John Dillard Narrowly Escapes Death

John Dillard, of this city narrowly escapes death by drowning Tuesday night of last week, while on a fishing trip with friends from here on the Colorado River in Mills County.

Following is a story of the near tragedy, taken from the San Saba News:

"A Cross Plains oil field worker John Dillard, 42, owes his life to a San Saba man's knowledge and use of artificial respiration, Dillard's younger brother stated at San Saba Memorial Hospital on Wednesday morning.

"The brother, Bill Dillard, 27, said he and two other fishing companions pulled John Dillard's apparently lifeless body out of the Colorado river about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and then his two companions hurried for help. When Bob Edmondson arrived on the scene he began artificial respiration and with assistance from others kept giving artificial respiration for a period of about three hours until the victim was delivered to San Saba Memorial Hospital at 11:50 p.m., continuing the treatment while enroute to the hospital in a Goldthwaite ambulance.

Dr. F. W. Farley of San Saba said Wednesday that Dillard is being held for further observation as a precaution against the development of pneumonia.

"The accident victim, when revived, said all he remembered was diving into the river after what he thought was a big catfish in the water, his brother Bill stated. An abrasion on his forehead supports an assumption that his head struck a log or some object in the water that rendered him unconscious.

Bill Dillard said that he and his brother, with a nephew, N. L. Dillard, 24, and a friend, R. C. Merryman, 23, who all work on the same oil field rig, were camped at the Bob Burdett place on the Mills county side of the Colorado river, opposite the upper Shaw Bend community in San Saba county. They had been seining in the river when a rise came down, with the water eventually coming up three or four feet and forcing them to move out. The accident victim moved down the river about 30 yards from his three companions, out of sight because of the darkness. When they called him after a short while they received no answer, and at first thought he was playing a trick, the younger brother said. Later they started searching in the darkness and finally saw his head on the surface of the water against a drift, about three feet from the edge of the river bank. About that time a swift current of water caught the body and started moving it downstream around the drift and toward the bank, enabling the searchers to grab him from the bank.

About 20 people responded to the call for help, the younger brother said, but it was Edmondson who saved the victim's life. Edmondson attended the San Saba schools and resided in San Saba county most of his life, but currently is living in Big Valley, Mills county.

Dillard was released from the hospital Monday of this week and is now at home with his wife and children here.

Philosopher Pleased To Know Ike, Stevenson, He All Losing Money On Their Farms

Editor's note: The Bayou Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm has made a strange discovery, but we doubt if his conclusions will stand up, as he's had little practice himself in standing up.

Dear editor:
The last thing I'd ever want would be to be accused of wanting to run for office, I'm not even good justice of the peace timber, not to mention congressional or presidential timber, but I have been reviewing the presidential campaign situation and have discovered that in one department Eisenhower, Stevenson and me are on the same level.

That is, all three of us have farms we're losing money on.

As I understand it, Eisenhower loses about $25,000 a year on his Gettysburg farm, Stevenson loses about $10,000 on his Libertyville farm, and while I'm not in that bracket, due to the bank's timidity, you could still classify my farm out here as on the presidential candidate level when the books are closed at the end of the year.

Understand, I'm not saying I'm as smart as Eisenhower and Stevenson, all I'm saying is that when it comes to farming, I'm right up with the best brains in the nation.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

1956 Amendments To The Social Security Laws

Effective with the month of January 1957, monthly benefits are payable to certain unmarried children of retired or deceased insured parents, provided the children are now disabled, and have been so disabled since before they were 18 years of age.

The disability must be of such severity that the "child" is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity. In death cases, even though the parent may have died as long ago as January 1, 1940, if the "child" meets the disability definitions, payments can start in January of 1957. No new showing of support is required where child's benefits were paid for any months before the child reached age 18. For example, at the time of John Doe's death in 1940, monthly benefits were made to his daughter, Jane, until she reached age 18 in 1952. If Jane is still disabled, and is unmarried payments can be resumed with January of 1957, if an application is filed with a district office of the Social Security Administration before February 1, 1958. Later filing will permit no further back than twelve months before the month in which the application is filed. In retirement cases, the parent need only show that the support requirements and the disability standard are met.

Another example might be where Jim Doe died in 1943, survived by a dependent, disabled, unmarried son older than 18. Payments can now be made beginning with January of 1957, upon a showing of actual support of the child by Jim at the time of Jim's death, and a finding of a disability condition that began before the son was 18 and is still present.

Anyone wishing more detailed information on this provision should write the Social Security Administration, District Office, Abilene, Texas, and furnish the name, social security account number and date of death of the deceased parent, or the name and account number of the retired parent name and date of birth of the disabled child. Arrangements will then be made for a personal interview and the taking of formal applications in plenty of time to avoid any possible loss of benefit.

Fields of Occupations

The Veterans Administration has conducted a national survey of blind veterans, including those in the Dallas area, who are finding new fields of work heretofore regarded as requiring special training. Mr. Harrington said the study points out that the not tended to concentrate on the more sedentary types commonly associated with the 388 blinded World War veterans were included in the study.

Blinded veterans rehabilitation under the direction of the Dallas office, occupations include darkroom technician, law-cabinetmaker, farmer, and specialist, etc.

Robert V. "Red" Vermillion, who was totally blinded in action at Iwo Jima in 1945. Red, who served with H. Co., 3rd Bn., 28th Reg., 5th Mar. Div., is an outstanding example of a well-adjusted person who is doing a good job.

Red received vocational training through the Veterans Administration program as an X-ray darkroom technician. He completed this training in 1948 and has been employed since that date as an X-ray darkroom technician, VA Hospital, McKinney, Texas.

He unloads X-ray films from frames, puts films on hangers, passes them through developer, passes them through water, and through hypo solution, rinsing again, and hangs them in drier. No special arrangements are necessary for doing work because of his disability. He was trained on-the-job and is well oriented in his working situation and needs no assistance in the performance of his duties. Vermillion lives at the field station and requires no assistance in going to and from work. He is self sufficient in his job requirements.

Red has many friends at the hospital as well as throughout the community. He is a very thrifty businessman with many outside interests; in fact, Red is considered to be an all-around guy.

The national survey indicated that 38 percent of the blind veterans are

Dr. John R. Dill, 80,
Rising Star Doctor Dies

Soil Conservation District News

The application of soil and water conservation practices is on the increase in the Rising Star Area. This has been accomplished in spite of the severe drought. The first eight months of 1956 shows 50 percent increase over the same period in 1955. Practices such as terracing, waterway development, diversion construction, crop residue utilization, rotation hay and pasture and range seeding an increase of 80 percent to 100 percent.

Local soil conservation district supervisors attribute the increase to several things. Included are: (1) better understanding on the part of farmers and ranchers of techniques needed to make more effective use of limited rainfall, (2) the development of more efficient methods of practice application, (3) a full understanding by farmers and ranchers of the need for a coordinated program of soil and water conservation on their farms and ranches, (4) the construction of better, more workable type practices with better machinery and more efficient machinery operators and (5) the increased incentive payments on the part of the County Agricultural Conservation Program for those practices that are greatly needed but the application of which has been sorely lagging.

Both G. G. Goss and B. B. Hickman, local SCD supervisors, are optimistic in pointing out the progress that is being made in their districts. The development of soil and water conservation plans on every farm and ranch within the district is their goal.

What Farmers are Doing In Their District

H. L. King has constructed three miles of terraces, 1,000 feet of diversions, a waterway and a stock tank on his farm in the Sabanna Community. W. G. "Chuck" Elliott has constructed one mile of terraces and a waterway on his farm north of Okra. Also north of Okra, R. D. Medford has constructed a new stock tank. E. A. Tate of Pioneer, T. A. King of Amity and H. A. Anderson of Sipe Springs have enlarged stock tanks. Frank Madison has three miles of new terraces, a waterway, and 1,000 feet of diversions on his farm at Williams. Also at Williams, E. A. Allen has three miles of terraces and W. E. McMillan has a new stock tank. H. T. Pierce has constructed a new stock tank and A. L. Buchanan has constructed two miles of terraces and 2,000 feet of diversions on their places in the Hodnet Grove Community. Charles Rutherford is having three miles of terraces constructed on his place northeast of Rising Star and Troy Lamb is building four miles on his farm at Romney.

Prospects of early seeding of fall and winter cover crops are looking better. Recent cooling is encouraging. Weather wise, early moisture can make conditions excellent. Many farmers have chiseled stubble land area of seedbed preparation. Some farmers are interested in planting peas or vetch using the Clinton Harbers method. This can be done with the right kind of machinery.

Planning to sow the old field to grass next spring? If so, it might be a good idea to plant a cover crop of peas or vetch on the area this fall.

Ross Newton, rancher in the Cross Cut Community, has found that good revegetation results are obtained when the grass is planted in the spring following a cover crop of winter peas. Ross advises that the cover crop should be cut and killed about two weeks before the grass is planted and early enough to prevent excess loss of soil moisture.

"Don't bury the cover crop. Just cut it loose from the root and leave on top of the ground. The dead litter will offer good protection to the grass seedling," Ross stated.

Newton plans to sow about 30 acres of thin cultivated land to winter peas this fall. In the Spring he will sow the area to KR-blue-stem. The method has been successful with Newton in the past.

Texas Farmers Heavy Participants In Soil Bank Program

The Texas farmers will receive more than 23.8 million as payments for land placed in the soil bank acreage reserve program. Bob Cherry, extension economist, says that a total of 63,672 agreements were signed in Texas before the July 27 deadline.

Under the acreage reserve program, farmers are paid for each acre of land retired from the production of basic crops up to a specific percentage of their allotments. The program is designed to aid soil improvement and reduce surplus production, points out Cherry.

Farmers of the nation have signed agreements covering approximately 10.7 million acres while the 63,672 agreements signed in Texas cover 1,970,235-3-10 acres. The 3-10 of an acre represents the acreage taken out of tobacco.

Cherry says 14,708 wheat agreements covering 1,066,390 acres and with payments expected to reach $6,193,574 had been signed in Texas. Texas cotton farmers signed 49,322 agreements put 865,654 acres of cotton allotments into the acreage reserve and if they comply with all program requirements, can expect to
