SITUATED IN EDWARDS COUNTY, TEXAS. DOES THINGS DIFFERENT. STUDY OUR PLAN.

A careful study of the Devil's River Oil & Gas Company's plan will convince the close student of investments that we are offering the BEST inducement in the OIL fields. Oil production in Texas fades the total gold production of Alaska in its best days into insignificance. Alaska's best production of gold was only $15,000,000.00, while Texas is producing about $150,000,000.00 worth of oil. The production is increasing so rapidly that it is conservatively estimated that the output will be close to $300,000-090.00 in 1920.

NO is the time to get in the oil business in order to reap the early harvest. With 600 ucres of oil lands to draw from, we anticipate making big profits on our most liberal p'an, PROFITS that will make fast friends for our com pany in future enterprises which we have in mind when

CHAPTER XV.

Lafe Takes a Hand. Lafe was surprised to feel the bitter they listened. tang of the air when he left the mill office. It was going to be winter now, he reflected, and, if Hilary could be held only three days, there could be no question of an immediate journey

Reaching the waste of open ground before the Chateau, he saw that a sleigh had been there that day; possibly it was in the stables now. He rang the bell, nodded to Robitaille, who opened the door, disregarded his incomprehensible address, which seemed to negative Lafe's wish to enter, and went by instinct into the living room at the end of the hall for the first time in his life.

He tapped at the door, but there came no answer. He knocked more loudly, and went in without waiting for any. He discovered the Seigneur in a big leather chair before the huge, glowing fire, Madeleine standing beside him and Edouard Brousseau a short distance away. There was an atmosphere of immediate constraint as if Lafe's appearance had interrupt ed a tense interview. Lafe sensed i but he did not care. He could hardly believe his luck. He had wanted Brousseau there badly, but he had not hoped to meet him.

Brousseau was the first to speak. He may have guessed the nature of Lafe's errand from Lafe's attitude, though not its fullness. He scowled. "It's the man from the mill," he said in a sneering tone to Monsieur Rosny. Madeleine raised her eyes and Lafe read in them the same intuition that was in Brousseau's, and also her challeage. She was arming to oppose him in his fight for Hilary, she was preparing to fight against all that she held dearest, for the sake of the swindler across the room. Lafe admired her courage, but this he had expected. "My business is with Mr. Rosny,"

"Don't let that trouble you. I speak for Monsieur Rosny," answered Brous-

Brouseau started forward, his face pale with rage. As he placed himself in a fighting attitude Lafe calmly assumed that of defense, the left fist ready, the right arm across his chest, turned outward and slightly upward Brousseau was no coward, but he hesitated, and his moment passed.

Lafe flushed. "And you ain't in it neither, Mamzelle," he answered. "What I got to say I say to Mr. Rosny. I come here to say it and I'll go when I said it."

"Oh, let him speak," snarled Brousseau. "Monsieur Askew is afraid to come here with his lies, so he has sent his man."

Madeleine's eyes flashed. "This is no place for personalities, Edouard," cried the girl. "Perhaps you will accompany Mr. Connell to the door and let him say what he wishes to say out-

"I say it here!" cried Lafe in a furious voice that surprised himself. "He's cheated us out of eighty thousand dollars, and he's cheated you, Mr. Rosny, out of about as much, and probably more, and you can put it in any words you like. And I've got the papers to prove it-all of 'em." Brousseau winced and staggered back dumfounded; there was no mistaking now that the man was afraid. Though Madeleine would not deign to acknowledge that she had listened to Lafe's words, Lafe caught the flicker of her eyelids as she glanced quickly toward Brousseau, and he knew that

THE WOODEN SPOIL, at the same instant she had seen fire ook on Brousseau's face. The Seigneur, mouthing impotently, had kept trying to rise; but now he sat openmouthed in his chair, and thereafter

"I'll tell you why he wants the seignlory," continued Lafe. "I guess it's part plain greed, but there's another reason, and that explains why he wants to get Mr. Askew off. There's an asbestos mine on the island-Look at him! Look at him!"

Brousseau was glaring at him, the picture of impotent rage. Lafe, having indicated him with his hand, re-

"He kept it off the map in our office, pretending the island isn't on our limits, and he spread that story, but you know better, Mr. Rosny. The island has the best asbestos mine this side of Thetford, and I've seen the mines at Thetford. And it's worth a good quarter million dollars, I reckon. Maybe more. Maybe a million-I ain't no judge. And he's kept it secret from
