dicates that fall is really here and winter must not be far away. Most | the people making that statement don't even own a hog but the first good cool norther always brings memories of a few years back.

the fall came almost every farm | family would build a fire under the wash pot and sharpen the butcher knives. It was time to kill the first fat hog. Soon there would be and cracklings. The hams were house for curing.

The weather also reminds us that it will soon be time to pick up pecans. The pecan crop on yard trees seem to be better than usual said that she as the best pecan crop this year that she has had in a long time. She has some Texhan pecans that are already falling. They are filled out very well.

short. The Texas crop is expected to be only about 45 percent of last year's crop. The national pecan crop will be only about one-third last year's crop. Hurricane Hilda may have reduced the estimates even more since Louisiana is a principal pecan state.

There are still several hundred acres of native pecan timber in Hamilton County that could be made productive and profitable if the trees were thinned and managed. If anyone in the county is interested in starting or continuing pecan management I will be glad to work with them. Late October and early November is a in the market for any second hand the closets early this week. On good time to evaluate pecan trees to determine which ones to leave
