BAPTIST CHURCH

Spring is here now and we are looking for you in our Sunday school and church. We had a good crowd last Sunday in spite of the rain. You be with us next Sunday.

Our Sunday school is at 10 and our preaching is at 11 and 8.

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

J. O. McMILLON, Pastor.

METHODIST CHURCH

Preceding the communion service next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "The Pruning of the Vine." The lesson will be taken from John 15. This message will be closely related to the account of "The Master's Condemnation of the Barren Fig Tree," which we considered last Sunday night. At 8:00 p. m. Rev. J. D. McWhorter, of Eldorado, will preach.

Since the Lord has been so good to bless us with fine rains and made the earth to bring forth its fruitage, let us show our appreciation by our presence service at His house on His Sabbath.

JOINT RECITAL WELL ATTENDED FRIDAY NIGHT

A large audience Friday night listened attentively to a joint recital presented in the high school auditorium by pupils of Misses Way and Francis, expression and piano teachers. Each number was well presented and showed that many talented musicians will be developed in Sonora. Those who had reading numbers did their parts very efficiently.

Miss Allie Halbert represented an old time maid country school teacher, and the room was an excellent imitation of the old country school. A picture of the teacher on the blackboard was a drawing by one of the pupils, and other furniture and school equipment helped to carry out country school ideas. Patsy Gilmore and A. W. Awalt acted their parts when they came marching in the room late, representing two darkies.

The program follows: The Band is Playing Dixie—Libby Jo Wallace.

Reading—Doris McDaniel. Grandfather's Clock—Ray Wallace Stephenson.

Reading—R. W. Johnson. Birdie Sweetly Singing—O. L. Richardson.

Song of the Pines—Mary Sue Blanton.

The Rosary — Jimmy Guinn Langford.

Reading—Doris Meckel. Dream of the Rosebud—Elizabeth Elliott.

Violin solo—Rena Glenn Shurley accompanied on piano by Kathryn Brown.

Reading—Doris Keene. Reading—Patsy Gilmore.

Cotton Pickers—A. W. Awalt. Reading—Faye Searcy.

Duet—Signs of Spring—Ray Wallace and O. L. Richardson.

Dutch Dance—Ardell McCalmont. Reading—Margaret Sandherr.

My Mamma's Waltz—Robby Jo Wyatt.

Reading—Guyon Shurley. Chinatown—Katha Lea Keene.

A Round of Slugs

(By S. U. M. Bull)

If Louie Trainer fails to win first in either the 100 or 220 we will miss our guess. This galloping young man should be able to step the century in an even 10, and it will not be surprising to see him grab the 220. Trainer is being dreaded by a number who will participate in these events. And why shouldn't he be feared? Anyone who can run 100 yards on a muddy field in 10.3 should be able to do much better on a cinder path.

RICH MEN'S TROUBLES

One of the penalties of being rich and famous is that one so afflicted has to set up a sort of wall around himself to avoid being importuned for money, for good causes and bad ones, at every turn. That has never happened to us, but we can easily understand it might become a nuisance after the novelty of being asked for a million dollars had worn off.

The rich man travels on his own yacht or in private railroad car not so often because he does not desire to mix with the common people as because he knows from bitter experience that they will not let him mix with them on equal terms. One of America's wealthiest men said, somewhat sadly, not long ago, that he did not know how to carry on a conversation with a group of friends because they referred to so many schoolboy and college customs of which he knew nothing, since he had always had private tutors. That man is not subjecting his sons to the handicap of not knowing how to act among ordinary folks; he sent them all to public schools and to colleges where they had to live like other boys.

All of which is suggested by the remark of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., that the six weeks he recently spent in Mexico where nobody knew him was the happiest vacation he had ever had. He did not have to be on his guard, but was just another Gringo tourist. But because he did not travel in the customary state of a multi-millionaire the customs guard at the border wouldn't believe him when he handed that official his card.

"John D. Rockefeller, Jr.," he read, and looked Mr. Rockefeller over appraisingly. "That's what they all say, bo!" Which, as Mr. Rockefeller remarked, gave him more inward amusement and real satisfaction than any amount of kowtowing could have done.

The United States, with about 6 per cent of the world's population, uses approximately 19 per cent of the world's annual output of commercial fertilizer and ranks second only to Germany as a consumer.

FURNITURE CHANGES KEEP MOHAIR IN VOGUE

SOME FACTORS IN MOHAIR'S PERMANENT POPULARITY

- LONG WEARING
- COMFORTABLE
- BEAUTIFUL APPEARANCE

WEAR COMES ON ENDS OF FIBRES AS HIGH AS 40,000 FIBRES TO THE SQ. INCH

ERECT PILE PREVENTS SLIPPING

EASY TO CLEAN

MOTH-PROOF

DUST SLIDES OFF QUICKLY REMOVED BY VACUUM CLEANER OR BRUSH

MOHAIR NOW CHEMICALLY TREATED TO PREVENT MOTH DAMAGE

LONGEST WEARING FABRIC IS MOHAIR

Great Durability Explains Its Perennial Popularity for Furniture Use.

STYLES may come and styles may go, but in furniture as in everything else, but one kind of upholstery — mohair velvet — remains in constant popularity ever since the invention of power machinery put it within the reach of everyday folks, and not just of kings and nobles, as in previous centuries.

The demand for furniture covered with fabric made from the fleece of the angora goat has increased steadily until now the United States leads the world in angora goat raising and consequently in the production of mohair materials.

Its great durability is undoubtedly the chief reason why mohair velvet is an upholstery perennial. Not even the beauty and luster of its soft texture would suffice to win the housewife's repeated approval if mohair velvet, or velmo as it is often called, did not surpass all other materials in wearing quality. This is partly because the mohair fiber itself is the longest wearing animal fiber known and partly because it is a pile fabric, with the wear coming on the ends of the fiber instead of along the sides. As high as 40,000 of these sturdy fibers are found to the square inch of mohair velvet.

Some knowledge of the physical structure and chemical composition of the mohair fiber is necessary to understand why it makes a superior upholstery fabric. Seen under a microscope the mohair fiber is smooth and shiny, with fewer scales or serrations than on the wool fiber. This means that it does not attract dirt so quickly, that dust tends to slide off the smooth hairs and that actual dirt is easily removed with a swift brushing with soap and water if necessary, without affecting the color.

Then, too, mohair takes a fast acid dye, so that the effects of sun and strong light need not be feared.

Like all animal fibers, mohair is normally attractive to the pestiferous house moth, but now science has perfected a means of effectually and permanently mothproofing mohair velvet. It has been noticed that moths will actually die in preference to attacking the fabric. When one considers the tremendous amount of damage done annually by this innocent looking little insect, it is obvious that for this feature alone mohair recommends itself as the ideal fabric for fine furniture.

But, though mohair velvet remains popular season after season, its colors, patterns, and weaves change with the current fashion. Beautiful solid colors or two-tone weaves, period designs, modernistic effects or conventional patterns may all be had in mohair velvet. Sometimes the pile is cut to form the pattern, the remaining pile being stamped with a floral or other design. In other places the pattern is formed by cutting certain of the loops and the fabric is then called frieze. If the uncut portion predominates, it is called friezelette. Then again, the material may be hand-blocked in striking designs or woven on a jacquard loom with various colored mohair yarns.

Then, too, mohair velvet has been found to be virtually fadeless, unchanging after years of constant exposure to the sun and elements. This is because of the unusual construction of the mohair fiber, which is tubular and very attractive to acid dyes. The unusual long service which mohair velvet gives is due to the fact that, being a pile fabric, the wear comes along the ends of the fiber and not along the sides, it does not really hold dust, because the surface of the fibers, unlike those of wool, are smooth and glossy. Actual soil is easily removed with soap and water.

some other town for people to use in building homes. The men behind this move are to be congratulated for their efforts.

La Vista Theatre is showing some first-class pictures, and judging from the number of cars parked near the show house each night is evidence that the people here are attending in large numbers. Mr. Williams and Mr. Flynn are endeavoring to give us high class entertainment.

CHEAP CUTS MEAT ADD FLAVOR LOW-COST MEALS

The cost of meat is less today than it has been in many years, says E. W. Sheets, chief of the animal husbandry division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. In many sections, he says, the breast costs as little as 7½ cents a pound, and neck of medium grade lamb and the plate and brisket of similar quality beef are sold for as low as 9 cents. Picnic shoulders cost 13 to 21 cents a pound, and pork shoulders anywhere from 14 to 19 cents.

Use of the low-priced cuts, as recommended by Mr. Sheets, is in accordance with the nutrition standards of the Bureau of Home Economics, which recommend meat both as a pellagra preventive factor and as a means of making a bland diet more palatable. The bureau suggests that full-flavored foods like meat, potatoes and onions be used as much as possible by persons living on a minimum food supply. Meat adds the highly desirable proteins, mineral salts, and fat, and its excellent flavor makes easier the consumption of the relatively large proportions of cereals which are the basis of the low-cost meals outlined by the bureau.

CALFSKIN GRADES ISSUED

Tentative standards for market classes and grades of kips and calfskins have been issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The grades have been drawn to conform to approved trading practices in these industries. Bureau officials believe that if the standards are applied generally, producers will pay more attention to improving the quality of the raw product. They also believe that business relations among all the branches of the industry will be improved.

The standards are tentative and their use permissive. The bureau is asking the various industries for suggestions and criticisms, so that when the standards are issued in final form they will represent the experience and best judgment of the industries.

Copies of the proposed standards may be obtained from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.

FRUIT FLY INSPECTION IN FLORIDA DISCONTINUED

Federal inspection in the areas of Florida formerly infested with the Mediterranean fruit fly was discontinued on March 31. For the past two years intensive inspection has been carried on by forces of inspectors varying from 200 to 750, says Lee A. Strong, chief of the Plant Quarantine and Control Administration, and during the last eight months no evidence of infestation was found. Only three minor infestations of the Mediterranean fruit fly have been found since August, 1929.

This ends the campaign against this insect pest that was begun by the department in April, 1929, when an infestation of the fly was found in Orange county, Florida.

SUNSET TRUCK TURNS OVER; NO INJURIES

Little damage was done Wednesday afternoon when a large Sunset truck turned over as it was being driven from the Sonora-Del Rio highway to an alley leading to the rear of a vacant lot east of the J. W. Trainer store. The truck, loaded with groceries, was being driven by Jimmie Allison. Other occupants in the truck were C. P. Friess and another man whose name was not learned. None of the men was injured.

DR. GRAY PREACHED

From The Sonora Methodist.
 Dr. W. B. Gray, Presbyterian pastor of Eldorado, brought us a splendid sermon last Sunday morning. His message was very interesting and profitable. Dr. Gray has filled this pulpit several times before and his visits are always appreciated. It is a pleasure to be associated with a pastor of a neighboring church of another denomination, especially a man with the ability, experience and fine Christian spirit of this man. He has held some of the most responsible positions of his denomination in Texas.

Says
WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—When your great Grandchildren are sitting around some Penal Institution at recreation time, they will talk of the time away back when their parents and Grandparents used to tell about a certain man that flourished from around 1920 to 1940 and from then on Children will be as they are today, they will have to be taught who was President around all that era. These confined Grandchildren of ours will say, "Yes we have great Coaches today, we have great Teams. But Dad says every play they know was originally done away back in his childhood by Knute Rockne who founded Notre Dame. This Notre Dame was just another Stubblefield College, they cut down the tall grass, dammed up the creek, and made another one of those Indiana institutions of learning that flourished on practically every quarter section throughout the State. Well from what Grandad says, this Rockne blew in there, and went to school. He was a Swede, or a Norweigan, or a Dane, or some of those Ski Jumping Nations up in there. He didnt know a Football from a footpad. But these Pumpkin seed Boys was kicking one around there and playing what they humorously referred to as Football. They let him play with em just for comedy purposes, and for a Swede, or a Norweigan, or a Dane, he turned out to be mighty good. Along about then they started throwing forward passes, so to have some more fun they got to throwing em to this Swede, or Norweigan, or Dane. Well instead of this Swede, or Norweigan or Dane dodging em, why he got to catching em, and Sk'ening over the line with em. Well then he graduated, for they wont let you stay in one of these Schools but four years, no matter how little you know.

So he found some boys that didnt know much more about the game than he did, so he started in coaching em, the first thing you know he was helping to coach Notre Dame. He told em that football was a game of the head, and not of the feet and hands. Well it just wasent no time till Notre Dame had got out of the weeds, and raised their Scholastic standing a half dozen touchdowns, and you started reading about it. It wasent just a Buckwheat College, it was right up in the money. It was filling more Stadiums than any of em. He then originated the unique idea of playing a real team every Saturday, instead of about three a season. Then come his climax, as my old Gradparents have told me. He was a great Kidder. He was to play a game on the coast against their best, and their Sporting Writers had boosted their team up till it looked like practical death for Knute to even go on the field with em. Well he started in before they left Chicago, saying that his team didnt have a chance, that they would be beat, as they had lost their only Star. Well on the Coast they fell for it, and when he got to Tuscon, Arizona to practice, why he was supposed to have lost another Star, a Mr Mullins. The Sporting Writers come down to see who he was practicing in Mullins place and they noticed a No 31. They looked it up and it was a Mr Hanley. But when the game started a gent named O'Connor was the starter. Nobody had ever heard of him, but nobody will ever forget him. Then the news leaked out that during this Arizona practice he had been wearing Hanleys sweater. But No Sporting Writer had ever thought of that. Well he kidded em right up to game time, and even got the odds against his team. Well, Gradpap says that when they kicked off Notre Dame got ahold of the ball and never give it back to the other side all day. Barnum Gradpap says in his balmeist days never made such a Sucker out of folks with his side show as this Knute fellow did singlehanded, outside of what his team did to the others. He even told em that next year they would beat him that bad. Well everybody was surprised to know that they would play em again next year. Nobody ever heard of the Kaiser wanting a return date.

But I have just heard Grandpa sit by the hour and tell some of the Komical things this Rockne did in his day. Yes Sir, Gradpap says he is the one that made Notre Dame more famous than Oxford and Cambridge. This Swede, or Norweigan, or Dane, or Lithuanian, or whatever he is.

Place Your Meal in the Oven
 Then You're Free for the Day

Haven't you many times wished that you could leave your kitchen responsibilities and squander a happy afternoon doing just the things you really want to do? Surely you have, for in this progressive and enlightened day modern women have so many important demands upon their time.

Electric Cookery offers the perfect solution to this crying need for greater freedom, for with an electric range in your home you merely prepare your meal at any convenient time—place it in the oven—set the automatic time and temperature controls and forget the actual cooking. At just the proper moment the heat will be turned on—the regulator will maintain the correct temperature, and you'll return home to a perfectly cooked meal.

Electric Cookery is indispensable to the modern homemaker. Investigate its many advantages and superiorities today.

West Texas Utilities

THIS WEEK

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Officials here are concentrating their greatest attention these days on the subject of unemployment. The opinion is being freely expressed that up to a few weeks ago the depression had continued to grow. The upturn has finally come, they now assert, although only in a small degree. It is certain the return to normal will be much quicker than the time the slump required. That business will gain momentum as it continues to improve is obvious, assert the officials.

One bad thing noted about the trend of conditions is that business is gaining faster than the employment workers. The slump resulted in a general paring down of help of all kinds, although there were fewer dismissals and less cuts in pay than in former depressions, most lines of business carrying out their promises, made two years ago to President Hoover, to stabilize conditions as much as they could. Those left on the pay-roll developed greater efficiency, and proved that many offices and factories had been over-staffed under old conditions. It is certain, say government officials, that all of this excess help will never be re-employed at their old jobs, just to diminish the ranks of the unemployed.

To combat this idleness in the ranks of would-be workers, which is expected to become serious again next winter, everybody in official Washington, from the president to the lowest executive, is concentrating on measures of relief they expect will be needed when snow flies again. Charitable agencies will have more funds to work with than they had in the past two winters, while the government's program of public improvements, already well in hand, will furnish thousands with work.

Economists charge that unemployment of capital creates an even more serious condition than the lack of jobs for the citizens. The government is wasting little time on relief measures for the capitalists as it feels they ought to be able to care for themselves. This they are doing by seeking new avenues of investment.

In this struggle to invest surplus funds is seen the greatest hope for the future. The Patent Office is the one department here closest to the new devices that can be expected to become generally accepted in the not distant future.

Some fifty years ago the new telephone and electric light industries poured in their thousands of patents, foreshadowing the growth of those commercial giants. Later the automotive line began to flood patent officials with their caveats and designs. The radio followed. All these lines are now employing millions of people who would otherwise be out of work.

Similarly the patent officials predict the rise of several other new colossal industrial lines that will absorb the efforts of the unemployed left stranded by the present depression. Perhaps the most promising of these fields centers in the artificial cooling and ventilating of homes. Although several big concerns are operating in that field and many public and private buildings are now kept in summer by the same plant that heats the rooms in winter, yet few private dwellings, except those of the wealthiest, have been outfitted with the new machinery. The White House and Houses of Congress and many other public buildings here are cooled in hot weather.

Capital is already looking over this field, which is no longer an experimental one, its basic principles having been fully tested and developed by the artificial refrigerators now in common use. Along with the exploitation of this field by the sellers of the new apparatus will come additional work for builders in all lines who will have to supply new heat-resisting floors, ceilings and walls.

The automotive, radio and similar lines have about reached the point where no more labor will be needed, no matter how the demand grows. New machinery will replace labor in those fields about as fast as production increases, it is figured, and the manufacture of the new ventilation appliance is expected to take up this slack.

Officials figure that next to the ventilating line comes the anticipated exploitation of "backyard flying." This is the term that has been coined for the new autogiro, which has passed the stage of experiment and is nearly ready for commercial development. Airplanes will never become a great employer of labor, like the radio and electrical fields, because of the conditions under which they are built and operated. Already there is an oversupply of licensed pilots, of whom there are 5,000 more than planes to be flown.

The autogiro is a different project. Even now their use in small suburban yards is not only feasible but actually occurs. The machines, which rise vertically from any piece of ground large enough for them to rest upon, are safe and speedy. Their general adoption will result in the employment of thousands out of work right now.

A third field that awaits only the inventive genius of some man to make it commercially possible is television. At present the best engineers have been able to accomplish is to produce an image not larger than five inches square. This limits its general field. With the discovery of a way to present pictures suitable for movie screens an enormous new field will be created almost overnight. While engineers are unable to cure the defect of its smallness at present yet they do not question their ability to do so eventually.

Flying—I made my first flight the other day. I flew from New York to Washington, 240 miles, in two hours. It cost me less than my railroad and Pullman fare on my last previous trip to Washington, and took only half the time, besides furnishing a new and extremely interesting set of impressions.

What surprised me most, as a novice in the air, was the apparent flatness of everything on the ground. We didn't, of course, fly over mountains, but all the little gullies and ridges and rough places, and even good-sized hills, seemed to merge into a flat plain as smooth as a billiard table. Newly plowed fields looked like sheets of sandpaper. There was no sensation of motion except when looking down. Then we seemed to be moving almost at a snail's pace, because the eye from that height takes in such a wide sweep of territory. The only thing that gave an idea of our speed was the motion of our own shadow across the surface of the earth, and the way we overtook and passed passenger trains on the railroads below us.

Population—We flew over the most thickly settled part of the densely populated East, over ten cities, including Philadelphia with almost two million people, Baltimore with nearly a million, and Newark with nearly half a million. But the strongest impression I got was of a very thinly populated territory. Outside of the cities themselves there seemed to be a thousand acres of open land for every building. There were always buildings in sight, but here were many stretches, especially in Delaware and Maryland, where these were only widely scattered farm houses.

Every square inch of land along the whole route seemed to be under intensive cultivation. That was another surprising thing. Except for occasional patches of woods there was hardly an acre that had not been freshly plowed and seeded. The grain and forage crops of New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania do not cut a big figure in the national totals, but in proportion to available acreage they are very large.

And these eastern farmers have not lost the art of plowing a straight furrow. Seen from the air their fields look as if they had been laid out by an engineer with a ruler.

Bumps—Flying, even in good flying weather, is not as smooth a method of traveling as it looks from the ground. There was a light breeze, which had a habit of freshening and shifting suddenly, and the warm air currents rising from the earth varied in intensity with the character of the surface over which we passed. The result was a motion much like that of a small boat on a land-pocked harbor in a choppy sea, with an occasional big wave slapping the bow. This made walking about from one end to the other of the sixteen-passenger cabin somewhat difficult. There was also a fairly constant roll from side to side, about what one experiences on a ship at sea in good weather, and some occasional pitching fore and aft, although this was less severe than on board ship.

"Air passengers frequently get seasick," the hostess on board told me as she served us hot coffee and cakes between Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Hostess—The hostess on our ship was Beulah Unrah, who is known among air men as "The Flying Waitress." Beulah, blonde and blueeyed, and with a permanent smile that shows her pretty white teeth, is 24. She is a farmer's daughter from the eastern shore of Maryland. She worked as a waitress in Baltimore and New York and saved her tips until she had 13,000 dimes.

"Some of the other girls bought fur coats and automobiles with their savings," she told me, "but I thought I would use mine to learn some kind of a job where I would not have to be on my feet all the time. What's the use of living if your feet hurt so you can't have any fun?" So she spent her $1,300 to take a complete course in flying.

Beulah has a limited commercial pilot's license now, but will have to do a hundred hours more of solo flying before she can get a transport pilot license. Meantime, she flies every day from New York to Richmond and back, as hostess for the Eastern Air Transport, and still saves her tips and part of her wages.

"The girls that get the big money in flying are the ones that have rich fathers or somebody to buy fast planes for them," she said. "It is going to take me a long time to save up enough to buy a plane, but in the meantime I have got a job I like, and it don't hurt my feet."

Washington — Thirty-four years ago I happened to be in Washington when the first aerial photographs of the Capitol and the new Library of Congress were made A man from New Jersey sent a kodak up on a kite string and produced the first pictures made from the air. As the plane flew into Washington the other day we crossed the same spot, and I saw with my own eyes for the first time the view of which I had seen a photograph in 1897.

I have known the city of Washington for fifty years and every time I go back I find something new has been done to beautify it. The Japanese cherry trees, planted around the Tidal Basin, which in my boyhood, was a swamp where the malarial mosquitoes bred, were in full bloom and made one of the most beautiful bits of artificial scenery I have ever seen.

Washington streets and avenues are so congested with motor traffic, and it is so poorly regulated, that I felt that I was actually in greater danger during that ten minute drive in a taxicab than I had been in flying. I am not particularly courageous, but all my apprehensions, I then realized, had vanished left the ground at Newark. as soon as the wheels of the plane

What a Difference!

Back in 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

Even today there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, antiseptic surgery or automobiles. It keeps up-to-date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

MOTORISTS WARNED OF GIVING STRANGERS LIFTS

Washington, D. C.—A general warning to motorists against giving hitchhikers and pedestrians "lifts" has been voiced by the legal department of the American Motorists' Association.

"The primary argument against such practice," it is pointed out by the association, "is that the motorist, in most states, assumes a financial responsibility for the safety of the passenger. The fact that the passenger is being transported without compensation does not change his legal liability.

"Another argument is that oft-times the motorist becomes a victim of his guest by assault and robbery. The kindhearted motorist has much to lose and nothing to gain from such practice," the A. M. A.'s warning declares.

THE TRAINING SCHOOL

From The Sonora Methodist.

The last issue of this publication carried an announcement of the three-teacher training school to begin at the Sonora Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, May 10, at 3:00 o'clock. This notice is a reminder of the fact that the date is drawing near. The pastor has received a full supply of the text books to be used in the school and anyone desiring to secure a book and begin reading before the school can do so. The prices are as follows: "Training the Devotional Life," 75c; "The Worker and His Bible," 75c; "Teaching in the Sunday School," $1.00. There will be no additional cost to anyone.

Everyone is urged to attend this school. It is not merely for Sunday school teachers or active church workers, people of other denominations are welcome.

We are glad to learn that several other churches are planning to take part. The entertainment committee is announcing that all out-of-town people taking courses will be given entertainment. This committee will appreciate the people volunteering to open their homes to these visitors.

CLOUDS AND SUNSHINE

The newspaper man's life is not all roses. Neither is it all thorns.
Taken by and large his life has about as many bright spots in it as anybody's. This is the opinion expressed by the "Man about town," in the Ozark Democrat-Enterprise,
who says:

The editor does not expect to please everybody. The newspaper writer who can do such a thing is a barren idealist, beautiful to think about, but incapable of taking on mortality and associating with humanity. It is as impossible for him to please everybody as it is for everybody to please him. If he works for public good, he expects private censure; if he praises merit, he expects knocks from jealous demerit; in his most strenuous efforts to be fair, he expects condemnation from the unfair; if he opposes trickery in politics, he expects knocks from political tricksters; if he condemns

Takes New Job

Miss Ruth Fesler, Mrs. Hoover's secretary for years, is to wed R. L. Lipman, of San Francisco.

graft, he expects opposition from grafters; if he fights crookedness of any character, he expects the worst from crooks. He may work earnestly and honestly from 12 to 18 hours a day for a bare living, while others around him get rich;
yet, if he makes a typographical error in his most able efforts, even fools are at liberty to laugh at him. No matter how good his motives may be, how innocent his purpose, nor how studied his writings, he may be picked to pieces, misrepresented, maligned and ridiculed by many classes of individuals. However, all men are not built that way. Some there are who appreciate the honest endeavors of the newspaper, although it may occasionally make errors, and such a circle of friends as these often form the editor's rainbow that smiles the clouds away, and the editor's gratitude for such friendship is beyond the expression of tongue or pen.

While the journalist sometimes finds his path beset with vexat-ious cares and harrassing events, he sometimes finds that it meanders through bright and beautiful meadows, where fragrant flowers of friendship, nourished by the gentle dews of sympathy and the warm sunshine of affection, bloom in profusion.

Often he sees the clouds gather and for a short time hang dark and heavy. Then the thunder roars, the lightning flashes, the shower comes and the foliage weeps under the falling rain, but soon the sunshine breaks through. Sunshine! Sunshine! Glorious sunshine! Message from heaven! The trees dry their tears, the birds warble their sweetest songs amid the sylvan scene, and all nature seems brighter and fresher than before. As the rose-tree is composed of the prettiest flowers and the sharpest thorns; as the heavens are overcast, alternately tempestuous and serene, so is the life of the editor intermingled with hopes and disappointments, with joys and sorrows, with pleasures and pains.
