Fascinating Story Told by Missionary

Dr. J. Howard Taylor, eminent not only as a surgeon, but as a preacher, is touring America during his Sabbatical year, telling the fascinating story of life in the China Mission, founded by J. Hudson Taylor in 1865, and maintained an international, and inter-denominational Protestant Christian work in the interior of China. The story is unique in its financial aspect; it guarantees no salary to its workers, but each worker like the mission itself, depends entirely upon God to supply funds for maintenance. The needs of the work are laid before God in prayer, no personal solicitations or collections being authorized. Every member of the Mission is expected to recognize that his dependence for the supply of all his needs is on God, who called him and for whom he labors, and not a human organization. Its work in the part is being done by the Chinese themselves, with Foreign missionaries acting largely in the capacity of advisers. Dr. Taylor, whose Sundays are claimed by the churches of the leading cities of the land, and who is sought for special conferences by universities and colleges throughout America, is preaching this way, and will be heard Wednesday evening at the First Methodist church. The minister of the church announces that anyone is invited to hear this distinguished speaker.

PATTERSON OF RANDOLPH ON ALL-SOUTHERN

"Pat" Patterson, captain of the Randolph college Kittens, captured a place on the first all-southern girls' basketball team picked at the Southern Open tournament at Shreveport last week. Six players were placed on the team selected by officials of the tournament. Members of the Employers Casualty Golden Cyclones, which won the tournament, captured most of the places, taking three. Sun Oil was given one place and Crescent college another. Randolph playing without their regular forwards lost out in the third round of the tournament but the sensational work of the guards, particularly Patterson, gained them recognition as one of the outstanding teams. With both Irene and Delma Fulford out of the lineup and McGeehee able to play but a few minutes of the game the Kittens lost by a narrow margin to the Mississippi state champions. McGeehee suffered from a bad knee and did not start until the last few minutes. At the time the Kittens were trailing by a considerable margin McGeehee's sensational shooting in the final moments almost overcame this lead by the end of the game, however.

For the Mexia, Powell, Boggy Creek, Lytton Springs, Richland, Wortham, Currie, Moran and Nocona field the latter quotation was a cut of 40 cents a barrel, while for

20TH CENTURY CLUB SPONSORS LIBRARY TEA

The library committee of the 20th Century club of Cisco is sponsoring a tea to be given March 16th at the library building on West Sixth street. This tea is for the public. There will be no charges whatever. Its purpose is to encourage more reading and cultivate a taste for better reading material among the general public. A visit to the library will give a greater appreciation of the work that is being done by the 20th Century club in keeping up Cisco's only public library. Already the library has 3820 volumes in the collection which is being added to at all times.

There is a large variety of books in the collection. All of the best books of fiction and all of the newest works may be had. Fifteen of the latest books have been added within the last month. There are many sets of reference books, and juvenile books are a specialty. Mrs. L. D. Wilson, librarian, stated that in averaging the per cent of reading public she found that Cisco's average was above that of many towns of a larger population. The library is open three days each week, Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday from 2:30 until 6 o'clock.

COUSIN HOLDS POWERFUL JOB IN OIL TANGLE

By GEORGE B. ROSCOE United Press Staff Correspondent OKLAHOMA CITY, March 10. — Cicero Murray, tutored by his second cousin, Governor William H. "Alfalfa" Bill Murray, has become a powerful figure in Oklahoma's tangled oil affairs. The governor appointed his cousin as Roy Johnson, Ardmore oil operator, to study proration problems and report their findings. The appointment was made when the governor's special oil committee became hopelessly lost in a mass of charges that his members were influenced by Harry Sinclair, avowed opponent of proration in Oklahoma. Drilled Dry Holes. Cicero Murray is not an oil man unless backing the drilling of several dry holes would place him in such a category. He is a lawyer who learned his profession by the dim light of a county hotel where he worked as night clerk. Both Murray and Johnson serve without pay. Their first task is to determine whether proration is equitably enforced; whether there is discrimination between operators and between fields and whether the present law is just. Later, they will make recommendations for legislation if they find such recourse necessary. Powerful Position. Thus the two-man committee assumes a powerful position in the state's second industry and which probably will have influence in the national industry. Many years ago, Cicero Murray, now 42, attended "Alfalfa Bill's" school at Mountcain, Tex. He was clad in a "hand-me-down" pair of pants given him by his teacher. His self-education in law followed. He agrees with Governor Murray on everything except food and the governor's choice of five-cent cigars

Court to Decide Plane's Status

WASHINGTON, March 10. — Whether or not an airplane is a "vehicle" will be decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit when it reviews one feature of a decision handed down in which it held that an airplane is a "vehicle" within the meaning of the provisions of the National Motor Vehicle Act. The United States Supreme Court has granted a writ of certiorari to the Circuit Court in order that it might review this feature of its decision. The petitioner, William W. McBoyle, was convicted in the United States District Court on charges of transporting a stolen airplane from Ottawa, Ill., to Guyton, Okla. He was sentenced to three years in jail and ordered to pay a fine of $2,000.

A brief supporting the decision of the Circuit Court in upholding the decision of the District Court has been filed by the Department of Justice. The department contends that while the National Motor Vehicle Act provides that the act shall "include an automobile, automobile truck, automobile wagon, motorcycle, or any other self-propelled vehicle not designed for running on rails," the term "motor vehicle" as so defined should be construed to include an airplane.

Oil Belt Educational Association to Meet at Eastland March 13 and 14

The Oil Belt Educational association, one of the youngest educational organizations in the state, will hold its annual spring meeting in Eastland March 13 and 14. The association had its birth at Cisco October 14, 1930, when at the invitation of Supt. R. N. Cluck of Cisco, Supt. R. F. Holloway, of Ranger, chairman of the district executive committee of the interscholastic league called a meeting of superintendents and principals of the oil belt. The association, its membership to include all public school teachers, was named the Oil Belt Educational association, its purpose to foster and promote better public school education in the district. An annual meeting each spring was determined upon. Within the general association a council was formed, to consist of superintendents and principals. This division meets twice annually, once in the spring in conjunction with the association and again in the fall. Council Meeting. The first meeting of the council, following the organization meeting here in October, was held in Abilene, November 17, 1930, at a banquet tendered by the chamber of commerce of that city, when reports prepared by committees of the state association for submission to the state convention on Thanksgiving were studied by the council. Supt. W. O. Willingham, of Abilene, was elected president of the association at the meeting in Cisco. Principal John F. Bailey, of the Breckenridge high school, was named vice-president, and O. G. Certified Husbands Are Being Sought

PARIS, March 10. — If you can't do the 49 in one minute, a running broad jump of three yards, a standing jump as high as your hips, a running high jump as high as your shoulders and climb a fence seven feet high, you're not fit to be a husband. Those are some of the qualifications the ideal husband would protect his wife must have according to Dr. C. C. Paces and his associates who are seeking a race of certified husbands. A wife is likely to be accosted by men of the type who turn and run at the sight of opposition, and also of the type who stop at nothing in order to combat these men the ideal husband must be physically qualified or he is married happiness is at stake, the doctor believes. To train himself, the husband should do 20 minutes of wrestling with an adversary 10 pounds more than his own weight, should carry a 140-pound sack of wheat around for a time, and do a lot of swimming each day.

RANGERS NOT ABLE TO FIND ANY EVIDENCE

AUSTIN, March 10. — With state rangers reporting to Governor Ross Sterling this morning that they have been unable to find anything to support the charge that two communists were beaten into unconsciousness at Dallas, the governor today said it is possible that the affair was prearranged to create a sentiment. Beyond the fact that Geo. Edwards, Dallas attorney, who had represented the communists, was seized the rangers have found nothing, the governor said. He pointed out that Edwards was not harmed. "I have been unable to trace responsibility for reports of what happened to his clients after Edwards was released," said the governor. Telegrams have been received by the governor from both inside and outside the state, demanding that the guilty persons be punished. "We demand action, also, for full social, political and economic rights for negro masses," read part of a telegram from the executive committee of the Trades Unity League, Texas district, at San Antonio.

WOMEN BARRED FROM TRYING LAW VIOLATORS

By GEORGE D. CRISSEY United Press Staff Correspondent PHOENIX, Ariz., March 10. — Although women are a vital factor in the making of laws in Arizona, they are not permitted to pass on the acts of persons accused of violating those laws. This unusual situation prevails because women cannot serve on juries in this state. It is the only discrimination against the sex. In the house of representatives of the 10th legislature, now in session, there are seven women. Dozens of bills introduced by these women will be enacted into law before adjournment. Drastic Dry Law. It was a woman, for example, who drove a drastic state liquor law enforcement act—providing 15 years imprisonment as a maximum penalty—through the house. Action on the liquor bill, introduced by Rep. Gertrude Bryan Leeper of Phoenix, was favorable in the house. It died in the women's senate where it was rejected twice.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

WITHHOLD NOT GOOD—Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.—Proverbs 3:27.

PRAYER—Help us, Father, to thus be co-workers with Thee in blessing mankind.

A GRAND OLD MAN OF AMERICA.

Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the supreme court of the United States broke a 90-year precedent Sunday when he observed his birthday with a brief radio address. He broke a second precedent when he smilingly agreed to don his judicial robes for a picture with Chief Justice Chas. Evans Hughes. His radio speech, his first, was made in the seclusion of his red brick home in the city of Washington. He is more, than the grand old man of the supreme court. He is the grand old man of America regardless of political or religious creeds.

He was a gallant soldier in the war between the states. He is a descendant of one of the ancient families of New England. In war time he was a gallant defender of his flag and his convictions. In peace time he has ever been one of the outstanding jurists of America, first on the supreme court bench of his native state and then as an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. He has ever been a progressive in thought, action and speech. He believes in justice for all mankind and his decisions or opinions are quoted everywhere by lovers of justice and constitutional law and government.

He bears the scars of the warrior inflicted on the field of battle. He carries the laurels according to the wise and the just bestowed upon him as a servant of state and nation. Very wise, very courtly, very righteous, very human and ever loyal to constitutional liberty and the principles and institutions of a democratic form of government, the flowers of all the people in a figurative sense, were tossed in the lap of Associate Justice Holmes on the anniversary of his 90th birthday. He has been in harness for 72 years, counting his years of service as a soldier in the field and an ever active participant in the civic life of the nation.

LEGGE AND HIS SUCCESSOR.

Alexander W. Legge is out of the picture and James C. Stone of Kentucky is in as his successor of the federal farm board. Legge had been urged by every farm organization in the United States to recall his resignation. President Hoover admits that he urged Legge with all the force he could command to carry on. President Stone has had many years experience in co-operative marketing, the fundamental principle on which the farm board works. He organized and was general manager for a number of years of the Burley Tobacco Co-Operative association of Kentucky. He has been a member of the farm board since its organization and has been active particularly in organizing cotton and tobacco co-operatives financed and directed by stabilization corporations under the direction of the farm board.

Legge was the ever fearless and ever aggressive guiding spirit of the board. A man of commanding ability, admittedly one of the most successful administrative executives of the republic. Whenever necessary he swung his ax and then there were flying chips in all directions. His farewell address is interesting. After declaring that those opposing the board are making a lot of noise but really represent a very small percentage of the American public he said, "Personally I have a greater confidence in the ultimate success of the program laid down by congress in the agricultural marketing act than when I undertook the work some 20 months ago and will cooperate in every way if I may as a private citizen to bring this about." He bluntly said the real difficulty the board has to contend with is in the "slowness of farmers in acting collectively for their own good." He ventured the suggestion that in the future more attention be given to the young people, particularly the boys' and girls' clubs, who in their competitive contests are learning the value of teamwork.

A very level headed man and a most picturesque battler

FOR 20 YEARS TEXAS FARMER HAD COUGH AND WHEEZING CHEST

Treatment Failed So He Finally Quit Taking Medicine Entirely Until He Heard Of Lin-O-Nine

LIN-O-NINE STOPPED HIS TROUBLES QUICK

"This new medicine you call Lin-O-Nine banished all the soreness and wheezing out of my chest and all the whistling and cough went away and I breathe freely now and I feel a different man. It surely does all you claim it will do," writes Richard H. Jacob. "I was always having bad coughs and colds. Choking spells and a whistling sound in my chest worried me—a sort of dull pain or feeling in the bottom of my chest. I can't tell you exactly what kind of symptoms they were or what my trouble was for no treatment or medicine. I tried did me any good. Had gotten disgusted and gave up hope of ever getting rid of my trouble until I heard about Lin-O-Nine. I got my druggist to order some for me and as I said before it worked like magic for me. I recommend it to everybody troubled as I was," continued Mr. Jacob, a well known farmer, Route 3, Box 137, Victoria, Texas. Thousands of men and women, especially elderly people who are too weakened to respond to ordinary medicine, find Lin-O-Nine does the work and soon rid the system of wintry coughs and colds, builds a person up so they can withstand cold weather better. It contains no alcohol or dope of any kind so agrees with even the weakest stomachs so may be given even to infants as well as grownups. See formula on each bottle. Doctors endorse this Eucalyptus, Flax Seed Oil, Cassia, Glycerine, Irish Moss, etc. preparation and the national, well known and long established Kerr Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., is back of guarantee of complete relief or money back. They gladly send 50c or $1 bottle by mail or receipt of check, stamps or currency in your favorite druggist hasn't Lin-O-Nine. Adv.

for his convictions is Alexander W. Legge. In speaking of the boys' and girls' clubs he tossed this golden nugget of advice to the reading public as well as the farming public. "It does not matter much what becomes of us old fellows who will soon be out of the picture. The problems of the future must be met by the coming generation." Friend and foe alike must concede that this retiring chairman is more than a leader of the people. He is a teacher as well as a guide. It is for the young men and women, or the boys and girls of today, to be trained to carry on. It is for them to tackle and solve the problems of the future.

BARUCH AND WAR PROFITS.

Bernard M. Baruch, multi-millionaire and ever a loyal friend of Woodrow Wilson and Wilson policies, has a plan for taking the profits out of war by governmental price fixing. In submitting his plan he characterized proposals to draft capital and labor in war time as absurd. He recommended enactment of legislation to give the president power immediately upon declaration of war to freeze all prices, not only of commodities, but of rents, wages, interests, rates, commissions and fees in the level of pre-war prices. In other words Col. Baruch recommended no principle that was not in actual practice and accomplishment in 1918. Regardless of the colonel's wisdom and experience and lofty motives, if war should come on a huge scale, why shouldn't there be a general draft on capital as well as the workers of the republic? Why shouldn't money as well as human flesh and blood pay the price of war?

OTHER OPINIONS

GOOD FOR WEST TEXAS Stone of Kentucky as chairman of the federal farm board should be welcomed by west Texans who are affected by the work of that organization. Stone, it will be remembered was in San Angelo when the National Wool Marketing association was organized, and he should have a personal knowledge of the wool and mchair conditions and an interest in them that augurs well for the ranchmen who are members of the co-operative. Stone's appointment should be warmly welcome to some San Angelenos for there are in this city a number of persons who were personally acquainted with him even before he became connected with the farm board.

Knowledge begets interest. A man can give better attention to the things about which he has first-hand information. That being the case, the wool co-operative should be aided by the appointment. —San Angelo Times.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Down in Tampico, Mexico, local manufacturers are setting an example that should be followed by manufacturers in the United States and Canada. They realize that home town business is worth going after; they are using space in local papers to tell the folks at home and, in addition, helping every business in the city by educating them to buy home made products. I quote from a page ad in the Tampico Tribune, set in the center of an advertisement of what the manufacturer makes: "Use Tampico made products and increase your city's prosperity. Every purchase of a locally manufactured article means just so much more cash in local circulation, so much more capital invested in Tampico and so much direct benefit to the community. No one is asked to buy an inferior product. Take ours, for example. Our product is as good as made anywhere and our prices are as low."

If you are a manufacturer, no matter how large or small, your home town business is worth having. The way to get it and to help yourself and your town is to advertise in local papers. You or no one else will get your full share and more of local business unless you invite it by newspaper advertising.

CSHKOSH, Wis., March 10. — R. M. Dunham, who has been fishing for nearly half a century, is seeking a home for one of his latest acquisitions—a member of the yellow perch species colored white on the belly and a clear azure blue, with black stripes, on its back. •• Blending makes it better

IN the test kitchen of a great soup maker, the gifted master-chef creates the blend of ingredients to produce the perfect soup. In a scented room in a corner of France an expert blender of perfume invokes his highest genius that our sense of smell may be gratified. In a work-room fragrant with the aroma of many types of coffee beans, a highly-paid specialist concentrates his energies that we may be provided with a coffee blend to please our palates. Whether it's soup or soap, tobacco or tea, music or mustard... blending is vital to the production of the best of each. Equally as vital, if not first in importance, is the knowledge and genius of the blender. He must know how. The best gasoline, too, is blended. In the processes of a modern refinery three types of gasoline are produced. They are, Natural Gasoline, Straight-run Gasoline, and Cracked

Gasoline. Each possesses certain desirable qualities necessary for perfect motor operation...but...no one of them possesses all these wanted characteristics. So Conoco Gasoline is a blend of the three. There is Natural Gasoline, to give quick starting. There is Straight-run Gasoline, to give power and long-mileage. There is Cracked Gasoline, with its desirable anti-knock quality. Just as carefully as the perfume blender at his delicate task, Conoco refiners have developed their balanced blend of these three ingredients. Theirs is the gift of knowing how to merge the qualities of the three gasolines to create a balanced, triple-test fuel. One brand of coffee outsells all others because of the expertness of its blender. And so, with Conoco Balanced-Blend Gasoline, the skill of the blender accounts for the popularity of the product. Stop today at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle and have your gas tank filled with this better motor fuel.

HISTORIC OLD CHICAGO HOTEL IS TORN DOWN

CHICAGO, March 10. — The trench of crowbars against the old masonry has resounded through the deserted corridors of "Couch's Folly" and has ended the historic Tremont House whose life has been intervened with that of the city for 98 years.

A modern parking lot will occupy the space where once stood the most hostelry of the west—a monument to the folly of its builder, and residents said and then watched the city outgrow even the most optimistic dreams of Ira Couch.

Three times Tremont House was burned and each time the far-seeing vision of its proprietor led him to rebuild on a grander scale, and now again the ridicule of his fellow citizens.

Rise of West.

The story of Tremont House was the story of the rise of the west and the mushroom growth of the little village along Lake Michigan which in 1833 will celebrate its first 100 years of existence.

But Tremont house had outlived its day. Northwesten University officials, the present owners, said, because it was too antiquated to pay its taxes the building was wrecked.

Burned Again

In 1849 that building, too, burned. Then came the Tremont house that made Chicago gasp.

The new hostelry was five and a half stories high. It cost $75,000 and was "one of the finest hotels in the country." The city said its builder had lost his reason. "Couch's Folly," they called it.

WITH THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

CISCO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The enrollment in Cisco schools has held up remarkably well during the financial depression. Most people thought at the beginning of the school that this year's enrollment would be greatly reduced, but not so. The enrollment for the present school year, 1930-31, has been even greater than the past two years. More than 1500 children have enrolled up-to-date. The teaching force has not been reduced. Overcrowded rooms and over-crowded buildings have been distributed in such a way that equal advantages and opportunities are given all children alike. The present administration advocates the policy that the school as a whole is no stronger than the weakest school and that whatever affects one school affects the whole school.

To bring about unity in all school work Supt. R. N. Cluck has appointed committees from all the schools to work out general programs for the school. One committee has arranged to have several community programs during the school year. These exercises and programs have been well attended. They are given by the schools together and are free from cost to the parents and friends of the schools. Another community program will be given in the near future.

The P.-T. associations of the schools are furnishing free milk to all decidedly undernourished children in the schools. The public in general is contributing liberally to the financial support of this cause.

The school business of any city or town in its biggest business. Who would like to move to or live in a town with very poor schools? Good schools exist only in towns and communities where the home and the home influence and the school are working together. A good school system cannot long endure unless it has sympathy and support of the home. The school should not be expected to do all the training of the child—just its part. The home must do some training. Sad to say that some homes have lost control of the children in the home. It is an unfortunate day for the child when he loses respect for his parents. Children from such homes are the school's most serious problems.

WHEN THE GRADES COME HOME

By T. C. WILLIAMS, principal West Ward

Always manifest a very genuine interest in the child's school grades. If they are good, express appreciation; if bad avoid censure. Do not praise the better child in the other's presence. Rigidly avoid comparisons. Fast grades cannot be changed; our hope is in the future. Scold the child ridicule him, shame or compare him unfavorably with another child and you break down his morale. If you are sure that rewards will stimulate the child to exercise more effort without moral harm to him put them on the basis of improvement and not on the basis of absolute achievement.

If you offer a reward for an A the child may win it at a cost of learning to cheat, or he may find the prize hopeless, and give up. In that event he may find his brother, or sister, cousin or neighbor's child with whom he is compared at home attaining the goal he finds impossible. Such comparisons make the slow child miserable, and magnify his feeling of inferiority. When, on the other hand, some mark of approval is placed upon the degree of improvement, the poorest child as well as the best, may be a winner, or, at least, may gain recognition. Some children are wrecked by parents who expect higher grades than these children can earn with reasonable effort.

When there are several school children in the home almost always there are wide differences in abilities; certainly in school successes. The usual thing for parents is to praise loudly the child with good grades and to condemn the one with poor grades. Often they do worse. "Why don't you get grades like your sister's?" A deadlier word from the parent's lips has never dropped. The tragedy does not end here; the friends and neighbors also praise the child who has the good report. He may get presents as expressions of approval and glowing words of praise may come in the family letters from some relative or admiring friend. The chest-swollen child is drunken with attention and he takes a patronizing attitude toward the slower child. More quarrels and fights are pretty sure to follow and all sorts of behavior and difficulties may develop in the child with poor grades. The most tragic case is if he comes where the younger child is much the brighter, particularly when this younger child overtakes the older one in the journey through the grades.

Even with an only child, dis-trous comparisons may go on. The grades of a playmate or a relative of his age, or younger, are held up before him. Parents do the same too in respect to matters of conduct.

A good rule is never to make comparisons between children; whom you find other doing so, distract them bluntly but gently to cease.

The child who does not get along may be, by nature, slow to learn. He may, however, not be slow; he may be very bright. Through illness, or through habits of indifference he may have failed in a lower grade to master certain fundamentals.

Here and there teachers are developing who take time and have the skill of finding out just where each pupil's difficulty is, and then bowing him how to correct it.

Of course, if children are slow learners they should be given what they can do and be expected to go forward only at their own rate of speed.

The honor roll will be given within the next few days.

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY," etc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Gypsy McBride, 19-year-old, goes to meet the boat which brings Alan Crosby home from a year and a half of studying in Paris. The couple are not engaged but there has been an understanding between them. On the pier they see a beautiful woman waving to Crosby. Her name is Mrs. Langley and she is a casual ship's acquaintance. The couple drive to Mrs. Langley's rooming house where a celebration honoring the young man has been prepared. Just as dinner is to be served Crosby takes a telephone call and tells her he must leave immediately. He goes to Mrs. Langley's apartment and agrees to attend a dinner party with her. It is evident that Crosby is deeply affected by the beautiful divorcee. Gypsy spends a gloomy evening. Next morning as she is going up the stairway Crosby calls her.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

Gypsy came down the stairs one by one. "What do you want?" she asked. Crosby stood in the doorway, his hands on his hips. His dark hair was tousled as usual and his eyes looked sleepy. "Now is that the way to speak to an old friend who's been banished from God's country for 40 years?" he chided. "Gypsy, my dear, where are your manners?" It was impossible not to respond to that good-natured grin. Gypsy smiled, came down the two remaining steps.

"Beg pardon, my lord!" she said with mock humility. "I'll see that doesn't happen again, my lord!" she dropped a deep curtsy. Crosby laughed. "Impudent little thing!" he scolded. "By George, Gypsy, you're looking pretty this morning. Say—I've got a lot of things to talk to you about. Have you got anything to show me? What do you say to brave the elements? Take me and show me the town. I want to take a long walk the way we used to."

"Where'll we go?" "Anywhere. Have they still got Battery?" "The girl nodded. "And the Bronx Zoo?" "Another nod. "An Riverside Drive?" "All three."

"Then let's walk up Fifth Avenue. It was nonsense but to Gypsy it ended like the world's most brilliant wit. "I'd love to!" she said instantly. "I'll be ready in a minute."

She was wearing her hat and gloves. Gypsy had already walked blocks that morning. She ran the flight to her own room. From the depths of a tiny closet she drew a pair of brown lizard pumps. They were smartly made with short heels and high Cuban heels. The pumps were obviously new. Gypsy slipped off her worn oxfords and slipped on the pumps. They were fitting to her small feet. She slipped before the dressing table to slip powder on her nose. No need to waste time on rouge—her cheeks were warm with color. A moment before the mirror, patting at the waves of hair which showed beneath the brown net. Then she was ready.

There was no one in sight but the door of Crosby's room was ajar. Through the opening Gypsy caught a glimpse of the young man struggling to get one arm into his overcoat. He heard her, turned and came into the hall. "Can't find my gloves!" he called. "Have to go without them, I guess."

The girl laughed. "If I've heard you say that once I've heard it a hundred times," she said. "That's the thing you didn't learn in Paris, is it—you—how to remember where you put things?"

She searched the overcoat pocket. "Oh, I probably lost them," Crosby complained. "No use wasting time hunting any longer." Gypsy stood in the doorway, surveying the room. Suddenly, as though inspired, she darted inside. "They're here!" she said, kneeling behind the steamer trunk. She pulled down a pile of crumpled pieces of leather. Crosby accepted the gloves. "Thanks," he said. "Must have knocked them down there last night."

His good humor was restored. He went down the stairway laughing. On the first floor Mrs. Langley was disappearing through the door of her private quarters. "Good morning!" Crosby called. "Want to come along?" "I'm going out to view the meadows," Mrs. O'Hare tossed her head instead of answering. It was meant to indicate disapproval but was unconvincing. Where good-looking Mr. Crosby was concerned the lady could never quite hold to that which were arbitrary with her roomers.

The young couple went through the front door and paused before ascending the steps. It was noon on one of those bright, warm days that sometimes occur late February. Crosby threw back his head. "Why, it's spring!" he said. "This is New York in February. It's spring!"

Gypsy glanced up happily at her companion. None but the most commonplace of phrases came to her. "It's a beautiful day!" she said. "Why, she meant it. Windswept hills of daisies against an azure sky could not have seemed so beautiful as the grimy city street at morning."

They walked east toward Fifth Avenue. There was a Sunday quiet about the streets. Men, women and children walked leisurely, enjoying the sunshine. Even the motor traffic seemed subdued. Crosby kept up a running-fire of conversation. He asked questions and before the girl could answer was launched on some anecdote of the trip. "Only the voyage or Paris."

"Which way?" he asked when they reached Fifth Avenue. Gypsy glanced down at her feet. The new pumps were not walking shoes. She had worn them once before and found them comfortable but it had been a splendiferous occasion when she had patronized taxicabs. The left heel was beginning to burn. No one would have guessed this, however, from the girl's smile. She nodded toward the north. Walking up Fifth Avenue to the entrance of Central Park had been a favorite jaunt on Sunday mornings two years ago.

Evidently Crosby remembered too. "Like old times, kid?" he said as they turned north, swinging into step. There was a slight wind, it was colder going north and the wind whipped their faces. Beyond them gleaming towers of ivory and silver—the city's man-made marvels—stretched the twilight and burned like white fire. They were the newest and highest additions to the city's skyline and they set Crosby off into peacocks of admiration. Everything seemed to please the young man that morning. Gypsy reflected his mood. If only she hadn't worn the new pumps! Now the right as well as the left heel throbbed.

Alan expounded the glories of New York. "But there must have been some things you liked in Paris!" the girl objected. "Oh—sure!" He began to tell her of holiday excursions, delicious French cooking, friends he met at art school, the little chapel near his lodging house neglected by tourists but a perfect gem of seventeenth century design. "I wish you could see the place. You'd love it, Gypsy."

"I'm sure I would!" "Say, there's another place that used to make me think of you—Crosby told about an outdoor restaurant where there was music and delicious food and all the patrons were friendly. He told her about gay evenings there with other students. "You'd have liked them, Gypsy. There was a girl who used to come there who made me think of you. Only she wasn't so pretty. She had dark hair and eyes but her eyes didn't wave the way yours does. It was the way she laughed, I guess, that made me think of you. You look awfully cute when you laugh, Gypsy."

"What was the anguish of a blistered heel?" "Alan—do you really think so?" "Of course I do. Now don't tell me you don't know it! Say—what's the matter with your foot? You're limping!" "It's nothing—just well, this shoe seems a little tight. It's all right."

"Hurts, doesn't it?" "Yes." "Why didn't you tell me? Gosh, I'll bet it's made a blister. Now, why on earth didn't you speak up about that? We'll get a cab right away."

"Honestly I don't mind—" Gypsy began but he silenced her with a new suggestion. "Look here! Could you possibly walk one block farther?" He mentioned a nearby branch of a national chain of restaurants. It was a place where they had dined often. "How about having dinner there?"

Gypsy was delighted. When finally they had reached the place and a waitress had brought them bowls of steaming soup and a rest of the dinner was ordered Gypsy McBride leaned back in her chair and looked across at her companion. Her eyes were shining.

"It's so wonderful to have you here again!" she murmured. "It's so wonderful I can't believe it's true."

One of Crosby's hands reached across the table and covered Gypsy's. "You're a sweet kid!" he said. "We're going to have some great times together. Tell you what—tomorrow let's have dinner down at that Italian place. You know, Joe's. Where the ravioli used to be so good. Shall we?"

"I'd love to! Haven't been there for months, Alan."

Altogether Sunday was a festive day. And the thought of the evening ahead made Monday at the office pass in a rosy haze. At 6:30 Gypsy McBride slipped her key into the door of her fourth floor room. She turned the knob and the door opened. On the floor was a folded sheet of paper.

"Sorry, Bambino, that the party is off," she read. "I'm tied up for the evening with some of the boys from the office. Hope you'll understand this break in our plans was

Adults Contract Children's Diseases

Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restless sleep, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that surely and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults—White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at

TEXAS TOPICS

AUSTIN, March 10. — Another line law to shift more of the burden of road to the accused, has been offered in the house by the Rev. B. J. Forbes, representative from Parker county, joined by Rep. H. N. Graves of Georgetown and others.

This bill would levy a penalty for the possession of liquor, except for medicinal purposes.

The present law makes it a felony to possess liquor for the purpose of sale, and adds the provision that possession of over a quart shall be prima facie evidence of purpose of sale.

Now the accused has to make the burden of proof that the possession was not for purpose of sale.

Under the Forbes bill, he would have to prove that the liquor was for medicinal purposes, rather than that the prosecution would have to prove that it was possessed for unlawful purposes.

The grabbing constables on Texas highways get so bad that national organizations invoked a tourist embargo against Texas. Officers along the Texas border, who now do a profitable business through injuring their own home counties and cities by driving out-of-state trade away, will be considerably curbed under the bill just passed by the senate, already enacted by the house, to allow out-of-state trucks to cross the border without penalty and without arrest of the drivers.

A petty border guerrilla warfare between officers, in which the rights of business people and the welfare of those engaged in commerce were little considered, has been broken up.

Now a common carrier truck may make two two-day trips per month into Texas. Privately-owned trucks may be sent in as often as necessary, without required taking of Texas licenses, or the arrest of the drivers. The important phase of the law is this—that the other states won't be forced to retaliate upon Texas business serving communities across the border.

The senate was told that Texas in every instance has picked the quarrel, that started this border sniping upon the legitimate needs of commerce.

The bootlegging of tax-free gasoline across state lines to escape the four-cent gasoline tax will be stopped, the house revenue and taxation committee convinced, under a bill by Representative R. M. Hubbard of Bowie county.

The bill would levy the tax upon the basis of factory production rather than upon the retail sales.

Mr. Hubbard said it will bring the state $250,000 a year more money than is now received.

None of this money would go to general state purposes, but it will aid the general financial scheme, since a fourth will go to the schools and three-fourths to financing of highway work.

Without a word of opposition, Robert B. Grags was confirmed by the senate as state labor commissioner, and D. K. Martin, San Antonio, was confirmed for a six-year term upon the state highway commission.

They and a group of various board members were approved by the senate's unanimous vote in a closed session which lasted little longer than reading the list and calling the roll.

Sen. Ben. G. O'Neal, mid-mannered, suave Wichita Falls lawyer, firmly tied down the credit of being the foremost leader of the far-reaching legislature, despite the fact that this is his first term, when he secured unanimous senate enactment of his law making semi-annual tax payments a permanent state policy.

He stepped to the front in pioneering the emergency measure to postpone this year's tax penalties to Oct. 15. That is long since the law.

Then he brought along his general measure, defining the state policy, and made a record rarely equalled in enlisting the unanimous support of a branch of the legislature for the far-reaching bill. Passage of the measure is assured in the house, so that Texas people for the last time have forced to lose their property because state taxes and county taxes piled up the first year along with every other kind.

unavoidable. See you later—Alan." Gypsy read the note slowly. Then she entered the room, closing the door behind her.

"Of course it's all right," she told herself. "Alan has to put business first." Then she remembered how she had let herself become miserable the night that Alan arrived. "I won't do it again!" she told herself decisively.

She dined at a cheap restaurant and boarded a subway for Times Square. At a cut-rate establishment Gypsy bought a balcony ticket for a musical comedy. Thus it happened that shortly after 11 o'clock she was jostling her way through crowded 43rd street.

Suddenly one of those fantastic incidents which happen only in the world's most crowded city took place. Gypsy turned her head and saw beside her, standing near the curb, the woman who had waved at Alan Crosby on the pier. She was wearing white fur and her titan hair shone brilliantly. Beside her, in formal evening clothes, stood Alan Crosby.

It was Alan—no doubt about it! He recognized Gypsy at the same moment she saw him. Their eyes met and in that instant Gypsy McBride lost every trace of discretion. She was never to forget what happened.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Cel. Milton Everett of Texas is a life-long democrat. He is a republican. He believes in a two-party system.

In the current number of Southwestern Resources magazine the colonel argues for a pre-primary convention. There are four bills aimed at changing the present method of holding elections in Texas.

Three of the bills would provide for the preferential system of balloting in primary elections and the fourth would prevent party nominations by a minority. There is a very important bill pending in the senate.

A prominent Texas lawyer and high state official passed the plan on to the editor of Southwestern Resources. It should be of interest to Texas senators and representatives who favor ballot reform.

In several of the states the pre-primary convention system is in vogue, which means a convention to promulgate the party platform on which all candidates for nomination must stand—the candidates being voted on at a subsequent primary election.

This is the procedure: The state committee calls a state convention composed of delegates from each county, numerically based on population, to vote at a preceding election. These county delegates elect at a county convention composed of delegates from the voting convention perfects the state organization, adopts a platform and provides the necessary details for the holding, soon thereafter, of a regular primary election.

At which all candidates for nomination must submit their names, first having subscribed to the party's platform and agreed to abide by the results.

In states so operating, it is claimed, there is only one brand of democracy and one brand of republicanism; there is no bolting of party tickets and voters participating in the primary known exactly what principles the party stands for in that election and can rest assured that whatever candidates are selected are pledged to carry out those principles.

As it is in Texas every candidate runs on his own platform and the party is expected to and generally does adopt the winning candidate's platform as its own. The result is that those whose ideas are unacceptable with those of the nominee usually do one of two things—either not vote at all in the general election or vote for the candidate of the opposition party.

Party solidarity is thus impaired and the contest becomes one of individuals rather than of party principles. If the platform is adopted before and disconnected from the primary election, these not in accord with the platform, will not go into the primary, leaving the selection of candidates to those who believe in and subscribe to certain articles of party faith.

New the advocate of this plan argues that after all ours is government of representative parties and when the power of political parties is gone the European bloc system must inevitably obtain and that everyone concedes that our present Texas system of party procedure and party nominations needs revision. He asks this question of the law-makers: "Why not, in the absence of something better, try the pre-primary convention system?"

Sen. W. K. Hopkins is one of the young leaders of the democratic party and the appeal for a pre-primary convention system "by a prominent Texas lawyer and high state official" is passed on to him. Colorado has the system. It has been given the cold test. In the election 1920 it resulted in Gov. Billy Adams, democrat, winning a re-election and in the election of Edward P. Costigan, democrat, to the senate of the United States as the successor of a standpat republican. Indeed the advanced leaders of both political parties in Colorado agree that the pre-primary convention system has worked wonders in the political regeneration of that state.

Texas Topics

AUSTIN, March 10.—The relinquishment bill brought nearly 100 people to Austin for and against it. The minimum wage bill packed a big committee room, and the chiropractor license bill thronged the house, but strangely, the two measures that have provoked the biggest groups of interested visitors to the capitol this year have been those dealing with the handling of oil and its products.

The proposed divorce of filling stations from refiners and pipelines brought in the greatest throng. Next to that was the Young bill to limit the return of oil pipeline companies to 10 per cent.

There must be huge money involved in the pipeline changes, according to the interest shown.

Charles B. King of Wichita Falls quoted astonishing figures. He said sworn reports of most of the pipelines were on file. He took 10, including some independent pipelines.

These 10 had an investment in 1930, they swore of $277,000,000. They swore to revenue of $96,000,000. After deducting operating expenses, depreciation and taxes, they swore to $60,000,000 net operating revenues, or 21.55 per cent on the investment.

Mr. King said, "allow them 8 per cent as a fair return, and what ratio we have left? The $27,000,000 difference represents all the state ad valorem tax levy in the entire state. It represents what would have been another $750,000 oil production tax payment to the state, if the producers had kept it. It represents $5,000,000 extra that would have gone to the University of Texas and other loyalty owners. And on top of that, it includes enough to pay the entire cost of administering the state railroad commission oil and gas laws, highway common carrier laws, pipeline laws, public utility laws and railroad rate regulation laws."

This speaker asked the enactment of the law to force a 40 per cent reduction in gasoline retail rates and thus bring the independent interior oil producer 40 per cent nearer his market.

And immediately following him, other independents—he said he is an independent oil man—said the proposed law would completely stifle Texas production. Texas pipeline development, said kill off most of the remaining independent men.

From such divergent views, a committee had to decide whether to approve the proposed law.

Four of the five women lawmakers have commended the program of child welfare legislation sponsored by William Strauss, Houston philanthropist, who was Gov. Sterling's campaign manager.

The bills seek to take neglected or deserted or orphan children out of the bleak walls of "orphan asylums" and place them under the devoted care, and in the sunshine of the affection of foster parents. They seek, where possible, to build up legal means to keep them at home where there is a mother, and to put the arm of laws, so far as possible, as a protecting shield around the innocent child born out of wedlock.

"We've thought about cattle and sheep, while we have neglected our children," Mrs. Lee J. Roundtree of Bryan said. "Adoptions should be facilitated and closely supervised."

"For two years," Sen. Margie Neal said, "I have been interested in child welfare, with particular interest in crippled children. A bill I now have seeks to make a survey to see what can be done for crippled children."

Miss Neal recently looked in upon a free clinic for crippled children at Haverhill Austin, conducted by public-spirited doctors and hospital authorities. She meant to stay a few minutes but she spent an entire forenoon at the hospital, and went back for the afternoon clinic.

Mrs. N. R. Strone commended the creation of a child welfare bureau in the state board of control, proposed in one of the group of bills.

Mrs. Helen Moore, Galveston chairman of the house committee on eleemosynary institutions, declared she is in favor of child welfare and of the principle of the legislative program; but she is not, she said, in sympathy with the proposed method of supervision as set up in a bureau of the board of control.

The child welfare program is supported by an unofficial committee of which Mr. Strauss is chairman, and by the American Legion, the Parent-Teachers association and the Federation of Women's clubs.

GIRL GRANGE HEAD NORTH HAVERHILL, N. H., March 10.—Though only 16, Katharine Applebee has been chosen master of Pink Granite Grange. The girl, a sophomore at Haverhill Academy, is believed the youngest head of such a lodge in New-England.

Open Letter to Bread Buyers

Our quality is far above the average as any traveling man or persons visiting other localities will testify.

Very few towns in the country, the size of Cisco have equipment anything near the equivalent of ours.

We are all property owners and taxpayers in the community. We are all members of the local "Chamber of Commerce" and are contributors to that organization. We also are members of the various lodges, churches and clubs.

Unfortunately some of our local grocery stores are shipping in out of town bread which they are retailing at low the cost of production and delivery as an advertisement purpose, thereby making it impossible for the local baker to remain in business.

We do not know exactly the amounts contributed by others but we do not believe that there are any two men in Eastland County who have fed or helped more hungry people in the last two years than the two local bakeries.

Fifteen families, today are dependent on the local bakeries for support. Remove this support and the majority of these families would in all probability be obliged to leave town.

We and those dependent on us circulate thousands of dollars annually among Cisco business men. Our gas bills alone amount to about $2,000 annually and our gas bills are almost unbelievable. We are paying approximately $1,500 in Taxes each year which we cannot continue to pay unless we can hold the bread business of the county.

The older merchants realize this and are remaining loyally with us in spite of large inducements thrown out to bait, and we wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation and also to thank you good citizens who have so steadfastly supported home enterprises.

Mrs. Housewife, you probably are saving a few cents today, but have you ever stopped to consider what it might mean to you if we were forced to close our doors? We are among the largest consumers of electricity and gas in the community. Without our support, and those dependent on us, these companies might feel the need of dropping another man from their payroll. Would you want that man to be your husband? Or perhaps a garage man or filling station would have to reduce their overhead. Would you like to lose your bread winner there? Or it might be the loss of a business from our dependents would effect some grocer or dry goods firm. Would you like to see your wage earner lose his job there?

Money spent for out of town products goes out of town and does not return. They buy their supplies there and pay their taxes there. Perhaps you do not derive any direct benefit from your local bakery but we, at least, support your road and school bonds and help keep your taxes down.

Every man in the community is dependent, to a certain extent, upon his fellow man. We are all dependent upon each other. Perhaps you save a penny today but don't let the nickel before your eyes hide the dollar in the distance.

If I buy out of town, and you buy out of town, What will become of our town?
