METHODIST CHURCH
 The pastor is grateful for the attendance at the services last Sunday. Both the morning and evening services were well attended. The sermon subject for next Sunday morning will be "Scarecrows." Why do we live along the edges of our capacity instead of at the center? Why do we live so fractionally and scarcely suspect our potentialities? Why do we reach out with our fingers and not with our arms? Why do we live so poorly when our endowments are so great? Such questions will be under consideration Sunday morning. At 7:30 the pastor will preach on "Sleep."
 Come to Sunday school Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Let all the Sunday school workers be present at 2:30 p. m. for the Workers' Council.

14 FEEDS... all in one tiny thimbleful. 14 good feeds which are there in just the right proportion. There's the story of a real chick starting feed... Purina Startena Chow. A real story because one thimbleful of feed is all one chick can put into its little crop in one day.

Out of this tiny thimbleful a chick must get so much. That's why the 14 different feeds are there. Cod-liver oil... dried buttermilk... alfalfa flour... granulated meat... wheat germ meal... linseed meal... these and eight other feeds are in every thimbleful of Purina Startena Chow... each one with a real job to do. Mixed over and over... 960 times... every thimbleful alike.

The 1930 national feed survey of 1,834,513 chicks tells you the kind of a job these thimblefuls do. At six weeks of age, 92 out of every 100 Purina-fed chicks are alive and growing. And they weigh an average of one-fourth of a pound more than other chicks. There's the story for you! The proof that the 14 feeds in Purina Startena Chow (mash or all-mash) actually give a chick the many, many things it must get from a thimbleful of feed. "What—with Uncle Tom?"
"With Uncle Nobody! It's a sort of—of underworld investigation. I got it on my own hook."
"Well, but that's nonsense," the woman said after a pause, somewhat at a loss. "Your father won't permit you for one instant to give up college and work! He—"
"My father told me he wasn't going to back me financially any more," Joe interrupted hotly. "Meanwhile, I'm done with college and I'm working, and he can make what he likes about it!"
"Why, he'll not endure it one instant!" the woman said. "Meanwhile, aren't you going to the Russells? It's Millicent's coming-out party—she'll certainly expect you."

"I think I'll let Millicent cry herself to sleep, tonight," the boy said lazily. "My job has sapped my energies—what with cologne and postcards and tinsel and vegetable knives."
"What are you talking about."
"Nothing. Nothing. But I'm a working-man now, no time for frivolities. Leave me be, Mother. I'm dead."
There was a silence. The woman sat puzzled and disapproving, thinking.
"Listen, Joe. You do like Millicent, don't you? She's such a dear little thing," his mother presently began sentimentally, "and she likes you so much!"

"Give her my love and tell her I'm trying to get together enough money for our little nest," said Joe. "I'll see her at the club tomorrow, anyway—she always plays golf Sunday mornings."
"I don't understand you, Joe," his mother said in cold disapproval. "You went out of the house yesterday morning because your father had said he'd take you out of college if this spending of money went on. Now you say you've got a job and don't want to go!"
"I'm reformed!" Joe said jocosely. "The old man called me names this morning. It's just possible—it's just possible that some day I'll have the laugh on the old man!"
"I wish you'd stop talking nonsense, and follow me over to the Russells," his mother said impatiently. "I don't know what they'll think if you don't come."
"Tell them I've had a change of heart—I've got religion," Joe said indifferently. "Tell them that the way to begin living the ideal life is to begin."
"To begin what?" sharply asked Lillian Spencer Merrill, wife of the owner of the Mack Merrill Chain Stores.
"Just that, darling. The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin," said Joseph Grant Mackenzie Merrill mildly.

Mrs. Johnson, born Petheridge, cherished in herself, and planted in her daughters, an unbounded sense of religious pride. The Johnsons had no pride, and no particular cause for pride, she said.
But the Petheridges, and their collateral lines of Larkins and Lawrences! Ma told them thrilling tales of Gran'ma Larkin's sampler, hung above the Petheridge fireplace in the magnificent Petheridge home "down South," and about the Johnnie Yanks mashing up all Gran'ma Larkin's cut glass, and about slaves—hundreds of them, thousands of them, all singing and dancing and happy, and not any more wanting to be freed than so many sparrows!

Pop, meanwhile, miserably represented not only the low-born Johnsons, but the entire ranks of Johnny Yanks as well. He would cringe while Ma was enlarging upon this topic, and nervously clear his throat. And whenever he spoke of Vermont families, Ma said with her rich, unctious laugh, "Makin' wooden nutmegs, I suppose?" and the girls had to laugh, too.

Not that Maggie was not loyal to her father; she had no heart in the laughter Ma so often directed against him. But it was simpler all round to laugh.
No use going against that particular current, there were too many others to struggle with, if one were to struggle at all!

Often, when Maggie and her father were alone, he would give her a fairer idea of the case.
"You see, dearie," Len would explain in his mild, uncomplaining voice, "Ma's just quotin' things she heard when she was a little girl. She never saw your great-grandmother's house, with those sampler things. Your mother can't remember nothing about slaves and all that. I don't know as her folks ever had slaves, anyway. They lived right in East St. Louis, and they had a drug store—I don't know just what they would have done with slaves!"

Sometimes, Pa would ramble on to the other side of the ancestral picture, to his own boyhood on a Vermont farm.
"I surely would like you to see the place, same day, Maggie. There was eight of us boys, and my sister Margaret—you're named for her, and for my mother, too. There's some of them there still, I daresay—I haven't heard for twenty years. You'd like your grandmother's kitchen—winter or summer, that was the place us boys liked to be! I remember when a big storm would be comin' up—trees bendin' over, and planks rattlin' in the yard, and the old well-sweep creakin'—how we loved the kitchen then. There was a big open fire place one side, but she had her range built right across it, and there wasn't never a drop of anythin' spilled on that range—she kep' it like black glass."

"Oh, Pop! But why did you ever come away?"
"I d'no, Maggie. Jest got restless, I guess."
"Look here, Pop. If my grandmother Johnson had nine children and no servants, how could she manage to keep the place so clean, and the stove shining so, and everything? Ma says that no lady ought ever to do her own work, and she says it can't be done!"
"Well, maybe your grandmother Johnson wasn't a lady, Maggie."
"Pop, do you think there's any hope I'm not a lady? Not like my grandmother Petheridge, I mean? Because," Maggie would rush on eagerly, "I'd love to have my kitchen always clean and orderly, and pies cooling on the windowsill, and jam all put up, and me in a nice clean gingham dress—and a big stiff white apron, sitting down on the side porch, rocking, like you said Gran'ma Johnson always did! And I'd like to believe in all those newspaper budgets, and sytem, and having a regular hour for everything," Maggie would conclude, expectant eyes on his face.
"Well—I don't know, dearie. Your mother hasn't real good health, you know. And your sister has to keep her hands nice."
"And then, of course, we're poor folks, Maggie. When you have to do without, things—"
"Pop, we're not poor! Why, you and I—make more than two hundred a month, Pa. And there's budgets as low as one hundred!"

"Two hundred a month for four folks ain't much in these days, Maggie, when everythin's gone up high!" It was the automatic protest.
"But, Pop—those budgets, and the lists the government sends out."

and the newspapers and the magazines know how things have gone up, don't they?"
"Dearie, your Pop ain't much on mathematics," Len would say, passing a weary hand over his troubled forehead, shaking his meek, gray little head.
Ma, approached on the subject of Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, firm or corporation will be cheerfully corrected upon being brought to the attention of the editor at The News office.

Tom Thorp, constable, said that he was "going to pour it on" all the darkies who did not have a job or who could not show the necessary credentials to prove that they are not vagrants. Sonora's colored population during the past few months has more than trebled, and this happens to be to the disliking of many of Sonora's best citizens. Of course there are good colored folks, but those who are not up to that standard should be given warning to either get to work or leave town. Constable Thorp recently locked three of the sons of Ham in the hoosegow, and remarked that others would go the same route.

Texas leads the nation in rural population with 3,425,367 inhabitants classified as rural. Pennsylvania, 400,000 behind, holds second place.

Texas is a relatively level country, but has more than 100 mountain peaks of 5,000 feet or over and four of more than 8,000. Guadalupe, 9,500 feet, is the highest.

Prize Offered for Oldest Furniture

Household Science Institute Seeks Material for Exhibit During Chicago World's Fair

Have you a mohair-covered chair or sofa in your home? If so, you may be two hundred and fifty dollars the richer for it!

The News is in receipt of a message from the Household Science Institute, Chicago, asking for help in locating the oldest piece of mohair-upholstered furniture in the United States. The Institute feels that there is a possibility of its being found in this section. The style of the sought for furniture or its use or non-use at the present time are not important, providing it is in good condition. The owner of the piece selected will be awarded two hundred and fifty dollars and the piece itself will be exhibited with other old-time furniture during the World's Fair at Chicago in 1933.

Back of the Institute's offer is the desire on the part of Grace Viall Gray, its director, to ascertain the longevity of mohair. Although innumerable pieces of mohair-covered furniture and mohair rugs have seen many years of hard daily service, it is claimed that unless deliberately injured no instance has yet been found of a mohair fabric ever wearing through.

Sonorans who feel that they have something of interest should communicate with Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, Household Science Institute, 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois, giving the history of the piece they have in mind and all facts concerning age, color, condi-

WOOL GROWERS HAVE FAITH IN NAT'L CO-OPS

GROWERS ARE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE PRESHEARING ADVANCE

Boston, Mass., Feb. 5.—Confidence which the majority wool growers have in the National Wool Marketing Corporation could not be expressed in a more convincing manner than the rate at which 1931 wool is now being pledged the co-operative.

Withdrawals from the 1930 membership were practically negligible hence the corporation is assured of a large volume of wool from the majority of the 40,000 growers who signed last year with the idea of staying with co-operative marketing.

Officials of the corporation report that considerable of the wool volume pledged under 1931 preshearing terms represents new members in the co-operative organization, which leads many to believe that the 1931 co-operative volume and membership will exceed that of last year.

On January 27, it was estimated that the National Wool Marketing Corporation had approximately 27,750,000 pounds of wool and 278,000 pounds of mohair from the 1931 clip pledged under preshearing advances. Preshearing advances on that date amounted to $3,011,000 on wool and $38,000 on mohair. Last year at this time the National Wool Marketing Corporation was just getting under way. Except in a few localities, little wool was signed for by the corporation until February, with the bulk of the signing being done in March and later. For the entire year of 1930 preshearing advances totalled about $4,000,000 for both wool and mohair.

The large early sign-up of 1931 wool convinces the leaders of the National Wool Marketing Corporation that the growers will support their marketing agency even more enthusiastically in 1931 than they did in 1930.

From some sections of the country come reports that opponents of the wool co-operative movement declare this unusual fine early sign-up is due more to the hard-pressed financial condition of the grower than to his interest in the developing of his own marketing organization. Such reports are untrue. Representatives of the National Wool Marketing Corporation, who have attended practically every wool growers' convention in the west this season, report a wonderfully fine attitude toward the growers' selling organization.

James A. Hooper, of Utah, vice president of the National Wool Marketing Corporation, speaking on conditions in the inter-mountain region, says: "Growers are taking advantage of the preshearing advance, not only because they want the money but because the general expression from them indicates they are confident that the new set-up for wool growing is the proper way to handle wool." tion. Mrs. Gray will then decide whether the article is the one wanted and make arrangements for shipping it to Chicago.

tion and other pertinent information. History does not tell just when it was first discovered that mohair—the long, silky fleece of the Angora goat—made exceedingly beautiful and durable fabrics. But this is known: mohair fabrics are of great antiquity and have always been looked upon as rare and valuable. Prior to 1881, when George B. and Louis B. Goodall of Sanford, Maine, perfected a process for weaving mohair on power looms, the manufacture of mohair velvet was largely confined to Germany and France, where it was made by hand. Especially famed is mohair velvet or velmo as it is called for short, as an upholstery fabric. Years of hard day-in-and-day-out service leave the deep, rich pile unmarred, its colors fresh and undimmed. Unless one willfully cuts or burns it, it is as nearly indestructible as any woven material can be. This is due largely to the fact that all the rub and wear comes on the top ends or loops of these pile fibres, whereas in smooth surfaced materials the rub comes on the sides of the individual fibres. Also, because the mohair fibres are smooth-surfaced, the dust and dirt do not easily collect on them and usually a light brushing is all that is required to keep mohair fresh and clean. Housewives' fear of moths has been ended by the recent perfection of a mill mothproofing process that makes mohair fabric immune to damage by these pests.

You'd never think she had cooked that delightful meal, would you? She looks so fresh and dainty, so untired and gay—and she said she's been at a matinee all afternoon!

The seeming mystery is so easily explained.—She's a modern Home-Manager, profiting by the use of Electric Cookery. She prepares the meals at any convenient time, entrusting the actual cooking to the dependable and automatic Electric Range.

Why don't you experience the delights of this modern method of cookery? It's so inexpensive, so convenient, and the results are so unusually good, you'll wonder how you managed when kitchen responsibilities tied you to the old-fashioned cook stove.

A Trained Representative is waiting to explain and demonstrate the modern Electrical Cook. He will also show you how the Convenient Budget Plan and the new Home Comfort Rate make Electric Cookery doubly economical.

My Best Girl—

household reform, had much to say and very, very little to do.

"When I and your pop was married, beef was fifteen cents a pound! I remember that, because I said to the butcher, 'Ain't that a lot?' I wasn't nothin' but an innocent child—I'd never done any work with my own hands before. 'Keep them little hands like flowers!' our old doctor, Dr. Lovejoy, use' to say. He was a Southerner, too—"

Maggie only listened respectfully, feeling that if beef would only go down to fifteen cents a pound again, everything might yet be well. Meanwhile, the kitchen grew shabbier and shabbier, and water and grease and ashes darkened the chipped floor, and the plates were piled in the sink, and the faucets dripped on them unavailingly.

She had found room for the ideal leaflet that Joe had given her on the crowded shelf above the sink, and sometimes she looked up from the dishpan at it, with wondering eyes. "The way to begin the ideal life is—to begin."

Her mother said that it didn't seem to her to make sense. 'Lizabeth read it once, suspiciously, and then forgot all about it. But Len and Maggie discussed it more than once, in some bewilderment. Len said frankly that he didn't "get it."

There was no hot water, and nobody in the world could wash the plates after a lamb stew dinner in cold. She piled them and scraped them awhile she waited for some water to boil.

"Maggie!" This was her mother, from bed. "Liz go out?"

"Ten minutes ago, Ma."

"Well, heres all there is to it," said Mrs. Johnson. "I'm at the end of my green, and I can't do no more leaves until I get some. I guess you're tired ain't you?"

"Not so very."

"You'll have to get the money from your father, Maggie!"

"Pop, have you thirty cents?"

"I guess so." He counted it out—dimes, pennies.

"Will two be enough, Ma?"

Returns With Famous Prize

Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State and now Judge of the World Court for International Justice, returning with Mrs. Kellogg from Oslo, Norway, where he went to receive the Nobel Prize for the most valuable achievements for world peace.

"How much did your father give you? Thirty cents—yes, that'll be enough, but I would like to know what Len Johnson does with his money! Shut that door!"

Dishes waiting, kettle so slow to heat, crumbs on the floor, batter spilled and dried on the stove, the red tablecloth ruffled, the sugar bowl upset, dish towels stiff with grease and water—no matter, the inspiration of it went before her like a banner, as she ran down the dark street.

"The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin."

"Joe," Maggie asked, a day or two later, "how could you live the ideal life if nothin' in your life was ideal?" "Ah, there's the catch!" Joe answered airily.

"The meaning of that ideal life thing, is this: You're—you're all in your own mind, do you see? What you have doesn't matter. What you think and what you are is everything—and what bunk it all is!" he added sneeringly to himself. "Do you get me?" he asked aloud.

She did not get him at all, but she nodded.

"You must make everything beautiful in your life," Joe said encouraged by her attention. "An old plate, for instance, an old stain on the wall. Why, Maggie, the museums of Europe are full of them—old plates and ragged clothes and worn-out rugs and water stains, and everyone thinks they're beautiful! The ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, for instance. Did you ever hear of that?"

"Michelangelo did it," Maggie said, nodding.

"And how did you know that?"

"Oh, we had it in school, an' then we have 'em here, among the fifteen-cent classic coloured reproductions," Maggie replied.

"Well. All those old pictures are dirty and worn, mouldering away—all the old palaces are, lots of the books, all the furniture—and yet persons swarm over there every year and admire them," said Joe. "Now the point is, suppose you had to live with a lot of rotting furniture, and chipped plates, and you just said to yourself: 'These are beautiful and valuable relics—'"

"You mean that cups an' chairs an' being poor an' tired really have nothin' to do with the way you live?" she asked, coming nearer to it than he had, as he recognized somewhat to his surprise.

"You've got it," he said.

There was vision in her uplifted eyes, as if the walls of the mattress factory, where they were sitting, had faded away, and new dreams of beauty and fitness and purity had risen before her inner sight.

"Joe, nothing could stop that if you once got it!" she said in a whisper. And then, half to herself, "I can't wait to get home and begin!" And after a while she said wistfully: "Joe, I wish I knew as much as you know."

FORMER COUNTY ATTORNEY EMPLOYED IN AUSTIN POSTOFFICE

L. E. Laurence, former county attorney of Sutton county, is now employed in the Austin postoffice department, according to reliable information received here recently. Mr. Laurence is well known in Sonora, having served the people here as county attorney. At one time Mr. Laurence was in throes of becoming wealthy from oil leases and royalties, but evidently his dreams failed to come true.

"Eat More Lamb" Quotas Increasing

Pecos County Ranks First With 91 Per Cent, While Sutton County Ranks 12th

The most outstanding development in the membership drive of the Texas "Eat More Lamb" Club for the two weeks ending January 31, 1931, was the advancing of Reagan county from seventeenth place, with 17 per cent of their quota raised, to fourth place with 78 per cent of their quota raised. This shows what can be done with a little effort. Another feature of the past two weeks has been the advancement of Pecos county from third place on the list to first place. Pecos county has now raised 91 per cent of its quota and it appears that they will be the first to go over the 100 per cent mark.

Within the next two weeks it is reported that several of the counties will have their entire quotas raised, and it is thought that there will be a considerable advancement in all percentages, together with new percentages from counties having as yet not started their campaigns. Favorable results have already been announced from various parts of the country as to increased demand for lamb and mutton.

After having completed a tour of the northwest and west coast states E. S. Mayer, manager of the Texas "Eat More Lamb" Club, who has just returned, reports that all six of the states visited received the program very enthusiastically and endorsed it and are at present taking steps to raise their respective quotas. Mr. Mayer's trip carried him into six of the sheep raising states during which he traveled over 6,200 miles. The states visited were Idaho, Utah, Montana, Washington, Oregon and California. In adopting the program the Idaho association voted to send in immediately out of her reserve funds one-half of their quota for the year. Practically the entire quota of the State of Washington was raised at the annual convention of her Wool Growers Association.

The Devil's Dream

(By W. E. James)

This stuff's propaganda, Shall we use it as a quote? "Hell, no!" said the editor "Feed the damstuff to the goat!"

Every newspaper in the country is bombarded continually with a barge load of literature covering every conceivable form of activity in numerous fields of endeavor. The list runs the gamut from how to dig fish bait to the "why and wherefore" of the Einstein theory. Some of the propaganda is good reading matter—information on the topics of the day. It is this class that usually finds its way into print, regardless of the fact that somewhere in the article will be found the name of an article or manufacturer of something or other which seeks advertising without cost. The newspaper generally accepts the loss of revenue in order to give the public the benefit of the information.

A greater number of inches of free advertising propaganda probably would find its way into print instead of the editor's waste basket if the writers of such stuff would double space their items. As it is, a machine operator has enough trouble without ruining his eyesight trying to follow closely written gush.

Enough of this kind of propaganda goes into the waste basket each week to fill every column of The News, if it was used. That any of this class of matter is used at all depends a great deal upon the kind of information it carries.

About 50 Sonorans enjoyed the hospitality of the Methodist Bible class last Friday night. The object sought in providing amusement for the older people was well exemplified in the additional new members joining the class Sunday morning. At stated intervals more of these entertainments are to be held, a special fund having been provided for that purpose.

If you haven't joined the Methodist choir you are missing an opportunity to exercise your vocal chords. The choir is being ably directed by Miss Dora Petmecky. Interested ladies have formed the habit of serving refreshments at the close of each meeting, so if you fail to eat before coming to choir rehearsal, just keep your mind on the surprise the ladies will have for you.

Lovers of good singing have a treat in store at a date in the near future. Keep your weather eye on the paper for the time and place—and whatever you do, don't miss hearing this particular group of out-of-town singers.

Two-Gun Ike: "Well, I didn't think they'd defy the jinx, but I see by The News where thirteen (13) members of The Thirteen (13) Dramatic Club are going to produce "A Prince There Was" on Friday, February thirteen (13). Now, if thirteen (13) hundred Sonora folks will attend this production the ladies of the Methodist church and the (13) dramatic club will be thirteen (13) hundred dollars, more or less, to the good."

Boy Scouts in Jamboree

The annual district meet of the Ranch District Boy Scouts was held at the local Scout hall Saturday night, January 31. Weather conditions prevented the troops from Junction and Ozona being here to take part in the events, but the Eldorado troop was well represented and gamely contested the local Scouts in what proved to be a fairly successful meeting. Brice Draper, of San Angelo, supervised the meet and brought men with him to judge the events.

When the troops lined up for inspection, and were judged on neatness and general appearance, Troop 19 proved to have the edge by about two new uniforms.

In the next event, relay semaphore signalling, Tenderfoot Scout W. B. Brantley substituted for G. W. Archer to make a team with the two veteran Star Scouts, John Hull and Lea Roy Aldwell, but they failed to beat the Eldorado troop's time.

In knot-tying Wilbur Glasscock proved to be a coming expert. Vincent Roueche was his teammate, but they lost by one knot.

A First-Aid team, composed of Troy White, Herbert Fields, W. B. Brantley and V. J. Glasscock proved the efforts of Lea Roy Aldwell's coaching by winning in their demonstration of bandages and first-aid treatments.

V. J. Glasscock won first in bugling, with Troy White second, selecting "To the Colors," "Taps" and "Swim" as their calls.

Vincent Roueche won first place in starting a fire with flint and steel, and John Hull took second, both boys showing some real speed.

Jack Rape, Troop 18, Eldorado, won the essay contest on a Scout law, giving a very good presentation of the law "A Scout is Trustworthy." Eldorado also won second place in the essay writing.

Harold Friess, having no competition, took first place in building a fire by friction after breaking his fireboard and giving a demonstration of "stickability."

Troy White, Herbert Fields and W. B. Brantley won the Fireman's Carry, a race showing how to carry a person heavier than yourself by a carry commonly used by fireman in rescue work. James Ed Hutner and Herbert Fields won the Morse signalling, giving the message quickly, without error.

After the meet, when results were totaled, the local troop was leading by about 20 points, a small margin indeed, but enough to win for them their fourth consecutive district banner.

A Court of Honor was held in conclusion, and three boys given the rank of Star Scout. Those receiving this honor were Lea Roy Aldwell, John Hull and Herbert Fields. Roy Aldwell gave a short talk to the boys, and Scoutmaster Garron of the Eldorado troop, thanked the local people for their hospitality in giving the meet.

The event was attended by a group of parents and spectators who thoroughly enjoyed everything.—Contributed.

Eldorado Scouts Win Essay Prizes

Jack Rape, First and Lawrence Morgan Second in Essay Contest

The following essays won prizes on Scouting from Troop 18, Eldorado:

The Loyalty of the Law Loyal
(By Jack Rape)

Loyal, just the word itself seems to be headed most by all real Scouts. If a scout lives up to such a law he should become a loyal citizen. Loyal means true and worthy of being trusted by a friend. You certainly pay attention to a complimented friend who has such a good reputation.

A dog that is loyal to his master hates to leave or wrong him. This is the way any Scout should take it if a fellow should try to turn you against your own side or patrol, and above all, be true.

We should be loyal to our parents. Do not try to leave or crook them but be loyal, helpful and forever be true, for they look up to their growing little Scout.

A Scout should be always loyal to his country. A Scout who is trusted and turns against his country would be a man without a country and no one wishes to not have a country.

In playing a game with two sides a Scout who plays for the side that did not choose him would be disloyal to his fellow Scouts.

All things contain some things. Loyalty can contain a lot of things. Pay heed, fellow Scouts, and be loyal to friends, country and everything. This law of loyalty will be in use forever.

A Scout Is Clean

(By Lawrence Morgan)

A Scout keeps clean in body and thought; stands for clean speech, clean sport, clean habits and travels with a clean crowd.

A Scout follows the rule to take at least one bath a week and most of them take more than that. Every time a Scout sees a river or a rock tank he wants to go in swimming. There is nothing better than a good dive on a hot summer day. A Scout who has been working hard all day and earning his own money to go through life, certainly enjoys a good swim in the old creek.

It makes people feel better to keep clean. A Scout who thinks of nothing but clean things certainly has formed a great habit in life. It is not a good habit to think of the terrible things that have happened in this world, for a Scout's mind is benefitted by clean thoughts.

A Scout stands for clean speech. He does not go around using vulgar words and cursing. It sounds a lot nicer to use clean speech, and your fellow man will think a lot more of you and your manner of speech, unless he is one who doesn't use clean speech, and if he does that he isn't considered much of a Scout.

A Scout plays clean sport. In football, baseball or any other kind of a game, he plays fair and square. A fair and square game is enjoyed by everyone taking part in it. Spectators like to see a clean game.

A Scout has clean habits and travels with a clean crowd. He does not form the habits of stealing or cheating and neither does he run with the kind that does. He runs with other Scouts and other people who are clean in speech, habits, and play clean sports.

"Teacher Is Dead"

Japanese Boy Scouts put up a placard at Atami, after the great earthquake of Nov. 26, announcing their teacher had been killed in the quake any chance of disease being carried over from last year and to give this year's chicks the chance to start without handicaps of any kind.

The third commandment advises that brooder houses and stoves be carefully regulated for several days before the chicks arrive to insure even, steady temperature conditions, proper ventilations, and the elimination of drafts.

A sound piece of advice is offered next: "Start with early-hatched and vigorous chicks;" with the explanation given that early-hatched chicks mean pullets laying early in the fall at the beginning of high prices, and broilers ready before the market is glutted.

Not more than 360 chicks should be placed in a 10x12 brooder house, the next law declares, since more than this number will mean crowding, with the consequences of poorly developed, stunted, and possibly diseased birds.

Commandment No. 6 explains that a drinking fountain and a two-foot Startena feeder should be provided for each 50 chicks to allow each individual chick all the room it needs to get feed and water, upon which life and health depend.

Frightening or stampeding chicks by sudden movements is advised against in No. 7 since, if done only a few times, it will mean highly temperamental chicks which are thrown off feed by slight disturbances, resulting in poor development. Chicks should be taught to roost early says No. 8, usually beginning about the third or fourth week.

The ninth commandment advises the adoption of a plan of feeding which will give the chicks the right start and the best chances for growth throughout.

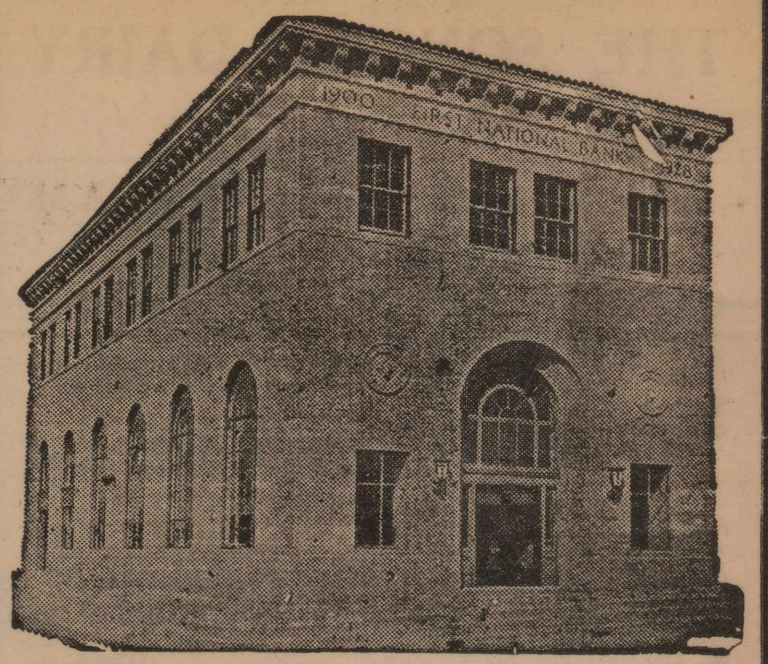

Finally it is recommended that every poultryman remove the cockerels, which are usually about half the flock, fatten them in a separate pen, marketing them as broilers as soon as possible.

The complete set of commandments is contained in the Purina Poultry Book together with a full explanation and detailed information on poultry raising. A copy may be obtained from E. F. Vander Stucken Company, the local Purina dealer, at the store with the Checkerboard Sign.

The Ten Commandments of chick raising, as essential to the poultryman's success as Moses' original laws, are offered in the 1931 edition of the Purina Poultry Book—a handy hip-pocket volume of 100 pages, devoted entirely to the feeding, care, management, disease and cures of poultry.

In brief form this outline gives a sample plan of what the poul-tryman should do to raise a high percentage of his chicks, to care for them properly, to give them what they need for life, health and growth, to cure their ailments, to guard them against infection and disease.

Numbers one and two of these commandments lay the foundation for chick raising: "Move the brooder house to new ground," and "Thoroughly clean and disinfect all equipment." These precautions are deemed necessary to prevent
