FOUR KILLED IN PLANE CRASHES NEAR WINK PORT

Harry Lynch and His Three Passengers Are Victims

WINK, May 21. (AP)—Four persons were killed late Sunday—two of them 12-year-old boys—when the J-5 Travelair 3-place plane in which they were taking a joy ride during an aerial exhibition crashed in attempting a landing at the Tulsa airport, six miles from Wink.

Those killed were:

Harry Lynch, 25, pilot, of Wink; Willie Ravel, 28, formerly of El Paso, Wink department store manager; Boy Fesler, 12; Bruce Anderson, 12.

Eye witnesses of the fatal plunge said the pilot was attempting to make a landing with the ship's motor dead, turning down wind into the field, when the plane went into a spin in making a final turn. He had attempted to dive under a power line after failing to hold altitude enough to glide over it.

Lynch had been flying only about a year and received a private license from a department of commerce inspector at Big Spring.

A crowd gathered at the flying field witnessed the crash.

Lynch volunteered last summer to make a plane dash from Wink to Dallas, carrying 2-year-old Billie Theford to a hospital there for emergency treatment. On that trip, the plane developed motor trouble and Lynch, attempting his first night landing, misjudged the field and landed in a corn field near Frisco, demolishing the plane. The baby was unhurt in the accident but died two hours later in a Dallas hospital. Mayor Ted Theford of Wink, the baby's father, was bruised in the accident.

Lynch rebuilt the plane, had the motor overhauled at Wichita Falls two months ago, and had pronounced it in perfect flying condition. He received his flight instruction from Harold Becher of Midland and "Slim" Slaten of Big Spring.

More than 1,500 persons were gathered at the field, including many women and children. Screams filled the air as the plane dipped and plunged into the ground some 200 feet from the horrified throng. The plane, although badly wrecked, did not burn.

Reggie Hobbins of Fort Worth, former co-holder of the world's plane endurance refueling flight record, was officiating at the dedication ceremonies. He immediately notified department of commerce officials at Love field, Dallas.

Lynch, former county officer, is survived by his father, Dick Lynch; his mother, two sisters and a brother. He was an oil company employee.

Ravel was a member of a promoter El Paso family. Bobbie Fesler and Bruce Anderson, were making their first flight.

Impressive Commencement Services Held on Sunday

Gettle Kidnapers Are 'Lifers' Now

On their way to San Quentin prison to serve life terms, the three kidnapers of William F. Gettle are shown here as they were led, heavily guarded, through the crowd outside the Los Angeles court where they pleaded not guilty to an added federal indictment placed against them as a bar to parole. Left to right, the handcuffed trio are Larry Kerrigan, James Kirk and Roy Williams.

A commencement address by Dr. W. R. White of the Broadway Baptist church of Fort Worth on "A New Deal in Gratitude" placed the final impressive touch on a Sunday service held at the high school and marked by assembly singing of students, and a number by the high school quartet and by Mrs. Foy Proctor.

The minister, with carefully chosen diction, graphically outlined the progress of civilization as man's conception of greatness changed from the days when physical strength and the tacitly understood doctrine of "might makes right" were characteristic, to the present trend to attribute more confidence in mental attainments.

A new vision is being afforded the world, he explained, with new concepts of service. The utilitarian doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number eventually must be followed. Types of service in the sought for state will include not only physical, social and political, but spiritual, and God will be recognized as the supreme personality. A new motive will actuate one, adding something to everything given. "All I have given me," the minister said, "and my responsibility is to add something to that gift and pass it along to some one else."

"Gratitude for favors and blessings received is the least of the soul. The loss of conscious consciousness is one's reaction to responsibilities imposed."

The speaker was gracious in praising the school system of Midland. He said he had come here because his pupil was well cared for by a visiting minister, and because he had long wished to speak before the Midland student body, which, he said, occupied an unique position in the honor roll of the state's education system.

Speaking to the 65 seniors, he said they should be proud to have been associated with such a system, and the system, in return, should feel pride in having fostered the education of such a class.

Student singing was impressive, presiding at it was "The Last Chord" by the famous "The Last Chord" quartet. Mrs. Proctor's solo was especially pleasing, as was the "Prayer Perfect," sung by the quartet made up of Melba Lee, Alma Lee, Hankins, Harriet Taylor and Juanita Cox.

Class day exercises will be held at the high school Tuesday night.

SOVIET VISIONS RIVERS OF WEALTH FLOWING OUT OF SIBERIA'S WILDS

BL WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS KHABAROVSK, Siberia, May 21. (NEA)—On the blizzard-swept morning of February 17, 1897, a column of ragged and shivering men, women, and children, some in chains, were shoved into line by their Cossack guard and given the order: "Forward, march!"

Ahead, thousands of ice-covered miles away, beyond the Ural, lay Siberia and exile. Siberia! The very name struck terror to men's souls.

Among the prisoners was one Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov, later known to history as Nicolai Lenin, sentenced to three years' at hard labor.

Today, 37 years later, another column of men, women, and children is steadily pushing toward Siberia, directed thither by the dead hand of Lenin, whose body lies embalmed in its red-and-black marble tomb in the Red square in Moscow.

But they do not go in chains. They are going voluntarily because they hope for a brighter future there, as workers and homesteaders. They are going in much the same spirit that led American pioneers to plunge into the wilds beyond the Mississippi and on to the Far West.

Larger Than All Europe

"Siberia," was discovered as a territory, back in 1581, by a fellow named Ermak. But it remained for the Bolsheviks to discover it for what it really is, 350 years later.

I asked him to explain. He led me over to a map. "That," he said, "is Siberia. It's bigger than all the countries of Europe combined. It's bigger than the United States. Yet, until recently, almost nothing was known about it—even by those who professed to rule it.

"The maps they made of it were wrong. If you tried to go by them, you got lost. They showed rivers where no rivers existed and we have found rivers where none was marked down.

"In certain times, Siberia was just a prison camp. Or a vast region where a few grew rich by scratching the surface here and there. To the masses all it meant was bread, exile, prison, torture, gloomy forests, frozen steppes, unutterable loneliness, death.

"That is what the old regime made it.

Great Rivers There

"We are making it quite something else. We are making it a place to live.

"It is four of the world's greatest rivers—the Ob, the Yenisei, the Lena, and the Amur—every one longer than the Mississippi—unlike you count in the Missouri.

"Americans know the Volga pretty well, thanks to the song. They also know the Amur, because of the war-scars along its valley. But how many, even educated, Americans can tell, off-hand, where the Ob is, where it rises, and into what it flows? Nevertheless, the riches along its course will some day make history.

"American women, of course, know the loveliest furs come from Siberia—sable, beaver, ermine, blue and gray polar fox, tufted-eared lynx, marten and the rest.

Rich In Minerals

"But only a few people have the faintest conception of its incalculable wealth in coal, iron, copper, lead, precious stones, gold, silver, and other minerals. Or that the endless steppes are not perpetually frozen bad-lands, but are really fertile plains, waiting to bring forth bumper crops of almost every description.

In the area around Minusinsk—the very same Minusinsk to which Lenin was exiled—are approximately 500 billion tons of iron. Siberia has almost as much coal, and of the very best quality of anthracite, or cooking coal, as England, Germany and France put together. Hardly any of it is deeper than 600 feet.

Now look: Here is the Ural Mountains, separating European Russia from Siberia. This is Mount Magnitnaya.

Iron Found by Warrior

"About 150 years or so ago, a fellow named Ivanovich Pugachev roamed this region. Behind him rode several thousand rebellious peasants, Cossacks, Kirghiz and deserters from the army of Catherine the Great.

"Deciding to march on Moscow, he first commanded his men to halt here at this mountain, and dig. Melting down the dirt, as they called it, they made a lot of spears and poured cannon balls from the ore.

"Pugachev took a beating and Catherine had him brought to Moscow in a wooden cage. She cut off his head in Red Square. But he had started something which will be the making of Siberia and of Russia.

"Recent assays reveal that there are at least 275,000,000 tons of high grade iron in Mount Magnitnaya and that in the adjoining Ural is upward of two billions more.

"So we have the coal and we have the iron to make Siberia an industrial empire as great as the United States.

"Along with this is unlimited agricultural acreage—enough to support 200,000,000 population and more.

Pioneers Flock In

"No other area has so much timber. None has so much water power. Soon, as lives of nations are being saved, Siberia will be herself, industrially, agriculturally, and militarily.

Pioneers are pouring in and settling. Blast furnaces are belching smoke and flame. Waterpower is being developed at a phenomenal rate. Railways and highways are snaking out into the wilds.

What the future holds in store for this colossal experiment only the future can tell. Siberia may not be the Eldorado which Soviet enthusiasts now seem to believe it is, but I found it to be at least a land of hope.

MAJ. LANG HEADS MONAHANS SCHOOL

MONAHANS.—At a meeting of the school board here, Maj. A. E. Lang, of Wink, was elected as superintendent of the Monahans schools for the ensuing year to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden death of former Superintendent J. A. Summerhill, who was killed in an automobile accident near Pecos several weeks ago.

Lang is the first and only superintendent that Wink has had up to the present time, having taken up his work there in 1928 when the Wink independent school district was first organized. He gave the people of Wink a good school and Wink is widely known today by its schools.

The handsome school building at Wink is a monument to Lang and his six years of successful school work in that city.

He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, and attended Colorado A. & M. rural education department, and the A. & M. of Las Cruces, N. M.

Prior to going to Wink, Lang taught in the schools of Fortales, N. M., for five years, and was superintendent at Floyd, N. M., for four years.

Renovation Program For Harris County

HOUSTON, (AP)—Harris county will be ready to join in the new governmental rural rehabilitation program, as soon as funds for the program are made available by state and federal relief officials.

The county has been divided into eight districts and committees have been named to find out what land is being idle in their respective districts and negotiate with the owners to permit unemployed families to occupy it.

The plan is destined to benefit both the destitute unemployed person who has farm experience and the landowner who has allowed his property to run down.

Relief officials believe that unemployed families, after being given a start, will be able to "raise their living" on farms which have been abandoned or neglected. The compensation to landowners would be that the occupants would restore the land to productivity and repair the houses, barns and other buildings.

Families to occupy the vacant land will be selected after a careful study of the county relief board's records. Last September a thorough survey of the background of 11,000 families on the relief rolls.

Relief authorities plan to aid the unemployed families in the purchase of a cow, pigs, chickens and farming equipment necessary to get them started on the road to self-support.

JUNE ROBLES—TRUMP AGAINST ODDS!

When you begin to get discouraged about your country, to think that it can produce such utter scoundrels as the men who chained little June Robles in an underground box in the desert, you can get comfort from the reflection that the same country also produced June herself-- which helps to balance the account.

June Robles greets her mother.

Nobody seems to be quite clear about the exact length of time this youngster remained in that grave-like dungeon; but 10 minutes would be plenty long enough, and the fact this youngster stood it as long as she did, and came out of it with her spirit so unbroken, indicates that she is about as staunch and sturdy a child as you could find anywhere.

Indeed, the whole story would have made unbearably painful reading if the little girl had not been such a trump.

No man can read of that hot, dark, and filthy prison, buried in the desert sands, under conditions guaranteed to make it uncomfortable to the greatest possible degree, without feeling heartsick.

But June's own actions on being rescued redeem the story. Her uncomplaining bravery, in itself, is amazing for a child of that age, or of any age. Her pathetic eagerness to recover her school report card is the sort of thing to make anybody's eyes a trifle damp. And her immediate wistful plea, "I want my mamma," and the final reunion between mother and daughter, bring the narrative to an uncommonly moving conclusion.

An experience of this kind is a terrible thing for a child to have to live through. Such a thing can leave spiritual scars worse than any harm that could befall the body. But somehow, reading about this little soldier and the way she stood up under treatment that might have reduced a grown man to nervous prostration, one suspects that she has come out of it with as little damage as was humanly possible.

Nobody can tell what's ahead of her in this life, any more than the future can be predicted for any child. But it seems safe to bet that whatever happens to her, she will always ride out any storms she meets.

A little girl who can go through what she went through as heroically as she did is the sort of stuff out of which brave and successful adult lives are made.

We're well on our way to becoming hairless, toothless, and toeless, says a New York scientist, and when man gets that way he'll look back at the people of today and be sure Darwin was right.

A movement is on again for three-cent coins, but why not let us first get a good look at a 59-cent dollar?

We can live to be 200, says a French doctor, if we breathe properly. Hmm. We can live forever as long as we breathe at all.

Side Glances . . . . . by Clark

"How do you suppose I feel when someone says mother and I look like sisters?"

The Town Quack

(Discovers the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Kidnaping continues; and the American army continues to be idle. Why in the world is not the army used in running down and killing criminals? Death is the only thing that will frighten the criminal element. Comfortable penitentiaries no longer frighten the people with criminal inclinations. Don't be a dissembler merely because dissenting is modern. There is no particular merit in a thing or cause merely because it happens to be modern. You'll never get a job by merely listening to a soap box orator. All that man has to offer is a plan that will get you in trouble with the law. What has become of the old fashioned man who advised the farmer because the farmer appeared to be "so independent?"

WHY IS A FLY SPECK?

A fly speck is only a fly speck to many people, and to many a stage comedian it has been the source of a good "gag" when he "played a fly speck instead of a note."

However to anyone familiar with the filthy issue of flies, a fly speck is a warning of danger. Flies develop from eggs which are laid in filth and emerge carrying a load of disease germs and filth on their body. When a fly enters the house he comes loaded with potential death, for it is well known that insect-borne diseases kill more people in this country yearly than are killed by all accidents and violent deaths combined. If a fly was large enough so that you could see the filth and disease germs he carries on his body, says F. O. Moburg, president of Rex Research corporation, "no fly would ever be allowed to stay in a home. It would be so repulsive that the entire household would combine their efforts to eject or kill such a menace immediately. The egg of a fly will produce an adult within two weeks. In fact, if the sons and daughters of two were allowed to reproduce themselves one summer, the result would be over 60,000 tons of flies. Of course flies are not allowed to reproduce in such a manner, because mankind has learned to combat them. One of the most potent destroyers of flies in the world is Fly-Tox, produced through a fellowship placed at Mellon Institute by the Rex Research corporation. It is a liquid which is deadly to flies even when only a fine mist is sprayed in the air where the flies are found and it is harmless to people.

During the last fiscal year, coins to the total value of $11,026,256.12 were retired from circulation in this country as being too badly worn to be of proper use.

HEAVY ONION YIELD

LAREDO (AP)—The 1934 Laredo district Bermuda onion crop is practically at an end with an estimated 1,325 carloads. The 1,300-carload crop was passed with shipments May 9, and it was estimated about 25 carloads remained to move to market. The value of the crop is believed to be approximately $550,000. The yield of Bermuda onions was one of the heaviest in several years but the market quotations were mostly 65 to 80 cents for yellows, while white crystal wax averages around $1 per cwt. The quality of the onions in this territory was of the best and brought better prices than from other sections of South Texas. The greater part of the crop went out under federal inspection. The Laredo district was the first in South Texas to begin shipping, the first three carloads being shipped April 4, by Teodosio Gutierrez from his south Laredo farm. The same day two carloads moved from Ector in the northern part of Webb county.

There were 32,509,000 persons living on farms in the United States on Jan. 1, 1934.

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield are of finer quality—and hence of better taste—than in any other cigarette at the price. LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

Unusual Indian Pot Inspected by Party

JAYTON (T)—Dr. W. C. Holden of Texas Technological college, Lubbock, accompanied by W. G. McMillan, the bird and reptile man of the recent Yaqui expedition headed by Dr. Holden, Ross Edwards, mayor of Lubbock and also a member of the Yaqui expedition, and C. H. Parks, Lubbock business man and amateur archaeologist, were in Jayton recently to inspect an Indian pot of unusual design found recently in this area.

light other objects of scientific value. Dr. Holden's party also was taken to the scene of the discovery of the Indian pot. A two-hour search produced only enough fragments of the pot to make it possible to have it restored, a few crude glass beads, several monoliths, arrow heads and spear points. The site, on a bluff overlooking a vast scope of territory, was said to have once been an Indian camp ground and several old camp-fire sites were located. C. G. Gallagher, L. C. McCombs, A. A. Bustrill, and P. W. Jones, all of Jayton, discoverers of the Indian pot, donated the relic to the Tech museum.
