lers and hunters outnumber golfers nine to one.

Texans spend twice as much money to hunt and fish than they do for admission to all football, baseball, and basketball games plus all other spectator sports, plus all movies and all other theatrical attractions combined.

The hunting and fishing bill of Texans is greater than that spent on medical care, dental work, and hospitalization insurance.

And the money spent for outdoor pursuits is rapidly increasing. That is because the population is growing and folks nowadays have more leisure time.

These are cold facts, based on accurate, scientific surveys, conducted for the Texas Game and Fish Commission.

Plenty for All
Fortunately there is going to be a bountiful supply of fish and game for all these anglers and shooters. Building of many new lakes, stocking them, and good rains this year will mean more fish.

Deer and turkey, along with antelope, once faced extinction in Texas. Game management programs and favorable conditions afield have brought back the deer and the turkey populations and put them in proper balance.

Viewers of the situation are pleased. But they see a need for more and better facilities and accommodations for the hunter and the fisherman.

Trend in Motors
Another indication of change, is the trend toward bigger outboard motors. A decade ago most of these were five horsepower and under. But this year, a major manufacturer predicts that 48 per cent of the motors will be in the 30-horsepower class or larger.

This big stuff is for the speed boat people and those who tow the water skiers. It's not so much for fishermen. A Mercury-6 is plenty of motor for me.

You can stir around and get up an argument between the speed boat boys and the fishermen. But I don't think it's necessary. There's plenty of water for all.

Mostly the conflict comes about when the lakes are crowded on weekends and holidays. At those times I fish where the big boys don't go. Below a certain dam, for instance it's too shallow for the heavier craft. I chug along up there, dodging rocks and stumps as I go, anchor just below the dam, and catch fish.

Belligerent Blacks
The best black bass fishing I know is in one or two South Texas lakes. I was down there the other day when the blacks were hitting surface lures like mad.

In this particular lake there's a wooded area, with plenty of weeds and brush. The bass abound there. They are infuriated by the noise of a topwater lure.

I had spectacular success with one lure that had a spinner aft. The sound it made was like a school of minnows in flight.

One thing we noticed was that a hooked fish was nearly always followed to the boat by one or two of his fellows. When I hooked one, my partner cast to the same spot to try for the other fish. I did the same when he had a fish on.

"I'M GOING TO HAVE BUTTERFLIES IN MY STOMACH TOO, I SWALLOWED 3 CATERPILLARS!"

Sometimes this strategy paid off.

It was a great day and a great place for bass fishing. The weather was cool enough, except just in the middle of the day. We drifted around, among the old mossy trees, casting into the shade where bass were hiding. Very often, after a twitch of the lure, a bass hit. Before the end of the day, we had our limit of blacks.

That kind of fishing is rare, but there will be more of it during the coming months, as this year's fine crop of young bass reaches maturity.

If you hanker for bass, plan to be in your best fishing spot during February and March.

Whoopers Moving
The big whooping cranes are in process of moving from their breeding grounds in Canada to their winter home. Eight adult and two young birds have been sighted on the wing.

Whoopers move along by easy stages. Usually they begin arriving at their Texas refuge about the middle of October or later. Lag-guards will trail along at intervals. There are only about 30 whooping cranes alive now. In flight, they appear as huge, white birds, with jet-black wing tips, red-crowned heads and long legs trailing. Please don't shoot them!

A Few Quick Ones
Word reaches us that the hottest duck hunting grounds during the coming season will be in far Southeast Texas, around Beaumont. There is water in the marshes to entice the quackers. Hunting should be excellent.

Sportsmen's Clubs of Texas is timely in planning now to inaugurate a firearms training program. With the deer and turkey season just around the corner, people will be conscious of safety precautions necessary to prevent hunting accidents.

Cecil Reid, SCOT executive secretary, said the plan is designed mainly for teenagers and "would hinge on gun safety, but naturally would include emphasis on the handling of modern weapons, some of which are much more complex than the old type one-shot hammer gun."

Well Mr. Reid sure has got something there. In the old days a shot gun was either a single barrel or a double barrel, and not much complication either way. Today's shotguns—and rifles too, for that matter, are as intricate as can be. And maybe more so.

Mrs. Earl Gilliam and Mrs. C. B. Hanke left Tuesday of this week for their home in Weed, Calif., after spending two weeks here visiting Mrs. Myrtle Bibbs and other relatives.

Mrs. Jeff Clark, Mrs. Strickland and Billy Samner attended the singing Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McCJay attended the homecoming day and also the football game between H-SU and Wichita Saturday night. Cynthia Culin, a H-SU student, returned Cross Plains after the game spent the week end here.

Winter Cover Crops Highly Beneficial to Soil

College Station.—The rains and winds that characterize winter weather often rob the farmer of valuable topsoil through erosion—not to mention the hidden damage from leaching. But farmers can prevent this wintertime destruction of their land by planting cover crops.

But it must be remembered that cover crops do more than just protect the land, says R. J. Hodges, extension agronomist. These crops improve the soil itself, leading to increased yields.

Many growers have discovered that winter legumes increase their cotton and corn yields, more than paying for the time and money spent in putting in the legumes, points out the agronomist. These cover plants do not interfere with other crops, coming at a time when farm work slows down. They are turned under to add plant food, especially nitrogen to the soil during the slack period in the spring. Grazing, hay, silage or seed taken from the winter crop will provide other sources of income for the land, he adds.

Annual winter legume crops named by Hodges include vetch, Austrian winter peas, crimson clover, burr clover and sweet clover. Some operators use a combination of annual grass and annual legume while others prefer the annual grass alone.

For further information on winter cover crops, ask the county agent about local recommendations.

Mrs. Lester King and children visited in Odessa last week with Mr. and Mrs. Junior Key. Mrs. Key brought Mrs. King and children home and has been visiting a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Shirley and Mrs. Elmer Key.

More Water Needed For Growing Population

College Station — Expanding industry and rising standards of living require more and more water per person to satisfy the American way of life. One-fourth the population today is troubled with water shortage, poor water, or both, reports the Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The potential supply of water remains constant while needs for human use pyramid with growing population, according to the SCS. From 1900 to 1950, while U. S. population doubled, total water use, other than for power, increased fourfold. By 1955 it was up another 21 percent from 1950. Water needs are expected to double again by 1975.

Average daily use for all purposes increased from 600 gallons per capita in 1900 to 1,100 gallons in 1950 and 1,300 in 1955. By 1975 the country will be using 1,800 gallons of water a day for every man, woman, and child.

Industry and irrigation are by far the largest users.

Water problems are largely watershed protection problems, says SCS, pointing out that water control and conservation cannot be separated from soil conservation.

Recent Rains Benefit Fish And Game, Says Expert

Austin—Rains of the past week will be especially beneficial to both hunting and fishing this fall, according to the Executive Secretary of the Game and Fish Commission.

"The rains have been so general they will help the late grass situation throughout the state," he said. "They also have refilled many of the smaller tanks and lakes, which will make more water available for ducks to feed and rest."

The rains have been sufficient to carry much new food from the land into the lakes and streams for the benefit of fish.

There are about as many ideas as there are members in both houses. Hence, for the road to passage probably littered with scores of amendments.

Most of the difficulties of the bill is a shortage of money. State Comptroller, predicts a $6,000,000 deficit for this biennium.

Angleton and Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio. Senator Martin's measure has been labeled the "administration bill." Senator Gonzalez's closely parallels the federal lobbying law.

At the first Senate committee hearing Senator Martin's proposal was attacked as allowing unlimited entertainment expenditures without a report so long as legislation was not mentioned at the time of the entertainment.

Sponsoring the House twin to Martin's bill are Representatives Zeke Zoraneck of Daisetta, Dick Cory of Victoria, Max Smith of San Marcos and others. Introducing the four other lobby bills in the House were (1) Reps. Charles E. Hughes and Tony Koriath, both of Sherman, (2) Reps. Marshall O. Bell of San Antonio, Cecil Storey of Longview and Glenn H. Kothmann of San Antonio, (3) Rep. Louis Dugas of Orange and (4) Rep. J. C. Day of Brookshire.

WHO GETS THE WATER? — This session's statewide water planning measure is already caught in the same swift currents that have capsized many previous water measures.

Mostly, it boils down to a fear by each individual lawmaker that the overall plan might benefit one area by taking water from his area.

Governor Daniel asked the lawmakers to set up machinery under the State Water Board to draw up a statewide master plan for water. Measures to this effect were introduced in the House by Rep. W. N. Woolsey of Corpus Christi and in the Senate by Sen. George Farkhouse of Dallas.

Sponsors have repeatedly reassured that the bill would not take away "any vested right of any water user in Texas." But Rep. W. A. Stroman of San Antonio objected to giving the Water Board planners "law-making powers."

Rep. Leroy Saul of Kress withdrew as House sponsor of the bill because he said he believed its passage would "lead to deficit financing."

STATE PRACTICE ACT—A closer watch and possible limitation of practice before state agencies is proposed in a House bill.

Sponsoring a bill to regulate representation before state agencies are Representatives L. DeWitt Hale, B. G. Forsyth of Corpus Christi and J. C. Day of Brookshire.

Their bill would require each agency to register those who appear before it. This bill also would bar lawmakers from such practice entirely if the constitutional amendment raising their salaries to $7,500 annually is passed.

This was one of the bills requested by the governor.

LAW ENFORCEMENT STUDY—Creation of a law enforcement commission, which failed in the regular session, is back in the legislative mills.

This time the proposal is for a commission to study means of crime prevention and improvement of the penal code—but not to investigate specific violations.

Sponsors are Rep. Dick Cory of Victoria and Sen. George Moffett of Chillicothe.

OIL IMPORTS HIT—Companies which import foreign crude oil could have their Texas production cut back under a proposed House bill.

Representatives John Lee of Kermit and Charles Ballman of Borger introduced the bill. It is "waiting in line" with others that cannot be considered until the governor opens up the session to additional topics.

This would give the Railroad Commission power to reduce the allowable production on wells owned by those who import oil. It is designed to help Texas producers who have been unable to find markets for their oil.

SHORT SNORTS — Asst. Atty. Gen. J. L. Smith has resigned to return to law practice in San Augustine. Linwood Shivers of Carthage has joined the attorney general's staff. . . . State Comptroller Robert S. Calvert will be honored Nov. 15-16 as man of the year at Howard Payne College homecoming. . . .
