Absentee Voting Light In County

Absentee voting for the Nov. General Election, which began Wednesday of last week and will continue through Nov. 4, is thus far light in Callahan County, reports County Clerk Mrs. Chas. Robinson.

There had been less than 25 requests for ballots when the court house closed for the week end Friday afternoon.

"Callahan County seldom ever polls a heavy absentee vote," Mrs. Robinson stated.

KNOW YOUR OKRA? IF SO, SEE THIS BIG 'UN

Know your okra?

An unusual specimen of the vegetable kingdom was shown in town Monday by Bill Bounds. The oddity, called a pod of running-okra but resembling an elongated gourd, measures 37 inches and weighs 16 pounds.

It is currently on display at The Review office, where it has attracted attention of agricultural experts who happened to be visiting the newspaper.

Bounds reports the vegetable, when sliced and fried in meal batter, is a succulent food, not unlike the common variety of okra. "We have eaten a lot of it," he says.

Seed for the unusual plant was sent Bounds by his daughter. He plans to plant next year from seed taken from the abnormally large pod.

"It's getting closer all the ime to the election on Nov. 8, and I heard a man on television last night say he'd be glad when it's here and past so the country could get some work done.

"I don't know what part of he country he's talking about. but it's not my Johnson grass farm out here. I fail to see any connection between electing a President and me going to work.

"I thought it was the other way around. When we elect a President, he's the one that goes to work.

"One of the troubles with this country is that we take time off to elect an office-holder, then go back to work and forget about him till next time. I don't follow that procedure, I like to keep my eye H. P. White and sons, Richard on him all the time, and any and Cecil, visited in Odessa over man who can't look over the grass and weeds in his own attended the annual Oil Show on Washington, is taking the crop to keep his eyes centered type of short-sighted view that results in farm surpluses.

> more after the election than I did before, and I'll say this, if which ever candidate gets elected works as hard running the office as either of them did running for it, the fur ought to fly in Washington.

One reason I don't think we will ever have one government for the entire world is that no candidate for World President could ever make all the whisle stops around the earth. As it is now, Presidential candidates have three months from the time they're nominated till election day to crowd in every section of the country they figures they ought to show up in, and they still miss a good many; but if they had to cover the entire world, it'd take 'em five years to do it and by the time they'd gotten to the last The little nieces of Mrs. O.
