles, the bald and promising Isbell made no less than four and the others were divided between Davis Do, nohue and Rohe, By this strange perversity of baseball fate, three of the White Sox who thus figured so prominently were responsible for six black marks in the error column of the Sox, most of which helped the batting Cubs to corral their six runs.

Plays Made

Thus a recapitulation of their share in the game would look like this: Isbell for two-baggers, four out of seven. Isbell made two errors out of Davis hit two doubles. Davis made two errors. Rohe hit a double and two singles.

Rohe made two errors. It being the open season for presents Jones were each slipped a grand little diamond-studded gold watch fob after the game, the gifts of George M. Cohan, the actor. His inate modesty forbidding his presence during the ceremony, Mr. Cohan delegated his business manager to manage the affair. There are fourteen diamonds in each fob-almost as many as the Cubs would have required to win today's game.

Walsh Retires

In that connection the fact should not be overlooked that Edward Walsh, the large person who performed such stirring deeds in the box Thursday, when he left nothing to chance and took three tallies home to Comisky. was also forced to retitre today, but changing pitchers got to be such a habit with Manager Chance that the entry of Dr. White into the game in the seventh inning was almost overlooked. Nothing much happened after the game except that the Cubs were stopped in a rally that might have helped some, Mr. Walsh did not hold them in the slippery hollow of his hand as he did Thursday. They made six hits off his delivery, two of which were doubles, and as these began to pile up toward the shank of the day, Mr. Jones gently removed the florid Kerry man from the firing line.

Ten Thousand Shut Out At the very outset of the trouble, while five or ten thousand disconsolate persons who arrived after 1:45 p. m. and found that the gates were shut, were wandering around outside the fence and begging to be told who was pitching, it looked as the Murphy's fire-eaters were going to run away with the game. They found Mr. Walsh for two hits in the first inning and assembled three runs on these in combination with a base on balls and a couple of heaves into the crowd by Isbell and Walsh. Cub rooters rose up by the millions and began collecting bets right there. But when the Sox took a whirl at the stick it developed that Mr. Reulbach needed a lot of taming.

Hahn made a hit, Isbell made the first double of his eventful day, Rohe made another and the Sox got a run. In the third, Isbell and Davis returned to the charge and grabbed off two more two-baggers amid very general acclaim among the 23,000 and odd. That was about all for the peerless Reulbach and a signal of distress brought Pfeister from the club house with his south paw in heavy wrapings. He peeled and took the hill and just to show his form struck out genial George Rohe, the three-base hitter, much to the delight of the Cub

Pfeister's Good Work

Hahn not being in sight Mr. Pfeister then stung Donohue over the liver with a fast one and the inning wound up in a blaze of glory for him, when Donohue was forced and Sullivan whanged vainly at three shots. But the undoing of Pfeister was near at hand. Burning for revenge for his busted nose, Hahn faced him in the fourth after Walsh had accepted a pass and cracked out a hot one that forced Walsh at second Fielder Jones, with the memory of two of his-men being rammed with inshoots hot within him, went to the front and made a hit that put Hahn on third. Isbell, having made but one two-bagger at one time at bat up to that point, deliberately made another that scared 250 men into a fit where it landed in the crowd and scored Hahn. Davis, finding that the hunting was pretty good, decided on a double for his, scoring Jones and Isbell.

Donohue's Two-Bagger

At that moment Manager Chance with Mr. Pfelster. The pitcher's apologies were evidently not satisfactory, for once more the hurry call was sent to the club house and in a few moments, which were punctuated by most of the noise that 23,000 can make with voice, fog horn, bell and feet, a large man was seen coming from the far end of the field. It was Overall, the end of the field. It was Overall, the glant pitcher. Jack Taylor and Carl Lundgren hurried away to warm up; there was no telling what the day might bring forth. Overall smiled genially at George Rohe, who was waving a bat at him in a most threatening manner, and gave him a base on balls. Not a very warm beginning, but he came into the box cold. Up bobbed Donohue, and not to be outdone by the other hitless wonders, he slammed out a two-base hit that scored

Crowd Wildly Cheers

Men threw away their hats and later went home with peanut bags covering their aching voids. The White Sox at that stage had seven runs and the Cubs three. In the other half of the round the Cubs got another run, thanks to a few untoward incidents. Mr. Rohe, flustered by the hope of victory, threw a grounder where even Donohue could not reach it and Tinker got to second on a weak hit that should have been an easy death. Evers walked and then those two old pals gleefully executed a double steal on Mr. Walsh. This came in handy a few minutes later, when Walsh heaved a bum one that Sullivan missed and Tinker cantered home. Bases on balls and a bad throw by Rohe again helped the Cubs in the sixth inning, when they got two more runs. After two men were out Walsh walked Overall and Hoffman. Sheckard hit an Pasy one to Rohe, who made a weird throw at Isbell to force Hoffman. Izzy missed it and all were safe, making three on bases.

Schulte Makes Double

Schulte slammed a double into the crowd, scoring Overall and Hoffman. Chance was an easy out and that ended the run getting for the Cubs. In the next inning the first man up, Steinfeldt, cracked a two-bagger into the coming darkness and Jones, fearing that Walsh was beginning to ascend, took him out and summoned "Doe" White, who held the Cubs down until darkness.

Just to complete his record Isbell made another two-bagger in the sixth inning. He did not intend Overall should get away without receiving the professional courtesies he had already extended to Reulbach and Pfeister and after Davis had fanned Rohe singled and brought Izzy home. The next time he came up in the eighth, Overall shut his teeth and struck Izzy out, spoiling a sperfect batting record, which Isbell had his weather eye on.

First Inning

Americans-Hahn started out by hitting a liner to center, making first base. Jones followed with a sacrifice which was gotten by Reulbach to Chance, Isbell took a two-bagger to the right field, which went into the crowd and Hahn scored. Davis sent a hot grounder to Reulbach and Isbell was caught between third and second, Reulbach to Steinfeldt to Tinker. Rohe got a two-bagger to right field, sending Davis to third. Then followed an argument, during which Davis stole home, but the umpire ruled the run out of order and Davis went back to third. Donohue was donated first, filling the bags. Dougherty out, Evers to Chance. One run.

Nationals-Hoffman sent a single over Isbell's head. Scheckard bunted to Donohue, who nailed him at first. Schulte singled to third, Rohe stopping the ball with a leap, but did not get back to earth in time to catch the runner. Chance was hit by the pitcher and this filled the bases. Steinfeldt forced Chance at second, Davis to Isbell and Hoffman came over the plate. Isbell threw wild to first complete a double and Schulte scored. Steinfeldt went to second. Tinker bunted safely to first on a wild throw by Walsh. Steinfeldt scored. Tinker was caught stealing second, Walsh to Donohue to Davis. Three runs.

Second Inning

Sullivan struck out and Walsh got a base on balls. Hahn flew out to Chance, Donohue went out on a grounder. Evers to Chance. No runs. Nationals-Evers out, Walsh to Donohue, Kling got a free pass and Reulbach sacrificed, Sullivan to Donohue. Hoffman fanned; Sullivan dropped the ball, but Hoffman was thrown out, Sullivan to Donohue. No runs.

Third Inning

Americans-Isbell got a two-bagger to the left field and Davis followed with another over first base into the crowd, Isbell coming in over the home plate. Pfeister was put in the box for Reulbach. Rohe fanned the air three times. Donohue was hit by the pitcher. Dougherty crowded Donohue out at second, Evers to Tinker, but a double play was spoiled by a high throw to first. Davis and Dougherty both swiped a base, Davis scoring. Sullivan struck out. Two runs.

Nationals-Scheckard struck out and Schulte went to second on Davis' throw into the crowd. Chance lined out, Davis to Donohue. Schulte went to third. Steinfeldt out, Davis to Donohue. No runs.

Fourth Inning

Americans-Walsh got a free pass to first and Hahn followed with a bunt, forcing Walsh at second, Steinfeldt to Tinker. Jones sent a single to left. Hahn making second, Isbell got a two-baser for the third time and Hahn scored, Jones going to third. Davis sent a two-bagger to the left field, bringing in Jones and Isbell, Pfeister was then taken out and Overall substituted. Rohe got a pass to first and Donohue swatted a two-bagger into the left field crowd, Davis coming over the plate and Rohe getting third. Dougherty grounded to Schulte and Rohe tried to cross the plate, but was caught, Schulte to Evers to Kling, Four runs.

Nationals-Tinker got a safe hit and proceeded on to second by Rohe's wild hrow into the crowd back of the first base. Evers walked, Kling fanned the air three times and Tinker and Evers both stole a base. Overall fanned and Tinker scored on a wild pitch. Evers was held at third. Hoffman got his base on balls and Scheckard struck out. One run.

Americans-Sullivan bunted but was caught at first, Tinker to Chance. Walsh struck out, Hahn flew out to Nationals-Chance got in a two-bagger over first base, Isbell doing nobly, but missing the ball. Steinfeldt flied out to Jones. Tinker bunted and was caught at first, Davis to Donohue, No

Sixth Inning

Americans-Jones fanned, Isbeil drove a hot one past first into the crowd. Davis bunted and was out, Evers to Chance. Rohe singled to right, scoring Isbell. Rohe went to second on a wild pitch. Donohue out, Overall to Chance, One run. Nationals-Evers bunted but was caught, Davis to Donohue. Kling took the same route. Overall got his base on balls and Hoffman followed suit. Scheckard singled to Rohe, who threw to second, but was not quick enough to get Hoffman. Schulte got a twobagger over center field, sending Overall and Hoffman over the plate. chance out, Isbell to Donohue, Two Seventh Inning Americans—Dougherty skied out to Hoffman and Sullivan took the same method to Evers. Walsh struck out.

Nationals-Steinfeldt got a two-bagger to the left field crows and White was substituted for Waish. Tinker popped up a foul, which was captured by Donohue. Evers out, Davis to Donohue, Steinfeldt went to third, Kling out, Rohe to Donohue. No runs.

Jones flew out to Steinfeldt. Isbell struck out. No runs. Nationals-Overall sent a hot grounder toward second, which was promptly captured by Isbell and sent to Donohue, who put Overall to the bad. Hoffman struck out. Scheckard sent a hot liner to second, but Isbell failed to stop it and Scheckard went to first. Schulte singled to Davis and Scheck-

LITTLE ABE ATTELL IS A GREAT FIGHTE

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

Abraham Attell. That is what the people of southern California are calling the little fellow since he came out with the challenge to meet any of the lightweights in the game. Abe beat Frankle Neil and then the world said he was the greatest little man living today. Abe got to thinking about it and the more he rumbled it over in his mind the more he came to the conclusion that the public was right. He went farther. Abe decided that he was the equal or the superior to the

As to Abe's real worth, some critics differ, but I am pretty confident that he will be able to take care of himself against any of our present day lightweights, who will get down to the 133-pound mark at the ring-

In his battle with Neil, Abe proved beyond all doubt that he was one of the cleverest little men the world has ever seen. Up to the contest with Neil many of the fight fans claimed that Attell was a boxer, but after that gruelling battle with Neil, when in several different rounds the boys stood up and hammered each other until the blood covered the floor under them, they changed their minds.

There is no question but Attell could stand punishment from a heavier man and in cleverness, landing a punch and then getting away and in defending himself he is pretty close to the best in the lightweight division. He would be easily the equal of Britt in a long battle, which by the way

The visit of Ellen Beach Yaw and her concert company will mark an important epoch in the musical events of the season. Since her return from Europe, where she studied under the best masters, and appeared in opera and concert with the world's greatest artists, she has been acknowledged by all the critics from Boston to the Golden Gate .as the greatest of American coloratura sopranos. Endowed by nature with a voice of golden beauty. coupled with conscientious devotion to her art, and unimpeachable musical intuition, united with remarkable personal beauty, have raised our famous American to the high rank she now occupies among the world's prima donnas of the present time, The concert by Miss Yaw and her company will be given at Greenwall's.

That long looked for and widely heralded musical satire, "The Sultan of Sulu," will play an engageme Greenwall's soon. The words and lyrics are by George Ade, the famous Indiana humorist, and the music is provided by Alfred G. Wathall.

That high coliars tend to produce nervous headaches among both men and women is the most recent discovery of a well-known Viennese physician. Quite accidentally the doctor's attention was directed to the very high and very tight style of collar worn by a patient who was always complaining of headaches and giddiness.

THE ROYAL MONTH AND THE ROYAL DISEASE

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its great. We never think of scrofula—Its bunches, cutaneous eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in atresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative, consumption.

Miss Blanche Bender was very pretty and attractive as Percy's flancee, and Miss Ruby Bridges played "the widow" excellently; in fact, the cast was good, and the play went with a dash from start to finish. A fair-sized audience applauded the

The successful musical comedy, fashion and beauty show, made famous by Anna Held, "The Little Duchess," is serving this season as the starring vehicle of Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt, who made a big hit in the same offering last year. This was the musical production that gave rise to the coining of a new word in the English language, for it was "The Little Duchess" that one of the New York critics dubbed a "musical comedy girlesque."

NOTED ARTISTS COMING

Mme. Cuilbert and Albert Chevalier Here Oct. 25. Hector Fuller, formerly dramatic editor of the Indianapolis News, was in the city Saturday representing Mme. Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier, who have been brought together for a farewell tour of the United States by George Tyler of the firm of Liebler and Company, New York. These two are the greatest artists in their line of their respective countries. Mme. Guilbert sings in French, chanzons of the pompadour period, songs of the time of Mme. DuBarry and songs of the crinoline period. Also, this year, she is singing some old English ballads with hardly a trace of French accent. Albert Chevalier, as is well known, is Both of these artists are now deserting the fields in which they have won rep-utations, and this winter are going into rurely dramatic work. Mms. Guilbert purely dramatic work. Mma. Guilbert will appear in Berlin this winter in a play written by herself and Mr. Chevaller will star in a new play being written for him by J. M. Barrie. The tour in this country will last only six weeks, and, in that time, they will play no less than forty-two different cities. Everything will be a one-night stand. Fort Worth being no more fortunate in this regard than New York. The local engagement is at the Greenwall opera house, Thursday, October 25. ONE OF THE LATE ARRIVALS

In Memoriam Miss Rose Mahoney died Sept. 29.

And the dawn came! and with it a young girl, fair as a poet's dream, dowered lavishly by all the graces, closed the flower-hung gates of earthly joy and laying her wealth of treasured virtues at the foot of the Great White Throne, exchanged the silvery tissue of the worldly garb for the golden glory of a heavenly crown. The world laughed with her and showered its roses with royal hands. The birds sang round her in delirium of youth and joyous music. Her veins thrilled with the sweet warm wine of happiness, and fancies light as Titanias' butterflies fluttered thru her waking dreams. Hope whispered her sweetest fairy tales. Life's vista was peopled with laughing nymphs and radiant with golden sunshine—for this "flower of womannood," this queen of roses, was anointed with Nature's chrism and her consecrated heart had escaped the defiling incense of mam-gloom; one where every heart was sad, where every eye was wet. Whila the choir chanted the sad requiem one could almost feel that this pure young soul was borne on the wings of neavenly music to the Home Above, and as the bright rays of a beautiful sunset fell into the shadow of darkness, so passed out forever the brightness of this young life, leaving the gloom of sorrow in the hearts of hundreds where she was the friend. Too truly was she to those who loved her the white rose of purity, the red rose of love, the fairest rose of Rosamond-the Rose of the World. PAULINE.

Barbers Don't Like Shift Plan Now in Vogue

Two weeks hence the controversy between the local barber shop owners and the union workmen will be renewed and a new effort will be made by the workmen to have their shops closed at 7 p. m., instead of the shift system now in vogue, by which a portion of the number of workmen remain until 8 o'clock alternately. The present shift plan was adopted by the Worth, Metropolitan, Becker and Congress shops early last August for the purpose of experimenting on the system, and now members of each faction are discussing the practicability of continuing the

The workmen are going to make a strong fight for the flat 7 o'clock closing, while the proprietors are equally as persistent in their views that they cannot afford to lose the trade between 7 and 8 o'clock. The experiment was assumed during the summer months, when the days are long, but now the winter theater season and the many other social functions are well under way and the proprietors declare they see great loss in the adoption of the 7 o'clock closing.

Altho the proprietors are still divided on its practicability, some favor the adoption of the present shift system. Some are of the belief that in this plan two workmen could attend the trade after 7 o'clock. These two would report at 8 o'clock in the morning and the shifts would alternate by twos, as at present

But it is largely up to the union, and during the coming two weeks meetings will be held for the discussion of various plans and it is thought that an agreement will be brought about without much delay.

It is noticed on a good many of the best models seen that the color of the suit which the blouse accompanies is repeated in the trimming of the blouse. Forinstance, two blouses recently turned out by one of the New York houses all had touches of black cleverly introduced, having been designed for wear with a coat and skirt of black broadcloth. The first blouse, which was rather elaborate in style, was of cream lace over chiffon and silk, the yoke, which was of heavy lace in contrast to the sheer lace of the blouse, being outlined by a tracery of pale yelrow and white silk sutache braids piped with tiny folds of black, fine lines of black also being introduced around the collar top and about the elbow trimming of the short sleeves.

The second blouse, which was for more general wear, was of supple lightweight apricot-colored broadcloth. This was made up in plaited shirtwaist style with rather deep cuffs that buttoned. The buttons on the sleeves and on the front middle platt, there they were set ir groups, were covered with black satin, and there was a folded girdle and little cravat of the

The short sleeve is still much in favor for weists of the more severe tailored style, and some of the cloth blouses are designed to be worn with a detachable white yoke and undersleeves. White turncollars and cuffs are also very smart, are so generally becoming that they Accordion-plaited blouses of soft silk or Accordion-plaited blouses of soft slik or crepe to match the costume with which they are to be worn are most attractive and are very easily made, as they require very little trimming. A semitransparent yoke and collar are usually introduced, and ruffies or lace generally trim the lower part of the short sleeves.

Plaids and striped or checked sliks are all used by the blousemakers, but to many women the plain surfaced materials are more becoming than those of the more gally patterned sort. For general service the wash fiannels are to be recommended. They look best made up in

They look best made up in severe tailored style much like the lines shirtweists so popular during the sum-mer, and are worn with a linea collar or embroidered turnover and a bow or four-in-hand tie of black or colored silk. A flat patch-pocket is often set on at the left side of these waists, of which the sleeves are made very much like those of a man's shirt, with straight cuffs worn with link buttons.

Two models are shown among the lilus-trations which are exceptionally pretty in the original. The first sketch was taken carefully selected to be in harmony with the suit or skirt with which they are from a blouse of pale blue crepe. The lit-

A FLOWER THAT BLOOMS FOR FOUR HOURS ONLY.

If you have a conservatory you should by no means be without that wonderful flower the night blooming cereus. This cactus-like plant has the curious property of expanding all its blooms at once about 10 o'clock on a hot night. The blossoms are as large as plates, pure white and most deliciously fragrant. A valance is often used across the top of a window, without any side draperies at all, but the styles shown among the four windows illustrated are those most generally used. The first sketch to the left of the drawing shows one of the most simple methods, and is especially good for a bedroom, sitting-room or such good for a bedroom, altting-room or such apartment. In one room seen the curtains were made of plain color denim, with a flowered band stitched on the edge of the valance and down the long curtain, the bedroom in which these hangings were seen being papered in plain light-blue cartridge paper, with the upper third of the side wall and the celling of rose flowered paper, the curtains and door hangings being of pale blue, with plain flowered bands, barred off, with lines of blue, which outlined the strip.

The valance was finished by a ruffle of the net, edged with braid, this ruffle being set on in festoon effect under motives of heavy lace, which formed three deep scallops. Thin panel curtains of lace on net should be used next to the window panes in such a window, the outside curtains just described being hung from under a glit or wooden cornice.

If, as Bill Shakespeare said "all the world loves a lover," certain it is that likewise all the world loves a good bird dog. If there is one thing about which a man will fight, excepting his family and his religion, it is assuredly his dog. Some of them will retaliate as quickly for an injury inflicted upon their dog as when personal harm is threatened. Without doubt the most highly prized and most valuable of all dogs is the bird dog. The animal's affectionate disposition endears him to humanity the world over and in addition his peculiar quality, that of finding game birds by their scent alone and then "pointing" or "standing" them, makes the bird dog of the greatest interest and value to man. It makes him an animal in which man finds unusual pleasure and profit.

What picture can be prettier than an elegant setter and a trim, keen-built pointer "standing" a covey of birds in a sedge or stubble field? Thrilling with suppressed excitement, quivering like an aspen leaf, each lithe frame reflects the eagerness the sensation felt by the animal in holding the quarry he has found for man, the master, to kill. And the intoxicating delight the blooded dog must feel in holding birds is not one whit more than the suppressed excitement that possesses the being of man when his dog has found birds and stood them. Every true sportsman has felt it many and many a time, and he always feels it. His very being thrills with delight at the sight of a "standing" dog no matter if the superb animal is discovered 100 yards away holding them for his

Striking a Scent.

And truly the nose of the bird dog is a wonderful thing. It is difficult to determine how far off a bird dog can discover a covey of birds. Of course, the matter depends upon conditions; that is on the wind, the atmosphere and on the dog. Many a fine ranger, however, has been seen to scent a covey that proved to be several hundred yards away; throw his head high into the air, pause for a few seconds, sniff the morning breeze and then make a bee line in a given direction. In a short while the animal gives unmistakable evidence that he has struck a live scent. His pace gets more slow. He becomes cautious and finally as he nears the covey he tips gently a few steps more and then comes to a stand. Perhaps it's a wet morning, the sedge grass and weeds full of moisture and

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning-that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared. Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them revenls the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next then the birds will run. You can't see them, and the dog doesn't see them, but he knows they are running and you find it out. Up the hill, through a patch of orchard grass ahead of you they make their course. The dog follows. He can tell when they are running and when he should follow and follow he does—cautiously yet closely. He points again and again and advances slightly. Finally the birds realize it is useless in seeking escape in running. They stop; huddle closer together and the dog stands them again. Then there's a roar and a whirr like a small cyclone and they're off over the hill, and the whirr-r-r is followed by the boom of the sportsman's shotgun and many a fat brown quail which but a few moments before was happy beneath the green covering of friendly weeds, falls, full of shot. The writer saw a dog on one occasion jump on the top of a rock fence and then come to a sudden stop as though he had been glued to the spot and then make a stand there. He had struck a fresh scent after he had mounted the fence. The writer also remembers a dog setting birds that were on the other side of a thick rock wall and some distance down the fence. Some hunters have been fortunate enough to witness a dog standing a live bird with a dead one in his mouth that he was retrieving.

Difference Between Them.

Most everybody who ever saw any kind of a dog can readify distinguish between the setter and the pointer, the former with his long curl hair and the latter with his short and silky coat. There are four great branches of the setter family, a fact not generally known to the average hunter. The original English setter, whose prevailing color was white; the Llewellyn, obtained by crossing the English setter with another English variety known as the Laverack: the Gordon, or Scotch. setter, generally black or black and tan, and the Irish setter, generally a rich red. The Irish and Gordons are easily recognized and their pedigree easily obtained, but it is a harder matter to state just what is a Llewellyn It has been stated by some that this type of setter was obtained by crossing the English white setter with every other kind of setter. The colors in which the dog might be found might give rise to such supposition, for the Llewellyn is lemon and white, white and tan and white, black and tan. The setter was developed from the water spaniel.

The pointer has been developed from the hound, and in the past few years has grown to be wonderfully popular with the hunter. In fact, those hunting in this section generally prefer a pointer, as the climate is not vigorous enough to punish him. And then, too, he has no long curly coat to catch all the cockle burrs in the field and the hot weather does not wear him out. and he is generally bigger and stronger than the setter of the north country However, the setter is more universally in use, and many sportsmen prefer the setter to the pointer out of the belief that he will have less fear of the briar patch. Most pointers can be traced back to the "Rip-Rap" and "Jingo" strains, and there is also a native strain hard to account for, known as "pape." In the "Jingo" strain the dog is lemon and white, liver and white and even white and black, The "Rip-Raps" are frequently white and black, and the "Papes" are black mostly or "blue" dogs.

Some Fine Dogs Here. The pointer as stated above, has developed rapidly in the past few years and some experts are claiming that the day of the setter is passing away. However, just now they are in use by the thousands, and many Fort Worth folk own setters that they prize as highly as they do almost any one of their possessions. There is also some very fine pointers in this section, but it s back in Tennessee and Kentucky that the very cream of the bird dog family is found. And from that section many are being shipped to local-sportsmen who are preparing for the opening of the hunting season November 1. Notwithstanding the fact that Fort Worth can boast of just as many sportsmen as any other city of similar size in the United States, the scarcity of fine bird dogs in the city is rather hard to understand. But those owned by Fort Worth sportsmen are of the very finest breed and have accomplished some very clever field stunts. It is a fact that many fine bird dogs from various parts of the country are being shipped in this city every day and from indications the local colony of bird dogs will be large and worth

It is estimated by those who know that fully 200 bird dogs will be in Fort Worth when the quail hunting season opens and for some of these big prices will be paid.

Among the blooded bird dogs of Fort Worth may be mentioned those of Dr. Irion, C. T. Hodge, Henry Beaumont, J. W. Draughon, A. W. Wharton, Jack Shields, Sam Cantty and R. T. Holt. Dr. Irion paid a princely sum-$250 for one of his dogs, and C. T. Hodge was offered $50 each for pups out of his dog "Mamie."

prietors of the mill reserve the right to redeem the bonds at the expiration five years or earlier and guarantee the payment of 7 per cent interest on the money so invested.

The option is granted the subscribers to the bonds to change the bonds for stock in the concern in even $100 or any multiple of that sum. It will be noted that the owners of the plant are so confident of the results that they reserve the first right to redeem the bonds and grant, as the second privilege, the right to take up stock of the company for all or part of the subscription.

To Saturday night more than $16,000 of the guarantee fund had been made good, and among the latest subscriptions, made Saturday, were those of W. C. Stripling, W. J. Eddleman, Ed Farmer and R. Vickery. After the matter had been brought to the attention of Mr. Stripling he, without hesitation, said: "Yes, I will subscribe $1,000, for I regard that as the most business-like proposition which has ever been submitted to the people of Fort Worth."

The total of Saturday's subscriptions was about $4,000, and the prospect is so bright that there is full confidence in the outcome of the subscription, and that secured the bringing of the knitting mill from Kingston to Fort Worth would seem to be a fixed fact. A company would have to organized in Texas to operate the concern.

Professor Hugo Schuchardt, the well known Austrian philologist, said in 1888: "A world language is assuredly one of our practical needs. . . But world language, far from deserving he ridicule of scientists, in a scientific deratum." Scientists, it may be dded, no longer ridicule the idea.

The great German philosopher, Leibught and wrote much of an ternational language, about the year 63. Before him, Bacon, Pascal and cortes, had advocated the same , as did Locke de Brosses, Condil-Voltaire, Burnouf, Jacob Grimm, must be kept in mind that it is designed that this international shall supplant existing lanages, but that it shall merely supthem, being used in commerial and general correspondence, as as in world congresses and in vel. It may be remarked here that the World's Esperanto congress at several weeks ago, at which the nations of the world were repted, special sessions were held of s of scientists, socialists, Cathos, Protestants, anarchists, musicians guage for their interests and to nd international journals. This is adly significant. view of the amazing progress | cheaply with the coming of that event. There will then be need of a great number of commercial correspondents who understand Esperanto.

> Now what language is best adapted to become auxiliary and supplementary to our existing languages? English has its advocates, but English is far more difficult than Esperanto and an attempt to introduce its general use would excite the jealousy of the Germans, the French and the Russians. The same objections would apply to the other civilized tongues.
> Latin had its advocates in former > times and has them now. It has the advantage that, since it can hardly be called a living speech, it would arouse no feeling of jealousy. However, it is useless to consider the claims of Latin in this connection, for it is far more difficult than the English and to change it by reducing it to the perfect regularity of the Esperanto would be shamefully to mutilate the noble language of Cicero. The writer believes strongly in the study of Latin, but for a different purpose. The international language can not be Latin or English or French, but must be neutral and in a sense artificial. It must borrow its vocabulary and its sounds from tht different civilized languages in such a way as to make its acquisition about equally difficult for all the principal nations. That is what Esperanto has done. Yet it must be remembered that about half the vocabulary is already familiar to the American and that the grammar is so easy that it can be learned in one hour.

> Esperanto is by no means the first ttempt in this direction. The best known of its rivals was Volapuk, the invention of Schleyer, a German priest, which had the greatest number of adherents in Germany. This attempt met with considerable success for a time, for it was the first system of a really complete neutral language; One objection to Volapuk is, that its vocabulary is "made up," while that of Esperanto is composite. One example is sufficient. The word "Volapuk," which means "world language," "comes from the English: "Vol" from world and "puk" from speak. It is, however, certain that none of us would recognize the origin of the word or understand its meaning. America is in Volapuk Melop, while in Esperanto it is Ameriko. France is Fient, while in Zamenhof's language it is Francolando, which is readily understood. Further, Volapuk groans under the burden of a complicated system of conjugations and declensions like the Latin and the Greek-much more complicated than our modern languages and infinitely, more difficult than Esperanto.

After Volapuk had shown itself ill addpted to the purposes for which it was invented and had become defunct, people were slow to admit that any other system could live because This fact accounts for the difficulty which Esperanto had at first to propagate itself. In Germany, where Volapuk had the greatest vogue. its foremost rival has been slowest to gain a footing the that country has now its Eperanto journals and a large number of Esperantists. Professor Ostwald, of Leipsic, whom all will remember as having given a course of lectures at Harvard according to a plan for an interchange of professors between the two countries, is one of the most distinguished advocates of the new language whose claims we present. Men who have warmly espoused the cause of this language are the Pope, Tolstoy, the distinguished British scientist, Sir William Ramsay, the brilliant Frenchman in the world of science, Barthelot and Poincare, not to mention a host of others.

GOT 11.60 FOR COTTON

Farmer Profits by Buyer's Unwitting Mistake

J. H. Rice, a Tarrant county farmer, got the biggest price for cotton Saturday that has been paid for the short staple variety in Texas this year. He nad two bales on the market weighing 548 and 526 pounds respectively, the total weight being 1,072 pounds. Cotton was selling at 10.60c when

Rice went on the market and in a short time a buyer made an offer of 11.60c being $124.39 for the two bales. It was not long before the buyer discovered his mistake and he went to Rice to have it corrected, but Rice had the money and held on to it. He said he was not hunting up other people's mistakes to correct. The buyer intended to bid $10.60 for the cotton. There was over fifty bales of cotton on the market Saturday.

to the ash pan used in other stoves. The elbow draft casting with its upward slant allows the empty coalhod to be set under the draft so that no ashes or coals can be spilled on the floor. Our patented dustless ash cover shown by illustration is furnished free with Nos. 122, 152, 182 and 196 stoves. It keeps down every particle of dust in removing ashes, a feature that will be appreciated by every tidy housekeeper.

The ash pans used in other stoves are too small to hold a full 24 hours' accumulation of ashes. They are usually over-filled when removed, and the ashes in the bottom of the stove are dragged out on to the carpet, as shown by cut No. 2. You are all fam- guaranteed to remain always air-tight.

iliar with the ash pan method, and have, no doubt, gone through the process many times of spreading a newspaper or cloth under your stove every time the over-filled pan is removed.

The ash pan is not only dirty, but is a great evil in stove construction. It adds a door and joints which can be made only temporarily air-tight by the use of stove putty. These joints open after a few weeks' use, rendering ash pan stoves worthless as fire keepers. It makes them fuel-eaters rather than fuel-savers. The ash pan and the shield for guiding ashes into the pan, also prevent base heat. Our method is the only clean way. The whisk broom, turkey wing and dust cloth are dispensed with. There are no joints to leak air, base heat is not retarded and Cole's Hot Blast is the cleanest stove, the best floor heater and the only stove in the world which can be

The feed door on this stove is guaranteed smoke proof and does away with the escape of smoke, soot and gas into the house. Side feed doors used on other stoves discharge a cloud of gas and soot-ladened smoke into the house and scatter soot and ashes over the carpet when opened.

Another point: In feeding coal into a side feed door it has to be thrown into the stove, which usually results in scattering much of it over the With our cleanly smoke proof feed door the coal is poured into the stove even to the dust in the bottom of the hod without a particle being spilled on the floor.

This clean and economical stove burns the gases which often escape into the rooms with other stoves. The annoyance and dirt from kindling new fires is dispensed with, as the rooms are heated up for two or three hours each morning with the fuel put in the night before and the Fire is Never Out. COLE'S ORIGINAL HOT BLAST is the cleanest stove made and will more than save its cost in fuel each winter.

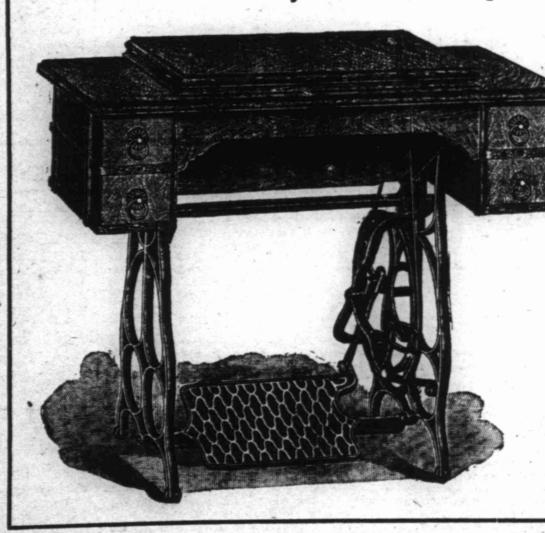

We do not know that we could say more in keeping before you this wonderful stove, for it is all and more than we have represented. We are selling them as fast as our men can put them up. If you have not bought a stove you surely will not pass this stove by without an examination. ¶It will burn any kind of coal, hard or soft, and we feel sure that in one season it will save enough coal to pay for the stove. Phone us for circulars and directions if you cannot come and see for yourself, for we will gladly give you any information needed. These we will sell on such easy terms that anyone can buy.

THE RATIONALE OF SOCIALISM

who first used the words "Socialist" ailism." Mr. Spargo has in an English newspaper of August 24, 1835. That is a very recent beginning for a movement which has gained such im thruout the world, especially not excepting the United States. Within that period other American have had successes and reverses of surprising proportions, but Socialism has had no reverse, having fily grown until it now has nearly steadily grown until it how the fear 500,000 voters. Considering the fear and aversion with which the movement is regarded—both parties in New York having denounced it with almost equal heat at their recent conventions-this is a movement against the tide, and ises to be accelerated decidedly whenever the tide shall turn, as the Socialists expect it to turn. Under such prospects nothing is gained by tanding or misrepresenting a force with which it is so necessary to reckon. The time has passed for cheap jeers about Socialists' readiness to give up their shillings and pocket your penny, or to assert that their idea is the equal division of unequal earnings. Selfishness is not their avowed motive, murder is not the method of those for whom Mr. Spargo speaks, and they have that to say which merits serious attention and treatment according to its deserts. Any other treatment is adapted to hasten the fulfillment of Herbert Spencer's prophecy, "(1) Socialism will triumph inevitably, in spite of all opposition; (2) its establishment will be the greastest disaster the world has ever known; (3) sooner or later it will be brought to an end by a military despotism." It is vain to raise objections of detail, but one may be suggested because it leads to the essence. How far, it may be asked, would the Socialists limit liberty and prophecy? At present a man may choose his employer and his task, and may decline both at the natural penalty of suffering want. May a man do so under Socialism? Or, if not, has he not exchanged a slavery which he can modify for one which he cannot control? Most persons, we fancy, would prefer a personal superior, chosen by themselves, to an impersonal power, controlling | York Times.

It is curious that nobody knows | destiny implacably and irresistibly except by revolution. Russian Socialists are striking against the czar, but we can imagine a social autocracy worse than Russia's bureaucracy, and we have as good a right to paint a picture in our tints as the Socialists in their tints. Again, is private property to be absolutely abolished, or, if not, where is the line to be drawn? Might a woman own a needle to mend her gown? Might she not have her needle used for her by an assistant, and if so, have we not the hated class system springing up again? If this be thought too trivial, if the ownership of the needle and its use by a helper be conceded, should the line be drawn between a needle and a sewing machine? Or, if the sewing machine is conceded also, would it be possible to extend the concession to include a sewing machine driven by electricity instead of by an operator's foot? If this be granted, what becomes of the state as the owner of all machines? It seems difficult to draw the line in these similar cases without substituting a worse slavery for the existing slavery. Socialism, after all, has to deal with something more than economic factors. Human nature is an element in the problem also, and Socialism will hardly succeed in abolishing human nature. The attachment to liberty and property is second only to life itself in power to abolish these cherished rights. In other words, Mr. Spargo, having drawn a picture in which society is wrecked by the liberty of the individual, proposes as an amendment to sacrifice the individual to the supremacy of society. Our choice is for neither alternative, but for compromise instead of revolution. Already much progress has been made in this direction. Laws forbidding child labor, and limiting the hours of labor by men and women, such as went into effect with the opening of October in New York, are examples of what has been done to ameliorate competition. There is still much to be done along these lines, and every step of progress is a step away from Socialism. The route of least resistance seems to us in that direction and not along the path which Mr. Spargo so glowingly describes .- E. A. Bradford in New never seems quite stale however often it is repeated. We are introduced to the lovers, in the persons of Mistress Prudence Morrison, a beautiful country girl, and Mr. Richard Trumbull, a city gentleman of fashion-both of them conventional types. Then there is jealous city beauty, Mme. Betty Jumel, in love with Trumbull and scheming to win him for herself. In her there is some approach to individual personality. Finally there is the famous Aaron Burr, suitor for madame, and Jack Oglesby, suitor for Prue, who serve well enough for lay figures. Naturally Lady Betty, being of a willful disposition, manages to keep things going at a pretty lively pace up to the last chapter, when she sees into the error of her ways and realizes that Mr. Richard Trumbull is not for her. The scene in which she gives up the man she loves to another woman is not without pathos of a simple, unaffected

The October Pilgrim has all the earnestness characteristic of the afterracation season. It has three excepdonally strong special articles, the first touching upon "The Gateway of Chi-na," entitled "The Patrol of the Yangste," by William A. McKinney who has spent some years in the very heart of this great and awakening nation. South America just now is in the popular mind in a most prominent way. ohn T. Kerrin, who for several years had extensive business relations with the South American republic writes most graphically on "Commercial Relations With South America." This alone s worth the price of the magazine. "Three Every Minute" by Howard R. Grose, gives an insight into the imnigration question, which is broad ninded and statesman like.

The fiction of the October Pilgrim is of exceptionally high class; a "Son of a Hero," by J. Olivier Curwood; the "The Mysterious Income," by Elliott Flower, a very clever short serial; and a bright little short story, "Mr. Conroy's Peach Pearing," by F. M. Howard are the leading fea-

The fiction of the Century for the new magazine year is to include novels Hodgson Burnett and Elizabeth Robins, besides the "Running Water" of A. E. W. The People's Magazine for November The strong and absorbing stories and entertaining popular articles that comprise the 192 pages in the People's magazine decidedly up to date. This issue goes farther than any previous one in its appeal to the magazinereading public in general. In the opening pages of the November People's is published a comprehensive and popular explanation of the new football rules and their effect on the game, written by Walter Camp, who is the authority on American football, and a leading exponent of reform in the game. His article will be read with interest by all the football enthusiasts and admirers of the popular college

A goodly array of fiction presents itself in the November People's. Aside from the generous installment of Ellis Parker Butler's fascinating serial, "His Other Self," which gives the reader a soul-stirring picture of the victim of amnesia searching for his lost self in Chicago, is published a pathetic love-tale by John Luther Long. Other stories are by such writers as Mrs. C. N. Williamson, Temple Bailey, Agnes Lockhart Hughes, Howard Fielding and Major A. P. Drury. The special short articles in the November People's cover a large variety of subjects of pertinent interest. "Strange Things That Man Eats," by John R. Meader, is a very interesting description of the many unusual kinds of foods that can be made palatable in various ways when one has tired of the usual and conventional meats and vegetables. Among the other readable articles might be mentioned Warwick James Price's "Baby Navies and Freak Battleships of the World;" an interesting pen-picture of the Buckayroos of the west, who ride, hunt, herd, brand and break wild horses; a discussion by Marle Corelli of the wane of true hospitality; a bright, readable description of the new artificial world-language, Esperanto; "San Francisco a Priceless Junk-Mine;" an account of what privations the human body can endure, and an indictment of the picture postcard plague. Harvey Sutherland's humorous series on insect life, entitled "Our Intimate Enemies," is continued. W. G. Fitz-Gerald continues his story of the development of the great dailies of New York. EAR, O Sphinx, thou lost dryad! Marsyas, thou mortal, hear!

If to lovely and free spirits it is granted to draw near

And revisit the whole earth from some far-off and twilight sphere,

Like the limpid star of evening hanging o'er the dark hill brow, Globed in light to touch this valley where a worshiper I bow,

O give heed, and of your wisdom help a mortal lover now!

Then the lad arose and went behind the veil, and all was still.

Slowly, as from out all distance, rising far and fine and shrill,

Came a flute note, strong as sea wind, clear as morning on a hill-

Grew and gained and swelled and triumphed, lingering from tone to tone,

Golden deep to silver treble, pure and passionate and lone,

Marking time to things eternal, touching bounds of spirit's zone.

***************** "Max Fargus" (Baker & Taylor) is one of those uncertain pieces of fiction which presents itself in a new light at every period of contemplation. The characterization is good, oftentimes really subtle-the fiendish Max himself, the beautiful tawdry Sheila Vaughan, who, hoping to satiate her cravings for fine clothes and a moneyed social position, endures marriage to the miserable Fargus and unhappiness. The shyster lawyer, Bonfingar, who, overconfident that he had successfully played a double game, ends his career in a gutter, and finally his partner Groll, who alone attains success builded on the jumbled ruins of the fortunes of the other three. With such characterizations and a plot that is well jointed, the book holds the interest to the end. And then-some readers will shake their heads, and, reflecting, will laugh that a thing so light could have held them from more substantial occupation. Owen Johnson is the author.

Great as was Darwin's contribution to the world's knowledge of the evolution of species, his views have been modified materially by the discoveries of later investigators. These modifications of views pertain particularly to variation and differentiation of species in heredity. Weismann's declaration that it is impossible for a parent to transmit any acquired character to its offspring is denied by Haeckel, who, in his book, "Wunderleben," adduces what he calls an unquestionable instance of the transmission of acquired character. Thomas H. Montgomery Jr., Ph. D., in "The Anaylsis of Racial Descent in Animals," treats in a comprehensive and exhaustive way of theories of the leading biologists, and pleads for a wider investigation of the phenomena of racial descent. Mr. Montgomery is Henry Holt & Co., New York, he begins conjugation, pays particular attention to transmutations of species, and con-cludes with an interesting chapter on criteria of racial advancement.

An enormous amount of labor has been put by Arthur Roberts in his 'Analytical Holy Bible" (Egyptian Publishing Company, Carbondale, Ill.). It contains, besides the entire text of the Bible, an exhaustive system of references, each reference printed in full, a condensed commentary, blographical sketches of leading characters, has proper names diacritically marked, and has all the so-called Messianic prophecies and all the words of Jesus printed in italics. It is illustrated with nearly 100 pages of half-tone pictures. The book should find a large sale in the hands of subscription agents.

Little, Brown & Co. have published under the title "Old Washington," five snort stories of Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, which first appeared in Harper's. They are stories of high-bred Southern ladies whose pride compels them to live in the shady groves of spreading genealogical trees, which also provide their daily diet. And if the fruit possesses many sustaining qualities it is not productive of rosy cheeks or of a Sunny Jim attitude toward the unsheltered world. Often the stories seem to come hard to Mrs. Spofford; they are in themselves impossible or pointless, but she has realistically shown the picture of a life which is fast losing its last representatives-slaves whom emancipation did not release from devotion and loyalty. and women who could derive no pleasure from the bustling, hard working life about them.

DR. WAGNER'S NEW BOOK

Mary Louise Hendee, who trans- | lated into English that popular sermon "The Simple Life," has made the translation of this latest book from the pen of the eminent preacher, Dr. Wagner is above all a keen observer. He notices little things as well as those of great dimensions, and writes of them simply and charmingly. From an elevated train he sees "unquestionable evidence that American housewives do a great deal of washing." They have a highly ingenious means of hanging out clothes from every story. A rope runs from a pulley just outside the kitchen window, passes over another pulley attached to a high pole at the back of the yard, and returns. In the simplest fashion possible, without stirring a step, the laundress hangs her pieces on the line, one by one, meanwhile pushing the line out. When the clothes are dry she takes them in by reversing the process. Of President Roosevelt, with whom ne stayed a short period, Dr. Wagner speaks in terms of unqualified admiration and approval. "I found the President full of tenderness and filial respect. When he spoke of the home it was with emotion. almost with tears in his eyes. He called it the keystone of humanity. Here I immediately recognized the man of heart, of a fundamental human fiber wonderfully sensitive and strong. The author speaks with enthusiasm the broad influence of our public schools, and with wonder of their cosmopolite and democratic character. Then the universities and colleges are try. He tells of the home life in his land; of the Frenchman's toil and thrift, and endeavors to show that the general impression of life in France is distorted and superficial.. "There is," he says, "an unknown France that goes far toward redeeming the crying defects of the France known, alas! but too well."

take our many sided American life and crystallize its activities, ideals, and achievements into a tale so colored with our character and so vibrant with our energies that at once we would know it to be the consummate expression of the nation's inmost heart has not appeared and there is no sign of him upon the literary horizon. But there have appeared a great flock of lesser people who take the nation's heart bit by bit and put a small portion of it into each book. The stream of novels from American presses has been growing larger and larger every year until now its spring and fall dimensions are those of a flood. But quality, too, has grown larger. Never before have there been so many novels written and published in this country, and never before has their average excellence been of so high a grade. Nor have they ever before reflected so many varying phases of our national life with so much and such faithful color. Often this has been intentional, and because the writers knew what they wanted to do and had the skill to do it. But sometimes it has been unconscious and because the writers were so much a part of that which they portrayed that they could not see its

Perhaps the most notable difference between American fiction of the present time and that of a few years ago is that it is in much closer touch with actual life, with all phases of actual life, than it used to be. Most of the men and women who are writing novels now, especially the younger ones, have themselves examined the machinery inside and out, and they know just how the wheels look and how and why they

In this country we don't have time to think of the depths. The novelist and the short story writer skim the surface of life, suggest that the deeps are there, and perhaps send an audacious sounding line down for a little way. But they rarely show that insight into the deepest workings of the human heart, and that comprehensive sympathy for human yearnings and human effort which make the novel at its best and highest estate an interpretation rather than a reflection of life. Perhaps most of those who stories are now filling the book stores and the magazines are too young to write novels of that sort, for who composition are required the kind of ing sympathy and clarifying thought that only years can bring. And whether young or old they are all, n too busy to do that grade of work, For as soon as an author achieves a success that makes it possible for h to have his manuscripts published he at once begins to race his pen ove

One popular author confesses to having written in the last five years nearly 250 short stories and two novelspractically an average of a story week, with the two novels thrown for good measure. It is like those gas tronomic feats wherein a man eats quail a day for a month. The thing is said to be very bad for the digestio And the production of a story per week, altho the author may sell every one and put much good money in 1 pocket, is fatal to all possibility sidering how rapidly most of our aux thors sent out one book after another and how frequently the same name appear on the title pages of the maga-zines, it is remarkable that their work is as good as it is,

American fiction frequently lacks sense of ethical values. And this wherein it mirrors unconsciously the American life which it portrays. Saccess is the theme of its plots, the keynote of its characters, just as it is the god of the whole American nation. The hero must win thru to material fame and fortune, with his hands clean, perhaps, altho a little grime is more lifelike. Our authors do this sort of thing very well, with much spirit and with a thrilling rush of incident to the climax. But of that spiritual success wherein a man fails and fails and yet grows constantly nobler and more lovable they know nothing. The Colone Newcomes of life do not appeal to

There are chapters on "Japan in Corea and Manchuria," the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the Russo-Japanese treaty of peace, and other leading topics of the general subject, as well as a sketch and forecast of the "new China." In his closing chapter Mr. Millard gives his definition of the existing "Far Eastern Question:"

"The possibilities of the Orient, in a commercial and industrial sense, have not yet been scratched, and that the present century will witness a tremendous evolution there cannot be doubted. That the tendency of material discovery and its application is to eliminate those conditions which for so long kept large segments of the human race in comparative isolation from each other . . . is now generally recognized." There are two good maps. The volume has not been equipped with an index.

Mrs. Florence Kimball Russell, in Born to the Blue" (L. C. Page & Co.), has written a boy's story of army life at the time when the Indians still gave excitement to daily existence. As the daughter, sister, and wife of army men the information regarding camp life is of the best, and this story of the growth of a camp baby into a manly boy, the sports of the camp, most of them mock battles, and the spirit of loyalty which inspires even the youngsters of a few summers may appeal to boys who like a little third hand fighting with some home life thrown in. The book is good; that, perhaps, is its greatest fault. The author is concerned with drawing the picture of an exemplary boy, but this impression may be reserved for the older persons, as no didactic element would be potent to youngsters. It is, however, sweet are beginning to wake up to the shame and stupidity of this great lack in our museums. The authorities of the museums and the philanthropists that shower gifts upon them are beginning to see that the future, in so far as is possible at this late date, will retrieve the indifference of the past.

As an earnest of a new interest in home accomplishment may be set down the gift made, in 1905, by Charles Hayden, a citizen of Boston, who bequeathed to the museum of his city $100,000 for the purchase of paintings by modern American artists. It is with peculiar satisfaction that one notes such a gift to the Boston museum, for, within the limited means at its disposal, it has always recognized its national obligation. Furthermore, it has felt that this obligation extends to its local environment, and it has endeavored to bring together the finest collection of the work of Copley in the country, because that artist was specially identified with old Boston. The Boston museum has tried to interest the public in contemporary American art by hanging on its walls from time to time temporary loans of such artists as were worthy of a place in a collection the standard of which has always been exceptionally high .-From Annie Nathan Meyer's "What American Museums Are Doing for American Art," in the October Cen-

Randall Parrish's new novel of the West, "Bob Hampton of Placer," just recently published, follows a series of successes, "A Sword of the Old Fron-"My Lady of the North," and "When Wilderness Was King." In all of these Mr. Parrish has proved his right to the title of story teller thru his ability to create strong characters and vivid scenes. Bob Hampton in this latest romance is discovered in action. seeking to save the life of a young girl from the Indians as the curtain rises. Te fights with Custer in that desperate struggle on the Little Big Horn when it falls; and thruout the book marked powers of description are manifest. The story has the full flavor of the West in the early '70s, and its hero and heroine, their interest heightened by an agreeably prolonged mystery, are of the sort that Bret Harte introduced to the literary world. Sunlight appearing the brighter for its background of gloom adequately describes the dominant feature of the new story by Egerton R. Williams, Jr., to be published October 6 by A. C. Mc-Clurg & Co. with the title, "Ridolfo: The Coming of the Dawn." The compelling and tender charm of a long neglected wife, wedded for reasons devoid of sentiment, at last win pity from Ridolfo of the Baglioni, himself as beautiful and as cruel as the fallen archangel. Mr. Williams, author of "Hill Towns of Italy," that valuable historical study, has been able to present a faithful picture of fourteenth century Italy, and his next has been aided materially by the illustrations in color by Joseph C. Leyendecker. No novel recently published so successfully depicts the compelling pow erof love and charity as this, or has for its principal character a figure of such striking fascination. #### OUR LAY SERMON.

It is said that about three decades ago a railroad brakeman drifted into the city of New York and very naturally soon got mixed up with a policy game. This thing called policy was a new proposition in those days, and the man who was behind the game was so pleased with the nerve of the brakeman that he offered to make him his assistant. The brakeman consented.

And the brakeman was such a versatile genius that it was not long before he was making dollars where the man who had originated the game was only making pennies. It was only a few years until Al Adams, the former railway brakeman, was known from one end of the country to the other as the policy king. It was not a title to be proud of, for even the most confirmed gambler looks with disdain upon this, the meanest form of gambling that was ever invented.

King Adams spread out his nefarious business until thousands of poor people were policy crazy in the city of New York, and it is asserted that at one time he had 200 gambling houses under his control. Educated to gamble in these dens of iniquity, poor men not only spent their scant wages to play policy, but they became confirmed and irrepressible thieves. Their families were left in want. Mothers spent the nickels on policy they ought to have exchanged for bread, and even the children placed their pennies on the game.

And all these ill-gotten gains filched from the poor so persistently went to enrich Al Adams. Ten years ago ge counted his wealth by the millions.

And Adams had but one redeeming feature—he loved his family. His one great ambition was to build up a great fortune for them-hundreds of millions of dollars -and he was in a fair way to do it when the law interfered. And yet, he must have had a good wife, for his three sons and two daughters appear to have been brought up with a desire to be regarded as decent and respectable.

But their father's business was a stigma upon them. The oldest son went to Harvard. He had plenty of iconey and worked hard and was popular with every one until it was accidentally discovered that his father was a policy gambler. Then he was turned down. Another son had a similar experience at Heidelburg with the Germans, and the third son suffered humiliation also at Harvard.

It was even worse on the daughters, for they had sufficient refinement to have high aspirations and feel bitterly the ignominy which their father's business brought to them. And with all of his hateful millions, Al Adams could not help them.

But the family of Al Adams was not destined to do all the suffering. After he had flourished for many years, the men and women and little children he had so mercilessly robbed were to be avenged. First, vengeance came in the shape of a law and Adams with superior scorn defled that law. The result was eighteen montas' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Sing Sing.

Now, a penitentiary sentence sets heavily even upon a millionaire gambler, and since his release about two years ago, the scorn of men weighed heavily upon im. Disease, also, laid hold upon his vitals, and it is very probable that remorse gnawed continually at his heart strings. Newspapers and magazines flaunted his wrong doing constantly in his face, and the mental agony he suffered must have been horrible.

A few mornings ago a shot rang thru the halls of the Ansonia hotel where Al Adams had richly furnished partments. Shortly afterwards when a bell boy entered those apartments the body of the millionaire policy king lay prone on the floor, with a bullet hole n the forehead. He had died by his own hand.

doing. The man who can find no occupation in life save that of wronging his fellow mortals is dead sure to reap his reward in the end. The millions stolen from the poor and oppressed may bring a temporary gratification from possession, but there are things in this world that all the wealth ever coined cannot buy. And, what does it profit a man if he gain the whole world and then lose his own soul?

The fate of Al Adams is worthy the serious consideration of all men. It is a story that clearly points its own moral. No man can afford to do the things that are wrong, even though millions will flow into his coffers from such action.

THE DEMAND FOR FEEDERS-

There is a general impression among the producing cattlemen of the country that there are fewer feeder cattle in the great producing area than ever before, and the prediction is freely made that if the corn belt feeders are in the ring for much stuff this fall and winter, it is going to result in material advance in rrices.

The avidity with which the young stuff carried into the corn belt section during the past few weeks and sold at auction has been snapped up and the prices paid seems to indicate a pretty active demand, and the prediction is freely made that a little later in the season there is going to be something doing in the feeding line that may be a little bit surprising.

The eastern feeders who usually take hold of the feeding proposition liberally when they have confidence in the situation are beginning to express the opinion that they can see no prospect for a falling off in the demand for good fed stuff, and believe that prices are going to go a bit higher. It is pointed out that when these people begin to talk this way it is a pretty good indication that they expect to feed liberally and have figured out good compensation for their trouble.

Texas has not fed as much stuff for the past two years as usual, the high price of cotton seed oil mill products exercising an effect of quite a deterrent nature. And it may be that similar conditions will affect the situation this winter. But there is a world of feedstuff in Texas this year independent of the cotton seed oil mills, and this feed has to be fed to stock or it will be wasted. In many portions of West Texas and the Panhandle the indications are that a considerable number of cattle will be put on rough feed,

Advices from Denver, which is regarded as something of a feeding market, are to the effect that good feeder stuff is very short thruout that section and the entire northwest, and this fact is another favorable feature for the Texas producer who has good feeder stuff for sale. The advice of those who are pretty well on to the inside of the situation is that the man with such stuff in his possession should be in no hurry to sacrifice it. The outlook is good in that direction.

UNUSUAL DEMAND FOR LAND

Cattlemen in Fort Worth during the past week have all had the same story to tell concerning an active demand for ranch property, which, it seems, is causing the rapid passing of the bigger ranches of the state entirely out of existence. They are at something of a loss to account for the unprecedented demand, and say it just seems to be a case where the people want the land and are determined to have it.

One peculiarity of this land movement is that it does not seem to be confined to any particular section of Texas. One day there is reported a transaction involving the transfer of thousands of acres out in the Pecos section, which will be devoted to the biggest wheat farm in the world; orchards for the production of apples and other fruit, and this is followed by announcement of the sale of another big ranch in southwest Texas that has been cut up into 4,000 farms. Then comes the passing of one of the most noted breeding farms in the state, located in Williamson county, which goes to the farmer at $85 per acre. Next comes the Panhandle with the information that big ranch after big ranch is being chopped up into farms and going into the hands of new citizens from Iowa, Illinois and other states, and West Texas comes to the front with the startling information that the time is not far distant when it will be almost a continuous cotton field from Fort Worth to El Paso.

And the cattlemen are not kicking one particle over the new situation. The good prices they are obtaining for the land they are turning loose to go under the plow is sufficient to compensate them for much of the worry and disappointment they have experienced during the past several years. It is making good many of the losses they have sustained, and it is enabling those that desire to get out of the cattle business to do so with flying colors and snug bank accounts.

It is a wonderful story of progress and development these Texas cattlemen are telling, and it proves that Texas is enjoying such an era in that direction as was never before known in the state. The big ranches are now melting away like dew before the morning sun, and in their place we are getting new blood, new wealth and a class of citizenship that is already proving its worth to the state.

THOSE OFFICE HOURS

"Will return in ten minutes."

Hanging this sign on the door, the careless business man goes out and stays two hours.

When he first leaves his office he intends to return in half an hour, but he meets a friend who suggests luncheon, or asks him to join in a social glass, and the little sign hanging on the door is completely forgotten.

Meanwhile, people wishing to see him on business have arrived at the office, and, noting the sign on the door, have settled down in the ante-room to await his Ten minutes pass. An hour passes. The careless man does not return. Meanwhile, his visitors, who have only a certain amount of time to spare, are twiddling their thumbs and impatiently glancing at the clock. They are running the risk of missing engagements with other people. Possibly among those waiting there is one whose entire business of the day is held up because he is delayed over a deal which it would not take ten minetes to transact,

After a while the waiters despair of the careless man's return and they go away disgusted.

Is this good business? Is this conscientious busi-

It is not good business because it will inevitably antagonize those who have been forced to waste time thru the deceptive little sign on the door. Naturally they will figure that a man who does not care enough about business to stay in his office during the time that he is supposed to be there is hardly the sort of man they care to do business with. It is not conscientious business because in its very inception it is intended to deceive callers. The man who hangs up the sign simply prefers to let others wait rather than hurry

It is simple enough to leave word if you intend staying away from your office the entire forenoon or Even millions of wealth will not atone for wrong afternoon. Then people who call on business will go his neighbor, Chicago News.

away at once and not be wasting time waiting for you while you amuse yourself elsewhere.

If you have office hours keep them. Make it a point to return to your office at the time you announce you will be back. Otherwise, you are likely to find that before long you will have no reason to go to your office at all.

SPREAD OF THE BOLL WEEVIL

The pest of the cotton planter, known as the boll weevil, continues to spread eastward, as it has been freely predicted would be the case, and has now gotten well over into the state of Arkansas. The three counties of Miller, Lafayette and Columbia are said to already be badly infested, and a vigorous campaign of extermination will be begun there in an effort to prevent any further spread of the trouble. Dr. L. O. Edwards, chief of the entomology bureau of the department of agriculture, is now in Texas, and will go to Arkansas to render assistance in the fight that state is about to put up. The department has nearly $85,000 available for the purpose of putting up a fight against the boll weevil, and while much of this will be spent in Texas, Arkansas will not be neglected. In discussing the boll weevil proposition a few days ago, Secretary Wilson said:

"To successfully combat the weevil, experience has shown that the government cannot accomplish much good without the active help and support of the cotton planter himself. United and intelligent action on the part of the farmer in carrying out our instructions will check the spread of the weevil and is absolutely essential in a crusade of this kind. Nothing short of this will bring good results. Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi have lost nearly $100,000,000 by virtue of the ravages of the weevil whereas proper precaution and concerted action would have reduced the loss to a much smaller amount. I have no doubt but what the people of Miller, Lafayette and Columbia counties can confine the pest to these counties if they carry out our instructions faithfully. Otherwise the plague will spread all over the state and cause damage amounting to millions of dollars. The department is sending many thousands of circular letters into the infested counties telling the people how best to fight the weevils."

LIVES LOST AND FOUND

(BY IRENE GARDNER)

Two women were laid to rest the other day at the same hour, one in Kansas and the other in New York. The Kansas woman had gone to that state with her husband and ten children forty years ago. They were poor, but with the hardy spirit of the pioneers went to work to better their condition and rear their six sons and four daughters to lead useful lives. In those days life in Kansas meant privation and unceasing toil. Two years after this couple had taken up their home there the Asiatic cholera broke out.

Instead of fleeing in terror from the scourge this pioneer woman went into the dugouts where the epidemic was raging and nursed the sick back to life or ministered to them in their death. After a time, she herself became stricken with the plague, but even then her spirit did not quail. Her intelligence and strong will helped her to combat the disease, and she vered, and after the epidemic had abated returned to her family and took up her household tasks as though she had done nothing out of the ordinary. Twenty years later her husband died. Thruout all those years and for twenty years after his death this brave woman went about that community in which she lived doing good. She helped, among other things, to organize a Presbyterian church among her people. The meanest mendicant was never turned from her door. She drew generously upon her earthly and spiritual stores to give them comfort.

When she was laid in her grave, the rich, the poor, the lame, the halt, crowded into the cemetery to pay her a last tribute of love. Today eighty of her descendants are living.

The other woman, who was laid to rest in New York, lies in a pauper's grave. She was found murdered in her bed, brutally mutilated. Thruout the locality where she lived and among those on the police force who knew of her there was but one verdict. "It is well. She was but a base wretch who never did anything but evil." That is her epitaph. All who had come within the drift of her life had been degraded. She had shattered homes, lured young boys and girls to their ruin, had aimed to steal her living rather than earn a dollar. Cunningly she sought to save some part of her stolen or basely earned funds, so that when she became so low an outcast that even her evil influence would be weakened she would have something to turn to. And it was for those paltry savings that she was murdered.

Two women who lived at the same time and were buried at the same time. One sought to elevate humanity, the other to degrade. It is said that the woman who lies in a pauper's grave was a misanthrope, that the last words any one ever heard fall from her lips were curses upon her Maker because she had ever been born. And the woman who lies in that little cemetery in central Kansas said, as she lay on her death bed: "I am not afraid of death, but would like to live longer. There is so much to be done." Two women! And the works of both shall live after them.

We had learned to regard the Fort Worth Telegram as a first-class evening paper, but our good opinion is somewhere shocked since Senator Bailey said: "If I had to choose between allowing the Police Gazette and Fort Worth Telegram to come to my home, I would take the Police Gazette." What sort of literary taste has the senator anyway.—Carney Pioneer.

He strode off in high dudgeon, "graceful in his handsome rage, while the poor deluded girl like a crushed flower -(that's me)-sank sobbing on a fauteuil as if her heart would break." ONLY it wasn't on a fauteuil, but on the bench behind Pine Cottage where the men guests have to wash in a tin basin and be careful not to step on the ducklings.

But I quickly dried my eyes, remembering I was an helress (for this week only). I thought to myself there's other fish in the sea, both game and NOT, so I swept by him on the veranda where he was chinning a red-headed girl from Cairo, Ill., who pretends to be of the elite, but hasn't got all the typewriter ink out of her finger nails, the cat!

After writing this I will sob myself to sleep-nit. It's time enough when I'm down and out for sure.

Of all the nonsense and imbecility which has marked the agitation against Senator Bailey, the most puerile is the demand that he release the members of the legislature from the instructions of the primary election and again submit his name of the people of Texas. The people who are suggesting such a course are not fools and imbeciles, mind you, but are merely indulging a mental revel such as is rarely witnessed save among those who have accepted the hospitality of the state in one of the institutions provided for those of feeble intellect.-Houston Post.

This line of argument on the part of the Post is absolutely unanswerable. It is a logic that speaks for . . . . The proposition made by Mr. Colquitt that he is in favor of government ownership of railways is probably calculated to place him right ahead of the coming national convention. It will hardly be a popular slogan in his race for the nomination for governor four years hence, however .- San Antonio Express, Commissioner Colquitt has a happy faculty of adopting almost anything he thinks will add to his personal popularity. But he is making a great mistake in declaring for government ownership.

. . . . A bale of Red River county long staple cotton sold in Clarksville yesterday for 18 cents per pound. Will some gentleman now come forward with a 19 cent bale?

Nobody barred.—Clarkesville Times. Red River county is famous for the production of long staple cotton, and when the farmers of that section can produce such cotton and find ready sale for it at 18 cents per pound, it looks as if there ought to be much long staple cotton produced in that section.

. . . . William Randolph Hearst says he will make the same contribution to his own campaign that he did to campaigns of Grover Cleveland and William Jennings Bryan. And he will not pass the hat around for dollars either. It is a great thing for a man to have the coin to pay his own campaign expenses. Then he is free and unfettered-if he lands the office.-Dallas Times

And Hearst deserves to land the office he is seeking. As the Democratic nominee for governor of New York he is waging a fight for good government that deserves to succeed.

Mrs. Platt says the aged and senile senator purchased her beauty, and appears to despise him for his having done so. In the south the female who sells her beauty is not very highly regarded.-Houston Post.

There could not have been a sale of Mrs. Platt's beauty without her consent. If the senator's conduct is reprehensible, she should be willing to assume her share of the responsibility.

THE "MARKS" OF A "LADY" BY FRANCES GILBREATH INGERSOLL

"How to tell a lady?" Rather a tough problem, rowadays. Once "my lady" prided herself in her separateness from the "working" class-now she goes in public with her sleeves rolled up and her neckband turned down after the style of her washerwoman. She was once tidy and neat of dress; her hair is now an untidy "frazzled" mass; she wears her dressing saques. ki:nonos and wrappers at unseemly hours and unseemly places; and goes into public with an apology for

A lady was once modest-"ladies" now exhibit matronly charms and undraped limbs as freely as any slave in a slave mart, and with much less modesty. She cace scorned the class called "demimonde"; now she "rubs elbows" with them, and challenges masculine criticism as unblushingly.

She once was quiet mannered and low of veice; she now "talks horse" with her hands in her pockets, and her strident tones are heard in all places sacred by

Her speech was once marked by purity of diction. correctness of construction and feminine delicacy as distinguishing marks of culture demanded by a "true" lady-she now interlards her speech with slang, denies her grammar, and discourses unblushingly before a mixed public upon subjects formerly tacitly tabooed to

Her penmanship also partakes of the general "loose" conditions; and when she begins to boast of her "fizeek," and her "etiquet" is as obsolete as an oldfashioned spelling book, the last mark of a "lady" will be obliterated. There are "ladies and ladies"—these are one kind-a noissome growth upon modern social conditions. Thank God there are a few of "the other kind" enshrined in the heart of most of us.

He says: "I came here last December from Lamar county, and this year off of 120 acres of sod land I will make at least sixty bales of cotton. By picking it clean I might figure on seventy-five bales, but there is bound to be some loss, and I don't want to over-estimate my crop. I had in only fifteen acres in oats, but they averaged fifty-five bushels to the acre, and fifteen acres in corn, which averaged forty-five bushels. I have raised enough mile maize to last me two years, and as a farming proposition l am not looking for anything better than Hardeman county."

Childress Waking Up

Special to The Telegram. CHILDRESS, Texas, Oct. 13 .- The law of nature will manifest itself regardless of what men may do. In the great Dismal Swamp of Virginia, where the tall trees are draped with massive veils of glistening moss, it is a well-known fact that when it rains and rains and rains the fungus-like body of the moss absorbs so much moisture that its great weight causes its small but tenacious tentacles to break loose from the trees and fall in great heaps to the ground. So it is now in Childress. The great seasons of rain which we have had has so filled the earth with moisture and prosperity that the moss which has so long been clinging tenaciously to the backs of many of our citizens has so weighted that at last it has given away and fallen to the ground. At a mass meeting held in the city skating rink this old moss was all gathered up and burned. An organization was perfected which has for its object the bringing of 50,000 people to the county. Large sums of money were subscribed on the spot and the work of going after immigration will at once begin in earnest.

T. O. HUNTER, Manager

The following interesting letter has been written to The Telegram by W. S. Gilbert of Decatur, who was sergeant-at-arms at the first Bailey convention held in Decatur fifteen years ago.

BAILEY ADMIRER

Decatur, Texas, Oct. 13, 1906-Believing it to be the duty of any citizen to defend the honor, integrity and good name of any good man when his character, his past and present, has been assailed, I wish to say a few words in behalf of our junior senator,

Joe W. Bailey. I have known him for eighteen years, and to know him is to admire and love him, personally and publicly. I have supported him every time he has been before the people, from the first convention to the last; first, because I believed him to be an honest and conscientious man; second, because he impressed me with his qualifications for the position he sought. This I thought fifteen years ago and I still stand firm on the same issue today, the principles of the first convention Almost the first thing I ever heard of him politically was that he was very dear and close to the common people of his own home county and district. As every one knows, the common people thruout the state are nis friends and stanch supporters. So it was toteen years aro, at the largest cong essional convention ever held at Decatur, when Mr. Bailey was nominated to congress over Judge

Hare—a very strong man at that time. Eight hundred participated in the convention and we had a very large district court room, but on account of the insufficiency of it to hold the people, the great crowd had to go to the public square to hear the speeches. Why was this? It was because the plain people were for young Bailey, of this and connecting counties, Eagerly and passionately, they had selected him as their leader. Fifteen years ago! Let's see how things were. Early in the morning wagons, buggies, carriages and all other available transportation was put into service to convey the people of the county and the district to cast their ffrst vote for the young man who was so destined to such profound prominence. And why were they so enthusiastic Because they believed he would represent them honestly and boldly it their governmental affairs. Why did they believe it? Because in lieu of going to the scheming politicians to manage his campaign and by dint of fair or foul means, he had gone to the forks of the creek, the cross-roads and the by-ways to secure his untarnished support in this county and this district.

When the convention was called to order it was soon found that Mr. Bailey had a very large majority over his august opponent, Judge Hare. Several notable speeches were made and among the statements was one by Mr. Welborn of Henrietta to the effect that Mr. Bailey would within ten years be one of our United States senators.

The interest manifested thruout the county and district for the people's lion was to such an extent that even the little boys present were using their lungs in Mr. Bailey's behalf. There have been many hard things said about him in the last few weeks. but I for one do not believe he has done anything detrimental to the state that should cause the people of this great commonwealth to regret their action of fifteen years ago. I have never heard one man censure him now that supported him then. The charges of favoring trusts are not tolerated by his old supporters. To those who know him best we should by all means allow judgment-his neighbors and bosom friends. And now, after having gone before the people for the second term in the United States senate with a clean record, without opposition, receiving 280,-000 votes, unanimously indorsed by the 1906 state convention in Dallas, what more could we old-time Democrats wish for? No man ever had a higher compli-ment paid him than that by Hon.

Cone Johnston of Tyler in nominating Mr. Bailey for the senate. Without a peer he sat, the glory of other days, as well as the present After having enjoyed the confidence of the people for fifteen long years it seems to me that the watch towers of Democracy and the "Good government people of Texas" should have been there, if ever, to protest against his nomination or forever held their We trusted him then and he accepted, and I for one cannot think for a moment that he has ever betrayed that trust, W. S. GILBERT.

VENICE BECOMES SUMMER RESORT

English Aristocracy Flees to Ancient City

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE, Copyright 1906, by Newspaper Enterprise Ass'n) PARIS, Oct. 13.—I was quite right when I stated in a recent letter that true elegance does not follow fashion. but precedes it. What has happened in the case of Deanville, our summer seaside resort, has also been manifested at Biarritz, our autumn resort. High society no longer goes there having been driven away by the noisy throngs of middle class and half world habitues who have taken possession of the place. The artistocracy are now to be found on the shores of the Adriatic, at Venice, City of Mystery and Silence. It will take ten years to make of Venice a fashionable summer resort, but when at the end of that time its reputation is established and all Paris begins to flock there, the elite of French society will turn their attention to another spot which it is hoped will prove to be as beautiful and as laden with enchantment as this For the time being the Queen of Venice is an American woman, the Princess de Polignac, nee Singer, who rules society. She has purchased a magnificent old palace from some impoverished Italian nobleman, and in it she holds sway over the little world of foreign aristrocrats who have chosen

Venice as an autumn place of sojourn. In her salons one meets such shining lights in the world of art and letters as the Comte de Segur, the Comtesse de Guerne, Comtesse Charles de Talleyrand. Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Reszke, Comte and Comtesse Jean de Castellane, Comte Joseph de Gontaut, Comtesse de Chevigne, Mrs. Moore, M. de Kerjegu, etc.—in a word, the elite of French society.

In the evening one can hear floating out over the moonlit canals the melodious voice of M. Raynaldo Haim blended with the beautiful notes of the Comtesse de Guerne in the passionate duets from "Romeo and Juliet." Before long we shall see a crowd of people who think they are dishonored if they do not do everything the aristocracy does, hastening from Paris ou September 15 to spend a few weeks in Pecan Outlook Light Special to The Telegram.

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Oct. 13 .-Many letters have been received by local handlers of pecans from manufacturing concerns and buyers who use carload lots of the nuts, asking concerning the probable yield in the Concho country. These men desire the Concho country pecan because it has proven to be the best produced in the country, and the letters have been answered in various ways. One local dealer says he thinks the yield this year will be exceptionally light, while another thinks it will be the best for a number of years. Conditions are somewhat uncertain as to just what the crop will be as far as this part of the state is concerned. Some claims are that the heavy late rains have had a bad effect on the growing pecans, while otehrs are to the effect, with equally as much positiveness, that the contrary view and it is said these rains did the nuts a whole lot of good.

The test case will be based on affidavits filed with the department of justice from Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee, to the effect that the law has been violated in a number of cases by a southern railroad. The case will of course be fought to the highest court by the railroad, the constitutionality of the act being attacked. The law was passed in 1898 but the present case is the first which has been brought under its provisions.

5477 Corset Cover, 82 to 40 Bust. Corset Cover with Removable Handkerchief Bertha 5477

Dainty corset covers are always in demand, for no woman ever yet had a sufficient number and each one is certain to be met with a welcome. Here is an extremely attractive model that can be made either with or without the bertha or with a separate bertha that can be attached or omitted as occasion renders desirable. In this instance the corset cover itself is made of batiste, while the bertha is made from a handkerchief and the trimming is Valenciennes lace and beading, but while the handkerchief is particularly desirable for a bertha and reduces the labor of making, it is not assential, as it can be cut from a square of material and finished in any way that may be liked on the edges. All materials used for underwear are approor embroidery, as liked.

The corset cover is made with fronts and back. The back is tucked for its entire length, but the fronts are tucked at their lower edges only. The neck edge of the corset cover and the bertha both are finished with beading and can be threaded together or separately as liked. When threaded together the bertha must, of course, be separate from the center front to be attached at the left shoulder or must be threaded with the corset cover after the latter is closed. A basque portion finishes the lower edge.

things might be mentioned, while the chemisette always can be lace or in ingerie style as preferred. The waist is made with a fitted lining and consists of front and backs. The lining is faced to form the chemisette, and the waist itself is shirred on the shoulders and again on the center front and at the waist line to form the girdle, the closing being made invisibly at the back. The sleeves extend a little below the elbows in conformity with the latest decree of fashion and are shirred and finished with rell-over cuffs and frills of lace. #### SHORT STORY

"Well, George, in four days you will be Isabel's husband, and you are wondering why I have never mentioned a wedding present."
"No, Lord Winter," said John Musgrove. "Isabel is a prize. You have been good to me." "Nevertheless I am going to make you a partner in my business house," said Lord Winter. "You deserve it. I love you like a son, and I'm going to tell you why. "Many years ago I loved your mother. You scarcely remember her, but I'll carry her face in my heart to my dying day, loyal as I am to the present Lady Winter. I waited to ask your mother's hand in marriage until too late. Your father had been accepted. I never saw him. I know that his affairs went wrong and he disappeared. I believe he is dead. When your mother was dying she asked me to take charge of you, and how gladly I did it, my boy."

Next day a stranger called on John Musgrove, presented the card of a detective agency, and said: "If you are John Musgrove and were born in Liverpool, my search is ended. I was commissioned by your father to find "My father?" gasped Musgrove. "Where is he?" "At a hotel," and will be with you in the morning.

It was 8 o'clock next morning when a fine looking man entered John's room and clasped him in his arms. He told how he had wandered over the face of the earth in search of fortune, had been a prisoner of Indians for years, and had finally stumbled on a gold mine and returned immensely wealthy.

He was pleased with Isabel, and together they went to a jeweler's aud selected a box of jewels on approval. taking them back to Lord Winter's

As his lordship entered the room he started, and then asked all but the elder Musgrove to return. As soon as the room was cleared, he said: "Yes, I was on the bench years ago, and I sentenced you, John Crisp, to prison for 30 years. "It is true," said the man, "but I am

John's father. Don't destroy his happiness. I will disappear. Fod God's sake do not expose me." Lord Winter's face softened, "I will do as you ask," he said. Next morning Lord Winter sent for John. He looked grave. "Where is your father?" he asked. "I left him in my rooms." "I have bad news for you. Yesterday, after examining the jewels, they were placed in that cabinet. Your was left alone with them. The jewels are gone. A maid saw a man leap from the window and run thru the shrubbery. That man was your father. I'll tell you more. I. myself sentenced that man to prison. Wait. Your mother was married June 11,

"She was. What does this mean?" "I sent this man to prison in January, 1874. He is an impostor." Then there was a rush to get to John's rooms, but the pseudo Musgrove was gone and with him the jewels. He was arrested as he was leaving the country and returned to prison. It was never learned how he gained the information that so nearly allowed him

PARIS, Oct. 13 .- No American has so quickly captured the heart of Paris as Charles Dana Gibson, who with his charming wife has rented a house on Boulevard Berthier, where he will spend the winter, and a studio on the slope of the hill upon which stands the beautiful Church of the Sacred Heart. Mr. Gibson has already become a well-known figure on the boulevard, and creates quite a sensation whenever he shows himself, as everybody wants to get a close view of the creator of the "Gibson Girl," who is all the rage in Paris now.

In artistic circles the general opinion s that Mr. Gibson, with his indomitable energy and his unique talent for drawing, will in time become famous as painter of portraits.

Two German Nobles Commit Suicide After Disgrace in Gambling Affair

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

Cable Special to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.) BERLIN, Oct. 13 .- The German courts have upheld a socialist orator's right to voice his opinions, even tho they be in direct opposition to the dictum of the kaiser. .

Herr Buchel, addressing a social democratic meeting in Berlin, referred to the karser's speech to army recruits which he said that it would be their duty, if commanded to do so, to fire even upon their fathers and

Buchel advised all parents to bring their children up in anti-militarist ideas, so that they would refuse to obey an order to shoot down their own

This was held by the police to be an infringement of paragraph 10 of the criminal code, and Buchel was prosecuted for publicly inciting to disolience against the law of the land. In defending Buchel, the social demcratte lawyer and Deputy Heine said the prisoner had not exhorted soldiers to disobedience, but had "merely recnded the parents to educate their children on certain lines." This argument was coincided in by Bavarian courts had decided to prosecute him for keeping a gambling san, caused the wretched young man o take his own life.

Scores Arrested

Peaceful Russian citizens are show ng an entirely new spirit toward their pressors. Up until lately, suspected ndividuals, if they did not themselves resist, were arrested without difficulty. During the last month, whole villages have risen to protect popular men threatened with arrest. In Stavropol, in South Russia, Vas-essons were in progress. The scholars barricaded the door and sent their slates and ink bottles flying at the heads of the invaders. Prutkowsky took refuge with the local doctor. When the police arrived,

Suddenly I heard a sharp cry benind me, and turning around saw my wife had fallen into her son's arms and was bleeding rofusely from eyes, nose and mouta. A stone about the size of a child's fist had been thrown into the car and had hit her full in the face. Fortunately, the wound is not serious, but what a terrible danger she and we, too, ran! (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.) Cable Special to The Telegram. LONDON, Oct. 13.-The squares like Grosvenor, Belgrave and Eton squares, which are such a delightful feature of London, with their great trees and lawns kept exclusively for the residents, are actually very seldom used except by children and nurse maids, but Mrs. Arthur Paget, who is at last really recovering from her terrible lift accident two years ago, is making good use of Belgrave Square. Almost every day she can be seen walking very slowly around the in-closed gardens, leaning on a heavy gold-headed stick presented to her by the Princess of Wales. At present she can only move slowly, but she has great hopes of complete recovery and will probably be seen about a good deal during the winter. Her daughter, Miss Leila Paget, is going out to India at the end of October.

Burns' New Home John Burns, the labor cabinet minister, is now comfortably settled in his new and larger home in Lavender Gardens. A great deal of fuss was made about his personal removal of his household goods from the humble home in Lavender Hill which he has occupied for so many years, but as a matter of fact it was only his precious books that he moved personally. Mr. Burns' books are his greatest treasures. Since his very early days he has collected books which related to the history of England, books of travel and volumes of vital statistics. To this day he can be seen diving into the three-penny boxes of second-hand book sellers.

His collection of "blue books," all carefully bound, is unrivaled. They occupy every available inch of space in the house at Lavender Hill, much to the annoyance of Mrs. Burns. Mr. Burns did not even occupy the whole house at Lavender Hill. For some years the top floor was tenanted by the widow of a chimney sweep. Now his new house is absolutely lined with books so carefully arranged that he can put his finger on any "facts," which his opponents may require. Prince Wants Job

The Princess of Wales is extremely anxious to secure some kind of good official positions with comfortable incomes attached to them for her brothers, Prince Alexander and Prince Francis of Teck, but the king with his usual knowledge of public feeling, has so far declined to find "fat billets" for either of them

The present government, his majesty realizes, would not encourage such an . action and public opinion would not be in favor of it. Prince Francis, who occupies a small bachelor suite in Lonis continually getting into "scrapes" of one sort or another. Just now he is economizing in Italy, after having received a severe lecture from the Prince of Wales. The only position which is spoken of as being suitable to him would be that of ornamental adviser to the officers of the Norwegian army. King Haakon, who married Princess Maud of Wales, and who is visiting London shortly, is anxious to secure the services of young British ex-army officers to smarten up his own army. Prince Francis of Teck is undoubtedly smart, and is keen in all army matters.

Frenchman to Publish Poem on Death of Friend

(BY COUNT DE CASTELLANE.) Cable Special to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.)

PARIS, Oct. 13.-Count Robert de Montesquiou, the delicate poet who has been called the Oscar Wilde of France, because of the exquisite beauty of his verse, is soon to publish a poem which will create a great sensation.

The title of this poem is "The Twelve Stations of My Cross," and has for its theme the friendship existing between two men. The heroes are Count de Montesquiou himself and his dearly loved friend, Monsieur Itury. The poet will recount to us all the joys and sor-rows which this friendship gave him, ally describe to us Itury's preand finally describe to us Itury's premature deaths and how he passed away in the arms of his dear poet, his name the last upon his lips. Such is the story of what he calls his Calvary.

I have not been so fortunate as to see the advance sheets of this work, but I am sufficiently familiar with the talent of the author to predict that its publication will raise him to a place in the foremost ranks of the literary former of our times.

Affair Regarded as Huge Joke by Russians

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

Cable Special to The Telegram BERLIN, Oct. 13.—The Grand Duke of Andrei Vladmirovitch, of Russia, has sued the police inspector of the admiralty arrondissement, for the sum of nine roubles and seventy kopecks, or less than $5. The police inspector, being a slave to duty and fearless of grand dukes, forced the czar's cousin to pay that small sum for the "address tax" of one of the employes in his palace on the English quay.

Grand Duke Andrei's auditor found the payment illegal and demanded its return. The police retorted that there is no legal process by which sums paid to them by mistake can be returned. The grand duke ordered the $5 to be sued before a justice of the peace, and the case will duly come into court,

The St. Petersburg wits have circulated the joke that Grand Duke Andrei is the only person who has ever tried to get money back from the police and that the police inspector is the only man who has ever got money from a grand duke.

Two weeks from tomorrow Prince Joachim Albrecht of Prussia will lead to the altar Frau Maria Sulzer, the actress from the Trianon theater, who is known to every man about town in Berlin because of the prominent parts she has played in questionable French Everybody is wondering what the kaiser's second cousin sees in this woman whose beauty is a thing of the past, who has the figure of a grenadier and the voice of a town crier, and whose past is far from being spotless. She is the divorced wife of Baron Liekenberg, who, it is said, married her while they were on a spree, and who was more than glad to get rid of her a few months later.

Everybody agrees that Prince Joachim, who, though something of a vivandier, is a man of refinement and gifted both as a musician, painter and composer, will very soon regret his marriage with a woman ten years his senior and without any intellectual qualities or social accomplishments.

MEN HUNTED AND SLAIN LIKE BEASTS

Russians and Officials Mad for Blood

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

Cable Special to The Telegram. BERLIN, Oct. 13.-Because of the large number of German subjects living in the Baltic provinces the German ambassador at St. Petersburg is said to have protested against the ferocious repressions of General Orloff in that part of Russia, which have driven to take refuge in the woods hundreds of unfortunate peasants, who are being hunted as human wolves by the local land owners and ruthlessly slain. The human wolves retaliate, and a war of extermination has ensued. The stories published in the local German press recall the savage age of Sobiesky and the Cossack Khmielnitsky, when mutilation before death was the greatest mercy shown to cap-Carolus Viten, chief of the wolves, boasted that he had killed since January over forty Russian officials and German burghers. He attacked them as they traveled through the dense pine forests, shot them from behind trees, and divided their horses among the ravenous followers for food. With their money and valuables he entered Mitau in disguise, lived riotously for a week, and returned to the forests drunk with the desire for further murder, plunder

Recently the forest region which formed Viten's lair suddenly became safe for travelers. The bandit had disappeared. The story was that he had fled to Konigsberg with the abducted daughter of his last victim.

The German police sought him, but the Russian police found him. Backed by a score of Cossacks, they burst, on the 18th of September, into a part of the forest where the czar's authority had not been known for a year. A crowd of petty German traders were holding a meeting in a pine grove.

And in front of them, his body suspended from a branch, his nose, ears and fingers cut off, was the dead bandit. Close by, apostrophizing the victim's body in derisive eulogy, was the uncle of the girl abducted.

Franciscan convent. Later, for two centuries and a half, there existed two separate universities, but in 1860 the rival colleges resolved to unite. Fifteen years ago a great scheme was set on foot to enable the university to meet modern educational requirements, especially were the science schools and the medical school to be developed, with the result that the college buildings are now the largest structures of granite in the world, save that of the Escurial palace in Spain. The new buildings have cost the sum of nearly a quarter of a million sterling.

Forty-six thousand pounds have come from the national exchequer; 50,000 pounds was subscribed by one of the late partners of Armstrong, Mitchell, the great shipbuilding firm of the Tyne, and Lord Strathcona, who has held office as lord rector, has made the magnificent gift of 250,000 pounds, while the balance has been made up by the corporation of Aberdeen, distinguished alumni of the alma mater, and others interested in the education of the north. The Aberdeen university has likewise benefited by the Carnegie trust. One of the most interesting features, however, of the educational work is that among the eight hundred students, who are graduating, there are many women, and the great change of opinion which has taken place with regard to the admission of women to the university life is nowhere more marked than at this great Scottish university. It was natural, therefore, that the city of Aberdeen should celebrate the opening of the addition to this famous building with suitable celebrations, and so the great northern town, so unlike anything to be found in England, whose inhabitants possess many of the qualities, strong and solid, of these granite structures, was gay with flags and decorations and brilliant with color.

A great procession was formed in the quadrangle of Marechale college, and

For some time past Mr. Astor has been seen wandering over the wonderful estate which he has literally transformed, accompanied by a handsome girl belonging to an old Kentish family and many years his junior. He has introduced the young lady to several of his personal friends, Hever Castle is now ready for occupation. Mr. Astor of late has been spending week-ends there superintending the great work of restoration and living in the simplest of bungalows commanding a lovely view of the old

At the castle Mr. Astor will occupy the Henry VIII state chamber, a glorious and regal apartment, but for the present the haunted room will not be furnished. In this room the ghost of Anne Boleyn is said to walk at night Mrs. Spender Clay (Pauline Astor) is enchanted with the new of Tudor village and has spent several weekends in it. The whole estate bristles with notice boards warning people not to trespass and every workman in the neighborhood knows that if he ventures on the sacred inclosure he will be taken into custody by the police.

The British army maneuvers which have just concluded may not have been of great value, but they showed conture to learn what real warfare is like In many instances the commissariat broke down completely and in Sussex many men were without food or water for twenty hours. But Tommy came out very well. He merely tightened his belt and robbed fields of turnips and other raw delicacies just as he would in real warfare. In one case which is now being investigated several men in infantry reg-iment lassoed a fat swan and killed and roasted it for dinner. Everyone, however, agrees that the maneuvers were the best approach to real warfare ever attempted in this country, and Sir John French and General Baden Powell were extremely pleased with the stoical and uncomplaining behavior of the troops.

Book lovers are getting up a great agitation about the sale of Lord Amherst's spiendid library. No soor a library announced for sale than the name of J. Pierpont Morgan is heard on every side, and indignant old gen tlemen write to the papers from literary clubs calling attention to the scandalous exportation to America of England's priceless literary treasures. A. W. Pollard, one of the great authorities of the British Museum, has done something to calm the agitation by stating that great private collec-tions invariably find their way into public ownership, and predicts that all the collections now being formed by enormously wealthy Americans will some day be found in American universities or museums, when, he says, the best use will be made of them. This has always been the case with private collections in England, and Mr. Pollard does not see why the Englishspeaking public on both sides of the Atlantic should not benefit equally,

Election of German Jesuit General Said Mistake

(BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.)

Cable Special to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1908, by Hearst News Service.) PARIS, Oct. 13.—Cardinal Merry del Val reached the height of tactles by imposing upon the Jesuits a Ger-man general. This is not by any means the celebrated cardinal's first break. Heretofore the company of Jesus had chosen its chiefs from among the unimportant districts of small countries in order to avoid arousing the susceptibilities of the great powers.

For the first time in a hundred years this great religious organization, so marvelously powerful an element in the composition of the Catholic cl has given way before the need to flat-ter the strong, and deviated from its habitual policy. It has simply fallen into the arms of the German empire, which is and always will remain a pr estant empire, no matter what

Cardinal Merry del Val has caused the Jesuits to offend France, which the pernaps less believing than in the past is nevertheless the church's eldest daughter, the founder of her temporal power, and the persevering fu her financial revenue, Peter's Pence.

If the pope's minister of state thinks that by such proceedings he is going to tighten the bonds between France and the church he is greatly mistaken. If he does not seek to bring the two closer together he has a not seek. does not seek to bring the two closer together he has an altogether erroneous idea of the needs of religious equilibrium in France and elsewhere. Anyhow, his business is that of a secretary, not that of a man of God. What seems most extraordinary in all this is that Pope Pius X., who, after all, is responsible for what the cardinal does, should have allowed him to show such want of judgment.

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Oct. 13,-New York cotton opened from 6 to 10 points up this morning, and held very steady. Orders for outside buying came in almost from the opening, and trading was fair, both on the curb and on the exchanges. Local traders, however, sold lightly upon tips for a bull movement, to follow reports of rains in the southwestern belt, which immediately caused a heavy buying demand. The indications are that the cotton belt will be swept over Sunday by a sharp fall in temperature, which seems to be driving rain ahead of it. Cold rains were also reported from Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory and cloudy and scattered rain over the balance of the western belt. This looks very unfavorable for cotton, and professionals claim that this season's crop is done for, and that no kind of weather from now on will make a crop to exceed 11,500,000 bales, and continued bad weather will make it smaller These conditions and further predic tions of rain and unfavorable reports from Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, had a very bullish influence on the market, and for the most part of the day's session made a gradual advance.

Heavy traders were liberal buyers, and took all in sight at the prices quoted, and were advising the purchase of cotton on every soft spot-but as the prices advanced above 11c the market became more nervous and irregular, and the range in prices was wider and the fluctuations more rapid. For a while it looked like a repetition of the events that characterized yesterday's market-to decline when an advance was expected-but the bull sentiment was too strong, and aided by reports of general unfavorable cotton conditions, the market was kept strong and on the advance, closing with a gain of several points all along

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 13 .- The market opened with a bullish tendency upon rain reports, and estimated deterioration in the estimated season's crop. It is now estimated that the present crop cannot exceed 11,500,000 bales. The demand was heavy, and buyers swept factors' tables of all offerings, which were by no means lib-

The week-end figures gave the bears no consolation. The stock of cotton at Liverpool was reported down to 213,000 bales, against 613,000 last season and 150,000 two years ago. The stock of cotton at Bremen is insignificant, there only 36,000 bales, against year and 71,000 two 162,000 last years ago. On top of this the amount of American cotton afloat for Europe is only 351,000 bales, against 475,000 last year, and 77,000 in 1904. Spinners are said to be very short, and Europe must soon demand a large supply. The crop condition, if the reports can be relied upon, is one of serious moment. Every indication is for a further deterioration in the season's crop, and the bullish influence is bringing these facts to force further advances in the market. At the close of the market it had made a net gain

Few Cattle on Market Today-All Grades Sell Steady-Hogs Active and Steady-Tops, $6.30 Cattle receipts, 400. Steers were in light supply offerings including just a few odd head arriving in mixed loads. The demand from packers was good for all killing grades, and a clearance was made shortly after the opening at steady prices, the best on sale bringing $3.35. Steers are closing 10 to 15c higher for the week. Butcher stock-Cows and helfers composed the bulk of supplies, a few loads of good butcher cows arrived, but the bulk of offerings were canners and medium grades. Local packers butchers were both after cows, and a good active trade prevailed while the supply lasted. Two loads were good enough to sell at $2.30 to $2.35, with a few choice cows up to $3.00. The bulk however were just medium and ranged from $1.90 to $2.15. Calves-Receipts, 500. In the moderate supply of caives there was nothing strictly choice in the way of light vealers. The offerings were largely of medium quality with weights running heavy. Local packers and order buyers were both after what few they could pick up and offerings were cleaned up early at steady prices. Calves closed the week, 25 to 50c lower on all kinds. Hogs-Receipts, 300. Hardly enough hogs arrived to make a market quotable; there was nothing choice on sale, but the quality on the few loads was fair. Local packers had good orders. and the supply was soon absorbed at prices on a full level with yesterday. Tops today sold at $6.30, averaging from 197 to 207.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 13 .- The market took care of itself very well today much to the surprise of certain bear manipulators who have recently got into the habit of thinking that they were running things. Prices made a jump upward of a dollar a bale on the opening, and afterwards took on another rise of 8 points more, which landed December at 11.18. All this was caused by the simple announcement by the weather bureau that an area of low pressure just entering Texas would bring rain to the cotton belt over Sunday. The crop situation is now getting serious. What is needed for the entire belt to insure an average yield to say nothing of a good crop, is clear dry weather, and even and not too high temperatures. Rain is the worst thing that could happen, but it seems certain that a rain storm is about to sweep the entire belt and this is being followed by a cold wave which may carry another series of frosty nights with it. Such a program adds calamity and this time Texas seems to be in for just as much bad weather as the rest of the belt. It seems certain that the market will be held up by this weather during the first of the weel:. The spot demand was as good as it has been at any time during October. Buyers took everything in sight and cheerfully paid an advance of 1/8. October shorts in the future market found it hard sledding and rumor had it that they were unable to make settlements on anything like a satisfactory basis. Well known bears were noticed in very earnest conversation with October longs all day. The week-end figures were much more bullish than expected and confirmed the belief that spinners were short of stocks.

G. C. BATTLE, Manager.

Ware & Leland NEW YORK, Oct. 13 .- The cotton market today was sensitive to a degree. After yesterday's liquidation and general selling the decline in prices led to enough short covering in Liverpool to earn an opening decline of 10 points to a net loss of only 4 points for the day. This started shorts covering at the opening and before the end of the first hour January had sold up to 11.16c, an advance of about 30 points from last right's closing. Just before the close selling caused a loss of 10 points, but there seemed to be considerable demand for cotton and the net recovery amounted to-about 20 points. The market moved in a very erratic fashion, with professionals making every effort to force the market up, but cotton seemed to be encountered or else there was not enough general business to take the cotton off buyers' hands and the result was at very feverish undertone. Rains were predicted for some sections and coming on top of the recent bad weather would be a very severe menace to the cotton crop. Everything depends on the weather Monday and clear and warm weather would lead to another setback. On the other hand, an unfavorable weather map would undoubtedly carry prices higher than ever. G. C. ### D'ENTRECASTEAUX ISLANDS

By William Edgar Geil, F. R. G. S. (Copyright 1996, by Church News Association.)

After dangerous explorations in British Papua I decided to make my way through a coral sea to the almost unknown D'Entrecasteaux archipelago. lying north by east of New Guinea. So I set sall for Dinner Island, intending to wait for a few days, hoping to get a luggar going to Dobu. Dinner Island. or "Sam" as it is familiarly known (Samarai) is but a dot on the map, oblong in shape, four cables long by two wide and surrounded with a fringing reef except for 300 yards on the northwest side. It is the seat of gov-ernment for the eastern part of New Guinea, and counting all and sundry the population may be divided into seventeen females and 200 males,

The natives working on the wharf receive one shilling a day in coin. Until recently the savages accepted a few sticks of tobacco for the day's darg. but that has changed and money is de-

We domiciled at Mrs. Mahoney's hotel, because that is where the swells stop. On that day the population was discouragingly peaceful—but one fight had occurred. I attempted to number the people on a spree but lost the count. At supper a drunken fellow left a plate of soup on the table and went out. While he was gone some one else entered and sat at the former's place. The second man left in turn, leaving on the table a plate well filled with cabbage. The drunken chap returned

"This is mighty strange-hic!-when I left this was-hie!-soup, and now it is cabbage, Say!-hic!-this was soup when I-hic!-went away, and now it's-hic!-cabbage. Mighty strange!" Then he decided to eat it anyhow.

The savages have these two samples of the white man, who, with his ancestors, has enjoyed for centuries the healthful influences of a Christian civilization. The drunken, swearing, immoral trader; and the clean, sober, pure missionary. I listened the next morning to our drunken white man, partially sobered, say distressingly disgusting untruths about the missionaries. The trouble is that there are ten bad white men to one good white man. Should missionary success lag at certain places, there is the reason. The highly civilized "white" men have formed an association called "The

probably properly describes the members. This very New Year's day a

New Year's day on "Sam." What an experience! This is what I wrote on the spot. "The place is drunk, yelling like bedlam, drinking and capering worse by far than the savages who fringe about to see the horrible displays of white insanity singing at times Auld Lang Syne, many times in fact, for it was oft repeated thru the liquor-red throats of those who had better sent the 'cost' to needy ones at home, rather than sheckel-enrich the local dealers in bad spirits."

During these five years of travel and study of native races I have invariably found licentious drinking, swearing white men speak disparagingly of mis-sionary work, and as invariably pure, educated, sober, honest, virtuous white men praise and indorse it.

No vessel put in to "Sam" en route to my destination, so I hired a naphtha launch to take me to Dobu, the capital island of the still savage D'Entrecasteaux group. We provisioned our little vessel and kept an eye on the weather. When the sky-signs were favorable we put out with a few trusty ex-cannibals, through the dangerous fringing reef and said a glad adieu to the home of "The Gory Breeders White Men's Club." A good wind helped us along at first, but presently we-dropped the sails be-cause the breeze shifted from the quarter to head-on. I took the tem-perature: Air, 87 degrees Fahr., and water 84 degrees Fahr., at 4 p. m., January 1. We carried a live sheep on the forward hatch, with a tarpaulin over it to keep off the sunshine. Once the vessel careened to port because of a sudden starboard wind, and the live mutton's head got a bump. Imagine savages are capable of development into kind, tender, civilized people. Dobu was reached in a hail storm, but the great missionary Bromilow was standing on the shore to greet me-a full hundred of his civilized natives and many more savages were with him. They were so glad we had come that one shouted, "We feel so good we want to pull down a house."

The Dreadful Death Chair

Heartily welcomed by the missionary we hastened to his humble thatched hut. Here his charming wife, Mrs. Bromilow, who was born in New York, gave us storm-wet travelers a gracious greeting and sent a young savage, whom she called Gideon, to take my small belongings to a daintily furnished room. The eyes of the youngster were so bright, his movements so agile, that I made some inquiries which led me, as soon as the storm was over, to go, see and photograph the Dobuan Death Chair. The vivacious kid, Gideon, kept at my heels and emitted a few sentences of English. On the shore of the sea stood the death chair,

Death is mysterious to the savage mind, and he feels led to adopt divers devices to destroy its fateful power. Here the chair is used. It is made of ceased's favorite bowl, purposely broken, is hung on one side of the back and a basket of vams on the other. The whole in then let down into a circular hole in the ground. It is customary in the case of a mother to hang around the neck of the body the jaw bone of her late husband, and to bury her live baby, if there is one, with her. Recently Mrs. Bromilow saw a com-motion and ran to learn the cause, finding that a mother and a live baby boy were being buried together. The heroic wife of the missionary pushed the savages aside with an almost superhuman strength, jumped into the circular grave, tore of the thongs holding the baby to the breast of the corpse, and amidst the most awful maledictions and bloody threats of the violent cannibals, made her way to-ward the mission house. She fell exhausted just as a friendly native took the baby boy, whom she had literally snatched out of the jaws of death. That rescued child was at my side while I photographed the death chair. His

On my return from the death chair there was an earthquake, but we did not go out to see its effects. The island is of volcanic formation and is subject to violent shocks. In the middle of the bit of land steam escapes, and there the savages do their cook-

A few years ago when Bromllow and his heroic wife came, the savages who were then raw cannibals, held a council of war and notified Bromilow he must do one of three things. Either leave, or be killed and eaten, or become He considered the first and "I cannot leave." The second presented only the advantage of a saving of funeral expenses, and he finally decided on the third choice and became a great chief, He remains such to this day. Then he built a church, but nobody would enter it. For a long time he wondered why. At last one of the chiefs told him this ancient legend:

"A wizard, long time ago, got the people to go into a house and then called out, 'Mind your eyes!' So great was the wizard's power that they all became birds without feathers. Again the master magician called out, 'Mind your eyes!' and then they all got feathers. Although birds they still had the minds of men. A humming bird found a little hole by which he escaped. Other small birds squeezed through the hole which was gradually enlarged until even the largest bird could get through when his time came. Having escaped from the building the birds soared around in the air not knowing what to do. Then the sorcerer called, 'Settle in the trees.' They did so and that is how the beautiful birds of Dobu originated."

Then the chief added: "Chief Bromilow, that building of yours looks like the bird house, and the medicine man says you will get the people in it, cut off the land on which it stands, put on a rudder and steer the people off into the great unknown."

Bromilow and his noble wife have converted thousands of the savage population, and he has not had a vacation for ten years.

I met one day the great chief. Gaga Humore, who brags that his strong right hand has killed over fifty powerful men, face to face. He would not deign to attack a man in the back. He entertained me with two roasted chickens and a leaf full of yams. All the while he ate betel-nut, green pepers and lime mixed together, which had the immediate effect of making his mouth appear as if full of fresh blood.

He has now, under Bromilow's influence, given up his cannibal customs and is about to become a Christian. He is of large stature and has, for a savage, a fine face. But I noticed an unpleasant brimstone odor about him which led me to question his near conversion. I found I was doing him an injustice, for I discovered that the sulphurous odor came out of the

This year's exhibition shows an unusual number of original devices, several of which are quite sensational. The most popular toy is the "catastrophe automobile." The chauffeur sits at the wheel and his lady love beside him and the car runs along smoothly for a couple of yards, when suddenly a fearful jolt takes place, the motor car turns a somersault and the parts separate like a real smashup, while the occupants of the car are thrown out and lie beside the machine in the most natural manner. Another toy which has met with much success is the "profiloograph." This concists of thin mobile slips of wood symmetrically placed in a case and projecting on both sides. Pressed against the face of anyone the slips are pushed by the features in such a manner as to exactly reproduce the prolife on the other side. The toy can be placed on a sheet of paper and the profile portrait of the person

Father Vaughn Declares Society Plays Leap Frog

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET. Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1906, by Hearst News Service.) LONDON, Oct. 13.-Father Bernard Vaughan's sermon to the "smart set" contains many accusations which persons not belonging to that set could only hope were unfounded. It seems incredible that in the twentieth century men and women who should be the flower of the world's civilization can be so unutterably inane, as he states, or so wanting in any feeling of

A society journalist, writing to London journal, this week reports that at the house of a well-known society (smart society) hostess, men and women played at leap frog in the hall after dinner, and at dessert enforced their arguments by pouring water over each other, putting grape skins down the back of the ladies' (?) dresses and other such delicate attentions.

Father Vaughan would hardly be exaggerating when he calls this "horse play." Such tricks might be seen in a monkey house at the zoo, but are intolerable in houses inhabited by human beings, and unthinkable among those who are numbered as belonging to the governing class.

If Troubled With Skin Disease

Don't dose the stomach. Beware of the so-called blood remedies. Why dose the stomach to cleanse the skin? When it is known that a germ attacks the system from without and burrows into the skin, when it has been found that the blood of the eczema patient is absolutely pure, what is the sense of administering nauseating drugs when the skin burns and itches as fiercely as before?

I was troubled with a severe sore on the side of my face for a long time. I have tried different remedies, salves, etc., but received no beneficial results from any of them.

Mr. D. A. Beatty, a friend of mine, corner of Crawford and Jefferson, asked him what he would suggest for me to try next and he recommended Imperial Remedy very highly, saying he was confident it would put my face in as healthy a condition as it ever was. I purchased a bottle from him about ten days ago, have now used a little over half of it and you can hardly see that there ever was a sore on my face.

Another Man's Story

This man believed at first that he could not be cured. He now has as healthy a skin as anyone. Mr. Berner has lived in this city many years, has a large family, is a property owner, and there are few men tn town that are better known and so well liked.

December 14, 1905. I have derived the greatest benefit from the use of Imperial Remedy in the treatment of Eczema or Salt Rheum. I consider it the greatest boon ever introduced to suffering humanity. I have recommended it to several of my friends and shall continue to do so whenever I have an opportunity, now that I am cured. As there is and always will be a prejudice against advertised remedies you have my consent to publish what I have said, and all inquiries, by mail or in person, I will cheerfully answer. I do this that people may not go on year after year paying out large sums of money to incompetent physicians and receive no cure.

So-Called Blood Remedies

Of these there is a great variety. Some are virulent, dangerous poisons and others are nothing more than ordinary purgatives with an attractive name. It is true some may aid in cleansing the system and will thus improve the general condition of the patient. However, it is too well known that purgatives, so-called blood cures, even if combined with dieting, will never cure eczematous disease.

All Tell the Same Story of Awful Suffering.

Your medicine did me good from the start. I cannot express to you in words, but surely can in feelings. I was just simply surprised, it did me so much good at once. For six or seven years now all during the summer when I would get the least bit warm would just have to take off my shoes and stockings and scratch from my knee down until they would be raw, could not stop until it was raw. In cool weather it did not bother me. So I thought I would begin the use of your medicine. As soon as it broke out I began the treatment; when I would feel a little itching would get my bottle and rub some on and that would stop it immediately; so I decided to go with my husband to Louisville, Ry., to the reunion. I went, and so did the bottle; being in a crowded car thought I would need some of the medicine, and I did just one time. Had it not been for the medicine I could not have gone; no, not for anything. I have a little of the madicine left and if I have to use all of this will surely send for more.

I have praised it to many and will continue to do so. I saw your ad in the paper and when I handed the dollar to my husband to send for the medieine he said: "You are just throwing that money away." I thank my God I did throw it away in that manner. I feel that I struck the right thing one time, if I am a woman.

Please excuse this lengthy letter, I feel so happy over my good fortune. MRS, W. H. PEARSON, Rusk, Texas
