U. S. GREATNESS LIES WITHIN ITS BORDERS

It is rather strange, when you stop to think about it, that more attention was not paid to the passage of the Philippine independence bill.

This measure, recently accepted in Manila, does more than bind the United States to give its island wards the freedom it promised them so long ago. It marks the close of an epoch—the final abandonment of a dream that was lifted high against the western sky a generation ago.

Who can remember that turbulent and excited Spanish war era now? It seems very remote, almost as far away from us as the Civil war period.

It was the signal of our coming of age, the violent and erratic announcement by a giant that he had attained his growth and meant to do great things in the world.

Doing great things in the world meant, in those days, becoming an empire, planting the flag overseas, taking up the white man's burden, and all that sort of thing; it meant looking with pride at new spots on the map, and learning strange names like Mindanao and the Sulu Sea, and meditating on the pride and glory of a great nation.

So we took over the Philippines, not knowing precisely what we wanted with them, but sure that taking them was a good thing.

Now, a generation later, we turn them loose again, giving them the independence they wanted in the first place; and in the time between something has happened to our dream, something has taken our conception of greatness and turned it inside out.

The truth of the matter probably is that we have learned that we have problems enough at home.

We have become great and strong, just as we told ourselves we should, back in '98. But we have begun to realize that greatness and strength don't rest on lonely garrisons in far-off seas, or on grim squadrons at anchor in tropical bays; they need as a foundation prosperity and happiness and freedom among the people at home, and if they lack those things they lack everything.

Our outposts of empire are no longer places like Luzon and Cavite; they are the bread-lines in our own cities, the farms that drain the blood from the men who work them, the slum areas that need to be rebuilt, the industries that profit neither seller nor buyer, the injustices that await settlement.

No longer will we prove our greatness by sending khaki-clad patrols into steaming jungles to die far from home. We have bigger jobs, closer home.

We are giving up our island empire because we have found a new one in our own front-yard.

TYPE'S PRANK

The typographical error is one of those perverse and impish pranks of fate which afflict all countries alike. Every editor has suffered from it; the latest is the German editor in Essen, whose paper recently reported a telegram of birthday greetings sent to Hitler by President Hindenburg.

The president closed this telegram with an exclamation not unlike the English "Hear, hear!" And some luckless printer inserted a question mark instead of an exclamation point after it, which so changed the sense of it that it became a cynical, "Oh, yeah?"

Well, the printer went to jail for a while, and the editor suffered vast mental stress. And anyone who ever worked on the production of the printed word will sympathize with both of them.

The typographical error will happen, no matter how careful you are; and it has a fiendish way of happening at the worst times and places.

It's just one of those things that put gray hairs on the heads of men who work in newspaper shops.

Women in Kansas seem to be giving up bridge for poker. Fair enough, while the men have given up poker for bridge.

Follow Rules To Make Jelly That Will Jell

EDITOR'S NOTE: All important secrets of jelly-making are divulged by Mary E. Dague today in the third of six articles on home-canning subjects which she has prepared for The Reporter-Telegram.

Now that jelly making has been reduced to definite rules, the tragedy of "jelly that won't jell" seldom, if ever, happens to even the most inexperienced housewife. She knows the necessary ingredients and the correct proportions which are required for perfect jelly and it's just a case of following rules and measuring accurately.

Fruit juice, fruit acid, sugar and pectin—these are the ingredients. Pectin is recognized as the important jellying agent, but the presence of fruit acid is quite as essential. Some fruits contain both these substances in goodly amounts and make excellent jellies naturally. Other fruits are deficient in one or the other and the lack must be supplied from some other source, such as another fruit juice or extracted pectin.

All fruits are richest in pectin just before they are fully ripe, so if the fruit used is half under-ripe and half perfectly ripe in order to give good color and flavor, the finest jelly can be made. As fruit becomes fully ripe, much of the pectin is changed to pectic acid, a condition which prevents jellying.

Fruits to Choose

Fruits rich in both pectin and fruit acid must be chosen for jelly making if extracted pectin is not used. Some apples (including crab-apples), currants, gooseberries, sour blackberries, under-ripe grapes, and decidedly under-ripe raspberries make excellent jelly without the addition of either pectin or fruit acid.

While the acidity of a fruit is readily detected by the taste, the presence of pectin must be determined by test. Should a juice lack acid it can be corrected by simply adding 1 tablespoon lemon juice to each pint fruit juice.

If you want to test fruit juice for pectin, try the Epsom salts test as follows: mix 1 tablespoon fruit juice, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1-2 tablespoon Epsom salts. Stir until salts are dissolved and then let stand 20 minutes. The jelly-like mass or formation of flaky particles indicates the amount of sugar to use when making the jelly. Because a certain amount of pectin can take care of a definite amount of sugar the pectin is very important. Too much sugar makes a gummy sticky jelly. Too little sugar makes a tough jelly.

Long Cooking Kills Flavor

Make jelly in small quantities. This shortens the cooking period and a finer flavor and color are the result. Long cooking darkens the color and destroys the delicate fruit flavor. It may also cause the natural pectin in the fruit juice to change to pectic acid. This often is the reason why jelly won't jell.

Hard fruits such as apples and quinces must be cut in quarters and cooked in enough water to make tender in order to extract the juice. Soft juicy fruits such as cherries and currants are heated in just enough water to prevent burning until the juice flows freely.

When fruit is tender and juice flows freely, turn into a jelly bag and allow the juice to drip through without squeezing. Test for pectin and measure. Cook this first extraction over a hot fire for five minutes, skimming if necessary. Slowly add required amount of sugar and continue to cook rapidly until jelly is done.

Jelly is done when it "sheets" from a metal spoon or when a drop or two tested on a cold saucer jellies. A thermometer may be used, but this old time test is reliable. The varying density, acidity and pectin content of the same fruit juice in different seasons make it almost impossible to give an absolute temperature for all time but you can reckon the temperature to within a few degrees. 218 to 222 degrees F. is the approximate temperature for any fruit juice to reach the jelly stage. A second extraction of juice always should be made. Return the pulp to the kettle with enough water to cover and heat slowly to the boiling point. Reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes. Proceed as before.

Pour jelly into hot clean jelly glasses and cover with a thin layer of melting paraffine. When jelly is cold cover with a second layer. When this has hardened cover with the tin covers that are supplied with the glasses. Store in a dark dry, cool place.

Preserves and fruit "butters" are made by weight rather than measure in many cases although the best strawberry preserves recipe I know measures the fruit and sugar.

Patriotic Party Given for Mid-Week Club

A Memorial day party entertained members of the Mid-Week club and guests Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. N. Hendrickson. Patriotic colors of red, white and blue were used in appointments of the bridge games and in the prize wrappings. High club score went to Mrs. I. E. Daniel, high guest to Mrs. Wade Heath and high cut to Mrs. Dou Sivals. Members playing were Mrs. W. L. Brown, Elliott Cowden, J. L. Crump, Daniel, J. L. Grette, H. F. Johnson, Sivals, M. C. Ulmer, W. E. Wallace and H. J. Phillips. Guests included Mrs. John Shipley, W. T. Walsh, R. R. Porterfield and Heath.

Personals

Mrs. W. F. Fahrkamp and daughter, Billie Mae, spent yesterday with Mrs. T. Paul Barron. Billie Mae remained for two days. Miss Read Thomas returned last night from Buena Vista, Va., where she attended Southern Seminary. Miss Thomas will spend the summer here with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. John B. Thomas.

D. H. Starling of Hobbs, N. M., was a visitor in Midland Wednesday.

Mrs. V. C. Vest left Wednesday for a visit with her son, Bill Vest, at Monahans.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer and son, Clarence Jr., left this morning for Dallas.

R. S. Brennan of Colorado and J. C. Cunningham, S. R. Self and W. F. Brainerd of San Angelo were among oil scouts here for check meeting today.

Juvenile Star Midland Visitor

Remember that small girl with long golden curls who appeared in water brown comedies when they were produced several years ago? Your guess is right—Anabelle Magnus. Miss Magnus, now 15 years old, visited in Midland Wednesday accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Jack Magnus, and her grandmother, Mrs. Anna Myers. Mrs. Magnus will be remembered by Midland people as Mable Coggins, who formerly lived here. The party visited in the home of Mrs. Molly McCormick. Mrs. Magnus and Miss Leona McCormick renewed their friendship, begun when they attended school together.

Mrs. Magnus, who entered the movies at the age of four, was active in pictures until she was forced to complete her high school education before continuing her career. She will enter El Paso high school next year and receive her diploma, after which she will be under contract to the Fox studios. Although just a junior in school now, Miss Magnus has had four years of Spanish, one of French and one of German. While in the Fox pictures, she will further her education by attending the University of California. All clothes worn by this small star while she was appearing in films were designed and made by her mother. Since the discontinuance of Buster Brown comedies, Miss Magnus has played as a featured juvenile star. When she reenters the films, she will play older roles.

The party left late Wednesday afternoon for El Paso where they will make their home for the next year. They are from Hollywood.

CANNING HINTS

EDITOR'S NOTE: If vegetable-canning is on your household program, you'll find invaluable hints in the article below—the fourth in a series of six on home-canning subjects.

Nothing can excel home-canned vegetables fresh from the home garden but you must keep in mind that slogan "an hour from garden to can" and work rapidly.

You must have perfect vegetables, perfect sterilization of equipment and product and be willing to take time to be meticulous in following directions if you would be successful in the canning of non-acid vegetables.

The cold-pack method which we all hailed as an improvement over the old-fashioned open-kettle has been replaced by the hot pack to give the best results. Vegetables are pre-cooked a few minutes before packing in jars and they are packed hot. This pre-cooking not only shrinks the vegetables but it makes for a uniform temperature throughout the can. Dense mixtures packed cold in jars are quite impossible to heat to the center of the can by ordinary methods of canning. Consequently, this food is not heated to a temperature high enough to destroy all living organisms and spoilage is certain to occur. Hence all these warnings about non-acid vegetables.

Steps in Preparing

To prepare vegetables for canning, they are first washed and thoroughly cleaned. They are then prepared as for immediate use, water is added to cover them and they are heated to the boiling point and cooked about three minutes. Lemon juice is stirred into the vegetable and then, with a cup, the hot mixture is dipped into hot, sterilized jars, rubbers and covers adjusted and the product is ready for the final processing period. Glass jars are half sealed before processing but tin cans are completely sealed before putting in the canner.

Lemon juice is not added if non-acid vegetables are canned by the pressure method. If you want to invest in a pressure cooker you will find it a paying investment, because the cooker can be used for many cooking purposes in addition to canning. The government Bureau of Home Economics advises that such vegetables as corn, beans and peas and asparagus be canned only by the pressure method. No other method will develop a temperature high enough to insure destruction of harmful bacteria and spores in these vegetables.

To Can Corn

Choose corn which is young and tender, "in the milk" the grower calls it. Be sure that it is not allowed to heat in the husk after gathering.

Cut corn from cob, add boiling water to cover and bring to boiling point. Boil three minutes and stir in 2 teaspoons lemon juice for each pint of corn. Fill prepared jars to within one-half inch from the top. Add 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon sugar to each pint jar, half seal and process 2 1-2 hours in hot water bath canner or for 80 minutes at 15 pounds pressure in steam pressure cooker. Remove from hot water at the end of processing period and finish sealing. Cool quickly. In the pressure cooker turn out heat under cooker at the end of the processing period and let stand until gauge has reached zero. Then remove cans and finish sealing.

Beans (Green)

Wash beans and remove strings and ends just as you would for cooking for the table. Cut into chunks or leave tiny ones whole. Put into boiling water to cover and boil hard for five minutes. Pack loosely in hot jars, adding water in which they were cooked to cover. Stir in 1 teaspoon lemon

Play Readers Club Concludes Season

The Wednesday morning session of the Play Readers club at the home of Mrs. Ralph Barron, 411 N. Lorraine, concluded the club year. Mrs. R. D. Scruggs read "Double Door" by Elizabeth MacFadden, one of the most popular plays of the season. Two guests, Miss Jennie Elkin and Mrs. Ed. Watts, and 15 members were in attendance.

Lima Beans

Use only young, tender and fresh beans. Shell and wash. Cook in boiling water to cover for five minutes. Stir in 1 teaspoon lemon juice for each pint and pack loosely in jars. Add water in which they were cooked to cover. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt to each, half seal and process in hot water bath two hours. Process in steam pressure cooker at 15 pounds pressure for one hour.

Beets

Can a few jars of small beets known as "bay beets" for special occasions. They require no slicing or cooking.

or slicing and are most delicious and attractive for serving. Larger beets should be sliced or cut in quarters as necessary ready for serving.

Wash beets thoroughly using a vegetable brush. Cut off tops leaving about two inches of stem. Take care not to break the skin nor cut the long straight "tap" root. Drop into a kettle of boiling water and boil 15 or 20 minutes. Dip into cold water and slip off skins. Pack in hot sterilized jars, adding 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice to each pint jar. Add enough boiling water to fill jars to within an inch of the top if you plan to use the oven and to within 1-2 inch from top for hot water bath or steam pressure cooker. Half seal and process two hours in pre-heated oven at 275 degrees F., 1 1-4 hours in hot water bath and 40 minutes in pressure cooker at 15 pounds pressure.

Greens of All Kinds

Wash greens thoroughly. Steam or cook in water which clings to leaves until wilted. Pack loosely in jars, adding water in which they were cooked to cover. Be sure to pack greens loosely and add plenty of water. The rule is half as much water by weight. Add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and 1-2 teaspoon salt to each pint, half seal and process 2 hours in hot water bath or 1 hour at 15 pounds pressure in steam pressure cooker. If you can in quart jars increase the time for corn 1 hour and for all other vegetables, 1-2 hour. Remember, too, that you do not need to add lemon juice if you are canning by steam pressure.

NEXT: Tomato Canning.

JEWISH 'DANIEL BOONES' BRAVE THE SIBERIAN WILDERNESS TO COLONIZE

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
BIRA, Eastern Siberia.—To Americans, Jews are a city people—bankers, brokers, merchants, and so on. But out here, in one of the wildest parts of wild Siberia, in the great loop of the Amur, is a large colony of Jewish Daniel Boones.

It is located on the left bank of the Amur, a short distance past where that mighty stream turns northward at Khabarovsk, between the rivers of Bira and Bidjan. From them it gets its name.

Bira-Bidjan is fertile country and rich in possibilities. But it is as virgin as any that Daniel Boone or Davy Crockett ever set eyes upon. Siberia is a frontier country and this is a frontier of frontiers.

The wolf, the bear, and the terrible Usurian jungle tiger still frequent Eastern Siberia, along with lesser varmints like wild boar, elk, lynx, panther, fox, and such.

Nevertheless, thousands of Jews have joined this colony and are building houses, clearing fields, plowing with tractors, milking cows and battling with all the hardships and difficulties which confront trail-blazers in such a wilderness.

Women and girls are working alongside their men, creating a Siberian Palestine—though that is not what they or the Soviet officials call it.

It is in no sense intended to be a Red Zion, they protest, but simply a Jewish settlement like thousands of other soviet farms or collectives—a collective of Jews.

Here, on a siding, I saw an emigrant train, with Jewish families on their way to Biro-Bidjan.

The train—1934 model of the "covered wagon." Russian style—was composed of fourth-class cars. We would call them box cars, with sliding doors on the side and no windows.

Within, along the walls, were three tiers of built-in bunks on which the pioneers put their bedding and, in fact, spent most of their time. For it was pretty crowded within and bitter cold without.

Car Is Crowded
In the middle of each car was a small, pot-bellied stove, generally red hot, the piping going through the middle of the roof. There were about 30 persons to the car.

Food was provided from a common commissary and seemed plentiful. The grownups talked with optimism about their future on the frontier and the children, like children the world over, looked on it all as one tremendous adventure which they hoped would never end.

Outside, inside all over the train they played at games despite the frosty air, now and then receiving a parental spank for leaving the door open too long and letting in the cold.

All Siberian settlers do no travel this way. I traveled for a day with a young couple who were on their way likewise to Biro-Bidjan.

Striking Young Couple
We occupied a second-class car very crowded. I had a seat in a compartment and offered it to the woman, but she refused. Instead, she and her husband sat on wooden seats hinged to the side of the car.

Every time anybody passed along the corridor, they had to rise. And that was often.

As first I took them both to be about 45 years old. But as I watched, I saw she could not be more than 23 or 24 and he about 25. She wore a sheepskin coat that had seen much service, the fur turned inside. Also felt boots, very muddy.

In fashionable dress, and made up, modern style, she would have passed for pretty, if not beautiful.

He, also dressed in sheepskin coat and high boots, looked like Chris. Long, blond hair, blue eyes that had a touch of sadness in them, even when he smiled, and a sandy-red beard.

Make Picnic of Journey
Apparently all their worldly belongings they carried in two enormous sacks made of heavy canvas. The other, kitchen utensils, a kettle for hot water, food, and a gallon jug of milk with a paper stopper.

As the train rattled along, making poor time, they chatted as gaily as any boy and girl on their way to a picnic. I gathered they had lived along the Chinese Eastern, in Manchuria, but now that the Japanese had come, and were changing things around, they had decided to move on Biro-Bidjan sounded like a pretty good place.

Now and then one would point out something as they passed and wonder if that was what it would be like where they were going.

When mealtime came, the woman would fish into the dining-room bag and pull out a huge chunk of black bread and give it to the man. Then she would pour him some milk my Johnson, boxing director there, may land Carners. The champion holds him in high regard.

Meanwhile, Carners is worried about the extent of who is to second him.

"My managers are mad at me," he grinned, "and say they will leave me flat. That G. K. by me, I don't like the way Carners is working."

His idea of preparing for Baer is to practice getting away from right-hand smacks. He keeps having his sparring partners to throw them.

It is all very well for Primo to perfect a defense, for Max Adonis is a most formidable opponent; but in doing so he would best lose to get the Californian's other fist for he is to be hooked to the body like he never was hooked before.

But foremost in Carners' mind at the moment is a new financial arrangement.

This trip he does not intend to be left with $70,000 in worthiness, which is all he had to show for five years of toil under Lou See, the little Frenchman who could not believe he had discovered anything more than a little shirt and lost him on the threshold of the richest prize in pugilism.

Freeport Regatta To Be Held Sunday

FREEPORT, Tex.—This little Gulf city looked for its autumn high day when the regatta was held. It makes final preparations for the fifth annual regatta, to be held on the harbor, motorboat regatta—one of the outstanding sports events of the kind in the South.

Those who enjoy the thrills and spills of a speedboat race will come to Freeport from miles around for the regatta Sunday, June 3.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Saranac has been ordered here to patrol the waters and to rescue and give first aid to racers whose boats overturn. Members of the Coast Guard will give the public a demonstration June 3 of how persons clinging to the mast of a sinking ship are rescued at sea.

Daring drivers will be here from all parts of Texas and from many other states. The entry list for the ten races includes at least eight national record holders.

Among the notable racers expected to compete are the two Oklahomans, George Coleman of Miami and Frank Vincent of Tulsa, and the speed queen, Ruth Herring of Fort Worth and Elizabeth Sherry of Tulsa.

The two women races and the renewal of the competition between Coleman and Vincent are expected to excite much interest.

Sponsors of the regatta say that drivers will be here from Dallas, Denton, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Port Lavaca, Houston and other Texas cities.

In addition to other prizes, the winner in the amateur Class C hydroplane division will be awarded a large cup to be known as the Ivey-Pratt-Duffy memorial trophy.

The 36 inch cup was named in memory of the three popular speed boat drivers from Cooco Creek who met with a fatal accident on their way to a regatta last fall.

The cup was given to the family of Ivey Iffroy in recognition of his winning it two of the three times necessary to gain permanent possession but the Iffroy family turned it back with the suggestion that it be a memorial.

Thousands Trek East
At their destination they piled off the train. From the platform, loaded down like pack-mules though they were, they both smiled and nodded to me as I pulled out. They still remembered my offer of a seal, but the Russian Jews have gone to Siberia before, but seldom voluntarily. Generally it was to escape pogroms in European Russia or to serve a term in exile there, imposed by the czar.

Just how many settlers of all categories Siberia has attracted in the last 12 months is not definitely known. Admittedly in part a national defense move, officials shy off when asked.

But it is believed the previous peak year, 1927, when 650,000 trekked East, is being considerably surpassed.

CARNERA MORE INTERESTED IN CHANGE OF MANAGERS THAN FIGHT TRAINING

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, N.E.A. Service

POMPTON LASSES N. J.—An amazing situation exists at Dr. Joe Bier's pretty little health farm on the shore of the lake here.

Primo, Carnera, to date one of the most manager bosses in history, trains alone for the defense of his title against Max Baer on June 14.

One of his handlers, Bill Duffy, of the night clubs, is in jail, income tax trouble put him there.

Carnera is not on speaking terms with Louis R. Sorel, the former bank solicitor who holds a contract calling for 50 per cent of his earnings.

So the Italian giant, who before being surrounded by agents, guides, and flunkies of all types and Broadway mobsters, winds up in the hands of his rubber, Billy DeFoe, on the eve of his twisted life.

DeFoe is the old St. Paul feather. He is thoroughly capable in all line, but hardly the man to solve the many angles that go with a heavyweight championship prize fight.

Sorel parked Carnera here on May 1 and did not return for three weeks. Plainly, there was good reason for his absence, for Primo the Ponderous threatened to chuck him into the lake.

Nes is the break likely to be mended in a hurry.

Carnera demands a new contract BEFORE his battle with Baer. His usual terms are more than reasonable. The big fellow never has been a money grabber, which is why he recently was forced to go through bankruptcy.

Primo says he now gives Sorel 50 per cent of his earnings, with expenses deducted from the top. Sorel splits with Duffy under terms of an agreement between them. There is no paper between Carnera and Duffy.

Carnera insists that Sorel pay all expenses. If they are to be deducted from the total, he wants Sorel's share to be cut to 40 per cent.

"How do you feel?" I asked Carnera, following a miserable workout.

"All right, all right," he grunted, "all except the managers. They no good. Sorel worst of all."

I thought there was more than a trace of apprehension in Carnera's next remark.

"I've been chump," he went on, "but no longer. After all, it is me, Primo, who is going to be hit on the chin, and here's my chance to get mine. I've got a new lawyer and he tells me I can get the deal I want."

Carnera blamed Sorel for his carrying such a small sum since he belted out Jack Sharkey a year ago.

The champion overruled Sorel, who refused to consent to the New York Free Milk Fund for Babes taking the first 10 per cent of the Carnera-Baer bout receipts.

Primo personally telegraphed the chairman of the fund agreeing to give a "conservative" share of his purse to the charity.

Duffy hopes that a four month's sentence will be shortened sufficiently for him to be on the street on June 9, when Carnera declared that he did not care whether Broadway Bill ever showed up.

Primo added that the contract he signed with Sorel following his fatal fight with Ernie Schmid in February of last year, was for only 18 months, instead of 10 years, as the manager has claimed.

Sorel was reported to have asked $150,000 for the contract before the Sequels Steer's match with Tommy Loughran at Miami in late February. Now one beam that it can be purchased for half that amount.

If Carnera isn't tied up for longer than 18 months, as he contends, all Sorel has to sell is his manager's cut in the Baer battle.

If he leaves the Garden shortly, as it is reported he will, Jim-

DAVENPORT, IOWA

"Your claims for it were very modest," writes Harold R. Boles of Davenport, Iowa, about his 1934 Pontiac Eight Sedan. "I find that the car more than fulfills all of them—motor smoothness, ease of operation, speed, riding comfort and economy (I am getting 16 miles to the gallon)." . . . Mr. Boles is but one of hundreds of owners who have written their praises of the big, new Pontiac Eight. Read what others say:

THE CITY OF SEATTLE

It is the smoothest handling automobile I have ever driven. Runs just like a motor and has never given me a minute's trouble. It is almost unbelievable, but I am getting about 18 miles on a gallon of gas. I am in a short time traffic will be congested with Pontiacs.

Frank Buck's Life Of Hazard Opened At 9 Years of Age

Ask Frank Buck to tell you of some of his greatest life-time thrills in the oddest "game" of these modern times, "bringing 'em back alive" for circuses, carnivals and soon, and there'll be a smile and a twinkle in his eyes that hark back to childhood days. Buck's No. 1 Thrill was the capture alive of a big diamond-back rattlesnake, near Mineral Wells, Texas, when he was but 9 years old. The man who makes a business out of the jungles had jumped away at the shrill warning to save his bare legs from the fangs that carried death. He had his favorite forked stick with him and a gunnysack, for the boy was out after small game. Recovering his composure, Frank got the twin prongs over the rattler's neck and was soon dragging sack and snake to his home seat by.

Garden Farms Colony Launched in West Virginia

WORK on the $400,000 Red House Garden Farms experiment in rural rehabilitation, along the Kanawha River, near Charleston, W. Va., has been launched under FERA supervision and modern homes will be provided for 150 families. Above is an architect's sketch of the project and at right one of the houses with its grounds which each settler will purchase on a 15-year payment plan. Five-acre farms have been marked out and each colonist will raise his own produce, be given a sow and pigs, and work part-time in one of the 20 shops, auditorium, civic center, school, and parks are planned.

at him from a thicket when Buck believed flares he carried were insurance for safety is also a high-ranking thrill. A black spotted cobra once caught him in the eyes with its venom. Earlier in his eventful career a black leopard escaped from aboard a coast liner near Singapore and was attacked and killed by sharks when it jumped overboard. On another occasion a full-grown, freshly captured leopard got loose on an ocean liner, "Wiz Cargo," his motion picture directed by Armand Denis, has a thrill from Thrillersville when Buck feels the pulverizing crush of a myth, and saves himself with an arm that is free and a revolver.

Phillips Host to Friends on Fifth Anniversary Here

George D. Phillips, co-proprietor of the Scharbauer Coffee shop, observes the fifth anniversary of his connection with the business, an advertisement in this issue announces. Phillips, with Harry Lochabay and Eddie Sims, bought the business from the Masters organization. Later, Sims sold his interest in the popular cafe to Phillips and Lochabay, moving to East Texas. Lochabay sold his interest to Mike Costen a few months ago.

working in a Cleveland steel mill as a chemist. Wilson, who had a reputation as a "lady's man," was sympathetic and attentive to Mrs. DeBolt after her husband died in 1932. Mrs. Cheske wrote.

Old Sheriff--

A man living nearby and evidently associated with the fence cutters heard the shooting. He thought that his confederates had gone out on their fence cutting foray and had encountered the sheriff's posse. Knowing the shooting ability of Sheriff Wall's picked men, his imagination got the better of him. He was so positive some of the members of the gang were killed that he mentioned the names of eleven to his neighbors. When Wall heard the story he arrested them.
