Law Requires Full Stop Before Passing Halted School Bus

School busses over the state have now begun the task of carrying thousands of children to and from their studies. Soon to be expected are the inevitable tragic reports of deaths and injuries occurring when impatient youngsters dash across busy highways to greet their waiting parents or to board the bus. Most of such accidents could be avoided if motorists would adhere strictly to the letter of the law pertaining to the passing of school busses.

Most Texans are aware of the law which requires a driver to come to a complete stop when overtaking from the rear a school bus which has stopped to receive or discharge school children. After stopping immediately behind the bus, he is then allowed by law to proceed past same at a speed which is prudent, not exceeding ten (10) miles per hour, and with due caution for the safety of such children.

What many persons do not realize is that the very same rule applies when MEETING a stopped school bus. While everyone is interested in protecting our children, unthinking violators of this simple safety rule greatly outnumber those who comply. Failure to follow the law in this case can lead to fines up to $200.00 even when no accident occurs. Following an accident in which some child is injured or killed, the penalties are naturally much more serious.

Although the above rules do not apply when passing a stopped school bus in a business or residential district of a town, the necessity for extreme caution even in those locations is obvious.

When it comes to overtaking or passing moving vehicles, exercise of ordinary common sense will generally keep a driver within the law. For instance, when passing a car it is only common sense to proceed on past at a safe distance before cutting back to the right side of the highway. Also, any driver who drives with the danger of increasing his speed while another is attempting to pass him.

In the same category in the prohibition against passing on the right under most ordinary conditions. Of course, you may legally pass on the right in a few specific instances, such as when the vehicle overtaken is making or about to make a turn across or upon a one-way street with two or more lanes, or upon a two-way highway.

However, our traffic laws state that even when passing on the right is allowed, it shall be done only under conditions permit-

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA'S STORY COMES TO SCREEN AFTER YEARS OF TOIL

When John Phillip Sousa, the most imitated man of his day, was making musical history with the U. S. Marine Band, he little dreamed the story of his life would one day bring the highest price paid for any musical in recent years by movie men.

It took five years of negotiations to tie up the Sousa biography "Marching Along" and gather in the rights to all the famous marches which the Barnum of Bands composed. After such an outlay of time and money at Twentieth Century-Fox, there was only one thing left to do—make the story in such lavish Technicolor that it would become a bit of film history. Soon the public will have an opportunity to judge of the net result which has been titled appropriately, "Stars and Stripes Forever," and will be seen here at the Palace Theatre.

Webb Becomes Sousa

The most important ingredient for the picture, an actor who could play Sousa convincingly, was already at hand in the person of Clifton Webb. Webb, the perfectionist, spent months studying every quirk of the Sousa character. By the time the cameras were ready to roll he was as much at home with the March King as he had been with Belvedere—a character he has completely foreworn, by the way.

Like Webb, Sousa was charmingly aloof. He shook a mean baton. He was a frustrated singer and insisted on voicing his ballad compositions which never became popular. In a croaking off-key voice which drove his intimates to distraction, like Webb, he was an elegant; he never wore the same pair of gloves twice while conducting and used to order the expensive mochas by the hundreds dozens. The personalities of Sousa, the musician, and Webb, the actor, parallel intriguingly in most instances.

Gaiser Intimate Details

There was a deal of first hand information to be had on Sousa, and the late Lamar Trotti who both wrote the script of "Stars and Stripes Forever" and produced the picture, got it at first hand. Sousa's two daughters who are now living at Sandspoint, L. I., contributed much valuable intimate detail. Musicians who played in his various bands came up with color and comment although few of them knew him intimately due to his characteristic aloofness.

Back of the biography, Trotti has woven a delightful love story—a romance between the boy who played the first Sousa-phone in the band, as done by young Bob Warner, and a burlesque beauty, Daphne, who inspires to play and dance in the band. Then there is the tender sentiment between Sousa and his wife, Ruth Hussey; she smoothed out the rough places in his career and understood him perfectly.

The script covers nine years in the life of Sousa, which Henry Koster has directed in unforget-

Would You Believe It?

If Dishes Were Wishes, They'd Always Be Clean

We can't wash dishes clean, so the next best solution is to follow a simple plan of action as worked out by dishwashing laboratory experts. First in your recipe to save time and motion is teamwork. Even dishwashing is more fun when you do it with someone. Comfortable clothing is next for a good job well done. Sleeves up, on with an apron.

A tray to carry in stacks of dishes at one time (particularly after a party).

Scrape food and grease off plates, rubbing with the new, economical Lux Liquid Detergent (one can will wash 2,000 dishes).

Sorting makes for greater efficiency, too. First glassware into the dishwasher, then silver, china, and crockery in that order.

Soaking pots and pans clean is accomplished while you dine. Just fill with hot water and pour in a few drops of detergent from the can, to dissolve the grease.

Rinsing under the faucet, with a spray, or in a pan of hot water, leaves dishes and glasses sparkling - pots and pans shining clean.

Dishwashing is never a picnic, but it can be a lot easier with the systematic efficiency of your new soap program.

Give Legumes A Chance To Help

Legumes can help hold the line on farm income. With the return of acreage controls on some cash crops, the need for increasing profits on each acre planted is emphasized, says Extension Agronomist Ben E. Spears. He adds production costs can be cut by using improved machinery and labor saving equipment but emphasizes that higher acre yields are of major importance. Legumes used in combination with other good farming practices, explains Spears, can boost yields and put extra dollars in the farmer's pocket. To get the most from legumes, however, only the best adapted varieties should be planted, the seed properly inoculated and fertilizer applied in accordance with the soil needs. A soil analysis should be used as the basis for determining fertilizer needs, says the specialist. Legumes when properly inoculated can help reduce nitrogen fertilizer requirements of the crops which follow the legume. Research workers of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in an 11-year study have found that the top growth of hairy vetch contains an average of 102 pounds of nitrogen an acre. Legumes are the only plants which have the ability to take nitrogen from the air and store it in the plant but must be inoculated with the proper nitrogen-fixing bacteria before they can do so, says Spears. He recommends the use of commercial inoculants which are readily available. Be sure and check the label on the container, he says, to make certain the right inoculant is being used. Legumes, like other crops, require proper fertilization for maximum growth. Phosphorus is needed in almost all areas of the state. Potash and calcium may also be needed particularly in the eastern half of the state, says Spears. On soils low in organic matter, a small amount of commercial nitrogen applied at planting time will help get the legume off to a good start. The effects from plowing under a heavy growth of legumes usually lasts for more than one year. The legumes add organic matter to the soil and thus improve the soil structure. This allows deeper root penetration and increases the water holding capacity of the soil. The increased water holding capacity, says Spears, is particularly evident in dry years and he cites two examples which show the value of legumes. Wayne Anderson of Lamar County this year combined 185 bushels of oats an acre from land that was locally known as "old land." The field for three previous years had been planted to vetch. In the Stamford Community in Clay County E. J. Lee produced 22 bushels of wheat an acre from land which had been in vetch plants the winter of 1932. From 1931 to 1932 the farm but not planted to a legume, he harvested only 7 bushels of wheat an acre. Too, in the Blackland area, sweet clover has proved its value in the fight against cotton root rot. Using this legume in the crop rotation can make a considerable difference in the pounds of lint harvested from an acre, says Spears. Right now livestock producers are in need of grazing crops and legumes can be used with success for supplementary pastures. They will provide high protein feed at a lower cost than purchased feeds. With the favorable moisture conditions that exist in many parts of Texas at this time, Spears points out that prospects are good for winter legume crops. Dry weather during the past two or three years at planting time has been responsible for reduced planting of legumes but the moisture now available should be a big inducement for farmers and stockmen to greatly expand feed seedings of the adapted legumes. Spears suggests that local county agents be contacted for detailed information on the best adapted legumes and fertilizer needs for your area of the state. Finally, Spears says, give legumes a chance and they'll return big dividends.

Miss Ratliff, David Collier United In Spur Sunday

In a formal candlelight ceremony read Sunday evening at six o'clock in the Spur Methodist Church, Miss Myra Ratliff became the bride of David Collier. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Ratliff, 1012 W. Harris, and Mr. and Mrs. Dee Collier of Crosbyton are parents of the groom. The Rev. Cal C. Wright officiated at the double ring service before an altar banked with emerald and jade leaves and baskets of white gladioli with tapers in candelabra. Ned Hardin of Lubbock offered an organ melody of traditional wedding music preceding the ceremony and accompanied Miss Gloria Snell, Lubbock, as she sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly," and "The Lord's Prayer" as a benediction. "Indian Love Call" was played during the taking of vows. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original model of white imported chantilly lace and nylon tulle over satin, designed with tiny stand-up collar framing the face and sheer yoke outline with lace applique. The tightly fitted lace bodice had long sleeves ending in points over the hands and came to a deep point at the center front waistline. The skirt made of nylon tulle with fan pleated panels of lace at center front and back swept into a chapel train and was worn over hoops and crinoline to emphasize its fullness. The finger tip veil of silk illusion was joined to a corset embroidered with iridescent beads and rhinestones. For something old she wore a locket belonging to the groom's mother that had been given to her by her husband before their marriage. Her pearl ear clips were a wedding gift from the groom. Her blue garter was a gift from Margaret Wood and she wore a shiny new dime given to her by Annette Lee in her shoe. Bill Collier of Dallas served his brother as best man. I think you're wonderful
—Rosalind Russell

I hope you don't mind if I take this opportunity to tell you what a wonderful person I think you really are. For I've just heard about the way you're planning for your future through Defense Bonds! And I can't help but admire you for being so farsighted, and so practical! And, it makes me proud, too. For I'm a regular Bond buyer myself.

Of course, you and I know what a wonderful buy U. S. Defense Bonds are. But don't you think we ought to let other people in on it, too?

If you'll help me, here are just a few of the things we can tell them:

FIRST—Thanks to new Treasury regulations, every Series E Bond we buy begins earning interest after only 6 months. It earns 3% interest compounded semiannually when held to maturity. It reaches full maturity value earlier (3 years 8 months) and the interest it pays is now bigger at the start.

SECOND—Every Series E Bond we own can now go on earning interest for 10 more years after it reaches the original maturity date—without our lifting a finger!

THIRD—During the 10-year extension period, every unmaturing bond earns at the new, higher interest rate (average 3% compounded semiannually). Our original $100.00 now pay us back $133.67. $37.80 pays back $67.84. And so on.

FOURTH—When we make ourselves and our families economically secure through buying bonds, we're helping to build the great economic strength that backs up our national defense. And this is the best security our money can buy. For after two world wars we have found that peace is for the strong!

U. S. Defense Bonds are one of the easiest, most convenient forms of saving ever invented. For through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, you can buy bonds on a time payment plan. Just specify the payments, as large or as small as you like, and they will be automatically set aside from your salary. This way you save the money before you spend it. And millions of people have found this is one sure way to save.

Peace is for the strong... for peace and prosperity save with U. S. Defense Bonds

HSU CLAIMS TO HAVE PROSPECT FOR ALL-AMERICAN THIS SEASON

The Border Conference has furnished few All-American footballers, but everybody—news directors, coaches, sports armchair quarterbacks, athletic news directors, coaches, sports announcers, and the men who cover the "cactus loop" football—believes that a Hardin-Simmons University Cowboy football player may make the grade this year.

He is D. C. Andrews, senior two year letterman end, who will not have to worry about the one platoon rule. Andrews, 6 ft., 190 pounder from Sweetwater (Tex.) High School, which furnished the Cowboys with their last All-American when Bulldog Turner made several selections, in a double duty man.

Andrews made both offensive and defensive All-Border conference teams last year. He was the number one pass receiver in the three-state-league last fall, catching 36 passes for 497 yards and nine touchdowns.

Nationally, Andrews ranked 19th in pass receiving. Burnie Kee of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, says that Andrews is so close to the best on both offensive and defense that it makes Andrews the best all-around end in the country. Mike Brumbelow, head coach for the Texas Western College team, believes that Andrews is by far the best all-around end in the conference.

A lot of the people who follow the fortunes of the Hardin Simmons University Cowboys on the gridiron have been talking about Andrews and his chances for making the All-American teams since last winter, when the Cowboys closed their season against West Texas State.

Against the West Texas team, Andrews caught seven passes for an even 100 yards and two touchdowns. Defensively he ruined the West Texas attack, intercepting two Buffalo throws, tackling the Buffs into a fumble and blocking an extra point attempt.

Andrews, who is 20 and married, will get his first chance for recognition this fall when the Cowboys open with Oklahoma A&M in Stillwater, September 19.

With acreage controls back in the picture, high acre yields become even more important. Legumes grown for soil improvement will help boost yields.

A high-school teacher writes us: "Please send me 50 copies of your booklet, Adventures Inside the Atom, for use with my students." Another wants material on new inventions. Or booklets on jet planes.

New things happen in science faster than textbooks can be revised.

New words puzzle our ears and eyes before these words are in dictionaries... atomic-pile reactors, silicones, jet engines with "afterburners," UHF television. Some problem for teachers, that.

Last year over 100,000 letters from schools hit our desks at General Electric asking for things in print on "what's new."

Just to give you an idea of how this adds up, one booklet, Adventures Inside the Atom, has been requested to the tune of five million copies since 1948.

Adventures in Jet Power, also handled in comic-book treatment, has since 1946 gone into eight printings.

This may surprise you: a new booklet, Why Study Math?, will run over a million copies this year. (It answers that question Junior is always raising.)

Nobody is happier than we are to know teen-agers have a lively appetite for what's buzzing in the world around them.

After all, whether they know it or not, our young people in school today will be the scientists and engineers of tomorrow. They can't know too much.

You can put your confidence in—

Menu Magic
 BROILED SQUASH
 You don't have to be an experienced cook to make this recipe turn out right! Even a bride can broil squash in a tender sweet way this new easy way. Four ingredients and a few minutes of your time—that's all you need. Here's how:
 (Broiled Squash) (Makes 4 servings)
 2 small summer squash
 3 tablespoons melted margarine
 Salt
 Pepper
 Wash squash and cut off stem and blossom ends. Cut in halves lengthwise. If seed are large, scoop them out with spoon. Cook in boiling water with 1 teaspoon salt 7 to 8 minutes, depending on size of squash. When just fork-tender, remove from water and drain well. Place cut side up on broiler pan. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Pour or brush a little melted margarine over each. Broil under medium heat until surface of squash is lightly browned, about 10 minutes. Spoon melted margarine over squash several times during broiling. Pour any remaining melted margarine over squash halves just before serving.
 Serve with broiled sausage patties, margarine-fried onion rings, and pickled crabapples.
 Squash halves may be browned in margarine in skillet instead of in broiler, if preferred. Melt 3 tablespoons margarine in heavy skillet, sprinkle parboiled squash halves lightly with salt and pepper, and place cut side down in skillet. Cook gently over moderate heat until cut side of squash is lightly browned.
 For other excellent kitchen-tested recipes, write the National Cotton Council, P. O. Box 18, Memphis 1, Tennessee, for your free copy of "Menu Magic" with Margarine as an attractive 24-page booklet in two colors.
