Ward County Draws Strike In Fusselman

Gulf Oil Corp. has completed from the Fusselman zone its No. 2 P. Walker, et al, Ellenburger prospect, five miles east of Fusselman gas production in the Quito field and the same distance southwest of dual Fusselman and Ellenburger gas production in the War-Wink South field of Ward County.

Calculated, absolute open flow was for 43 million cubic feet of dry gas per day. Production was through perforations at 17,096-17,143 feet, which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons. Drilled to 20,690 feet, and plugged back to 20,130 feet, it has a 5/8-inch liner hung from 15,645-20,688 feet.

It assured production from the Ellenburger with the flowing of gas at the maximum daily rate of 4 million cubic feet, along with 20 to 30 barrels of fluid per hour, through a 3/4-inch choke and perforations at 19,370-20,150 feet.

It spots 1,980 feet from southeast and southwest lines of section 40, A. J. Wilson survey, 10 miles west of Pyote and four miles northwest of Ellenburger gas production in the Caprito field.

TIPCO Completes Dual Eddy Project

Texas International Petroleum Corp. Midland, dually completed its No. 1 Lowe-Federal as a Morrow re-opener and sixth Strawn well and one-mile northwest extension to that pay in the Golden Lane field of Eddy County, N.M.

From the Morrow zone, it gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 821,000 cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 12,147-12,262 feet.

The Strawn zone gauged 20,212 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 11,105-11,110 feet.

Drilled to 12,620 feet, it has 5/8-inch casing set at total depth. Location is 1,980 feet from north and 760 feet from east lines of section 31-20s-30e, 13 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

The same firm has staked site for No. 1 Penn-Federal, 1/2 mile west of the No. 1 Lowe-Federal, 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 31-20s-30e. Planned depth is 12,700 feet.

Morrow Re-Opened In Eddy Gas Area

Keweenaw Oil Co., operating from Odessa, has announced completion of No. 1 Kaiser Communitized, as Morrow gas re-opener in the Red Lake field of Eddy County, N. M., eight miles southeast of Artesia.

Calculated, absolute open flow was for 8,237 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 9,094-9,193 feet, which had been acidized with 4,500 gallons.

Drilled to 9,360 feet, it has 5/8-inch casing set at 9,356 feet, and it is plugged back to 9,350 feet.

Truce To Take Effect Friday

Sirica Refuses To Give Four Tapes To Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica today refused to turn over tapes of four White House conversations sought by the House Judiciary Committee for its impeachment inquiry.

Sirica said he was legally powerless to meet the request because the tapes of the four conversations, two on June 20, 1972, and the others from June 30 and Sept. 15 of the same year, were delivered to him for rulings on claims of executive privilege by President Nixon.

He said it is up to Nixon whether or not the tapes should be turned over to the committee.

Citing this as a special case, Sirica said in a legal memo answering the Judiciary Committee, "The court does not in any way imply that the recordings sought are irrelevant to the impeachment investigation."

Sirica said his decision "is based rather on the wholly unrelated ground that the court simply has no role to play in the matter."

The judge said if the committee is turned down by the White House, then it must decide whether to pursue the tapes in the courts once again.

Watergate apartment complex, which housed Democratic National Committee headquarters. The other two conversations are believed to involve discussions among Nixon and his top aides about the break-in.

In denying the request, Sirica cited an earlier U.S. Court of Appeals decision ordering the White House to turn over tapes.

He said the decision does not direct a federal judge to perform a "pass-through or conduit function" for the Judiciary Committee or anyone else interested in presidential conversations.

Graduation Ceremonies Today

Graduation ceremonies for 1,173 high school seniors will get under way at 6 p.m. today in Midland Memorial Stadium—weather permitting.

Remembering last year, when the Midland High School seniors moved inside to receive their diplomas after the Lee High graduation was cut short by a heavy rain and high winds, principals at both schools have standby plans.

The 551 Midland High seniors will be the first to get their diplomas, beginning at 6 p.m. Principal Audrey Gill said a decision would be made at 5 p.m. as to the site for the graduation.

"If we have to move into the auditorium, we still will begin as close to six as possible," Gill said. If the graduation is interrupted by the weather after it gets started, then, another try will be made at 2 p.m. Friday in the auditorium for those who want to take part. The others will pick their diplomas up at the school office, Gill added.

The Lee graduation is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m.

"If the weather is bad, we will begin the ceremonies at 8:30 p.m. in the Lee gymnasium," Principal Garland Chapman said. "If the program is interrupted, we will announce the plans upon dismissal."

Tony Diaz, president of the student body, will voice the invocation for the Midland High event. Following the salutatory and valedictory addresses by Steven Nixon Tighe and John Edward Bishop, respectively, announcements of scholarships and honors will be made by Bill Wells, head counselor.

Gill will present the class which will be certified by Dr. Douglas Brown, assistant

Kissinger Heading For Home

CAIRO, Egypt. (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger arrived here today enroute home from his 33-day marathon peace mission, and a senior American official said the cease-fire agreement he mediated between Israel and Syria would take effect as soon as it is signed on Friday.

Before leaving Jerusalem, the American secretary of state told newsmen the pact may become "a turning point in the history of the Middle East."

The senior official, talking to newsmen as the Kissinger party flew here to report to President Anwar Sadat on the accord, said wounded prisoners of war would be exchanged within 24 hours of the signing in Geneva.

As part of the agreement to separate Israeli and Syrian forces in the Golan Heights, the official said, Israel would give up the Golan city of Quneitra and six or seven villages taken in the 1967 war, as well as land gained last October.

The U.S. official said Israel would retain possession of three strategic hills and all of its settlements, but will yield about "a field and a half" of cultivated land east of the disengagement line.

The text of the accord distributed to newsmen gives Syrian and Israeli negotiators until Wednesday to work out details of the troop separation in the Golan Heights.

Actual disengagement is to begin by next Thursday and be completed by June 25. All of the remaining 73 Israeli and 408 Syrian, Moroccan and Iraqi prisoners are to be repatriated by Thursday.

In a protocol accompanying the agreement, Israel and Syria agreed that the U.N. peace-keeping force will number about 1,250 men and will carry out regular inspections.

But the force is not to hamper the Syrian civil administrators who will move into the demilitarized zone between the separated armies.

Kissinger and Sadat are to lunch together during a six-hour stopover before the secretary continues to Washington.

Announcement of the Syrian-Israeli agreement Wednesday did not halt fighting in the Golan Heights, and the Syrian command reported the 80th consecutive day of shelling there.

Ulster Violence, Talks Continue

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's British administrator held crisis talks with Ulster's political leaders today after a night of violence in the predominantly Roman Catholic city of Londonderry.

The army said a band of about 300, many armed with pick handles and garden shears, attacked troops during the night. Soldiers fought back with rubber bullets and antitank gas.

Seven sniper attacks, without casualties, also were reported.

Meryl Rees, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, met with Brian Faulkner, Protestant head of the toppled provincial coalition government, hoping to salvage something of the collapsed power-sharing experiment between Protestants and Catholics.

Rees said he met today with hardline Protestant leaders Rev.

Ian Paisley, Harry West and William Craig.

Meantime, commercial life of the British province moved toward normal as Protestant workers, satisfied that their 15-day general strike had reversed British efforts to bring minority Catholics into the Ulster government, returned to their jobs.

Rees assumed administration of the troubled province when the British imposed direct rule from London late Wednesday by suspending the Northern Ireland Assembly for four months.

The move followed the collapse of the provincial Executive on Tuesday over the province-wide economic paralysis caused by the strike.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson termed the developments in Northern Ireland Ulster's "gravest crisis" since World War II. He called Parliament back from spring recess for an emergency session and pledged Rees would make every effort to restore some form of power-sharing arrangement.

But Protestant hardliners were firm against giving the Catholic third of Ulster's 1.5 million people any more power.

The Ulster Workers' Council warned that the strike could quickly be resumed if demands for early elections for a new provincial assembly were ignored.

The militants believe they would win through elections an overwhelming vote of support that would kill British plans which they see aimed at eventual unification of the six counties of Ulster with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

British leaders have not mentioned assembly elections.

The Workers' Council suspended the general strike Wednesday after Protestant workers spontaneously began returning to work in droves.

The strike cost the province about $240 million in lost production, according to an estimate by Prof. James Bates of Queen's University, Belfast.

Up to 30,000 jobs could be jeopardized because of disruption from the stoppage, according to industrial estimates.

Much of Belfast remained without electricity during the night, but it was hoped the power plants soon would re-

Midlanders Roast Again

Midlanders roasted again Wednesday as the temperature topped the century mark for the second straight day.

The mercury topped out at 101 degrees, but Weather Service forecasters at Midland Air Terminal promise some relief today.

They expect the high mark to be only in the upper 90s.

With no chance of rain in sight, the temperature had already risen to 85 degrees by noon today, following an overnight low of 75. Friday will be "cool," with the high mark expected to be in the mid-90s.

Most of the rest of Texas was experiencing the same sultry heat.

Another weak cool front eased to a standstill across the Panhandle south of Amarillo without exercising any appreciable effect on the state's weather.

Behind the frontal system the early morning temperatures sagged to 55 degrees at Dalhart and 62 at Amarillo. Readings (See WEATHER Page 2A)

LATE NEWS FLASHES

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Ray Hutchison, R-Dallas, told the Constitutional Convention he would move to reconsider an environmental proposal that opponents say was written by industrial lobbyists.

The proposal, which was approved Wednesday, would not prohibit future legislatures from authorizing suits by private citizens against polluters, as new reports indicated, Hutchison said.

NEW YORK (AP) — British Petroleum Co., Ltd., the last of the big international oil companies to report first-quarter results, said today that profits jumped 491 per cent over year-earlier levels.

United Way Goal In '75: $538,400

Directors of the United Way of Midland Wednesday afternoon set a 1975 campaign goal of $538,400 to be raised during next fall's fund drive. The action came at the organization's regular monthly meeting, following several months of agency visitation and budget review.

The goal, representing $16,750 more than was raised for 1974, was recommended by the United Way executive committee after hearing reports from Budget Division chairman Jim Stephenson, United Way president E. D. "Dave" Dorchester, and campaign chairman W. H. "Bill" Malone.

The committee also had advice from a six-member financial advisory committee comprised of Midland financial and business leaders concerning business, economic, and political factors.

"We were impressed with the spirit of optimism expressed by the financial advisory committee," Dorchester stated. "They indicate that Midland is definitely experiencing a boom which should favorably affect our campaign. At the same time, however, we recognize the effects of inflation on employee contributors."

Dorchester noted that the United Way organization and its member agencies are being responsive to community needs, and that citizen panels which met with the local member agencies came back with favorable reports.

Stephenson remarked, "We've met several times in the past month reviewing agency requests and the reports of the Visitation Division's evaluation of agency services. This goal should meet our priority needs." He added, "Our real work comes in the fall, when we go over their budgets line by line."

The United Way of Midland has exceeded its goal slightly the last two years, after several years of falling short. The $538,400 is just over 3 per cent more than the $521,650 raised in last fall's campaign, when the goal was set at $517,500.

Malone explained that about 50 per cent of the additional money will have to come from new contributors because of the turnover in population and the number of one-time gifts received for 1974. "We are hoping that we will receive larger corporate gifts this year, and that employee participation will be greater," he said. "This year's campaign effort will be very thorough because of our plans of greater training efforts and an earlier start on the cam-

GRANITE BOULDERS TO ARRIVE— 'Rock Festival' Here Friday

A "V. I. P. Rock Festival" is scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday, as the opening of several visual improvements planned for Midland in the near future.

This rock festival isn't concerned with music. Rather, it will mark the arrival of three large granite boulders which will be used in the beautification of the traffic intersection of the triangle at West Wall and Front streets, just east of Midkiff Drive.

The ceremony is sponsored by the Visual Improvement Projects Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, The approximately 15 to 20 tons each, will be placed on the traffic island as the start of a landscaping program which will include cactus and native plants.

"We have had excellent cooperation from the Texas Highway Department in planning and designing this visual improvement project," Gordon Knox, chairman of the V. I. P. Committee, said. "This improvement effort is part of an overall plan to beautify the approach to the Tall City from the Midland Regional Air Terminal. We are grateful to Roy Smith of Austin, a landscape architect with the Texas Highway Department, who designed this little oasis for us. Smith will be on hand Friday, along with other Texas Highway Department officials, as we officially note this beginning."

V. I. P. Inc. has been established as a non-profit, tax-deductible organization to receive contributions from Midland citizens and companies. The funds will be used to finance several other projects which now are in planning stages.

Persons interested in making contributions may mail them to V. I. P. Inc., Midland Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 1890, Midland 79701.

American Consul In Egypt Looks Like College Girl

By DAVID MICHELMORE
CAIRO (AP) — In a short sleeved and red turtleneck sweater, 26-year-old Beth Jones looks more like an American college girl than the American consul in Egypt.

"Some people — especially Americans — really look surprised when they first come into my office and see me," she said.
Although some might expect a distinguished-looking middle-aged man, or, at least, a tweed-suited middle-aged woman in the consul's chair, Beth Jones — young, single and attractive — sees nothing odd about her position.

She thinks the astonished first looks are merely "amusing."
"Once we sit down to begin working on whatever problem they have, the surprise goes away and it's all business," she said.

There are fewer than ten women diplomats among some 800 men working in the Cairo embassies, a small minority in a long male-dominated profession.

Beth and the other women diplomats interviewed by The Associated Press said there were no tasks a woman diplomat could not do in Cairo, a city "easy going and Mediterranean in its attitude toward women," according to one.

They said they were too busy

Impeachment Inquiry Sometimes Spurs Frustration

By ANN BLACKMAN WASHINGTON (AP) — The impeachment inquiry on Capitol Hill is historic and momentous. But it's like being invited to a Hollywood premiere and not being allowed to watch the show.

The action takes place behind closed, paneled doors on the first floor of the Sam Rayburn House office building on the southwest side of the Capitol.
Anyone who doesn't belong inside is told so by an armed policeman at the door.

Those who insist on a glimpse of history-in-the-making must stand for hours in the marble corridor, waiting for the entrances and exits of the 38 members of the House Judiciary Committee. If you're only there once, it's hard to figure out who's who.

The chairman, Peter W. Rodino D-N.J., a short, impeccably tailored man with wavy, gray-white hair, is easy to spot.
Almost everywhere he goes, at least a dozen reporters and photographers surround him.

President Nixon's lawyer,
James D. St. Clair, is another crowd-pleaser. Each time he emerges from a secret meeting, reporters pounce on him, peppering him with questions as he walks quickly down the corridor.

When John M. Doar, the tall, lean chief counsel for the committee, came out, he, too, was followed by questioning reporters.

Doar was silent and kept walking. He reached the end of the corridor and knocked briskly on the door. No one answered. The chief counsel began to laugh. "Hurry up and get me away from these people," he pleaded.

So it goes.
The committee has held six sessions in what Rodino calls the first phase — Doar's recitation of all information available on the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

St. Clair, a short, stocky, gray-haired man, has permission to attend. When Doar finishes, St. Clair may respond on the President's behalf.

Rodino has said the committee meetings may be made public within the next two weeks.

about the differences, if any,
between male and female diplomats.

But they admitted that getting past the first astonished looks is a hurdle attractive women diplomats face that their male colleagues do not.

"They say, here is this woman with long blonde hair and long legs — what is she doing here?" said Countess Helga Strachwitz, 32, the leggy, blonde cultural attache of the West German embassy.

"So you have to prove right away that you are efficient, not more efficient than men, but that you are efficient," she said.

Solmaz Dinzer, 28, Turkish first secretary and a 1966 graduate of Bryn Mawr, (Pa.) College, thinks her single, family status may even give her an advantage in the diplomatic game.

"It's easier for us to get invited to parties and to meet people," she said. "Men will look at me perhaps first as a woman, but then you have to establish yourself as a professional, to turn that first casual meeting into a useful diplomatic contact."

At least one male diplomat — a bachelor and a Frenchman — thinks single, attractive diplomats like Solmaz and Beth are "overlooked."

"They are asked out by everyone, even people of much higher rank, just to fill in the atmosphere," said Georges Moussa, a French Embassy attache. "Diplomats exploit the presence of a nice, charming young lady who can perform well at a dinner party or a cocktail party."

Neither Beth nor Solmaz see themselves as "decorative" additions to a diplomatic dinner table. Their full social calendars are part of the job, as much as long arduous days at the office, and also part of the independence they cherish.

"I am the master of my own time. I have no one to worry about but myself. I can go to the embassy early and come home late at night. It's up to me," said Solmaz.

"But I am enough of a Middle Eastern woman that if I ever feel the need to get married, I will probably leave the foreign service. I don't want to impose the protocol restriction on my husband of having to follow my name," she added.

But Beth Jones is enough of a modern American woman to assured and adventurous. To lose off the question of marriage: "Oh God, no. Are you kidding? I don't know what it would be like to be married. I don't think about it," the 1970 Swarthmore College (Pa.) a graduate said.

"But I know I'll never stop working and I'll never accept any husband's dominance. If I get assigned to a new country, he'd have to follow. There would be no question about it," she said.

Countess Strachwitz, unlike Beth and Solmaz, is married to Her husband, a United Nations official in Jordan, flies to Cairo to see his wife and young son on weekends.

"It's not that easy," Countess Strachwitz said of being a wife, a mother and a full-time diplomat. "But you can overcome
You get taken to the water and you swim. That's all."

But for Beth Jones, daughter of career foreign service office
William C. Jones, now assigne to Washington, the diplomat life is much more exciting tha a swim.

It's an adventure... while it takes her to dinner parties horseback riding in the deser driving her small car about th pyramids in the middle of th night, or working 20-hour day as she did during each of U.S.
Secretary of State Henry Ki singer's visits to Egypt.
"I love it," she said.

POLLY'S POINTERS Mail Order Takes Slow Boat Time

By POLLY CRAMER
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY — I would like to know if any reader has a recipe for treating material so it will be flame resistant. Thank you. — MRS. K.F.

DEAR POLLY — I would like to air a Pet Peeve with mail order companies who take so long in filling orders. Sometimes it takes weeks and weeks to get anything that has been ordered. It seems to me they do not appreciate my business or they would be more prompt in sending my order. This makes me hesitant to order in the even when I see things in the courtyard of the First Christian Church. I really would like to have. — ESTHER

DEAR POLLY — June wanted to know how to use driftwood other than for making arrangements and candle holders. I have seen larger pieces stained or varnished and used as bases for lamps. A friend uses it to outline her flower beds.

I have used driftwood to make a wall rack for necklaces and-earrings. I had a V-shaped piece with one end shorter than the other. I put cup hooks in it and hung the necklaces on the longer arm, next to the wall, and matching earrings on the shorter arm. This adds color and charm to my bedroom decor. Another longer, rather snaky-looking piece was used just for necklaces. I used two picture hooks on the wall to hold mine and it took a bit of weight balancing to hang it correctly. — MABEL

DEAR POLLY — and June — On the West Coast they use smaller pieces of driftwood, highly polished, as napkin rings. — HESTER

DEAR POLLY — While we were busy on the farm the tractor ran out of gas and we had more fuel to add but no funnel. Since we did have a paper bag we used it as a great emergency funnel. No extra time was lost in going back to get one. — DELORES

DEAR POLLY — Not too long ago I read about a mother who was complaining about gift giving for so many children's parties. When my child had a birthday party we had a wrapped gift for each invited guest. All were alike so there was no dissatisfaction nor hurt feelings but a mutual feeling of joy when the little guests arrived and saw they were also on the receiving end. This taught my child that the joy of giving is equal to the joy of receiving. — VI

DEAR POLLY — Beautiful coasters can be made by applying decals on the inside of plastic coffee can lids. They are roomy and do not stick to the bottom of the glasses. — VIRGINIA

John Eisenhower: Haunted By White House, Watergate

By JOHN BARBOUR
VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — Between Presidents at the moment, John S. D. Eisenhower pauses now to survey his life, a life haunted by a big white house at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

So distant, it seems, from this knolly green countryside where the dogwoods bloom in white and pink profusion and where almost 200 years ago Washington bivouacked his beaten army and lost 3,000 men to the bitter, hungry winter.

Lurks In Memory
But for John Eisenhower, 51, the only surviving son of the 34th President of the United States, the White House is inescapable.

It lurks in memory and in the files of presidential papers, and it returns vividly with the Secret Service agents escorting his son David and his daughter-in-law Julie when they visit. The Secret Service parks its bus on the Eisenhower lawn.

Now he has finished his second book, this one a memoir entitled "Strictly Personal," covering in anecdotes his history from birth through his sometimes unwilling adventures into public life to his final assignment as ambassador to Belgium.

Sitting on his plush and pillowed sofa in his tasteful living room recently, he told a visitor why the book ends in September 1971.

Arbitrary Cut-Off Date
"I wrote the introduction to the book and set the arbitrary cut-off date before Watergate hit. You've got to have a cut-off date at some point. I arbitrarily set it as my departure from public life. I don't expect to go back into government any more. In other words, here's the end of a public career."

"That automatically makes this book the story of another era," he says slowly. "But if I tried with every revision to keep up with the latest developments, with things happening what do you do? From so fast and still happening now, I would have stopped in the middle of a scene anyway. . . . So, perhaps fortunately, Watergate is not in this book, published this month. But Richard Nixon is, David and Julie are, and of course Ike, but like as his son saw him, changing over time from Dad, to "The Old Man," to "The Boss," and back to Dad again.

You can still see Ike in the eyes and brow, and maybe a trace of Dennis O'Keefe in John's earnest face as he stares out the window trying to find words to explain his relationship with his father.

"That first sentence in the book is that I was born standing at attention, and that's about right. Dad was pretty much a martinet when I was young. In World War I, he commanded a tank brigade at Gettysburg and his nickname was 'Old Von Hindenburg.'"

Iron-Jawed Character
"He was a pretty iron-jawed character. A different personality than the picture the public had of him. He didn't have the grandfatherly look at all. He was big and powerful. He could chin himself five times with his right hand and three times with his left."

"Very strict. Also very interested. When he taught me the multiplication tables, he was always a perfectionist. Eight times seven? Right now and no hesitation. Drill. Drill. Drill."

But they did it together. "Oh, yes, we had fun," he says, his voice trailing off into memory. "Every now and then."

Always, the Army got in the way. "He didn't have very much time for his family," the words are not bitter. "And boy, I tell you I feared his wrath. I didn't cross him at all."

Things Changed Abruptly
At the age of 14, he remembers things changing abruptly from a direct order relationship to something more mature. "He actually said, 'Well you're old enough to have some sense now. I'm not going to tell you what to do anymore.' . . . From that time on, if he thought I was dressing a little sloppily, or staying out too late, or he didn't like my chasing around, he would couch his terms always in a reasonable and philosophical sort of way."

But he was always there, Ike was, even when he was away. Even without direct orders, a son could pick up his wishes sort of by osmosis.

"Dad never said I had to go to West Point," John remembers. "But I never heard the name of another school. I mentioned the Naval Academy one time, and he turned purple. So I never did that again."

Colonel In Reserve
"The military kept us in more rigid roles with one another than it would have otherwise," says John Eisenhower, now a full colonel in the Army Reserve. "It was almost never entirely forgotten. Although I did call Dad 'Dad' to his face in the White House. Always."

"We really worked much better together when he got out of the White House. He had more time for us, and we were almost on a co-equal status. . . . I was his exec and took care of a lot of odds and ends."

He heard about his father's final setback on his car radio on the New Jersey Turnpike returning home from an author's luncheon for his first book, "The Bitter Woods." Within a few days Ike was dead. That was in 1969.

Eisenhower-Nixon Marriage
But already events had assured that the White House would not go away. Dwight David Eisenhower II had married Julie Nixon.

They started going together in college, she at Smith and he nearby at Amherst. The schools, John Eisenhower explains, were quite liberal, both in faculty and student body. David and Julie were of a conservative bent and "by and large these kids were outside the skunk works so to speak. . . . Nevertheless being sort of on the outs, they were automatically drawn together."

John and Barbara Eisenhower were delighted with the marriage. "We still are. But the fact of Richard Nixon's being in the White House has caused untold complications in everybody's life. Under any circumstances it would, under the most delightful circumstances it would."

Unfair To David
When his son went into the Navy for a while, John was "personally delighted. . . . It got him out of the spin of things."

"Personally I think people are being a little unfair with David when they — and you don't hear it much any more — when they start talking in terms of his being President when he hasn't even had a job. I think that's pushed him a little hard. If he wants to later on, great. But I think it's putting too much of a burden on him. It's a pretty unfair thing to do. He's trying to earn his first nickel."

In a sense, the White House experience is history repeating itself. He remembers his wife's position when Ike was president. "David's in much the same position that Barbara was. The White House is such a powerful force . . . that he is of necessity drawn into the White House vortex. Just as Barbara saw ten times as much of my family as she did of her own. She was drawn into the White House vortex herself."

He prefers not to talk about the Watergate that has marred the White House of Richard Nixon.

"I can't add to the confusion on that one very much," he says carefully, sadly. "It's a national tragedy. It's been a trauma for me and the rest of us. For all sorts of reasons. We see a fella like Maury Stans being tried, and he was a fella I really used to have a lot of respect for and still do. A very high regard for him when he was Dad's budget chief. Maybe that exonerates, that acquittal turned the tide a bit. . . . It sort of restores my feeling that maybe sanity might prevail."

Concentration Of Power
"There may be some good come out of all this. Most people think there will be. I think inevitably the concentration of power in the White House has become greater and greater all the time. . . . Not by malice, not by design. . . . Congress was not doing their job. That's a power void that had to be filled."

"Now Congress is going to assert itself. Whether it's going to have the diligence or guts to continue to assert itself is questionable in my mind. I think so far as (Watergate) goes, the bubble just happened to burst at this time. I can't think of those people I knew so well down there as being less honest or dedicated than people in another administration. I really can't."

Home Too Large
The pleasant home in Valley Forge seems too large for the John Eisenhowers now, with all but one of their four children married, none living at home. This year he becomes eligible for full retirement from the Army, which will leave him with even more time on his hands. He plans no other activity but writing.

Now John Eisenhower is between books, as well as between Presidents. He feels his major effort is still before him, but has no idea what the subject will be. Perhaps it will be "The Highest Level of Command" — from the White House to 10 Downing Street to the Kremlin. Which at least enlarges the arena from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Korean Miners' Bodies Recovered
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Searchers have recovered the bodies of 18 coal miners trapped Tuesday when the walls of a pit caved in at Kohan, 110 miles east of Seoul, police said today.

Seven bodies were recovered Wednesday and 11 this morning, they said.

They were trapped when a stretch of the pit almost 100 feet long collapsed nearby 5,000 feet inside the mine, apparently weakened by a sudden leakage of accumulated water, investigators said.

Dear Abby Long Nose, Flat Chest Make Her Miserable

—By Abigail van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old married woman with three children. At school I was called "Pinocchio" because my nose was so long. I also was teased because I was flat-chested. This gave me a very bad inferiority complex.

Last summer I decided to see a plastic surgeon, so I looked in the yellow pages and picked out a name I liked and made an appointment. He charged me $25 just to tell me he wanted $1,500 to do my nose, and $3,000 for silicone implants, cash in advance! I don't have that much money now.

I was so desperate I wrote to President Nixon and asked if he knew of a plastic surgeon who would do it for less. I told him that life wasn't worth living without those operations.

He forwarded my letter to the Mental Health Department, and they suggested I call "Suicide Prevention" if I felt the need to talk to somebody.

Abby, I hate to go anywhere because I always see women with little noses and big bosoms and I feel like crawling into a hole.

Please, please help me.
A MISERABLE MESS

DEAR MISERABLE: You can't be as big a mess as you say because at least one man thought you were appealing enough to marry.

Start with your nose. Call your country medical society for the names of plastic surgeons who would let you pay on time. Also, try a university medical school.

Nobody has everything, dear. Write to Frederick's of Hollywood for their lingerie catalogue. Their padded bras are so realistic, they could fool a nursing baby. And, good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I do volunteer work at my child's school three mornings a week, and I enjoy it. I do not gossip, I mind my own business, and I am not better acquainted with my child's teachers than any other parent.

I felt quite satisfied with myself until my husband asked me to find some other kind of volunteer work. He says he "knows" our child represents Mother "nosing around" school.

Our child is an average student with no problems, and I was of the opinion that he enjoyed seeing me in school. All the mothers I know do some volunteer work involving their children. (Scouting, Sunday school, etc.) I am at a loss to figure this out. Can you?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: No. Ask your husband how he "knows" what he claims to know, and if he doesn't come up with something convincing, just keep on doing what you're doing.

DEAR ABBY: A man in prison for murder wrote and asked you if murder was a forgivable sin. He said he could find no reference to it in the Bible. All he could find were references to "an eye for an eye."

Your reply, "There is no sin that will not be forgiven by sincere repentance," was beautiful. Perhaps it would be useful to further point out that three of the most admired persons in the Bible were also murderers—Moses, David and Paul. So surely if these men could rise to such heights after having committed such an act, it shows the way for anyone to do so.

House Kills OEO, Keeps Its Main Programs Alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has voted to keep the Office of Economic Opportunity's remaining major programs alive, sidestepping President Nixon's attempts to do away with the antipoverty agency.

By a vote of 331 to 53 on Wednesday, the House disbanded OEO but created a new administration within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to run its community action programs at a cost of $380 million.

Nixon had transferred away most of the antipoverty agency's programs before his final moves were blocked by a court decision last year.

Nixon left OEO and community action out of his January budget, saying the program's costs should be shouldered by state and local governments if the 932 action agencies around the country were to stay in business.

Nixon's budget action will have the effect of killing the program unless the Senate acts and both houses agree on fresh legislation by June 30.

In effect, the House voted to kill OEO in name, but not in spirit, 10 years after it was established as a keystone in former President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society.

Community action was one of the main, controversial cutting edges of OEO in the mid-1960s. But it has developed into a largely favored local institution for providing a variety of assistance and services to the poor.

Supporters for keeping community action included Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, Republican Mayor Richard Lugar of Indianapolis, the AFL-CIO, antipoverty organizations and the Congressional Black Caucus.

Another key aspect of community action is that its local agencies employ 185,000 persons, mostly poor, who would add to the welfare rolls if the program ended.

The House legislation created a Community Action Administration within HEW with a director to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Nixon Reportedly Assessed Penalty On Income Taxes

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — President Nixon was assessed a 5 per cent negligence penalty by the Internal Revenue Service in connection with $487,000 he owes in back income taxes and interest, a newspaper said today.

The Baltimore Sun, quoting sources familiar with the case, said the IRS included the 5 per cent penalty on April 3 when it assessed Nixon $432,787 in back taxes, plus interest.

The Sun said the dollar amount of the alleged negligence penalty could not be determined.

Nixon has said he would pay the taxes, but the White House has refused to say whether a negligence penalty was involved. The IRS refused comment on the newspaper report, saying it was agency policy not to go beyond what a taxpayer reveals about his own case.

A negligence penalty does not amount to a finding of fraud. It is made for "negligence or intentional disregard of rules and regulations," an IRS spokesman said.

Trinity College Founding Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., was founded on May 16, 1823. It is the second oldest college in the state.

Widow's Home Being Guarded By Vietnam Veterans In Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Richard S. Roth said behind her boarded living room window reading her hate mail. A member of the black Vietnam veterans group which has pledged to protect her family stood by.

"I'm afraid of my own shadow," said the black mother of six, whose West Side home has been the target of rocks, garbage and harassment since she moved into the previously all-white neighborhood last summer.

At first uncertain about whether to flee from the violence, Mrs. Richard, whose children range from 9 months to 19 years old, now says she is determined to stay.

"I've lived with white people all my life," she said. "My parents were the second family in an East Side neighborhood they used to call 'Polish Town.'"

Two of the Richard boys played basketball nearby with several neighbors in sight of an unmarked police car.

Police have been guarding her modest home around the clock since last week. Mrs. Richard finally sought their help after a brick was thrown in her basement window. An inscription tied to the brick read: "Go home nigger—can you dig it?"

The Interested Veterans for Economic and Social Progress moved in Wednesday with a

Groups Protest Proposed Boost In Freight Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain industry and commodity groups are protesting a proposed 10 per cent hike in the nation's railroad freight rates.

The increase, sought by railroad companies, is being considered by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In a statement filed with the ICC, the National Association of Wheat Growers said the request for a rate increase "overstates revenue needs, neglects to show the contributions of past increases and fails to justify higher rates on grain traffic."

The National Grain and Feed Association said a new 10 per cent boost would mean rail freight rates would have increased 24.5 per cent in a nine-month period.

Association officials said if the ICC grants the higher rates, railroads will lose significant grain traffic to truck and barge carriers.

IN INVESTIGATION OF DEATH— Body Of Bride To Be Exhumed Today

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The body of Patricia Albanowski Giesick, the former New Jersey woman killed mysteriously along a lonely bayou in New Orleans a few days after her marriage, was to be exhumed today in Ewing Township.

A New Orleans police spokesman said Wednesday that her Jan. 2 death, originally treated as a hit-run accident, now is unclassified. He denied a report from a police officer earlier in the day that it had been reclassified as a murder.

Superior Court Judge Arthur A. Salvatore signed the exhumation order requested by New Orleans authorities seeking a sample of hair from the body.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Ralph Whalen of New Orleans said the hair sample would be compared with hair found on the bumper of one of two cars rented by Giesick under the name of C. J. Guillem.

The investigation of Mrs. Giesick's death was reopened by New Orleans authorities after her husband—Claude James Giesick Jr., 26, of San Antonio, Tex.—was arrested in San Antonio on charges of bigamy and passing bad checks.

Since the death of Patricia, his fourth wife, he had been living with his third wife, Kathy, from whom police charge he was never divorced.

Whalen said he hoped his detectives could complete their investigation by the end of the week so he could present the case to an Orleans Parish grand jury next Thursday.

When Patricia was killed during their honeymoon, Giesick told police she was struck by a car. He said she ran into the middle of the street on a whim while the couple was walking late at night in a deserted, industrial area of the city.

The case has created interest partly because of the bizarre side issues raised in the investigation. Some that have come to light include:

- Whether Patricia telephoned her mother only hours before her death to say she had learned that Giesick had taken out at least $200,000 in life insurance on her—and that she feared for her life. The New York Daily News says it has learned there were two policies, one for $200,000 and another for $100,000. The mother has denied the report of the telephone calls from Patricia, given to the Daily News by her sister.
- The question of Patricia's past. The Sunday Times-Advertiser of Trenton, N.J., quoted Giesick as saying she was a prostitute in a Dallas massage parlor who forced him to marry her because she said she was pregnant. A woman at the Geisha Massage Parlor in Irving, Tex., said Patricia had worked there about two months.
- The role of Samuel Corey in the case. Corey, who married Patricia and Giesick in Richardson, Tex., reportedly is a former brother in the Society of Mary who now calls himself the Right Rev. Samuel C. Corey. He ran massage parlors in San Antonio, Irving and Dallas. He has been charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution at his Tokyo House massage parlor at Irving, near Dallas. Irving Police Capt. John Loper said Giesick, going under the name of Guillem, came to police headquarters this month to claim ownership of a video tape machine confiscated in a raid on the Tokyo House.

—The question of Giesick's family. Last Friday, Texas authorities removed two children from the care of Giesick and Kathy and placed them in a child welfare home. The Times-Advertiser quoted Giesick as saying he informally adopted them after the father said he didn't want them any more.

But The Daily News said the father, Pfc. James Hartman, Richardson, Tex., reportedly is threatened to kill Giesick.

—The related question of Patricia's previous marriages. Patricia's mother said Wednesday Giesick told her he was previously married to a former Miss Texas. She said Giesick told her the woman and a child by the marriage were killed in a hit-run accident.

Kissinger Seals Deal With Kiss

JERUSALEM (AP) — Seal it with a kiss, they say.

And that's what Secretary of State Henry Kissinger did Wednesday, bussing a stunned Golda Meir after the announcement of a Syrian-Israeli troop disengagement.

"I didn't know you kissed women," the 76-year-old Israeli premier responded, referring to photographs of Kissinger embracing Arab leaders.

"This is to a very great extent your day," Mrs. Meir told the secretary of state. "It has been a pleasure and a joy to work together."

Financial Problems Hurt Beef Producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz says he is concerned about the possibility of an increase in the slaughter of beef cows and heifers because of current financial problems in the cattle business.

If that happens and fewer breeding cattle are available, Butz said Wednesday, consumers may face tighter beef supplies and higher prices later on. Feedlot operators since last fall have been squeezed by high feed costs and relatively low market prices for cattle.

The effects are being felt all along the beef production pipeline, Butz said.

Butz made his remarks at a meeting called to brief consumer specialists from the food industry, including representatives of agribusiness firms, about USDA policies and thinking on the food situation.

As he has before, Butz said much of the current difficulty in the livestock sector stems from federal price curbs last year. As an example, he said hog producers a year ago indicated they would produce a six per cent larger pig crop in the last half of 1973 than they did a year earlier.

Senate Revives Foreign Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has revived the administration's first foreign aid bill of the year.

It passed 55 to 27 Wednesday a measure to authorize an additional $1.5 billion U.S. contribution to the International Development Association for lending over four years to the world's poorest nations.

The House voted down a similar bill in January, 248 to 155, but the Senate couched it in different terms—$375 million a year for the next four years—to give the House opportunity for another vote.

The International Development Association, commonly called IDA, was founded in 1960 as the "soft loan" affiliate of the World Bank. Supported by 25 nations, it makes loans at three-quarters of one per cent service charge for projects in nations with a per capita income less than $375 a year.

But government price curbs were a signal to producers that troubles lay ahead, he said. Consequently, many pregnant sows were sold for slaughter and, instead of a larger pig crop in the last half of 1973, production dropped one per cent from a year earlier.

Similar signals have been received by cattle producers, Butz said. Instead of expected larger placements of new cattle in feedlots last winter and fall, fewer animals were put on feed. That helped push retail beef prices to record heights last January and February, he said.

Guilty Of Demagoguery

Butz said some consumer groups and politicians were guilty of demagoguery whenever they saw a chance to "stir up things" about food prices. He said many do not relate food on grocers' shelves with items farmers produce.

Recently, Butz said, "somebody in Congress" discovered a cow could have only one calf per year and that the normal gestation period between breeding a cow and delivery of a calf was nine months.

Consequently, Butz said, "a bill was prepared to cut the gestation period in half" and thus speed up beef production. "And I think if that bill had been introduced, it would have passed," he added.

Kuwait Agrees To Give Lebanon Missile Batteries

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kuwait has agreed to give Lebanon eight ground-to-air missile batteries to strengthen Lebanon's defenses against Israeli attack, Beirut newspapers reported today.

An agreement reached during a current visit to Kuwait by Lebanese Premier Takiyeddin Solh calls for Kuwait to negotiate with France to have the missiles it ordered this year diverted to Lebanon, the papers said.

Solh is touring oil-producing Arab nations seeking aid for a $10-billion defense plan approved by his government after Israeli air and sea attacks two weeks ago.

Ad For Expletive Deletor Draws Many Phone Calls

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A classified ad in the Baltimore Sun papers for an "expletive deletor" drew a number of calls to the White House switchboard, an operator there said.

The origin of the ad, which appeared in the newspapers in their Wednesday editions, was not clear. It said:

"Sensitive position preparing official documents for publication. Extensive vocabulary required; retired drill instructor preferred. High pay and good benefits, including executive clemency."

The ad gave the telephone number of the White House switchboard.

Quizzed about the ad, a White House operator said, "We're aware of it. We've had a number of calls." A White House press office employee said, "It's the first I've heard of it."

A newspaper employee said the ad was apparently paid for in cash sometime Tuesday. It did not appear in the Thursday editions.

Survey Results at College Ruled Open Records

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — An opinion by Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill has declared Stephen F. Austin State University must make public student evaluation of faculty members.

The controversy began in December 1973 when a Stephen F. Austin student asked the school to release the results of the evaluation survey. The school refused.

Hill said the state-funded school is covered by the 1973 open records law and the requested information should have been made public.

U.S. Fishermen Don't Believe 'In Honor System'

By STANLEY JOHNSON
Every day, U.S. Coast Guard planes lumber low over the rigid, fish-filled North Atlantic to make sure huge foreign trawlers stay outside the 12-mile limit and leave the coastal water catch for smaller American boats.

American fishermen have little faith in the Coast Guard or other U.S. government programs. And they certainly don't put much stock in the good will of the foreigners.

"Fishermen don't believe in the honor system," William Gordon, deputy regional director of the National Marine Fisheries Service, said from his office in Gloucester, Mass. "Our fishermen simply refuse to accept that foreign governments have effective control over their nationals."

Schedule "Ball-In" To which Octavio Modesta, general manager of the New Bedford Seafood Producers' Association, replied from his office: "Doesn't the government always support everybody else?"

He said that fishermen from New England and New Jersey, the main producing areas, would stage a "ball-in" at Washington June 11 to try to net congressional votes for an extension of the 12-mile limit to 200 miles.

"A 200-mile limit which would keep their historic fishing grounds for New Englanders is the answer," he said.

This point of view is also widespread among fishermen along the South Atlantic Coast, the Gulf of Mexico, the West Coast and in Alaskan waters, where the situation is particularly acute.

Accommodates Fisherman "Basically we want to accommodate the fishermen," said Gordon, "but we feel unilateral action is not the way to do it."

He said the United States would work at an international conference on the Law of the Sea, to be held June 20-Aug. 10 in Caracas, Venezuela, for an international regime controlling fishing grounds.

"This is the only approach we can take at Caracas," he said.

Most troubled of American waters are those around Alaska, which has 6,640 miles of coastline — half as much as all the other 49 states put together. It also has 65 per cent of the U.S. continental shelf and thousands of miles of "waters of Alaskan interest" beyond the 12-mile limit.

For protection, there are at least two and frequently four Coast Guard cutters patrolling at all times, four C130 aircraft and five long range H3 helicopters.

Foreign Fishing Vessels During one week in the middle of May, there were 71 Soviet, 161 Japanese and 5 South Korean fishing vessels operating in the "waters of Alaskan interest."

U.S. Atty. Gen. Kent Edwards said a Japanese ship was recently fined $300,000 for violating the 12-mile limit — the highest fine on record.

There are 26,000 American fishermen manning 3,000 vessels from the rock-bound coasts of Maine to the sand dunes of North Carolina. Last year, their catch was valued at $180 million. But they form only a small part of the American fishing fleet.

About 150,000 U.S. fishermen brought in $4.7 billion worth of fish caught all over the world in 1973.

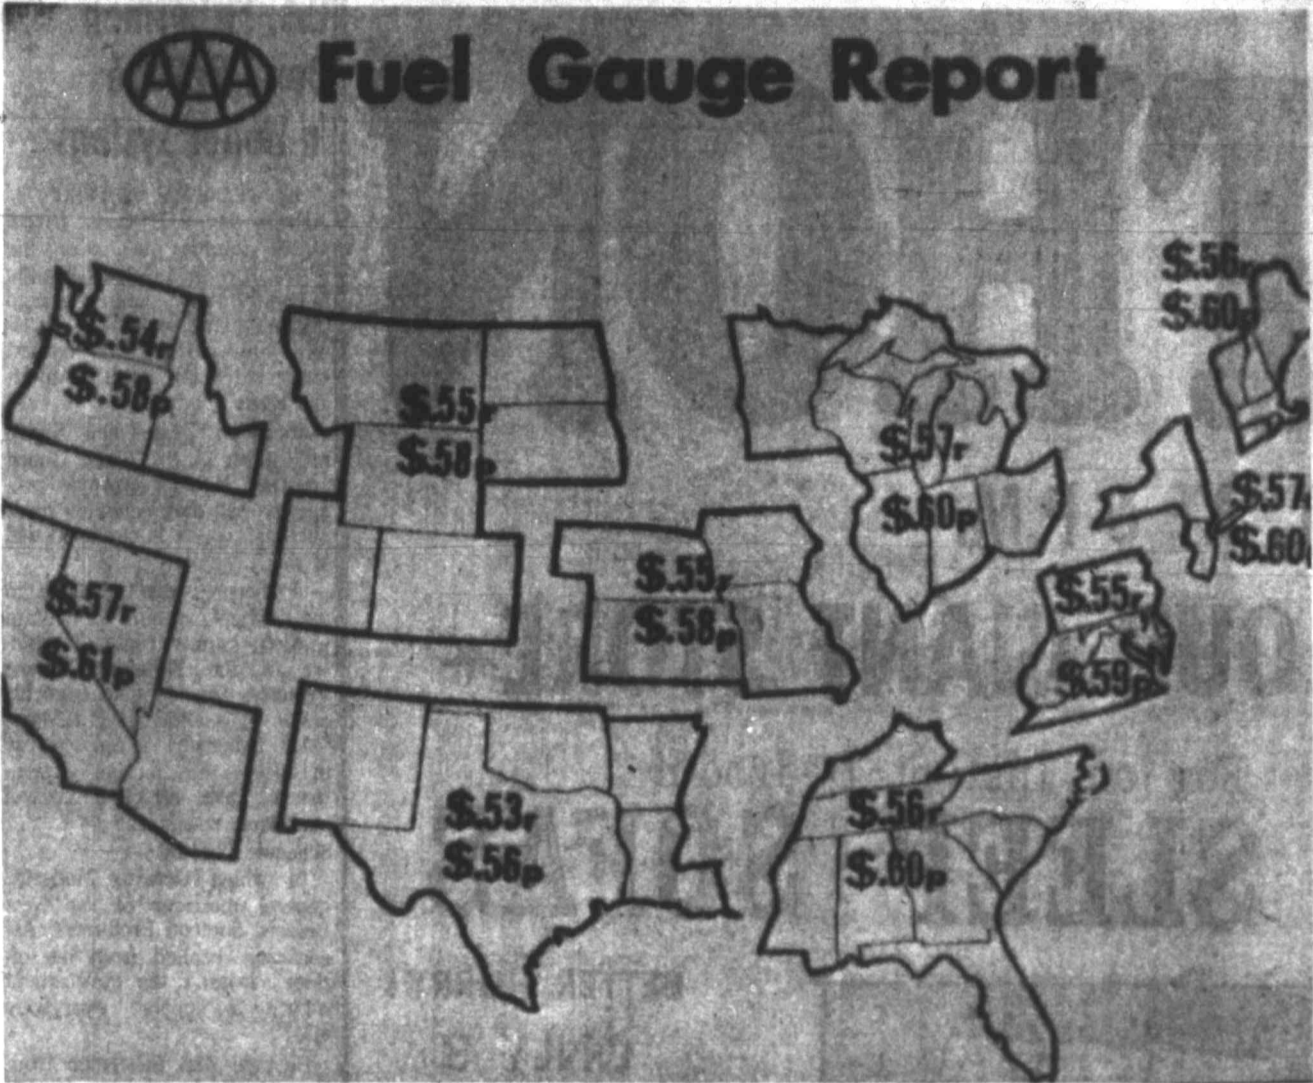

It's up to the U.S. Coast Guard to protect the Americans who fish within the 12-mile limit.

Supplied By Mother Ships Foreign fleets such as this often stay in the fishing grounds for a year or more. They are supplied from home by mother-ships which bring supplies, give medical attention, process the catch and take it home.

LA. James A. Medeiros, offshore fisheries patrol officer, said at his office on Governor's Island, N.Y., was little trouble with the Soviet Union or the Poles, who tended to fish within the 80,000-ton-a-year quota and to avoid forbidden spawning areas.

But Modesta's association has posted signs in almost every fish store and fish restaurant in the cape area saying: "The Reason the Price of Fish is Out of Sight is because They're Catching Everything in Sight."

North America's Telephones In 1972, there were 88.4 telephones per 100 people in North America compared with the world average of 7.8 per 100 people.

GASOLINE PRICES ACROSS THE NATION—This map shows the average cost per gallon of regular and premium gasoline for the ten regions of the nation. Motorists in the Southwest are faring best at the gasoline pumps with those in California, Arizona and Nevada paying the highest. On a nationwide basis, The American Automobile Association said, only one per cent of the stations are out of fuel and only two per cent are limiting purchases, while 40 per cent are open on Sunday. # Energy Expert Says Possibility Of Second Embargo Eliminated

WASHINGTON (AP) — fuel oil for June. due to lack of fuel oil with the possible exception of the East Coast, Sawhill said. And the American Automobile Association said Memorial Day weekend travel and end-of-the-month gasoline allocation shortage failed to cause any deterioration in a nation's gasoline supplies this week.

Tale Of Two Texas Cities

By ROD DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
Impact and Uncertain are 350 long Texas miles apart, but each has a federal revenue sharing problem—one can't give money away and the other can't get it.

Wilhelm's statement capped a day of good energy news for the country. The federal energy chief said electric utilities should have enough fuel to avoid power problems this summer, and it was reported that for the first time this year there are no gasoline shortages at the end of the month.

The diplomatic breakthrough in the Mideast, achieved after 32 days of mediation by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, came just three days before the Arabs were scheduled to meet and review their oil-export policy. "I think with this impediment removed we can be reasonably assured that Arab oil production will increase, especially in Saudi Arabia," Wilhelm said.

Disengagement Accord Lets Sadat Breathe Little Easier

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
An AP News Analysis
The Syrian-Israeli military disengagement accord dramatically improves chances for Middle East stability. And so Syria's anxious ally, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, can begin breathing a little easier.

of difficulty that plagued him before the October war, when intellectuals demanded an end, one way or another, to the situation of "no war, no peace." When Arab terrorists burst into the picture so bloodily at a critical moment in the Syria-Israel negotiations, it had seemed all Kissinger's patient labor would go down the drain.

Reaction To Pact Varies

By The Associated Press
President Nixon, Western European leaders and young Israelis welcomed the Israel-Syria disengagement agreement. But the Soviet Union was cautious, Syria and most other Arab countries were silent and some older Israelis were skeptical whether the pact will succeed.

progress at the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East. The Soviet news agency Tass reported the agreement but said it must be accompanied by other measures to really pacify the Middle East. It said "appropriate measures should immediately be taken to achieve an all-encompassing and just settlement."

AT CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—

Environmental Unit Okayed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Constitutional Convention continues debate today on open beaches after having adopted an environmental section that opponents say was written by industry lobbyists.

The section on beaches would forbid the sale of public beaches on the seaward shore of the Gulf of Mexico.

The environmental section would prohibit future legislation from authorizing suits by private citizens against polluters.

Only suits against state agencies charged with protecting the environment would be allowed.

A coalition of big-city Republicans and mainly rural Democrats pushed across the environment proposal, 79-72, Wednesday after three times narrowly defeating attempts by environmentalists to strike all reference to suits, which would have left it open to legislative action.

FIRST FRENCH WOMAN MINISTER—Mme. Simone Veil, minister of health and the only woman in the new French government, is shown walking to a cabinet meeting in Paris. (AP Wirephoto.)

Some questioned whether the common law right to file a public nuisance suit might be wiped out by the specification of what suits are authorized.

Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, argued passionately against the proposal. He said every "fat cat" in the state had a lobbyist in the Capitol trying to protect "his local polluter."

"The public will thank you for leaving your own hands untied, and the lobby can go straight to hell!" he shouted. Sen. Bob Gammage, D-Houston, said if the proposal was put into the state's basic document it would not be "a social contract... (it would be) a social swindle."

Rep. Richard Reynolds, R-Richardson, said there were lobbyists on the other side, too. "We have a choice of which lobbyists we think can produce that language that's best for the people of Texas," he said.

"I hope you are in favor of some property rights—private property rights," Reynolds said.

Rep. Ray Hutchison, R-Dallas, said the proposal was in the best interests of employees of industry. "They too have some rights," he said.

Senate Approves Gold Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has adopted an amendment to remove as of Sept. 1 the present prohibitions preventing Americans from buying and holding gold as a commodity.

The measure, sponsored by Sens. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., and James McClure, R-Idaho, as an amendment to a bill authorizing funds for the International Development Association, was approved by voice vote Wednesday.

The gold ownership restrictions have been in effect since 1934.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Searchers say they have found fresh signs of Fred Mundy's trek through the remote and barren Baja California desert of Mexico.

But they believe time may be running out for the missing motorcycle racer, who has been wandering through the arid highlands since May 18.

"There is no food or water in the area in which we believe Mundy to have wandered most recently," says Alfonso Esquer Sandez, Mexicali fire chief, whose men have joined a handful of Mexican cowboys in the search.

"We feel time is of top importance now. He must be found quickly if he is to be found alive."

Bus Romance Ends In Wedding

SEATTLE (AP) — Kathleen Koza says the Metro bus driver on Coach 514 was running late and seemed a bit surly and unpleasant the first time they met.

But a short time later she was riding William Block's routes "just for fun" on her days off.

Wednesday the two were married on Coach 514.

The bus romance began a little more than a year ago. The bride, 22, recalled that Block, 38, first told her he loved her last June after a date at a race track. She won all the races. He lost them all.

Though he transferred from her route three weeks after they met, Miss Koza's ride-along policy kept them in touch.

Oil Exporting Countries Eye Tax Hike, Not Higher Prices

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The chief executive officer of the cartel which handles 80 percent of global oil exports said today his organization might hike oil taxes rather than prices when a freeze expires July 1.

Abderrahman Khene, secretary-general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC — said that members might decide to step up their income by increased taxation to reap the windfall profits of the Western oil companies.

In an exclusive interview, he made clear OPEC expected the oil companies to absorb this, and not make their customers pay for it by boosting oil prices.

"Not long ago, the oil companies were making a profit of about 50 cents per barrel of crude oil while, starting in the last months, they were making $4 or more," he said.

"Maybe we will try to reap the windfall profits of the oil companies without changing the posted prices" at the meeting of the OPEC oil ministers in Quito, Ecuador starting June 15.

Stressing this was his personal opinion, he said this could be done by boosting the government take of the OPEC countries through higher taxation.

OPEC, which includes the Persian Gulf producers, decided here March 16 to extend the freeze of oil prices until July 1, stating they were giving industrialized countries a chance to control their galloping inflation.

The so-called posted price for Persian crude oil at the time was $11.65. The government take from it by the producing countries was about $7.

The posted price is a tax reference price on which OPEC countries base their taxes and royalties. The actual market price the petroleum companies have been getting for oil has been hovering around $9 a barrel.

Bail Bondsman To Seek Immunity

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators probed deeper today into bail bond practices in Dallas County at a court of inquiry. A former bondsman who refused to testify Wednesday was expected to seek immunity from prosecution today in exchange for his testimony. Wayne Parsons invoked the Fifth Amendment for the second day as his lawyers prepared to seek immunity from prosecution for him.

Another former bondsman, Bobby Woods, said he gave $5 a week to a sheriff's department coffee fund. He denied he ever offered Rockwall County Sheriff W. J. Price $75,000 for 1,000 blank bail bonds.

Price told the court he knew nothing about a $75,000 bribe for blank bail bonds.

Price testified he sold Woods property valued at $50,000 which later was used to secure $275,000 in bail bond collateral in Dallas County.

The court of inquiry is one of several investigations into county bonding activities prompted by newspaper revelations earlier this year of irregular practices.

County Auditor George Smith said Wednesday an investigation by his office has revealed another $500,000 in unpaid bond forfeitures since Jan. 1, raising the total unpaid forfeitures to $3 million.

Smith added he had reported problems in the county bonding operation since 1967 to county commissioners and district court judges.

Emerson Student's Christmas Seal Design Wins Award

The American Lung Association and the National Art Education Association awarded a certificate of appreciation to Elaine Kimbro, 5th grade student at Emerson Elementary School, for her entry in the 1975 Christmas Seal design project.

Miss Kimbro is a student of Emerson's art teacher, Mrs. Mary Engler.

Making the presentation to Miss Kimbro today at Emerson Elementary's awards assembly was C. W. Chancellor Jr., board member of the American Lung Association of Texas—Big Country Area.

The 1975 Christmas Seals will be a sheet of 54 seals, representing an entry chosen from each state, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia. The entry to represent Texas was painted by an elementary student from Austin.

Christmas Seals are the primary means of support for the American Lung Association, the oldest volunteer health association in the United States. For years known as the National Tuberculosis Association, the name was changed in May of 1973 to better reflect the wider aim of the agency's concern with the prevention and control of lung disease.

Electrical Shock Kills Oil Worker

McLEAN, Tex. (AP) — Oil worker Lee Sutton of Pampa was electrocuted Wednesday when the top of an oil rig on which he was working touched a 23,000 volt power line on Texas 273 near here.

Sutton, an employe of the Curtiss Mow Service, was helping move the rig, investigators said.

Basic Measures Of Population Growth Drop To Record Lows In United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau reports that while the nation last year had a net population gain of 1.5 million, three basic measures of population growth dropped to record lows.

Last year's gain, which upped the total population to 211,210,000, compared with an increase of 2.2 million in 1970 and the record annual growth of 3 million in 1967, the bureau said Wednesday.

The three population growth parameters which declined to new lows last year were the crude birth rate, general fertility and total fertility rate.

The crude rate — the number of births per 1,000 population — was 14.9, down from 18.2 in 1970 and 25.2 in 1957.

The general fertility rate — the number of births per 1,000 women 15 to 44 years old — was 69.3, compared with 87.9 in 1970 and 122.9 in 1957.

The total fertility rate — annual births based on the projected completed family size of 1,000 women — was 1,902. That was down from 2,480 in 1970 and 3,767 in 1957.

To remind everyone of the great school we have had at MHS in 1973-74, we're going to do a quick Flashback!! Remember the Hillbilly Hootin' Howdy Week, followed by the exciting and prosperous football season. A different highlight to the season was the series of after-the-game dances in the Youth Center. Homecoming came into the scene with the parade of "Babes in Toyland." Basketball bounced in "two"! We had a fast moving season with lots of wins. New '74 Year Begins!!

January started off with a smashing hit called "Mame." It was a great all-school success!! Then the National Honor Society had its annual match-making project. With singing telegrams and carnations, the day was filled with cupid!! The March winds blew in the Catoico coronation a bright Rainbow. Striking into homplate, the baseball team ran for many great games. Along with whirling winds, students got dizzy from all the parties. Spring sports also kept the students active!! Volleyball spiked it all the way to district while the tennis team netted some victories. The swim, gym and girls golf teams all made it to the STATE FINALS!! We appreciate the great way they represented Midland High School. Boys golf was great during the season. The track team worked hard and some of the members qualified for regionals.

UP-To-Date Baccalaureate service was held in the MHS auditorium last Sunday The Senior Class thanks Mr. Gill, the Rev. Jonathan Hoff, and all of those who helped to make this a memorable event!! Also special thanks go to the Youth Center board and all those Junior Council members who brought cookies for the reception afterwards. Graduation is tonight at 6 in Midland Memorial Stadium. And the event that we've been waiting for all year — The Senior All-Night-Party, from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. Hope everyone ch... out this school year with a bang.

Constitutional Convention Delegates Will Be Asked To OK $18-Million Budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Constitutional Convention delegates will be asked today to approve a $18-million budget that will finance the final days of the convention and help the Texas House out of a financial hole.

The budget was approved Wednesday by the convention's administration committee after considerable hot argument, mostly between senators and representatives.

The budget approved by the committee contains $307,000 for salaries of House employees who are now occupied with convention work. This is about $200,000 more than the budget for the first portion of the convention.

House leaders said Wednesday that by taking $300,000 off the House payroll and putting it on the convention payroll the House would be able to finish the present fiscal year, Aug. 31, without a deficit. Otherwise it might be up to $300,000 in the hole.

The resolution also would allow the House to keep $330,000 that the 1973 Legislature originally appropriated for the convention, making a total gain for the House of about $530,000.

"We are not reimbursing the House for anything or picking up any House expenses," Speaker Price Daniel Jr. said. "We will just be having the convention pay its way from now on."

Sen. James Cole, D-Greenville, House administration head, said the House employees to be transferred to the convention payroll would be those who spend at least 75 and 80 per cent of their time working for the convention. As soon as the convention ends they will go back on the House payroll.

"We want to stress that none of the Senate employees working for the convention will be transferred to the convention payroll," said Sen. Jack High-tower, D-Vernon, one of those voting against the resolution in committee.

Cole said if the convention did not approve the relief for the House "the next step would be to get the governor to call a special session and appropriate more money for the convention."

South Vietnam Envoy Argues Against Aid Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Vietnamese Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong says a deep cut in military aid by Congress would encourage North Vietnam and possibly tempt Hanoi into wider military adventures.

Reacting to a recent House cutback of $474 million in military aid to South Vietnam, the envoy said the Saigon government is in a difficult position, mainly because North Vietnam is pressing a policy of violence while the one-for-one replacement allowed under the Paris agreement for expended ammunition and equipment is not being maintained for South Vietnamese forces, he said.

Phuong said recent North Vietnamese attacks show that Hanoi has started what he called a generalized strategic offensive.

"During the last three weeks North Vietnam has been using tanks and artillery to overrun many outposts which have been held by us for a long time. They are making intensive use of heavy artillery," he added.

At the same time Phuong said that North Vietnam has broken off meetings in Paris with representatives of the South and the meeting of a two-party joint commission in Saigon.

The House of Representatives last week reduced an administration request for military aid to South Vietnam from $1.6 billion in the fiscal year starting July 1 to $1.126 billion—the same level as for the current fiscal year. The Senate Armed Services Committee has recommended an even deeper cut to $900 million.

Coroner Says No Inquest Planned Now In Deaths Of Six SLA Members In LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A research has shown up anything irregular."

In an interview with television station KNXT here, Wolfe said Los Angeles police assured him before the raid on the SLA hideout that "the last thing we will do is go in with our guns blazing."

But Wolfe said: "They didn't know who they had killed, they didn't know who was in the house, they didn't know who they were trying to kill." Identities of the victims were not learned until the day after the gunbattle.

There was no immediate comment from police. They have said before that when they gave occupants in the house a chance to surrender, the response from the SLA was protracted gunfire.

Meanwhile, today's Chicago Tribune reported that authorities believe on the basis of a notebook found near the shoot-out site that newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was so fully trusted by her onetime SLA kidnapers that they permitted her to stand solitary guard against police raids through the night.

Middles Retake Navigation Exam

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Almost 1,000 midshipmen have retaken an exam in a navigation course at the Naval Academy, but an investigation is continuing into alleged cheating on the first test.

Most academy sophomores and a few juniors were ordered to cut short their pregraduation week leave and return here Wednesday for a second exam after academy officials learned that some midshipmen had prior knowledge of the original examination given May 21.

The academy has indicated as many as 60 midshipmen are involved. Other sources placed the number in the neighborhood of 100.

Thunderstorms Rumble Across Country

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms rumbled along a line that snaked from the middle Atlantic Coast to southern Nevada today.

Heavy storm activity developed before dawn in the Ohio Valley and upper Plains, while rain, hail and a tornado lashed the Nebraska Panhandle near Sidney.

Thunderstorms also struck from South Missouri into North Central Kentucky, and showers and thundershowers dampened the mid-Atlantic Coast states, the upper Rockies and Southwest Texas.

Fog blanketed much of the Northeast and northern Ohio Valley during the night, and visibilities dropped to near zero in some areas.

Skies were clear from California and Oregon through the central and southern Rockies and the Gulf Coast states.

Along the Gulf, temperatures were balmy, remaining in the 70s and 80s during the evening.

Levels dipped into the 30s, however, in Upper Michigan and Maine.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 84 at Needles, Calif., to 33 at Loring Air Force Base, Maine.

Five Hurt In Ohio Shootout

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — More than 100 policemen wearing bullet-proof vests fired on robbery suspects in an East Cleveland home in a gunbattle that lasted 80 minutes. Two residents and three policemen were wounded, one critically.

Three men were arrested, police said.

They were believed to be the same three police were hunting for in an earlier robbery attempt that started the shootout Wednesday night.

They remained unidentified early today and charges had not yet been filed.

Man Shot Dead In Police Station

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police say William Allen Norman, 43, walked into a Hollywood police station, pointed a frontier-style pistol at officers and said: "Okay, here I am."

He was shot dead on the spot. Police said it was only afterward they discovered the Los Angeles man was carrying a pellet gun, designed to look like a Western weapon.

Police declined any further details on the Wednesday incident.

Supreme Court Will Hear Texas Districting Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to hear the State of Texas appeal of a lower court order that struck down multi-member legislative districts in seven counties.

A three-judge panel had said the 1971 state reapportionment law denied equal representation to blacks and Mexican Americans in the contested counties. The Supreme Court had in a previous ruling upheld the rest of the 1971 law.

The state appeal said the lower court ruling applied factors never before recognized by the Supreme Court.

"Drawing the legislative district lines could hardly be thought likely to end racial prejudice," the state attorneys argued in a brief to the high court.

The federal panel had listed these factors as evidence of discrimination:

"Restricted access of minority groups to the slating of candidates for particular party nominations;

"The consistent use of racist campaign tactics to defeat minority candidates or those championing minority concerns;

"The indifference or hostility of the district wide representatives to particularized minority interests;

"The inability of minority groups to obtain representations in proportion to their percentage of the district population."

The counties are Tarrant, Travis, McLennan, Lubbock, Nueces, El Paso and Jefferson.

Oil-Rich Ecuador Will Pay Ancient War Debt

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Money from new-found oil is rolling in so fast that once-poor Ecuador has decided to pay the equivalent of $2.1 million to settle up a 150-year-old war debt long before its final due.

Also known as "the English debt certificates" because the British government arranged and underwrote the loan, the bonds were due to mature the year 2010.

But President Guillermo Rodriguez Lara decided not to wait. Oil money has been accumulating so fast the last two years that it is causing serious inflation.

The president, who heads a military regime, signed an executive order last week authorizing payments to bondholders as part of the celebrations of the Battle of Pichincha, which finally routed the Spaniards from the area 152 years ago.

Bankers say many of these bonds are heirlooms held by old English families. The British government has promised to help with the liquidation by setting up a special fund through which the certificates can be redeemed or by locating the holders.

The loan was originally negotiated in London by Simon Bolivar, the soldier of fortune who liberated the upper half of South America from Spanish colonial domination. He needed the money to finance the campaign.

Britain agreed to help the general as part of its war effort to free Europe from Napoleon's domination.

Signal To Become Burmah O&G Co.

HOUSTON — Signal Oil and Gas Co., board of directors has voted to change the company's name to Burmah Oil and Gas Co., effective June 1, it was announced Friday by W. H. Thompson Jr., Signal's president and chief executive officer.

Signal was acquired in January by Burmah Oil Incorporated, U.S. subsidiary of The Burmah Oil Company Limited of the United Kingdom.

Thompson said all operations will continue from existing offices, and corporate headquarters will remain in Houston.

Signal Oil and Gas Co. began operations in 1922 on Signal Hill, California — one of the richest oilfields in American history. In 1972 Signal relocated its corporate headquarters from Los Angeles to Houston. Signal's present operations are concentrated in Southern California, the Gulf of Mexico and the North Sea.

Soviets Criticize Fulbright Defeat

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news agency Tass has described Sen. William Fulbright's defeat in the Arkansas Democratic primary as a victory for "American reaction, the military-industrial complex and influential Zionist elements."

The agency said Wednesday that Fulbright was an "erudite, sober-minded and independent" foreign affairs expert.

Lyndon B. Johnson Bust On Display

Lady Bird Johnson formally presented the bust, her favorite, in a ceremony Wednesday night at the gallery, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution.

Patman Taking Proposal For GAO Audit Of Federal Reserve To House

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Banking Chairman Wright Patman is taking to the House his proposal for a General Accounting Office audit of the Federal Reserve.

Patman, D-Tex., described his action of today as "an opportunity to cast a vote for open government and for the people's right to know what is happening with the people's business and money."

The opposition to the bill has been intense. A member of the House leadership said the lobbying has been the heaviest of this legislative session.

There is some speculation, in fact, that House members are reluctant to upset their business and banker friends in an election year may block Patman from bringing the bill up by defeating its parliamentary floor access.

But Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns and a host of business and banker friends say the Fed would be severely damaged in its ability to independently shape the nation's economic policy if the GAO—and therefore the Congress—were second-guessing it.

An audit of the Fed has been Patman's consuming ambition for decades.

He says it is unthinkable that such a major agency would be beyond the reach of congressional auditors in the GAO. He also has been critical generally of the Federal Reserve for its money management, in particular for allowing interest rates to rise to historic double-digit highs.

The Banking subcommittee on domestic finance has scheduled hearings for his summer into the Federal Reserve's policies in the current economic morass.

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, plans to offer an amendment that Patman says would cripple the bill but which Ashley says would keep it from destroying the Federal Reserve's independence in shaping economic policy.

He would limit the audit to scrutiny of its financial and operational practices, and not an evaluation of Fed policies.

Texas Postal Sites Acquired

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The regional Postal Service office announced today it has acquired sites for installations in McAllen and San Antonio.

The McAllen site for a new station is about five acres at the intersection of Pecan Avenue and North McColl Road. It was bought for $140,000 from Vannie E. Cook Jr. of McAllen.

The San Antonio purchase was for three acres at Sherwood Drive and Vance Jackson Road. It was sold by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daubert, San Antonio, for $259,100.

Four Routes Proposed For Extension Of I-27

HOUSTON (AP) — Citizens groups suggested four possible routes Wednesday night for an extension of Interstate 27 in West Texas.

It was the last of seven public meetings on the feasibility, location and need for the extension.

About 145 persons who included representatives from 25 chambers of commerce, attended.

Testimony and public recommendations from the seven meetings will be compiled in a report to the Federal Highway Administration.

"The whole purpose of these meetings is for citizens to offer what need, feasibility and route they consider to be best," said Phil Wilson, director of the planning and research division of the Texas Highway Department.

Proposed routes were: I-27 would follow U.S. 87 through

Lamesa, Big Spring, San Angelo, Eden, and Menard and join Interstate 10 at Junction; follow U.S. 84 through Slaton, Post, Snyder and Roscoe, and join I-20 through Abilene and follow existing routes to Coleman, Cross Plains, Brownwood, Goldthwaite, Lampasas and Austin and join I-10 at Columbus;

I-27 would follow U.S. 84, through Slaton, Snyder, and Sweetwater, then through Ballinger, Brady, Llano to Austin then continue to Columbus and join I-10, or I-27 would follow U.S. 84 to Snyder, south to Colorado City, Robert Lee, San Angelo and link with I-10 at Junction.

A highway department spokesman stressed the purpose of the meeting was not to tell the public where the highway would be built but to get public feedback on where it wanted the highway.

The I-27 project is part of a nationwide study of 10 highway systems. All 10 studies will be presented to Congress by Jan. 1.

A highway department spokesman said comments from all the meetings favored the extension because it would provide a logical link between military bases from Denver and Colorado Springs, Colo., through Texas; it connects major educational institutions throughout the Gulf Coast to Plains area; it provides important connections for industrial areas; it connects tourist attractions and links the agricultural Panhandle-Plains with the oil rich South Plains-Permian Basin region.

Other meetings were held in Big Spring, Lubbock, Lamesa, Snyder, Abilene, and San Angelo.

Judge, Lawyers Are To Consult Before Henley Indictments Motion Allowed

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state district court judge will consult with lawyers before he allows the filing of motions seeking to throw out six indictments against Houston mass murders defendant Elmer Wayne Henley Jr.

The court clerk for 175th District Judge Preston Dial Jr. said the judge, who has accepted jurisdiction of Henley's cases, has not acted on a request by Henley's attorney to file the motions.

Mrs. Mildred Vogel, the court clerk, said Wednesday she had received the request from Houston attorney Will Gray.

The motions, attached to the request, attack Henley's indictments on grounds that the Houston grand jury which indicted Henley was not representative of his community.

Henley, 38, was indicted for six of 27 Houston area slayings after police last summer uncovered the bodies and connected the slayings to a sex torture ring.

Henley's trial, moved to Dial's court here on a change of venue, is scheduled for sometime this summer.

"Judge Dial wants to hear from the attorneys in Houston ... both the defense and prosecutors" before acting on Gray's latest request, said Mrs. Vogel.

The motions yet to be filed allege that no Spanish-surnamed American was on the Houston grand jury which indicted Henley.

Five unrelated indictments returned by the same Houston grand jury were thrown out. Another grand jury, which included one Spanish-surnamed American, returned fresh indictments in the five cases, which stemmed from an Oct. 9 pro-Arab rally in Houston.

Detroit School Is Closed After Racial Fight; Nine Arrested

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit public high school remained closed today after a racial fight in which two students were injured and nine were arrested.

The violence at Cody High School, a predominantly white school on the city's white West Side, erupted Wednesday in retaliation for an incident last week in which a black student allegedly stole a white student's varsity letter jacket, administrators said.

The black youth was expelled and students said he was assaulted by white students last Saturday. Administrators said the youth returned to the school Tuesday with friends and started a fight.

On Wednesday Principal Michael Tarpinian called a meeting, attended by about 50 students both black and white, to discuss Tuesday's incidents.

While the meeting was going on, school officials said about 200 white students gathered on a playground opposite the school and shouted racial slurs. Then most of the black students at the meeting ran outside and joined in a rock and bottle throwing melee already in progress between the whites across the street and blacks on the school grounds, officials said.

The nine arrested were charged with felonious assault on a police officer or inciting to riot. They have been released. The two students injured were treated and released at a hospital.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police detained two women and three men during anti-American demonstrations Wednesday as the new U.S. ambassador to Sweden presented his credentials to King Carl Gustaf.

WINS FIGHT, LOSES WAR— Valentine Hits Angels' Wright

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

California's baseball players were no Angels Wednesday night.

Outfielder Bobby Valentine started a fight that ignited a melee with the Milwaukee Brewers.

Valentine won the battle but the Angels eventually lost the ballgame, 7-5, when George Scott delivered the final blow with his bat in the ninth inning.

Sitting on the trainer's table with an ice bag on his dislocated left shoulder, Valentine talked grimly about the first-inning free-for-all that resulted in his ejection along with Milwaukee's Clyde Wright.

Wright had thrown at Valentine, provoking the wild incident.

Valentine dropped his bat and walked toward the mound with both fists clenched. After a brief exchange of words, Valentine threw a couple of punches, hitting Wright in the eye and the jaw. Then they wrestled to the ground, with Valentine gripping Wright in a vise-like headlock.

Players poured from both dugouts.

Valentine will be lost to the Angels for two to three weeks because of his injury.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a double by Ron Cash and a single by Aurelio Rodriguez.

Astros Win, 5-3

Rookie Gross Leads Way Again

MONTREAL (AP) — Perhaps it is fitting that a baseball player with the name of Greg Gross gets his hits in bunches.

Gross, a 21-year-old rookie who hit .334 with Denver Bears of the American Association last year, has been a one-man wrecking crew against the Montreal Expos in the last two games, reaching base eight times.

The youngster followed up Tuesday's three-for-five performance with two hits and three walks Wednesday night to spur the Astros to a 5-3 victory over the Expos.

Included in his offensive battle were a two-run triple, a stolen base and the winning run.

Montreal jumped into a two-run lead in the fourth inning when Willie Davis singled and Ken Singleton tripled him home. Bob Bailey scored Singleton with a single before veteran Claude Osteen got out of the inning.

However, Gross tied the score in the next inning when he lined a two-run triple which just eluded a lunging Bailey to fall fair on the left field line.

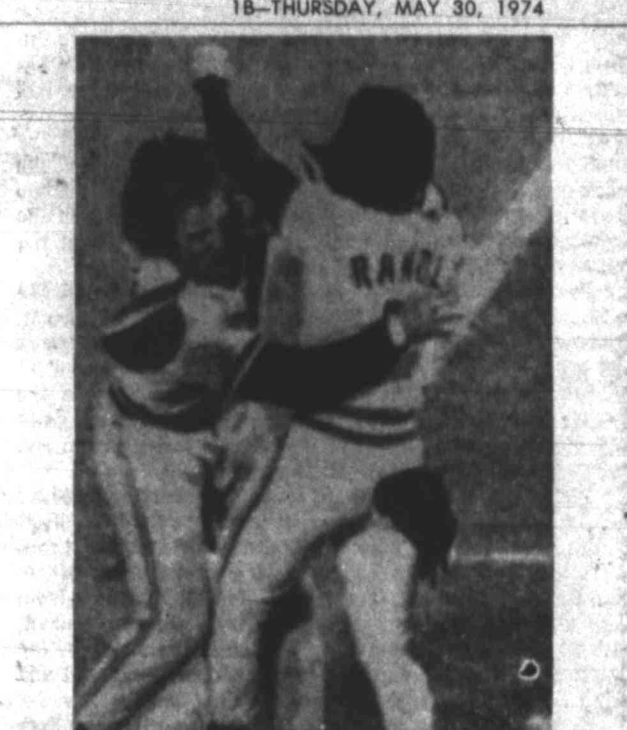

"I was lucky on that one," Gross said.

"It was a good pitch on the outside corner and I just got enough of it to lift it over the infield. I thought it was an out for sure, but it curved away from Bailey and happened to hit fair."

Houston went ahead in the seventh when Osteen doubled home Tommy Helms, who had walked, but Montreal tied things up in the bottom of the inning on a single by Jim Cox.

With two out in the ninth, Gross worked Tom Walker for a walk and Roger Metzger followed with a single which sent Gross to third.

Billy Decked Twice In AL Free-For-All

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Texas Ranger Manager Billy Martin isn't looking forward to 10-cent beer night and bat night in Cleveland next week.

Not after Wednesday night's "base-brawl" in which he was decked twice during an eighth-inning free-swinging flurry as Texas downed the Indians 3-0 on Jackie Brown's three-hitter.

"They'll all be mad at me in Cleveland, that's for sure," said Martin. "I'm not exactly looking forward to it."

The flurry of fists erupted in the eighth inning as Lenny Randle laid down a bunt and threw an elbow at Cleveland pitcher Milt Wilcox as Wilcox tried to field the ball.

Indian first baseman John Ellis promptly tackled Randle and both benches traded punches.

Martin was downed twice in a wrestling match with Budd Bell of the Indians. Steve Foucault and Ferguson Jenkins of the Rangers brought Cleveland Manager Ken Aspromonte down from behind and pinned him.

Ellis said "I don't think that was too professional of Randle to run at Wilcox. Nobody runs at one of our pitchers like that and gets away with it. For a while there was 9 against 25."

Ellis said "Randle was a mad because Wilcox threw behind him but it wasn't intentional. There was nothing between him and him but the goal line."

Fritz Peterson, the starting Cleveland pitcher who suffered his third loss in six decisions, said "I bet Randle won't do that on the road."

The Rangers make a swing into Cleveland next week. Tuesday night is 10-cent beer night. Wednesday night is bat night.

"Oh, Lord," said Martin. "That's just what we need. But I'll tell you this, our team was battling and that's the way they'll be all season."

Wilcox said "I wasn't trying to throw at Randle. I was going to throw the ball to first and not tag him but he really hit me good."

During the brawl, several fans on the sideline poured beer into the Cleveland dugout, infuriating catcher Dave Duncan.

"There was one guy who must have had 10 beers but I couldn't get to him," said Duncan, who was restrained from going into the stands by his teammates.

Randle said he wasn't bunting to lay an ambush for Wilcox.

"I was just trying to bunt to get on," Randle said.

Aspromonte refused to be quoted on the fray saying "I have nothing to say."

Martin had no hard feelings, saying "Lenny believed Wilcox was pitching a little close to him. I can't blame Ellis for trying to protect his pitcher. But I'll get the blame on 10-cent beer night you can bet on that."

Overlooked in the fray was the fine pitching of Brown, now 3-1 for the season. Brown also was one of the first to join in the combat along the first base line. Press box observers scored him with a no-hitter in the brawl.

Martin said "We played our type of game. We had the hit and run, the suicide squeeze and we battled. Did we battle. We'll just let Brown pitch against them again in Cleveland."

Brown was not available for comment on which date he preferred—10-cent beer night or bat night.

Garagiola's Old Parks Tour Revives Memories

Joe Garagiola's tour down memory lane Monday night struck a responsive cord for those who have been around long enough to remember or perhaps to have watched games in the ball park of the past.

If there was any complaint with Joe's pre-game tv reminiscences, it was that in recalling the parks as they were and as they are today, there wasn't enough time to dwell on the unique features that gave them their individual personalities.

For freaks of baseball, even the Dodgers' temporary home in the Los Angeles Coliseum with its short left field and high screen couldn't match the Polo Grounds in New York.

It was 279 feet down the left field foul line where Bobby Thomson hit the shot heard round the world, but the upper deck scoreboard overhang made it an even more Oriental home run target than the 257-foot right field line. In contrast, it was 505 feet to center and the power alleys of the horseshoe layout were just about as deep.

What fan, who ever listened to Red Barber, could visit Brooklyn's Ebbets Field without checking out that weird concave right field wall (297 feet), the barricade that hid Bedford, the avenue Dolph Camilli's homers made famous?

And anyone who saw a game there had to wonder whether any player ever won the suit of clothes Abe Stark offered on his sign in right-center, a four-foot or so ground level target, protected by the bottom of the scoreboard which jutted out over it... impossible.

Forbes Field, the spacious Pittsburgh park, is where they moved the bullpen into left field after the war and called it Greenberg's Gardens and later Kiner's Korner in an effort to bring that 367-foot barrier within reach. After a few years it was abandoned.

Shibe Park, known in its closing years as Connie Mack, unlike the Polo Grounds and Ebbets which have given way to apartment complexes, lies in decay. It was the home of the A's and later the Phils, after they moved from the infamous Baker Bowl with its high tin wall in right.

Battle Scene

By Ted Battles

We once asked Herschel Martin, an old Philly-Yankee outfielder if it was difficult to play the rebounds off Baker's dented fence. "The rebounds weren't so bad. It was the ones that went through the fence that bothered me most."

Old Sportsman's Park in St. Louis had to be the hottest spot in baseball, day or night, and its sun-baked playing surface was a nightmare for infielders, both American and National leagues.

Three years ago while staying at the Fens Motel across from Fenway Park, we couldn't resist the temptation of wandering the mile or so up Commonwealth past the Boston University city-campus to old Braves Field.

Turning off Commonwealth, as in Garagiola's old film, the ticket booths were untouched and the right field fence from outside was still the same.

Garagiola's film showed the old pavilion stands down right field, now used for BU football games, remain unchanged, but gone is the jury box in right. And Joe didn't tell you that the shots of the field today were taken from a terrace behind home plate where three high rise dorms occupy the area where grandstands once stood.

Chances are that if Boston hadn't moved to Milwaukee and then to Atlanta, Hank Aaron never would have replaced Babe Ruth as baseball's all-time home run leader.

Even in 1946 after Perini erected an inner fence which cut the distances from left to right, to 337-390-318, the Braves hit a league low of 44 home runs as a team.

No wonder Babe Ruth retired after being traded to Boston.

Kenya Runner Wins 18 Of 20 Races

By BERT ROSENTHAL
NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, track fans, there will be another pro tour in 1975, and it will be run with Ben Jipcho but not John Carlos.

Jipcho, perhaps the world's leading distance runner, was enthusiastic in his praise of pro track after he climaxed the 1974 International Track Association season Wednesday night with a scintillating 3:56.6 clocking in the mile.

Carlos, on the other hand, was highly critical of the ITA after winning the 300-yard dash and finishing second in the 60.

"I am very thankful to the ITA for having brought pro track to the whole world," said Jipcho after running the fourth fastest indoor mile in history and the first sub-four minute performance on the pro tour this year. "I was thinking of leaving running until they came up with the money."

The slender but durable prison guard from Kenya was the leading money winner in his first year as a pro with earnings of $16,700. He won 18 of 20 races over one and two miles.

"This is my last race as a pro," snapped the angry Carlos after his triumph in the 300, the second of his two races. "The only people making money out of this are those in the ITA. I'm sick and tired of running for promoters. That's why I'm going to play football."

Earlier Wednesday, the New York Stars of the World Football League had announced the signing of the 6-foot-3, 195-pounder. Carlos finished a previous tryout as a pro football player with the National Football League's Philadelphia Eagles in 1970.

A record ITA indoor crowd of 15,621 nearly filled Madison Square Garden and increased attendance for the year to 172,752 for 14 meets, an average of 12,332. Those figures, however, were swelled by crowds of 38,000 and 19,000 for two outdoor meets in Japan.

Meanwhile, Wyoming Tyus, two-time Olympic Champion, tied the women's world record for the 60-yard dash with a clocking of 6.5 seconds, a time she had matched twice previously.

Other winners included: J.J. Jackson in the 60-yard dash, with a time of 5.9 seconds; Olympic champion Rod Milburn in the 60-yard hurdles, 8.9 seconds; George Young in the two-mile in 8:40.0; Chris Fisher in the 800, 1:53.5; Lee Evans in the 440, 48.21; Randy Matson in the shot put, 70 feet, 1 inch; Ed Caruthers in the high jump, 7-0; and Henry Hines in the long jump, 26-1 1/4.

Howe Plans To Return Next Fall

TORONTO (AP) — Gordie Howe, 46, recently voted Most Valuable Player of the World Hockey Association, said Wednesday he probably will be back as a player with the Houston Aeros for the 1974-75 season.

Howe, who returned to professional hockey after a two-year layoff after a 25-year career with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, said he had talked with Houston club officials who were "inclined to think I might be of help to the team."

When first asked what his plans were for next season, Howe said he would "eat well, skate well, and play."

He said he was given the Most Valuable Player award because he had "sired two great kids," referring to his sons Marty and Mark who also play for the Aeros.

"I'm really not keen about playing the Russians at that time of year. I didn't get going in his past season until November." "That kind of series is for the young, fast fellows."

McCamey Loses Three Coaches

MCCAMEY — McCamey Athletic Director Joe Neill announced Tuesday that he is losing three coaches.

Doug Chauveaux, head girl's basketball coach, is leaving for a similar position in Tulsa and eighth grade coach Lyndon Hardin is also moving to Tulsa.

Gary Culpepper, Neill's defensive line coach, has accepted a job with Reed Oil Company.

Neill said that he is now taking applications for the vacancies, and would be glad to talk to anyone who is interested in coaching positions.

Sabres Pick Gare
BUFFALO (AP) — The Buffalo Sabres picked right wing Danny Gare of the Calgary Centennials in the secret National Hockey League amateur draft, it was reported Wednesday.

Threatening Calls Shake TSU Coach

Terry Williamson

Warned To Stay Away From NCAA

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Southern University track Coach Dave Bethany says several threatening phone calls he has received this year are proof enough to him that there is prejudice in NCAA track and field circles.

Spring Begins Fall

Spring slips into summer and summer into fall, a fact that is certainly not surprising or disturbing to anyone, but with the fall comes a new football season, and for the fans of District 5-4A that brings about a lot of excitement. But wait, it all starts in the spring—that is, if your school happens to be of the AAAA variety.

For Midland High it started in the spring, and that is to be taken very literally. Coach John Reddell's Purple Pack entered the spring grind with only two offensive and three defensive starters returning from a team that finished the 1973 season with a 6-3-1 mark. Starting over seems to be a yearly assignment for Reddell, and from the talent on hand, he usually is not taken very seriously by the opposition. Take for instance the coaches and sports writers poll the last two years which has relegated the 'Dogs to the lower part of the standings, and then look where the Bulldogs end up at the end of the season—the first division.

Chances are that the Purple Pack will not scare anyone to death in the pre-season poll again this year. Just face it. Midland High is thin in depth, has an untested quarterback and green offensive and defensive lines.

But before you hoist the purple surrender flag on the nearest flag pole, take notice that the new spring start didn't turn out all that bad. In fact, there is room for optimism and there are some bright spots on the horizon.

For instance, Reddell got a couple of surprises mid-way into the spring training program. Guard Bruce Smith, a starter last year who was reportedly headed for Oklahoma, appears to have settled in Midland and gives the Pack a lineman on which to anchor forces. Also, Reddell got Mitch Irvin as a transfer student from Stanton. Irvin was a standout, both on offense and defense, for Stanton in Class AA for the last two years. He had a good spring and certainly will add depth to the linebacking duties.

Reddell also got a stellar performance from lineman Tom Dunlap, who the coaches think might be the best all-around athlete on the team. Dunlap may get to start both ways this fall, which should give the linebacking and offensive line a real boost. Linebacker Bill Sutton was also impressive this spring.

Just Wait And See

Derrick Michael and Sam Jordan are returning starters in the secondary and they seem to be firm in the defense after a good spring, and the Pack appears to have running backs in abundance.

Mike Gaddy, an all district runner last year, will be back at fullback and halfbacks Mike Hudspeth, Kim Madden, Neil and Ronnie Hill, a brother duo, added a lot of depth.

Only time will tell about the quarterbacks, and this is a position that must come through since Reddell runs a wishbone oriented attack. John Webb and Dusty Hicks established firm holds on the top two spots, but to me, at least, neither established domination for the number one signal-calling duties. Hicks was impressive in the spring game with a couple of long passes, but Webb might perform better overall execution. Chances are that both will see a lot of action until one takes firm hold. Reddell, who hasn't mentioned it, probably would like to see Webb as the top man, so Hicks could concentrate on defense where he is a steady performer.

The end slots should be no problem for Reddell. Sam Hubert, a returning starter at tight end, had an excellent spring along with Rufus Johnson. Jordan and Sutton also showed a lot of promise to give the ends a steady look.

Guard Tim Blonkist and tackle Bill Rhotenberry could be the answer to an inexperienced offensive line. Brian Chandler was a surprise at tackle and Bill Newberry appears to be the center. The line, however, is not overly blessed with size or depth, but could be very adequate if the injury bug is kept to a minimum.

"We are not going to scare anyone with our size," Reddell said during the annual spring game. "One thing about them though. They know how to hit. They improved during the spring about as much as we could possibly expect and they all gave a good effort. We just can't lose many players to injuries this year."

With spring training behind, you might say the Pack is over the first hurdle without a stumble—no injuries at least. Now the long summer wait, and we'll see what we'll see.

Butkus' Suit Leaves Pappa Bear Puzzled

CHICAGO (AP) — The owner of the Chicago Bears says he is surprised and puzzled by the $1.6 million lawsuit filed against his team by star line-backer Dick Butkus.

"It looks as though all of their dialogue with us was a sham," said George S. Halas in a statement issued shortly after the suit was filed Wednesday.

"Dick said he was going to have the surgery done by Dr. Don O'Donoghue of Oklahoma City and that was agreeable with me," he said.

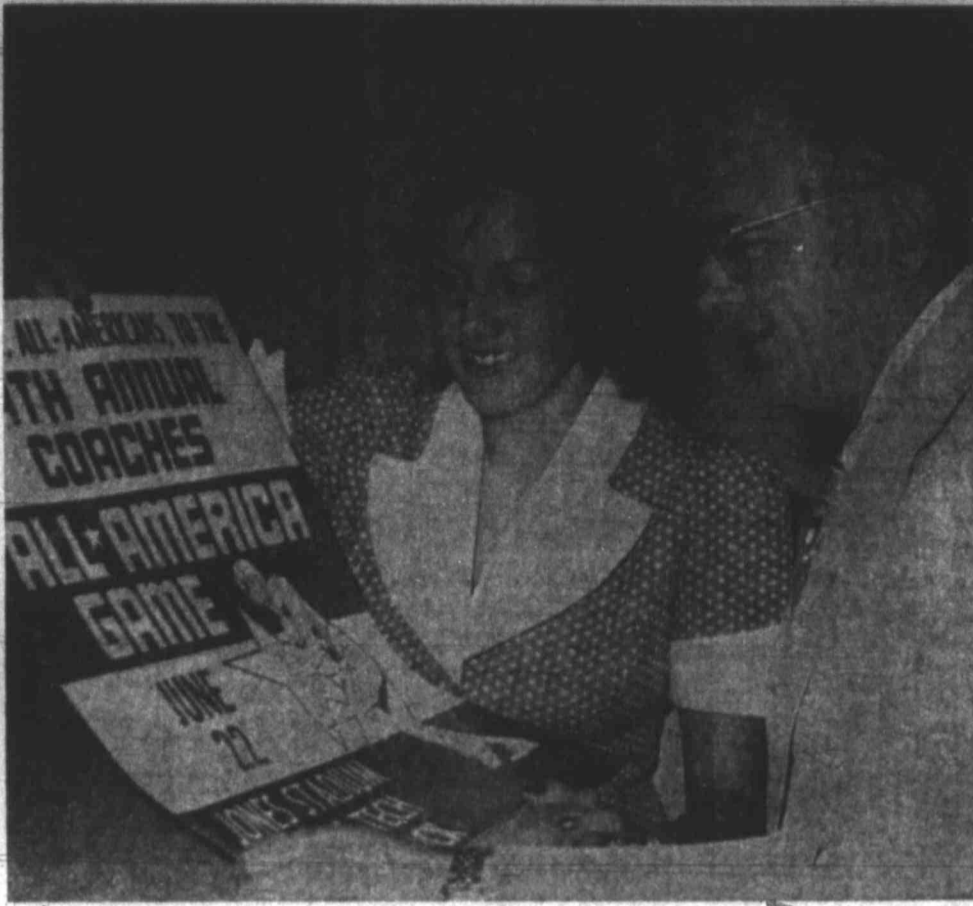

"I am puzzled by this latest action particularly in light of my harmonious conversation with Dick Butkus last Thursday," Halas said. "He said he would have surgery within a week or as soon as the lawyers could work out the language of a stipulation concerning his surgery."

Filed in Circuit Court, the suit said the Bears' management did not provide medical and hospital care promised him in a contract Butkus signed July 13.

It also said the Bears refused to play Butkus this year and the remaining four years of his contract.

According to the suit, orthopedic surgeons and the team physician examined Butkus' knee and said he is unable to perform the contract's requirements.

Butkus "may well never again be in the necessary physical condition to play professional football," the suit quoted the doctors as saying. Injections of cortisone and other drugs caused irreparable damage to Butkus' knee.

TRIP TO VIENNA—Terri Streit, left, member of the Midland Lee High choir, and Midland Chamber of Commerce President K. M. Jastrow look over a poster advertising the Coaches' All-America game in Lubbock June 22. It's an important date for Lee's Vienna-bound choir. Tickets sold in Midland for the game, will help pay for the trip. Sales begin Friday in the Tall City.

ALL-AMERICA GAME IN LUBBOCK—

Grid Tickets To Help Lee Choir

Starting Friday, tickets for the 14th annual Coaches All-America Football Game will be on sale in nine locations in Midland. The game is slated for Saturday, June 22, in Jones Stadium at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce has obtained 5,000 tickets for the game, all on the west side of the stadium. A percentage of the ticket sales will be allocated to the Robert E. Lee High School Choir to help defray expenses to Vienna, Austria, later this summer. All tickets are priced at $7. They are located in Sections 3, 7, 10, 104, 105, 106, and 107.

With the assistance of the Lee Choir Boosters, tickets will be available at Commercial Bank & Trust Co., First National Bank, Midland National Bank, and Western State Bank from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Friday. Tickets also will be on sale at Gibson's, Skaggs-Albertson, and Walgreen's from 11 a.m. until 9 p.m. daily; at Stadium Sports Center from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily; and at the Midland Chamber of Commerce office, 211 North Colorado, from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"We are pleased that we have arranged to have these tickets available in Midland," noted Harrell Fildt, chairman of the Chamber's Sports and Recreation Committee. "Each ticket sold will help support the efforts of the Lee High School Choir to finance its trip to the Festival of Youth and Music in Vienna July 10-24."

Deadline for buying tickets in Midland is Tuesday, June 11. After that, all unsold tickets will be returned to Lubbock.

Aces Trump M-Cubs, 5-3

ALEXANDRIA — Bill Huisman hit a three-run homer and Francisco Lopez, a last minute starter, went the route in pitching a seven-hitter, but it still wasn't enough as the Midland Cubs dropped a 5-3 Texas League decision to Alexandria's Aces here Wednesday night.

The Cubs did spoil John McAllen's earned run skien. Going into the game, McAllen, now 4-3, had a string of 20 innings without allowing an earned run and 36 innings with only one earned run.

The Cubs' three runs in the seventh, coming on Joel Green's double, Greg Collins' single and Huisman's blast over the left field fence, were all earned.

Midland threatened in the fifth when McAllen walked the bases full, on 3-2 pitches, then whiffed Ken Szotkiewicz on three pitches.

Alexandria scored a run in the first when Mike Dupree and Jerry Turner, who celebrated his recent marriage with a 3-for-3 night, doubled.

In the fourth, the Aces struck for three as Turner beat out a toppler to second. Mike Goddard beat out an infield hit and then Joe Brown's pop up fell behind second for two bases, scoring one run. The other two runs came home as shortstop Szotkiewicz bobbled Mike Champion's grounder.

Bill Droegge had two hits for Midland as the Cubs outhit the Aces 8-7.

Lopez, who just joined Midland from Wichita last week, got the starting call when scheduled starter Dave Geisel, pulled out of a game last week with a muscle cramp, warmed up and decided things weren't just right.

Pancho's complete game was only the third of the season, by a Midland pitcher.

CUB BRIEFS — The Cubs, winners of only one in their last 10, play a doubleheader tonight with Gary Junge, 3-2, and Dyan Frazier, 1-2, scheduled to pitch against the Aces' Dave Wehmeister, 0-2, and Jay Franklin, 1-4. Wayne Tyrone, hit on the hand by a pitch Tuesday, missed Wednesday's game.

Bucs' Slugger Feasts Again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Bob Robertson really knows how to hurt a guy.

First, Pittsburgh's slump-ridden first baseman helped destroy hamburger king Ray Kroc's San Diego Padres Wednesday night by driving in five runs with a pair of two-run homers and a single in the Pirates' 13-3 romp. And then he delivered the unkindest cut of all.

"For a while," he said. "I thought my wife and baby would have to start eating hamburgers."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers turned back the St. Louis Cardinals 5-2, the Cincinnati Reds edged the New York Mets 3-2 on Tony Perez' 10th-inning homer, the Atlanta Braves nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 in 11 innings, the Houston Astros downed the Montreal Expos 5-3 and the San Francisco Giants shaded the Chicago Cubs 5-4.

Robertson, who hit 27 home runs in 1970 and 26 in 1971, apparently is back to taking choice cuts—on the field and at the dinner table—after slumping to .193 and 12 homers in 1972 and 239 with 14 homers last season.

Dodgers 5, Cardinals 2
Ron Cey brought Los Angeles from behind with a three-run homer off Bob Gibson in the sixth inning and Bill Russell collected four hits, including an RBI single in the seventh. The Dodgers' Tommy John, 8-1, permitted seven hits before giving way to Mike Marshall in the seventh.

Reds 3, Mets 2
Tony Perez hit his ninth home run of the season with two-out in the 10th off reliever Harry Parker. It was the sixth win in a row for the Reds and the Mets' third straight loss.

Braves 1, Phillies 0
Pinch hitter Vic Correll, who had only two hits in 21 previous trips this season, singled home Ralph Garr from second base in the 11th inning against Steve Carlton.

Giants 5, Cubs 4
The Giants scored four times in the first inning on Gary Thomasson's two-run double and Dave Rader's two-run single, but needed Bobby Bonds' homer in the seventh to beat Chicago.

ONE MAN'S POLL— Miller Only No. 5 Golfer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Johnny Miller is the reigning U.S. Open champion, winner of five tournaments this season and the leading money winner with almost $200,000. But he won't rank himself among the world's best four golfers.

"Right now," the slim, blond young man said, "the four best players in the world are Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Tom Weiskopf. "I'm not in the same category with them," Miller said before teeing off today in the first round of the $250,000 Kemper Open. The tournament is the second of three events designated by the PGA as "must" tournaments, meaning all of the game's leading players are required to compete. "My game has come a long, long way in the last year," Miller said. "I'm playing now the way I'd dreamed of playing. "My game has reached the point now that when I get in position to win, I can go ahead and do it. I don't worry about choking if I get in position to win. I have confidence that I can go ahead and do it. "I feel confident that I'm capable of making the shots I have to make. "But that's not to say I'm in the same class with Nicklaus, Player, Trevino and guys like that. They're where I hope to be. "Even though he placed himself behind four players, Miller has played only one competitive round in four weeks, Miller ranked as the man to beat for the $50,000 first prize in the 72-hole test on the 7,066-yard, par-72 Quail Hollow Country Club course. With all of the game's top names required to play or face stiff penalties, including possible loss of their playing rights, the field of 150 is one of the strongest of the year.

Miami came back in the bottom of the third, scoring two runs on a homer by Carl Gardner. They took over the lead with two more runs in the fourth, one on an error and the other on a single. # Art Contest To Help Launch Production Of 'Texas'

CANYON — An art contest to help launch the ninth annual production of "Texas" is being announced.

Railroads, which played a vital role in the development of the high plains of West Texas, will be honored at this year's gala opening of "Texas," the musical drama of Panhandle history, on June 19.

To help pay proper tribute to the railroads, which first brought the people and supplies to tame this raw new land during the last years of the 19th Century and the early years of the 20th Century and later carried the cattle and wheat and other products of the frontier to the markets of Fort Worth, Kansas City, Chicago and elsewhere, the producers of "Texas" and the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum of Canyon will stage a competition for the best original paintings and drawings of trains and the railroad industry.

Pictures of every foot of the industry are sought. The railroad stations, still and moving trains, designs of tracks and semaphores, weathered and aged crossties, details of Pullmans and cabooses, and the people who manned the trains.

For last year's "Texas" opening, an art contest drawing winners was conducted.

The current contest has several divisions: Paintings (oils, acrylics, tempera, watercolor, gouache and mixed media); drawings (pencil sketches, pen-and-inks, felt tips and graphics); photographs (both color and black-and-white).

Photographs or color slides of original paintings or drawings of trains to be submitted for consideration in the contest should be received at the "Texas" office at 200 4th Ave., Canyon, no later than 5 p.m. Wednesday, June 5; the photos can be mailed to "Railroads," P.O. Box 288, Canyon 79015.

From the photographs submitted, judges will select works to be considered for final judging in the contest. Notification will be sent to those entrants whose works are selected for final consideration by June 11.

Final judging will take place June 19 at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum on the campus of West Texas State University. The winning works will then be prominently displayed at the Pioneer Amphitheater at Palo Duro Canyon State Park, site of the "Texas" pageant, during gala opening festivities.

The 10 winning artists in each contest division will each receive a pair of tickets for the opening performance of "Texas." During special opening night ceremonies, a plaque will be presented from the stage to the artist whose work is judged best-in-show, and similar plaques will go to the first place winners in each division. The 30 winning entries will be on exhibition at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum from June 23 to July 28.

To be eligible for consideration in the contest, works should be no larger than 3 feet by 4 feet and should have been completed since 1971. Each artist may submit two works for consideration.

Additional details on the contest may be obtained from the "Texas" office, P.O. Box 288, Canyon 79015.

Will Emmy Be Kiss Of Death To Acclaimed Kids' Tv Show?

NEW YORK (AP) — One worried whether the series will lose its second Emmy award in two years, would be on Eurythmics in the whole Emmy business. But one would be very wrong, says David Ives.

He's president of Boston's WGBH, the station that has produced "Zoom" since January 1971, and he says he's the Public Broadcasting Service's new national program would think that the kid tv series called "Zoom," having won its second Emmy award in two years, would be on Eurythmics in the whole Emmy business. But one would be very wrong, says David Ives.

Columnist Given Bum Steer On 'Game' Shows

By JAY SHARBUYT

NEW YORK (AP) — I'm ashamed to admit it, but until a few days ago I'd never seen these daytime shows that get their own Emmy awards each Tuesday. However, a bad cold helped me see the light.

I required to bed shortly after noon with a high fever. I turned on the tv set and saw two daytime shows before falling asleep. One was "Let's Make a Deal," the other "The Gong Show."

Mrs. Tibbett, the lady down the hall, had told me earlier "Let's Make a Deal" was a soap opera and "Gong Show" a game show. I think that's what she said.

As drama, "Let's Make a Deal" seemed one of those old Broadway things where surrealism, blank verse and refrigerators blend together in a neo-classical setting that at times seemed surreal.

I guess you have to watch it without a fever, but no less than Sinbad Brittle, New York's most prestigious drama critic, has called it "professionally moving — a laugh riot and a romp."

The chapter I saw was set in a studio, apparently to set up a play-within-a-play concept. People were dressed in strange garb. One man came disguised as a mailman, a postal employee on our postal system if ever there was one. But he got no letters.

"This is one of those odd shows," he says. "Some people have said the Emmy award is the kiss of death. I just hope to God it isn't this time."

The source of his concern is January 1971, and he says he's the Public Broadcasting Service's new national program would think that the kid tv series called "Zoom," having won its second Emmy award in two years, would be on Eurythmics in the whole Emmy business. But one would be very wrong, says David Ives.

He's president of Boston's WGBH, the station that has produced "Zoom" since January 1971, and he says he's the Public Broadcasting Serv-

As far as "Gong Show" goes, it wasn't half as baffling as I thought game shows are supposed to be. Most of the contestants spent the time hollering at each other, sighing or crying.

One lady even said, "Mike, I think you owe mother an apology."

Apparently, one contestant didn't even show up, because the other lady said, "It was just awful the way he came down and left without saying a word to us."

There was no audience, no cheering and yelling like the game shows I used to know. For that matter, no prizes were given away.

I think Mrs. Tibbett gave me bad advice on both shows. I bet she doesn't even watch them.

Under the new cooperative plan, now undergoing a series of initial price reviews, the final per-station price of each show involved rises or falls, depending on the number of stations willing to pay.

What worries Ives is that many stations may decide the "Zoom" price is too high and drop out of the early bidding, thereby increasing the tab for those still interested.

And these stations in turn may subsequently decide the new price is too high and they'd rather put their money into series that'll offer them more programs next season than "Zoom" will.

"And if the price is roughly the same," Ives says, "there's going to be a tendency—and it's showing up already for the stations to want more programming for the dollars they get out."

"So that's the ironic situation," says Ives. "Here is 'Zoom,' winning its second Emmy in a row against the best competition in the commercial boys could put up, then facing this situation."

The economics of public broadcasting this year are raising some questions about whether it's going to make it or not. And it's got us worried at the moment."

The series, one of seven children's shows offered by the cooperative, isn't cheap. The tab is more than $1.4 million for 22 new half-hour shows for next season.

'Dr. Cook's Garden' To Open On MCT's Stage Next Week

"Dr. Cook's Garden," described as "a suspense play with a difference," opens at Theatre Centre a week from Friday, to close out the spring segment of Midland Community Theatre's current season.

The theater box office opened this morning to accept seat reservations for all performances of the drama through June 22. The box office will open to the general public next Monday.

In "Dr. Cook's Garden," playwright Ira Levin makes a surprising change from his two earlier stage successes, the witty and uproariously funny "No Time For Sergeants" and "Murder on the Mind." Levin also did the screenplay for "Rosemary's Baby," but "Dr. Cook's Garden" differs from that, too.

Bob Hope Recalls Cleveland Boyhood

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope celebrated his 71st birthday by recalling his childhood days in Cleveland when he helped his brother in a butcher shop.

"I did everything," he said. "I plucked the chickens and ground the hamburger, and when things were slow, I posed in the window with an apple in my mouth."

Hope said his brother used to be so proud of him he'd take out a full-page newspaper advertisement any time he was playing Cleveland.

"But now he just hangs a ham in the window," Hope said.

Hope came home Wednesday for his birthday, and drew verbal bouquets for the decades of entertainment he's provided.

He also got a telegram from President Nixon and a standing ovation from the 740 persons who paid $100 a plate to honor him.

Proceeds went to the United Service Organizations, the service group for which he has made many tours to visit servicemen.

James Dick Festival-Institute To Open Soon At Round Top

ROUND TOP — A music festival which is rapidly taking its place among the important summer musical events in America is the James Dick International Festival-Institute. This year's festival — the fourth — opens late next week and will continue through July 7 at Round Top, the nationally famous 19th Century — restoration village located in the wooded countryside midway between Austin and Houston. Founder and artistic director of the festival is James Dick, Texas-trained and Texas-based pianist, who also is director of the institute for talented young pianists, held in conjunction with the month-long festival. Both festival and institute are sponsored by the James Dick Foundation for the Performing Arts. Dick himself will open the festival on Friday evening, June 7, with a keyboard recital featuring works by Beethoven, Brahms, J. S. Bach, Liszt and Schubert. The recital will be presented on the festival's mobile stage, the only one of its kind in the world, which will be dedicated as the "Mary Moody Northern Performing Arts Pavilion," in honor of Galveston's Mrs. Mary Moody Northern, philanthropist and patron of the arts. Preceding this opening event at 8:15 p.m. Friday will be an afternoon concert by the Coro d'Amici Singers of Austin, directed by Dr. Morris Beachy, director of choral activities at UT-Austin. In addition, this year's festival will feature such renowned artists and ensembles as Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester; the Cleveland String Quartet; the Houston Chamber Orchestra and the Houston Symphony Orchestra; Vladimir Viardo, winner of the 1973 Van Cliburn Centennial Piano Competition, and Sixten Ehrling, Sweden's distinguished conductor who is a member of the Juilliard School of Music faculty and a conductor for the Metropolitan Opera. Other personalities who will participate in seminars and present lectures at the festival and institute are: Paul Hume, music editor and critic of the Washington Post; Dr. Iril Allison Sr., founder of the National Guild of Piano Teachers; Martyn Wilhem, noted educator and founder of the Wilhelm School at Houston; Alice Reynolds Pratt, regional director of the Institute of International Education; Hector Ubertalli, internationally-known Argentine sculptor and painter, and Robert Jacobson, who is editor of "Opera News" and also a distinguished critic and author. Jacobson will present a seminar on "The Art of Lied" at 4 p.m. Saturday, June 8, as another of the opening events of the festival. The lecture will take place in the Theater-on-the-Square in Round Top's historic Hienkel Square. It will be the first in a series of special programs to be presented by distinguished lecturers, critics and musicians during the 1974 festival season. Maureen Forrester will present two recitals during the opening weekend. The first will be Saturday evening, June 8, and the second will be the following evening, Miss Forrester, who will make her Metropolitan Opera debut in early 1975, will offer selections by Haydn, Berlioz, Britten and Brahms on the first program, and those by Handel, Purcell, Barber and Turina at the second event. In addition, Miss Forrester will present seminars on "The Art of Lied" and "Accompaniment" on the afternoons of June 10 and 11. Her accompanist will be Jerzy Marchwinski of Poland, who will be making his first U. S. appearances at the Round Top festival. ### 'Disney On Parade' Coming To Lubbock

LUBBOCK — "Disney on Parade" boasting the world's largest portable stage and many of the most familiar and beloved Walt Disney characters, will have a series of performances in Lubbock June 6-8. The presentations here will be the only ones in West Texas this year. Although only four years old, "Disney on Parade" has been a solid show biz success and has played to audiences in many parts of the world. The original "First Edition" of the show presently is touring Europe. The Second Edition will soon be presented in Australia and the Orient. The Fourth Edition (the one to be seen here next week) is touring the U.S., Canada and Mexico. "Disney on Parade" plays in more than 40 U.S. cities each season. While cast and crew are transported by plane, the props, the more than 300 colorful and elaborate costumes and the portable stage are moved from place to place by huge trucks. The 2½ hour show will bring to life such stories as "Bedknobs and Broomsticks," "Country Bear Jamboree," "Further Adventures of Pinocchio" and "Mary Poppins," among others. In the traditional finale of all "Disney on Parade" productions, the audience will join the cast in "It's A Small World After All." The Lubbock performances in Municipal Coliseum are scheduled for 8 p.m. on June 6, 7 and 8, with 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. matinees on June 8, and 2 and 6 p.m. matinees on June 9. Tickets, priced at $3, $4, and $5, are on sale daily at the coliseum box office. Children under the age of 12 receive a $1 discount on the above ticket prices.

Ford Says Panel Asking Too Much

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford says he can understand the attitude of the White House in refusing to surrender further evidence to the House Judiciary Committee for its impeachment inquiry. Here for an address to a Salvation Army civic meeting, Ford said the committee should digest the material it already has before asking for more.

Policeman Testifies In Ridolph Trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A Corpus Christi policeman has testified in the trial of 19-year-old Richard Ridolph how his partner was shot to death three years ago as they walked out of the rear door of the police station.

Ridolph, tried once in the case in Corpus Christi, is charged with murder in the sniper slaying of Corpus Christi Patrolman John W. Sartin.

Ridolph's 50-year sentence was overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. The case moved here on a change of venue.

"As we heard the shot, I heard him (Sartin) say 'Oh no,'" testified patrolman Frank Valli. Valli said he never heard Sartin speak again.

Sartin was rushed to a hospital, where he died of a bullet in the head.

Valli was the first witness called in the case Wednesday after a seven-woman, five-man jury was chosen Tuesday.

Valli said he, Sartin and another patrolman, Gilbert Lazo, were walking out the back door of the station to the parking lot when the shot was fired.

Valli said the lights along the back of the police station were off, but the area was brightly lit by at least 10 mercury vapor lights surrounding the parking lot.

The Court of Criminal Appeals overturned Ridolph's first conviction on grounds that police had evidence that the lights on the station were turned off, but failed to disclose the information to the defense.

Doug Tinker of Corpus Christi, Ridolph's court-appointed attorney, said the defense does not deny that Ridolph fired the shot but said he was only shooting at the building. The youth, then 16, did not intend to hit anybody, Tinker said, and is only guilty of voluntary manslaughter.

Officials Study Offshore Lease Bids

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Government officials studied high bids totaling $1.5 billion for new drilling space in a bottom off the Texas Coast today—and low bidders in the lease sale pick up their cash and go home.

Interior Department spokesmen said decisions will be reached soon on which bids to accept on the 123 Gulf of Mexico tracts involved. Some may be rejected as too low.

H. R. Hirsch of Houston, Southern exploration manager for Mobil Oil Corp., said the tracts were the best of the Texas offshore area and the sale was an opportunity that won't knock again.

"They may offer more tracts for lease but now the good stuff is gone," he said.

Mobil headed a combine that was the big buyer, with high bids totaling $650 million.

Joining Mobil in the potential bidding combination were Union Oil Co. of California, Texas Gas Exploration, Amoco Production Co. and Northwest Mutual Life Insurance Co.

There were 245 tracts offered in the sale but 122 of them did not draw bids.

Cash kept goes into the Treasury, plus one-sixth royalties from any future production of oil or natural gas.

All of the sealed bids were submitted just before Wednesday's deadline because oilmen feared legal complications might delay the sale and create unexpected bank interest expense.

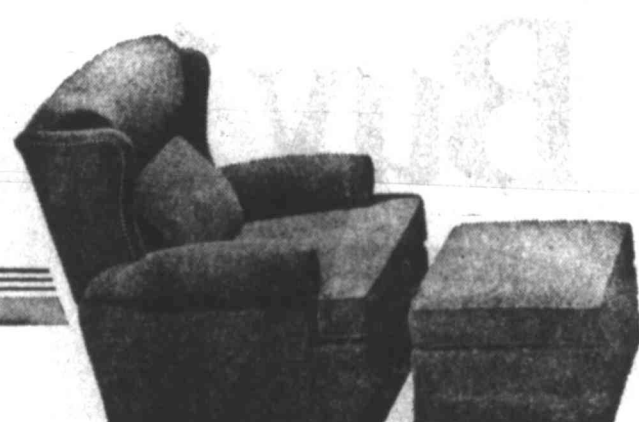

One-fifth of each bid had to be in cash and most companies take temporary bank loans for a few days. The losers' cash was available to them today.

The most popular tract of the sale was 5,760 acres about 100 miles off the beach south of Port Arthur in water 200 feet deep. It attracted 13 bids. The Mobil combine was high with $67.9 million.

Hirsch said the margin between high and low bids was large, "more so than ever before."

Rains Help Wheat, Corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rains last week helped later-maturing winter wheat in parts of the Great Plains but hampered corn planting in much of the Midwest Corn Belt, according to a weather report by the Agriculture Department.

"The moisture was especially helpful in Southwest Kansas, where topsoil was dry," the report said. "Wet weather in North Dakota continued to keep farmers in the northeast area from planting spring wheat."

The report, issued in summary form Wednesday, said the Kansas wheat crop was in "satisfactory condition" as of last weekend, with 90 per cent of it headed, compared with 70 per cent last year and a normal heading of 85 per cent.

The wheat harvest in Texas was about nine per cent completed by the weekend, compared with two per cent a year ago. Rain stalled the harvest at Harvard for the past 25 years.

"Everything is in the realm of interior speculation," he told the Harvard Crimson Wednesday. "I'm contemplating the whole future."

Galbraith, who will be 66 in October, said he plans to produce a British television series in England next year.

In the Corn Belt, farmers generally were held to less than two days of corn planting last week, the report said. By May 26 about 75 per cent of the crop in the northcentral states was planted, versus 74 last year and a five-year average for the date of 81 per cent.

Group In Hawaii To Try Farming In Nude

HONOLULU (AP) — Obeying a judge's words to the letter, a group of local people plan to start farming in the nude.

The judge was only concerned about agriculture, but since the prospective tillers of the soil are members of the Hawaii Nudist Club, bib overalls are out of the question.

"It shouldn't be necessary, but if they want us to go farming, we can go farming," George Muller said Wednesday.

Muller leases 247 acres of rural beachfront property, granting equal access to ducks, chickens and the 500 members of the club.

Trustees of the James Campbell estate, which owns the land, last week won a temporary injunction forbidding any non-agricultural use of the land.

Circuit Court Judge Norito Kawakami carefully limited his order to agricultural issues but added, "If they are there for nude farming, okay."

Club President Larry Beck announced the formation of an agricultural cooperative to grow watermelons, lettuce, radishes and tomatoes on 30 or 40 acres. Any profits were promised to nearby Kahuku Hospital.

Muller, himself a nudist, said he plans to retire from his job at a pineapple cannery next year and devote full time to farming.

The club moved onto the property more than two years ago, but Muller said trouble started after the club drew the attention of local news media. His lease on the property expires in six years.

Seniority In Congress Facing Challenges

By WALTER R. MEARS
An AP News Analysis
WASHINGTON (AP) — Seniority isn't what it used to be. It remains, as is traditional, the route to committee power in Congress. But that is subject to challenge, and to persistent demands for reform.

And now, voters in at least one state have turned out the old argument that a man with long congressional tenure is a man with clout, who ought to be returned to Washington so he and his state can keep it. That contention didn't work for Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, denied Democratic renomination after 30 years in the Senate, 15 as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Fulbright, 69, lost by a landslide to Gov. Dale Bumpers, who is 48 and says seniority rule is one thing that keeps Congress from being responsive to the people.

Fulbright said his defeat was in part a reflection of voter dissatisfaction with everybody in Washington these days. That may have been a factor, although it has not been evident in other primaries so far. But Bumpers is immensely popular in Arkansas, and Fulbright's long tenure was no defense this time.

Seniority Good To Arkansas
Arkansas has been a particular beneficiary of the seniority system Bumpers criticized. Fulbright has Foreign Relations; Sen. John L. McClellan, who is 78 and has served 32 years in the Senate, is chairman of the Appropriations Committee; Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, a 94-year House veteran, heads the Ways and Means Committee.

McClellan was re-elected two years ago, after a campaign in which he stressed his three decades of seniority and influence. He did not win without a contest; former Rep. David Pryor, who said he was tired of the state being first in seniority and last in everything else, forced a run-off before losing. Pryor now is running for governor.

Bumpers, in a joint ABC-TV interview with Fulbright Sunday, said the seniority system is "a breach of faith with the young people of this country and I would work to change the system because I don't think it has served us well."

To which Fulbright, No. 4 in Senate seniority, replied, "I am quite certain the seniority system has served Arkansas very well and continues to and will always when it is a small state . . ."

There also are the amenities. For example, Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, who will become in January the senior Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee, is not saying now whether he will take the chairmanship, noting that the Democratic steering committee will make a choice.

But if the choice is not the senior Democratic member of the committee, it will be the first time. The Senate itself votes on chairmanships, but there, too, the process is one of ratifying the senior majority member who wants the job.

In the House, committee chairmanships are subject to challenge in the Democratic caucus. But there, too, seniority remains the system.

Congressional reformers want change, some proposing that committees elect their chairmen, others that the selection be by secret ballot in party caucus.

Midland College Pre-Registration Concludes Friday

Midland College's summer school pre-registration will continue through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the school according to C. C. Dakl, dean of students.

Three hundred forty-two students had registered by this morning.

Dakl said students enrolling during the pre-registration period would be guaranteed the courses requested, with the time and instructor desired. He added he expects long lines during regular registration Monday. Classes begin Tuesday.

The dean noted persons without transcripts or proof of immunization still would be allowed to enroll and could bring their records at a later date.

Jail Escapee Nabbed At Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Richard Dennis Edwards, who escaped from the Travis County jail early Wednesday, was picked up on a city street Wednesday night wandering in a daze, officers said.

Edwards, 23, broke a window in the fourth floor of the courthouse and slid down a drainpipe to temporary freedom.

McClellan was re-elected two years ago, after a campaign in which he stressed his three decades of seniority and influence. He did not win without a contest; former Rep. David Pryor, who said he was tired of the state being first in seniority and last in everything else, forced a run-off before losing. Pryor now is running for governor.

Hearse Is Used For Car-Pooling

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — To help out during the energy shortage, nine workers at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber plant here are sharing a ride they wouldn't want to make alone — in the back of a hearse.

"We were urged by the company to do something to save gas during the energy shortage," says Sylvester Madden of Blanche, N.C., a fork lift driver at the Goodyear truck and aircraft tire plant.

"So I bought a used hearse, put in an extra heater fan, bolted in five old school bus seats and went looking for riders to share the 36-mile trip to and from work."

Madden and his nine riders agree that the arrangement not only saves gas and money, but can be fun. Says Madden, "I don't know of another hearse where the riders tell jokes."

Mills Eyes Taxes On Profits Abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., says he is tired of reading about U.S. subsidiaries reaping big profits abroad "where no American tax is paid and income is sheltered by excess credits."

Mills, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, told the panel Wednesday he wants to levy some kind of minimum tax on U.S. business income earned abroad.

"I think they can pay a minimum tax without producing an undue competitive position," Mills said.

Portugal Workers Go Back To Jobs

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Bakery and transport workers went back to work today less than 24 hours after President Antonio de Spínola warned that a rash of labor strikes was pushing Portugal toward economic ruin.

Informed sources said that at the same time Spínola was making his nationwide address, Premier Adolfo da Palma Carlos called officials of the bakers' and drivers' unions personally asking that they end the walkouts.

By RICHARD E. MEYER
WASHINGTON (AP) — "It's a burden..." the senator began. Then he paused. The silence was eloquent.

"A burden that's beyond the legislative work..." There was another long pause. Jennings Randolph struggled with the thought. It might become his duty to consider impeachment — again.

And this time it might be the impeachment of the President. Rare Report "Going through it once before," he said finally, slowly, choosing every word, "helps you realize the seriousness of the obligation... I won't discuss this. I may be a juror in the Senate — and if so, I want to sit there and listen and read the evidence and..."

Impeachment: an awesome prospect. A rare report.
But if past is prologue, Jennings Randolph, 72, West Virginian, Democrat, senator of the United States for 16 years and a member of the House of Representatives for 18 before that, is an oracle. He is one of five current members of Congress who were there for the last impeachment.

It was a vastly unpleasant business. A thing rather forgotten. And the four others — Rep. Leslie Arends, R-Ill., Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., and Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex. — say they mostly have.

Sharp Impression
But the 1936 impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter, U.S. judge for the southern district of Florida, made a sharp impression upon Jennings Randolph, a young congressman serving his third term. And his recollections and notes from the record are, in some ways, instructive about what the impeachment of Richard M. Nixon, President of the United States, might be like.

Political.
Fundamentally contestable. "The standard of impeachable conduct has never been definitively resolved," says Paul S. Fenton, former Republican counsel for the House Judiciary Committee, now considering an impeachment resolution against the President. Berger considers the Ritter case precedent for impeachment for non-indictable offenses. But in the Northwestern University Law Review, Fenton contends: "The value of the Ritter case as precedent is seriously diminished by the ambiguity created by his conviction on an article which essentially incorporated by reference the six articles on which he had been acquitted."

Those six articles included indictable offenses.
Finally, "excruciatingly difficult to decide. Halsted Ritter was convicted by a single vote on April 17, 1936, after a 12-day Senate trial. The exact two-thirds majority found him guilty of a catchall count that he had brought his court into scandal and disrepute."

Politics played an early part in the impeachment of Halsted Ritter. An investigation into his conduct was first suggested in 1933 by Rep. James Mark Wilcox, a Democrat from West Palm Beach, Fla., whose congressional district was next to Ritter's judicial district.

Charges Read
The investigation languished in the Judiciary committee until Jan. 14, 1936, when it reached the floor. Robert Alexis Green, a farm boy who had become a high school principal, lawyer and county judge before the people of Florida sent him to Congress, rose to declare: "Mr. Speaker and members of the House, on my own responsibility, as a member of this House, I impeach Halsted L. Ritter, a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, for high crimes and misdemeanors."

Green read the charges: That Ritter had received $4,500 of a $75,000 fee he had approved for a former law partner for services in a foreclosure; conspired with the former law partner and others to continue the litigation contrary to the intentions of the plaintiff, partly in order to produce the fee; practiced law on the bench; failed to pay what he should have in income taxes; and, finally, by these actions, brought his court into scandal and disrepute.

From the Republicans: "Will the gentleman yield?"
Green: "I cannot yield further at this time."
Carl E. Mapes, a Republican from Michigan: "I make a point of order, Mr. Speaker... Was the gentleman from Florida entitled to engage in a general discussion of the charges on the floor?"
Speaker Joseph W. Bryne, a Democrat from Tennessee: "He is..."
So Green went on to describe in great detail the charges against Ritter.
And then:
"Along this line and in this connection, may I say that I decry the practice of any Chief Executive in any administration who undertakes to pick a man from one section of the country and send him to another section of the country to occupy some appointive position. Some 65 to 70 years ago this practice was called carpetbagging. I charge that Judge Halsted Ritter is in the plainest and the simplest sense a carpet-bagger. He had been in Florida but a short while — probably a year or two — before he was appointed as a federal judge by President Calvin Coolidge..."

Jennings Randolph sat back in his leather armchair. It was quiet in the little office with its red rug, marble fireplace, mirror over the mantle and sofa with bed pillows at each end — one of the private hideaways under the stairs in the Capitol used by longtime members of the Senate in addition to their offices in the Dirksen and Russell buildings across Constitution Avenue; emoluments of seniority, where they can retire from the pressures of the day.

"It was a tense time in the House... Many people have no idea what the reluctance was to come to grips with this matter... Now remember the date March 2, 1936..."

On that day, Hatten William Summers, a Democrat from Texas and chairman of the Judiciary committee, rose to call for formal consideration of the impeachment of Halsted Ritter.
The impeachment debate began. The gallery was hushed.
"Mr. Speaker," intoned Louis Ludlow, a Democrat from Indiana, "in cases as solemn and as serious as an impeachment proceeding, in which are involved the possibilities of despoiling the fair name and blasting the life of the defendant, inflicting damage on him and his flesh and blood that can never be recalled or repaired, we members of this House are not worthy of our high station if we allow political considerations to enter our minds, and we should be extremely careful to see that injustice is not done to any man..."

Jennings Randolph remembered looking up at the gallery. It was filled. Halsted Ritter was there, a bespectacled man with graying hair in his 67 years; but Randolph didn't spot him.
After his conviction a month later, Ritter would return to southern Florida, and eventually to the practice of law. He died on Oct. 15, 1951, while visiting in Laurel, Miss. He was the fourth person in the nation's history convicted in an impeachment.
Rep. Louis Ludlow was a close friend of Jennings Randolph. "He was a former newspaperman, not a lawyer," Randolph recalled. Ludlow declared that, although he was a Democrat and Ritter a Republican, "I feel there is imposed upon me today a duty and a responsibility to raise my voice in this case, if for no other purpose than to present myself as a character witness..."

Ritter Praised
Ludlow praised Ritter's Hoosier stock, extolled his activities as a one-time Indiana attorney and acclaimed "his militant ardor on the side of right and civic virtue." He said Ritter was the victim of innuendo.
Arguing down attempts to interrupt him, he dismissed the case against Ritter — "I am not impressed by any part of it" — and he raised his voice to the skylight emblazoned with the nation's seal: "Oh, innuendo, what crimes have been committed in this name..."

He apologized for not being a lawyer, deprecated his own abilities as a writer, and deferred not to "the United States Code, but Shakespeare. In Othello, the Moor of Venice, Iago says, 'Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; 'twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands; — But he that filches from me my good name — Robs me of that which not enriches him — And that makes me poor indeed...'"

The articles of impeachment, he said, should be withdrawn.
Jennings Randolph remembers sharp questions, from Lambeck of Ohio and Dies of Texas — "He was the anti-Communist," later to become chairman of the Special Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities, known as the Dies Committee — and Fuller of Missouri and Bankhead...

"What should be the measure of the internal audit division of the IRS, said in a sworn affidavit in the case that Commissioner Donald C. Alexander ordered an investigation of Dear's charges last July 2, the week after Dean testified before the Senate Watergate committee."
"As a result of this investigation, I have initiated a report to appropriate service officials on cases which were handled erroneously or not in accordance with established procedures..." Rankin said. "I have reported systems and procedural deficiencies to appropriate service officials so that they could take the necessary corrective action."

Burke W. Wilsey, assistant to the commissioner of internal revenue, said, "Because we had mistakes in our audit process is no indication there was any political interference." But he and other IRS officials refused to release the report on which the court documents were based.
The documents were submitted by the government in a Freedom of Information Act suit filed by Robert M. Brandon of the Tax Reform Research Group, a Washington-based organization. Brandon is seeking release of White House and IRS documents relating to political opponents and supporters of President Nixon, whom former White House counsel John W. Dean III testified received special attention from the IRS.

of proof? Reasonable doubt? Probability of guilt?"
Now the argument moved to James Wilcox, the Florida congressman whose 1933 resolution had started it all.
Jennings Randolph remembers that Wilcox defended Ritter. "But he damned him with faint praise."
Randolph's notes show Wilcox declared:
"I hold no brief for him, I do not care what becomes of him, I have no interest in him, but I am frank to say to you gentlemen that after a careful and painstaking and thorough examination of this record I am convinced that if Judge Ritter were being charged with being a consummate fool, this House would be justified in returning the indictment, and I should vote with you cheerfully..."
Sam Hobbs, a former circuit judge and Democrat from Selma, Ala., returned the attack.
He said the judgment that Ritter was a "consummate fool" and the things which made him so — "his unsuitability for the office... his ignorance of procedure... his conduct from the bench" — these alone satisfied the last article of impeachment.

Sam Hobbs, a former circuit judge and Democrat from Selma, Ala., returned the attack.
He said the judgment that Ritter was a "consummate fool" and the things which made him so — "his unsuitability for the office... his ignorance of procedure... his conduct from the bench" — these alone satisfied the last article of impeachment.
"Mr. Speaker, we come now to the conclusion," declared Hatten Summers, the Judiciary chairman.

of proof? Reasonable doubt? Probability of guilt?"

Going On Vacation? Here's A Checklist

AUSTIN — Vacation bound? There's a chance you might also be heading for trouble if you haven't taken certain precautions before leaving home.

Law enforcement experts and Texas Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division attorneys say that what is vacation time for most folks is working time for many burglars, pickpockets and con men.

They suggest that you plan in advance to burglar-proof your home and to guard against possible thefts or consumer frauds on your trip. While the number of such occurrences is small compared to the number of vacationers, it only takes one bad experience to ruin a trip.

Checklist Suggestions
Here's a list of things to check before leaving:

—Stop mail, newspaper and other deliveries.

—Tell a neighbor or your apartment manager that you will be gone and ask them to keep an eye on the place.

—Leave a few lights on or buy an automatic timer to turn certain lights on and off each evening.

—Cut your lawn just before leaving and, if you will be gone a long time, have someone cut it while you're away.

—Check all windows and doors to make sure they are locked. A sliding glass patio door can be more securely fastened by wedging a stick at the top or bottom of the door.

—Check with the police if you plan an extended vacation.

Put Phone On Vacation

—Have your telephone put "on vacation." Your callers will be told that the telephone has been temporarily disconnected at your request, and you can have them referred to another number if you wish.

—Avoid mentioning to casual acquaintances or strangers that you will be on vacation.

—Before leaving, engrave all valuables in your home and those you will be taking with you in the car with your driver's license or social security number. Some police forces will loan you an engraver to mark your belongings and will register your number on their master list. This may discourage burglars from taking your goods and can make identification of recovered stolen goods much simpler.

After taking precautions to secure your home from burglars while you are gone, don't let down your guard when you get into the car and drive away. There are a few things to remember during your trip, too:

Service, Check Auto

—Make sure you have had your car serviced and thoroughly checked before leaving and always get out of the car to watch when having it serviced on the road. There are a few unscrupulous persons who sometimes take advantage of tourists with out-of-state license plates.

If your car was given a clean bill of health before you left, you can better evaluate warnings about faulty fuel pumps, air filters, batteries, etc.

—Take traveler's checks or use credit cards, and keep a list of your credit card numbers in a safe spot.

—Men should avoid keeping billfolds in back pockets, or at least button the pocket if possible. To discourage pickpockets, use the inside coat pocket or a money belt.

—Women should select a purse with a secure clasp or zipper and keep a hand over the opening when carrying it.

Don't Boast Of Wealth

—Never boast of wealth or possessions or tell strangers your home town or address.

—Check valuables at your hotel desk for safekeeping. You could be taken advantage of in more subtle ways, too. Many people spend large amounts of their money on vacation souvenirs without examining them carefully. Many souvenir items are cheaply made, overpriced, and of little or no practical value. Try to set a limit on the amount of money you spend on things you're likely to throw away or put in a closet later.

Bell Asks Second Houston Rate Hike Within 13 Months

HOUSTON (AP) — Southwestern Bell has asked city councilmen for its second rate increase in 13 months, this one to be large enough to give the firm $32.9 million more gross income this year.

"We can no longer keep pouring in dollars at a record pace as we are, to expand and modernize an operation that is earning only 2.12 per cent," Paul H. Moore, division manager for Bell, said Wednesday. The firm did not lay out a schedule of rates it wants the council to adopt. A spokesman said Bell first wants to convince the council it needs the money.

Last April the council approved an overall 11.5 per cent increase which included a boost of 16.6 per cent in residential areas. That increased the average homeowners' telephone bill from $6.30 to $7.35.

There was no immediate reaction from the council to Moore's proposal.

More Lawmakers Cruise With Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has taken a second batch of congressmen on a Potomac cruise aboard the presidential yacht "Sequoia."

The House members are "a group of friends the President wanted to have dinner with," a White House spokesman said. A similar cruise with Congressmen took place earlier this month.

Those aboard Wednesday night were Reps. Omar Burleson, D-Tex.; Barber Conable Jr., R-N.Y.; Dan Daniel, D-Va.; Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill.; William L. Dickerson, R-Ala.; Craig Hosmer, R-Calif.; Dan Kuykendall, R-Tenn.; G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss.; Otto E. Passman, D-La.; Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., and John W. Wyder, R-N.Y.

Mrs. Neff Named For Treasurer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francine Neff, former New Mexico Republican national committee woman and a member of the GOP executive committee since 1972, has been nominated to be Treasurer of the United States.

Mrs. Neff, 48, was nominated Wednesday by President Nixon to succeed Romana Banelos, who resigned. The treasurer's job has gone to a woman for many years.

Rush Takes Oath As Nixon Counselor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Rush became a special counselor to President Nixon when he was sworn in as chief of economic policy.

Nixon said Wednesday that Rush, 64, will bring new ideas into battle against inflation. Rush taught Nixon when the President was attending Duke University law school.

Vague Laws Hinder Hunters Of Nazis

By TOM TIEDE
NEW YORK (NEA) — When the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service opened a National Office for Nazi War Criminals last July, Nathan Sobel and hundreds of other Jewish survivors of World War II were gratified.

For years the survivors had insisted, naming names, that Nazi officers had immigrated to America and were anonymously enjoying the blessings of a system they had tried to destroy.

Sobel, as example, was particularly interested in a pair of brothers from Philadelphia. As one who had lived through mass murders in a Jewish ghetto in the Ukrainian village of Luborn, Sobel said he believed the brothers were among the Nazi policemen of the town.

Loss Gratitude
The brothers had been sentenced in absentia (life imprisonment) by the Russians after the war, but were granted uninhibited residence in the United States. Surely, Sobel thought, the new war criminals office would rectify this alleged inconsistency.

Now, 10 months later, Sobel and many like him have lost their gratitude to the U.S. Immigration department and their enthusiasm for the war criminals office. The brothers are still in America, so are the rest of the originally accused offenders, and critics charge authorities with being less than serious about the entire matter.

For its part the war criminals office insists it is doing everything legally possible. Director Sam Zutti says "no rock has been left in place" in the search for war criminals. He says immigration officers in 43 domestic branches and several more overseas have cooperated in searching for "every thread" of evidence.

"We've been in Israel, we've been behind the Iron Curtain, we've been everywhere we thought we might talk to eyewitnesses. But it's been very difficult."

None Deported
Difficult indeed, and statistically almost futile. Immigration records indicate that investigations have been made into the backgrounds and whereabouts of at least 71 accused individuals, yet to date not one of them has been deported. (Last year authorities did deport one Nazi concentration camp guard, Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, but the case was not handled by the new war criminals office.)

Eighteen of the original 71 accused have never been verified, 17 of them have died, and two have left the country for their own reasons. "This leaves 32 on the active list," says Zutti, "plus we may add a few. We are working on every lead we get."

Many believe Zutti is not working hard enough, among them former Immigration employees who have left the service in disgust. One ex-officer, who pleads privacy, says "the Service is not heartless in the matter it wants to catch the Nazis, too — but it's so damned incompetent and feeble."

Peddling Exposure
Another former employe, an investigator named Tony Devito, is trying to peddle an exposure manuscript which observers say is "a flat denunciation of Immigration bumbling."

One instance of bumbling, say the angry men, involved a wartime high official of the government of Croatia, briefly set up as a fascist state by Mussolini. Its leaders have been accused of sundry atrocities. One leader, Aurore Artukovic, now living in California, was ordered deported at Yugoslav request in 1953, but the order was never carried out. Immigration officials say it was feared Artukovic would be "persecuted rather than prosecuted" by Yugoslavia and so he remains in this country.

Immigration officials say they realize such decisions as that made in the Artukovic case are open to criticism and condemnation. But they believe they can not do otherwise than to follow the law and the democratic conscience.

"We're between the rock and the hard place in these things," says a Washington Immigration veteran. "A lot of us too would like to weed out the Nazis — hell, I fought them myself in the war. But the laws on deportation are strict."

Actually, the deportation laws are in many cases almost impossible to surmount. Sol Marks, district director for Immigration in New York, says "the language of the court is that there must be 'clear, convincing and unequivocal' evidence to warrant a denaturalization or deportation."

No hearsay evidence is allowed, no circumstantial evidence." Adds Zutti: "We need hard, undeniable facts."

Unfortunately, the nature of most war criminal cases is that there are no hard facts. The lapse of time, for one thing, has caused an attrition of witness and fogging of precise memory.

Sighs a New York official of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League: "How the hell can you get eyewitnesses against a war criminal who exterminated an entire population?"

And even when witnesses do exist, faces change, plastic surgery has sometimes helped; unless there are many witnesses, testifying to the exact same things, the accused can be acquitted because he is fatter, now bearded or bald.

Political Implications
Besides this, there are the political implications of deportation.

The Russians, for example, are forever hungry to throw someone in jail. And what with the accusations of anti-semitism being increasingly hung on them, they are today presumably more interested than ever to thump someone for a real or imagined Jewish atrocity.

For this reason, the United States does not recognize the verdicts of trials in absentia and will even protect and shelter the guilty if, according to the immigration code, the deported "would be subject to persecution on account of race, religion or political opinion."

But despite all these legalities and rationalizations, critics maintain the new office of war criminals has so low a profile it is all but publicly unknown and all but functionally inactive. "I was in Israel recently," says one Jewish official, "and I asked many survivors of the Nazis if they had ever been questioned about this accused man or that accused man. All of them shook their heads. This means the immigration people are being less than aggressive."

It also means the likelihood that at least some war criminals remain neighbors on the American block. None is guilty until proven so, but the weight of evidence against at least a few is considerable if circumstantial. "I know of at least two of the (expletive deleted) who are guilty as hell," says a heavily-involved Jew.

"I know a woman who slept with one of them and he confessed to her. The woman is ashamed of her past now and reluctant to testify — especially since the Nazi deportation record indicates it would probably do no good anyway."

Daniel Directs Panel Investigate TWQB Activities

AUSTIN (AP) — A subcommittee of freshmen House members has been directed to investigate the Texas Water Quality Board, which has come under fire from numerous legislators for its industrial waste disposal activities.

House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. ordered the investigation in response to a petition from 45 representatives.

The standing subcommittee on pollution, headed by Rep. Gene Jones, D-Houston, will start its formal investigation after the Constitutional Convention adjourns this summer.

Other subcommittee members are Reps. Chris Miller, Fort Worth, vice-chairman; Frank Madia, San Antonio; Ron Waters and Woody Denson, both of Houston; Pete Laney, Hale Center, and Ronnie Earle, Austin. All are Democrats.

Land Use Bill Opposed

The Midland Chamber of Commerce acted wisely in adopting a resolution opposing a proposed land use bill and in forwarding copies to all members of the House of Representatives.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce took similar action earlier this year.

The proposed legislation — Land Use Planning Act House Resolution 10294 — offered by Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., would require states to enact mandatory planning for present and future uses of all state and private land.

This is a dangerous part of the bill — forcing the states to accept federal guidelines in return for federal aid. This is hazardous in any legislation, as has been proved in other instances in recent years.

The proposed legislation also is unacceptable from the standpoint that it "strikes at the very heart of our nation's free enterprise system."

The nation's farmers and ranchers also would be handicapped at a time when they need less interference, not more, as would be the case should the legislation become law.

All taxpayers and all others interested in the preservation of the free enterprise system should do all in their power to help defeat this bill.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States also has opposed the land use bill from the very beginning. The organization now has called the attention of its members to another land use bill (H.R. 13790) which is offered by Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., as a substitute for Udall's controversial measure when it is brought to the House floor.

Prompt action is necessary due to the fact that the House Rules Committee has reversed an earlier decision to postpone the Udall measure indefinitely. It has been granted an open rule, but making it in order for the Steiger substitute to be offered on the floor.

Recent hearings on the subject brought forth a preponderance of testimony that further hearings should be held in various parts of the nation prior to any action. But this testimony apparently has been overlooked completely. Action should be delayed for the time being.

This is something which merits the attention and action of all citizens.

'He's A Contemporary Robin Hood'

NEA BRIEFS— Could Liberation Really Spoil Uglies' Success?

NEW YORK (NEA)—As if they didn't have enough to answer for already, male chauvinists are responsible for something else — the fact that female comics have to play the role of ugly ducklings in order to get laughs.

The leading comedienne "base much of their material on the premise that they are unattractive women, although in fact none of them is ugly," writes author Ann Nietzke in Human Behavior magazine.

By contrast, male comics don't have to be concerned about their appearances, she says. They can go on and on about how ugly their wives or girlfriends are, just as if they themselves were handsome prizes.

These who lament the destruction of so many fine old American landmarks and their replacement by such things as parking lots, gas stations and hamburger stands can take comfort in this thought: if you wait long enough, almost everything eventually becomes a landmark — even a hamburger stand.

As a case in point, Louis Lunch, a tiny restaurant in New Haven, Conn., that claims to have invented the hamburger in 1900, was scheduled for demolition to make way for a 12-story medical complex.

Through a last-minute legal reprieve, the building will be moved to another site where, as an official city landmark, it will continue to serve coming generations of Americans.

ONE JOURNALIST SEEMS to have hit the "Watergate" nail squarely on the head. A certain number of Americans — perhaps 25 per cent — will not believe anything bad about the President, notes Cleveland Press columnist Julian Krawcheck.

On the other hand, another 25 per cent will not believe anything good about him. Thus the only reason for pursuing the various investigations of the President's conduct in office and his personal finances is to complete overwhelming evidence, for or against Mr. Nixon, that might convince the 50 per cent of Americans who are still open to persuasion.

When and if "women become liberated from matrimony as a central goal of their existence," says Ms. Nietzke, much of the material of the comedienne will become irrelevant. Sure, they can choose to be truck drivers or business executives and maybe, in the future, they can even choose to be "househusbands." But until such time as medical science enables males to bear children, there will never be such a thing as true equality of choice between the sexes.

Until that day arrives, laughing at "ugly" comedienne may be one of the few remaining prerogatives men will have.

This semester, the students will have gone through 10,000 bags of garbage from 3,500 Tucson households.

THESE WHO LAMENT the destruction of so many fine old American landmarks and their replacement by such things as parking lots, gas stations and hamburger stands can take comfort in this thought: if you wait long enough, almost everything eventually becomes a landmark — even a hamburger stand.

As a case in point, Louis Lunch, a tiny restaurant in New Haven, Conn., that claims to have invented the hamburger in 1900, was scheduled for demolition to make way for a 12-story medical complex.

Through a last-minute legal reprieve, the building will be moved to another site where, as an official city landmark, it will continue to serve coming generations of Americans.

On the other hand, another 25 per cent will not believe anything good about him.

BRUCE BLOSSAT Terror's Immediacy Is No Panacea For World

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is among the last columns written by Bruce Blossat before his untimely death Monday from a heart seizure.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The kidnapers of Patricia Hearst, who died predictably in a holocaust of gunfire and flame, had become pathetic human figures best described as "creatures of the moment."

Except for the black man who called himself "Field Marshal Cinque," none of the dead can be portrayed as anything but a victim.

Nothing that we have "wandered out of history," Borstin says: "We have nearly lost interest in those real examples from the human past which alone can help us shape standards of the humanly possible."

The charred figures of Patricia Hearst's abductors bespeak part of the cost of such terrible forgetfulness.

Subconsciously if not otherwise, they must have known when they picked up their automatic weapons and resorted to the gruesome crime of blackmail-kidnaping that they were opting for fantasy rather than the real world.

Thus the only reason for pursuing the various investigations of the President's conduct in office and his personal finances is to complete overwhelming evidence, for or against Mr. Nixon, that might convince the 50 per cent of Americans who are still open to persuasion.

In the real world, living in any full sense is both a joy and a struggle. At times it means facing and coping with corruption without being corrupted or becoming cynical.

The covetous frustrations of Patricia Hearst's kidnapers grew because they could not see beyond the volatile, passing moment. They were indeed its creatures. They brought no perspective of time, of history, to the hills they perceived around them (only Cinque had actually suffered them). They gave no sign that many high-magnitude social ills have been dealt with, that more will be — even if less quickly than they wished, that some oddly would just vanish, that others, unhappily, would linger stubbornly, resisting the decades.

As Cinque had been barred up in a California penitentiary, so later he and his misguided companions were locked in what historian Daniel J. Boorstin calls "The Prison of the Present" in his new book on "Democracy and its Discontents."

One of the great misconceptions bequeathed us by the frantic stirrings of the young in the late 1960s and early 1970s is the foolish definition of "relevance" as meaning only that which pertains to what is happening NOW.

Writes Borstin: "... what people call 'relevance' is not really that at all. What they are talking about most of the time is not the relevant but the topical."

To show the relevance of something is to lift it above the current of daily topics, to connect it with distant events and larger issues.

Emphasis here, for me, is on "distant events" — history. There is no practical way to deal with today's ills, problems, whatever, as if they existed only in the cocoon of the moment. They are understandable only in the stream of history that carried them to this time, just as any of us, standing anywhere at a given second, is the sum and substance of his own in-

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor: I see here the high mounds in the housing, Education and Welfare bungalowarchy say one million teenagers in the U.S.A. are illiterate.

The report overlooks to mention how many of these kids are stupid and how many spent most of their time with bus drivers instead of teachers since the court-ordered national bus bust set in.

Until we get shed of bus-buggy judges maybe we could educate their victims by putting teachers on buses, or wheels on the schoolbuses.

DDN OAKLEY Impeachment Seen As A Double-Edged sword

WASHINGTON (NEA)—There is one thing that Americans soon must (to borrow a phrase) get perfectly clear, and that is the vital difference between the impeachment process established in the Constitution and a trial by jury in a court of law.

The White House, for understandable if not admirable reasons, has not been overly concerned with contributing to that clarification.

If a sizable number of Americans can be persuaded that an impeachment hearing is (the same as a criminal trial, they presumably will accept the President's argument — or that of his lawyer — that in the absence of clear proof that the President did commit some crime he cannot, in all justice, be impeached.

And if he cannot in all justice be impeached, neither can he be asked to give into pressure that he resign — pressure that no doubt will reach a peak of intensity when and if the House Judiciary Committee sends a recommendation of impeachment to the whole House.

It is not the President's lawyer, however, but one of his advisers who probably has done the most to confuse the mind of the public in this matter.

Dr. Jon McLaughlin, a Jesuit priest who is deputy special assistant to the President, has called a Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., either to step down from the Judiciary Committee or be removed by its chairman because of published statements by Conyers which indicate that "his mind is made up on the innocent or guilt of President Nixon."

The congressman would never be permitted to serve on a jury to hear evidence, says McLaughlin, yet he is on the House committee that must decide the President's fate.

The fact is, of course, that the Judiciary Committee is not "trying" to impeach. If it is acting as a jury of any kind, it is as a sort of grand jury determining whether or not there is evidence that the President of the United States committed an impeachable offense or offenses.

If it does so determine, and if this determination is accepted by a majority of the House of Representatives, then articles of impeachment will be sent to the Senate. It is in the Senate that the President would be formally tried and where his fate would be decided.

An impeachment is thus an indictment, not a verdict of guilt or innocence. But even an impeachment trial is not the same as a trial.

BERRY'S WORLD

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The "Molotov cocktail" is a home-made antitank bomb. It was invented by the Finns who used it against the Russian Army which invaded Finland on Nov. 30, 1939. The "cocktail" consisted of a bottle filled with inflammable liquid with a slow match protruding from the top. After hitting a tank, the burning liquid would spread over the tank's armor. Molotov was the Russian premier and foreign minister.

Stock Market Prices Post Decline, Adding To Losses

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market posted a slight decline today, adding to its recent losses.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 70 at 794.67, and losers outpaced gainers by about 3-to-2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said investors' concern continued to focus on the Federal Reserve Board's stated intention to maintain a relatively restrictive credit policy in order to restrain inflation. That stance by the Fed appears to leave little chance for an early downturn in interest rates, brokers noted.

Polaroid, the most active NYSE issue, was down 4 1/4 at 38 1/2 on top of a 12 1/2-point plunge Wednesday. Analysts attributed selling pressure on the stock to a brokerage house's report that early indications of sales of the company's SX-70 film were disappointing.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index faded 4 1/2 to 81.00.

Other Big Board issues on the active list included Texas Instruments, down 4 1/2 at 108 1/2; American Home Products, off 1/2 at 4 1/2; and McDonald's, down 1/2 at 55 1/2, in a general decline in glamour issues.

Kraftco, opening late, tumbled 4 1/2 to 36 1/2. The company said writeoffs of its cheese inventory could slice 65 cents off its second-quarter earnings.

Reliance Group was down 1/2 at 9 1/2 in trading that included a 100,000-share block at that price.

The Amex' volume leader was Syntex, off 3/4 at 44 1/2. A 154,900-share block traded at 45.

The NYSE's noon composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 2 1/2 at 45.53.

Librarian Demoted At Odessa College

ODESSA - Acting on President Phil Speegle's recommendation, the Odessa College trustees demoted head librarian Mrs. Mary Nieball Tuesday night and replaced her with Mrs. Edith Wright, her assistant.

Mrs. Nieball will stay on at the school's faculty as an assistant librarian at her present $16,250 salary.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Nieball had clashed over plans for a three-story addition to the library. Mrs. Nieball objected to plans that would place the library on two floors.

She suggested that an alternate plan be considered but Speegle said additional delays would only add to the total costs.

On a split vote, trustees backed Speegle and approved plans for the three-story building addition.

Three Officials Ask Rule Change For Convention

AUSTIN (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby today joined Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., in asking that delegates to the Sept. 17 state Democratic convention of the Jewish faith be allowed to assign their votes to another delegate or alternate.

The state Democratic convention in Austin, along with the state Republican convention in Houston, conflicts with the Jewish holy day, Rosh Hashanah.

Briscoe and Bentsen proposed that the legal affairs subcommittee meeting in Austin June 15 "waive and temporarily suspend the rules governing proxy voting so that delegates of the Jewish faith can assign their votes to a properly certified delegate or alternate, if they choose."

MIA Officially Declared Dead

WEST HURLEY, N.Y. (AP) - Seven years after he was shot down over North Vietnam, Air Force Major Vincent Scungio officially has been declared dead.

His former wife, Helen, said the Pentagon's announcement Wednesday, which came on the birthday of the youngest of their four children, was no surprise. But "you never really prepare yourself completely for it," she said.

She is now Mrs. Robert Kinter. She remarried five years ago.

Western Europe Backing Away From Fascination Shown For U.S.

By JOHN VINOCUR

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The Big Schnitzel, the GIs call Frankfurt. It is: fat banks sitting on reinforced concrete haunches, trees greening with spring and immediately greying with dust from roadway digging; bars like the Florida Boy one door down from Dr. Muller's orange-fronted sex department store, hookers camping on the corners.

Big Burgher Mercedes Benzes jammed up against other wide-hipped cars belonging to some Max or Moritz hypertensing up to 140 over 100 in the traffic sclerosis; carbon dioxide tussling with bratwurst fumes for air space, jets running track across the sky to Rhein-Main Flughafen.

Dirt, crassness, money badly spent, noise — some Germans say the city is a ruthless caricature of what Europeans find worst in the United States.

After 20 years in which Schnitzel City offered Americans practiced postwar humbleness and assimilated the electric toothbrush and U.S.-type urban problems, things are changing. Having chosen poorly from what the United States has to offer, some people think not only Frankfurt but much of Western Europe is backing away from the fascination it showed for America.

Schnitzel, vt. (slang) 1. to gyp, or take advantage of, as employed colloquially by U.S. forces stationed in Central Europe. 2. Veal dish, German, not particularly favored by said military forces.

"Nowadays your average Deutsch, he'll schnitzel you as fast as he'll 'guten morgen' you," said an American private pushing an Army Chevy through traffic. "He don't love us any more. Worse, he don't even care. Isn't that right, lieutenant?"

A German who has real understanding and affection for the United States says a lot of the old fascination is gone. "We have proved to ourselves that we can do bad things every bit as unsuccessfully as you do — look at Frankfurt — and we may be able to do some good ones better. The old inferiority complex is just about gone."

It is not just the Big Schnitzel. Unscientific and occasionally contradictory, enough subjective evidence nonetheless exists to argue that an increasing number of Europeans consider America less and less as model or marvel. It comes in loose nuggets like this:

In Germany, after a generation of television viewing centered around Hoss Cartwright of Bonanza and other canned American shows, sometimes two a night, the two national networks are down to two new U.S. serials a week. An official of the ZDF color network explained: "Everybody still enjoys a western, but most other things don't reflect our life or aspirations."

4 Pizza Cooling Units Set Scene In 'The Exorcist'

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Four commercial cooling units all working at once can make a room "as cold as Hades," and that's what they were called on to do in the film, "The Exorcist."

When the devil in the film causes the room to become extremely cold, it is necessary for the viewing audience to realize this by seeing the actors' breath change to vapor. It does, owing to the fact that the temperature on the set was brought down to zero.

The refrigeration condensing units used are capable of lowering the temperature to 30 degrees below zero according to the manufacturer, Borg-Warner's York Division here. Milt Kalish, the engineer who sold the equipment, said they were designed to cool frozen-food storage areas.

"These places are constructed to be cold," he said, "not like a movie set with all its lights, equipment and people generating a lot of heat. This is the problem we had to overcome. But with four units of this size, I would imagine the actors in the film felt like the frozen pizzas these units might normally cool," he added.

Used In Paints
Irish moss, gathered mainly on the shores of Prince Edward Island, is used in the chemical and paint industries, and as a stabilizer in certain foods.

headquarters in Wiesbaden, two secretarial jobs were offered simultaneously to the house staff. One was in Rome, the other in the network's Washington office at higher pay and benefits. There were 34 applications for the Rome job and two for the post in Washington.

David Rosenthal, a director of Merrill Lynch in Paris, told a friend at lunch: "If most of the American offices here had gone into their French executive or middle management asking for a man to move to the States, they'd find people hiding under their desks. Ten, 15 years ago, they would have lined up outside the door. You can't blow a European's mind anymore by showing him a wall oven."

In Paris, where U.S. westerns and gangster movies are dissected by eager critics, attendance at American films dropped 25 per cent in 1973, despite "The Godfather," a world box office money spinner. Foreign movie attendance declined in general, but the American drop was startling because attendance at French films improved.

A French film distributor said: "It may be that a lot of people no longer need the kind of escape that American films gave them."

Immigration figures bear out a drying up of interest. While Canada, New Zealand and Australia have generally increased their totals, the number of Frenchmen, Italians, Germans and Britons emigrating to the United States in 1973 decreased.

the decrease was from 8,700 to 5,700 and in Italy, from 25,500 to 21,000.

With Europe wealthier and the dollar weaker, more tourists and businessmen felt traveling to the United States came within their reach. In France, the number of non-immigrant visas issued rose from 32,000 in 1964 to 105,000 in 1973. At the same time, however, the rise in student visas, a gauge of young people's interest and respect for a country, went up just fractionally. During the first half of 1964, there were 300 French applications for student visas to the United States. By 1973, they had increased to only 394. In Britain, the brain drain — emigration of professional people to the United States for better salaries and working conditions — leveled off about three years ago and, according to one U.S. Immigration official, "is just about a thing of the past."

Edmund Brown's Son: Same Party, Name But Different

By BILL STALL
LOS ANGELES (AP).— His father was folksy, pumping hands and always ready with a booming "How are you!" or a hearty "By golly!" The son is reserved and serious, not very good at small talk.

California. The father's chest swelled with pride when he talked, almost in awe, about the mushrooming growth of "this great state of California." His son hates "mindless development" and wants a better quality of life for Californians.

was governor of California for eight years, 1959-67. He was 53 when elected.

Democrats, including such heavyweights as San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto and state Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti. The winner meets the Republican primary victor.

the trust of the people in his two tries for office — becoming a Los Angeles community college trustee in 1969 and California secretary of state in 1970. And he did both without much help from his father.

stop he tells how he took the moribund office of secretary of state — his predecessor died in office after 28 years and the job had been little more than record-keeping — and turned it into an instrument of reform.

Watergate investigations — over a $100,000 contribution to the Republican party from International Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The father was Old Politics, with a career that began in 1929 in the ethnic precincts of San Francisco. His son went from a seminary to the new politics of vote-rich Southern

The styles and political views differ, but the name and party label — Democrat — are the same.

Young Brown is campaigning hard to win the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the June 4 primary. He is first in the polls but faces 17 other

Through the campaign there have been the inevitable accusations that Brown is riding on his father's coattails, that he is too young, too inexperienced for the governor's chair. He bristles at the allegations, pointing out he has won

Pat Brown has a small role in the gubernatorial campaign. He's offered advice — "Sometimes he takes my advice and sometimes he doesn't." The campaign chest includes a $21,000 contribution from an oil audience. What could do it, he says, is his reputation as a political reformer.

Among other things, he tightened campaign disclosure laws, forced major oil companies to reveal secret support of a campaign to defeat a state rapid transit ballot measure and waded into the controversy —

The former governor says there has been an understanding that he keep a low profile in his son's campaign. "Though Jerry has never asked me to."

His son's campaign stirs memories and turns on the adrenalin.

But he and his son have always had differences. Jerry Brown spoke out against the Vietnam war and family friend Lyndon B. Johnson. He backed Sen. Eugene McCarthy in 1970 while his father was solidly aligned with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

"We're so different," says the son. "That's obvious to anyone who knows anything about us. Our whole lifestyle is different."

The elder Brown climbed the political ladder in the traditional fashion. Law school, an unsuccessful try at state assemblyman in 1929, county central committee work for the Democrats, election as San Francisco district attorney on the second try in 1943, two terms as state attorney general before beating U.S. Sen. William F. Knowland to become governor.

Brown won by a landslide over Richard Nixon in 1962. The defeat at the time was thought to have ended Nixon's political career.

The Republicans turned the tables on the governor four years later with Reagan, who had no political experience. The former actor cut a commanding presence over the plump governor with the heavy glasses.

Jerry Brown was a 26-year-old student of the Roman Catholic priesthood when his father was sworn in as California's 32nd governor.

Royal Navy Command Ship Sails Half Of Suez Canal

LAKE TIMSAH, Egypt (AP)—Steaming "carefully and with a bit of worry," a British naval command ship has become the first large ship to transit as much as half the war-blocked Suez Canal since 1967.

The 100-mile waterway, linking the Mediterranean Sea at Port Said with the Gulf of Suez and the Red Sea, and essentially east with west, still is a long way from commercial use.

Work on rebuilding the canal began after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger negotiated a disengagement of Egyptian and Israeli forces along the waterway.

With raucous toots from its sirens, HMS Abdiel docked at Ismailia on Lake Timsah Wednesday to set up shop as the command ship for a Royal Navy mine-hunting team clearing mines and other relics of war from the canal. It was closed after the six-day Arab-Israeli war in June, 1967.

"We crossed the waterway carefully and with a bit of worry," said Comdr. J. D. W. Husband, the 1,500-ton command support ship's skipper. The 50-mile voyage from Port Said took five hours. Under normal conditions it would have required three, officials said.

United States and British naval teams have spearheaded the operation that began in early April to clear the waterway.

Asked when the clearance operation will end, Husband replied that it might take a year at the present rate of progress.

American minesweeping helicopters are to complete their work by early next week.

The canal's commercial importance will be diminished by the advent in the last few years of so-called supertankers, which are too large to use it and still will have to sail around Africa on their journeys from the Middle Eastern oil fields to the West, principally Europe.

Its principal significance is likely to be military, giving the Soviet Mediterranean fleet rapid access to the Indian Ocean.

The United States has been sending ships into the Indian Ocean from its Pacific fleet in recent months, according to some sources in preparation for the reopening of the Suez.

The Abdiel arrived at Ismailia with pageantry reserved for special occasions. Her signalmen hoisted the Egyptian and British flags, and Husband was greeted by Egyptian Adm. Ahmed Foad Hassan, head of the Anglo-American-Egyptian clearance operation.

Market Now Shares Common Gripe With Individuals: Taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Many of the problems that afflicted the stock market in the recent past were peculiarly its own-home-grown or self-inflicted by friction, greed, inefficiency, timidity, temerity, procrastination and the like.

But the market also shares a common gripe with individual and corporate Americans. Taxes, it argues, are needlessly hurting both brokers and customers. Moreover, they are counterproductive for government; they hurt it too.

If there is one thing that all segments of the market can agree upon, it is this. Nobody believes that a change in the tax laws will set off a bull market, but most believe it will spur considerable activity and revenues.

The main contention of tax-change advocates is that capital gains should be taxed on a sliding scale, based on the amount of time elapsed between purchase and sale.

Stocks held for the shortest time would be taxed the heaviest.

Under the existing system, one-half of all 'long-term' capital gains are taxed, no matter if held for the minimum period of six months or for 25 years. Thousands of stockholders are locked into their gains, it is contended, because of this.

If the tax bite were reduced on a sliding scale, based on the length of time held, these shareholders would be inclined to take their profits, thus spurring market activity and automatically providing tax revenue for government.

The Securities Industry Association, made up of brokers, uses this illustration to demonstrate what it feels is the inequity and failure of the existing system of taxing capital gains:

John Jones bought $1,000 worth of stock in 1962 and considered selling it in 1973 for a $300 profit. On this long-term profit Jones would have had to pay a capital gains tax on $150. During this period, however, the value of the dollar shrank 27.2 per cent. In purchasing power, Jones' $1,300 proceeds would be worth only $946, or $44 less than his original $1,000 — before taxes.

In effect, Jones noted, he would be taxed on an illusory gain if he sold. Unable to face this prospect, and not needing the money immediately he delayed making his move. The money remained locked in. The government got no revenue.

HOROSCOPE
by Carroll Righter
(May 31)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It would be wise not to make any binding commitments today, especially early in the day, for later a surprising invitation and many opportunities will be offered. Take time to plan for another matter.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Ideal time to see who allies want from you. Later someone you hadn't expected take up your time, but for a worthwhile cause.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Show loyalty to allies and co-workers and much is then accomplished. Spare time is best utilized improving surroundings at home.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are able to unexpectedly have a good time at a new-type amusement. Don't get yourself worried over something worthless.

Expert Says Food Stamps Inadequate For Good Nutrition

Economic Advisers' Report Contains Little Comfort

By JOHN CUNNIFF
 NEW YORK (AP) — There is very little comfort to be distilled from the latest report of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, which contains forecasts that instead might contribute to financial security.
 The rise in the cost of living should slow somewhat in the final quarter of the year, it states, but still will be at an unacceptable 7 per cent rate. Unemployment might rise from 5 per cent now to nearly 6 per cent then.
 But maybe even more significant than these numbers is the greater uncertainty with which economic advisers seem to assess the future. Continued failures have undermined assurance.
 Herbert Stein, the chief economic adviser, had been talking about a 6 per cent inflation rate by the end of the year, but apparently he now goes along with the 7 per cent forecast.
 Once pragmatically optimistic, he sounds less so now.
 The President himself referred to "signs of improvement," which hardly has the stench of those old pronouncements that seemed to say the future is ours. He talked of "a special danger" that inflation might escape restraints.
 Slowly the realization seems to be descending on makers of economic policy that they do not get the same response to their actions as they did a decade ago. It may be only that the ailments are so extreme, but it might be more than that.
 The fact is that the federal budget as an instrument of economic change is not the flexible instrument it once was. The President's authority over the budget is restricted more each year; his spending is done for him.
 As more of the budget becomes precommitted to social and defense and income maintenance programs, the nation's ability to hold down federal spending is reduced. It cannot exert the same anti-inflation pressures.
 Inflation control becomes less effective also as economies become more influenced by world events. U.S. food prices, for instance, have been influenced by a poor Soviet harvest and by attempts everywhere to raise living standards.
 A more obvious example is the changing oil market, which affects so many other industries. It wasn't an increase in U.S. demand nearly so much as a changed attitude by supplier nations that led to price increases.
