Texaco Potentials Offer In Andrews

Texaco Inc. has completed No. 282-A J. E. Mabae as a current third Dean producer in the Andrews County part of the Mabae multipay field, 20 miles southeast of Andrews.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 55 barrels of 41.7-gravity oil and 67 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 511-1.

Production was through perforations at 8,710-9,525 feet, which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons and fractured with 80,000 gallons and 168,000 pounds.

Total depth is 12,908 feet, and it is plugged back to 9,660 feet, in 4 1/2-inch casing seated at 12,897 feet.

The well is a former Silurian producer which was assigned to the Lowe field, and spots 1,700 feet from north and 3,000 feet from west lines of section 32, block 40, T-2-N, G&M&B&A survey.

Oil Countries, Some Consuming Nations Open Talks In Paris

PARIS (AP) — The oil-exporting nations and some of their leading customer countries opened preparatory talks for an energy conference today in the wake of an American declaration that Washington wants to destroy the powerful exporters' cartel.

The American challenge was not likely to make the atmosphere around the conference any more pleasant. But since the task of the 10-delegation meeting is only to make preparations for a world energy conference during the summer, there was a possibility that agreement to go ahead might be reached.

The chief questions to be decided are what subjects will be discussed at the energy conference, which countries will take part and when it will be held.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) at its summit conference in Algiers last month said OPEC would participate in a world energy conference only if it were expanded to include raw materials other than oil and the major countries exporting these materials.

The United States wants the conference limited to a discussion of energy problems only. The nine-nation European Economic Community — represented at the preparatory meeting by a single delegation — has urged a compromise. It suggests that the conference deal mainly with energy but extend its discussions to other raw materials whenever necessary.

The chief of the American delegation, Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Enders, put the American long-range position bluntly in a British television interview taped Sunday in Paris. A basic aim of the United States is to "get enough market power" to hasten the collapse of the oil exporters' cartel, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Enders said.

"We have a situation now in which the central element is the economies of the Western countries can be manipulated both as to quantity and as to price," he said. "It is impossible for us to follow successful economic policies — and indeed to follow successful political policies — if that power is misused by those who hold it."

April Showers Balloon Into Threats Of Floods In Some Sections Of State

April showers ballooned into threats of April floods as deluges falling at rates of more than two inches of rain per hour hit parts of Central and South Texas today.

Official observers attributed the spreading areas of wet weather to a clash of tropical moisture pouring inland from the Gulf of Mexico and unstable air which shifted into the state from the Pacific.

Sometimes violent thunderstorms and damaging hail pummeled some sections.

Police at Uvalde in Southwest Texas reported a tornado spun down from a black cloud to hit in open country 10 miles south of town Sunday night. They said it apparently caused no damage.

Hailstones up to the size of golf balls battered Eagle Pass, in the same general area, inflicting considerable property loss.

Near dawn the rain belt-mostly scattered showers and light rain with a sprinkling of heavy thunderstorms—covered a 200-mile-wide stretch of countryside north of a line from the coast near Victoria to Eagle Pass. Radar spotted some of the more threatening storms then in the vicinity of Fredericksburg and Rocksprings, to the north and northwest of San Antonio.

With the precipitation spreading slowly toward the north and east, official observers expected it to become more widespread across the southeast half of Texas by tonight. They predicted significant accumulations of rainfall by Tuesday, with a 20 per cent possibility Skies were overcast throughout the state.

Forecasters also saw prospects for a few severe thunderstorms in Central and North Texas, The Associated Press reported.

As a Pacific cold front heads into West Texas from El Paso and New Mexico, weathermen at Midland Regional Air Terminal are calling for a 30 per cent chance of rain today.

A trace of moisture fell on the Tall City from overcast skies early today and renewed hope that the city's 1.59 inch of yearly measured precipitation would be increased even more today.

Sunday was a mild day with warm temperatures under overcast skies and steady gusts. Weathermen are predicting (See SHOWERS Page 2A)

ENJOYING HER DOLL—One of the Vietnamese orphans that arrived in Kellers Church, Pa., Sunday night was not too tired after her long trip to play with a doll. Some 1,700 Involved In Operation

By The Associated Press
Some 1,700 children had been airlifted out of Southeast Asia to the United States and other nations before Operation Baby Lift ended on a large-scale basis today. A Saigon official said from now on the children will leave in smaller groups.

Diplomatic and government officials said the airlift had reached the scheduled quota approved earlier by the South Vietnamese government. They said all the children who have been evacuated were already in the adoption process, and the airlift only speeded up the paper work and the orphans' departure.

Smaller Groups Now

Dr. Phan Quang Dan, deputy premier for social welfare, said, "The large operation has ended. From now on, the orphans will leave in smaller groups."

On Sunday, two flights carrying a total of 135 children landed at Travis Air Force Base in California and one flight carrying 407 youngsters landed at Seattle. And two other planes left Saigon today with a total of more than 200 orphans, bringing the unofficial tally of evacuated orphans to 1,700.

Some of the children arriving in California and Seattle on Sunday were then flown on to Chicago, New York and other points.

Four Nations Involved

Nations including the United States, Australia, Canada and Great Britain began airlifts five days ago, flying infants as young as 21 days old across thousands of miles to safety and, in some cases, to hospitals for much needed medical treatment.

Many of the children have been hospitalized for treatment of malnutrition, dehydration, chicken pox and other ailments. Some have died during the lengthy and crowded flights.

But most of the daughters and sons of parents who either abandoned them or were killed in the fighting between the South Vietnamese and Communist-led forces are destined to new parents, many of whom have been waiting years for their arrival.

New Outfit

"All those clothes will be too small now," said Charles Bloom of White Bear Lake, Minn., who brought to the Minneapolis airport a new outfit for their 3-year-old adopted son. Bloom, like most other excited adults greeting the new additions to their families, was full of happiness and pride.

"Look at him!" he said. "He's scared to death, but he's (See ORPHANS Page 2A)

Communists Shell 10 District Capitals In South Vietnam's Mekong Delta

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Communist-led forces shelled at least 10 district capitals in the rice-rich Mekong Delta today and also hit the area near South Vietnam's largest fuel depot six miles southeast of Saigon.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong engaged government troops in five provinces of the delta, and launched rocket and mortar attacks that wounded about 50 civilians, field reports said.

Sources said 95 Communist-led troops and 14 government soldiers were killed in the fighting. Most of the shelling in the delta, where one-third of South Vietnam's 20 million people live — was centered in Dinh Tuong province about 35 miles south of Saigon.

Forty-five miles northwest of Saigon, government troops recaptured a vital outpost on the southern flanks of Tay Ninh City, the Saigon command said. The outpost had fallen March 17.

Close to Saigon, Viet Cong gunners poured 60 mortar and recoilless rifle rounds into the vicinity of the Nha Be fuel depot, the military command said. It said six persons were wounded and damage to the fuel depot was minor.

Nha Be has been shelled repeatedly for the past two years, but this was the first time it had been a target during the current offensive.

activities of the Central Intelligence Agency but, by direction, he has increasingly defended the CIA and other intelligence units in recent public speeches.

The President, who canvassed the economic scene and threw a few brickbats at Congress as well as discussing the nation's role in the world, said in his text:

"There are some who see nothing but a grim future of depression at home and disintegration abroad. I reject that scenario. My vision is one of growth and of development worldwide through increasing interdependence of nations of the world.

"My vision is one of peace. And my vision of Americans is of a people who will retain their self-respect and self-dependence so that this vision can emerge."

The President referred directly to setbacks in South Vietnam only in discussing federally promoted efforts to fly orphans here from that country.

Ford Sees A Brighter Day

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Ford, rejecting forecasts of "depression at home and disintegration abroad" said today he sees cooperative growth and development throughout the world.

"My vision is one of peace," Ford said in the text of an address to the National Association of Broadcasters' meeting in Las Vegas. The text was made public before the President wound up a nine-day Easter holiday in Palm Springs and headed East.

While acknowledging "it is true that we have suffered setbacks at home and abroad," Ford declared:

"America will not give in to self-doubt nor paralysis of will power. Americans will not dismantle the defense of the United States. And we certainly will not adopt such a naive vision of the world that we dismantle our essential intelligence-gathering agencies. I can assure you that other superpowers are increasing — not decreasing — their military and intelligence capacities."

Jacobsen Denies He Offered To Give Prosecutors Evidence Against LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — John U.S. Department of Justice in Jacobsen, star witness in the John Connally bribery trial, today denied under cross-examination that he had ever offered to give prosecutors evidence against former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Connally's chief defense lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, sought to draw from Jacobsen an admission that he had made such an offer to lawyers for the

Mrs. Bob Davis of Piedmont, Okla., held 2½-year-old newly christened Valerie Eades Davis in her arms at the airport in Oklahoma City and said: "She's more than we ever hoped for. She's so happy and doesn't even seem tired."

In Detroit, 14 children completed the last leg of their journey from Saigon on Sunday, and Gov. William G. Milliken was among the crowd to greet them at Metropolitan Airport.

Some of the children who arrived in this country during the weekend are survivors of Friday's CSA Galaxy crash in which at least 200 youngsters and escorts died or are missing.

Eleven-year-old Thuy, a blind girl who survived the crash, was met in San Francisco by her new parents, Dorothy and Bob DeBolt.

"Thuy is a beautiful, beautiful little girl," said Mrs. DeBolt, whose family already includes 17 children from previous marriages and other adoptions.

"All our children are so absolutely beautiful, and everybody gets along marvelously," she said. "But it does get confusing at times. Once a girl called us and said, 'This is Jennifer. I'll be home soon.' I said, 'All right.' Then I realized we didn't have anyone in the family named Jennifer. Oh well, what's another?"

New Mexican Wins Telegrapher Title

Edward Hart Jr. of New Mexico tripped up fewer times than did reigning champion Soupy Groves of Odessa to win the top telegrapher title at the recent Midland Amateur Radio Club's Swapfest.

Hart and Groves "were head-to-head at 35 words per minute (on the telegraph key) but Hart turned out with more perfect copy," reported George Parker, the club's public relations committee chairman.

Parker said approximately 375 amateur radio operators — hams — participated in the two-day Swapfest here in March. He said the hams were from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado, California and Utah.

Senate Committee Okays Water Plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee including three East Texas senators approved a water bond proposal today despite testimony that the money from the bonds could be used to move water across the state to West Texas.

The vote was 5-0. Several small town residents offered testimonials for the Texas Water Development Board, which wants to increase the maximum amount of development bonds from $400 million to $800 million.

The Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club and the Texas League of Women Voters opposed the proposed constitutional amendment.

Narcotic Drugs Stolen From Safe

Narcotic drugs valued at $150 were reported stolen from a drug store safe Sunday after the store's back door was knocked down by a motor vehicle.

Officers spotted the back door to Daniel Rexall Drug, 1409 N. Big Spring St., open about 9:30 a.m. Sunday and, on investigating, found that the door apparently had been forced open by backing what appeared to be a pickup into the door.

The drugs were taken from an unlocked safe in the office.

Truck Kills Pedestrian; Driver Arrested, Charged

PECOS—A California man was killed Sunday morning when he was hit by a semi-trailer truck as he was walking along Interstate 20 less than half a mile west of Toyah about 20 miles southwest of here.

Herbert Eugene Turpin, 36, of Bellflower, Calif., was pronounced dead at the scene by Reeves County Justice of the Peace Lynn Gibson at 8:10 a.m. Driver of the truck, Ronald Lee Zuckolls, 21, of Athens, was apprehended about five miles east of Big Spring and charged with failure to stop and render aid.

He was released on $10,000 bond set by Judge Gibson. Highway patrolmen said a truck driver witnessed the accident and called a Toyah truck stop by Citizens Band radio.

Employees from the truck stop, patrolmen said, came to the scene and found Turpin's body. Department of Public Safety officials theorize that Turpin was walking into Toyah after his car developed trouble about three miles west of town when he was hit by the truck.

Incumbent, New Trustee Elected At Garden City

GARDEN CITY—An incumbent and a new contestant were among the winners in the Saturday school board elections here.

W. E. Bednar accumulated 97 votes for the school board trustee and Leon Halfmann, an incumbent, trailing with 79 votes, also won a place as school board trustee.

Hubert Frerich, an incumbent, received 47 votes. The three write-ins for the school board trustees included Fritz Hendricks, three votes; Ace Hoelscher, two votes and Delbert Halfmann, one vote.

Legislature Faces Decisions On Finance, New Constitution

AUSTIN (AP) — Action on a new Texas Constitution and waiting for the dollars and cents of school finance and agency budgets to be sorted out are on this week's legislative agenda.

The deadline passed today for the House subcommittee on public school finance reform to finish its work but the panel has barely scratched the surface and will receive an extension.

One thing slowing down the subcommittee is its desire to see how big a state budget the House Appropriations Committee will draft. That will determine the amount of money "left on the table" for new state aid to public schools.

The appropriations committee listened into the weekend to recommendations from the House standing committees that reviewed budget requests in their bailiwicks under Speaker Bill Clayton's new procedures.

A new Texas Constitution, virtually identical to the one that failed by three votes to pass the 1974 constitutional convention, goes before the House Tuesday. It already has passed the Senate, and House leaders want to keep it free of changes, which could lead to another failure to submit the document to the voters.

Clayton predicts two or more days of debate but hopes to finish House action by Thursday's weekend adjournment. Monday afternoon's House calendar includes a bill of major importance to the more than 100,000 state government workers. It would set up a uniform system for their group life and health insurance policies. Each state agency now makes its own arrangement, and the state pays $15 a month toward each employee's premium.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss . . . but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone. The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation.

Three Wounded In Houston U Shooting Spree

HOUSTON (AP) — A faculty member and two students were wounded in a shooting in a University of Houston biology classroom today.

Alfred Shen, 25, a graduate student, was hospitalized with a chest wound. He was reported in critical condition at Hermann Hospital.

Guy Cameron, 32, a teacher, and Bruce H. Johnson, 27, a psychology major, were admitted to Ben Taub General Hospital. They were listed in fair condition.

Cameron had a wound to the right thigh. Johnson to the right shoulder. University officials said Shen had been unhappy with Cameron over receiving a failing grade.

Police investigators said Shen fired two shots in the classroom, fled, and turned the gun on himself when confronted by university security officers outside the building.

One Killed, Three Hurt Near Big Lake

BIG LAKE—One Big Lake man was killed and three others injured in a one-car rollover about 12 miles south of here about 8:40 p.m. Sunday.

Department of Public Safety officials said that the car, driven by Barnes, was traveling south on Hwy. 137 when it evidently ran off the road and Barnes lost control. The car then crossed over to the east side of the road, went through a fence, flipped over and landed on its top.

Iran Executes Two Hijackers

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Two Iraqis who hijacked an Iraqi airliner last month were executed by an Iranian firing squad today, the government announced.

It was believed to be the first time in the history of air piracy that the death penalty had been carried out.

The announcement said the two were Fuad Alghaitani and Taha Namiel. They hijacked an Iraqi Airways jet on March 3 and forced it to land in Iran.

Last Days In White House A Time Of Uncertainty

EDITOR'S NOTE—With participants now free to talk, it is possible for the first time to know the high drama of the days which immediately preceded the resignation of former President Richard M. Nixon. This is the second installment of that story. The first appeared in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

WASHINGTON (AP) — By Thursday, Aug. 1, Richard Nixon had begun to consider resignation. Precisely when the dread prospect first surfaced in his thoughts that last summer is not known but clearly it was there Thursday, a rock uncovering in a lowering tide.

He spent most of the day alone in his EOB office while his grip on the wheel of government grew weaker. A meeting scheduled for 11 a.m. between the President and his Council of Economic Advisors was pushed back to 4 p.m., then to the next morning, then canceled. He never did meet again with the council on the acute problems of inflation.

Tapes Received

Sirica now had the first installment of tapes the Supreme Court had ordered the White House to release. The June 23 tapes were not among them. All that the special prosecutor knew was that White House logs showed the President had talked three times that day with Haldeman. He had no way of knowing the content. How long could Nixon hold them back?

On Thursday, Haig went to Vice President Ford and told him of the "new" evidence that could prove "catastrophic." He asked if Ford was prepared to

Second Of Three Parts

"assume the presidency within a short time." Ford made no response.

Haig outlined the main possibilities as he saw them: Nixon could try to ride out impeachment and fight removal in the Senate or resign "sooner or later." Among the options being considered at the White House, he said, was the question of whether the President could pardon himself; whether he might pardon some of the Watergate defendants, pardon himself and then resign; or finally, whether to resign and receive a pardon from the next President. Ford said he needed time to think. Later, he testified, he told Haig he would make no recommendations on the options.

Stunned, Ford delayed telling his wife. Instead, he went through the charade of looking at furniture with her for the new official residence of the Vice President. That evening, he finally said, "Betty, the probability of us living in that house is very remote." And he told her why.

Speech Begun

That evening the President cruised the Potomac for two hours with his friend Bebe Rebozo on the Sequoia. The two men dined alone.

That evening Haig told Raymond K. Price Jr. to begin work on a resignation speech for the President. Strictly on a contingency basis, he said. The next morning, Friday, Aug. 2, Haig told Price to hold off work on the resignation speech and start preparation of a statement to accompany release of the June 23 tapes.

The President spent most of the day in his EOB office, alone with his thoughts and his campaign souvenirs. In the evening he called his family and Rebozo in the Lincoln Sitting Room and told them of the devastating tapes. He talked for two hours in the manner of an anguished man near the end of his strength.

"He knew it would be resignation or removal," said a member of the family. "For the two hours he talked, he was trying to understand and come to terms with what had happened to him. And he understood better than anybody else what it was all about."

He sent for copies of the new transcripts and his two daughters and their husbands read them in the living room. The two young ladies apparently ended the reading not knowing what to think. Their husbands, one a lawyer, the other a law student, knew better. "There goes the ball game," thought David Eisenhower. Pat Nixon and Bebe Rebozo did not read the fatal transcripts at all.

On Saturday, Aug. 3, the family and Rebozo flew by helicopter to Camp David, which incidentally, was named for young Eisenhower by his grandfather in another time.

Support Vowed

The President appeared to have rallied from the gloom of a man resigned to resigning. Over dinner in Aspen Lodge, he announced that he would fight on. Could they take it? he asked his family. He was assured they could; they would support him in whatever he decided.

But as the evening wore on, he weakened in his resolve and showed, said one member of the family, that he was "still so unsure of what he should do."

He vacillated. In the 26th month of the cover-up, Richard Nixon walked back and forth before the wall of the inevitable searching for a crack.

SUNDAY, AUG. 4

Richard Nixon once said that he liked to go to Camp David because this presidential retreat, high in the Catoctin mountains of Maryland, surrounded by a double steel fence and unfriendly Marines with sidearms, helped him to think objectively and get a perspective on the myriad complexities of his office.

"I find that up here on top of a mountain, it is easier for me to get on top of the job."

On this gray and misty Sunday he was trying desperately to stay in the job.

He was now determined "to fight on as long as there was a chance," he told assistants. Around the fragile word, chance, he wrapped a rationale:

The Constitution made it especially difficult to remove a President. If he were to resign, that might leave a precedent that would make the toppling of a President through public pressure instead of impeachment, easier in the future.

So he reasoned, on this plane of higher purpose. On another level, another consequence of his resignation could be the unthinkable: jail. But the immediate problem was the June 23 tapes. He now knew that they had to be released to the public. But how? For this tactical problem, he summoned Haig and St. Clair, his press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, and speechwriters Price and Patrick J. Buchanan to Camp David. It was agreed that a Presidential statement would better accompany release of the tapes than a speech. What to say?

Plans Made

For seven hours the statement was discussed, analyzed, written and rewritten. The President, in Aspen Lodge, saw only Haig and Ziegler, and he saw them one at a time. The others worked in other cabins — Birch, Laurel and Hawthorne. Their ideas and projected paragraphs were carried to and from Aspen by Ziegler or Haig.

Most of the assistants, Price recalled, now favored resignation as an "inevitable reality." They thought the public uproar that would follow release of the tapes would force him out of office. But the President, they were told, wanted to be certain of the reaction before making a decision. He would be the last to face the "inevitable reality."

Late in the day, Steve Bull recalled, he received a call in Washington from Gen. Haig.

"Steve, when did the President first hear the June 23 tapes and who knows that he did?"

"May 5, 6, or 7. The grand jury and the prosecutors know it. I testified to that."

"That could be fatal."

(In Le Mons, Belgium, where he is now Supreme Commander of all NATO forces in Europe, Gen. Haig said of this conversation: "I never heard of such a thing. That doesn't mean it didn't happen, but it doesn't make sense. I can see being interested in knowing when he heard the tapes but I can't imagine being interested in who knew that he did.")

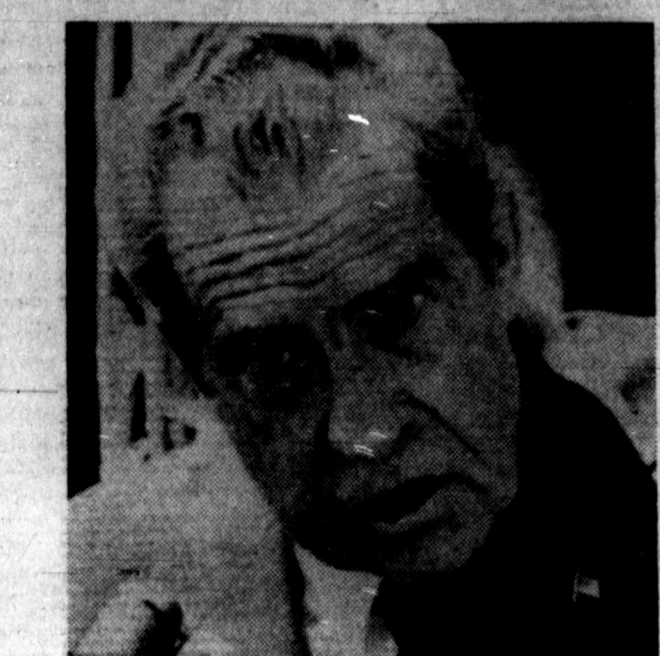

(In Washington, Ray Price said: "We are trying to pin down when he had heard the tapes. On the question of who knew that he did, there was some of that but not in a sinister context." Price declined to go into the context.) Steve Bull recalled that sometime later, about 6 p.m., the President phoned from Camp David.

"Steve, are you sure I heard the June 23 tapes back in May?"

Bull said he remembered setting up those tapes on the machine in the President's office.

"Are you sure I heard them? Is it possible you just set them up and I didn't listen to them?"

Bull told the President that when he returned to the office the counter on the machine without the world's believing him."

Richard Nixon concluded: "I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety, does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a President. I trust that as the constitutional process goes forward, this perspective will prevail."

It didn't. Across the capital and across the nation, even in the last pockets of Nixon loyalty, people were now saying this President had to go.

That night he cruised the Potomac with his family on the old but elegant Sequoia.

"is never allow anybody else to run your campaign."

He reviewed the tapes he had released the day before, sliding by the fact that those tapes showed him very much involved in the details of his campaign. He said in his opinion and that of his counsel he had not committed an impeachable offense. He said he had considered resignation but now thought it his "constitutional duty" to remain in office and let the constitutional process proceed to the end, "whatever the end may be."

Across the table, directly opposite, Vice President Ford conflict and turmoil."

In their meeting, the President said his family was putting great pressure on him to remain in office. He asked the rabbi to talk to them. Which raises a small but curious point.

"Nobody," a member of the family recalled later, "was trying to get him to do anything." The family was not pushing the President in any direction; it was merely trying to sustain him in whatever decision he made.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 7

Gen. Haig phoned Sen. Scott in the morning and said that the President had been "almost persuaded several times" to resign. "The problem now is the family," Haig said, presumably echoing what his boss had told him.

He said the President wanted to see Scott, Sen. Barry Goldwater and Rep. John Rhodes, Scott's counterpart as minority leader in the House.

If his resignation is demanded, Haig said, Nixon probably would "harden up again" to stay. It would be better if the three leaders simply told him the situation in Congress. "He needs to hear it from you. He needs to know there are no alternatives, nothing else."

At 1:30, William E. Timmons, Nixon's liaison man with Congress, called Scott, who was still keeping a diary. "He's very much up and down. At one point, he's talk-

Haig: "That's what he expects."

At 5 p.m., Richard Nixon received the three men in the Oval Office. There was no preliminary small talk, contrary to custom. The President put his feet up on his desk, an old habit, Scott thought, to conceal his tension.

President: "Well, we are all aware of why you're here. Who wants to open up?"

Scott: "We've asked Barry to be our spokesman."

was the wall, and there was no way around, over or through it. If he did not resign, Richard Nixon would become the first president in history to be impeached, convicted and removed from office. If he left of his own choice, he would be the first to resign. For a man who prized his "historic firsts," this was the ultimate choking irony.

There was one more problem that day, H. R. Halde- man and John Erlichman, his former confidantes, asked for last-minute pardons.

"The President had no deal himself," said an assistant. "One of his concerns was whether he'd be prosecuted. These men could testify against him. So he did consider pardons for them but he decided he couldn't and shouldn't do it."

Assurance Given

With that out of the way, he edged closer to the "inevitable reality." Some time between 7:15 and 7:30 he talked once more with Haig.

President: "Al, are you sure this is the right course?"

Haig: "Mr. President, this is the right course for the country, for you and everyone else."

Richard Nixon left the Oval Office. He walked the graceful connecting colonnade to the home of Presidents, rode the elevator to the third floor and entered the bright yellow and green Solarium. There, in the most private of the family rooms, with its sweeping view of the Capitol dome, the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and Jefferson Memorial, he told his family he would resign.

His two daughters wept. Pat Nixon, the trouper in a thousand campaign stops good and bad, held on. The spell was snapped by a knock on the door. There was Ollie Atkins, the White House photographer, present as ordered. The incongruity of his appearance in a moment of ultimate private pain brought some laughter.

Pictures Made

"Ollie," said Mrs. Nixon, "we're always glad to see you but I don't think we need any pictures now."

"Oh, come on, Ollie," said Richard Nixon, "make a few shots."

Later in the evening, the President asked Henry Kissinger to the mansion and told him of his decision. He talked about his family and his Quakerism and his deep devotion to peace. He asked his Secretary of State if he would be remembered for bringing world peace in his time. Kissinger said he thought he would.

He talked of many things until after midnight. Kissinger went back to his office in the west wing of the White House. The phone rang. Nixon wanted to talk some more. It was difficult, so difficult, to let go of history.

Tuesday: The final two days of the Nixon administration unfold.

'He Could Have Done So Much ... But He Blew It' showed the tapes had been played.

There were no trees or doorways left.

MONDAY, AUG. 5

Before the tapes could be made public, others had to be told.

In the morning, Haig assembled the White House staff and gave them the bad news. He said there would be "very rough days ahead" but "the President won't quit." He asked them to keep working out of loyalty to the office if not the man.

Most people left that meeting in numb, bitter dismay. For two years now, they had been treated to a series of jolts by the man they had followed to Washington in high hope five

En route, he received a call from Haig on the reaction in Congress. Haig said that all ten Republican members of the Judiciary Committee who had supported him would now vote to impeach.

The President said to forget the House; it was lost. He said they now had to concentrate on the Senate and asked about several individual members. Haig said they'd probably hold fast. The President said he still thought he had a chance in the Senate. Haig said he did, too. A chance.

Sailing down the river in the dying August sun, Richard Nixon appeared sad and reflective. He talked to his family about points of interest he had come to know along said he would no longer speak out on impeachment matters. "I understand," said the President. And then, without seeking further comment on the subject, he discussed the economy for the next 50 minutes.

As the meeting ended, one man walked out thinking: "It was as if your daughter had just given birth to a bastard and there she was chattering on about dates and dances and the band at the country club."

Two hours later, as the storm whipped around the Hill, Richard Nixon met with Rabbi Korff, who had been trying to organize national support for him.

The President now said he would resign, adding, acing about getting out, at another about his family telling him to fight it out. He's very up-tight. He's very disturbed. He certainly isn't going to resign until he meets with the leaders."

"Does he know how bad it is?"

"I expect he does ... His mind nowadays is dominated by this mist, this series of problems."

In mid-afternoon, Gerald Ford told Robert Hartman, a close advisor, to begin drafting an inaugural address on a contingency basis. Hartman went to work in Room 282 of the Executive Offices Building. In Room 115, a floor below, Ray Price was working on a Nixon resignation speech and a half years before. This one snapped it.

'I Really Don't Care If They Want To Prosecute Me'

"He could have done so much that would have made a difference for 100 years but he blew it," said one presidential assistant. "He could be brilliant and compassionate and decent in his way. But then there's the other side — the introvert, the cynic, the tight personality who kept telling himself he was the coolest man in the room. And he blew it."

The curtain was fast descending but still John McCahill and the other presidential lawyers were told to keep working on a Nixon defense. Their boss, James St. Clair, took the grim tidings of the new tapes to Republican leaders in the Senate.

"Before this," St. Clair concluded, "we had the case won."

The senators were incredulous. "Where?" asked the long-suffering Scott, who had now heard everything.

St. Clair left and a quiet sense of finality filled the room. John Tower of Texas was moved to recall a line from a Greek tragedy, "and now a wave of melancholy tranquility settled over Thebes." Scott of Pennsylvania thought, "now it's just a question of how do you end it?"

The June 23 tapes and Richard Nixon's explanation went public at 4 p.m. in the 76th day of the cover-up. He admitted listening to the tapes back in May, recognizing "potential problems" but telling no one.

With uncharacteristic understatement, he said the tapes were "at variance" with his previous statements. And then, incredibly, he said he had "no way" of knowing yet whether additional tapes would show "other major inconsistencies."

His inability to be certain recalled once again Thomas Jefferson's discourse on the man who begins with one lie and soon makes it a habit. "He tells lies without attending to it, and truths the way. The subject most important to all of them was scarcely mentioned. There seemed to be a common effort to avoid it on their last night on the presidential yacht.

TUESDAY, AUG. 6

The rising wind was now a typhoon but still he hung on.

Only two voices among the 435 in the House of Representatives could be heard this day speaking against impeachment. In the Senate, the Republican Policy Committee met and quickly concluded the President should resign.

In the White House, Ray Price was told to get cracking on the resignation speech. But John McCahill and the other presidential lawyers were told to keep working on the defense. Richard Nixon was clinging to the options.

At 11 a.m., he walked into the Cabinet Room. Usually, in times of crisis or triumph, he was greeted by a standing ovation. This time, which proved to be the last time, the Cabinet rose in silence.

Crisis Reviewed

"I've called this meeting," the President said in a clear, firm voice, "to discuss the issues foremost in the minds of the American people, the issues which affect every individual — inflation and the economy."

Before a sense of unreality completely enveloped the room, he quickly turned to "the other matter." For 40 minutes, he reviewed his personal crisis in a business-like way, with that self-control that always amazed both friend and enemy.

He talked at length about the events of 1972 to demonstrate once again that he was so preoccupied with detente, the opening of China, Vietnam and other things that he failed to give close attention to his own re-election campaign. "One thing I have learned," he told the cabinet, which had heard it all before, cording to his visitor:

"I really don't care if they want to prosecute me and put me in prison. I don't want a pardon."

The rabbi objected but the President persisted. Not to resign, he said, would mean that the country would be at a standstill during months of the impeachment process; domestic problems would remain unsolved and the paralysis might invite "the danger of foreign acts."

Why had Nixon changed his mind? "That," the rabbi said later, "bordered on his inner on a contingency basis. Neither writer knew whether he was writing for the waste basket or history.

At 4:30, Scott, Goldwater and Rhodes went to the White House. They met first with Haig. Scott kept meticulous notes of all his conversations that day.

Haig: "He's been up and down. It's about 90 per cent set with him now. Please don't raise the question of resignation. He knows what you're going to tell him about the situation. He needs to hear it from you."

Goldwater: "He'll get the truth. Is that what he wants?"

Tangled Web Due Another Look

By DAVID C. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Revelation of CIA attempts to salvage a sunken Soviet submarine appears certain to rekindle efforts to unravel the web of circumstances linking the agency with billionaire Howard Hughes and Watergate.

The evidence collected during Watergate inquiries, along with various other public documents, detail an extensive pattern of relationships between various Watergate figures, the CIA and the Hughes empire.

As a result, some former Watergate investigators say they are convinced further probes of the agency's relationship to Hughes would help answer lingering questions about the motivation for the original Watergate break-in and some other activities of the White House plumbers' unit.

The CIA has acknowledged aiding members of the White House plumbers' unit but has denied that it had enough information as a result to know in advance of the Watergate break-in or the Daniel Ellsberg break-in case.

Branches of the vast Hughes financial empire have long been contractors of equipment for the spy agency. The link between Hughes and CIA covert operations stretches back to the early 1960s, when Hughes aide Robert A. Maheu was performing what he since has testified were various "sensitive assignments" for the agency in Miami.

When Maheu told Hughes of his CIA connection, Hughes responded by urging him to take on further assignments for the agency, according to Maheu's testimony in his $17.5-million defamation suit against his former boss.

In 1968 Hughes suggested to Maheu that the Hughes Tool Co. could become a front for the CIA, according to Maheu.

He pointed out that if he ever became involved with the government — a regulatory body or an investigating agency — he thought it would be very beneficial to him. Maheu testified last year.

Maheu added that he would have nothing to do with the idea. However, recent news reports quote unnamed officials in Los Angeles as saying that documents stolen from the offices of Summa Corp., the corporate successor to the Hughes Tool Co., show that the Hughes organization was used as a "paymaster type front" for undercover CIA agents around the world.

Approximately one year after Hughes urged Maheu to act as a CIA front, the agency awarded a $350 million contract to Summa Corp. to recover a Soviet diesel submarine that had sunk in 17,000 feet of water in the Pacific Ocean, according to recent news accounts.

At least one former Watergate investigator has raised privately the possibility of a connection between the contract and the $100,000 which the Senate Watergate committee said Hughes ordered paid to Florida banker Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo in late 1969 and early 1970 for the benefit of president Nixon.

It was during this same period that E. Howard Hunt retired from the CIA and went to work for the Washington office of Robert F. Mullen

Co., a public relations firm which on occasion served as a CIA front, according to Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn.

One of the principal officers of the firm was Robert Bennett, the Washington representative for Hughes' Summa Corp.

On May 27, 1972, Hunt, along with G. Gordon Liddy and former CIA security officer James W. McCord, headed a break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex where they placed bugs on the phones of DNC chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien.

O'Brien formerly had been a member of a public relations concern that received a $15,000 per month retainer from the Hughes organization and Oliver's father was a Washington lobbyist for Hughes.

When the same burglary returned on June 17 to replace the top and photograph documents they were arrested by police, and the events that ultimately resulted in the resignation of President Nixon were set in motion.

Gerald Ford

President: "Go ahead, Barry."

Goldwater: "Well, Mr. President, this isn't pleasant but you want to know the situation and it isn't good ..."

President: "Pretty bad, eh?"

Goldwater: "Yes, sir. We've discussed the thing a lot. Just about all of the senators have spoken up and there aren't very many who would support you if it comes to that. Some are very worried about what's been going on ... and I'm one of them."

President: "How many would you say would be with me? A half dozen?"

Goldwater: "More than that, maybe 15 or 18."

President: "Hugh, do you agree with that?"

Scott: "Mr. President, I'd say maybe 15. It's grim ..."

President: "Damn grim! (to Rhodes, who had come out for impeachment the day before) John, I know how you feel, what you've said. I respect it but what's your estimate?"

Rhodes: "About the same, Mr. President."

Scott: "Mr. President, we are all very saddened but we have to tell you the facts."

President: "Never mind, there'll be no tears. I haven't cried since Eisenhower died. My family have been fine. I'm going to be all right ... Well, thank you."

These were the facts. This

Mrs. Bob Davis of Piedmont, Okla., held 2½-year-old newly christened Valerie Eades Davis in her arms at the airport in Oklahoma City and said: "She's more than we ever hoped for. She's so happy and doesn't even seem tired."

In Detroit, 14 children completed the last leg of their journey from Saigon on Sunday, and Gov. William G. Milliken was among the crowd to greet them at Metropolitan Airport.

Some of the children who arrived in this country during the weekend are survivors of Friday's CSA Galaxy crash in which at least 200 youngsters and escorts died or are missing.

Eleven-year-old Thuy, a blind girl who survived the crash, was met in San Francisco by her new parents, Dorothy and Bob DeBolt.

"Thuy is a beautiful, beautiful little girl," said Mrs. DeBolt, whose family already includes 17 children from previous marriages and other adoptions.

"All our children are so absolutely beautiful, and everybody gets along marvelously," she said. "But it does get confusing at times. Once a girl called us and said, 'This is Jennifer. I'll be home soon.' I said, 'All right.' Then I realized we didn't have anyone in the family named Jennifer. Oh well, what's another?"

It's 'Smile Monday' Today In Tall City

Today is "Smile Monday" and this evening members of the Lee High School FHA Chapter will conduct the Muscular Dystrophy "Smile Project" in Midland.

The project theme will be "Put a Smile on the Face of a Dystrophy Child." The Future Homemakers will be selling smile candles for $1.50 each and proceeds will go to help the programs of the Muscular Dystrophy Association and send children with dystrophy to special summer camps.

All orders taken today will be delivered in about three or four weeks. Each official muscular dystrophy worker will be carrying an official smile brochure and smile project book.

Any person interested in donating money who is not contacted, may call the chapter sponsor, Mrs. Betty Ambrose, at 694-3882 or the chapter president, Lynn Gandy at 694-0041. To receive a candle donation must be $1.50 or more.

New Mexican Wins Telegrapher Title

Edward Hart Jr. of New Mexico tripped up fewer times than did reigning champion Shoupy Groves of Odessa to win the top telegrapher title at the recent Midland Amateur Radio Club's Swapfest.

Hart and Groves "were head-to-head at 35 words per minute (on the telegraph key) but Hart turned out with more perfect copy," reported George Parker, the club's public relations committee chairman.

Parker said approximately 375 amateur radio operators — hams — participated in the two-day Swapfest here in March. He said the hams were from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado, California and Utah.

Senate Committee Okays Water Plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee including three East Texas senators approved a water bond proposal today despite testimony that the money from the bonds could be used to move water across the state to West Texas.

The vote was 5-0. Several small town residents offered testimonials for the Texas Water Development Board, which wants to increase the maximum amount of development bonds from $400 million to $800 million.

The Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club and the Texas League of Women Voters opposed the proposed constitutional amendment.

Narcotic Drugs Stolen From Safe

Narcotic drugs valued at $150 were reported stolen from a drug store safe Sunday after the store's back door was knocked down by a motor vehicle.

Officers spotted the back door to Daniel Rexall Drug, 1409 N. Big Spring St., open about 9:30 a.m. Sunday and, on investigation, found that the door apparently had been forced open by backing what appeared to be a pickup into the door.

The drugs were taken from an unlocked safe in the office.

Three Wounded In Houston U Shooting Spree

HOUSTON (AP) — A faculty member and two students were wounded in a shooting in a University of Houston biology classroom today.

Alfred Shen, 25, a graduate student, was hospitalized with a chest wound. He was reported in critical condition at Hermann Hospital.

Guy Cameron, 32, a teacher, and Bruce H. Johnson, 27, a psychology major, were admitted to Ben Taub General Hospital. They were listed in fair condition.

Cameron had a wound to the right thigh, Johnson to the right shoulder. University officials said Shen had been unhappy with Cameron over receiving a failing grade.

Police investigators said Shen fired two shots in the classroom, "led, and turned the gun on himself when confronted by university security officers outside the building.

One Killed, Three Hurl Near Big Lake

BIG LAKE—One Big Lake man was killed and three others injured in a one-car rollover about 12 miles south of here about 8:40 p.m. Sunday.

James Craig Barnes, 20, died about 11 a.m. Sunday at Shannon Hospital in San Angelo.

Injured were Clark Settles, 19, Joe Reynolds, 19, and Thomas Erickson, 25, all of Big Lake. All were listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Big Lake Hospital.

Department of Public Safety officials said that the car, driven by Barnes, was traveling south on Hwy. 137 when it evidently ran off the road and Barnes lost control. The car then crossed over to the east side of the road, went through a fence, flipped over and landed on its top.

Iran Executes Two Hijackers

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Two Iraqis who hijacked an Iraqi airliner last month were executed by an Iranian firing squad today, the government announced.

It was believed to be the first time in the history of air piracy that the death penalty had been carried out.

The announcement said the two were Fuad Alghaitan and Tahia Narniel. They hijacked an Iraqi Airways jet on March 3 and forced it to land in Iran.

Incumbent, New Trustee Elected At Garden City

GARDEN CITY—An incumbent and a new contestant were among the winners in the Saturday school board elections here.

W. E. Bednar accumulated 97 votes for the school board trustee and Leon Halfmann, an incumbent, trailing with 79 votes, also won a place as school board trustee.

Hubert Frerich, an incumbent, received 47 votes. The three write-ins for the school board trustees included Fritz Hendricks, three votes; Ace Hoelscher, two votes; and Delbert Halfmann, one vote.

Legislature Faces Decisions On Finance, New Constitution

AUSTIN (AP) — Action on a new Texas Constitution and waiting for the dollars and cents of school finance and agency budgets to be sorted out are on this week's legislative agenda.

The deadline passed today for the House subcommittee on public school finance reform to finish its work but the panel has barely scratched the surface and will receive an extension.

One thing slowing down the subcommittee is its desire to see how big a state budget the House Appropriations Committee will draft. That will determine the amount of money "left on the table" for new state aid to public schools.

The appropriations committee listened into the weekend to recommendations from the House standing committees that reviewed budget requests in their balliwicks under Speaker Bill Clayton's new procedures.

A new Texas Constitution, virtually identical to the one that failed by three votes to pass the 1974 constitutional convention, goes before the House Tuesday. It already has passed the Senate, and House leaders want to keep it free of changes, which could lead to another failure to submit the document to the voters.

Clayton predicts two or more days of debate but hopes to finish House action by Thursday's weekend adjournment.

Monday afternoon's House calendar includes a bill of major importance to the more than 100,000 state government workers. It would set up a uniform system for their group life and health insurance policies. Each state agency now makes its own arrangement, and the state pays $15 a month toward each employee's premium.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss . . . but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation.

Last Days In White House A Time Of Uncertainty

EDITOR'S NOTE—With participants now free to talk, it is possible for the first time to know the high drama of the days which immediately preceded the resignation of former President Richard M. Nixon. This is the second installment of that story. The first appeared in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

WASHINGTON (AP) — By Thursday, Aug. 1, Richard Nixon had begun to consider resignation. Precisely when the dread prospect first surfaced in his thoughts that last summer is not known but clearly it was there Thursday, a rock uncovering in a lowering tide.

He spent most of the day alone in his EOB office while his grip on the wheel of government grew weaker. A meeting scheduled for 11 a.m. between the President and his Council of Economic Advisors was pushed back to 4 p.m., then to the next morning, then canceled. He never did meet again with the council on the acute problems of inflation.

Tapes Received
Sirica now had the first installment of tapes the Supreme Court had ordered the White House to release. The June 23 tapes were not among them. All that the special prosecutor knew was that White House logs showed the President had talked three times that day with Haldeman. He had no way of knowing the content. How long could Nixon hold them back?

On Thursday, Haig went to Vice President Ford and told him of the "new" evidence that could prove "catastrophic." He asked if Ford was prepared to "assume the presidency within a short time." Ford made no response.

Haig outlined the main possibilities as he saw them: Nixon could try to ride out impeachment and fight removal in the Senate or resign "sooner or later." Among the options being considered at the White House, he said, was the question of whether the President could pardon himself; whether he might pardon some of the Watergate defendants, pardon himself and then resign; or finally, whether to resign and receive a pardon from the next President. Ford said he needed time to think. Later, he testified, he told Haig he would make no recommendations on the options.

Stunned, Ford delayed telling his wife. Instead, he went through the charade of looking at furniture with her for the new official residence of the Vice President. That evening, he finally said, "Betty, the probability of my living in that house is very remote." And he told her why.

Speech Begun
That evening the President cruised the Potomac for two hours with his friend Bebe Rebozo on the Sequoia. The two men dined Haig told Raymond K. Price Jr. to begin work on a resignation speech for the President. Strictly on a contingency basis, he said.

other a law student, knew better. "There goes the ball game," thought David Eisenhower. Pat Nixon and Bebe Rebozo did not read the fatal transcripts at all.

Support Vowed
The President appeared to have rallied from the gloom of a man resigned to resigning. Over dinner in Aspen Lodge, he announced that he would fight on. Could they take it? he asked his family. He was assured they could; they would support him in whatever he decided.

He vacillated. In the 26th month of the cover-up, Richard Nixon walked back and forth before the wall of the inevitable searching for a crack.

Second Of Three Parts
"assume the presidency within a short time." Ford made no response.

Among the options being considered at the White House, he said, was the question of whether the President could pardon himself; whether he might pardon some of the Watergate defendants, pardon himself and then resign; or finally, whether to resign and receive a pardon from the next President. Ford said he needed time to think. Later, he testified, he told Haig he would make no recommendations on the options.

Plans Made
For seven hours the statement was discussed, analyzed, written and rewritten. The President, in Aspen Lodge, saw only Haig and Ziegler, and he saw them one at a time. The others worked in other cabins — Birch, Laurel and Hawthorne. Their ideas and projected paragraphs were carried to and from Aspen by Ziegler or Haig.

Most of the assistants, Price recalled, now favored resignation as an "inevitable reality." They thought the public uproar that would follow release of the tapes would force him out of office. But the President, they were told, wanted to be certain of the reaction before making a decision. He would be the last to face the "inevitable reality."

"Steve, when did the President first hear the June 23 tapes and who knows that he did?"

"May 5, 6, or 7. The grand jury and the prosecutors know it. I testified to that."

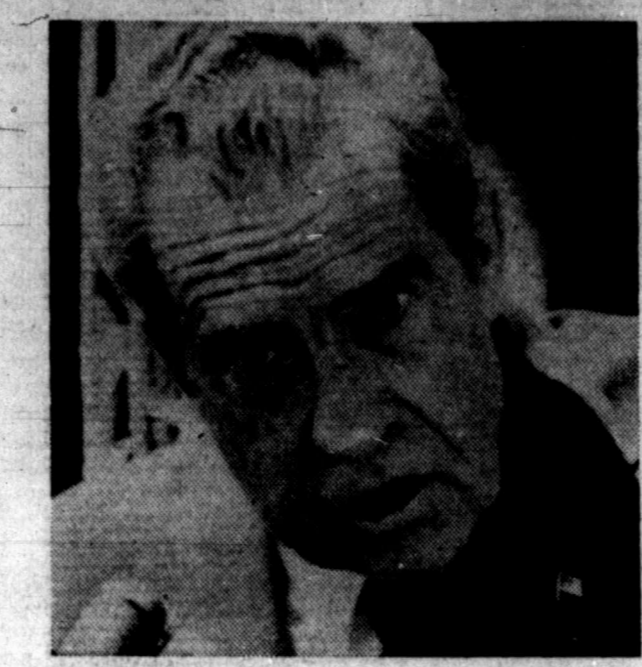

Richard Nixon concluded: "I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety, does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a President. I trust that as the constitutional process goes forward, this perspective will prevail."

'He Could Have Done So Much . . . But He Blew It' showed the tapes had been played. There were no trees or doorways left.

'I Really Don't Care If They Want To Prosecute Me'
and a half years before. This one snapped it.

Crisis Reviewed
"I've called this meeting," the President said in a clear, firm voice, "to discuss the issues foremost in the minds of the American people, the issues which affect every individual — inflation and the economy."

Before a sense of unreality completely enveloped the room, he quickly turned to "the other matter." For 40 minutes he reviewed his personal crisis in a business-like way, with that self-control that always amazed both friend and enemy.

Richard Nixon concluded: "I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety, does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a President. I trust that as the constitutional process goes forward, this perspective will prevail."

'He Could Have Done So Much . . . But He Blew It'

En route, he received a call from Haig on the reaction in Congress. Haig said that all ten Republican members of the Judiciary Committee who had supported him would now vote to impeach.

'I Really Don't Care If They Want To Prosecute Me'

and a half years before. This one snapped it. "He could have done so much that would have made a difference for 100 years but he blew it," said one presidential assistant.

Gen. Haig phoned Sen. Scott in the morning and said that the President had been "almost persuaded several times" to resign.

At 5 p.m., Richard Nixon received the three men in the Oval Office. There was no preliminary small talk, contrary to custom: The President put his feet up on his desk, an old habit, Scott thought, to conceal his tension.

At 1:30, William E. Timmons, Nixon's liaison man with Congress, called Scott, who was still keeping a diary. "He's very much up and down. At one point, he's talk-was the wall, and there was no way around, over or through it. If he did not resign, Richard Nixon would become the first president in history to be impeached, convicted and removed from office.

With that out of the way, he edged closer to the "inevitable reality." Some time between 7:15 and 7:30 he talked once more with Haig.

President: "Go ahead, Barry." Goldwater: "Well, Mr. President, this isn't pleasant but you want to know the situation and it isn't good..."

President: "How many would you say would be with me? A half dozen?" Goldwater: "More than that, maybe 16 or 18."

President: "Hugh, do you agree with that?" Scott: "Mr. President, I'd say maybe 15. It's grim..."

Assurance Given

Richard Nixon left the Oval Office. He walked the graceful connecting colonnade to the home of Presidents, rode the elevator to the third floor and entered the bright yellow and green Solarium. There, in the most private of the family rooms, with its sweeping view of the Capitol dome, the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and Jefferson Memorial, he told his family he would resign.

His two daughters wept. Pat Nixon, the trouper in a thousand campaign stops good and bad, held on. The spell was snapped by a knock on the door. There was Ollie Atkins, the White House photographer, present as ordered. The incongruity of his appearance in a moment of ultimate private pain brought some laughter.

Pictures Made

"Ollie," said Mrs. Nixon, "we're always glad to see you but I don't think we need any pictures now."

On May 27, 1972, Hunt, along with G. Gordon Liddy and former CIA security officer James W. McCord, headed a break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex where they placed bugs on the phones of DNC chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien.

O'Brien formerly had been a member of a public relations firm which on occasion served as a CIA front, according to Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn.

Council To Eye Housing Problems

Midland city councilmen Tuesday will give their attention to problems concerning the city's application for more than $4 million available through the Housing and Community Development Act.

The council will consider a revision to its application under guidelines of the housing assistance portion of the act because of recent developments which killed a site recommendation for a low-income housing project for the elderly and handicapped.

The council had used the Department of Housing and Urban Development turnkey project, suggested for construction at the southeast corner of Scharbauer Drive and Big Spring Street, by the Midland Housing Authority for its new construction under the housing assistance guidelines of the community development program.

Last week it was learned the proposed site was not available for sale. Officials from the HUD area office have told the housing authority it may advertise for new sites or choose one of the previously advertised sites for the project.

The housing authority has slated a Wednesday session at city hall to decide its next move in the turnkey housing project.

Harry Clark said today he favors re-advertising for new site locations and construction proposals. Clark said, "It is in my opinion out of the question to abandon the project at this time."

The HUD office had previously listed abandoning the project as one of the options open to the Midland authority.

The revision to the city's application for community development funds has become necessary since the site choice previously made by the authority is no longer available.

Tuesday, the council will take action on a resolution to purchase asphalt and rock for the summer street seal coating program. The city has estimated the costs of the summer street program to be approximately $205,000 for materials. The materials will be paid for out of the city's general fund.

The council will also consider a resolution to award a bid for security fencing at Midland Regional Air Terminal estimated to cost approximately $75,000.

IN THE AIR — Terry Lambdin, in the air, demonstrates the jump kick of TaeKwon-Do while Lance Cunningham demonstrates the basic obverse punch. Beginner and Advance classes in TaeKwon-Do will be taught at Midland College on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:30 and 8:30 respectively. Call Gay Price at Midland College, 684-7851.

TaeKwon-Do Can Be Part Of Full Life

"The feeling of being hurried is not usually the result of living a full life and having no time. It is, on the contrary, born of a vague fear that we are wasting life. When we do not do the one thing we ought to do, we have no time for anything else — we are the busiest people in the world." Eric Hoffer's words apply to everyone at sometime.

When we don't do what we should, our conscience bothers us. To save it we pretend to be busy. We become busy doing nothing. Students call this "pencil sharpening." Most of us call it procrastination.

The adage that a busy life is a happy life is true only of lives busy with meaningful activity. Unfortunately most of us spend much of our time providing a living in an occupation that is not genuinely meaningful to us. We find what we do to "make a living" a drudgery instead of a personal satisfaction. Few of us would continue doing what we do if we had enough money to do whatever we chose. But what of free time to do as we wish? Do you feel you have no time to call your own?

Often the difference between having and not having time is careful management. The tired worker or business man coming home to snap open a beer or stir a highball as he collapses into his easy chair has become an American archetype.

We switch ourselves off and the tv on. We find ourselves sitting mindlessly before the tube, only to realize that what we are watching is stupid and frivolously wasteful of our time. We must stop to examine our day to day particular time. And more importantly, we must consider the value of an activity in relation to the time expended on it. An hour of our lives passes just as surely whether we squander it or invest it wisely.

"The remarkable thing is that it is the crowded life that is most easily remembered. A life full of turns, achievements, disappointments, surprises, and other crises is a life full of landmarks. The empty life has even its few details blurred, and cannot be remembered with certainty," Hoffer said.

In review we discover our lives consist less in the passage of a certain amount of time, but in recollection of memorable events and activities.

Many residents have discovered learning TaeKwon-Do a way to exchange unused time for worthwhile achievement. TaeKwon-Do is an excellent means of developing physical fitness while learning the world's most effective form of unarmed self-defense. A few hours spent in the practice of this art strengthens and slenderness the body while teaching the mind and body to work together and you will result in a more healthy effective body. Hopefully, you will never need to defend yourself or your loved ones, but the knowledge that you could, however, is comforting.

Why not spend a little time to reflect on the way you spend your spare time. Consider a gift of the TaeKwon-Do lessons to yourself, a friend or loved one. For further information phone Terry Lambdin 682-1962 or 694-7590.

Beginner and Advance classes in TaeKwon-Do will be taught at Midland College on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. respectively. Call Gay Price at Midland College about these, 684-7851.

Busing Protesters Poke, Grab, Jostle Senator Kennedy

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — More than 200 antibusing demonstrators poked, grabbed at and jostled Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, forcing police to form a protective flying wedge around him.

One woman poked at him repeatedly Sunday with the point of a stick bearing a small American flag. A man grabbed him by the leg but was pulled away by police.

Although he was not injured in the Sunday incident, his aides canceled a speech set for later in the day in Sharon when the demonstrators showed up there too. The cancellation came after demonstrators refused an offer of a meeting with Kennedy if they would agree to allow him to make a speech without disruption.

Kennedy has refused to condemn busing for racial balance in schools as busing opponents have demanded.

The Massachusetts Democrat made a four-block trip on foot to a subway Sunday when he was unable to enter any of his aide's cars at a junior high school in this Boston suburb. His own car's tires had been deflated, and some of the demonstrators placed their children in its path.

It was the most violent demonstration against Kennedy, a frequent target of antibusing protesters, since a September incident when he was jeered off a stage and hit by a tomato.

Boston schools have been disrupted by sporadic violence since the integration program began last fall, and National Guardsmen were called in to maintain order for a time. A school boycott continues in South Boston, a working-class Irish neighborhood that has been the center of the protest.

Egyptian Says Israeli-Bound Cargo May Go Through Suez

NEW YORK (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt says Israeli-bound cargo may be allowed to pass through the Suez Canal when it is reopened in June but Israeli ships will be barred, according to Time Magazine.

He said that because the Constantinople treaty of 1888 prohibits use of the canal by countries in a state of belligerency with Egypt, "Even if the Israelis ask for their cargoes to pass through in other flagships we have the full legal right to prevent it." Time quoted Sadat as saying in an interview in Cairo.

Warehouse Fire Interrupts Train Service In East

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Train service between New York and Washington was halted for more than four hours Sunday night and early today when a warehouse fire forced the Penn Central Railroad to turn off its power.

At least seven trains were stopped at various points along the Washington-New York route until service was restored shortly before 2 a.m. today.

A fire in roughly the same area earlier this year halted train service for more than six hours.

An undetermined number of passengers were bused around Philadelphia where the fire burned out of control near the Penn Central's main north-south corridor at the North Philadelphia station.

Watch-Snake Gets Results

DALLAS (AP) — A new security system implemented by Dallas service station owner Willie Jackson has played a key role in cutting down burglaries which once averaged two per month.

The new system is Tony, the station's new "watch-snake."

"I think most people are afraid of snakes and this is why I bought Tony from a local pet shop to ease our burglary problems," said Jackson of the 6-foot long, 60-pound baby boa constrictor. Jackson said he got the idea of using a boa constrictor after other security measures failed.

GM President Says Mandatory Fuel Economy Standards Are Unnecessary

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of General Motors Corp. says proposed mandatory fuel economy standards are unnecessary at best.

At their worst, said Elliott M. Estes, they could have the opposite effect of what their supporters want.

"Most fundamental of all," Estes said, "the imposition of mandatory fuel economy minimums would be another chip out of all Americans' freedom of choice."

Estes urged Texas automobile dealers Sunday to use their influence to prevent Congress from adopting such proposals.

School Trustees To Induce Sparks At Tuesday Meet

Canvassing election results and swearing in newly-elected board member Don Sparks will headline Tuesday's meeting of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees.

Scheduled to meet at 1:30 p.m. in the district's administrative offices, trustees also will take action on out-of-district transfers and hear a report on the schools' physical education programs.

They will, in addition, award bids for the replacement of the San Jacinto Junior High gym floor, sanding the Midland High gym floor, installing carpet in the aisles of the MHS auditorium, telescope for the planetarium, teaching supplies, cafeteria paper goods and portable public address system.

Ford May Make European Visit As Early As May

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Ford may go to Europe as early as next month to join leaders of the Western alliance in proclaiming solidarity, a high White House official says.

The official told a reporter Sunday night that May has been proposed for a meeting of heads of government of all the member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at which a unity statement would be issued.

However, the official said such a meeting might be delayed a month or so to coincide with an expected East-West summit at which many of the most powerful countries of Eastern and Western Europe and North America would sign a new European security treaty.

There has been talk of such a session to be held in Helsinki around June 30.

Brennan's Serves Newspaper Group In Spite Of Fire

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was "Breakfast at Brennan's" as usual Sunday for 60 editors and publishers of the Newhouse Newspapers, although the famed Brennan's restaurant was closed by fire.

Owen Brennan Jr. honored the dinner reservations of publishers and editors, in town for the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, at his Garden District home.

His famed French Quarter restaurant, which sometimes books guests 10 years in advance, had been heavily damaged by fire Thursday night.

But red-vested waiters served a brunch oyster soup, eggs sardou and bananas foster in Brennan's dining room and patio as a jazz band played.

Regional Handgun Ban Proposed By Attorney General

WASHINGTON (AP) — Law Enforcement Executives Narcotics Conference. "In areas where the violent crime rate had reached the critical level, this proposal would ban the possession of handguns outside the home or place of business," Levi said. It would apply to all handguns, not only the cheap weapons known as "Saturday night specials," he added.

Levi suggested a heavy tax on "Saturday night specials" to reduce their availability, but said other controls are needed to eliminate the threat from more expensive handguns.

The proposal triggered by rising crime rates would ban the sale or transfer of handguns or handgun ammunition in the affected areas and also would prohibit importing handguns into the metropolitan area, except in certain circumstances in which guns are imported for the use of law enforcement.

The proposal would allow handguns to be used at target shooting clubs if they were kept in secure arsenals at the clubs, he said.

Three-Term Hawaii Governor Dies

HONOLULU (AP) — John A. Burns, 66, three-term governor of Hawaii, died Saturday, less than four months after completing his third term. Burns aligned himself with the post-war political awakening of Hawaii's non-Caucasians and succeeded in office by his Lt. Gov. George R. Ariyoshi, first governor of Japanese ancestry in U.S. history.

Specialist Says Some Adopting Orphans To Be Unsuitable Parents

MIAMI (AP) — As Americans rush to adopt Vietnamese orphans, a Miami adoption specialist warns that some people are reacting to stories of young casualties of the Vietnam war and may not make suitable parents.

"This is a panic thing — I've seen it too often," said March Dickens, director of the Miami office of the Children's Home Society of Florida.

"I'd say that 70 per cent of the people who have applied for these children are not equipped to bring them up. There's a romance in this business of taking an overseas child."

Miami psychologist Dr. Edith Lord said the Vietnam stories have triggered a "come into my home and let me mother you" instinct among Americans.

She said that many Americans are prompted by compassion and love to seek a Vietnamese child but others are driven by guilt, glamor and emotional problems.

"The press sort of played up the fact that our going to Vietnam to support a civil war was immoral, if not illegal," Dr. Lord said.

Couple Arrives In Houston With Vietnamese Orphan

HOUSTON (AP) — The first Vietnamese orphan to arrive in the Houston area was with his proud adopted parents today.

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Olson of Houston arrived from Chicago Sunday with Do The Phiet, 7.

Meanwhile, Texas International Airlines has offered to provide transportation and escorts for the orphans from the West Coast to southwestern states.

A crowd of family friends and newsmen greeted the Orsons at Houston International Airport as they arrived with their new son.

"We need to take him home," Mrs. Olson smiled.

She was trailed by Olson, who carried the boy in his arms.

"I feel wonderful," said Olson, an assistant professor of speech at the University of Houston. "He feels good."

Another Houston couple had planned to pick up their 3-month-old adopted daughter in Chicago Sunday. However, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Woodall were informed the infant had developed a fever en route and had to be taken off the plane at Guam.

Woodall said the baby, Nguyen Anh Thu, would remain in Guam until she has recovered. He said that could be two days or more.

Frank Lorenzo, Texas International president, made the airlines offer in a telegram to Friends of All Children, a Boulder, Colo., agency coordinating the adoption of the children.

He said the airlines would provide a twin-engine, 24 passenger jet with airline employees for escorts to bring orphans to "some central point in Texas."

4,650 See Brewers Outhomer Cubs In 12-6 Win

BY TED BATTLES
 If you measure baseball entertainment by the number of balls that sail over the fence, Sunday's Milwaukee Brewers-Chicago Cubs exhibition game was a success. The Brewers outhomered their National League rivals 4-2 to win 12-6 before a record 4,650 fans who came from the far corners of the Permian Basin and beyond to leave cars parked as far as the eye could see. Although home run king Hank Aaron declined to accept Ernie Banks' challenge for a home run derby, they got to see plenty of the 41-year-old slugger, when the club agreed to use the Designated Hitter for the game. Hank went 0-for-4 and the closest he came to hitting one fair out of the park came in the fifth when he lofted a fly ball to center that brought an expectant, but premature, roar from the crowd. Actually, the game's slugging star turned out to be Mike Hegan, who homered to center in the fifth with one on and then pulled a solo job over the right field fence in the seventh. After Mike doubled to lead off the ninth, George Scott, whose place Hegan had taken at first in the third, observed in the press box, "Hey, the way he's hitting, we out oughta both be in the lineup at the same time. Can Mike catch?" Centerfielder Bob Cullenio opened the game with a towering homer over the fence to the right of the scoreboard in left and when John Briggs, the next batter, dropped a ground-rule double on to the human warning track that bordered the outfield, it looked like a home run or no-count contest. Catcher Darrell Porter opened the second with a homer to Rick Monday singled and Jerry Morales walked to bring up one-time Midland Cub hero Pete LaCock. His response to the boisterous welcome home was a slicing line single to left-center that scored one run and set up another to score on Manny Trillo's sacrifice fly.

Hegan's two-run boundary belt vaulted Milwaukee back into a 5-2 lead in the fifth, but a walk and Madlock's throwing error to Vic Harris, Bill Madlock's first of three hits and Rick Monday's wrong-field homer to left tied it off Billy Champion, who went seven innings and eventually was rewarded with his second spring win. The Brewers' two runs in the sixth were enough to win it, but they sacked it away with three in the eighth. A leadoff double by Sixto Lezcano, Pete Garcia's single and a walk to Tim Johnson loaded the bases against reliever Oscar Zamora.

Gorman Thomas and Rob Ellis hit sacrifice flies for two runs and Madlock's throwing error from third let in another. Madlock, who had been robbed in the second and third on long clouts to center, finally put one where nobody could catch it in the seventh for Chicago's final run. Hegan and Porter had three hits each for Milwaukee while Madlock had three for the Cubs. LaCock, Gene Hiser, Monday and catcher Steve Swisher had two hits each for Chicago. LaCock broke into the lineup as a regular when first baseman

Andre Thornton suffered a broken arm last week and the 23-year-old son of tv personality Pete Marshall is making the most of it. Pete shows a .320 average for the spring while Madlock finished the Cactus League schedule with a .329 mark.

It Was Great!

The 1975 baseball season got off to a great start here Sunday afternoon, when the Chicago Cubs met the Milwaukee Brewers in the final pre-season game for both major league clubs before an overflow crowd of almost 5,000 fans at Midland Cubs Stadium.

It was the first major league exhibition baseball game ever played here... and the fans loved it. Let's bring them back next spring for more exciting major league ball.

Midland and Midlanders were delighted to be hosts to the players of these two great teams on this particular occasion, as well as being proud of the fact that the Cubs and the Brewers had accepted the invitation extended by the Sports Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce to play an exhibition game here.

It was a tremendous success from Midland's standpoint, and it is hoped that the visiting players enjoyed being in West Texas, where the weather cooperated wonderfully well.

While it was unfortunate for the Cubs that heavy snows in the Chicago area in recent days made it necessary to delay for a couple of days their regular season opener scheduled for Tuesday, it was fortunate for Midland that this caused the Cubs to stay over in Midland for an extra day.

This was fine for Midlanders, a great group of dedicated baseball fans, giving them a chance to entertain the visitors and to get better acquainted with them.

This puts everything in order for the arrival of the Midland Cubs later this week, and for their season opener Friday night at Cubs Stadium. Better make your plans now to be on hand for the start of what promises to be another great baseball season in the Tall City.

Salute To Leaders

The recent election of Clarence Scharbauer Jr. of Midland as president of the 75,000-member American Quarter Horse Association, brings to mind that he is the third Midlander named this year to head national and international organizations.

Frank Thompson is president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors, and Ed Runyan heads the Society of Petroleum Engineers, an international group.

Congratulations certainly are in order for these three busy Midlanders who are taking time out from their own business affairs to serve others.

Japan Develops Clearer Foreign Policy

TOKYO — Japan opened an embassy in Hanoi last week while hundreds of thousands of pitiful, panic-stricken refugees fled from North Vietnamese troops assaulting South Vietnam. This is the same Japan which backed U.S. actions in the Vietnamese war, including the heavy bombing of Hanoi. But Japanese officials see no inconsistency in any of this.

Since World War II, Japan has tried to play a "nice guy" role in its diplomacy, particularly in Southeast Asia where its fierce military presence before and during that war was often imperial and cruel. For one generation, now, Japan's foreign policy in this tumultuous region was usually low-profile and often passive.

Many thinkers here in and out of government now believe Japan is being forced to develop a clearer foreign policy, that being all-serving "friend" to the world isn't enough. For Japan's aggressive economic policy in Southeast Asia, in effect, has become her foreign policy.

This was dramatically illustrated in January, 1974, when then-Prime Minister Tanaka visited five Asian nations and was greeted by violent protest demonstrations in Thailand and Indonesia. Japan was clearly unpopular, not just from memories of World War II but, more importantly, because of its relentless and growing economic presence in Southeast Asia.

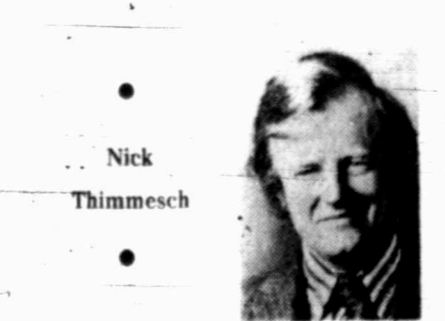

Outwardly, Japan seems to be the prisoner of the great military powers which surround her — the United States, the Soviet Union and China. With only a modest Self-Defense Force, having renounced the development of nuclear weapons or a military buildup, Japan is dependent on the U.S. nuclear umhorseman and business and civic leader; has been a member of the Quarter Horse Association's board of directors for a number of years, and has served on its executive committee the last four years.

The native Midlander, well-qualified for the presidency and intensely interested in the association, will serve well the organization which has honored him.

Likewise, Thompson and Runyan are well and favorably known in their respective professions and both will lead their groups through a year of outstanding achievements. They also are active in civic and business affairs in the Tall City.

Fellow Midlanders salute Clarence Scharbauer Jr., Frank Thompson and Ed Runyan, of whom they are proud, while at the same time wishing them well in their respective positions of leadership.

brella and military might for her protection. Only 30-some years ago, the Japanese Empire was spread from Manchuria through eastern China, down through Indochina and Burma, spanning the Dutch East Indies and holding an eastern line in the Marshalls and Gilbert Islands. China groaned under Japanese occupation; the Soviet Union feared her, and the United States took a pasting at Pearl Harbor.

All that seems incredible, even ridiculous, considering Japan today. Indeed, in the postwar period and even now, Japan had to fear North Korea, which it had easily colonized as far back as 1910, and was grateful that the United States carried the burden of the anti-Communist role in this part of the world.

Japan, thus relieved of the responsibility of security, and paying only 7 per cent of its GNP for defense, poured its energy into economic development and influence.

Then came the great Nixon "shock," the U.S. rapprochement with Communist China. Japan reacted by quickly normalizing its own relations with Peking (Sept. 1972). Japanese trade with both China and the Soviet Union increased. Peace treaties with both Communist WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is usually one of the first on his feet to oppose giving away U.S. military secrets. Yet two years ago, he helped the French obtain a highly classified, American-made component for a jet engine.

The senator was won over by French officials who courted him assiduously at the Paris Air Show in May 1973. He responded by cabling the White House from Paris, urging that the sensitive component be shared with the French.

The story is told in State Department cables, which we now have obtained. What the French wanted was a "core element" that General Electric had developed for jet engines. The project had been financed from Pentagon funds for the B-1 bomber.

The French, seeking to revive the European aircraft industry, wanted to join forces with GE to adapt the new engine to commercial use. However, the White House rejected GE's application for an export license on several grounds. Most importantly, the engine was declared to be of strategic importance to the United States.

Still the French persisted. The late President Pompidou took the matter up personally with President Nixon in the summer of 1972, competent sources report.

The following year, the French worked on Goldwater when he showed up at the Paris Air Show. An official named Henri Ziegler, according to the State Department cables, "welcomed Senator Goldwater to the air show" and "arranged flight in A-300 airbus."

The president of a French aircraft company was "host at stag luncheon in senator's honor on June 1." The same day, the secretary-general of the air show, Jacques Maillot, "called on senator powers remain a problem. Japan signed one with the Taiwan government in 1952 which Peking doesn't recognize. Territorial issues created by a Soviet "grab" after World War II have prevented Japan from winding that one up.

Japan today is pragmatic. So it reassesses its view of the Middle East, plans to make investments which are needed there so that Japan will always get plenty of oil. While closely tied to the United States, Japan intends to play a peacemaker role in Cambodia and in Hanoi. Japan advised South Vietnam's President Thieu, whose government Japan has helped, that it was establishing diplomatic relations with Hanoi, and Thieu didn't protest. Japan's foreign ministry pushes the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party to ratify the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, thus thwarting leftists who see a future for themselves in Japan, and rightists who demand the "option" to develop nuclear arms.

Japan recognizes that U.S. influence in Asia was greatly weakened by the Paris agreements of 1973 and by the actions of the North Vietnamese. Japan can live with Communist regimes in Indochina, if we can't. Japan is also working to change its reputation as economic "aggressor" in Asia by greatly increasing its foreign aid in the region and by sending economic experts to developing Asian nations to conduct joint studies with locals. There is still opposition. Research staffers from Japan's Institute of Developing Economies were denied visas by India and it had the same experience with Malaysia.

Japanese intellectuals argue that Japanese business interests have been too "oblivious" of "international morals" at embassy." The next day, Ziegler took over again as Goldwater's "official host at luncheon."

But the crowning touch came when the French Air Force chief, Gen. Claude Grigault, arranged for Goldwater to pilot a Mirage-3 jet fighter.

This is the senator's favorite sport. He prides himself on having flown every plane made in the United States. "Whenever there's a new plane around," he told us, "I want to fly it."

According to the cables, a Bell helicopter whisked Goldwater to Bretigny where, with a copilot named Capt. Charin, the senator flew the Mirage-3.

Sometime during the hectic courtship of Goldwater, the French took him aside and explained their great desire for the GE engine component. Goldwater obligingly cabled President Nixon's notorious Mr. Fix-it, Peter Flanigan, at the White House on June 1:

"Suggest you contact the President immediately, urging approval of the General Electric... agreement," wired Goldwater. "This will be most advantageous to our aircraft industry but, more importantly, advantageous to the relations between France and the U.S. It will have absolutely no harm on our engine industry. In fact, in my opinion, it will help it, and it needs help. Please follow through immediately."

Flanigan's reply was on the wires in Southeast Asia, have failed to make their employees integrate with local society and take too much profit out of these countries. Too often, one critic claimed, Japanese diplomacy "pursued the policy of digging up 'pro-Japanese' groups and placing them in power in order that Japan might gain freedom of action." The Japanese call this "Nanshin" or "Southward drive."

Historically, according to Mizuo Kuroda, a top official in the ministry of foreign affairs, Japan's foreign policy thinkers were in two schools — the "Asianists," emotional and nationalistic, and the "Westernists," internationalist and rationalistic.

The former got Japan into its disastrous war; the latter have ruled Japan since 1945. Now it seems there is an opportunity for a blend of the two. Japan can serve as an honest bridge between the West (where it has large economic status) and the less-developed Asian nations (where it has blood, language and cultural ties).

DEFENSE IN DEPTH— United States Will Have To Fill Gaps

By L. EDGAR PRINA Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Not so long ago, as recently as the 1930s, it was a "color-me-pink" world, with almost a quarter of the globe part of the sprawling British empire.

But two world wars within less than 25 years took a frightful toll of Britain's manpower and treasure and this, followed by the age of decolonization, changed the map and its hues.

Although Britain was one of the earliest members of the exclusive nuclear weapons club, it has been a second-rank power for more than two decades. Political and economic realities have led it to shift its focus from the global to the continental.

Britain has steadily withdrawn from its overseas positions of influence and tied itself more and more to Western Europe. While a referendum will soon be held to decide whether it will remain in the European Common Market, the present Labor government and the opposition Conservative Party favor the association.

Britain, of course, has been a key member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), which has helped keep the peace in Europe for more than a quarter-century. It is particularly distressing, therefore, to the United States and the other NATO countries to contemplate Prime Minister Harold Wilson's decision to cut sharply Britain's defense expenditures, reduce its military personnel by 12 per cent and withdraw forces from the increasingly critical Mediterranean area and its few remaining bases in the Indian Ocean.

As outlined in its recently published Defense White Paper, Britain will cut back its armed forces by 38,000 men; quit Singapore, Gan (an island staging post in the Indian Ocean), Mauritius and Malta; and phase down its strength on Cyprus and the Omani island of Masirah in the Persian Gulf.

In addition, Britain will no longer commit any naval forces to the Mediterranean in support of NATO after 1976. It will reduce its reinforcement capabilities for both the northern and southern flanks of the alliance and even pare its naval strength in the eastern Atlantic and English Channel areas.

All this is being done in an effort to "save" $11.3 billion over the next 10 years and reduce defense spending from 5.5 per cent of its gross national product to 4.5 per cent.

While London acknowledged that its decision had caused NATO "considerable disquiet," its explanation ignores the continuing buildup of Soviet military power and the disarray in the alliance's southern flank, where Greece and Turkey are acting more like enemies than allies, and Portugal is in the grip of a new radical-left government.

If the free world is to maintain even its present precarious strength in the Mediterranean and meet the growing Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean, it is clear the United States will have to fill the gaps.

This makes all the more important the planned expansion of the U.S. naval facility on Diego Garcia and American use of the airstrip on Masirah. But with Congress in its current antidefense mood, these plans might have to be scrapped.

There is irony in this measure of unilateral disarmament by London, taken before any NATO agreement with the Communist Warsaw Pact has been reached. It is that Britain's harvest of North Sea oil will, within five years, make it a petroleum exporter and restore its economic vitality.

One can only hope that Wilson's action isn't contagious in the NATO community, including the United States.

Law Is Clear

To The Editor: I saw your editorial about the Camp Fire Girls' candy tax suit and I think my office may have misled the people about the law and this department's role in this case.

My assistant should not have said that candy is "considered a luxury" and is therefore taxable. The fact is that candy—the very word—is specifically made taxable by name in the sales tax statute.

Neither I nor any other comptroller has any discretionary authority when the statute is that specific.

Cookies, on the other hand, are not mentioned in the law and therefore have been considered nontaxable because they are a combination of the foodstuffs spelled out as being nontaxable.

Just for the record in this case I might point out that this Camp Fire Girls case originally came up on August 7, 1974, when Robert S. Calvert was still comptroller and, bound by the statute I mentioned above, he ruled that the candy was taxable. Our decision in January which triggered the suit was simply a rehearing of the original case.

Incidentally, the Fort Worth Council of the Camp Fire Girls which filed the suit is the only council in this state, that has not collected and remitted sales tax for the sale of candy. All other councils have continuously complied with the law.

I regret that my assistant did not make these facts clear at the time because I appreciate the interest you take in our work.

Our Freedom Preserved

To The Editor: Congratulations to our city council and mayor, who refused to sell our freedom for a few pieces of silver.

May each of us be reminded that the so called "Federal Money" to be allocated to Midland is indeed taxpayer's money less great administrative costs.

It is my opinion that the 68,000 Midland residents have not been cheated, but that we should stand tall and united behind our councilmen and mayor. Their decision to turn down the money on HUD terms was a decision not to be blackmailed out of our policy-making rights.

Debate Expected To Intensify Over More Aid To South Vietnamese

WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate over further aid to South Vietnam is expected to intensify this week as Congress faces renewed pressures to vote more money for a country whose military position deteriorated dramatically during the 10-day congressional recess.

Before the recess, the Democratic majorities in the House and Senate went on record against further U.S. funds for South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Setbacks Suffered

Since then, both countries have suffered major setbacks against advancing Communist-led troops. Both South Vietnam President Thieu and Tran Kim Phuong, the South Vietnamese ambassador to the United States, have said Congress will be responsible for the country's fall if more funds are not approved.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, speaking Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," cannot be blamed for the performance of South Vietnamese troops. But he continued: "In addition, there are many other factors that contributed to this partial collapse, and undoubtedly amongst those factors is a decline of aid of approximately 70 per cent."

Democrats In Congress Are Pushing Proposals For Fighting Recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress comes back into session after its 10-day Easter recess with the majority Democrats pushing a variety of proposals to combat the recession.

Most of these proposals involve increased federal spending and will put the legislators in direct conflict with President Ford.

In signing the $24.8 billion tax-cut bill passed just before the recess began, the President declared he had drawn the line against any additional spending plans that would send the budget deficit beyond the $60 billion already estimated for the next fiscal year.

avoided placing all the responsibility on Congress for failing to approve more aid.

Schlesinger said Congress cannot be blamed for the performance of South Vietnamese troops. But he continued: "In addition, there are many other factors that contributed to this partial collapse, and undoubtedly amongst those factors is a decline of aid of approximately 70 per cent."

It is expected to be passed later in the week. The House, meanwhile, will consider bills on programs for the elderly.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to act soon on a $5.9-billion measure already passed by the House containing funds for public service jobs and public works projects. The bill is strongly opposed by the administration.

The Senate Banking Committee will begin Wednesday to write its version of legislation to spur the housing industry.

The House has passed a $1.3-billion measure in this field. Again, the administration is against the proposals.

The House Ways and Means Committee will resume its work Wednesday on an energy bill.

Russians Say Cosmonauts 'Feeling Well' After Space Flight Is Aborted

MOSCOW (AP) — Two cosmonauts who brought their Soyuz spacecraft back to earth after it failed to go into orbit are "feeling well," the Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

Tass blamed the failure of the space flight Saturday on the third-stage rocket which the announcement said went off course. An American expert on the Soviet space program said it was the first case of a boost-

Bentzen Says South Vietnam Leaders, Not U.S. On Trial In Asian Situation

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It is not the United States but the leadership of South Vietnam that is "on trial" in the current Southeast Asia crisis, Sen. Lloyd Bentzen, D-Tex., said Sunday night.

He said those who accuse this country of not living up to its commitments in South Vietnam "are rendering a disservice to our country and are lending credibility to those who are trying to sever our relations with our allies."

Speaking at the annual awards dinner of the Hebrew Academy of Kansas City, Bentzen said there is no way "we can give them (South Vietnam) the will to fight."

Bentzen, one of five announced candidates for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, accused South Vietnamese soldiers of abandoning billions of dollars worth of U.S.-supplied military equipment on the battlefield. He said there is no guarantee future U.S. aid would not be wasted in the same manner.

Most of Bentzen's remarks centered on America's energy needs and the mutual need for a strong military posture by the United States and Israel.

South ruffed the third spade, drew two high trumps and led a low trump to dummy. Then he lost the diamond finesse to the king.

Back came a diamond to the ace, and South cashed the king of clubs and tried the club finesse in desperation. East took the queen of clubs and a diamond trick, collecting 200 points.

North shook his head dolefully. "If you played the hand double-dummy," he suggested, "you could lose another trick."

Should Make Contract — After drawing two trumps, South should cash the king and ace of clubs and throw a diamond on the jack of clubs. Since the queen of clubs has dropped, the contract is now assured.

If the queen of clubs hasn't dropped, an opponent will win the third club. If West wins (which means that the club finesse would have worked), he must return a diamond up the ace-queen. (A club return would let dummy ruff while South discarded the queen of diamonds.)

If East can win the third club, South still has the diamond finesse as his last try for the game.

The advantage of refusing the club finesse is that South makes the contract not only whenever West has the queen of clubs but also when East has the doubleton queen.

George Ball, undersecretary of State in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, said Sunday the situation in South Vietnam is "irredeemable" and that it would be "a great mistake to try to interfere any more in that unhappy country."

Ball, speaking on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said: "It seems to me when you have a collapse of a regime which was never very solid, which was always rather a house of cards, that the collapse is likely to continue until there has been a change of government, until, in effect, the hegemony of Hanoi has been asserted over the South."

"I think this is going to happen and I don't think there is anything we can do about it or should try to do about it."

Democratic leaders contend, however, that there are emergency needs in the fields of housing, jobs, public works, health and education and programs for the elderly. They insist they will push ahead with legislation to meet these needs.

In some cases, the Democrats are talking about shifts in the Ford budget which will not necessarily mean boosts in the over-all spending total.

The President and Congress also may clash on foreign policy, particularly aid for Southeast Asia.

Before the recess the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved $82.5 million in additional military assistance for Cambodia. Ford has asked $222 million.

Foreign Policy Address — But Senate leaders now indicate this measure may not be brought up for debate in view of the crumbling government position in Cambodia.

Neither the Senate nor the House has shown any willingness to go along with the $300 million in new aid that the President has asked for South Vietnam.

Ford has arranged to make a major foreign policy address to Congress Thursday when he is expected to announce the administration's view of the Indochina situation.

Both branches have comparatively light floor schedules for the first post-recess week.

Mart Prices Decline; Last Week's Pattern Maintained

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks declined broadly today in a pattern that closely resembled the gradual but steady downturn of all of last week.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 4.07 at 743.19 after a 23-point drop last week. Losers held a 5-2 edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said concern over the interest rate outlook was continuing to weigh on the market after recent increases in bond market rates and signs of a leveling off in the bank prime lending rate.

Travelers Corp., among the volume leaders on the NYSE, slipped 1/4 to 2 1/2 in a 107,100-share block trade.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index dropped 26 to 78.75.

Oil Prices Decline; Last Week's Pattern Maintained

Pasco jumped 3 1/2 to 22 1/2 in active trading. The company said Friday it had received a verbal offer of $220 million in cash for its Wyoming oil producing properties.

Standard Oil of Indiana, which identified itself this morning as the maker of the offer, was down 3/4 at 37 1/2.

And Studebaker-Worthington, 55 per cent owner of Pasco, showed a 2 1/2 advance to 28 1/2.

Profit taking hit some of the glamor issues which had been strong late last week. Walt Disney Productions, for example, was down 1 at 49 1/2, and Fairchild Camera & Instrument lost 1/4 to 39 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common shares declined 27 to 42.71.

International Banknote, the Amex's most active issue, dropped 1/2 to 11-16.

'Dusters' Abound Off Florida Coast

By BILL CRIDER
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The final word isn't in but some oilmen already see the billion dollar search for oil off Florida's Gulf Coast as a gigantic flop.

Ten dry holes that drillers call "dusters" threaten to turn much of Florida's offshore area into a splendid tax writeoff instead of an oil and gas bonanza.

It's a severe come-down for the Mississippi, Alabama and Florida offshore area that brought the federal government $1.49 billion in an oil lease sale held in New Orleans on Dec. 20, 1973.

Drillers may hit pay yet, but there's no sign of the anticipated rich fields that led to such high bids — though they're still bringing in producers in other parts of the Gulf of Mexico.

Called the MAFLA Frontier, the three-state coastal area was virgin territory for drillers.

The output was counted on to help ease the fuel pinch a few years hence, after oilmen had time to sink about 1,000 wells, raise 300 or 400 control platforms, lay a few hundred miles of undersea pipeline.

Instead, the final result may be one of those impressive losses that big oil companies would rather talk about than the huge profits which cost them the depletion allowance.

The sale was held over the opposition of environmentalists who feared inevitable pollution. Dusters could give them the victory that eluded them in federal courts.

Opened to drillers a year ago, the MAFLA was reputed to cover 3.2 billion barrels of oil and 3.9 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

The biggest believer was a combine formed by Exxon Co. USA, Mobil Oil Corp. and Champlin Oil Co. It paid a record $212 million for an oil lease on three square miles of seabottom on the Destin anticline.

There, 40 miles southeast of the fishing port of Destin, far beyond the gaze of frolicking vacationers on the sugar sand at Fort Walton Beach, the combine is making its latest test.

A semisubmersible rig named Western Pacesetter III was sent for more oil and gas throughout the world is moving into deeper waters at a much higher cost, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

The journal said oilmen feel deepwater drilling is inevitable since offshore areas hold the greatest potential for future reserves.

"And today's deepwater wildcatter is willing to take the gamble necessary to tackle this deep water as long as oil and gas prices remain high enough to justify the risk," the trade journal said.

Nearly every large oil company in the United States and abroad is developing deepwater technology, the journal said.

Phillips Petroleum Co.'s manager of worldwide drilling and production estimated 55 per cent of his firm's total discovery potential lies offshore, with 30 per cent of it in waters from 600 feet to 6,000 feet deep, the trade magazine said.

It referred to an Exxon-Co. report which indicated the petroleum industry held exploratory rights to more than one billion acres in global waters deeper than 650 feet. About 275,000 acres are under lease in U.S. waters deeper than 650 feet and more deepwater lease at 10,589-10,709 feet, which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons. Testing continued.

Drilled to 5,900 feet, it is plugged back to 5,843 feet, in 4 1/2-inch casing seated on bottom.

The project spots 2,480 feet from north and 1,850 feet from east lines of section 18, block GC, GC&SF survey, 10 miles southeast of Iraan.

Pay zones in the Clara Couch field are Yates, Wolfcamp and Claco.

Aloka Gas Gauged At Eddy Prospect

Cities Service Oil Co. No. 1-AAC Government, assured Aloka gas opener and extension to Morrow production in the Russell gas field of Eddy County, N.M., flowed gas at the rate of 1.1 million cubic feet per day, plus one barrel of distillate and three barrels of load water in 12 hours.

Flow was through a 1-inch choke and Aloka perforations

Oil, Gas Search Moves Into Deeper Waters

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The sales are scheduled next month and early in 1976.

"Research projects either active or planned include Shell Oil Co.'s two production platforms proposed for 1,220 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico, a 17-company group's testing of a floating tension-leg platform, a multinational research into pipeline-laying in 6,000 feet of water and the Seagroup's construction on a drillship rated for 6,000 feet of water," the journal said.

IMF Will Renew Loans To Nations For Oil Purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund is about to renew its loan program for nations which are not able to afford the high cost of imported oil.

The international agency hopes to loan the equivalent of nearly $8.3 billion under its oil facility program this year. The agency loaned $3.8 billion in the first stage of the program in 1974.

The IMF oil facility program is one of two international lending programs arising from problems caused by the fourfold increase in the price of world oil. The other, known as the safety net and totaling about $25 billion, is being set up by industrialized nations, including the United States, that are members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

The IMF did not say how much money has been committed to its lending program, but said substantial amounts are expected from major oil-exporting nations and several other countries which are in a strong balance of payments position.

Chiang Kai-Shek Burial Scheduled For April 16

TAIPEI (AP) — President Chiang Kai-shek will be buried April 16 in the little mountain village of Tshu, a favorite retreat of the 87-year-old generalissimo of the Republic of China, officials said today.

The officials said a Christian ceremony would precede the burial. But the state funeral will be postponed indefinitely in the hope that someday it can be held on the mainland Chiang lost in 1949 to Mao Tse-tung's Communists.

Guns boomed every half hour today in tribute to the longtime leader, who died of a heart attack Saturday night. Flags flew at half staff. Temple bells pealed, and clouds of incense rose from Buddhist shrines as thousands bowed their heads in prayer to their dead leader.

Friends from Chiang's revolutionary past surrounded the body in the Veterans Hospital where he died. Thousands of others, including U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger, went to his suburban residence to pay their respects.

Mourning was ordered for Taiwan's 15 million people. Theaters, bars and other entertainment centers were ordered closed for a month. Television stations suspended color broadcasts.

Several governments sent messages of condolences. But most remained silent to preserve good relations with Peking, which like Chiang's Nationalists claims that Taiwan is part of China.

President Ford called Chiang a man of "firm integrity, high courage and deep political conviction." Former President Nixon said he was "one of the giants of the history of our times... a great wartime ally of the United States and a courageous leader."

Hsinhua, Peking's official news agency, called Chiang "the common enemy of the Chinese people" whose "hands were stained with the blood of the revolutionary people of China."

FEA May Order Switches To Coal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration is considering ordering some utilities to switch to the use of coal as a generating fuel, says an agency spokesman.

Many utilities switched from oil to coal during the Arab oil boycott, but at least half of those on the East Coast have since gone back to burning higher priced oil, according to a report in the Washington Post.

It said the "military and administrative personnel of the Chiang Kai-shek gang with patriotism in mind will have a clearer view of the situation and actively contribute to liberating Taiwan now that Chiang is dead."

Peking is believed to have suggested secretly that after Chiang's death, Taiwan could become an autonomous province of China with the Generalissimo's elder son, Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, as governor and only gradual changes in the way of life and the economy of the island to be made during his lifetime.

Vice President Yen Chia-kan, who is 70, was sworn in as president Sunday. But the power remains with Premier Chiang, who has been running the country since July 1972.

In his will, published a few hours after his death, Chiang called on his followers to carry out his unfulfilled dream of recapturing the mainland.

In the past few years there have been a number of reports — all vigorously denied — that Premier Chiang was willing to end the "two Chinas" situation. In his only statement after his father's death, he vowed to devote his life to serving the nation.

Four Armed Aliens Flee El Paso Camp

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Four armed aliens broke out of an Immigration and Naturalization Service detention camp near here today and escaped with credit cards, money and weapons.

A spokesman for the detention center said the four men, all considered dangerous, obtained keys to escape by holding a butcher knife at the throat of a guard. The aliens locked up three guards, taking about $3,000 in cash and credit cards, the spokesman said.

Officers said the four fled in a car owned by one of the guards.

Albert, Rhodes Back From China

HONG KONG (AP) — House Speaker Carl Albert returned from Peking today and said there "certainly cannot be any diplomatic relations between the United States and China under the present circumstances."

The Oklahoma Democrat, who was accompanied by House minority leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, was replying to a newsman who asked whether it was possible for the United States to have diplomatic relations with China without severing relations with the Nationalist regime on Taiwan.

Northern Ireland's Truce Endangered

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's truce seemed in danger of collapse today as the fatal shooting of a young Roman Catholic brought the toll for three days to 11 killed and more than 80 wounded.

The young man was killed as he was on his way to work. Bullets took three other lives and bombs killed seven during the weekend of violence.

Merlyn Rees, the British minister of state for Northern Ireland, said he hoped the ceasefire the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing declared some weeks ago "will last a little while longer at least." But Gerald Fitt, Ulster's leading moderate Roman Catholic politician, said he was convinced the IRA would call off the truce.

Rees blamed sectarian terrorists and feuding gangsters for the worst 24 hours of terror since Belfast's Bloody Friday in July 1972, when IRA bombs killed 11 and wounded 130 victims.

Two bombings of crowded Belfast bars Saturday killed seven persons and wounded more than 75. Police said a blast at the Protestant-owned Mountainview Tavern clearly was in retaliation for an earlier explosion at the Catholic-run McLaughlin's Bar.

Two Catholics were shot dead while walking with their wives in Belfast. Police said these two attacks apparently were the result of the feud between the Marxist Official wing of the IRA and the Irish Republican Socialist party, a radical offshoot of the IRA Officials.

Police said the 10th death, a 19-year-old Protestant shot from a car by three men, may have been the victim of rivalry between two Protestant groups, the Ulster Defense Association and the Ulster Volunteer Force.

Authorities say that feuds within Protestant and Catholic extremist groups have been responsible for most if not all of the 39 deaths since their truce Feb. 10.
