The Welsh Note.

Here is what the Rev. John Evans tells us in reference to the way in which English was taught in Wales in the eighteenth century: "This school had several features unknown in the Welsh school of today. The Welsh note was one indispensable feature. This secured English conversation. It was a smooth piece of wood, like a flat inch rule, with the letters 'W. N.' esty. carved on it. When any one was caught speaking Welsh the Welsh note was immediately handed to him, but the hand which held it at the end of the lesson was the one made to tingle in consequence, so child who had it to move about was some argument, and the attor- ence on the great Frederick, the fessors. from pew to pew, craftily tempting others to speak Welsh. This sign of guilt therefore often changed hands until at last it rested in that which had to bear the burden of alle the transgressions of that law."
