PATHFINDER FLIERS LAND IN ROME.

Roger Q. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey were greeted by a vast throng and given a welcoming demonstration that would have made an ancient Caesar envious when they landed their Pathfinder plane in Rome the other day after having been forced down at Santander, Spain, on their trans-Atlantic hop from Old Grenard, Me. ...

T. A. T. PILOT UNCONSCIOUS AFTER CRASH

FORT WORTH, July 12.—Clyde Spracher, veteran T. A. T. mail pilot, was still unconscious but expected to live, following a crash at Meacham field Thursday afternoon.

A Great Lakes training plane which Spracher was testing out, failed to come out of a "falling leaf" and went into a tail spin less than a thousand feet from the ground at the airport. It was demolished.

PLANE WAS NOT T. A. T. SHIP

FORT WORTH, July 12.—Clyde Spracher, 39, Texas Air Transport mail pilot, was injured, perhaps seriously, when a light training plane which he was trying out crashed at Meacham field here yesterday afternoon.

DRIVE CONTINUES

DALLAS, July 12.—Continuing their campaign to clean up Dallas as far as beer "joints" are concerned, local police last night raided several negro districts and found 800 pints of beer, nine pints of red whiskey and one pint of gin. Six men and one woman were arrested.

ASKS MOODY TO APPROVE FLOOD BILL

STAMFORD, July 12.-An appeal to Governor Moody to approve house bill No. 184 was made by those present at Homer D. Wade's last official meeting with President Manager Bourland and his board of advisers today.

The West Texas chamber of commerce officials, and J. A. Wheat, and Bob Haynie, members of the board, are of the opinion that a commission to investigate the practicability of building a dam in Palo Pinto county, the commission to be part of the state board of water commissioners' plan for Brazos river flood control, would be commendable.

"I tried everything I could hear of but nothing seemed to reach my case and I grew worse steadily and hardly had a ray of hope getting well until a friend recommended Orgatone to me and I started taking it. If I had failed me I don't know what I would have had done. But Orgatone didn't fail me, I'm glad to say. After using it a few days I began to improve and my rheumatism and stomach trouble has gradually disappeared until now I feel better than I have in fifteen years. My nerves haven't bothered me at all, and I have had only one slight attack of rheumatism since I began taking Orgatone and this is certainly remarkable for one of my age who had suffered so long. My appetite is now as good as it ever was and I can eat vegetables and other things that used to nearly kill me, without them hurting me one bit. I have gained in strength, sleep and rest well every day and really feel like a different person. My whole family thinks there's no medicine in the world like Orgatone and I personally think it has saved me from the grave."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment sold in Cisco exclusively by the Dean Drug Co., under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.

Sees Man's Fall by Tsetse Fly INDIANAPOLIS, July 11.-The long-heralded extermination of mankind by insects has found a new champion in Dr. Roderic H. Rae, director of visual education in Indianapolis public schools, but Dr. Rae goes a step further than his predecessors in the prophetic line by naming the insect that will be mankind's Waterloo.

"The African tsetse fly, which produces sleeping sickness threatens mankind with devastation," Dr. Rae said. "We know of no cure for its sting, which brings sleeping sickness from which victims do not recover."

HOME RUNS FEATURE OF CATS VICTORY

League - Leading Wichita Club Downed Four to Three

By United Press.

Home runs featured the contest yesterday in which Fort Worth defeated the winner over the league-leading Wichita Falls nine, 4 to 3. Bennett, spudder fielder and power, Cat fielder, each poked a circuit clout with a man on base. Hermann, another Wichita player, got a homer with no one on base. Wichita Falls still leads the league in spite of yesterday's defeat.

The crippled Steers were all well again yesterday to trim Shreveport in the first game of the series. Shreveport, 11 to 2. Dallas led 9 of their runs in the first 10 innings then coasted the rest of the way.

Beaumont and San Antonio evidently like to play close exciting games for yesterday Beaumont held tightly and whitewashed the Indians, 2 to 0. The Indians, not to outdone a bit, came back in the third and won by the same score, 2 to 0.

Both teams grabbed eight hits in the Waco-Houston contest but Waco took the best advantage of them and won the contest, 4 to 2. Harris, go hurler, had the best of Reinhardt. Houston tosser throughout the game.

Games today: Dallas at Shreveport. San Antonio at Beaumont. Houston at Waco. Fort Worth at Wichita Falls.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

By United Press.

Yesterday's hero Ervin Brame, Pittsburgh's pitcher, who boosted the Pirates another half a game out in front of the National league parade by letting the Phillies down with five hits. The league leaders increased their advantage over the Chicago Cubs two full games by winning 6 to 2.

The Cubs, meanwhile, were breaking in a double-header with the New York Giants. Joe McCarthy's club profited by some excellent pitching on the part of Pat Malone to win the opener, 8 to 3, only to have the Giants open out a 16 to 12 victory in the night cap. Black Wilson, whose case came up before President Reyerder of the National league today, hit two homers in the second game, batting in five runs.

Red Lucas allowed the Boston Braves but four infield singles and drove in two runs himself while the Cincinnati Reds were winning their second straight game 6 to 0.

The faltering St. Louis Cardinals beat the Brooklyn Robins, 6 to 3, scoring the winning runs in the ninth after Wee Willie Sherdel had been touched for 12 safeties.

The battle for leadership of the American league was halted by rain, with the Athletics, Yankees and Browns not to mention the White Sox, and why? all idle.

Firpo Marberry allowed the Cleveland Indians only eight scattered hits and the Washington Senators evened the series with a 9 to 3 victory.

Despite some brilliant fielding by the Detroit Tigers, the Boston Red Sox won at Haven Field, 15 to 8. Eight hits and three bases on balls gave the visitors ten runs in the sixth.

BLUE LARKSPUR IS HANDICAPPED BY ELEMENTS

CHICAGO, July 12.—The elements seem to have a grievance against Blue Larkspur.

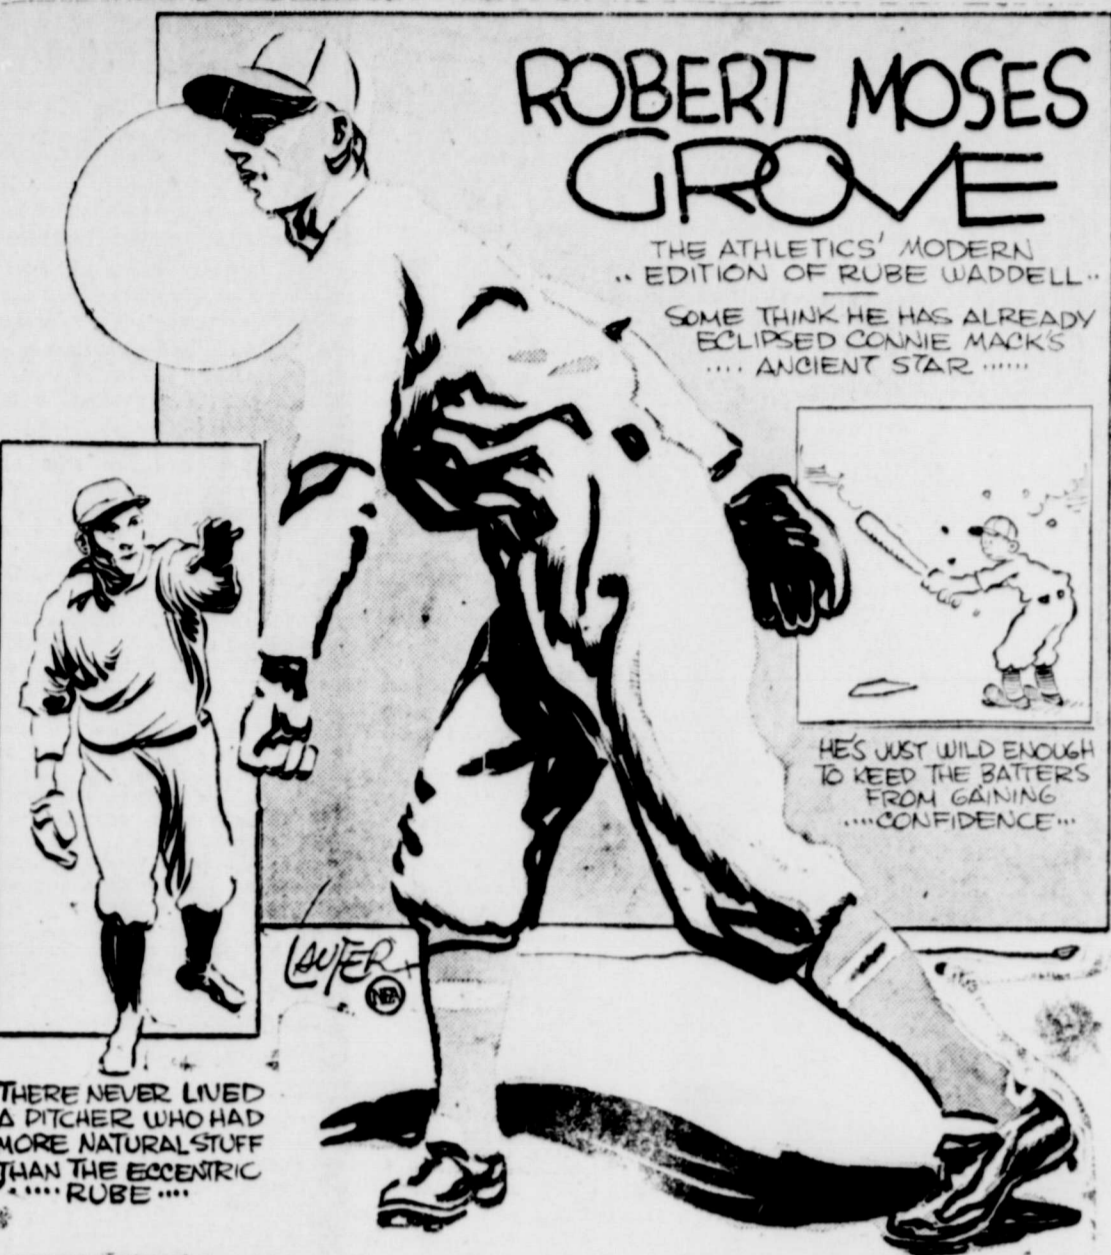

Regarded by many as the best fast track three-year-old of the year, Larkspur three times has encountered mud in important races and it appeared today that the "jinx" will handicap him again when he starts in the $75,000 American Classic here tomorrow.

The Arlington Park track was soaked thoroughly by rain yesterday and shears were predicted for this afternoon, indicating that the going will be soft in the classic tomorrow.

Abilene Man Keeps State Championship

ABILENE, July 12.—Dennis Lavender, Abilene, remained state amateur golf champion today after defeating Dudley Raines, Stamford, in the championship round here yesterday. Three and two, Raines finished the first 18 holes four up but Lavender settled down in the afternoon to win from his rival and keep his title.

FOLLETT—Extensive building and agricultural activity under way.

THERE NEVER LIVED A PITCHER WHO HAD MORE NATURAL STUFF THAN THE ECCENTRIC "RUBE" MOSES.

CONNIE MACK has had two history-making left-handed pitchers in his long day in the baseball business—"Lefty" Grove and "Rube" Waddell.

Who do you think is the greater of the two? That's one that perhaps Mack himself can answer best—and he says Waddell.

"The two are similar in many ways," says Mack. "But in one respect Waddell excelled Groves. Waddell pitched all the harder when a team mate kicked one for a goal behind him. Groves is to flare up in sudden wrath and shoot right in the groove.

Waddell didn't bring his eccentricities to the diamond. Groves does, while off the diamond he reminds you of the second assistant janitor of the Y. M. C. A. back at Minonk.

Groves lost one game this year out of his first dozen starts, and if the Athletics did not have such a large hatful of good pitchers Lefty might win 30 games. The pitcher who has even the potential ability to knock off 20 games in this day of the skittish ball has something besides a Te Deum, Hosmer, and do not forget it, in his repertoire.

Dance-Mad Lupe Making Whoopie

By Laufer.

With the brilliant, dazzling role of a beautiful dance-mad daughter of Old Mexico to occupy her versatile talents, the scintillating Lupe Velez never had a better opportunity in any production to be "just herself" than she has in the Paramount part talking thriller, "Wolf Song," which comes to the Palace today.

Featured by Gary Cooper, striking hero of "Lile Time," "The Legion of the Condemned" and other famous productions, and Louis Wolheim, "hard boiled" character actor, Miss Velez plays a part which is in effect a reincarnation of her own life. She dances and sings with the same innate fervor which brought her a part in a theatrical production in Mexico City when she was but a child and which ultimately brought her to fame on the screen.

"Yo Te Amo" which is the theme song of this flaming romance of western frontiersmen and Old Mexico in the 1840s is a lovely vehicle for the splendid singing voice of Miss Velez. The song breathes the fervor of warm southern love and flavors the production with just the proper vocal and musical touch to make "Wolf Song" the most perfect play in which the gorgeous Miss Velez has yet appeared—just being herself.

Other melodies which she sings pleasingly are "Mi Amado," "Lola" and "To Lola." The songs have Spanish titles but they are written and sung in English.

PIGEONS IN CLOSE RACE SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 12.—Averaging 40 miles an hour over a 200-mile course between here and Gerry, Pa., three pigeons finished within a minute of each other in a race recently staged by the Syracuse Pigeon club. The birds flew through a heavy rain storm in vehicle for the splendid singing voice of Miss Velez. The song breathes the fervor of warm southern love and flavors the production with just the proper vocal and musical touch to make "Wolf Song" the most perfect play in which the gorgeous Miss Velez has yet appeared—just being herself.

PLEAD GUILTY TO CHARGES IN 91ST DISTRICT

Each Given 8 Years for Theft and 12 for Burglary

W. A. Huckaby and Horace Cragle (alias Eddie Doyle) were given a total of 20 years each in the state penitentiary by jury verdict yesterday in the 91st district court at Eastland after they had pleaded guilty to burglary and theft charges.

Each was charged with burglary, and with theft of corporeal personal property over the value of $50. Each was given eight years on his theft charge, and 12 years on his charge of burglary.

The indictment and trial of these two men followed the burglarizing of the Blease Motor company here early in 1926, in which $250 was taken. No trace as to the identity of the burglars was revealed until recently.

Huckaby is also known by the title of "Billy Bowlegs," according to the county attorney's department here.

Four of the 67 true bills returned by the grand jury in session the first three days of this week were indictments against Huckaby and Cragle, leaving a remainder of 63 true bills. Twenty-four indictments were returned at a recent session of the grand jury bringing the present total of true bills to 87.

Angler Blames Fish Shrinkage

SANTA FE, N. M., July 12.—Shrinking fish are in for a court test.

And a new alibi is being formulated for fishermen caught with fish smaller than the law allows. It may even be used by the man who really catches the fish that was so big but got away. Just say "he shrunk when I pulled him from the water and all will be well," according to a local fisherman.

Several days ago a fisherman was arrested near here for having short fish in his possession.

"But," the fisherman told E. L. Perry, state game and fish commissioner, "they were regulation size when I caught them."

The fish in question were half an inch shorter than the standard, but the fisherman was so emphatic that they were six inches long when caught that he caught another fish "just to show" the game warden.

The small fish did shrink, the warden admitted. But the case now will have to be decided by the courts, and in the future fishermen may have to "allow for shrinkage" when catching fish that are just over the size limit.

NORTHWICH, Eng., July 12.—A legend that the ground would open if royalty came to Northwich has just come true.

The princess was unaware of the phenomenon and continued on her way.

TEXAS NOW HAS 491 ICE FACTORIES

Texas is believed to be the cradle of the manufactured ice industry of the United States says L. P. Rees, writing in the July issue of the Texas Commercial News.

In 1860, David Boyle, who lived near Jefferson, Texas, invented and built a small three-ton, vertical, two-cylinder compressor and in 1862 the machine was installed and successfully produced, manufactured ice, which was turned out in 100 pound blocks. During the next few years several of these machines were installed and operated successfully in various East Texas cities. One of the old Boyle machines is still located in the Pittsburgh plant of the Southwest Gas and Electric company, although it is no longer in operation.

The article traces the development of the industry up to the present time, there now being 491 ice plants in the state producing in excess of 3,000,000 tons of ice annually. In addition to the use of ice in the home, the article stresses the importance of refrigeration as an aid to the development of Texas industry, pointing out that without refrigerator cars it would be impossible to market the millions of dollars worth of Texas perishable crops in the north and east. During 1925 it is claimed, 35,000 carloads of Texas crops moved out of the state under refrigeration, bringing an income of more than $19,000,000 to Texas farmers.

LIVE SIMPLY TO LIVE LONG SAYS PIONEER

BRECKENRIDGE, July 12.—Saw Fullbright, 84 year old resident of Strawn, one of the few living men of today who knew and roamed this section of the state before Stephens, Eastland or any of the surrounding counties were organized, visited relatives and old friends here this week. Mr. Fullbright, who is every inch alive and who says he intends to live more than one hundred years, is visiting Willie Albright, cousin and Mrs. Sam Williams, a granddaughter living in Breckenridge.

Mr. Fullbright relates that in the early 70's he came through what is now known as Breckenridge and Stephens county. "The county was only a territory then," he said. "Wild game of all kinds roamed the woods and prairie then where cattle and sheep now graze."

There were but few Indians here then, he related, explaining that the white men had pushed the Red Skins farther west a few years before. But the territory was so new and the Indian fear still so prevalent that very few people had settled here at that date. A few ranchers were scattered over the country, he said.

"There was no Eastland, then, Ranger or Breckenridge also," he added. "I came through here in a wagon on my way from Fort Belknap back to Hill county, where I first settled upon arriving in Texas a year or so before from Arkansas."

Stephens county was organized in 1876, one year after the organization of Eastland county, Mr. Fullbright said.

Mr. Fullbright returned to Stephens county after it was organized as a governmental unit. He and his wife settled near Wayland and lived there many years. The aged pioneer was actively engaged in the cattle business in those days and was intimate friends with many of the first and well known settlers of this county.

He relates that he drove cattle over this territory with Henry Black, Jack Jones, E. P. Akin and Wash Hullum, all deceased now. He was here when E. S. Walker, first child born in Stephens county, came into the world. He tells that in those days Breckenridge was first known as Picketville, a little "wide place in the road" about two miles north of where it is now known as Breckenridge proper.

Mr. Fullbright chuckles when he tells an interesting yarn about Peter Swenson, wealthy ranchman and oil operator living at Swensendale. The story has to do with an old time range stove salesman who came through this section in his large wagon and attempted to sell Mr. and Mrs. Swenson a big and new range.

The salesman confronted Mrs. Swenson and told her that Mr. Swenson told him to put the range in if Mrs. Swenson wanted it. This he did, moving the old cook stove out and putting the new one in its place. When Mr. Swenson returned from the field he wouldn't pay for the range or let the man take it out. The salesman became worried and offered the range to Swenson at half price.

In the end, Mr. Swenson considered his prank had gone far enough and allowed the man to go on with his range unharmed. The salesman never returned.

Mr. Fullbright fought four years in the Confederate army, and has seen all of his life, yet he is still active and healthy. He said he was only 14 years old in spirit and hoped to live to be 150 years old. "Eat wholesome food, live simply, get plenty of rest and you will live a long time," he advises.

Mr. Fullbright's wife died the 28th day of last May. She was 80 years old. The couple had lived together for 60 years and seven months to a day when she died.

MILLINGTON, Ill., July 12.—It's an ill radio program that "blows" no good.

Scroggins has suggested to broadcasting stations near by that they broadcast a special "scarecrow" program featured by loud screeches and howls that will make his ingenious scheme more effective. He believes that other farmers would likewise profit by such programs.

NAN CARROLL, secretary to JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, successful lawyer, is in love with Morgan. His wife, IRIS, elopes with a friend, BERT CRAWFORD, for whom Morgan has recently won an acquittal. Morgan does not suspect Crawford and is not into utter despair.

Though he does not realize it, an indispensable to Morgan in his practice and in his home. For six months she acts as long-distance housekeeper for him and his child, little six-year-old CURTIS. Morgan breaks news to Nan that he is divorcing Iris and, stressing his and Curtis' need for her, asks her to marry him. She consents.

Their farcical marriage has continued for three weeks. Iris, returning ill, she tries to bring back to his knees. Nan, heartbroken, determines to fight and DR. BLACK to remove Iris from a hospital.

Curtis goes to see his mother daily. She feeds him forbidden sweets. He awakens Christmas morning with an attack of appendicitis. The doctor says his mother must be watched closely. Nan knows she is powerless to prevent Iris' interference. Morgan brings WILLIS TODD to her. He is a former suitor of Iris. When they are alone, she tells him of Iris. He seeks to comfort her, placing his arm about her shoulders. Morgan sees them thus.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

If Nan Carroll Morgan had not been so completely in love with her husband, she would have fallen in love with Willis Todd, out of sheer gratitude for the way he had that might have been a very embarrassing situation. Rather, it was not what Willis did, but what he did not do which Nan, even in her confusion, recognized as the right of fact.

Willis did not remove his arm about her shoulder; he did not apologize; he did not try to explain to the husband who had dived uncertainly on the threshold of the drawing room. He did not feel guilty. He had done no wrong; Nan had done no wrong. She simply refused to put himself wrong by acting like a traitor—lover caught by a betrayed husband.

"How the boy, Mr. Morgan?" called out, with just the right amount of sympathetic interest. "I like to run up and speak to him, if he's awake. You know I used to see him at the office when he was here."

"He's still slightly feverish, and I don't want to give him any more of that little bottle of his. It's a little bit of a nuisance, but I think it's best to keep him quiet. He's a little better now, but I don't want to give him any more of that little bottle of his. It's a little bit of a nuisance, but I think it's best to keep him quiet."

"Then I'll run up," Willis said, and rose and not till then did he draw his arm from across Iris' shoulders.

"Don't be gone too long. We're going to open Christmas gifts and there's a Santa Claus!" Nan nudged him gaily.

"When the young man had left the room, Nan rose from the couch and strolled to the tree. She noticed that Morgan had noticed still undried tears on her cheeks and what she would say if questioned her.

"Shall we light the tree now?" she called over her shoulder, pressing the left-hand button for the Christmas tree lights and snapping the others. Now! Doesn't it look lovely?"

"I hope you'll like your presents, dear," Morgan said, in a tone that sounded a little constrained, for all his effort to make cheerfulness. "It was hard to know what to get you. Want to open a box now, while we're alone?"

rather be the sole witness of her disappointment, if you don't like them."

"Them?" Nan repeated, laughing. "This box is pretty small to me more than one gift. Oh, but I never had anything so precious in all my life!"

She lifted from their satin bed antique neckless and pair of eardrums of square-cut topazes, in exquisitely wrought gold filigree.

"I got them because they're in the color of the highlights in your hair and eyes," Morgan told her, his voice rich with satisfaction. "They're 150 years old, by way—first presented to a famous French actress by a prince. Full pedigree furnished on request. But there's nothing else in the box. Lift the satin pad, dear."

Nan obeyed and drew out a bit memorandum upon the top of the most fashionable furrier, the sum staggered her for a moment.

"Why, John, darling, we can't afford—"

"How many times must I remind you that you're only the junior partner in this firm?" Morgan scolded her. "I want you to have a decent fur coat, young woman. I was tempted to choose myself, but didn't dare assume responsibility."

"Thank you, John," she said, with her voice was too soft for her to permit more, when, as simply, she looked—her eyes for his kiss.

The memory of the hard, hungry pressure of his lips was still with her as she watched him fumble awkwardly with the wrappings of her gift to him. She had bought him a wafer-thin, platinum-cased watch. Very plain, very expensive-looking. With it, a thin platinum chain.

Morgan's eyes lighted up with boyish pleasure. "And to think I ever teased you about your woman's intuition! I wonder if anyone else today has said, 'Just what I wanted!' and meant it as wholeheartedly as I do. Thank you, dear Nan! It makes this old watch of mine look like a turpentine. And I thought there couldn't be a finer watch made when my father gave it to me. George! What a beauty it is!" he added, with such naive enthusiasm that Nan laughed aloud, joyously.

"That meant another kiss, of course. And this time it was Willis Todd who halted uncertainly on the threshold, unwilling to interrupt an embrace which he knew was giving the most exquisite happiness to the girl he loved.

"We couldn't wait for you, Willis!" Nan cried. "Forgive us, won't you? And come look for what Santa Claus left for you."

She made a great ado of turning her back while he opened the package containing the watch she had given him, "to allow him time to recover from the shock," as she laughingly warned him.

"The tie I've always longed for! Exactly what I wanted!" Willis announced emphatically and pretended to be very much hurt when his host and hostess exchanged amused, significant glances, then burst into uncontrollable laughter.

"There husband-and-wife secrets," he grumbled. "Anyway, the TIE isn't funny! It's a beauty!"

And they laughed at him again. Morgan explained: "The male vocabulary, under certain circumstances, seems to be curiously limited. You've said exactly the same thing about that tie that I've just been saying to Nan about this watch she gave me. What is it, Estelle?" he broke off, as he caught sight of the maid beckoning to him from the doorway.

"Telephone, sir," she answered, with an odd note of resentment or sulkiness in her voice.

It required no unusual amount of intuition for Nan to guess that the call was from Iris Morgan.

"Don't look like that, honey," Willis whispered, as Morgan strode across the room toward the library to answer the call. "I'm glad I came tonight. I see now why you feel about him as you do. He's a prince. Fight for him, Nan. He's worth it."

"That's big of you, Willis," Nan murmured huskily. "I'll fight all right, but—so will she. And she has the biggest advantage over me that one woman can have over another."

"And that is?"

"John was mad about her for the whole eight years they were married, and he never really possessed her. Now she pretends she's just as much in love with him as he ever was with her. Can't you see how the thought of possessing her completely, after all those years of frustrated adoration, must affect him?"

"But he loves you," Willis Todd protested. "Not in that insane, slavish way, perhaps, but truly, deeply. You've got to believe that, Nan."

"I do," Nan said simply. "I wouldn't fight for a minute if I didn't believe that. Now, I'm going to tune in on some choir music. I love the Christmas hymns. Don't you?"

Nan was at the radio cabinet and Willis Todd was relaxed in a big wing chair before the fireplace when Morgan re-entered the room. With a deep sigh, whether of worry or contentment Nan could not know, he dropped to the couch and stretched his long legs toward the crackling flames of the wood fire.

"Music, John? Or would you rather just talk?" Nan called.

"A sandwich—music, talk, more music. Some carols, if you can find any in the air," her husband answered.

Four days later Nan Morgan looked back upon that Christmas evening and tried, desperate with need of its happiness and peace, if only in memory, to recapture every moment of it.

"And I sat there, snug as a pussy-cat, listening to carols and telling myself that I'd been making a mountain out of a molehill; that there was nothing to be afraid of," Nan reflected bitterly, on the day that she knew that Dr. Black's warning had not been the idle meddling of a he-gossip.

She was in her own office, reading a long, telegraphic report from her husband, filed at the state capital, where he was conducting the Bradley defense on its appeal to the supreme court. Her telephone rang. Absently she reached for the receiver, her eyes still fastened upon the telegram.

"Hello. Yes, Estelle. What's the matter? Quit panting and try to talk plainly. Is it—Curtis?"

"No'm, it's HER!" Estelle urgent, gusty whisper came over the wire.

"Mr. Morgan's other wife, I mean."

Nan's heart lunged, was caught in the grip of a pain so intense that for a moment there was nothing else in the world but that terrible pain. After a bit, when that dreadful contraction of the heart muscles had relaxed somewhat, she became aware that Estelle's gusty whisper was vibrating against her eardrum. "Mr. Morgan's other wife." So that was even the servants thought of John Curtis Morgan—a man with two wives. But she must listen, must answer intelligently.

"I don't quite understand, Estelle," she said, and was aware that her voice sounded cold and reproving.

"I said she's here—right here in this house!" Estelle repeated, with urgent impatience. "I tried to keep her out till you come home, but I couldn't do nothing with her, ma'am. Honest, I couldn't!"

"What does she want?" But why ask? She wanted her home, her husband, her child. Hadn't Dr. Black warned her that Iris Morgan would stop at nothing?

"She says she wants her own things," Estelle panted. "She brought two men with her and she's going all through the house, gathering up things she says belong to her—"

"Mrs. Morgan may have anything that belongs to her," Nan heard her own voice answering. "Naturally she will want her clothes and other personal belongings. Please give her all the help she needs."

"I ain't going to help her, after the way she talked to me! Treating me like I was dirt under her feet," the maid sobbed. "And if you knew what she's done, you wouldn't ask me to!"

"Estelle!" Nan reproved her sharply. "You must realize I can't let you talk this way—"

"Well, I guess somebody's got to tell you!" Estelle retorted. "She's rented that furnished cottage right across the street. AND SHE'S GOING TO LIVE THERE. She told Curtis so, right in front of me. She said she wanted to be near, so he could spend all his afternoons with her. And she said—"

"Please, Estelle!" Nan interrupted sharply, but automatically.

She was not conscious of the act of hanging up the receiver, nor of rising from her chair and walking toward the window of her office. But she must have done these things, for after a while she heard herself whispering. Somehow, during those first black moments, she had fallen and struck her head against the sharp corner of the radiator cover.

"I must have fainted," she murmured dully. Dizzily, with marveled effort, she pulled her body into a sitting position, then dropped her head into her icy, violently trembling hands.

It was thus that Kathleen O'Connor, bringing in a freshly typed brief which Nan had dictated that morning, found her employer.

"Oh, my goodness!" Miss O'Connor cried shrilly, dropping the brief and sinking to her knees beside the bowed little figure on the floor. "What IS the matter, Mrs.

Morgan? Has anything happened? Are you sick?"

"I'm—all right," Nan answered, lifting dazed, blind eyes. "Just—a little dizzy. If you'll give me your hand. Thank you. No, I don't want any water. I'm all right. Please go away, Miss O'Connor."

When the frightened secretary had closed the door reluctantly behind her, Nan, at her desk again, lifted the receiver of her telephone and called a number.

"Estelle? Mrs. Morgan speaking. If Mrs. Iris Morgan has not left the house yet, will you please take down her portrait from above the fireplace and give it to her?"

"She said she wasn't going to take it. She said she wanted it to stay where it is," Estelle babbled. "She's gone now, anyway."

"Then," Nan said, "please tell Big Pat to take it to—her house across the street—AND LEAVE IT!"

CHAPTER XLIV

Not even Nan's quixotic conscience could succeed in troubling her seriously when she had time to consider the irresistible impulse which had made her force Iris Morgan to take her portrait, along with her other belongings. She could feel nothing but a fierce exultation that that reminder of Iris Morgan's beauty was gone at last.

When John Curtis Morgan's second wife returned home that last Friday in December she went from room to room of her husband's house and viewed, with stony eyes, the havoc wrought by the first wife's pillaging. The linen presses had been ruthlessly ransacked of their finest treasures. Only the plainest, most utilitarian of the sheets, towels, table clothes and napkins remained. Nan shrugged and passed on. Eric's brace and tapestry missing from library; drawing room and dining room; pictures gone from almost every wall; great gaps in the book shelves.

Resolutely, her emotions numbed by a cold anger, Nan forced herself to enter the big bedroom which had once been occupied by Iris and the man who was then her husband.

Nan expected to find the room denuded. Certainly Iris could claim legitimately that all its furnishings belonged to her. Vividly Nan recalled the occasion of the room's redecoration—an eighth wedding anniversary present from John Curtis Morgan to his wife. It had fallen to Nan's lot, as Morgan's secretary, to total the exorbitant bills and write checks for them. Oh, yes, the contents of this room of all rooms were certainly Iris Morgan's to do with as she pleased.

But on the threshold Nan stopped and stared, incredulously at first, then with a dawning comprehension which made her childish mouth set in a hard, cynical smile. For the room was exactly as Iris had left it nearly a year ago. The amethyst and blue-green taffeta drapes still hung at the windows; the narrow beds of inlaid Chinese teakwood were still dressed in their blue-green taffeta spreads, as if demurely awaiting their rightful occupants.

Not even the vanity dressing table, with its rich treasure of scent bottles, jars, and boxes in smethyst crystal had been touched.

"So you've left it ready for your return," Nan mentally addressed the other woman. "Clever of you, Iris. To have transplanted this room from this house to your temporary home would have been an acknowledgment of defeat. But to leave it here, waiting... Oh, yes, clever of you, Iris!"

The brown head jerked up then; the red light of battle glowed in eyes that had been stony with a cold anger and contempt. "Well, Iris!" she challenged her unseen rival. "I think it's about time I was clever, too!"

The result of that resolution was a conference the very next day between Nan Morgan and one of the city's most trustworthy interior decorators. Shortly after their marriage Morgan had paid his new wife the courtesy of adding her name to his in a joint checking account at the bank. Now, without compunction, she prepared to draw upon it almost to the extent of its capacity, in an effort to banish the ghost of Iris Morgan from her home and his.

Late on Monday, January 7, just 24 hours before Morgan was due home from the state capital to take up the interrupted case of The State versus David Blackhull, Nan Morgan made a tour of her home and found it good. The drawing room had been re-papered, so that no longer over the fireplace was there a dark square to call attention to the fact that Iris Morgan's portrait had been banished. There were new curtains and drapes in both dining room and drawing room, and in the latter a really notable collection of beautifully framed etchings, to take the place of the pictures of which Iris had robbed it.

But it was the first wife's bedroom which had undergone the most complete change. Gone were the amethyst and blue-green drapes and bed-spreads; gone the amethyst rug, the vanity dressing table with its amethyst jars and boxes; gone, too, was every piece of the Chinese teakwood furniture.

The interior decorator had spoken glowingly of the new modernistic furniture, but Nan had told him: "No, this is to be our guest room, suitable for a man and wife of any age. It must be quietly charming and utterly comfortable."

Completed, it was just that. It even looked as if it had been lived in. Nan discovered, as she studied her new guest room with quiet satisfaction. No smallest reminder here of exotic Iris. In her files at the office reposed a warehouse receipt for all the gaudy trappings and furnishings which had given place to the new.

"If you win, Iris," Nan mentally promised her rival, "you may have the receipt, with my compliments to a better woman than I am."

Even as she uttered this bravado to herself, Nan knew that she was simply whistling to keep her courage up. It had not been so difficult to be brave, clever and hard while John Curtis Morgan was safely away from the spell of the woman across the street. But in 24 hours he would be home again, and then—what?

The Bradley case, which John Curtis Morgan was defending on an appeal before the state supreme court, did not go to the jury until Tuesday noon. The Blackhull case was to re-open the next day, after an adjournment due to the sudden, serious illness of the star witness, the old butler, Edgars. Nan spent the whole of Tuesday working on the Blackhull case, so that her husband should find everything in readiness for the delayed opening on Wednesday.

At half-past five his telegram came. Nan had not yet left the office. There was no need, now, for her to rush home to Curtis for the child, obeying his mother's command, was spending his afternoons in the little house across the street. Nan had not dared issue a counter order to the child to stay at home. If such an order was to be issued, it must come from the father.

She opened the telegram. "Leaving 5:10. Arrive 11:15. Lost. Please meet me, John." (To Be Continued)

GAS—the clean, cheap, convenient fuel—having been faithful over a few things has been made ruler over many."

From cooking, the year 'round, and heating whenever needed—the uses of gas have expanded to many new duties.

Gas has added silence and economy to mechanical refrigeration, in the operation of gas refrigerators! Gas has improved home sanitation by disposing of all garbage in gas-operated, odorless incinerators!

Gas now heats irons—both the small hand iron and the large flat-work ironer! Gas operates the clothes dryer in the modern home laundry! Gas supplies hot water instantly and automatically at all hours for laundry, kitchen and bath!

Gas—particularly natural gas, which Lone Star Gas Company is privileged to furnish to more than 200 Texas and Oklahoma communities—has taken over these new duties because of its economy and cleanliness.

Consult your local gas company—or gas appliance retailers—for full details of these new-day gas uses. Learn how you may put to further use, the ever-reliable home servant—GAS.

GORDON TO DRILL NEAR RISING STAR

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., July 12.—The oil field of Oklahoma City, the state's newest active area, produced 20,161 barrels from seven wells Wednesday, a decline of 214 barrels. In the new Saskwa field, seven wells produced 13,315 barrels during the 24 hour period ending yesterday morning. Declining 8,992 barrels, the Greater Seminole oil area produced 377,977 barrels from 1,978 wells Wednesday. St. Louis pool produced 75,071 barrels from 374 wells.

WICHITA, Kan., July 12.—A rank wildcat in Kingman county, five miles northwest of Norwich, topped the Wilcox sand and has a good oil showing at 4,346 feet. It is the Gypsy Oil company No. 1-Kinkaid and is opening a new pool, oil men believe. The test was to be drilled in some time this morning. Big oil play is expected in Kingman county if the well is a good producer. All major companies and many independents have acreage in the county. Sedwick county's 102D producer, the Wright No. 6, Continental, Gypsy and Bu-Vi-Bar, came in Wednesday night. The hole filled with oil from the sand at 3,399 feet and the well is estimated at 900 barrels daily. Wright No. 6, is in the Wright pool and an offset to the two other producers. HOUSTON, July 12.—Another indication of improvement in the oil industry in the Gulf Coast is seen in the number of wildcats now drilling. Practically all of the rank wildcat deep tests are being put down by the major companies in sections far from production. In Jefferson county Shell Production has a deep test in No. 1 Heisig, now drilling round 5,460 feet. Vacuum Oil company has another, No. 1 Borgassard in the southern portion of that county. Humble has two wildcats in No. 1 Miller near Roseburg in Fort Bend county, drilling around 4,050 feet, and No. 1 Woodburn, near Genoa in Harris county, which is down around 3,700 feet. Another deep test is that of the Texas company at Big Hill in Jefferson county, No. 2 Pipkin, which is rigging up. The Rio Bravo Oil company has completed No. 15 Settegast at Pierce Junction with an initial flow of 1,300 barrels pipe line oil. In the same field Smith et al have a 375 barrel producer in No. 1 sons completed at 4,680 feet. Raccoon Bend in Austin continues to lead the lead in number of wells being drilled, field, which is being developed by the Humble Oil & Refining company and Valley Oil company now has 20 rigs running and a pinched production of 7,100 barrels from 23 wells.

GARNER STORE IS SWAMPED WITH CROWDS

"I don't know where all these people came from this morning but the Daily News and Cisco American and Roundup seem to have found them somewhere," said H. S. Drumwright, of the John H. Garner's store, this morning in speaking of the crowds that were swarming into the store. A great number of extra clerks had been engaged to take care of the expected throng out more salespeople were needed to care for the hundreds that were bargain hunting. The military department was turned into a kind of "Help Your Self" store and women were seeking the service of other shoppers to tell them how becoming a hat might be as they fitted themselves. Meanwhile clerks were just as busy as bees with other customers. "We'll get to all of them after a while," said Mr. Drumwright. "All rushes soon settle down into steady buying. We have plenty of goods and these prices are going to hold good until the supply is sold," he added. "We don't have many sales but a Garner sale always means something and the people have learned to expect real value when one is announced," he added. HE KNOWS NOW WHY SO MANY PRAISE SARGON Portrait of J. C. Piland with text: "I've heard a lot of wonderful things about this new Sargon treatment but I don't believe anybody ever got finer results from it than I did."

J. C. PILAND. "For ten years I suffered with rheumatism until my life was just one round of suffering. My kidneys troubled me too and I never got a good night's sleep. I had sharp pains through my back and kidneys, and I was always constipated. I spent a lot of money on medicines trying to get my health back, but nothing helped me much until I took Sargon. "Well, sir, I can hardly believe it myself, but this new Sargon treatment has driven every bit of rheumatism from my body. My kidney trouble is gone and I haven't a pain or ache of any kind. I enjoy sound sleep for the first time in years, and get up feeling full of life. "Sargon Soft Mass Pills overcame my constipation and regulated me perfectly. My whole system is in fine condition and I am a strong, healthy man again. Sargon certainly does all, and more, than claimed for it." The above statement was made by J. C. Piland, well-known retired merchant, Box 582, Route No. 4, Fort Worth. Mr. Piland is an Odd Fellow, a member of the Baptist church, and highly respected. Sargon may be obtained in Cisco at Elliott Drug Store and Corner Drug Store.—Adv.

Melo WATER SOFTENED WITH MELO IS A REMARKABLE CLEANER 10 cents THE HYGIENIC PRODUCTS CO. Canton, Ohio Manufacturers of Sani-Flush

Washes woollens and blankets! When you wash with hard water there's a dirty ring around the edge of the basin, but that's not suds. It's scum. The hard water is doing that. It's mixing with the soap to form a dirty curdle. Can't wash woollens and blankets in that water. Soften the water with Melo. Then add soap. The water is now a very fine cleansing agent and the soap is much more effective. Melo did that. Get a can today at your grocer's.
