OFFICE TO GRABBERS HANGERS-ON

Members of the Muleshoe Fire Department very much disapprove of the habit some folks have who are not members of the department in grabbing on to the fire engine or truck when running to a fire.

It is stated that the insurance carriers do not cover riders who are not members of the Department that they ride at their own risk and in violation of state law. They are asked to furnish their own conveyance to fires and keep off the duty vehicle.

REVIVAL MEETING IS HELD AT FAIRVIEW

Members of the Church of Christ in Fairview community will begin a revival meeting at that school house next Sunday, to continue 10 days.

Rider Lester Hathaway of Muleshoe will do the preaching. He is recommended for his message of the Bible and his speaker.

He is invited to attend.

General News Over Texas And Other States For Week

Writtle for president clubs organized in every section of Texas already have more than 2,000 members.

The government plan now calls for using 16,000 young men and 1,550 veterans in Texas CCC camps the coming fiscal year.

Gov. O'Daniel has fired Ernest O. Thompson, recent political opponent, from his place on the Interstate Oil Compact commission.

With 50 new senators and representatives elected to the Texas legislature, Gov. O'Daniel thinks he will get better co-operation the coming term of office.

Dr. W. R. White, pastor, First Baptist church, Oklahoma City, called to presidency of Hardin-Simmons university, Abilene, has finally accepted that place.

Dr. P. C. Mangelsdorf, for several years vice-director and agronomist at A. & M. college, has accepted a position as economic botanist and assistant botanical museum at Harvard university, effective Sept. 1.

Two thousand young New Mexicans are to be employed in the 39 CCC camps of that state during the first quarter of the new fiscal year ending September 30, according to announcement. In addition there will also be 144 veterans and 5,700 men from other states transferred to New Mexico.

Congressman Marvin Jones of Amarillo, who was recently appointed by President Roosevelt as judge of the U. S. Court of Claims, is being boosted for the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, succeeding Henry Wallace who has been named vice-presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket.

Bert West Victim Of Drunken Attack Sunday Night

Bert West, local nightwatchman, was in an unconscious condition Monday morning as result of a fracas Sunday night with a man giving the name of O. Y. Old, and said to be from Plainview.

Old was in an automobile containing three other men and three women, said to be enroute to Clovis, N. M., where one of the couple was to be married. Old, according to officers, was in an intoxicated condition and became boisterous, striking West in the mouth, knocking him down, his head striking the concrete pavement, rendering him unconscious. Skull concussion was feared the first of this week when he was given emergency treatment at the local clinic.

Horace Holt endeavored to intervene in behalf of West, when the drunken man is said to have lunged for Holt, who grabbed a tire tool inflicting a couple gashes on the head before he could stop him. W. E. Young, at a station across the highway joined in trying to stop the man and received a lick on the head.

When officers of the Sheriff's department arrived, the man was being held in the station by Holt and Young. He was placed in the local jail, a charge of resisting an officer was lodged against him and his case booked for County court.

ARGENTINE BALKS IN AGREEMENT

An Argentine reservation on the question of foreign possessions in the new world clouded today the solidarity of the 21 American republics as their foreign ministers reached the end of their conference on hemisphere economic and political relations.

Apparently Argentine will keep all 21 nations from arriving at an agreement for mutual protection.

HIS MASTER'S VOICE

Methodist Revival Under Direction Of The Revs. Flowers Was Begun Sunday; Crowds Are Growing

The Methodist revival began Sunday morning with Rev. Hucklebuck preaching at the morning and evening services. Evangelist and Mrs. R. L. Flowers arrived Monday afternoon and took charge Monday night. The Flowers are not strangers in this section. They have held meetings in Lubbock, Plainview, Slaton, Brownfield, Littlefield and many other places in this part of Texas.

For twenty five years the Flowers have been in the evangelistic work and have held meetings in nearly every state of the nation. During these years they have seen around 70,000 people converted in such meetings.

The Flowers program is a busy one. Four times daily they will have services. At ten o'clock each morning they will have the usual conventional morning service. These meetings are for every one. At 5:00 o'clock each afternoon the boys and girls who are in the grade school. At 7:45 each evening the young folk who are in high school and those who are out of high school meet. In these special young people meetings the general theme will be "Youth Learning to Live." One of the outstanding parts of the Flowers' meetings have been the services conducted for young people by them.

At the evening service one of the evangelists will speak. Both Mr. and Mrs. Flowers are preachers. Mrs. Flowers was one of the first Southern Methodist women to get her license to preach.

Several applications have already been made.

What's Happening In Washington; Other Important Cities

More than one-tenth of all the people in the United States depend directly on cotton for their living.

The U. S. Maritime Commission has stopped shipments of oil and scrap iron to Spain and Japan.

President Roosevelt has signed a four billion dollar bill designed to make the U. S. navy the largest in the world.

More than six million farmers, operating 82 per cent of the cropland of the U. S., are participating in the AAA farm program this year.

More than 60 per cent of the nation's key defense industries are located in vulnerable positions within 50 miles of the U. S. shore lines or borders.

Sixty years ago three out of every four farmers in the United States owned the land they farmed; but today nearly half of the farmers are either tenants or sharecroppers.

White cotton hose designed for use of trained nurses by the Federal Bureau of Home Economics are meeting with great success since they can be sterilized thoroughly and laundered without turning yellow.

The way has been clearly cleared for bringing British children to the U. S. for protection and keep during the European war. Several children and their mothers have already arrived, and plans are for bringing 10,000 children here in the near future.

In 1939, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the 32 million people living on farms were able to supply the needs of from 50 to 70 percent more city people than the same number could supply 30 years ago. Technological advance, plus improvements in breeds of livestock, farming practices, and crop varieties, have contributed to this increase in efficiency, and by the same token to farm unemployment.

Freight rates on fresh fruits and potatoes average lower now than during the decade of the 1920's, but continue high when compared with the prices received by producers of these products, according to a study released by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Rates on truck crops other than potatoes are the highest since 1920.

The Lions club is a service organization similar to Rotary and Kiwanis the latter being represented for several years in Muleshoe until it was merged in the local Chamber of Commerce.

MASTER FARMER JUDGES AROUND FAIRVIEW

Officials of College Station and a representative of the Progressive Farmer magazine will be in Bailey county Thursday, August 8 to make district judging of master farmer entries, there being 10 such entries in this district.

E. E. Beck, West Camp community, was winner of that honor for Bailey county.

J. Williams as county clerk. W. E. Renfrow as sheriff and Cecil H. Tate as county attorney, being returned to office without opposition.

A run-off will be held in precinct 3 between D. Warner and William H. Eubanks. R. J. Klump was re-elected justice of the peace in precinct one and Joe Bartley, constable of precinct 1. The Shermans have been looking for several weeks at various towns on the South Plains for a business location and, as they said, believe Muleshoe has before it a great future both as a business point and town of desirable residence. Both men are married and will move their families here as soon as they get their business started.

Their business already well equipped, will be still further strengthened by addition of other machinery to take care of their growing patronage. This concern was established in Muleshoe in 1923 by T. B. Fry who came here from Littlefield.

Irvin St. Clair has bought the lots on Main street being vacated by this concern.

Never a Last Drink
 Spanish tippers, gathered together for an evening of light elbowing, never break the rules of etiquette by ordering a "last" drink. A round ordered at the close of the evening may be the "penultima" (the next to the last), but courtesy requires that no mention be made of a "last drink."

Indians Fought Corn Planting
 "White men shall not plant corn north of the Ohio," was the rallying cry of the Indians as they saw pioneers pushing their way into the choice hunting grounds of what is now Ohio. Much blood was spilt over this rallying cry.

Rabbit Fears the Sloat

Most animals either fight or flee from a natural enemy. But when a rabbit meets a sloat, says a writer in Collier's Weekly, the rabbit "freezes" in its tracks, so utterly paralyzed by its fear that it cannot move and surrenders to its fate without the slightest struggle.

Concealed Evidence

By NAN CLIFFORD
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

MARY MARTIN stared aghast at George's Aunt Olivia. "Bake bread!" she cried nervously. "Oh, I'm perfectly certain I never could do that. Besides," brightly, "we really get awfully good bread at the delicatessen."

"Nonsense!" snorted Aunt Olivia. "I brought George up on homemade bread and I'm positive he won't thrive on any other kind. I noticed," eyeing Mary accusingly, "that he looked peaked when he stopped in to see me last night. And only three months married!"

"That's because he's been palling around with Professor Jenkins next door," retorted Mary with spirit. "George wouldn't look so starved and neglected if he didn't go wading through swamps getting his feet soaked and his face all scratched up. He's getting absolutely balmy about botanical specimens."

"George needs to eat plenty of home-made bread," declared Aunt Olivia with irritating persistency, quite ignoring Mary's outburst. "Get paper and pencil, my dear. I'll give you my three hour recipe. It's as simple as A. B. C. One hour to set, one hour to rise, one hour to bake."

Mary sighed, but gave in. To preserve harmony in the family, she even promised to bake bread that very day.

It was two o'clock when Mary, following Aunt Olivia's instructions, wrapped the bowl containing the bread sponge snugly in a blanket and placed it in the south window to set.

There was no sun. Clouds threatened rain and a depressing chill was in the air.

Mary watched the clock anxiously. At exactly three she prepared to wrestle with the next problem—that of making the sponge into loaves. Strangely, she found the unpleasant-looking lump of dough at the window much as she had left it. And Aunt Olivia had said it would have risen to the top of the mixing bowl. Uncertainly, she decided to let it set awhile longer.

Four o'clock came and the dough was unchanged! Five o'clock—and George was shortly!

All in a dither, her cheeks blazing and her hands cold, Mary seized the yellow bowl and made for the back yard. Aunt Olivia should never hear of it! Never! As for George—it was just as well he shouldn't hear of it either. At 5:15 she ran around the corner to the delicatessen.

"Gosh! This is good bread, honey," enthused George that night at dinner. "I stopped in to see Aunt Olivia for a minute and she told me of the treat I had coming." He helped himself to another slice.

"I'm glad you like it, darling," she said blithely. "You must eat loads of it. Aunt Olivia says you're beginning to look peaked."

George grinned sleepily. "Poor old Aunt Olivia can't reconcile herself to my man's scale. I owe her a lot, honey, and I'm glad you let her boss you a little. And say! are you some cook or are you some cook? This bread is better than any Aunt Olivia ever baked a fist into."

Mary's conscience gave her a stab. But, in spite of it, she could not help but relish the keen joke.

"Holy catnip! come here!" shouted George the next morning. "Mary rushed in from the kitchen to find him standing bug-eyed at the dining room window.

"Look; look there!" he cried, pointing a finger excitedly. "A magnificent specimen of fungi right in our own garden. I must call Professor at once. He'll be ga-ga over it. Just yesterday we were discussing the types of fungi found in this climate. I'm dead sure this is Clavaria ghanica—a type he's never before discovered around here. It must be fully eighteen inches in diameter, plant fibrous, nearly sessile, cortex white and smooth, becoming yellowish. See—"

But Mary was not listening. Horrified, she stared out of the window. Yes, that was the very spot. Close to the syringe bush. A white mass of something that could be only one thing had pushed aside the thin layer of soil with which she hastily covered the contents of the yellow bowl. During the night, the temperature had turned considerably warmer.

Beaming with his glad tidings, George started for the garden gate to summon the professor. Mary clutched his arm.

"Wait—a minute—darling!" trying to overcome the paroxysm of laughter that convulsed her. "That's not—that's not a toadstool."

"Toadstool!" exploded George indignantly. "Of course, it's not a toadstool. It's a very rare specimen of—"

"Homemade bread!" gasped Mary. George looked alarmed. "What's the matter, honey?" he asked anxiously. "Don't you feel well? Are you feverish or something?"

Mary choked, but managed to explain.

"Anyhow," she sighed contentedly, after she had been forgiven for a number of things—the most important being George's injured feelings, "I'll never have to try to make bread again, thank goodness!"

Local Prohibition Promotes Strong Medicine, Study of Texas Liquor Records Discloses

AUSTIN, Texas.—(Sp)—Whiskey is consumed in greater amounts in many of the so-called "bone dry" counties than in counties where its sale is legal.

This startling fact was disclosed today by Walter Beck, manager of the Texas Brewers' Institute, who made public data gathered from records of the Texas Liquor Control Board, showing the "prescription" of alcohol in the so-called "dry" counties as officially reported by holders of Medicinal Permits for the first three months of 1946.

State-wide sales records, checked through tax stamps, disclose that the Texas consumption of "hard liquor" averaged 1.32 pints for each inhabitant during that period; but the average dispensed by drug stores on doctors' prescriptions in some of the "dry" counties ranged as high as 10.37 pints for every man, woman and child within the county's borders.

Reasoning that every whiskey prescription meant somebody was ill, Beck commented:

"Lubbock County 'Unhealthy'—There were 89,073 cases of illness in Taylor County (Abilene)—almost two pints for every person in the county. Lubbock County showed a health condition that looks very bad for the great school located there—100,144 cases of the disease that calls for hard liquor, or more than two pints per capita. "Every man, woman and child in Hale County must have been sick more than twice, to require 40,872 pints of liquor. In Yoakum County, the condition must be dreadful. The population is 2,050, and it took 21,262 pints of hard liquor to relieve the sickness there, about eight times the average."

Other counties out of the "bone dry" list which exceeded the state average of 1.32 pints were Angelito, averaging 1.63; Deaf Smith, 1.32; Dickens, 1.61; Lamb, 1.42; and Smith, 1.69.

Curiously enough, in Angelina County one doctor seemed to have most of the business; he wrote 18,318 of the prescriptions. Likewise, one drug store filled 26,390 prescriptions.

Average for the 90 "bone dry" counties where Medicinal Liquor Permits exist was .728 pints for each inhabitant.

Where legal beer was available, Beck charged the "travesty" had reached such proportions that in certain counties costly elections to prohibit beer had been promoted by those who have a monopoly on the sales of hard liquor.

He called attention to a recent resolution adopted by the Lubbock Ministers Association recently, in which the situation was recognized and Lubbock was called "the wettest dry area in the State."

Detailed statistics on drug store liquor sales in dry counties are printed in the current issue of the Institute magazine, "Beer," along with a facsimile of the following want ad from the Houston Post:

"WANTED: Doctor to write liquor prescriptions. Box 920, Conroe, Texas."

"The more temperate showing of the beer counties and the even better showing of the wine and beer counties," Beck said, "is strong vindication for those who contend that legalization of the lighter beverages tends to promote temperance."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

And He said, Verily I say unto you No prophet is accepted in his own country.—St. Luke 4:24
He that doth public good for multitudes, finds few are truly grateful.—Massinger.

OF CONSUMING INTEREST

Hidden taxes don't bother the average American very greatly. He may suffer annoyance for a fraction of a second when he has to fumble for odd pennies to take care of the concealed tax in a pack of cigarettes or the price of a movie ticket. But by and large we're a good-natured people, willing to take a lot in our stride.
So we're inclined to lose track of the manner in which taxes eat into the family income. And when we find out the true facts of the case, as developed in a survey made by one industrial magazine in a typical American community, we naturally are surprised—to put it mildly!

The magazine examined the purchases made by average citizens of the community in order to find out how much of each dollar spent was accounted for by taxes.
10 cents of each dollar spent for milk and dairy products went for taxes.
In the case of movie tickets or electricity, the figure was 12 cents. In the case of furniture, 13 cents. In the case of a new car or the telephone bill, 15 cents.

That was the situation before our new national defense taxes went into effect. And now that we must be absolutely sure that each dollar of governmental revenues is used wisely and well, it would also seem that all America should look with added care at the hidden levies paid by the country's consuming public!

A WELCOME HERE
"Suffer the little children to come," is an echo from a voice of long ago that is resounding through our very gracious and hospitable land. The United States and Canada are popular havens for British children whose parents seek a temporary home for them while England awaits the foe in daily dread. Groups authorized to place these children and register their names of homes of shelter are kept busy with calls and letters from rich and poor alike who signify willingness to become a sanctuary. Already children have been placed and other homes anxiously await the arrival of the refugee children.

The immigration law limits the quota and the total of British entries is 65,720 a year. Of this number only 10% may come in monthly. It would seem that at such a desperate time when the matter of days and weeks is so important, more than 10% should be moved monthly. However, the main reason for the delay in having more British children reach this country is because there is a lack of British ships to carry them here. Many of the English boats are carrying enemy aliens to Canada.

So far the English have not taken full advantage of the monthly quota allowed them but if they do send their children over faster than our immigration law permits. The Journal hopes that a Congress will raise the limit to the voice saying "Suffer the little children to come" will reach in our kindly American homes.

SKILLIONS OF AMERICANS

"Skillions" is a word we thought up for the occasion. We're using it to describe the fact that Americans—millions of them—are by and large the most skillful people at doing work in the whole world. There are millions of skilled workers in this country—in the factories, on the farms, in stores and offices. There are "skillions of Americans!" The average American can learn a new job faster than the typical individual in any other land. Because we were used to freedom, we're more self-reliant, better independent thinkers. This is one of the facts that lies back of our tremendous success as a nation and a productive economy.
These thoughts about the "skillions of Americans" are natural at the present time when the United States is thinking seriously about national defense and the problems that go along with it. We hear it suggested in many quarters that for various reasons this country has a shortage of skilled labor, which will handicap our preparedness aims.
The point that is generally forgotten is the ability of Americans to learn and adjust themselves rapidly to the new tasks that we have just mentioned.

And if government is prompt in making its defense requirements known to industry, there won't be any serious difficulty about training the men to do the job.
Our "skillions of Americans" will take care of that problem!

ARE WE TO BLAME?
They ask if they are forsaken by a protecting Father, they pray that a guiding hand will see them through their difficulties, they speak in despair of a lost people and of a religion failing to help in extreme hopelessness, of charity and love failing to accomplish, the power of faith slipping, the loss of hope for a nation's salvation. What can be wrong with such a world?

What blame do we place on others and what amount do we hold for ourselves. Some place the source of trouble in the homes where there is a lack of religious training and a Christian background. Perhaps trouble ahead does come from such homes as these.

It is the opinion that the youth who is raised with no religion does not seek it later as a man. We all acknowledge that fear, hate and greed are the dominant forces back of present day difficulties. If these child during early years perhaps the man would overcome them.

The background of delinquents is often found as an excuse. Those youths who will become our statesmen, who will lead our government and make of spiritual training have a foundation of godliness, should have the belief of godliness and manliness the foundation of their early years. If later they lose their convictions then may we ask what we have left undone.

inspire none. We recall some famous verses that came out of the first World War that have lived to be repeated over again.
However, the day of war as a daring adventure, as a crusade, is dead. The only fitting sort of poetry would be of such a bitter, angry and cynical nature that it would be mostly protest. The pens of the poets are not forever stilled but they cannot work up much romance and glamour over this war. Poetry in London is postponed until there can be heard the song of birds, the whispering of leaves, the murmuring of lovers.

Those in Muleshoe who appreciate poetry can understand the adjournment of the London society.

TO THE LETTER

A recent happening shows how a seemingly sensible law can become a rather ridiculous one in some instances. According to postoffice regulations, dogs are not permitted in these government buildings. We understand the action is to protect the individual from being bitten by a dog while on government property.

It so happens that in a mid-western state the "seeing eye" companion of a blind operator of a newsstand in the city postoffice has been barred from the building due to this ruling. Dogs trained to lead the blind now are accepted in trains, hotels and planes.

As we understand it, a "seeing eye" dog, if not accompanying its blind master, soon becomes inefficient. Surely there could be an amendment to this strict postoffice regulation to cover cases such as this.

ONE MAN'S OPINION
A subscriber of the masculine sex comments upon the number of lady tourists who travel in slacks. He mentions that though local Muleshoe women wear them and the custom is easier to accept each summer, still the picture of a lady strutting from an auto, clad in a wrinkled pair of slacks is not pleasing on the average masculine eye.

He figures in such cases as these the husband shouldn't find it necessary to shave! Folks who live around resorts become used to the sight of too-large women wearing too baggy a slack suit. The outfit may be more comfortable, but there is one type of wearer who should consult a full length mirror before appearing in slacks in public. Remember, this is the other fellow's opinion!

Jaunty Journalettes
There are some Muleshoe men's spirits that are getting pretty gray around the temples.

As long as there is marriage, just so long will Muleshoe men not taste the fruits of complete freedom and liberty.

The average Muleshoe wife has found her husband to be most useful around the house at canning time.

Since most of the Muleshoe folks have decided we can't do any better, we might as well become satisfied with human nature and make the most of it.

Ever notice the smaller the old-time auto the more children riding in it, while the more expensive the car the more luggage piled into it.

While no Muleshoe man has ever wondered what he would do if he had Rockefeller's income, there may be several who have wondered what Rockefeller would do if he had theirs.

A Muleshoe husband remarked to his wife at the supper table a few evenings ago that the bank had given her a check. "That's splendid," replied the wife. "What can we buy with it this time?"

The insomnia of some Muleshoe people seems to be getting worse instead of better. A man told us the other day he had got so he even couldn't sleep now when it was time to get up.

A Muleshoe woman told us the other day she had been married a year and to date there had never been a quarrel between herself and her husband. If a difference of opinion arises and I am right, "my husband gives in," she said. "But what if he is right?" we coyly suggested. "So far that hasn't occurred," she replied.

George Frederick Handel
George Frederick Handel was born in Halle, Saxony, February 23, 1685. He died at London 1759, and returned two years later and remained in England for the rest of his life. In 1744 the elector of Hanover (Handel's old patron) became King George I of England. He gave Handel a pension of 500 pounds a year, and Handel became a naturalized Englishman. Until his death, on April 14, 1759, he dominated English music. He invented the oratorio and wrote many oratorios, of which "Messiah" is the best known. He is buried in the Poet's Corner of Westminster Abbey. His statue there represents Handel with the score of "Messiah" open before him at the page of the Arias. "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

Origin of Cain's Wife
There are various explanations of the origin of Cain's wife, whose name is not recorded anywhere. Some Bible students regard the story of Cain as a composite of several traditions relating to different men of this name, living at different periods; some suppose Cain's marriage occurred much later than the murder of Abel and that he married a sister or other relative. Others maintain that according to the Bible Adam and Eve were not the first two persons on earth but the first two named persons. Genesis, chapter 4, verse 14, which quotes Cain as saying, "Everyone that findeth me shall slay me," would support this theory.

Veteran of A. E. F. Recalls of Once Arresting Hitler

Picked Up Fuehrer When He Started Small Riot in 'Occupied Territory.'

SARANAP, CALIF.—Carroll Boswell, assistant city engineer, is glad that he is an American citizen and is back in the United States instead of being back in what was known as the "occupied territory" of Germany after the World war.

The reason is that Boswell and his one-time buddy in the A. E. F. had occasion once to arrest Adolf Hitler.

Boswell saw a year's action in France in addition to policing the Fifteenth infantry. He was wounded and gassed but after his recovery served another year and a half with the American army of occupation in the Rhineland. It was at Mayen in October, 1920, that he and Corporal Jeffries of the same company arrested Hitler when the latter was an obscure agitator.

"The American army of occupation at Mayen," Boswell said, "was at one time left alone to police the entire city, which has 50,000 inhabitants, while other Allied contingents went to simulate war maneuvers near the Polish front, but which really was intended as an effort to halt the Russians who were then threatening to move in through Poland on an armless Germany."

Guarded Munitions Stores.
"We had a big job on our hands, because in addition to policing the city in general, we were charged with the protection of the bridge-heads and the ammunition stores. The result was that any agitator showed up usually got short shrift."

Corporal Jeffries and I were on our round of duties through the city that evening when we passed the Hofbrau, one of the city's "hot spots."

"It was usually going full blast but one or two in the morning, but this evening, although it was 8:30, all the windows were shuttered and the door was locked."

"We peered in through a broken shutter and saw a slim, youthful appearing man on the platform and about 125 people listening.

"Suddenly, a one-armed man, who, we learned later, was an ex-major in the German army, picked up a wine bottle and threw it at the speaker, knocking him off the platform. A riot started at once."

"We knew the place and its surroundings well, as we had been at Mayen for a year, and when we saw the speaker dive for the rear door, which we knew opened on a narrow alley, we dashed for it, stationing ourselves one on each side."

Hitler Not Armed.
"Then as the man dashed by we stuck out our feet and tripped him up. He was unarmed, so we merely trussed up his arms and turned him over to the provost officer."

"Before the military police he gave his name as 'Adolf Hitler' and at once launched into a long tirade. "The next day Hitler was turned over to the German civilian police and they kept him moving from city to city, wherever he provoked a riot, while all the military police were notified to pick him up at any time and turn him over to the local German authorities."

"Two months afterward I was returned to the United States and to my home at Oakland, and never heard of Adolf Hitler again until his name began to appear in the news in 1926."

Boswell said that while Hitler was making his Mayen speech he still talked in the accent of his native Austria. He had his "toothbrush" mustache at that time, too.

Only Hardy Skiers Dare Use Skipping Ski-Plane
ST. GALLEN, SWITZERLAND.—The St. Gallen Aero club operates a mountain skipping skiplane for skiers only.

Their special plane leaves airports near the railroad and main commercial air lines and skims across snow-covered Alps, which few commercial planes would risk crossing to the ski resorts of the Engadine.

It is equipped with landing skis and has room only for the pilot, two passengers and three pairs of skis. The extra pair is for the pilot—just in case.

The plane's top speed is 112 miles per hour and it can land on any flat stretch of ground over 40 yards in length—which is a good thing in Alpine country.

SAVING MONEY With Cotton Bags

Very small children love their soft, cuddly animal toys. They can grasp them and hang onto them much easier than the sturdier and heavier toys. Laundered cotton flannel, sugar, salt, feed or meal bags furnish an ideal material out of which you can make these toys at once. They can be stuffed with cotton batting or the cotton bag material can be cut into bits for the stuffing. The features of the animals should be embroidered in colored thread. These little animals can be kept clean and fresh as they will stand many tubbings. Extra cotton bags can be obtained from your nearest baker or department store.

Other Cotton Bag Sewing ideas are illustrated in a free booklet. Send to National Cotton Council, Box 18, Memphis, or Textile Bags, 100 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Congressional Record in 1873
The Congressional Record was first published for a special session of the senate in 1873.

"LEGEND OF BRAVE WOMEN"

There's a stirring story in the annals of almost every old American family concerning some brave ancestor, as a woman who rose to great heights of power at some crisis in the family's history.

Perhaps she was the wife of some early New England colonizer who defended her home against the Indians during her husband's absence. Perhaps she went West in a covered wagon and worked as hard as any of her menfolk proving up on the "Claim" given them by the government. Perhaps she was one of the early school teachers who maintained standards of decency in a remote mining community by her own staunch belief in the amenities of life. Perhaps she took over the management of the farm and kept it producing during the years that her husband was at war.

In this country we are rich in the legends of great women who stood shoulder to shoulder with their husbands in the settlement and development of the country. But during the last two generations women as a whole have been more served than serving of their country! This was largely due to the effects of American industry which freed women from household drudgery by producing a host of household conveniences and brought her new opportunities for entertainment by the development of the automobile, the moving picture and the radio. It was all very pleasant and easy and we took to our new way of life with enthusiasm and believed that the great days when women could be of use to this country were all in the past.

But today once more it is necessary for the women of this country to take their places beside the men if the freedom we have hitherto taken for granted is to be maintained for ourselves and for our children. This time we are not required to fight or till the soil or carry the banner of civilization into some remote outpost but to help to create the most powerful of all weapons in a Democracy—public opinion.

We must realize clearly what it is that gives us our unique privileges in this country as women and as human beings and through personal conversation, as well as club study and civic meetings, help to build up the needed bulwark of opinion in favor of those three national traditions which are the backbone of our Freedom—representative democracy, civil and religious liberties, and free business enterprise.

Women in the past have risen to the occasion in every national emergency. Isn't there every reason to believe that the women of today are more than ready to take their country and will be willing to do their part in saving it from the tyranny whose shadow lies over the rest of the world?

Big Business And Grace

By FLORENCE ALLEN
 (McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"FRANK, you don't understand," said Grace for the tenth time that evening.

"Cut that out about my not understanding," said Frank, not without some courtesy. "I understand what you think you mean—you mean that you think just because you have spent four years in college and have come off with a degree you are too well educated to be my wife. Rot and rubbish! What I also understand is that I love you very much, in spite of your foolish notions, and that you are not the sort of girl, Grace Baldwin, who is going to be content with just a career, if that's what you call it."

"I'll always go on caring a great deal for you, Frank," she said. "Only now that I've got my degree I really think I ought to use it. I can't give up my ideals—even for you, Frank."

Grace wanted to succeed in some sort of business. She had specialized in economics and had taken several courses in finance, and the whole felt that she would be an asset to any banking house or other establishment needing business ability of the first order. So one fine day she went to the city, carrying with her some nice little letters of introduction to officers of several banks which she had begged from the president of her home bank.

As for the bank officers—they didn't even take the trouble to see her. Grace was told that she would have to send in a request by mail for an appointment if she really wished to see them.

Then one day she managed to see Mr. George, vice president of one of the business offices to which she had contrived to get a letter of introduction.

"I don't want any one around here to help run this business," he growled after she had hopefully recounted her qualifications.

"But you're too big as it is. Nobody's really interested. They just do their own little jobs and draw their salaries and hurry home at five. Do you think any of the boys around here would take it upon themselves to see that my private office was kept tidy? Not much. All they'd have to do would be to keep after the cleaning woman six or eight hours one in a while to see that she did the work. But no, they wouldn't think of such a thing."

"Perhaps what you have said will give me an idea," Grace said.

"One or two of the other men I've talked to seemed to have trouble of some kind or another."

But when Grace reached her home that week-end she was thoroughly discouraged. True, she had a little plan in the back of her mind, but when she came to consider it, it didn't seem so very good after all. Late that Saturday afternoon she telephoned to Frank.

"I'm sorry I said what I did to you," she said. "Maybe it is cowardly, but I'm going to ask you to give me another chance. You see, I don't believe that there ever would be a chance for me in the big business world. Why, the only possible chance I saw was to turn to and keep offices clean. Honestly, I actually worked out a sort of scheme of hiring some cleaning women and opening a little office to take contracts for cleaning offices and personally supervising the whole matter. I wrote to Mr. George about it. But nothing came even of that. So, Frank, if you want me you can have me."

And of course Frank took Grace in his arms, beyond measure pleased to find her in this humble frame of mind.

A few days later came a letter, signed by Mr. W. M. George.

"I didn't see any chance of giving you a job," said Mr. George, "but since reading your letter and considering your plans for an office-cleaning agency I think perhaps we could come to some agreement. I see you have brains and courage. I'm interested in your plan and would be willing to back such a venture and finance it. We could make it a sort of side issue. Meantime you could be of real use to me here in this office, and I guess I could mention a salary that would appeal to you."

Grace read the letter at first with eagerness. This Mr. George, she had found out, was a thoroughly reliable business man of high standing. And he had appreciated her qualifications—he really felt that he could make use of her. Grace's rosiest ambitions were beginning to come true. And yet?

Grace reread the letter and put it in her desk. She would answer it later in the day. Meantime she must keep her appointment with Frank. They were going to consult with an architect about building a little dovecot for two.

Thermostat Placement
 Five feet above the floor is considered a generally satisfactory height for the location of thermostats. They should be placed in locations protected from drafts and not in contact with a large volume of air.

The rather bulky thermostat of yesterday has been beautified, and their location today on the living-room wall does not mar the decorative scheme.

Desire for Exercise Costs Man Liberty

CLEVELAND.—When James Wollweber, 21, was picked up by police for violating parole he asked to be placed in police lineups "so I can limber up a bit."

As a result he was identified by a restaurant employee as the robber who held him up for $145 weeks before.

Once Bashful Man On Hunger Strike

Persistent Swain in Long Siege to Win Blonde.

CLAYTON, MO.—Melvin F. Miller, 30 years old, a scissors grinder and self-ordained preacher, was on a hunger strike in the village lockup recently, his latest anti in a 12-year-old campaign to win the love of Edith Perkins, 31, a blonde stenographer.

He was arrested the first six years of his courtship because of bashfulness. He said it took him that long to obtain courage to ask for a date. She went to church with him and refused to see him again. During the last six years he has been more courageous in his pursuit.

He was arrested last October and jailed for disturbing the peace, again recently for having chained himself to a tree for three days two blocks from Miss Perkins' home and, as neighbors complained, "barking like a dog."

"I haven't eaten in five days," he said, "and I won't eat a bite until she comes to see me and brings me food with her own hands," he said.

Miss Perkins, who can cook, learned at the home of her parents of Miller's strike. She was unsympathetic.

"Nuts," she said.

Miller weighs 210 pounds and is six feet tall. He described himself as "sort of a minister" for the Good Samaritan army.

When he chained himself to the tree Miss Perkins, notified by neighbors, summoned Constable Charles Adams, who found Miller in a pup tent beside the tree. One end of the chains was padlocked to his neck, the other to the tree. The keyhole of the padlocks were filled with cement.

Adams filed the chains, took Miller to jail, and asked Miss Perkins what charges she wanted to file. She said she didn't know and didn't care.

"But," she added, "if you don't keep him away from me, I'll take matters into my own hands. I mean to be left alone. He's been bothering me for 12 years."

Miller said he would never give up his attempts to win Miss Perkins. "She said she wouldn't go out with me if I were the last man on earth," he said. "Well, I'm not, so I figure that gives me a chance."

Miner in Quiver Seeks Ghost and Finds Bear

NORANDA, QUE.—A superstitious miner looked for a ghost and found a bear.

Abie Wile, employed by Golconda Mines in Duparquet township, heard strange noises emanating nightly from a spot close to the kitchen door where a pile of empty cans had accumulated. So one night he stepped up to investigate.

Eventually, the rattling and shuffling began, broken at intervals by the sound of a can striking a rock.

The ghost-laying Wile elevated himself from his hiding place and saw not Hamlet's ghost outlined against the eerie green of the northern lights, but a Canadian bear eagerly licking the interior of a tomato can.

Deaf for Over a Year, Girl's Hearing Restored

GRAFTON, W. VA.—Totally deaf for 13 months, 18-year-old Eloise Lockard fainted with joy when her hearing suddenly and unaccountably returned.

Miss Lockard's father, Police Captain A. E. Lockard, told how the family was spending a quiet evening at home with Eloise keeping abreast of the conversation by lip reading. Suddenly she asked a brother:

"What did you say? I believe I heard you."

He repeated the statement and Eloise collapsed.

Key in Other Trousers, Firemen Save the Day

BUTTE, MONT.—The versatility of the Butte fire department was demonstrated again, when a local resident advised them that in changing trousers he had left the key to the house "in the other trousers" inside and that the door locked itself automatically as he went out.

The fire department placed a ladder for the man, and he did his own "second story work" of entering the house and getting the key.

Burglars Crack Open Safe

BOUNTIFUL, UTAH.—The burglars who tore the door off a safe in a Bountiful furniture store—then found the safe unlocked—must be coming back. Rex Errett Hepworth said the only loot of the night's work was a slip of paper containing the safe's combination.

AMERICA, DECIDING NATION

THIS NATION APPARENTLY HAS A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY, BIBLE PROPHECY MAY COME TRUE IS THIS WESTERN HEMISPHERE

A Lay Sermon By Jess Mitchell

Recently we celebrated July 4th as Independence Day, yet I have often wondered if October 12th, Columbus Day, is not fundamentally more important, for it was on that day Columbus discovered America and, certainly without its previous discovery and settlement there would have been no later call for an Independence Day. To my mind that discovery is of vast importance for it was the real beginning of this great nation, the beginning of greater opportunity for ennobling manhood and enjoying greater liberty. It marked the beginning of a greater native intelligence, enlarged education and more equitable justice, for history well proves the race has always advanced in a westerly direction since the acts of man began to be recorded.

The Bible tells us in Deuteronomy that God said to Moses, "Lift up thine eyes westward." Nearly 450 years ago Christopher Colombo, son of a wool-comber of Genoa, Italy, had the urge to find a shorter passage to travel for merchants to India and, going westward, discovered America. Horace Greeley, Tennessee newspaper editor, years ago became famous because of his admonition, when he said, "Go west young man and grow up with the country." Multiplicities of thousands of people in oriental countries during these past 448 years have bettered their social, religious, financial and physical conditions by going west—crossing the Atlantic ocean to America, where they have found equal opportunity with others in working out and accomplishing the details of their various lives.

Up to the time Columbus discovered America, this had been quite a lopsided sort of world, with the laws, religion, civilization and philosophy of the world had come from the East. It was like a wagon with wheels on just one side; like a scissor with but one blade; like a burro with a pack on one side of its saddle and nothing to balance the other side; like a bride with no bridegroom. Of course, there were plenty of ignorant people in early days who believed this world was flat; but there were constant evidences arising in their minds as to its possible rotundity. Columbus was among those advanced students who believed the world was round. In other words, he didn't believe the All-wise Creator had made just half a planet, because his Providence in other matters was to the effect that when God did anything, he made a perfect job of it. We humans may sometimes do only a half-job of anything because of negligence or laziness, but such is never the case with Omnipotence who has no limitations of time, power or ability.

In these latter days nations have come to place much faith and confidence in their huge warships and fast traveling airships; but if you ask me what are the most important and most famous boats in the world, I would be forced to say: Noah's Ark, that little boat in the bushes of the River Nile, the Mayflower that came from Plymouth England laden with the Pilgrim fathers, and the ship on whose deck stood Columbus as he started out on that adventurous trip to prove the earth was round. There they are: three ships; but I do know if you stand in a row an Englishman, an Irishman, a Spaniard, a Bohemian, a Frenchman, a Chinaman, and a representative of all the other nations, and let a chemist take a sample of blood from the right arm of each of these, they will all have the same characteristics, for it will be red, complex, fibrin, globulin, chlorin, containing sulphuric acid, potassium phosphate of magnesia, and so on. There would be at least three different types of all this blood, as recognized by scientists today for transfusion purposes; but in its essential constructive elements, it would all be exactly the same.

So I can readily believe the statement of St. Paul, as he stood on Mars hill that memorable day away back in the early history of Christianity, and declared that "God hath made of one blood all nations." Christy, today who know what they are talking about, tell us the blood of animals, of fish, of insects, of serpents may all vary more or less according to their genera, and that none of it is genetically different from the blood of any other living creature, and in its essential fundamental composition, regardless of race or color, it is all alike.

If anyone had asked Columbus when he started out on that all-important journey where he was going, he would have told them he didn't know. If they had asked how long it would take him he would have replied, "I don't know." It was purely a trip of faith and adventure, and there were innumerable times when that faith was severely tested, when the crew became frightened and nearly mutinied and wanted to turn back, when they nearly ran out of food and water that had to be rationed, when bribes of different kinds had to be offered by the Captain to continue the journey. However, it was all well worth it, for it led to that momentous day of October 12, 1914 when a gun was fired from the Pinta and the signal of "land ahead" was given.

Indeed, there have been many momentous days in history, which have led to far-reaching future results. The Apostle Paul, on that day in June when he was decapitated, had no idea the effect of his preachings and writings twenty centuries after his death. Martin Luther never dreamed the echo of his hammer blows as he nailed his Latin theses against the church door of Wittenberg, would echo on into eternity. Eli Whitney had no idea the added wealth of his invention of the cotton gin would bring to the southern part of this continent, nor Cyrus McCormick little knew what his reaper meant to the wheat fields of Kansas and other western states. John Guttenberg, first maker of movable type, little realized his invention to the world's culture as he labored at his workbench. When the Island of Manhattan was sold to the Dutch for $24,000, no one then could foresee that it would some day contain the City of New York, the world's greatest metropolis. Even the apparently lesser details of individual lives and of collective history are of as great importance, yet they receive little or no special credit.

The fact I would like to impress upon my readers is that the discovery of America had both a spiritual and a physical meaning—it was in all probabilities religious discovery. Atheism, infidelity nor vagabondism of any kind had anything to do with Christopher Columbus was a devoutly religious Catholic. He was a wholesome Christian gentleman. On that memorable voyage there were prayers uttered and psalms sung every morning and evening by the entire crews of all three vessels. All these seamen trusted implicitly in divine Providence to give them a successful journey.

It was not many years after the discovery of this continent until the news of its existence became known throughout all Europe. Then people seeking better conditions of life desiring liberty of conscience and action, some of an adventurous disposition, others who had been victims of persecution of various kinds in their home land, began journeying hither to this new land of promise. Within 50 years there were a dozen or more colonies of English, French, Dutch, and people of other nationalities founded along the eastern shores of this newly found country.

Recently America has been called "The Melting Pot" of nations, and I have sometimes believed there is considerable truth in that statement. I don't know how much the Apostle Paul knew about physiology and chemistry; but I do know if you stand in a row an Englishman, an Irishman, a Spaniard, a Bohemian, a Frenchman, a Chinaman, and a representative of all the other nations, and let a chemist take a sample of blood from the right arm of each of these, they will all have the same characteristics, for it will be red, complex, fibrin, globulin, chlorin, containing sulphuric acid, potassium phosphate of magnesia, and so on. There would be at least three different types of all this blood, as recognized by scientists today for transfusion purposes; but in its essential constructive elements, it would all be exactly the same.

So I can readily believe the statement of St. Paul, as he stood on Mars hill that memorable day away back in the early history of Christianity, and declared that "God hath made of one blood all nations." Christy, today who know what they are talking about, tell us the blood of animals, of fish, of insects, of serpents may all vary more or less according to their genera, and that none of it is genetically different from the blood of any other living creature, and in its essential fundamental composition, regardless of race or color, it is all alike.

Countenances of the five different human races may be different as the result of climate, education or habits. The Caucasian may have the oval face and small mouth, the Malay, the projecting upper jaw; the Ethiopian, the retreating forehead and large lip; the Mongolian, the flat face and olive hue; the American Indian, the copper-colored complexion; but the blood composition is all the same, and indicates they all had the same origin. Darwin, in his "Origin of the Species" more than a hundred years ago recognized that fact, and every physiologist who has studied human bodies; every physiologist who has studied human dispositions; every metaphysician who has studied human mentality; and every theologian who has made a critical study of the application of religion to the human race, agrees that their reactions in sum and substance, generally speaking are quite similar.

Now I think all this may mean something and something quite important. While I confess I am not so strong in the belief of divine revelation as some folks are, yet I do insist in all belief in the final and infallible results of the operation of the Laws of Nature as set in motion by the Omnipotent Creator. There are entirely too many vitally noticeable and noteworthy incidents in the operation of these laws for me to ever thing otherwise and to believe contrary to the fact that behind all creation there is an infinite purpose; that purpose is gradually being worked out according to a divine plan in this world of ours; that there is nothing we can do to defeat it. We may hinder or delay it by our actions and attitudes; but no earthly creature nor organization of earthly creatures can ever negate the plans of Omnipotence to the point of defeating them.

Now, all this I have written has been preliminary to saying that it is the belief of many people today that in the divine plan of universal economy America is destined to play a very important role, not only in world civilization; but also in world humanization and purification of morals, elimination of selfishness, establishing of liberty, equity of existence and relative justice for all human beings. Past history, present conditions and future outlook so indicates.

North America, according to geographers, contains 14,219,987 square miles—a length and breadth which is calculable but incomprehensible to any famed member of the New Deal Brain Trust. We now have a population of something more than 100,000,000 people. This country is big enough to pour four Europeans into it and house feed and otherwise accommodate at least a billion people, according to economic statisticians. It is the firm belief of many today, that in the economy of the universe, it is the Creator's plan that America is destined to witness the perfect consummation of the Almighty ideas begun in the very foundation of this world when it was flung from off the sun as a nebulous mass and began whirling toward solidity in its own orbit.

It is the belief of many that the doors of America should stand wide open to intelligent and worthy immigration. Not that it should be made a dumping ground for vagabondism or radicalism from the slum and off-scouring of other nations; but that we should readily admit to our shores all people, regardless of race or color, who are sincerely interested in personal and racial improvement and benefits. I approve of the Dies Congressional committee of investigation that is seeking to ferret out the fraudulent and the traitorous foreigners who have come to our shores for ulterior purposes. I approve the bill requiring registration of aliens and their fingerprinting as recently signed by the President, and I favor any other anti-"fifth column" action that may be taken for national benefit and protection.

At the same time, I condemn leaders of our national government because they have made no greater efforts to teach these American-born foreigners the fundamental principles of Americanism and to amalgamate them homogeneously into the political and social life of our total citizenry. No one can expect foreigners to be good American citizens if they do not know something of the underlying principles of our system of democracy. Nazism, Fascism and Sovietism have been developed and taken many European nations because their leaders have filled those nations with its propaganda and taught the people its alleged superiority. We of America firmly believe that the principals of democracy could be fabulously more appealing and acceptable to our citizenry as a whole if our government officials would take the same interest in propounding its ideals, scattering such information broadcast to the people, holding schools of fundamental instruction of such government, and otherwise informing the public at large.

Citizens act according to their intelligence or ignorance. Folks cannot be blamed for not acting in accordance with democratic principles if they do not understand them, and the great mass of our people, not only those who come to us from foreign lands; but multiplied thousands who were born and reared in this country, do not now understand and appreciate the sterling foundation of liberty, equality and justice which compose the mullish of a democratic form of government. Perhaps you and I are somewhat to blame for this condition; but since we are a representative form of government, I lay the principal blame at the feet of our congressional leaders in government, education and religion.

It is the firm belief of many that the mingling of all races of people who come to live in America, under proper tutorage and training will, in time, produce the most magnificent race of people the world has ever known, and that coming race will ultimately mean the triumph of the Church over war, though it may not be recognized as such when the time arrives. Today, many learned people and some of our favored clairvoyant natures, are already predicting a "sixth race" with very strong indications that it will become known as the American race, just as other races are today denominated Egyptian, Italian, Hebrew or Teutonic.

So, I think it a good idea to admit to this country the best of French and German blood. Let them inter-marry one with the other, and let them settle Alsace and the other Lorraine. It will be the perpetual quarreling over there and set a good example for their own folks back in the old countries. Let the hot-blooded Spaniard unite with the cold-blooded Poleander; the romanized Italian with the master-of-fact Norwegian; teach them all the fundamental principals of Americanism, educate them in our manners and customs, and in a 100 or 150 years from now we will have here a race of people which in stature, in purity of complexion, in language, in eye, in gracefulness of pose, in dome-like brow, in taste, in intelligence, in morals, in loyalty to our fundaments of life and living superior to anything the world has ever known. They would be fish nor Bohemians, nor Scandinavians, nor Germans nor French nor of any other foreign nation; but they will be simon-pure Americans.

Some may say I am somewhat out of order in writing thus when our nation is now in the throes of defense preparation; but I am not. I am not essentially a pacifist, yet like the Virginian, I believe in having peace even "if I have to fight for it," and America today is certainly in as great need of spiritual preparation as she is of physical (military) preparation. Right now may be a crucial moment in the history of this nation in more ways than one. If she arises heroically to meet the situation it may be to her future glorification, if she fails to her eternal damnation. If we make America a great national laboratory where all foreign bloods are inextricably mixed up, race prejudices and race antipathies will have to perish. Almighty God has nothing but righteous indignation for national selfishness, and so long as America does not do her part toward extinguishing such feelings and such attitudes, just that long will God's plan in this regard be abandoned.

Inter-marriage of families and intermarriage of nations is depressing and crippling to its participants. It is a principal of science that the union of similarities weakens, while the union of contrasts strengthens. For instance, you show me a combination of blood that of the Scotch-Irish The union of their two fundamental virtues and acumen makes for the very highest order of rugged intelligent humanity. No wonder so many of our high-ranking officers are held by the Scotch-Irish descendants of these two early immigrant families to America. The same is true with the union of many other races; absolutely proven by past history. The fact of even a thought of advocating miscegenation, I believe in purity of blood for family reasons as strongly as anyone; but I also know that no one race has any monopoly on blood purity. The intermingling in many ways tends to strengthening of mental and spiritual characteristics. Marriage outside of one's own family and one's own nation is invariably a mighty gain.

Some may say I already have said too many people in this country; but that is not true. Our country has just been prepared to receive them and to adequately accommodate their economic and other needs. Witness the giant dams recently thrown up or now being constructed, harnessing multiplied millions of gallons of water to be distributed for nourishing growing crops. Witness the mighty falls being harnessed with generators and dynamos to produce multiplied billions of volts of electrical energy to light people's homes, turn the wheels of giant factories, perform a thousand and one different chores cheaply and efficiently in millions of homes. Witness the multiplied inventions being accomplished to lighten and cheapen labor of different kinds—and a hundreds other illustrations I might name, and it is all but the preliminary of America getting ready to perform her God-intended task.

Many of our intelligent, patriotic and interested citizens insist our government is due for a change. We must all admit that in the New Deal there has already been quite a change; but I do not believe America will ever voluntarily accept dictatorship, Communism, Nazism, Fascism nor Sovietism will never appeal to the citizens here. Our democracy may, within the near coming years, be modified somewhat by an aristocracy where-in we will continue to keep the most of our democratic ideas and ideals of personal freedom; yet we will have a head that will be in position to enforce fundamental essentials of government where such becomes necessary; but there will never be a Hitler nor a Stalin nor a Mussolini in America.

No one yet has any conclusive ideas as to how the present European war may terminate. Meanwhile, America makes urgent preparations for protection of her national ideals and, in the near future years may be in position to render great humanitarian aid to nations now embroiled across the Atlantic. For ought I know, the time may come in future years, when America has become so assimilated and solidified in its particular nationality, its ideals and aspirations, this country may, in turn, furnish immigration back to the older countries across the oceans to correct the erroneous ideas of government today being fostered there. Disclaiming any superstitious nature whatever, dis-vowing any ultra-religious tendencies of any kind; but based on the trend of history and present day activities of enlightenment, it may well be believed that if we as Americans live up to the light Omnipotence would bestow upon us, the time will come, and not far distant, when we will fear no other nation, no other form of government, no other human being—indeed fear no one but Omnipotence, and if we are diligent in following our ideals and assiduously performing our duties as Americans, as key citizens in the world's divine economy, we shall have no fear of him. Surely Destiny has an all-important errand in America and it is up to Americans to make ready to keep that appointment.

Salt Will Help To Keep One Cool In Hot Days

Austin, July 30—If your work is such that it causes excessive perspiration, add a pinch of ordinary table salt to each drink of water you take to help prevent heat cramps. This is advised by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, to forestall a possible increase in the number of heat victims as the Texas thermometer hits 90 degrees and above. Laborers, mechanics, farmers, and white collar workers whose work causes them to sweat profusely are in danger of having their body content become deficient, with resulting heat cramps or heat fag. Salt is a prominent constituent of sweat; the body may lose as high as 40 to 50 grams of salt during hot days.

In industry, a method of preventing heat cramps is to take a tablet of pure salt or a mixture of salt and dextrose with each drink of water. Workmen whose duties require muscular exertion should be especially careful to add more than the usual amount of salt to what they eat and drink.

Salt deficiency may be prevented by taking salt in various ways. Where prepared salt tablets are not available, table salt may be added to each drink of water. Milk is a source of salt and will help to make up for the deficiency caused by sweating. Alcoholic drinks should be avoided. Heat cramp is characterized by pains (cramps) in the abdominal region, headache, and in severe cases, by nausea and vomiting. The body temperature remains about normal, likewise the pulse rate. Body salt losses occur without the knowledge of the individual until there is a deficiency; then the abdominal muscles begin to cramp.

The Fountain of Youth

The Birmin islands belong to the Bahama group. It was here that an old woman told Ponce de Leon of the Fountain of Youth, which was reputed to exist in Florida. The tradition probably originated from the story of a fresh water spring in the ocean near the Florida coast. A Spaniard who drank from this spring is said to have attained a new life—a sort of physical return to his youth.

See through Glass Car

General Motors spent $250,000 to build a glass car for exhibition at the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition. Aileen Poole (left) stretched out on the floor (glass) boards and Doris Hiler crawled under the front fender to prove you can see through the model machine.
