Relief From Heat Is Afforded Sections of Texas

MERCURY SAYS 100 AT 1:30 HERE TODAY

DALLAS, July 3.—Showers that cooled parts of sweltering Texas yesterday as mercury columns soared to record levels in other sections were due to continue today according to forecasts of the United States weather bureau here.

Clouds hid the sun from north and west portions of west Texas where light rains were due by sun-down.

This city saw temperatures reach the century mark for the first time this season yesterday, while the same heat wave set a record of 101 degrees at Fort Worth, 104 at Texarkana, 99 at Abilene and 96 at Houston. Waco's maximum of 104 degrees was 1 point below the July record of 40 years ago.

MERCURY AT 100

Cisco sweltered in real Fourth of July weather today on the eve of the national holiday. At 1:30 p. m. the thermometer touched an even 100, making it one of the hottest days of a period of soaring mercury which compares with summer heat waves of any previous year.

FORT WORTH FISHERMAN LIKES LAKE

"Lake Cisco is the prettiest water, particularly for fly-fishing that I have ever seen," said W. L. (Bill) Freely, of Fort Worth, a devoted disciple of Isaac Walton who is here on his fourth fishing trip this season. "If anything it is too clear," he said.

Mr. Freely arrived Wednesday to spend several days luring bass and crappie. His catch yesterday totaled five bass and "nine brush", he reported. He has had excellent "luck" on partially every trip to Cisco.

Fort Worth fisherman find "Lake Cisco an attractive spot," he said. Many of them are planning to come here tomorrow for the Fourth.

Post Office Not to Open Saturday

The Cisco post office, general city and rural delivery, will not be open tomorrow in observance of the national independent day. Outgoing mails will be dispatched as usual, however. Postmaster Blankenbender announced.

"FORT WORTH" READY TO TAKE AIR AT DAWN

SEATTLE, July 3.—Tomorrow means another Fourth of July to most people but to Reginald Robbins and H. S. Jones it may mean the most eventful day of their lives—the day of which they started their non-stop refueling flight to Japan.

If all goes well, if weather forecasts are favorable and the trim "Fort Worth" is given approval by mechanics and all is in readiness for the refueling contacts in Alaska, Robbins and Jones will take off at dawn.

Most of the journey will be made overland, the only important water stop being over the Bering sea between Nome, Alaska, and the Kamchatka peninsula.

Several pilots have essayed this flight, some have started but none succeeded. Robbins and Jones, realizing that a load of gasoline sufficient for the 4,600-mile flight would be too heavy, planned to refuel in the air over Fairbanks and Nome. This takes them several miles off the great circle route and their trip will exceed 5,000 miles.

When they reach Nome, nearly one-half of their trip will have been completed.

They will have no radio and no subsistence supplies. A carton of specially packed naval stores, consisting of sandwiches, fried chicken, tea and chocolate, will provide their food.

Flyers' Families Receive the News of Their Landing in their Los Angeles home listening to him talk via radio. Left to right are: Lindsay, 5; Alan, 5 and Mrs. Gatty with Ronald, 2, on her knee.

WEEK-END IS GIVEN FLIERS FOR LEISURE

NEW YORK, July 3.—The 48 hours of solid rest and Wiley Post and Harold Gatty so long have promised themselves, seemed at hand today after one of New York's most tumultuous receptions to returning heroes.

The around-the-world fliers rose today with the pleasant thought that at least until Monday all official receptions were behind them and that their time is virtually their own over the holidays.

Only one official appointment was on their schedule before they leave for Stamford, Conn., to board the Saelmo yacht of William H. Fodd, shipbuilder, for a three day cruise of Long Island sound.

Post and Gatty were honor guests last night at a banquet given for them by the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft corporation, the Detroit Aircraft company and F. C. Hall, wealthy Oklahoma oil operator who backed the flight.

Unfavorable Weather Delays Lebrix Hop

PARIS, July 3.—Joseph Lebrix, French distance flier, said today his start for Tokio was being delayed by unfavorable weather conditions and he was unlikely to take off this week.

Lebrix, who had announced he was out to fly around the world in four stages, changed his mind today. He said he had no intention of trying to better the Post-Gatty record but would seek only the world's straightline distance record in the direction of Tokio.

SURVEY BEGUN
HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 3.—Work preliminary to making a tonnage survey of the Sandusky-Portsmouth route for the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio river canal has been started in the Huntington district. Engineers will begin work at each end of the proposed route and work toward the middle.

Two younger children who also drank the milk, were given a chance to survive today. Other members of the Jackson family, who did not drink the milk, and no autopsies were made on the bodies of the three victims.

Barbecue pits, supplied with wood, have been erected upon which meals may be conveniently cooked. Running water and sewerage have been provided. Swings and playground equipment offer amusement for youngsters.

This park is adjacent to the swimming pool and within easy walking distance of the other forms of amusement such as fishing and boating, golfing and sight-seeing.

Large crowds of visitors from over this section are expected to be in Cisco for the day and the improvements at the Lake have been hastened in order to accommodate these visitors.

"America's Prettiest" at Home

Girls would never suspect it, but America's most beautiful young woman makes her own dresses. Here you see Anne Lee Patterson, whose shapely curves classic features and titian-tinted hair won her the title of "Miss United States" at the Galveston beauty contest seated at the sewing machine in her Ludlow, Ky., home.

SMALL TOWN GAINS FAME BY DIVORCES

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., July 3.—Not only has St. Clairsville gained a reputation for coal mine strikes but it also is beginning to gain fame as a divorce center.

The situation hasn't quite reached the proportions of Reno's "mill" but for its population of some 2,240 nearly 1,000 couples decided to end their marital state last year.

While St. Clairsville is a "parting of the ways" center, Wellsburg, W. Va., 30 miles up the river, is the center of marriage "traffic" of the two states. Wellsburg has a population of 5,000 and boasts of 5,000 marriages last year.

Meanwhile the traffic brings "big business" to the two towns. Hotels, road houses, gasoline stations, midge golf courses, restaurants, ministers taxi cab drivers, bell hops and the two counties are "cleaning up."

The only requirements for a marriage in Wellsburg call for being 21 years old and single. Citizens of the town have the process well organized. Two taxi cab drivers will meet a couple at the train, see that a marriage license is procured, find a minister and take husband and wife back in the train there for a flat rate of $10. Parents have shortened the marriage vows for "hurry-up" marriages and charge a flat fee of $5.

"Extreme Cruelty"

Here 30 days in Belmont county constitutes "time for residence" in order to obtain a divorce. "Extreme cruelty" is stretched to the extreme and three minutes in court with a $50 fee brings a divorce, provided, of course, that the case is uncontested. Then it may take a day or two.

It is estimated that during the past year the marriage carvan spent $40,000 to have wedding bells ring up the river, and $100,000 to muffle them here.

PARENTAL INDIFFERENCE IS BLAMED

"A lot of children are going to the devil over the indifference of their parents," Rev. H. D. Tucker declared last night in preaching at the tabernacle revival in East Cisco.

Large crowds are attending the service. The Rev. Mr. Tucker will speak tonight at 8:15 from the subject, "Losing and Finding Jesus." A. B. Armstrong will lead the song service.

The subject of last night's message was "The Revival We Need". Among other things the speaker said, "We need a revival of religion all over this country. We need a revival of old time Holy Ghost religion where people will straighten up their crooked lives and give their loyalty to the church and where sinners will be converted."

"A lot of folks have their names on the church rolls today and their lives will not bear out the fact that they are Christians," the Rev. Mr. Tucker said. "A lot of children today are going to the devil because their parents haven't enough religion to join the church where they live," he said.

"The devil gets into the cracks between our denominations when we get to fighting each other," Mr. Tucker declared "A person ought to be in the church where they can do the best work" he said.

"Salvation is a personal matter and everyone must stand in the judgment for himself," the speaker said at the close of his message.

No day service will be held Saturday but Mr. Tucker will preach Saturday night. The services will continue all next week.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

RETURN TO THE LORD:—Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.—Isaiah 55: 7.

HIGH GAS TAXES.

Gasoline taxes keep on climbing. It was considered a daring and questionable innovation when states began cautiously imposing a tax of one or two cents a gallon. Year by year more states have fallen into line, and year by year the tax rate rises. The present top is reached in Florida, whose state senate recently voted for a gasoline tax of eight cents a gallon.

This has been an easy way for states to raise money—too easy, in fact. Collected in small sums retail sales, it has seldom been felt much at one time by the consumer. Taxpayers have been all the more docile because while the tax rate has been rising, the basic gasoline cost has been falling, so that on the whole there has been no net increase these last few years.

It is possible, however, to go too far in such a matter. If motorists do not rebel openly, decreased sales caused by thrift may make the exorbitant increases profitless to the states imposing them. And the oil and motor industries may suffer.

AUGUST 22 DATE FOR MOTOR TRUCK LAWS.

Three stringent laws known as motor truck regulatory statutes were enacted by the 42nd legislature. It was the battle of the session. Now the court of criminal appeals of Texas has decided the truck bills are not in immediate effect and will not become effective until 90 days after date of final adjournment of the legislature which will be Aug. 22. Lawmakers enact; courts interpret. Now the highway trucksters will be given time "to place their house in order."

TWO-GUN MEN AND KILLERS SCORCHED.

Governor William H. Murray of Oklahoma was an early dweller in the old Indian territory. "Them was hot days." Governor Murray has ever had the courage of his conviction. He never ran up the white feather. He never displayed the yellow badge of cowardice in the field of politics or elsewhere. His latest is, "two-gun men and killers cannot enforce the law in Oklahoma." He criticized the procedure of the murder trial at Ardmore and said the state should have had a change of venue. Moreover he said he might ask the next legislature to amend laws to permit the state as well as the defense to seek a change of venue.

Why shouldn't the state of Oklahoma have the right to seek a change of venue if local conditions call for a change? Governor Murray's final blast made first page reading: "There is too much of a desire to parade, to follow the two-gun style of keeping the law. It is in the air. It is in the movies. You can't enforce the law with two-gun men and killers." To quote from the vocabulary of the man in the street the chief executive of Oklahoma "said a mouthful." When it comes to stirring up political snakes this pioneer of old Indian territory days and life is the king ace of all political leaders in the great southwest.

BAYLOR TRUSTEES DEFER ELECTION.

Trustees of Baylor university did not elect a successor to Samuel Palmer Brooks June 26. They voted to defer action until September. Board members are said to have expressed the fullest confidence in the present temporary organization of the university under the leadership of Dr. W. S. Allen, acting president. President W. B. Bizzell of the Oklahoma state university is said to be in the running. Many champions of Former Governor Pat Morris Neff predict his election in September.

Dr. Bizzell is a native Texan. He won his spurs as an educator and college executive in Texas. He has won additional laurels as president of the Oklahoma university. However, it is said that Bizzell and Governor Murray have declared a truce and are dwelling together as harmoniously as two turtle doves. President Bizzell stepped down and out of the A. & M. college when the Fergusons came in the last time. He had the Oklahoma offer and it was a very tempting one. Governor Bill's bark is said to be worse than his bite and he has quit barking at the heads of the educational institutions of the Sooner state.

NO TYPICAL AMERICAN.

An English student, doing research work at Yale under the Commonwealth Fund, has been hunting for the typical American. In spite of the fact that a popular magazine found a "typical American family" not long ago, the English investigator says this is a myth. There is no typical American. Our communities, the countryside in various parts of the country and the people there are all as different as they would be if they were of quite different nations.

This opinion may be reassuring to Americans who had begun to fear we were hopelessly standardized, all reading the same books and magazines, all wearing the same kind of clothes, all using the same nationally advertised goods and attending the same movie, all playing the same bridge and midget golf. As a matter of fact, says the foreign observer, one has but to compare New Englander and California, the eastern industrial worker and the farmer of the wheat belt, the northern city man with the southerner, to see that the differences really are greater than the likenesses.

Here's hoping the Englishman is right. It would be pretty monotonous and a little moronic to have us all alike.

MORE SPEED IN AIR.

Captain Frank Hawks, the world's swiftest aviator, in his book, "Speed," predicts airplanes travelling more than Let's Hope the Iceman Isn't Kept Waiting Too Long!

200 miles an hour and connecting New York and the Pacific Coast in a regular overnight service. Mail might leave New York in the evening after the close of the business day and be delivered on the coast in the morning. Eventually passenger service might follow a similar schedule.

One doesn't need to elaborate on what this would mean to business. In time there would be speedy connections by the fastest planes between all the large cities. Then Hawks adds:

"If you won't think I'm speed-crazy, I'll confess that this 200-mile figure is just a beginning; that here is where practical cruising speeds for commercial purposes begin, and that the development of planes and motors will bring faster and ever faster rates of travel."

Probably the man's not speed-crazy at all. In the light of past developments, his predictions seem fairly reasonable. There are certain uses for such speed, and the air is the place to achieve it.

We seem to gather from some of Prof. Einstein's latest observations that his theory is only relatively relative.

They'll be telling us next that it wouldn't do for Europe to disarm, because it would increase unemployment.

OTHER OPINIONS

SERVANTS OF THE LAW.

"The law is designed, not to make fees for officers, but to make difficult the servants of the people."

In a brief sentence the attorney general has effectively reproved a public official more anxious about the stipend of office than its service, and has aptly characterized the intent of the fee system as realized in practice. All objections to that system can be summarized under two heads—the high cost to the victim and the fact that the beneficiaries lose sight of their obligation to serve.

In the case in which Mr. Alfred pointed out the illegal action of a justice of the peace, both objections crop out. Justice Griffith defends charging of illegal fees on the two grounds of expediency and custom, neither of which is a good argument for a court of law. He insists that constables can not make a living without charging the fees that Mr. Alfred holds illegal and the practice is statewide.

The incident adds force to argument against any fee system. So long as that exists, fee receivers will exact the last legal penny under its dispensation and on occasion will twist the permission of law to illegal ends. The fee system has not succeeded in attracting to office a sufficiently high class of persons to justify its existence.

The attorney general is to be commended for his firm stand for the legal rights of those who run afoul of the justice courts. The sooner the law respects itself, the wider will be general respect for law. It is only regrettable that the state should find it necessary to remind subordinate officials of their duty.—Dallas News.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Col. Cornelius T. Herring passed out of the picture at his home in Amarillo. He was one of the famous builders and bankers and ranchers of the Wichita country and the Panhandle. He was 81, he was a native Texan, he spent his entire life in Texas, he boasted of the fact that he had never worked a day for wages, although he was thrown on his own resources at the age of 13. He is one of the earliest growers of wheat in the state. He invaded the cattle business. He branched in many Texas counties and in old Greer county now a part of Oklahoma. He established banks in many of the growing cities. He moved from Vernon to Amarillo in 1903. He was one of the big bankers in this section. He built two old, costly hotels of Amarillo. He was the first president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, he had served as president of the Tri-State Fair association, he was a close friend of the late Col. Charles Goodnight, he witnessed the growth of a cattle territory from a wilderness to one of the richest sections of Texas and at the time of his death he was said to be worth more than $10,000,000. For years and years he attended all the pioneers' conventions, the cattle raisers' conventions, the political conventions, the bankers' convention, the builders' conventions, and his words of wisdom enriched the minds of many.

Is bleeding Kansas dry? The small army of prohibition agents raided speakeasies in two counties, captured 12 men and eight women, seized 237 gallons of contraband liquor, 400 bottles of home brew, 125-gallon still and a Ford car in which 50 gallons of liquor was found. And they say that Kansas is as dry as the Sahara from Thursday. The ignoble use of a Ford car dedicated to a carry-all for the liquid classified by the early prohibitionists as "Hell's brew."

New Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform would discuss the membership of one million. It has resolved that it will support in the 1932 major political party conventions only candidates who favor an excise tax on legalized light wines and beers. Their leaders declared this tax would raise $500,000,000 annually now paid to bootleggers. Cyrus K. Curtis, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post and the owner of other periodicals as well as daily newspapers, has moved over to the right side of the issue. He is a long-headed and very rich Yankee and he has voted prohibition a failure.

Chmn. George W. Wickersham's committee is out of business. It will be recalled that the congress appropriated $500,000 to defray the expense of the work of the committee. There remain $20,000 in the Wickersham box. Its first report staggered the nation. Voting as a committee, Wickersham and his associates declared that prohibition had not been given a fair trial, voting as individuals several declared the prohibition a failure. Regardless of all this prohibition will be a hot side issue next year.

Alphonse Capone financially is a bankrupt, physically a wreck, and late in July he will be given his sentence by a Federal Judge for a long stay behind the bars at Leavenworth. Capone has been the best advertised man in America. More fiction has been written around him than any man has ever won in the upper of the underworld in the same space of time.

Experts Make Own Quakers

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 3. — Harvard seismologists are "manufacturing" earthquakes in an investigation of the foundation on which continents rest.

Made by a small charge of dynamite, the shocks used in these experiments move the ground so little that instruments which magnify a disturbance 12,000 times are needed to record them. For years seismologists have studied the velocity with which waves caused by earthquakes travel through and around the earth. From these studies they have learned the rock which forms ocean basins is different from that which composes continents, for the most part.

There is evidence that beneath a veneer of sedimentary rocks continental foundations are chiefly relatively light masses are essentially "floating" in a dense, solid, crystalline basalt which forms ocean basins and surrounds the earth as a continuous shell, according to Harvard authorities.

Gold Pans Back as Store Stock

BUTTE, Mont., July 3. — Gold pans for sale! For the first time in 40 years newspapers here are carrying advertisements of hardware stores that gold panning pans have been stocked.

Thus Montana revives her oldest and most romantic industry—placer mining. And the boys are talking to the hills.

It sounds funny — hundreds of men drifting into the hills along streams, over the old trails along which the frontier forged. A good living can be made panning the precious metal from old stream beds. Too there's always the chance to make a lucky strike, a bonanza.

Ghost towns are showing signs of life. An occasional prospector from one of them is seen in town, a little bottle, or bag of gold dust, giving token of his industry. Others return to the hills with him.

Always men seek gold, more so in times of depression. For as iron and food and other indispensables go down in value, gold goes up, its price a standard, being fixed by international agreement.

HOT WAX IS USED TO LIFT WHALE'S FACE

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 3.—Your whale, Hayward, needs its face lifted. It is sagging badly. You can imagine being faced with the problem of the oceanic whale 1,500 miles from the ocean. Ralph Hayward faced and met the predicament during a tour of the east coast of one of California's biggest projects.

For eight months, and over 30,000 miles of railroad track Hayward scoured and pampered his pet whale, to be sure, but nevertheless a constant need of care.

"The problem we faced when we decided to exhibit the whale was will it keep?" said Hayward.

Embalming Used

"We called in a professional embalmer and, like Jonah, he entered the whale interior, removed a 1,000 gallons of blood, and then pumped 1,000 gallons of embalming fluid into it.

"After a few weeks, our leading lady began to shrink. Her carefree, open countenance sagged disconsolately. We called in some experts, and they said face-lifting would restore her beauty.

"Go ahead and face-lift," we said. So they shot the carcass full of paraffin. They climbed all over shooting in the hot wax, just as though they were building up a boxer's nose.

"You never saw such a resurrection. The whale returned to life, plumping and fat."

Cities Skeptical

Some of the cities, Hayward added, were skeptical about letting them exhibit. Chicago was the worst, he continued but in Cleveland he executed a contract with the city making it a partner in a deal which allowed the use of a city-owned track in the public square.

Later, Hayward said he sold the whale to Cleveland and Col. H. J. Taveltree, commissioner of the public auditorium, put it on "permanent" exhibition.

Strange to say, the best business was not in inland cities. "We did a tremendous business on the New England coast, birthplace of the whaling industry. Old whalers came for miles to see a whale on a railroad car," he added.

TEXAS TOPICS

AUSTIN, July 3. — Whatever the success of Cong. Wright Patman of Cass county in his purpose of filing impeachment charges against Secy. Andrew W. Mellon for ownership of interest in steamship lines, the Patman district sooner or later is to have the proffer of the services of Sen. Tom DeBerry of Red River county or Dr. J. W. E. H. Beck senator from Bowie county, in the congressional post.

This is subject to possible re-districting that would oust DeBerry from this into another congressional district.

Dr. Beck probably will reoffer for the state senate next year. Whether DeBerry will ask re-election to the senate or make the congressional flight then, remains to be seen. Four-year senate terms of both men expire next year.

It is now a little less than 11 months until the die will have been cast for what Texas will do toward the selection of the next president of the United States.

And the feeling is strong in Texas that this state will play again the decisive part that was its glory in naming Woodrow Wilson to turn the tide in favor of the next man who shall occupy the White House.

Starting with the overwhelming majority of personal support for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt voluntarily recorded by members of the house and senate and with the organization of the first Roosevelt club at El Paso, there will be a tremendous demand for a straight-out Roosevelt delegation pledged to vote for his nomination on the first and every other ballot. This is one main trend. Others who are convinced Gov. Roosevelt is the outstanding democratic leader capable of victory over the disheveled republicans, believe that instruction of delegates should not be stressed, but that either a free delegation be chosen, harmonizing all elements of state democracy so far as possible, or that nominal instruction be given to a favorite son or Will Rogers or somebody to keep the pre-convention rows quiet.

The making of a president is now actively under way. One who waits until the convention meets to develop an interest in the intense campaign will then see only the fruition of the decisive things already being done about him. The state presidential convention and the national convention will after all simply parade out the things and crown the nominees that have been made in the constructive work already done—now being formulated and started.

MORAN WILL HAVE TRADES DAY JULY 4TH

MORAN, July 3. — Instead of closing up, as usual, and letting neighboring towns do the entertaining on July the Fourth Moran has decided to do a little entertaining on that day. A program has been planned for Trades Day, which comes on July 4th, Saturday of this week; and will be of interest to every body. Two ball games are being matched, and it is hoped that a game can be had in the morning as well as in the afternoon.

One of the most interesting features of the last Trades Day, held on June 6th, was the hog calling contest. Next Saturday a "Cow Calling" contest will be held. Several old time cowboys have agreed to enter the contest. It is expected that some ten or twelve will enter. A nice present has been arranged for the winner of this event. Another im-

Shriners to Meet in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, July 3. — Cleveland is prepared to play host July 12 to the largest delegation of visitors that ever visited here.

Numerous hand-clapping committees, flag bedecked streets and a gala program of social events will greet the visitors when they arrive for the 57th annual convention of the Imperial Council, Ancient Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

According to George W. Isaacs, executive secretary, 100,000 visitors are expected during the five-day meeting. Reservations already indicate that number, representing both Shriners and their families.

By train, steamer, motor car and bus, the delegates will pour in from all parts of the country and Canada. The Chicago delegation from Medinah Temple, arriving here by steamer, will be greeted from the air by a committee which will board the steamer from an amphibian plane.

Public events charter a prominent section of the convention program. On the nights of July 14 and 16, a mammoth spectacle entitled "A Night in the Orient" will be presented in the new $3,000,000 municipal stadium.

On the opening day a public vest-pocket service will be held in the stadium, which seats 100,000 persons. Musical programs will be presented by visiting bands.

MODERN MAGIC FOR GUESTS OF NEW WALDORF

By H. ALLEN SMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, July 3. — A waterproof roof garden, talking pictures at the wave of a hand, potatoes that practically peel themselves and a telephone-typewriter system that will make many guests feel that the place is haunted, are among the unique contrivances being installed in the new Waldorf-Astoria hotel, nearing completion on Park avenue.

Modern science has been called upon for every available gadget that might serve to facilitate matters in the hotel, which will be opened this fall.

The roof garden will be completely open to the sky yet it is a firm structure of the least little drop of rain waters on the expensive sunbathers, an attendant will simply press a button and an electrically controlled roof will slide over the place.

The telephone-typewriter system will furnish lots of fun for elevator pilots, bell boys, floor clerks and chambermaids.

Cable Arrives
Suppose Caleb Clawhammer of Indianapolis walks in and registers. The clerk assigns the room and hands the card to a man at his elbow. This second man sits down and types it. By the time his fingers leave the keyboard, everybody in the place knows that Caleb has arrived.

Caleb turns around and walks ten steps. The bell boy, baggage in hand, smiles and says: "Right this way, Mr. Clawhammer!" The elevator pilot says: "Good morning, Mr. Clawhammer!" And he knows what time Caleb is headed for without being told. And the floor clerk is already acquainted with Caleb's pedigree long before he steps out of the elevator.

The system works just as ingeniously in reverse. Caleb is asked what time he expects to check out. Suppose he says 11 o'clock. His heels are no more than out of the door when the army of housekeepers and chambermaids sweep in behind him with fresh linen and brooms.

A guest at the hotel, who wants to see a talkie and doesn't want to stand in line on Broadway, simply telephones downstairs and says: "I want to see Charlie Chaplin" or "I want to see Creta Garbo in her latest."

Within a few minutes an attendant wheels in a little wagon hangs a screen on the wall and presses a button. The requested picture, with sound, goes into action.

Radio Loudspeakers
Radio loudspeakers will be arranged so that the guest may plug in on several different broadcasts. In addition to the seven holes for radio there will be three or four extra ones from which the guest may receive orchestra or speaking programs going on in the hotel.

Underneath the building will be a spur track running up from the Grand Central Terminal for the convenience of millionaires who do not feel like walking the six blocks from the station to the hotel. A millionaire with a private car in Dubuque can simply tell the railroad to send him to the Waldorf and then go to sleep. When he wakes up all he has to do is step out of his car, take four steps across a platform and into an elevator. The next moment he is in the lobby.

The equipment for the hotel's 150 kitchens hasn't been figured out in full detail as yet, but one device already decided upon is a potato-peeling contraption which starts to work when you throw a spud at it.

Carved Window Sill in University Collection Recalls O. Henry Courtship

AUSTIN, July 3. — Even as he stretched with his pen knife on the window sill, carving out the name, "Athol," a rubbing of that carved window sill is one of the prominent items in a display of O. Henryviana which is exhibited for summer while he was waiting for her in the library of the University of Texas. The rubbing belongs to S. E. Gideon, University associate professor of architecture and collector of O.

Henry documents and relics. Mr. Gideon said that for thirty or forty years, Miss Smith was the only person who knew of the existence of the carved name on her window sill.

A cartoon, a rubbing from an original O. Henry sketch owned by Harvey Harrell of Austin, is also shown from Mr. Gideon's collection. The sketch shows Judge Terrell running to catch the train for the Chicago convention. Also among the Gideon articles is a concert program which lists O. Henry (W. Sidney Porter) as a member of the quartet.

A valentine which O. Henry made for his little daughter Margaret to send to a playmate, Arthur Stantz composed of a tale, "The Sad Story of Mr. Rantz," and a cartoon illustrating the point of the story is shown. It was loaned for the exhibit by Mr. Rantz, now a resident of Creedmers, who also loaned the library a letter which Margaret Porter wrote to him from Pittsburgh March 29, 1900, while she was awaiting her father's release from prison.

Other items in the display are several county maps Porter made while he was employed in the General Land Office. One is of Jeff Davis county, made in June, 1887, one of Webb county, made in June, 1888, and a third is of Kent county, made in July, 1889. These were the property of C. M. Bartholomew of Austin.

A letter from Porter to Miss Estes, asking her to go driving with him, and a tintype picture of her complete the display.

The display is particularly timely since summer school students were recently taken on a tour of Austin to visit landmarks made notable by virtue of their connection with O. Henry. These included the Old Land Office, where he worked from converted into a museum; the old Travis County jail, which housed him for a short time before his incarceration in prison; the Porter home, churches where he sang and attended church; several homes where the author was a constant visitor, and the State Cemetery, where he is buried.

ZOO IDENTIFIES BITTERN

LAKEWOOD, O., July 3. — An American bittern, a species of the heron family, was a bird of mystery to Lakewood residents until it was caught and identified at Brookside Zoo. The bird, with a three-inch beak and a wing spread of more than a foot, was seen wandering about the shore of Lake Erie for weeks before it was finally captured. The species is rarely found in this part of the country.

BIZZARDS REVEAL STILL

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 3. — Arizona officials are considering deputizing thousands of buzzards to aid them in locating bootleggers and makers of liquor. Cherriff J. R. McFadden, observing a flock of buzzards circling a field where he knew there were no animals, investigated and found a 50-gallon copper still, a quantity of liquor and much. The mash had aroused the interest of the buzzards.

Madrid to Have New Daily Paper

MADRID, July 3. — Madrid, which already has 15 daily newspapers, is scheduled to have another one soon. "Crisol"—"Crucible," at present a tri-weekly, is scheduled to appear as a daily morning paper.

Crisol was started by Don Nicolas Maria Urgoiti, founder of El Sol and La Voz, who was forced out of control of these newspapers shortly before the advent of the republic, by a group which wanted to convert them into monarchical papers. Within a few days after the sale was consummated, the Republic was proclaimed, and the papers are quite republican in everything except ownership.

The director of Crisol is Don Felix Lorenzo, who was director of El Sol until Urgoiti lost control. The staff of the new paper is largely, if not quite entirely, comprised of former members of El Sol and La Voz.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL MCELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, lives in a cramped New York apartment with her mother, Cass Barrett, a rather faded actress. At a hot night Liane goes to dinner with Molly Cronin, a neighbor, and two of Molly's friends. There is a shooting and the girl is held as a witness. She sends word to her mother who arrives and persuades Shane McDermid, the young policeman in charge, that Liane is innocent of wrongdoing. That night at the theater where Cass is playing Liane encounters a handsome stranger who speaks her name. A few days later Cass and Liane go to Willow Stream, L. I. where Cass has an engagement in a small summer theater sponsored by the wealthy Mrs. Cleecepaugh. Liane works in the box office, sharing society with Muriel Ladd, pretty society girl, Elsie Minter, ingenue, and introduces Liane to Clive Cleecepaugh, son of the theater patron. Shane McDermid comes to tell Liane the man wounded in the gun fight will recover.

At Muriel Ladd's home Liane again meets the handsome stranger who spoke to her in the theater. He is Van Robard and when Cass hears his name she makes Liane promise to have nothing more to do with him. Liane agrees with reluctance. Mrs. Cleecepaugh asks Cass to let Liane stay with her during the winter. Muriel leaves the theater one evening with Chuck Desmond, newspaper man, and Mrs. Ladd, believing the two have eloped, enlists Robard to find them. Van enlists Liane's aid. He makes love to Liane, but later the girl is crushed when Elsie tells her Robard is said to be Mrs. Ladd's lover.

Muriel telephones next morning from a New York hotel where she has spent the night discreetly. Liane tries to forget Van Robard. CHAPTER VIII
The visiting star that week was artist Blue, 35, blond, with eyes so deep a color they seemed almost the "violet eyes" of Victorian novels. He was of the matinee idol type and professed to hate it. He had a wife somewhere in Hollywood, a feverish, dark, young woman who was teaching the Mayfair accent to Queenie Whitebait, the comedy star.

"Isn't he a lamb?" asked Muriel the day of his arrival.
"He's rather nice. Mother played with him in 'Cabbages and Kings,'" Liane returned indifferently.
"You knew him before, then? Why, you sly piece!" And Muriel pretended to see something that was not there.

Blue came along, perfectly groomed in his dark gray coat and striped trousers, his beautifully curved soft gray hat. His bow was a miracle of precision. He stopped with a side glance for the luscious Miss Ladd in her apple green sequined shirt and shorts, her brown legs shapely and seductively bare. Liane performed introductions and Muriel cooed at him. "I enjoyed your performance so much." He looked as modest as possible.

"I thought you had threatened to break into the company this season," he said to Liane.
"You wretch," she pouted.
"When I asked your advice last winter you said not to go on the stage whatever else I did. You told me I was an awkward cub, that I needed to learn to talk and walk and smile properly. You told me I said 'gonna'."
"Well, so you did," he returned, flashing his justly famous smile at her. "But you've improved. You might learn who can tell?"

Liane threw out her hands in despair. "How is a poor girl to know what to do? First you say 'yes,' then you say 'no.' I'm bewildered."
"Oh, you'll marry within the year and settled down to have a flock of babies," Blue drawled. "Maybe it's the best way. I don't know."
"No, I shan't! How horrid of you!" she flamed. Muriel interposed, dulcet-smiled. "How about me, Mr. Blue? Would you say I had a chance?"

He favored her with an eye half insolent, half honestly appraising. "The chorus for you," he said with coyness. "You've the looks, the nerve. That is, if you can dance. It doesn't matter whether you sing or not and you can speak like a macaw for all they care."
Muriel pouted. "You're very flattering, I must say."
"Well, you asked me."
"So I did. Come along and have a cocktail with me to prove you didn't mean to hurt my feelings."
He glanced at his watch. "Five o'clock. How far is it? I've got to be back at the inn by six. Must have an early dinner or I'm all wrong for the evening performance."
Muriel said airily. "I'll drive like a streak. You need a pick-me-up with that grouch of yours."
He stared at her. He, the great Blue, being checked by a flapper! But she was so pretty, so saucy, he decided to forgive and forget. Besides, a spot of something would perk him up.

Liane watched them climb into the speedy roadster, half amused, half envious. No wonder Muriel always got her man! She certainly went after this one calmly enough. Liane wondered just how deep her feelings for the impetuous Chuck Desmond had bitten. Muriel was frightfully susceptible. She was the modern feminine version of the roving sailor. She had a boy in every port.

Even now, Liane did not like to think about that night she had hunted for Muriel with Van Robard. Was it true—what Elsie had said about him and Muriel's mother? She shuddered away from the thought. He seemed clean and fine and straightforward. But then, what did she really know about him? Nothing except that he had a few million dollars, played polo, and had been a soldier when she, Liane, had been in kindergarten. He must be 35. That seemed terrifically old to Liane. And why was her mother so bitter about him? How could she ever have known him? Was it some old scandal, some half-forgotten newspaper story, that her mother remembered?

Cass was really very straightforward, actually prim. She seemed always to be throwing guards about Liane, almost in the manner of the 80's. "Mother would like the chaperon era to return in full force," thought the young girl shrewdly. "But why, I wonder? She seems from the little she says to have had a gray, carefree time herself as a young girl. But then, as she always reminds me, she didn't grow up in New York."

Liane went down the aisle, through the now darkened theater. A workman was hammering away at a seat and the chief electrician, a tall, bold-looking young Dane, stopped to stare at her. She felt impelled to explain her presence there. "I'm looking for my mother," she said.
His smile angered her. "Ho, the mamma's girl!" he returned, silkily. "Always so polite, so correct. Vander what she is really like, this haughty one."

Liane tossed her head and started to pass. In her haste she did not notice the tangle of wires and she stumbled and would have fallen if the big man had not reached out and caught her in his arms.
"That man! His clothes smelled of pipe tobacco and wintergreen. Liane tried to free herself, a regain some of her lost dignity. Before she knew actually what was happening he had planted his big face next hers, had kissed her squarely on the mouth.
She screamed. "You—you awful creature!" She struck out at him wildly, her small fists flailing him. He was laughing, holding her tight. Oh, how she hated him! Now, she thought, she knew how murders felt. The lust for killing. She knew what it meant to see red.

"You let me go..." she was wailing, appalled to find that her strength availed her nothing against his rock-ribbed hardness. She tasted the salt of her own angry tears.
Suddenly a hurricane was upon them. The tall Dane went whirling.
"You—scum!" That was a familiar voice but whose?
A shabby young man in a striped suit dusted off his hands with a brusque gesture. The Dane picked himself up, felt of his jaw. "Was this—carrion—annoying you, my good girl?" inquired the newcomer, in his best Drury Lane manner.
Liane almost giggled. He made it seem funny. He took away from her the feeling that she was soiled, unclean, from this distasteful contact.

"He certainly was," she said soberly. "I've never spoken three words to him in all my life."
"Wot a nerve!" Chuck Desmond shot his cuffs and favored the vanquished one with a baleful stare. "He's the kind of bird who gets his picture on the front pages when a man-hunt is on," he said.
"See here, my good man," flipping his card in the direction of the furious electrician. "If ever I hear of you annoying the Duches again I'll have my three pet police captains on your neck with charges that won't sound pretty with the morning coffee."
Desmond stuck out his arm and Liane crooked her fingers over it gratefully. "I'll see you to your carriage," he told her.
"You were wonderful just now," Liane marveled as they walked down the road.
"Where's this here-now Miss Ladd gone and fluttered away to?" demanded Charles Desmond, sticking the inevitable cigaret between his lips and hunting in five separate pockets for the necessary instant match. "Here it's my day off and every-thing and I get on my bike and trail away out here to find her missing!"

Liane started to explain but thought better of it. "She—she went home," she finished lamely. But Chuck had been watching her expressive face.
"Got herself another boy friend?" he inquired.
"There was—somebody just dropped in," improvised Muriel's friend.
"Oh, yeah?" Desmond appeared doubtful. "Well, I can't waste the entire evening just because she changed her mind. How about you trotting off and having dinner with me? I can't eat alone. I'm funny that way. Been so since earliest childhood."
"Oh, dear, if mother only would let me," cried Liane childishly.
"Well, there's nothing like inquiring," Chuck said.

Liane introduced the pair and to her utter amazement Cass beamed on the young man.
"Wasn't your mother Grace Franks, who played Shakespearean roles long ago?" she inquired.
Charles said "yes" very solemnly.
"I thought so," Cass nodded.
"You run along, Liane, and change your dress while I talk to Mr.

SHACKELFORD FARM CENSUS SHOWS GROWTH

MCGRAW, July 3. — Census figures for Shackelford county issued by the department of commerce, give some interesting facts. Acres under cultivation, have doubled since 1920. Ten years ago the county had 253,849 acres in cultivation and in 1930 521,935. The number of farms have increased from 352 in 1920 to 462 in 1930. The average acre per farm has increased from 753.3 in 1920 to 1,129.8 in 1930, and the value of Shackelford county farming land increased during the ten years from $3,819,074 to $9,780,613.

A very enlightening fact is brought out about value differences during the ten year period. In 1920 the value per acre of Shackelford farms was $21.89; in 1930 an acre was valued at $18.76. This shows a drop of more than $3.00 per acre in the decade.

Farm building values have increased more in proportion than the increase of the number of acres under cultivation. In 1920 farm buildings were valued at $391,560; in 1930 $897,720.

In 1920 there were 174 farms operated by owners, and 172 tenants. In 1930 245 farmers operated their own farms, and 201 rented. The size of farms varied from 3 of five acres to 156 of 100 to 174 acres. There are 32 farms in the county of 1,000 acres or over.

Horses have decreased from 1,751 in 1920 to 1,547 in 1930, while mules have increased from 697 in 1920 to 835 in 1930.

The largest acreage is planted in hay, last year's census showing 1,447 acres. Oats came second, with 1,012 acres, and wheat third with 706 acres. These figures were taken from the 1929 planting. In 1919 wheat led in acreage with over 9,000 acres, and oats were second with more than 6,000 acres.

The cotton crop report was not included in this report.

STRIBLING IS FAVORITE IN TITLE BATTLE

CLEVELAND, O., July 3. — W. L. (Young) Stribling, one of the few heavyweight challengers in history to go into the ring a favorite, meets Max Schmeling, of Germany tonight in one of the strangest championship fights ever staged.

The men have not been weighed in officially.

Even if Stribling wins he cannot claim the championship in New York because the commission there does not recognize Schmeling as champion.

Schmeling, the first heavyweight to win the championship on a foul, will be fortunate if he fights at even money.

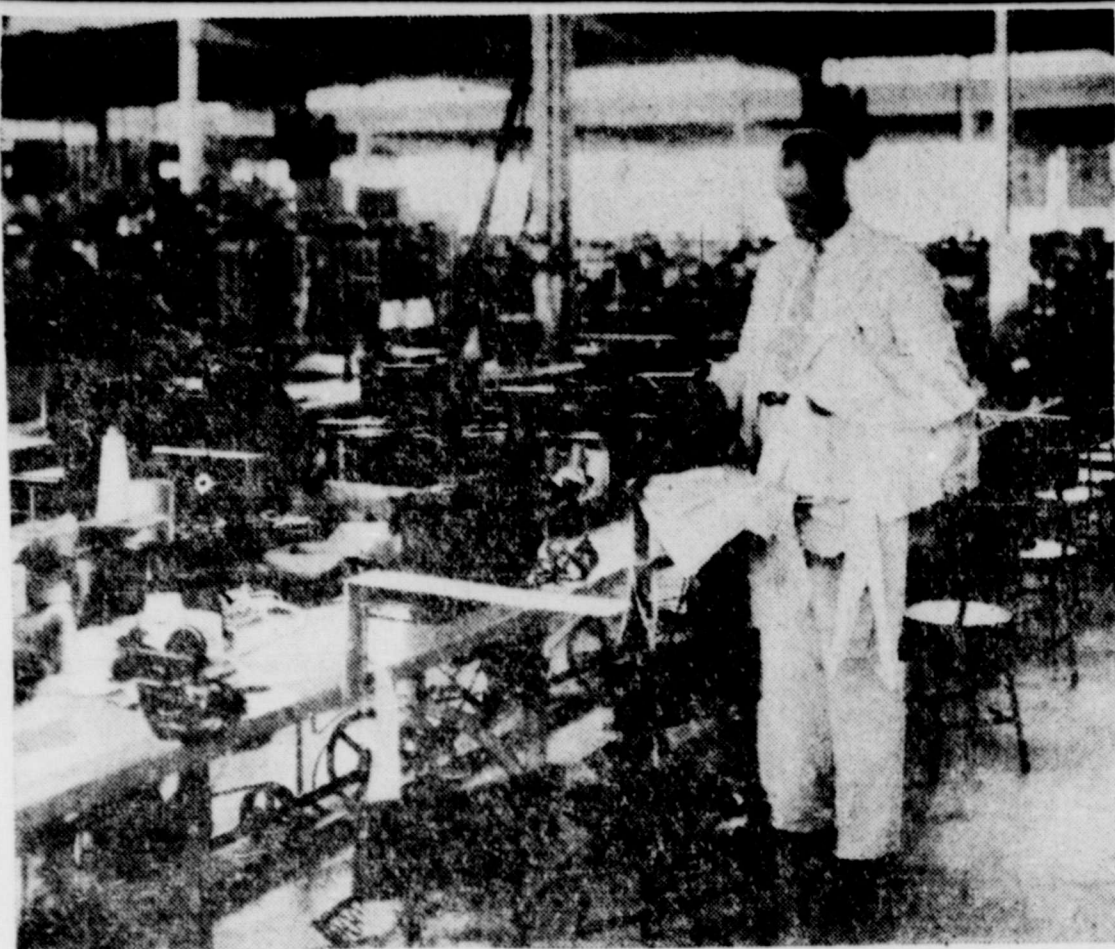

The rules under which the bout will be fought are still vague and a last minute conference of the boxing commission was called for this afternoon in an attempt to clarify them.

Less than 50,000 persons will see the 15-round bout in Cleveland's new $3,000,000 Lake Front stadium and the gross receipts will hardly reach $400,000.

Stribling, the challenger, continued to rule a favorite today at 10 to 9 and 6 to 5 with even money likely to prevail when the two fighters answer the gong between 8 and 9 15 p. m. C. S. T. Very little betting was in evidence.

Commissioner of Agriculture Joins 'All-Cotton Clads'; Urges Cotton Clothing Be Worn

Dallas, Texas, June 30. — Commissioner J. E. McDonald of the Texas Department of Agriculture, practicing what he preaches in the "use more cotton" campaign, is shown here among the machines of the Pool Manufacturing Company plant at Sherman, the Southwest's largest garment manufacturer, inspecting one of Pool's all-cotton ensembles for men. The Commissioner is, himself, clad in get-up similar to that made famous by Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray of Oklahoma, and Col. Bill Talbot, of Dallas, and Ex-Gov. Dan Moody, and other prominent Texans; coat, trousers, shirt, tie, sock, handkerchief, all-cotton. Doubtless the nether garments are cotton but nobody thought to ask the Commissioner about that. Belt and shoes are the only exception.

Commissioner McDonald's Sherman stop was "between" engagements at Cleburne Friday, where he spoke to the Texas Club on "Using More Cotton," and at Waxahatchie Saturday night, in a swing through the section urging wider use of cotton and other products of Texas farms and factories.

Every employee in his department at Austin wears cotton clothing, the Commissioner stated, and he is urging others to do the same.

He was a prime mover with a dozen other high state officials in sponsoring "cotton commencements" in public schools last spring, a movement expected to result in many schools adopting standard cotton regalia for future occasions.

"I am astonished at the size of the plan, and the volume and variety of the Pool products," Mr. McDonald said. "While I had known of the Pool Company as one of the major garment factories of the State, I had no idea of the immensity of the business or the number of people afforded employment."

"Texas people should demand Texas products," he added; "then scores of such plants, employing thousands of persons, would be consuming millions of bales of Texas cotton."

The Commissioner points out that in the past Texas has shipped out cotton at 10c a pound and bought it back in finished shirts at $3.00 a pound. "Let's buy Texas manufactured shirts," he exclaimed, "and keep that difference of $2.90 in Texas to be divided among Texas laboring men, farmers, merchants, and manufacturers."

BRIDGE WILL BE NAMED TO HONOR COLLIER

PUNTA GORDA, Fla., July 3. — The state of Florida will open tomorrow its new 6,500 foot draw-bridge, which will bear the name of Baron G. Collier, wealthy New York advertising man, in appreciation for his efforts in promoting the welfare of southwestern Florida.

Collier, in the last decade, has made an investment of over $25,000,000 in southern Florida, being one of the largest landholders in America in consequence. He is almost sole proprietor of Collier county, Florida. In addition to his land, he owns steamship and bus lines and about half a dozen large hotels in the principal west coast cities of the state.

The bridge, a $2,000,000 project across Charlotte Bay on the Tamiami Trail from Miami to Tampa, will be formally opened to traffic July 4, after more than a year of work.

The dedication ceremonies will last all day, closing with a brilliant display of fireworks. There will be boxing matches, a regatta on Charlotte Bay, a boy scout parade, and other athletic events. Collier pledged his financial support to the celebration, which is being supervised by several committees of Punta Gorda citizens. It is expected that the fireworks display will attract people from the entire state.

At the formal dedication, speeches will be made by Governor Carleton and other prominent national figures.

The bridge is the final link in the rejuvenated Tamiami Trail.

Quarterly communion will be observed at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock worship period. The Rev. B. C. Boney will preach the memorial message, and the choir will render special appropriate music. The new pipe organist, Mr. Stuart whose superb instrumental music has delighted hearers since he came to Cisco in May, will furnish as communion music an arrangement of his own. Mr. Stuart has started his Sunday evening programs of organ music at 8 o'clock, 15 minutes before the regular program begins, and early-comers are well repaid for being early. Mr. Boney will bring a request sermon, "Were Today the Last Day," at the evening hour.

League Contest Bulletins Prepared

AUSTIN, July 3. — Bulletins giving rules in various interscholastic League contests for 1931-32 are now in preparation in the University of Texas League Bureau office, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the Bureau. A new spelling list which will be used as a supplement to the state spelling text is now in the hands of the printers. About 170,000 copies of this pamphlet will be issued.

Resolved, that Lobbying as Generally Practiced in this Country is Unfitting to the Best Interests of the People" has been selected as the topic for the League debate for next year, and a bulletin containing rules for the contest, suggestions for development of arguments both pro and con, and tentative briefs for both affirmative and negative sides of the question is now in preparation.

The revised constitution and rules of the League will be issued about August 1, Mr. Bedichek said.

Desmond. There are so many things I want to ask him."

Will wonders never cease, thought Liane, as she hastily slipped into her one presentable frock.

Chuck Desmond was funny. He was nice, even though he wasn't the "Not Impossible He." She realized she would have a hard time squaring herself with Muriel if that young woman ever learned the truth.

"What are you thinking about?" inquired that irresponsible young man, Chuck Desmond.

Liane smiled faintly.

"Wondering if Muriel will mind my bagging her young man."

"So ho, then! I'm advertised as such." He pretended to be annoyed.

"You are." Liane dimpled at him. How simple it was to be easy and friendly with a man when you weren't in love with him.

Desmond surveyed her with interest. "You're pretty nice, easy on the eye. How come you haven't a permanent boy trailing you?"

She tossed her head, enjoying herself. "How do you know I haven't?"

"Sorry, I was just fishing."

Liane thought, "This is good practice for me. Maybe the next time I see Van Roubard, I won't be such a school-girlish idiot."

Her heart pounded at the thought, "Next time I see him."

For of course, she would. And soon!"
