Mother of 21 Is Now Living Near Town of Silverton

A family of 21 by a single mother—no second or third marriages whatever, with big families on each side already. Well, that's among the few things one doesn't see oftentimes nowadays, with auto, real estate and every imaginable type of solicitor, high taxes and high everything else on the right, the left, in front, behind, perchance above and doubtless below—every where, in fact!

But that's the truth—this mother of 21 proposition, right up near Silverton too, on a farm north of town belonging to one Will Woods. The mother is a Duroc Sow. And the offspring—yes, they're little pigs! All were alive when they discovered America on Mr. Woods' farm, but two have since died, reports state, while the family is such a large one that milk bottles have to be used to supplement the natural method of sustenance for infant piglets.

Texas Utilities Turns On The Juice Monday

The city of Muleshoe is now well lighted with electricity. The Texas Utilities Company turned on the juice Monday night. Practically every business house and as many of the homes as the boys could get to has the lights on. By the time this goes to press the street lights will be finished and turned on.

The Texas Utilities Company is one of the largest Electrical concerns in the World, and are noted for their wonderful service and splendid equipment. We will have 24 hour service, and just as good as any city. As soon, as the number of irrigation wells will justify electricity will be used for pumping water to irrigate the truck fields.

Who said Muleshoe wasn't a city of modern conveniences? Better come make your home in one of the fastest developing towns on the South Plains. That's Muleshoe.

Fake Tree Doctor Making West Texas

We have this day received a telegram from one of the largest Chambers of Commerce in West Texas advising that a certain party is going over West Texas representing himself as being a representative of a large concern in Dallas which makes a specialty of doctoring trees. Our information is that this party does not represent this Dallas concern, and that where he has been he has killed many trees rather than helping the trees. Our suggestion is that if any party comes to see you with reference to tree work that you thoroughly investigate before making any deal with him.

Also, advise your people thru the local press to be careful in dealing with any tree doctors.

Respectfully,
Porter A. Whaley,
Manager.

Another Fine Rain For Bailey

Monday morning the Muleshoe country and the Plains was visited with a splendid rain. This rain was of a general nature, falling gently as it did well mean thousands of dollars to the people.

Hundreds of acres of cotton, corn and feed had been planted, and the rain will bring it out in wonderful shape. Crop conditions were never better in this part of the state. Business men and farmers are all smiles. Cattle range is getting fine, as the grass is improving every day.

Goodland's Heavy Hitting Beats Rogers 13 To 6 Saturday

Goodland garnered eight hits and five runs off of Cares the first two innings and he was relieved by Clark in the third, who held Goodland to one hit until the sixth inning then the bombardment started again. Rogers threatened in the seventh when they loaded the bases and used every pinch hitter available but only put across two runs.

Goodland rapped out 24 hits while Coffman held Rogers to eight scattered hits. This was one of the hottest contested games ever seen on the Rogers ground. Coffman pitching for Goodland was superb.

Batteries: Cares, Clark and Allen for Rogers, Coffman and Maxwell for Goodland. Umpires: Secrest and Hood. Same teams play at Goodland Saturday, May 29th if you want to see a snappy ball game come out and help Goodland win.

Look What's Coming To Brooks Theatre

Every body must be at the Brooks Theatre Saturday night to join in the Old Time Fiddlers Contest. Say folks forget that Charleston awhile and come on with that Old Stuff. I'm sure all our feet will just naturally wiggle when Clarence Milligan starts to call Swing out 4 balance out 8 hanging on the corner like the hinges on a gate.

We're sure when some old timer starts to play, Snow Bird In The Ash Bank, we'll have to rope some of these old Mavricks or buy some new shoes.

Some of these young jellies think they are the very best but just watch Mam and Dad while they're feelin' at their best. This will take all of us 'way back there to days in '49.

They say R. L. Brown has got a bone in his foot. Every body watch Saturday night and see which foot, we bet he'll forget which one.

This may recall to the minds of our Older Generation the days of Pat Your Little Foot, Cotton Eyed Joe and The Polka.

All you folks come to this if you want real entertainment and also meet your friends here and forget the time and go back to days past to enjoy real life again.

The Manager of Brooks Theatre offers any couple a real prize that will come on the stage and dance Cotton Eyed Joe. Now don't forget next Saturday nite at Brooks Theatre. Come early. Starts 7:30 o'clock if you want a seat.

Chevrolet Auto Company Tells of Great Record

Figures made public today disclosed the fact that the week of April 17 was the greatest week in the entire history of the Chevrolet Motor company in point of retail sales.

According to the announcement made by the Chevrolet Motor company, retail sales for the week totaled 16,457 cars and trucks. These figures, covering the United States, do not include foreign sales. This is the sixth consecutive week that all previous retail sales records have been broken as the sales of Chevrolet have mounted to high totals that promise to make 1926 another record breaking year.

The week of May 2, 1925 was the banner week for Chevrolet up to six weeks ago. The high mark of Chevrolet in 1925 was 10,731 retail sales for the week; and this was a great contribution to the total of more than 500,000 cars and trucks, a figure never before approached by any manufacturer of automobiles of the selective transmission type. But for six weeks running, retail sales have gone over the best previous mark with a wide margin to spare.

The first week that the high mark was topped, sales went over 11,000 cars. The next week the totals went over 12,000 and for two weeks sales went beyond the 14,000 figure. Then, with a total of 16,457 sales for the week, Chevrolet announced a new weekly record almost double that of the best previous week up to six weeks ago.

Henry George and G. L. Seaver, (his Undertaker) were here the latter part of last week, meeting the people of the territory. George's Undertaking Parlor will have the services of one of the best men he could secure. This service is one that we hate to think about, but one that we appreciate when it is needed. Mr. George is trying to give this community the best of service.

Rural Route No. 2 Started May 1st

Jack Johnson is the carrier on Route No. 2 out of Muleshoe, starting on May 1st. This new route has been looked forward to for sometime by the Chamber of Commerce and the people it is serving. Thru the persistent efforts of our efficient post Mistress this route has been made possible. Now the people can take their daily papers and with a rural telephone which they are sure to get in the near future, they will be living in a modern rural community.

The Muleshoe country is gaining it's needed conveniences right along and soon will be one of the best places in the state to make your home. Come to Muleshoe and make your home in one of the fastest developing parts of the Plains.

The Texhoma Oil Company has had their sign painter here this week at the D. O. Smith filling station and wholesale house painting signs and dolling up the place in general.

C. F. Jackson, well know South Plains cattleman and stock raiser, was found dead in the garage at his home at 1912 10th Street here, shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon by members of his family who were aroused by a shot from the garage. The full charge from the 12-gauge pump gun that was found by his side took effect in his body just below his heart, and he died almost instantly. A coroner's verdict had not been rendered early this afternoon, but all indications are that the shot was accidental. The safety on the hammerless pump gun was off.

Mr. Jackson apparently was entering his car in the garage when it is believed that the gun was accidentally discharged. His body was found lying lengthwise with the car, and according to Dr. Malone, who was among the first to reach the scene, the end of the gun barrel was near where the shot had entered the body and held slightly under the coat of the victim.

The body was lying in a pool of blood. The shot had been fired with the barrel of the gun pressed closely against the body of the victim, according to a statement made by Dr. Malone to Coroner W. E. Johnson, as there were no powder burns on the body or clothing.

One empty and four full shells were taken from the barrel and magazine of the gun which was a hammerless pump that, according to friends was always carried by Mr. Jackson when he was out on the road. He had just told his family good-bye, neighbors said members of the family had told them, and was leaving for Seagraves to be gone two or three days. It is supposed that in getting into the car, he in some manner discharged the gun and grasped it as he fell, holding it against him, accounting for the fact that the barrel was slightly under his coat.

Mr. Jackson was one of the pioneer cattlemen of this section of the state, and is probably one of the best known dealers in, and raisers of livestock in West Texas. He is about 55 years old, and is survived by his wife, and four daughters as follows:

Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, of Plainview, whose two children were here living with their grandparents going to school; Mrs. S. H. Stewart, of this city, formerly Miss Neely; Mrs. B. K. Garrett, also of Lubbock, formerly Miss Tressa; and Thelma, 15 years of age, a student in the public schools here.

Funeral arrangements had not been made early this afternoon, but it is presumed that burial will be made here, probably Wednesday. —Lubbock Journal, May 4.

Mr. Jackson lived in the south part of Bailey County at one time, and traded at Muleshoe, receiving his mail here. The people of Bailey county will regret to learn of the terrible accident.

The Clean Up Campaign put on last week has worked wonders in the appearance of our city. Miss Wentland and Mrs. Connie Gupton and a large crowd of boys and girls absolutely cleaned up the town. This is a fine piece of work, and those taking part in the work in any way deserve much praise.

Lesson for May 9

ABRAHAM AND THE KINGS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 14:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—In all these we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us.—Rom. 8:37.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Abraham Saves Lot From Danger.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Abraham Rescues Lot.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham's Courage and Generosity.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Victory Through Faith and Courage.

I. Lot Taken Captive (14:1-12)

Lot's misfortune was due to his selfishness in choosing the best land regardless of the moral risks in his associations (13:10, 11). The Jordan valley was very fertile, but a place of moral snares because Sodom was there. Frequently fine pasture for cattle contains poisonous growths. Lot's trouble was not primarily because he was a bad man, but because of his associations. The steps taken by Lot as shown in chapter 13 were:

1. He lifted up his eyes and beheld (v. 10).
2. He chose him all the plain (v. 11).
3. He dwelt in the cities of the plain (v. 12).
4. He pitched his tent toward Sodom (v. 12).
5. He dwelt in Sodom (14:12).
6. He sat in the gate of Sodom (19:1).

II. Abraham Rescues Lot (13-16)

1. News brought to Abraham (v. 13). Abraham was in a place of safety. Just why the man who had escaped came to Abraham with the news we do not know. Perhaps Lot had requested him to tell Abraham of his misfortune, making known the fact of his kinship and through him appealing for help.

2. Abraham in pursuit (vv. 14, 15). Abraham, the great-hearted, forgot Lot's selfishness and ingratitude, organized his servants and by a night attack defeated the enemy. Abraham might just have left Lot to his fate, but because Lot was his brother he forgot his wrongs.

3. Lot rescued (v. 16).

Not only was Lot saved, but the women and his goods were rescued. Because Abraham was separate from Sodom he was able to save his brother. The one who is separate from the world has power to overcome it, while the one who is joined to the world is helpless and is carried away with its ruin.

III. The Ministry of Melchizedek (vv. 17-20)

Melchizedek, a mysterious person, suddenly appears on the scene. His name signifies "king of righteousness." He was also king of Salem. Salem means peace. The name is descriptive of his office, rather than a proper name. He is a type of Christ. The following features are suggested by A. T. Pierson:

1. He represents a primitive universal faith, antedating, outranking and surviving the Levitical.
2. He was the priest of the Most High God—a more comprehensive name than Jehovah.
3. His order of priesthood was not local or temporary, but universal and permanent.
4. He outranked even Abraham, who paid him tithes as to a superior.
5. He was prophet, priest and king—all in one, a sort of threefold personage.
6. He was not reckoned according to human genealogy nor limited course of service.
7. He was both king of righteousness and king of peace. Righteousness pertains to the name of the nation and peace, to the realm. Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedek, and this was the standard of giving in the Old Testament, but the New Testament puts giving on a higher plane. In I Corinthians 16:1 the believer is instructed to give as the Lord prospers.

IV. Abraham and the King of Sodom (21-24)

The king of Sodom offered Abraham reward. Abraham was quick to discern his peril in receiving gifts from him. He knew that what he had done was through the grace of God upon him. He would not use this grace for private gain, would not complicate himself with the world for the sake of money. He anticipated this temptation and had covenanted with God not to yield to it (vv. 22-23). Ministers and evangelists have made grievous mistakes in receiving and even seeking financial help from godless people. The God who is possessor of heaven and earth does not need the help of the world. The world must not have opportunity to boast.

Our Punishment

The seeds of our punishment are sown at the same time we commit the sin.—Hesiod.

THE COCKLES

Maggie had not seen any of the Cockles of the Heart in over a year. And she had enjoyed their visit so much the time before.

They had all come to see her. Or rather they had come for her, and the ones who had come for her had led her downstairs and there she had found the others.

She had been thinking about them that evening.

The old clock in the hall had struck the hours many, many times, but when the Cockles had been around she had not seen them.

Of course she knew they had been around. She knew that from what they had told her before of their ways.

But they had not been around so they had been seen. They had kept themselves from being seen.

And then one night, when Maggie was in bed and asleep, the old clock in the hall, without caring whether anyone was awake or not, kept counting the hours.

That was the way of the old clock. Little did he care whether any one listened to the striking of the hours or not.

If they were awake they would hear him. If not—well—he was going to strike anyway.

So the clock struck. One. Two. Three. Four. Five. Six. Seven. Eight. Nine. Ten. Eleven. Twelve.

It was midnight. And again the Cockles of the Heart went tip, tip, tip-toe, and settled themselves before the warm ashes and the bright coals in the old fireplace.

Then the big Cockle and the little Cockle went up to call Maggie downstairs, and to whisper to her that the other Cockles were all about.

The Cockles, you know, were dressed in little shell suits which made them look like little sea mollusks or mussels or shellfish as far as their costumes of shell were concerned.

Their faces are wrinkled with happy smiles, and they are so cunning and lovable that no one could help loving them.

They gather up warm embers and warm, lovable thoughts, and they cast a glow over the innermost parts of people's hearts, so that whenever you hear anyone say:

"Oh, you just warm the cockles of my heart," you will know that the dear, friendly, lovable Cockles are about.

They love Maggie as she is one of those who love to give happiness and she gives those about her such beautiful feelings.

When she came downstairs, wearing her nightie and rose-colored wrapper and her little pink slippers, with one of the Cockles on either side of her, the other Cockles were standing up in the chimney in the shape of a heart.

They gathered about her as she drew near.

"Hello, Maggie," they said. Their voices made her feel happy. You know some voices will do that.

"Oh, Cockles," said Maggie, "how glad I am to see you all, though I know you've been around lots and lots of times."

"Won't you come sooner next time?" And before the Cockles had left that night what do you suppose they did?

Each one of them gave Maggie a funny, dear little kiss, and when she woke up the next morning she said: "I really am ever so happy."

Changing of Picture

What picture was formed in the mind of Howard, age two, when he was told that his aunt and uncle were the parents of twins, is still a mystery. However, when a week later he stood beside his mother looking for the first time at the new twins, he exclaimed in an important tone:

"Em's no twins, 'em's babies."—Indianapolis News.

Fish Day

"Does your mother ever pay you any compliments?" said Sam to his pal, Alexander.

"Only in the winter time," replied the other. "When the fire gets low she says: 'Alexander, the grate!'"—The Outlook.

Cut Cultivation Costs in Two With a McCormick-Deering Two-Row

You don't need a large acreage of crop to justify the purchase of a McCormick-Deering two-row cultivator. About the most expensive item on a farm nowadays is labor. One man on a McCormick-Deering two-row will do as much work as two men with single-row cultivators. If you hire help, a two-row will cut your cultivating cost in two. Let us demonstrate.

"But, mademoiselle, you must be careful with pretty words from Monsieur," he said maliciously, sure of the effect.

"Pretty words from whom?" She laughed bitterly, "that was a joke! No pretty words from me since the lady, who will marry Lascelles at Albany, drive him crazy, eh, Louis?"

Lafamme scowled into her mocking eyes, but was silent. He rose and led his guest to the living room. Then the sound of voices outside attracted his attention, and shortly, the Ojibway girl appeared and spoke to him in a whisper.

"You will excuse me for a little while? I am called to the trade-house?" At the door he added with a brutal laugh, "Help yourself to the cigarettes and whisky. And—those will keep you entertained, no doubt."

Steele wondered if David had run into trouble. If the trader were free with liquor with his men, which seemed improbable, David might have been set on, but the Ojibway was too wise to imperil his chief or their plans.

Following the slam of the outer door the girl rose, placed her fingers warningly on her lips and tiptoed out of the room, leaving Steele curious, uneasy. He heard talking in low tones from the direction of the kitchen, then she returned, and walking to his chair, looked quizzically down.

"Are you as much of a man as you look?" she demanded.

"How long before Lafamme surprises us, mademoiselle?" he countered, forcing a yawn, having no intention of playing into Lafamme's hands.

"You think I'm working for that beast? Are you blind? Can't you see he's done with me?" She began, dramatically, then, "Why did you look at me that way before dinner? I saw you! You stabbed me with your eyes. You needn't deny it! You hate me!"

"You are mistaken, mademoiselle. I never met Lafamme before today."

"You lie! But you are suspicious; you think there is a game—think he is listening. Don't you see that he left the house? Oh, you can trust me! This was the naked truth. I would kill him tonight if I could get away. But you—why do you hate me, too?"

"Does Lafamme suspect me?" he asked, ignoring her question.

"No, he knows you are what you claim to be."

"What do you want me to do?"

"Mon Dieu! Get me out of this place—take me with you! He's keeping me here because I know too much. He's afraid I will talk."

"Talk about what—the whisky trade?"

She lowered her voice to a whisper. "The whisky is not all—you would not believe me if I told—" A door closed outside, and Lafamme entered the room.

"Ah, this is most unromantic, monsieur," he protested, hand raised in mock gesture. "I return suddenly, to find you still in your chair—alone."

Steele was on his feet. "My man David in any trouble?" he snapped, ignoring the sarcasm.

"Oh, it wasn't his fault. Baptiste fancies he's strong, and took hold of him."

"What's happened?" Steele's blood heated at the possible harm to David, outnumbered ten to one at the trade-house.

Lafamme raised a deprecating hand. "Nothing, nothing at all. I'm glad of it! Your man cracked some of Baptiste's fingers—just squeezed his hand and Baptiste had enough. He always was a bit yellow."

"But will Baptiste follow this up? I don't want trouble here. Where is David now?" Steele was relieved; he had feared the worst. But that meant that David and he would leave the post in the morning. He knew his half-breeds. It would be dangerous to stay—and as yet nothing had been learned from the girl.

"I sent them all to bed. Baptiste won't follow it up. Antoine is with him. I'm boss here," laughed the trader.

Then Steele was aware of the attention of a pair of shining eyes. "Ah, it was magnificent, monsieur—the way you looked," said the girl. "Your eyes were like your name—of steel."

"You are embarrassing, mademoiselle."

"You must excuse Rose this evening," said Lafamme with a grimace. "She has not seen a white man in a year! Not but what she's sincere, but whisky makes her think out loud, doesn't it, Rose?"

If the glitter of black eyes could have killed, Lafamme would have met sudden death. Instead, he realized the glasses, while Steele's mind was busy with what the Frenchman's return from the trade-house had checked the girl from disclosing. If Pierre were Lafamme's man, as he seemed to be, Steele was curious to learn what tale the Indian had brought from Walling River concerning the lost fur canoe and the Windigo terror. He finally decided to drive straight at the point with the hope that the girl would drop something.

"Did I tell you this afternoon that I heard a Windigo at Walling River?" he began.

"What? You a scientist, mean to tell me that you heard a Windigo—a creature of Indian myth and superstition—a bugaboo of the medicine men?"

Steele grinned with delight into the trader's puzzled eyes. "Certainly do. I was waked by his howling on the ridge across the river from the post."

Lafamme smiled, suggestively tapping the bottle at his elbow, as he teased: "Scotch is a wonderful stimulant to the imagination, monsieur."

"You know that the Indians attribute the loss of St. Onge's fur canoe this summer to the same devil?" continued Steele, watching Rose's face.

"The loss of their fur canoe?" cried Lafamme. "You mean to say that St. Onge didn't get his fur to Albany this year?"

"Not a skin," said Steele. This was news that Pierre assuredly would have brought from down river. Then he caught a furtive signal from the girl. She cautiously lowered an eyelid, as she watched Lafamme.

The Face of the Girl Went Gray With Fear. "Mon Dieu! If it's Lafamme!"

So the Frenchman was deceiving him. Pierre had been on the trader's business at Walling River. But why did Lafamme wish to conceal it? He could not suspect that Steele would return to the Walling.

"And you believe with the Indians. I suppose, that the Windigo got the canoe, also?" jeered Lafamme. "That's a bit too raw, monsieur! It is not the first boat to be smashed in that white-water."

"But it was not lost in the rapids. That has been proved, for no trace of boat, fur or men was ever found. They couldn't steal the fur and get out by the Albany or through the muskeg country. That leaves the Windigo as the only solution, doesn't it?"

"Well, that finishes St. Onge, then," said Lafamme.

"And helps your little plan, eh, Louis?" Rose added.

The trader's face hardened. "Yes, it helps the trade here, of course. If they quit down there. By the way, did St. Onge say anything about sending a canoe up river this fall?"

Rose Lafamme paused in the act of draining her half-filled glass, intent on Steele's answer.

"I left the post early in September on a side trip, intending to return before starting for home, but never went back." Then, seizing the opportunity to deceive Lafamme into waiting until the last minute before cracking his nut, he said: "He said something about my taking a letter to you."

"He did?" The dark face of the trader flushed with pleasure.

"Yes, now he'll send Michel."

A glass was shattered on the table. In a fury of passion Rose Lafamme, leaping to her feet, glared at the Frenchman. "Oh, you think you've got her at last, do you?" she screamed. "When do I go, then? You'll send me now, when she comes? You'll let me go, now?"

What Steele had wanted for had happened. Alcohol and her hatred of Lafamme had loosened all restraint on the tongue of the maddened girl. Infuriated, the trader rose and pointed to the door. "We've had enough of this; you're drunk! Monsieur Steele will excuse you. Good night!"

The insult drove the blood from her flaming face; sobered her. She walked to the door, where she turned and said quietly to Steele: "Bon soir, monsieur, I leave you with these gentlemen and—cutthroat."

Although pressed by Lafamme, Steele did not stay. He had failed utterly in his plan—had learned nothing. If only the trader had remained in the trade-house five minutes longer, the girl would have told him what he wished to know. And now they were leaving in the morning.

CHAPTER X

From the outside the cabin where he and David were to sleep was dark, but he entered to find David, aided by the light of two candles, busy with their bags.

"What's the trouble?" Steele asked, noticing the blankets with which David had matted the windows. "You don't think he'd dare fire in on you?"

"Maybe," and the Ojibway pointed to the contents of a large waterproofed bag on the floor at his feet. "They have come to see if you are what you say."

"They've been through our Indian stuff?"

"Yes, dey look at dese bag and not pack dem good."

A low knock checked the conversation. David reached for a candle. "No!" said Steele, "stand by with that!" pointing to David's rifle, then opened the door.

It was Rose Lafamme.

Disapproval was stamped on David's face as he slowly shook his head.

"Monsieur Steele, I wish to talk with you in private—" she hesitated, with a nod of her head toward the Ojibway.

"David, wait outside a minute," said Steele concealing from the girl a lowered eyelid.

"You needn't worry, Lafamme's asleep," she began, then approaching Steele, placed her hands on his shoulders as she begged: "Will you get me out of here, now—tonight?"

The girl's knowledge might be of vital importance to the future of Walling River—the woman there he loved, and the American did not hesitate to dissemble.

"But, Rose, I haven't bacon and flour. You'd starve if we left tonight, unless we struck game. You don't want to live on fish."

"I can leave on anything with you, you beg American!" she said. "Once I get me away—away from that thief. Once I loved him—but now, I hate, hate, hate!"

Steele temporized: "But why can't you wait until tomorrow night? We'll have flour then."

"I'm afraid. He cursed me tonight for telling you something. Oh, you don't know that man—the cleverness of him? He knows these won't last—two, three years, these hell here!"

"Of course he wants to get rid of the post down river?" Steele ventured.

"Oh, St. Onge is done for—and he'll get the girl," she muttered.

"But what was that Indian Pierre doing at Walling River?" he abruptly demanded.

"Pierre?" She turned on Steele in surprise. "You saw Pierre? He was told to keep under cover."

"Yes, he was spreading wild tales about the Windigo. Lafamme sent him to do that?"

Her large eyes lighted in amusement. "Oh, yes, of course! but what he went down river after was—Quick! the candles! There's some-one coming!" The face of the girl went gray with fear. "Mon Dieu! If it's Lafamme!"

Steele pinched out the candles and she clung to him helplessly, her body trembling against his, as they listened.

There was a sound of a scuffle outside, the fall of a body, the dull impact of blows. Pushing aside the frightened girl, Steele seized his rifle and opened the door.

"I got him!" came the low voice of David from the darkness. "Had me dat rawhide."

The man who had approached the cabin had walked into the strongest pair of arms in the Negligee country, and lay helpless on the ground, choked and beaten into insensibility. Returning with the thongs, Steele peered at the face of David's victim.

"Lafamme?"

"Yes! We feex hem and start!" urged the Indian, fiercely.

Handshake Guide to Love

The handshake is a correct and infallible guide to true love. This is the contention of Dr. David V. Bush, a teacher of applied psychology. "Shake hands," he says, "before you start a courtship—not because you are to start something resembling a pugilistic bout, but because if the hands don't fit perfectly, don't start it." Doctor Bush says "the altar isn't even a milestone in the course of love; it's apt to be a millstone. A marriage certificate is no guarantee of love. Marriage, looked at as the goal of love, is apt to be a grave if the game ends when the knot is tied." The exponent of applied psychology thinks trouble can be avoided by proper character analysis before the courtship advances too far.

A Tipy

Some people take so much pleasure in telling what they know that it's a pity they know so little.—Boston Transcript.

DIVERSITY IN HAT STYLES; SPRING FROCKS FOR TOTS

AFTER thinking it over, it appears that many fair heads have decided to dress up a bit this summer, and that their hats must fall in line with the trend of styles in other clothes. To keep in line, hats are less simple than they were, more diverse in styles and more decidedly feminine—otherwise they would not harmonize with the greater elaboration and diversity. That is the keynote of dress and other styles. In fact, heads have been much neglected—the same simple and almost meaningless shapes covered all of them, old and young, sophisticated and simple, imposing and otherwise—and now the absurdity of it has dawned upon us and the reaction is on.

Here is a group of pretty street hats that are traveling in the right direction. There are many others in different shapes, with square, high crowns and wider brims, all revealing greater dignity and finer art in millinery modes. These are simple hats that have made a good beginning toward modes that are far more flattering than those that have gone before for several years.

Two important new-style points distinguish the hat at the upper left of the group, the high crown with creases in it and the management of the trimming which includes a sash and ends of wide soft ribbon and a rose. A tailored hat at the right is very simply trimmed by a ribbon colone-piece affairs with matching bloomers, whether for play or not. But, by means of variety in patterned fabrics, by combinations of plain and figured fabrics, the management of decorative touches and methods of fastening there is endless variation of the simple styles. Shallow yokes and hems of plain material on printed materials make smart utility dresses. Tucks, shirtings or plaatings, provide for required fullness and very simple embroidery or fancy stitching are the means of introducing amusing finishing touches—as little animals, birds and quaint flowers, that children love.

When the story is of party frocks or other dress-up clothes, it introduces finer and lighter fabrics along with more elaboration in making, more hand sewing and the addition of little fur-belows in ribbons, tiny silk posies and narrow laces. Crepe de chine, dotted swiss, fine dimity or voile, georgette crepe and taffeta silk are all approved mediums for little ladies' important dresses and poplin is often chosen for the diminutive boy. The styles are about the same as in utility clothes and garments may be either long or short sleeved, but are brief as to skirt length.

For little tots the circular cape, with scarf collar, and arm slashes, is an adorable miniature of grown-up styles, entirely practical for the smallest of promenaders. It is made of various woolen cloths—twill, broadcloth, basket weaves or flannel among them.

Always Consider what you get for the Price you Pay

In Chevrolet you get more for your money than in any other car built. You get every essential improvement developed by automotive engineers during the last twelve years of progress.

You get the greater flexibility of Chevrolet's 3-speed transmission—the greater power and smoothness of Chevrolet's valve-in-head motor—the easier, safer handling of Chevrolet's semi-reversible steering gear—the greater comfort of semi-elliptic springs.

Buy no other low-priced car until you have compared it with Chevrolet. Check point for point—feature for feature. Know what you are actually getting for the price you pay. Let us give you a demonstration.
