

Texas farmers 'surprisingly effective' in D.C.

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question is an obvious one. How can striking farmers — who claim to be going bankrupt — afford to live in the nation's capital and lobby for more than a month?

"How can we afford not to — it's now or never for us," responded Plainview farmer Marvin Meek. "It costs us about $600 a week considering the hotel, food and plane fare but the folks back home are helping out and sending money."

And for a group unaccustomed to the ways of Washington, the farmers have been "surprisingly effective."

Since Congress reconvened in January, the sidewalks and hallways have been liberally dotted with farmers who offer a striking contrast to the legions of gray-suited bureaucrats normally seen on Capitol Hill.

"You have made an input into our system of government and you have been surprisingly effective," noted Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza after the Rio Grande Valley Democrat had listened to four days of testimony from fellow congressmen, farmers, bankers, agribusinessmen and state officials before the House Agriculture Committee.

"An elevator operator told me today, 'You better give those farmers 100 percent parity and you'd better do it soon,'" de la Garza said Thursday when the committee hearings recessed until Tuesday.

Full parity plus limits on agriculture imports and an immediate increase on loan ceilings have dominated the subject matter presented to the committee.

"Parity simply means equality," offered one committee witness last week. "It means that a farmer is getting enough for his crop to equal his production cost plus a fair profit. It's not a guaranteed income to the farmer — if you can't guarantee us good crops, good weather and a good harvest, you can't guarantee us an income."

'We can't afford to stay here
...we can't afford not to'

"If common citizens understood what parity prices meant to the national economy, they would be out at the farm gate with shotguns to prevent the farmer from letting his production go to the market at less than full parity," testified Hereford farmer Jerome Friemel.

The Department of Agriculture estimates that farmers are currently receiving an average of 65 percent parity for their crops.

Farmers claim if this session of Congress fails to give them legislative relief, the concept of family farming in America is doomed and the country's economy is headed toward another Great Depression.

The presentations all have an air of desperation about them, said another Agriculture Committee member, Democrat Jack Hightower of Vernon. "They tell a story that seems to be uniform

We had heard that the agriculture situation wasn't as bad in some places" as others.

"That may be true but those people that aren't hurting now will be shortly. I'd have to say I believe what they have to say — this is a nationwide problem."

Hightower backed up his beliefs by introducing a bill calling for 100 percent parity if the farmer sets aside half of his crop-producing acreage.

President Carter, however, has voiced opposition to 100 percent parity, saying it is too high a price for the American consumer to pay.

Historically, vetoed farm bills have failed to garner the necessary votes for a congressional override.

In the Senate, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., introduced a bill that also ties parity percentages to set-aside lands. The bill was cosponsored by Texas Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

"Farmers are traditionally independent and this would give them the choice of using their land the way they think best," reasoned Hightower.

And at least one independent thinking farmer summarized the Washington scene thusly:

"Everything here is intermingled with everything else," noted Meek. "The Agriculture Department is tied in with the State Department and the administration is all tied up with the House and the Senate. You go to this man and he tells you he didn't make but part of the decision to do that. He sends you to somebody else. There isn't a straight road to travel in this town."

"We were told yesterday that one fifth of all our exported grain is shipped through the Panama Canal. The Senate is debating the Panama Canal treaties right now. Who would have thought the farmers would be so closely associated with that big ditch?"

Snow costs pile up on cities, states

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

As the snow melts, the costs rise. Half a billion dollars damage to Massachusetts homes and businesses. Twenty-four million to clear snow from Pennsylvania highways. One million to replace a boardwalk destroyed by high tides in New Jersey. Seventy-five million in two weeks of lost sales in New York City.

The blizzards of 1978, have strained state and local budgets in the North East and brought warnings of reduced services or higher taxes in some areas. No one wants to even try to make a guess at the total cost of the Jan. 20 and Feb. 6-7 blizzards that brought mountains of snow, high winds and floodwaters from Maryland and Delaware up the coast and into New England.

Officials talk in terms of tens of millions of dollars in cleanup costs, lost business and damage. Local authorities say snow-removal budgets were exhausted by the first storm, which brought over a foot of snow, and they don't know where they will find money to pay for digging out from the second storm, which brought 2 feet and more.

Massachusetts — where the trouble was complicated by two power blackouts in Boston — was hardest hit. Eight eastern counties in the state were declared federal disaster areas after the latest blizzard. Connecticut, Rhode Island and other parts of Massachusetts were declared federal emergency areas, meaning the federal government will pay 75 percent of the cleanup cost and make other aid available, including Army troops and equipment. John J. McNally of the Small Business Administration toured the New England region by helicopter. The verdict: 10,000 homes and businesses in Massachusetts destroyed, damage, $500 million.

McNally said damage in New Hampshire was estimated at $12 million, with 1,000 homes and 250 businesses lost, damage in Connecticut was estimated at $11 million.

The SBA official said he could not get close enough to Rhode Island to estimate the damage, but predicted it probably would top $12 million. Lorraine Silberthau, spokeswoman for Rhode Island Gov. Joseph Garrahy, said she asked for an estimate of damages and other costs. "They have no idea of any kind of assessment," she said. "They couldn't believe I was even asking."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said the storm would cost the state several million dollars in lost tax revenues. The state gasoline tax alone yields $400,000 a day, and gasoline sales were cut sharply when non-emergency driving was banned for several days.

New York City officials also had no idea what the cleanup bill would be. Brian Sharoff, an officer of the Metropolitan New York Retail Merchants operation, said the loss to his members from the Feb. 6-7 storm would be $10 million and "our businesses get about one-third of the consumer dollars spent in the city." That means an estimated weekly loss of sales of goods and services of $30 million throughout the city. The total for the loss stemming from both blizzards is near $75 million, Sharoff said.

Pari-mutuel betting may be on ballot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Leaders of the Texas Horse-racing Association claim they only need 16,000 more signatures to get a referendum on pari-mutuel betting placed on the May 6 party primary ballots.

Douglas McCrary of Calvert told a news conference Friday the goal is 75,000 signatures and they are arriving at the rate of 600 per day.

He said Calvin Guest, state Democratic Party chairman, had assured him that the issue will be on the Democratic ballot if enough signatures are collected by March 13.

"We have a private poll which shows that about 67 percent of the people believe pari-mutuel betting should be legalized on a local option basis. We want to see that sentiment verified in a statewide referendum," McCrary said.

Horse race betting failed by a slim margin to get a majority in a 1974 referendum, and a legalized betting bill died in the House Intergovernmental Affairs Committee last year without reaching a vote.

McCrary said the new proposal will include a requirement that all tracks be non-profit, plowing any excess over costs back into improvements or into charity. Indiana tracks finance 4-H clubs, McCrary said.

McCrary predicted that if a bill is passed, major tracks would be built in the Houston, San Antonio and Dallas-Fort Worth areas.

The state would get about five per cent of the take, which McCrary said should enrich the treasury by $30 million a year.

McCrary said the association would propose that the legislature create a racing commission to regulate and police the tracks.

"We don't want organized crime. We are going to do everything in our power to keep it out. The non-profit route, I think, will discourage it," he said.

He said betting was necessary for first class racing to take place because it provides the funds for policing it.

He denied that legalized race-track betting would be a drain on the economy.

"Go down to Louisiana Downs or Delta Downs some day and see the percentage of Texas cars down there. If we have racing, it will be a return flow, and that is what we are trying to create."

He cited a state Senate report issued in 1973 that said 19.9 percent of low income ($5,000 or below) persons surveyed in California went to the track as often as every other week.

"This is the Chinese year of the horse, and everything connected with horses is supposed to be lucky, and I think we picked the appropriate time," McCrary said.

Issues with eggs to feature Guill

Airline pilot Charles W. Simons, chairman of the Texas Right to Work Committee, will be guest speaker Monday for the first in a series of "Eggs and Issues" breakfasts sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

Breakfast will start at 6:45 a.m. at the Coronado Inn and will be "dutch" buffet, with each person paying for his own breakfast. The "Eggs and Issues" breakfasts are designed to educate and inform the public of legislative issues that will affect the citizens of Pampa.

The first breakfast will have two parts. One part will deal with the best method to contact your legislator and how to know whether the legislator's attention has been caught. This section will be given by Sen. Bob Price and former Rep. Ben Guill.

The second part will be concerned with the Labor Reform Act, Senate Bill 1883, on which Simons will speak.

Simons, 37, makes statewide appearances to alert Texans to the contents of the proposed Labor Reform Law due action this month by the U.S. Senate.

He has been a commercial pilot for Delta Airlines for 10 years. He is married and has a seven-year-old daughter.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Free enterprise fights back

As any business executive knows, free enterprise works extremely well — but the public doesn't understand how it works.

Worse, politicians, bureaucrats and other social planners decided almost 50 years ago that free enterprise really doesn't work at all.

So, during those four long decades, the social tinkers have tried to shove down the nation's throats a new system: one in which, ideally, nobody works.

That's right. Although they don't admit it, the Keynesian economists and political liberals are attempting to build a utopia — replete with big rock candy mountains, money trees, pennies from heaven. For almost five decades, the Keynesians have been seizing the fruits of those who work and distributing it to those who don't. It's called income redistribution.

And it doesn't work. Oh my, but it doesn't work. The nation has 'stagflation' (both high inflation and high unemployment) to prove it doesn't work.

Finally, however, free enterprise is fighting back. Companies are being encouraged to tell their employees, stockholders and their other public just how well the free market system works.

One group doing a very effective job of helping businesses tell this important story is the University of Southern California's Center for the Communication of Economic Information, which works hand in glove with USC's Center for the Study of Private Enterprise to help companies set up a program for dispelling economic ignorance.

In San Francisco, the USC team recently put on an all-day conference for executives in Western states. The approach was both macro and micro — that is, speakers spelled out the big picture — but also zeroed in finely on the small picture, or the nuts and bolts of putting such a program together.

The academicians at the dais sketched the big picture eloquently.

Professor Arthur Laffer, USC economist who heads the Center for the Study of Private Enterprise used one story to outline what is wrong with income redistribution schemes: "Suppose New York City imposed a tax, taking 100 percent of what people earned over $100,000," Laffer said. "What do you suppose this tax would net New York?"

"Exactly nothing. Everybody making over $100,000 would move to Connecticut or get a new lawyer and a new accountant. All too many congressmen and others believe that if the government severely taxes people in upper income brackets and redistributes the money (in the form of transfer payments such as unemployment compensation, welfare) to people at lower levels, everybody would be better off. "Nothing could be more nonsensical," said

Laffer. The reason: Society's productive people would just curtail their activities and soon the economy would be short of supplies with which to operate. It's happening all over the world today, he said.

USC President John Hubbard said the problem afflicts education just as perfidiously. "The private sector, locally and globally has its back to the wall," said Hubbard.

In 1945, higher education student bodies were split 50-50 between public and private institutions, he said. Today, only 23 percent of college students go to private institutions.

And government's dominance — bringing to mind Alexis de Ville's phrase, "tyranny of the majority" — heaps on the educational system similar "massive regimentation" and "degradation" by a "rapacious herd of social engineers" who also beleaguer business, said Hubbard.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan drew his bead on the big question too, by firing off, Gatling gun style, a series of one-liners on government oppression and incompetence. Reagan's best: "One way we could improve the postal service is paying its employees by mail."

But the main questions occupied the conferees, too. The main question: Just how does a company go about setting up an economic communications program?

The USC program revolves upon a number of basic strategies, but each company has to tailor a program to its own needs. Among the major steps USC recommends:

1. Surveys to discover how well employees (and others) understand our economic system.

2. Political Action Committees (PACs) within corporations which aggressively attempt to influence legislation.

3. Posters, payroll stuffers, contests, orientation and mass employee meetings, letters to homes — methods of communicating directly and indirectly with audiences.

4. Shareholder communication programs.

5. Special events, such as discussions with media or higher education personnel.

Justin Dart, chairman of Los Angeles' Dart Industries and chairman of the USC Center for the Study of Private Enterprise Advisory Board, served as a kind of elder statesman — the person with the most experience in the process.

Dart said he likes the "hard sell" approach. (Some participants said they preferred a much softer sell within their organizations.) Said Dart: "I'm not impartial on this topic; we're fighting for survival of our system. We shouldn't be timid."

Dart pointed out that only 500 companies have PACs, out of 50,000 which are large enough. Also, a bill in Congress would cut by 50 percent the amount an individual could give to a PAC, Dart pointed out.

Little support for S. 1883

(Right to Work News)

The National Right to Work Committee stepped up its fight against phony Labor Law "Reform" legislation recently with an open letter to 18 U.S. Senators, run as full-page newspaper advertisements in 10 states.

In the ads, which ran in 29 cities — from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida — the Committee calls on the senators to "stand up and defend the fundamental rights of working men and women" by opposing S. 1883, the so-called Labor Law "Reform" legislation.

Among those senators targeted because of their present refusal to give the legislation are Colorado's Haskell and Hart.

Reed Larson, president of the Right to Work Committee, said the ads are being used to further publicize "a dangerous situation which, in the long run, could adversely affect all of us."

He said the Committee also has mailed close to eight million information letters to voters around the country alerting them to the dangers of the Big Labor backed legislation. As a result of the mailings, the U.S. Senate has been "swamped" with mail — the vast majority of it running heavily against passage of the bill.

"Despite the tremendous odds against us," Larson said, "we feel we can stop this bill if the members of the U.S. Senate will listen to the voices from home."

"The Committee was the first organization to point out the compulsory union membership features of the legislation, even before it passed in the House. But even so, it is organized labor's top priority legislation, and the Carter Administration wants it badly in order to pay back Big Labor for its support in the 1976 presidential election."

"They want it despite the fact that if passed, it would deprive hundreds of thousands of American working men and women of their rights to choose between joining and not joining a union."

The Right to Work Committee stresses in its ads that the bill, S. 1883 in the senate, was written solely for Big Labor and has virtually no public support. It was written for the single purpose of increasing compulsory union membership in response to an overall decline in union membership in recent years.

The controversial legislation would give union organizers a heavy hand to use in bargaining session. It would steamroll union organizing through "quickie" elections. It would give the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), already biased against employers, massive powers to intimidate them further.

Union organizers would enter bargaining sessions secure in the knowledge that many employers could be blackmailed into handing over their employees to unwanted union representation.

Both Vice President Walter Mondale and AFL-CIO chief George Meany have sized up the importance of the phony "reform" bill to the Carter Administration and to other Big Labor barons. Mondale, in a recent address to the AFL-CIO's biennial conference, told the union hierarchy that the Carter Administration "has no greater priority" this year than passage of S. 1883. This pledge was made despite the President's repeated assurances to the general public that legislation dealing with energy and tax reform will be the Administration's first order of business.

Meany told a congressional subcommittee that passage would help Big Labor "get on to ... 14(b)," the provision in the Taft Hartley Act authorizing state Right to Work laws.

"It comes down to this," Larson said. "If this bill is approved in the Senate, it will be signed by the President. And then every working man and woman in America could find it even more difficult to earn a living unless they agree to join a union."

Members of the U.S. Senate are aware of the coercive features of this bill. A vote for it is for more Big Labor power; more special privileges for union officials, and more impingements upon the individual's right to choose for himself or herself whether or not to join a union.

FORUM...and against 'em

What would Abe say?

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-Editor
Three or four years ago we were visiting Jane's family in Kansas, and called at the home of a longtime family friend.

After the conversation had drifted naturally to subjects of mutual concern and interest to my in-laws and the friend, I drifted naturally to an old bookcase I had espied upon entering the home.

A rather worn and quite old looking volume caught my eye. "Life, Speeches, and Public Services of Abraham Lincoln. By J.H. Barrett," declared the printing on the spine of the tome. I slid it from the shelf. It had a comfortable heft to it. It was something like shaking hands with an old friend; the thickness of the book rested naturally in my palm.

The duration of the visit I spent poring over the book, forgetting family, friends, and ignoring all advice that Emily Post probably has to cover such visitations.

Father-in-law finally managed to gain my attention and asked what I'd discovered of such all-consuming interest. He shouldn't have. I exclaimed over the interesting volume, then began to read a piece or two from it.

"Why, this book was published the same year of Lincoln's assassination," I marveled.

"Listen to this," I said, taking over the conversation. "On the day he was shot, the 14th of April, he told a fellow named Schuyler Colfax — there's a street named after him in Denver, you know. Anyway, this Colfax was about to leave Washington for the mining areas in Colorado and Lincoln gave him a message to deliver. This is from a speech that Colfax gave after he got to Colorado:

"Mr. Colfax, I want you to take a message from me to the miners whom you visit. I have," said he, "very large ideas of the mineral wealth of our nation. I believe it practically inexhaustible. It abounds all over the Western country — from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific, and its development has scarcely commenced."

I glanced up and noted in that split second that family and friends all appeared politely attentive, but Jane was wearing the first stage of a "here he goes again" expression.

She was right. I was a bit out of control. "Now listen to this," I continued reading Lincoln's comment to Colfax:

"During the war, when we were adding a couple of millions of dollars every day to our national debt, I did not care about encouraging the increase in the volume of our precious metals. We had the country to save first. But, now that the Rebellion is overthrown, and we know pretty nearly the amount of our national debt, the more gold and silver we mine, makes the payment of that debt so much the easier..."

I went on to finish the interesting item ad, since it was time to leave, reluctantly returned the book to its space on the shelf.

If you marvel at my memory — recalling such a lengthy passage after the one reading of it — I must confess that my interest in and fondness for the old book were so obvious that the friend, on the following Christmas, gave it to me.

I've since done some research concerned about the national debt — increasing at a rate of $2 million per day during a war that involved the entire nation. Wonder what he'd think about the situation now. The national debt is rising at a rate approaching $100 billion a year — about $274 million for every one of the 365 days per year.

The interest on the current national debt — only the INTEREST, mind you — amounts to $48.6 billion each year. That's only a little less than $133 million daily.

Now, keep in mind that the figures don't deal with the actual national debt — only the amount of annual increase and current amount of interest.

The actual national debt — or that amount admitted by the government — is projected to be about $800 billion by the end of the year.

I wonder what Mr. Lincoln would have to say about that. I wonder what message he'd have for our coal miners and oil and gas producers.

If he were around to consider the runaway national debt, I wonder what he'd think about proposed legislation that will pay American farmers higher per unit prices as they cut back production of their products.

I suspect Mr. Lincoln wouldn't see cutbacks in production of farm goods as a sound way to combat the national debt problem. I believe he'd be unfavorably impressed with national policies on energy that penalize producers rather than encourage them to develop more oil and gas wells and more coal mines.

Wouldn't he wonder at the fix the government's gotten the nation into.

Deregulation differences still unresolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was to have been the week that finally saw a break in the long congressional deadlock on natural gas price controls, but predictions of a fast-approaching compromise proved wrong again.

Last week began with optimistic statements, but ended with no compromise in sight on the question of lifting government controls on natural gas prices, the thorniest part of President Carter's energy program.

Senate members of the conference committee, which is trying to resolve differences with the House, over bills passed by both chambers, did come close to compromising their own wide differences. They came so close that Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the top Senate energy negotiator, thought for a time that he had the votes in his pocket.

And warmed by Jackson's optimism, President Carter was telling congressional leaders at mid-week that the long impasse should be ended within a few days.

Well, it didn't happen. Carter's optimism showed unfounded, Jackson's pocket turned out to have a hole in it and as the week ended, the gas deregulation debate that has so long defied resolution remained unsettled.

The regulation vs. deregulation battle has been raging in Congress since the Supreme Court ruled in 1954 that the government has the authority to set the price of gas flowing in interstate pipelines.

Jackson's problem, however, is more immediate and can be reduced to a problem of simple arithmetic. He needs nine votes.

And, he's still three short — the reason he couldn't produce on his promise of a compromise last week.

"We were very close the other day. We were within reach," Jackson reflected glumly before he left town for a 10-day congressional recess and a trip to China.

Jackson's proposal, with the tacit backing of the Carter administration and of top House energy conferees whose support is vital, called for deregulation by 1985 — with the right of either the president or Congress to reimpose controls for a single two-year period.

Under that plan, between now and 1985, the maximum price allowed for gas could rise by 3 percent annually above the national rate of inflation.

The proposal would mean higher gas bills for consumers than the president's proposal — several hundred dollars more through 1985 for the average family living in a gas-heated home, according to one consumer group. But Jackson claimed it would cost far less than the Senate-passed bill calling for deregulation in two years.

Jackson, whom the administration is counting on to break the impasse, believed the proposal would end the deadlock among Senate conferees, which has prevented progress toward a compromise energy bill since early December.

'Turn away' policy to be topic

A "turn away" policy at Highland General will be discussed by the board of managers for McLean and Highland hospitals at a 6:30 p.m. Tuesday meeting in Highland's general conference room.

The policy would apply only to those with delinquent account balances that do not qualify as indigent, hospital administrator Guy Hazlett said. Emergency patients will be admitted.

The board will discuss a physical therapy services contract with Professional Services Inc. of El Paso that tentatively expires April 1. The present contract grants Professional Services 65 percent of gross billing.

Also on the agenda are: — The consideration of necessary capital expenditures, which Hazlett said "We're sitting on unless they're emergency."

— A chief-of-staff report by J.R. Donaldson.

— Sub-committee reports. — Approval of the Feb. 1 payroll, January accounts payable and the minutes of two previous meetings.

Pope wants rhythm research

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Ten years after he banned the pill and other artificial means of birth control, Pope Paul VI said Saturday that more research is needed to improve the rhythm method, the only contraceptive technique approved by the church.

The pontiff, in a message to an international conference on birth regulation in Melbourne, Australia, acknowledged his 1968 encyclical against artificial contraception imposed "difficult demands" on Roman Catholics. He asked for "special attention" for those Catholics who have not been able to obey his directives.

The rhythm method, or planned and periodic abstinence from sex, is based on the fertility of women for several days after ovulation. The church counsels couples to avoid sexual intercourse during that period. For women with irregular periods of ovulation, this requirement could mean abstinence from intercourse for three out of every four weeks.

The ruling 10 years ago sparked controversy that continues still. There have been reports that Roman Catholics are widely disregarding Vatican directives.

A major Roman Catholic study based on national representative samplings of American Catholics two years ago attributed steep declines in church practices — attendance at mass, financial support and daily prayer — to the ruling against contraception. The study said the encyclical caused Catholic religious practices to drop by a third.

The pope's views Saturday were outlined in a message sent on his behalf by Cardinal Jean Villot, the Secretary of State, or chief administrator of the Vatican. It was addressed to Archbishop Thomas F. Little of Melbourne.

"He (the Pope) wishes to support the activities of those men and women of science who are involved in research programs that promote means of birth regulation which fully respect the integral development of the human person and the dignity of a conjugal love that is constantly open to life," the French cardinal wrote.

Continuing research, Cardinal Villot said, can help better determine the moment of ovulation and "serve the whole medical profession by vindicating scientifically the natural methods of birth regulation."

It sanctioned the rhythm method, which also was permitted by the previous encyclical of Pius XI, issued in 1930.

Carter orders coal to move

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter ordered on Saturday that plans be drawn up for emergency movement of coal to areas running critically short of fuel needed to produce electric power.

Noting that some electric utilities have reduced power to industrial customers, the president said "more such cutbacks will follow even if the strike is settled soon, and employment impacts will be felt shortly."

Carter instructed Energy Secretary James Schlesinger to plan the emergency movement of coal in event it is needed and to continue efforts to shift electrical power from nonaffected areas to those running short of coal.

The coal strike, the longest ever by the United Mine Workers, went into its 69th day Sunday and could continue well into next month UMW representatives unofficially voted Friday to reject a contract that includes an average $10.25 hourly wage.

"Those in areas most affected by the strike have already made great sacrifices," the president said in a statement announcing instructions to his Cabinet to meet the coal supply problem. "Before the strike is over, and for several weeks thereafter until the normal flow of coal is restored, even greater hardship will occur."

The states with power companies facing the most critical shortages of stockpiled coal are Ohio, Tennessee, Indiana and Pennsylvania, an Energy Department spokesman said.

Those states have utility companies depending on coal stockpiles that had dropped to as little as 28 days' supply as of Feb. 4, said the spokesman, Frank Kelly. The coal stockpiles will be re-evaluated on Wednesday.

Kelly said the coal shortage is much more serious than the stockpiles indicate because coal at the bottom of the stockpiles is wet and mixed with mud, leaving some of it unsuitable for efficient burning.

Carter announced that federal air pollution standards are being relaxed in Ohio for 30 days so that industries there can make more efficient use of what little coal is left in that state.

Other states facing coal shortages are West Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Michigan and Virginia.

Carter said earlier that the coal shortage is not yet critical enough for him to use the Taft-Hartley Act to end the strike.

"The Taft-Hartley law gives me the authority to bring the federal government into the discussions only if the national security is threatened," Carter said in the meeting Friday.

"That point has not yet been reached."

Without directly referring to strike violence that has left at least two persons dead, Carter said he told Attorney General Griffin Bell to "plan for any federal measures that may be needed to ensure continued peace and lawfulness in the areas most affected by the strike."

The UMW bargaining council on Friday unofficially rejected a proposed agreement reached with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association. The union's president, Arnold Miller, postponed the council meeting after about 500 miners opposing the negotiated contract descended upon union headquarters in Washington.

40 die in Canada jet crash

CRANBROOK, British Columbia (AP) — At least 40 persons died and only a few survivors were pulled from the burning wreckage of a Pacific Western Airlines passenger jet which crashed while trying to land Saturday afternoon.

Witnesses said the twin-engine Boeing 737 apparently overshot the runway while making an approach during heavy snowfall, plowed into a six-foot snowbank and broke in two.

Only seven of the 47 persons aboard were known to have survived, said a spokeswoman for the Canadian airline.

No names were released.

Cranbrook Hospital said two persons were in critical condition, three in good condition, and two fair, including an 11-year-old girl. Earlier reports indicated one of the survivors was a flight attendant.

Injuries were burns and multiple fractures.

"I don't know how anyone could get out," said an airport employee. Witnesses said all that remained of the twin-engine Boeing 737 was the charred nose and a bit of the tail, with smoke still rising hours after the crash.

Witnesses said there was a ball of fire 200 feet high when the jet hit the snowbank.

First on the scene were people who were in buildings at the airport. Some of them said it took emergency vehicles 12 minutes to reach the burning plane.

A spokesman in the airport manager's office said there had been no indication of problems during radio conversations with the pilot before the landing.

The airport, on a wind-swept plateau between mountains, reported heavy snow all morning. An airport employee said visibility was so poor the surrounding mountains, a half mile away, could not be seen.

But Pacific Western regional manager Ruth Cowan in Vancouver said weather conditions did not exceed allowable operating limits for the plane's 1 p.m. MST. landing. Airport officials said operations had been normal all day.

The flight, No. 314 originated at Fort McMurray, Alberta, and was to have terminated at Castlegar, B.C., after stopping in Edmonton, Calgary and Cranbrook, which is about 180 miles northeast of Spokane, Wash.

Farmers visit Soviets to barter with wheat

By MILLER BONNER
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking farmers, claiming Soviet Union officials told them the Soviets might be willing to swap oil for the farmers' wheat, say they are looking into the possibility of such a barter arrangement.

Six farmers representing the American Agriculture movement took their problems to the Soviet Embassy to "find out why the Russians do not buy more of our agricultural products," said Marvin Meek, a Plainview, Texas, farmer and spokesman for the group.

"We were interested in finding out the possibility of taking care of our own marketing if the USDA and the United States government does not improve on their existing procedure of marketing of our products," said Meek, who insisted the meeting with the Soviet embassy's agriculture attaché was "not a dramatization."

"We realize this will upset the apple cart if we start storing our own grain and selling it on the foreign market but we have to do something. We're looking into it," Meek added.

During a Thursday afternoon meeting with Dr. Ivan A. Gavva, Meek said Gavva told them it might be possible for farmers to pool their grain and either sell it to the Soviets or trade it for oil on the barter system.

But Gavva said Friday that the farmers "asked about selling their grain without going through the middleman. I told them it was not my problem, not my place to say. They must talk with their government officials and Soviet trade mission officials."

Meek said Gavva also expressed the following concerns:

—It is easier for Russia to buy grain from Canada than the United States.

—U.S. grain arrives in Russia "in very poor condition, heavily infected with foreign matter and spoilage is almost always evident."

—The USDA limits grain sales to Russia and when the Russians "want more than this set amount the USDA must get approval before the sale can take place," causing long delays.

—Past U.S. embargos forced the Russians to seek grain from other countries.

The American Agriculture Movement, a Colorado-based farmers' group, called for a national farm strike in December claiming low farm prices and high production costs are plunging family farmers into bankruptcy. Farmers have been in Washington since Congress reconvened in January, staging rallies and lobbying congressmen and administration officials.

Panhandle man killed

PANHANDLE — A 48-year-old Panhandle farmer stockman died Saturday morning following a train-pickup collision at 4:45 p.m. Friday near here.

He was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo after an east bound train and his pickup crashed at a Santa Fe Railroad crossing 5 miles east of the city.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church of Panhandle with the Rev. David Campbell, pastor, officiating. Masonic graveside rites will be by Vici Masonic Lodge 465 of Vici, Okla.

under the direction of Smith Funeral Home.

Mr. Lingenfelter was born March 24, 1929, in Camargo, Okla., and was married to Leona Stevens on July 1, 1950, in New Mexico. They moved to Panhandle from Pampa in 1955.

He was a member of First Baptist Church, Vici Masonic Lodge. May have $750 million

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock volunteered the prediction Saturday that the 1979 Legislature will have a $750 million surplus — more or less.

Bullock said recent reports quoting assistant comptroller Walter Lillie as saying the surplus would be only $21 million "were incorrect."

Bullock was interviewed on the weekly radio show, State Capitol Dataline.

The $21 million, Bullock said, is what was left in the state treasury at the end of the last legislative session.

"Now we have two years to build up other monies," Bullock said, forecasting "natural increases" in revenue from the sales tax, franchise tax and oil and gas taxes.

He said these increases will "result in a very substantial surplus before the next session."

I think it will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $500 million to $750 million. It could be more. It could be a little less."

He said Texas' next major tax would be a corporate income tax but added that it may be a decade before such a tax is enacted.

Bullock was asked "how much" problems in the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs had hurt the re-election bid of Gov. Dolph Briscoe — who is Bullock's choice over Attorney General John Hill and former Gov. Preston Smith in the Democratic primary.

"I certainly don't think it's hurt him enough to change the election," said Bullock. "Unless a serious problem develops between now and May, I think Gov. Briscoe will win that race by 55-45 percent."

He said, however, "Anytime you have an irregularity in a particular office and it is uncovered by the press, instead of the department head himself it creates a doubt in the minds of the people ... Gov. Briscoe has been hurt to a degree by what's happened."

Sadat claims new talks 'step in cooperation'

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Anwar Sadat reviewed the Middle East situation at a meeting in Austria Saturday with Israeli opposition chief Shimon Peres and called the talks "a new step in our cooperation along the road to peace and security for our nations."

The Egyptian president then flew to Romania, the sole Soviet bloc supporter of his Mideast peace bid, to pick up his drive for international political and public support.

conference after talks with Peres at the 17th century Kleinsheim Palace near Salzburg, described the meeting as a resumption of the stalled Egyptian-Israeli peace drive begun last November when he made his historic journey to Jerusalem.

On his arrival in Salzburg Saturday morning, Sadat told reporters there is "sufficient momentum in the present peace initiative to achieve a final settlement."

Paralleling political and military negotiations stemming from the Jerusalem summit have mired over Egypt "demand for self-determination for 1.1 million Palestinians living under Israeli rule since the 1967 Mideast war, and Israel's insistence that it keep a score of Jewish settlements in Sinai when it returns the war-won peninsula to Egypt.

Names in the news

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has praised Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's efforts for peace with Israel.

"Sadat has changed the complete situation in the Middle East. For the last 30 years no Arab would sit in the same room with an Israeli," said Kissinger. "That was unthinkable even last year."

Kissinger also said he supports U.S. arms sales to Egypt.

"Since Egypt has broken its military ties with the Soviet Union, their arms request should receive a sympathetic hearing," he said.

Kissinger spoke Saturday at a news conference prior to speaking at a seminar sponsored by the University of Georgia's Alumni Society.

Michele Emerson, 9-year-old goalie for the otherwise all-male Waukegan, Ill., Shields amateur hockey team, got a Canadian cold shoulder.

Michele took to the ice Friday night for a scheduled exhibition game with a visiting Canadian team. The Canadians, citing their country's rules prohibiting playing against girls, stayed off the ice.

"They would not go on the ice," Larry Myers, manager of the Kenosha Ice Arena, explained.

While American amateur hockey rules allow girls and boys to play on the same team, the issue is being decided in the courts in Canada, where suspensions can result if teams compete against girls.

Myers said the impasse was resolved when the two teams had a practice session. Plans for a scrimmage fell through when the teams ran out of time.

Inmate may have been mobbed

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Jail inmate Larry Lozano may have been "mobbed and blanketed" in his cell and then taken to a jail corridor and beaten shortly before he died Jan. 22 in his cell, the San Angelo Standard-Times said in a copyrighted story in its Sunday editions.

The newspaper said its information came from interviews with sources inside the Ector County Jail.

The information conflicts with the report of Ector County

Sheriff Elton Faught, who said the 27-year-old Mexican American committed suicide by beating his head against the thick glass window of his padded cell.

The story said the sources reported seeing Lozano beaten while his head was covered with a blanket.

According to the sources, who signed statements, Lozano was dragged handcuffed from his cell and into a corridor by seven or eight persons.

Oilmen pessimistic about superport

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Hugh Scott of Seadock, Inc., says some oil executives do not share his view that the state and private industry can work together in establishing a terminal for supertankers off the Texas Coast.

Scott told the House Committee on Energy Resources Friday that federal restraints apparently have scuttled the industry's first effort to build an $800 million deepwater port 25 miles from Freeport.

He said the pullout of Mobil, Exxon and Gulf — 32 percent of Seadock's money — has left the "remaining six companies unable to continue" in the project.

Still in Seadock are Cities Service Co., Continental Pipe Line Corp., Crown-Seadock Pipe

Line Corp. The federal government's investment Co. and Shell Oil Co.

The federal government has indicated its offer to grant a license will expire April 20.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe could make the offshore terminal a state venture, but Scott said since the state cannot pledge its credit "the backing would still have to come from those who are unwilling to back Seadock."

"Unless the state is able to offer some kinds of new incentives or somehow lessen the risk to the investor, the project would still not be viable," he said.

He added, "I think ways in which industry can collaborate with the state can be worked out, but some in industry don't share my view and feel the state should pledge its credit."

Scott said the biggest ship that a Texas or United States port can handle is 50,000 tons, but the "500,000-ton ship, the ship of tomorrow, could cut shipping costs" by 62 percent.

Bringing supertankers into Texas' coastal waters, Scott said, would reduce port congestion and "cut (oil) spills to about one-tenth of what they would be if small ships were used."

"We're convinced," he said, "that Seadock will be beneficial to the Texas Gulf Coast environment."

"The Deep Water Port Act and the Seadock license processing gave certain elements of the federal government a vehicle to impose new controls of the industry," Scott said. "And the license was twisted to do just that. As usually happens in such cases, everybody ended up losers."

President G.E. Uthlaut of Exxon Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Exxon, Corp., said Exxon severed its relationship with Seadock after spending over $3 million because of numerous objections to the license provisions. He said, for example, the government could require Seadock to open ownership to others regardless of their financial capability.

Committee chairman Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge, asked, "Is this big government getting big business? Would you buy that?"

"I cannot comment on that," replied Uthlaut, "but the restrictions with which we are concerned are totally unnecessary."

Most of Texas' growth suburban

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Most of the state's population growth the last five years has taken place in suburban areas around Texas' big cities, not in the central cities themselves.

"Only 30 percent of the state's recent growth has been in the big cities for which the metropolitan areas are named," says a special report for the Texas Bureau of Business Research.

"About 59 percent of the state's growth and over 66 percent of the metropolitan area growth has occurred inside the standard metropolitan statistical areas but outside the city limits of the central cities of those metropolitan areas," said Dr. Charles P. Zlatkovich, research associated of the bureau.

According to U.S. Bureau of Census the state gained about 1,046,000 new residents between 1970 and 1975 with more than 88 percent of the gain occurring in the state's 25 metropolitan statistical areas.

"The fast-growing areas might loosely be described as suburbs, although most metropolitan statistical areas contain territory beyond the limits of what most people think of as suburbs," the report said.

Twenty-three of the metropolitan areas gained population but two areas — Sherman-Denison and Wichita Falls — showed overall net population losses. Four central city portions of four Texas metropolitan areas has net losses of population for the five years.

These were Dallas-Fort Worth and Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, in addition to Sherman-Denison and Wichita Falls. Only the Texarkana area reported a loss of population in its suburban territory.

Texas' largest metropolitan area, Dallas-Fort Worth, showed a central city net population loss of 31,500 residents in Dallas and about 35,000 in Fort Worth. At the same time the suburban portion of the Dallas-Fort Worth area gained 216,000 residents.

Houston increased its population by 73,000 partially through annexation of areas while the suburban area grew by 214,000.

San Antonio attracted more than twice as many new residents to its central city as to its suburbs. The city gained 65,000 while the suburbs got 29,000.

Austin had the most rapid suburb growth of any Texas city in the five years, with a suburb increase of 38.8 percent compared to 17.7 for the city. The net gain for the overall area was 86,000.

The El Paso area had an overall growth of 65,000, with 63,000 of them locating in the city.

Flood washes town, folks away

By PETER J. BOYER

Associated Press Writer

HIDDEN SPRINGS, Calif.

(AP) — They called this place

Hidden Springs because it was a little hard to reach, nestled in a crook in a stream high in the Sierra National Forest.

There wasn't much more than a few cabins, a recreation hall and some decent trout fishing, if the stream wasn't dry.

City-weary visitors were greeted by the tiny hamlet's closest thing to a billboard, a plastic lighted sign that read,

"Hidden Springs — Trout Fishing. Camping. Picnicking —

Beer Wine."

The sign is still here. But when the sun broke through the clouds Saturday, the town was not.

Friday's relentless rains turned Hidden Springs' placid little stream into a fearsome river that scooped up the hamlet and carried it crashing down the canyon wash. A few people managed to crawl to higher ground in the predawn terror. As many as 21 people didn't, and rescuers who looked

Saturday feared many of the missing will never be found.

Searchers on horseback and in helicopters probed the craggy canyon for victims. An early morning helicopter search found no signs of survivors.

Hidden Springs, in the San Gabriel Mountains 25 miles north of Los Angeles, was hit harder than any other Southern California area by the devastating storm.

At least nine persons were dead and many more were missing. Authorities said some of the missing may simply have been out of town.

"Some of them may be in Las Vegas having a good time. We just don't know," said Los Angeles County Deputy Sheriff Carl Riegert.

The storm, coming on the heels of two storms earlier in the week that had saturated the area, caused dozens of mudslides and closed roads and downed thousands of trees and numerous power lines.

As the storm moved east, it changed to snow, and heavy snowfall was reported in the Southwest and the Rocky Mountains. Snow also fell in the Great Plains, and the National Weather Service predicted that the snow would reach the already-buried Northeast by Monday.

Cleanup operations from two blizzards in the last three weeks continued in the Northeast, and a spokesman for the Massachusetts Public Works Department, Bill Pizzano, said, "I don't think anyone can handle more snow at this time."

Valley farmers cheer Hill

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — From under the brim of a farm strike cap the speaker belted out a stream of pro-strike rhetoric as a cheering crowd of 1,000 yelped its support.

The speaker, John Hill, scored some points at Friday's Rio Grande Valley rally, a strike leader said after the rally.

Attorney General Hill, seeking to retire Gov. Dolph Briscoe, told the American Agriculture Movement representatives what they wanted to hear — the evils of corporate farming and the virtues of the family farm.

"If we lose the family farmer, we'll lose the flavor of that kind of living. That would be disastrous," Hill told the football stadium audience.

There's little doubt Hill won the support of many of the protesting farmers here. One problem may be that many of them, perhaps half, are from out of state and will not vote in Texas' gubernatorial contest.

But Fred Lundgren, a strike organizer from Austin, said he was impressed by Hill's brief talk in the chilly weather.

"Until now, I was concerned John Hill was using American agriculture as a political soap box. But now, after hearing him, I really believe the man is sincere and devoted in his efforts to help us," Lundgren said.

Hill said some things that might hurt his campaign in the valley, Lundgren said. The candidate complained that the takeover of family farms by "big cartels and big corporations" would send prices "through the ceiling."

Corporate farms control a large portion of the valley's agriculture. One of those corporate farmers, Wayne Showers of McAllen, told a television reporter that big farms are the most effective way to feed America. Two persons on the farm, Showers said, can feed 98 non-farmers.

It is the family farmer that strike leaders are trying to reach in the valley. But at Friday's rally, only about 50 farmers got to their feet when Valley producers were asked to stand and identify themselves.

Lundgren said he realizes the movement has a long way to go in the area. American Agriculture Movement is asking farmers here to cut their crops by 50 percent. Four strike offices are opening in the area and out-of-town leaders will remain here another week to get the local farmers "where they'll strike themselves."

Harvie hopes drop, 48-40

By TOM KENSLE
Pampa News Sports Editor

The foul line has contributed to Pampa's demise several times this season, and Friday night it again turned out to be the culprit.

Blane Smith, the Sandies' 5-8 playmaker, sank all six charity attempts in the final minutes to doom Pampa, 48-40, in an emotional sudden-death district clash.

With the victory, before a near packed house of 2,500, Amarillo High all but snaps the three-year 3-AAA reign of the Harvesters.

The Sandies can clinch their first loop title in 10 years by defeating Palo Duro Tuesday. It was the first time since 1970 AHS had beaten Pampa twice in one season, and the Harvesters' first district loss at home since 1974.

Before the game, Amarillo Coach Barry Arwine said his strategy would be to keep the Sandies close, and hope for a final spurt.

The game plan worked perfectly.

Amarillo outscored Pampa, 16-5, in the final 4½ minutes to break open a see-saw affair.

The contest started out as a game of "cat and mouse" between Coaches Arwine and Gary Abercrombie. Arwine pulled Pampa out of a zone defense early when guards Smith and Kevin Parker were ordered to play "catch" near mid-court.

Then AHS decided to go for the quarter's last shot with 1:21 left. However, Pampa's Rusty Ward stole an errant pass and drove for a slam dunk and the Harvesters took an 8-6 lead into the second stanza.

Pampa lengthened the advantage to 21-16 by intermission, but Ricky Bunton's third personal with 0:03 remaining seemed to pick up the Sandie spirits.

Bunton was whistled for his fourth foul with 1:40 left in the third stanza, and moments later Jeff Helton swished a 15-footer to give AHS its first lead since the opening seconds, 30-29.

"There's no question that Bunton's fourth foul changed the momentum," Arwine reflected after the game. "Our kids knew we had them when he sat down."

Bunton returned for the beginning of the final quarter, and his blocked shot and two AHS turnovers helped the Harvesters regain a 35-32 lead.

But two free throws by Parker and buckets by Russell Shaffer and Victor Mitchell turned the advantage to the AHS side, 38-35.

Blane Smith converted on six-for-six from the charity stripe in the final minutes to clinch the Sandie surprise.

Both teams appeared to be tight, especially at the outset. For the game, Pampa shot only 32 percent from the field, while Amarillo hit for just 39 percent. However, the Sandies converted on 12 of 17 from the free throw line, while Pampa made four of nine.

"We missed an awful lot of good shots in the first half and then when their zone tightened up in the second half, we couldn't get the ball to our big men," said Abercrombie. "We just didn't create opportunities for ourselves."

Sandie mentor Arwine was particularly pleased with holding Bunton to nine points after the 6-5 senior scored 34 points in the first encounter.

"It was obvious that our plan would be to sag in on Bunton and make the other people take the shots," he said. "And I thought Victor (Mitchell) did an exceptional job in the middle."

AHS got balanced scoring from Smith (12), Mitchell (12), Shaffer (10), and Parker (eight).

Abercrombie summed it all up this way: "There was a lot of pressure on this team from the fans, and the kids felt it."

"But we had them at home where we wanted them, and if we can't beat them here, we don't deserve to win." Pampa finished 19-8 overall.

In the preliminary game, the AHS junior varsity edged the Shockers, 67-64, despite 28 points by Pampa's Doug Baird.

The Shockers ended the season at 11-13.

AHS 48: Blane Smith 3 6 12, Jim Widdon 1 0 1, Kevin Parker 2 5 8, Victor Mitchell 3 2 12, Russell Shaffer 4 2 10, Jeff Helton 2 0 4, Totals 18 12 48.

American, Canada skiers surprise in World Cup

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — American and Canadian skiers had a field day in two snow-swept World Cup races Saturday, beating the entire world elite in a downhill and special slalom on the same day.

Phil Mahre, 20, of White Pass, Wash., twice defeated Sweden's world champion, Ingemar Stenmark, and the Austrian, German and Swiss stars to take both heats of the special slalom by a margin of more than 1½ seconds.

Earlier in the day, Canada's Ken Read and his countryman, Dave Murray, took first and second place in the downhill race, leaving Austrian world champion Josef Walcher far behind in fifth place.

It was the American team's first slalom victory of the season, but Mahre remained in third place in the World Cup standings behind the unbeatable Stenmark and Austrian Klaus Heidegger.

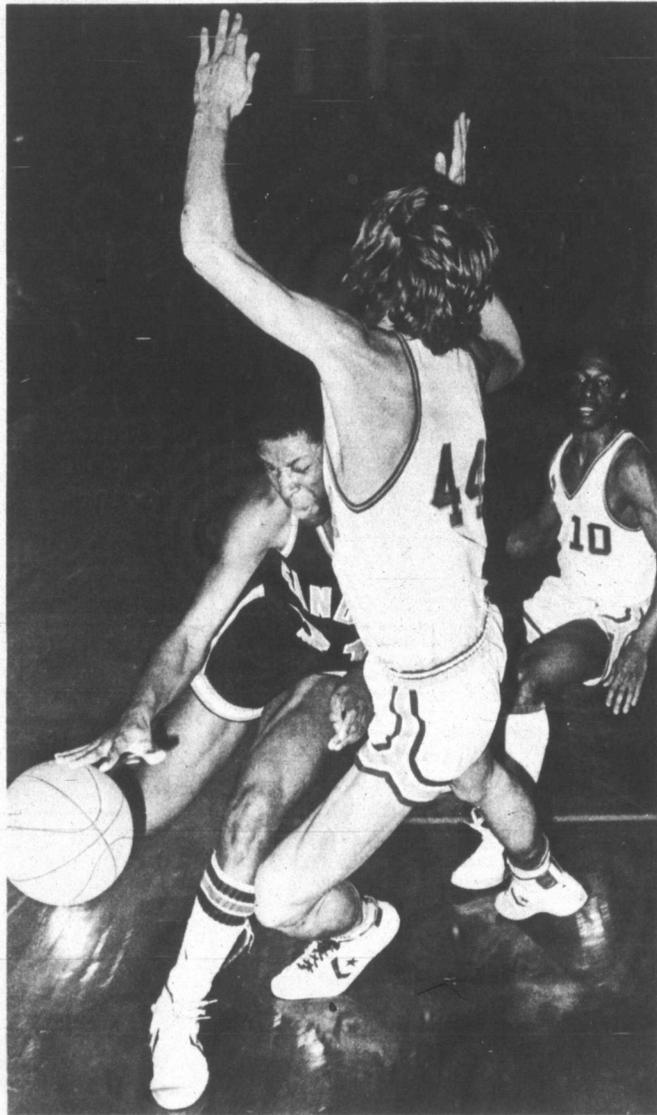

"I trained pretty aggressively before the race," Mahre said after his decisive victory. "After I took the first heat, I knew I had nothing to lose and everything to win. So I skied the second run pretty hard. It was an easy course but a long one."

U.S. men's Coach Harald Schoenhaar said Mahre's race proved that he could beat Stenmark in the slalom. "It's a pity he fell in the slalom race in the World Championships in Garmisch," he said. "I feel sure he could have taken the world title."

For the two Canadians it was the biggest national triumph in any race since the World Cup was inaugurated in 1967 and the first Canadian victory in any World Cup race for two years.

Read, 22, of Calgary won the 3,622-meter-long race, 16-hundredths of a second ahead of Murray, 24, of Vancouver. Both were far down the standings in the World Cup.

Up with your hands!

Rusty Ward, trying to draw a charging foul from Amarillo's Kevin Parker, led Pampa players with 13 points in Friday night's 48-40 loss to the Sandies. Ward has hopes of playing college ball next year, while Steve Duke (10) will be back in the Green Pit for his senior season.

Spartans win

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Forwards Earvin Johnson and Greg Kelsey combined to score 46 points Saturday and spark Michigan State to a 73-62 Big Ten basketball victory over archrival Michigan.

The victory just about wiped out any hopes the Wolverines had of defending their championship as they fell to 7-5 in the conference and 12-8 overall.

The Pampa girl cage teams took three of four games with Amarillo schools in Friday and Saturday contests.

Pampa's sophomores smashed the Caprock tenth-graders, 46-23, at the Longhorn gym Friday, and then obliterated the Palo Duro sophs, 54-22, Saturday afternoon at the Pit.

Tammy Minyard scored a total of 27 points in the two games, while Debbie Albin added 20.

The Sophs are now 14-7 overall and 10-5 in league play. The Girl Harvesters dropped a 48-30 decision to Caprock Friday, but came back to romp past Palo Duro at home, 44-29, Saturday.

Watson, Rogers tied in Bob Hope Classic

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson, the top money winner of 1977, shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to tie unheralded Bill Rogers, the second day leader, after the third round of the flood-delayed 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Watson, playing in the same foursome with former President Gerald R. Ford and host Bob Hope at Indian Springs, had six birdies in missing only one green to post a 54-hole total of 203, 13 under par.

Rogers, playing at La Quinta, considered the toughest of the four courses used in the $225,000 tournament, shot a 5-under-par 67 after which he said, "I was very fortunate to shoot a 67. My putting saved me."

"It seemed like when I wanted to make a putt I did," he said. "I didn't drive the ball well or hit the irons as well as I did the other day, but I never got into real bad trouble."

Only 1 stroke behind the two leaders was Jerry McGee, who had a 7-under-par 65 at Bermuda Dunes even though he said, "I'm playing horrible."

His score tied for the low round on the day.

Mike Morley also posted a 65. Peter Oosterhuis, picking up a 68 at Eldorado, was 3 strokes behind Watson and Rogers at 206 while Danny Edwards, shooting a 69 at Eldorado, was 4 strokes behind.

Watson, winner of the Tucson Open and the Bing Crosby earlier this year, continued to complain about his driving, but said his putting was excellent.

"I drove the ball well up until the about the 11th hole and didn't hit a fairway from the 11th hole on," said Watson. "But I was fortunate on the 17th and 18th to have shots."

Closing out a chapter on Harvester basketball

Unless lowly Palo Duro can pull off the upset of the decade in the Sandie gym, Friday night's Amarillo win closed another chapter in Harvester basketball.

And I can already hear the boo-birds flocking together, ready to peck away at the Pampa coaches and players who were "only" 19-8 and didn't make the bi-district playoffs for the first time in four years.

But before those fine - feathered friends leave their fair - weathered perches, let's look at the facts.

Sure, the Harvesters were pre-season district favorites, and yes, there was really no excuse for losing the season's "big game" at home.

But it wasn't really surprising that the victory celebration was in Amarillo Friday night.

Pampa's 1977-78 edition probably had less talent than any other Harvester team in the past six or seven years. Agreed, two players (Ricky Bunton and Rusty Ward) had enormous ability, but two - man teams, as a rule, don't go very far in 4A basketball.

While the rest of the cast was made up of hard-working, games competitors, there were no Rayford Youngs or Brian Baileys to be found.

Only Bunton, Ward and captain Tim Reddell saw previous varsity action, and juniors Steve Duke, Steve Stout, Darrell Hughes and Doug Skaggs were probably a year away from reaching their potential.

Aside from the lack of scoring support for the big men, Pampa had two season - long weaknesses which were bound to spell doom in close ballgames. The Harvesters hit only 51 percent of their free throws, a deficiency which cost them the first Sandie game and contributed to several other losses.

And team passing, especially the transition pass from the guards and wings into the postmen, was not a Harvester credential. Bunton and Ward combined for only 22 points Friday night, but a closer look at the stat sheet reveals they took only 11 shots apiece.

It's tough to score when nobody can get you the ball.

People have criticized Pampa coaches Gary Abercrombie and John Randles for ditching the familiar patterned offense for a running game, but let's face it, the Harvesters' greatest victories (Dallas Carter, Borger, Tascosa) came off the fast - break offense.

Early experience against Altus, Okla., Wichita Falls and Perryton showed the coaches that, because of the size of its guards, Pampa did not match up well enough against most teams to rely on a patterned game plan. So why not take advantage of the team speed?

Let's face it, this was not the Harvester team of old, and should have been evaluated only on its own merits. The team had potential, and did give us many thrills, but a district championship was to be strived for and not expected.

There's an old sports saying that goes, "a coach always knows when it's time to leave." Perhaps Robert McPherson picked the opportune time.

And it's not going to be any easier for Messrs Abercrombie and Randles next year. Somebody said, "Johnny Wooden wouldn't win with next year's bunch." I wouldn't go that far, but certainly Tascosa and possibly one or two other teams will be picked ahead of Pampa.

The party's over folks. Other district teams are getting better and better, and Pampa's domination appears to be at an end. The Harvesters will always have the Green Pit and tradition working on their side, but schools with larger enrollments are going to have the advantage.

Pampa may win another three titles in succession, but let that be a goal and not an expectation.

Fratianne eyes world ice title

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — With this year's two major skating championships a month apart, America's top three female skaters approach the events in uniquely different ways.

The two competitions are the U.S. Figure Skating Championships, which ended here Saturday night, and the World Championships, set for March 7-12 in Ottawa.

The final two major gold medals were awarded in the gold dance and the senior men's competition late Saturday.

Linda Fratianne, the defending national and world champion, set her sights differently than her two closest rivals, Lisa-Marie Allen and Priscilla Hill.

"Hopefully, you peak for the world," said Fratianne, who won her second straight national title Friday night with a consistent, yet slightly cautious, free-skating program.

"I think I'll do better in the worlds," said Fratianne, 17, from Northridge, Calif., after winning the gold medal in the nationals. "I don't think I skated my best tonight."

Fratianne's early lead, accumulated in the other two phases of the competition, kept her ahead of Allen, the 17-year-old rising star from Garden Grove, Calif., whose sparkling free-skating performance gave her the best marks for that segment of the competition and jumped her from fourth place to second in the overall event.

"I think the nationals are more important than the worlds," said Allen of the American competition that is, at the same time, a major championship and a qualifying event for the worlds. "That's why I peaked for the nationals."

Next month's world championships will be the first for both Allen and Hill.

"I try to peak for the nationals and try to peak again for the worlds," said Hill, a 16-year-old from Lexington, Mass., who won the bronze medal here.

Ben Hogan dispels the myths

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent NEW YORK (AP) — "The Wee Ice Man." "Blue Blades." "The Mechanical Man." "The Man of Steel."

Twenty-five years after the greatest feat in a single season ever recorded by a professional golfer, a mellowed, more communicative Ben Hogan reveals those names don't fit — he is human, after all.

"The better I play the more nervous I get," the 65-year-old fairway legend told Nick Seitz of Golf Digest Magazine in a rare silver anniversary look back at his 1953 golfing Triple Slam.

"Always I am tight as a banjo string."

He made other surprising revelations:

"I was a fairly steady putter, but I wasn't a good putter at all. I putted awful in the British Open. The caddy wouldn't even look at me when I putted. He'd turn his head and cover his eyes."

"To me, there's not enough daylight in a day to practice all the shots you ought to be practicing every day."

He exploded a few myths: That he always went to a major tournament a week to 10 days in advance and memorized every blade of grass and took exhaustive notes before officially teeing up the ball:

"No, I get credit for that stuff. I didn't do it," he said. "I tried to keep it in my head. I didn't want to know the yardage. There are too many variables."

That he had set a personal goal to win the three major championships in 1953:

"I didn't think that way. I just tried to hit every shot as well as it could possibly be hit. You can't plan on things like that. Those things ... just happen."

At age 40, four years after a near-fatal automobile crash and at an age when most golfers are well over the hill, Hogan won the Masters, U.S. and British Opens in 1953. Probably the only reason he didn't win the PGA was that he didn't play in it.

The triple sweep represented a pinnacle in golf. Giants such as Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen never did it. Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson have won two, never three, of the Big Four in a season's span. The feat is rated at least the equal of Bob Jones' amateur-pro Grand Slam in 1930.

For those who followed Hogan almost every footstep during that memorable period, it was a compelling experience. His long shadow spread over his contemporaries of the day — Byron Nelson, Sam Snead, Jimmy Demaret, Roberto DeVicenzo and Peter Thomson — and it was almost as if in every

What's up in women's tennis

"How can anyone so young be so good?" asked Australian tennis player Dianne Fromholtz last year after an upset loss to 14-year-old Tracy Austin.

Fromholtz is not the only tennis player marveling at the abilities of the pint-sized Austin, who recently became the nation's fourth ranked female tennis player. Austin is the youngest ever to place so high in the U.S. women's rankings; Chris Evert, the previous record holder, was 17 when she was ranked third in 1971.

Heiden dominates skating meet

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Eric Heiden, the defending champion from Madison, Wis., swept two races Saturday and took a commanding lead in the men's World Sprint Speed Skating Championships.

Eric's sister, Beth, won the 500-meter race and took second in the 1,000 meters, giving her the overall lead in the women's division halfway through the championships.

Eric, 19, who won the junior world title in Montreal, was timed in 38.22 seconds over the 500-meters and clocked 1:17.47 over the 1,000 meters, nearly two seconds ahead of his nearest competitor. The victories gave Heiden 76.955 points with two races remaining, clearly ahead of the field and unbeatable unless he should fall on Sunday.

Beth, 18, who combined with her brother a week ago for a brother-sister sweep in the world juniors clocked 42.97 in winning the 500 meters and was second to Kim Kostrum of St. Paul, Minn., in the 1,000. Kostrum was timed in 1:28.77 and Beth in 1:29.16. Beth had 87.550 points going in to Sunday's races while Kostrum vaulted from fourth after the 500 meters to second overall with 88.205 points.

Eric — who won all three world titles last year, the juniors, the sprints and the all-around — skated the 1,000 meters alone after Dutchman Meil Govaert fell in the first corner, yet he handily defeated Terje Andersen of Norway, who was second in the 1,000 in 1:19.45.

Duck population down

By J.D. PEER Texas Parks & Wildlife

CANYON — Recent aerial counts of ducks and geese in the Panhandle and on the South Plains by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department personnel furnished no surprises as most of the natural playa lakes remain dry.

"Our counts were down 75 percent over last year and the lack of water is the main reason," said Max Traweek, waterfowl biologist.

"Normally, the plains of Texas has over 6,500 playa lakes with enough water to hold waterfowl during the winter months, but only 250 lakes with water were counted on our most recent survey," Traweek continued.

Lack of rain last fall and this winter coupled with a drastic reduction in the amount of irrigation in the winter wheat has reduced the surface water in and along the playa lakes.

Food in the form of corn, maize, and wheat has always been plentiful with large flocks of waterfowl flying from the playa lakes to the fields each morning. The few remaining playa lakes are drawing most of the waterfowl that have not already headed south and the potential spread of various bird diseases will increase as the lakes become full of ducks.

Plains residents are asked to call 806-665-3631 if any dead or sick waterfowl are spotted before the spring migration north in late March or early April.

★★★ LUBBOCK — A lack of water and little food are two of the many factors which lead thousands of sandhill cranes into new or little - used areas near Andrews, Abilene and San Angelo this winter.

This influx of cranes allowed would - be duck and goose hunters to participate in the three month season which ended Jan. 31, but caused avid crane hunters to search for birds in the traditional areas of Lynn and Terry counties south of Lubbock.

A state - issued crane permit was required of each crane hunter prior to hunting the bird and the Austin P&WD office issued 4,929, down from last year's record 5,060.

All crane hunters issued a permit will be receiving a questionnaire asking for more important aspects of the hunt including days hunted, birds bagged and - or lost, and location of hunt.

As crane hunting becomes more popular, it is estimated that more waterfowl hunters will participate in the hunt next fall.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Arizona's Kenny Davis dropped in a pair of free throws with eight seconds remaining to cinch a 68-64 Western Athletic Conference basketball victory by the Wildcats over Texas-El Paso Saturday.

The Miners had trailed throughout the second half but had battled to a 59-59 tie with 3:02 left in the regionally televised game before losing in the final seconds.

Larry Demic collected 18 points as his Wildcats upped their season record to 13-8 and their conference slate to 4-5. Tim Marshall added 15 points.

A new approach to history

It doesn't have to be dull

When history turns fiction, it's more memorable

EDITOR'S NOTE — "History," Henry Ford once said, "is bunk." Without knowledge of history, most practitioners of the historical craft contend, people would be perennial children. Following are some musings on history and its various levels of relevance to the nation today.

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The Hay-Pauncefote Treaty? It abrogates the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. It's right there in the history book and it might be on the final exam. So you'd better learn it.

The Missouri Compromise. Was it before or after the Kansas-Nebraska Acts? Where does the Dred Scott decision fit in and what's its relation to the Wilmot Proviso?

Millard Fillmore, James K. Polk, James Buchanan, Rutherford B. Hayes, Chester A. Arthur.

William Henry Harrison, Benjamin Harrison, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor.

The Battle of Yorktown 1781. The Battle of Yorktown, 1862. The Battle of Saratoga. The Battle of Bull Run. The Battle of Manassas.

Lord Cornwallis, Gentleman John Burgoyne, U.S. Grant, Robert E. Lee.

John Wilkes Booth.

History. Names, dates, treaties. Heroes and villains. Presidents. Memorize them, answer the questions, forget them. Ten years later, try to remember any of it. The names seem familiar, but not immediately pleasurable. We laugh about obscure presidents and about Hay and Pauncefote, and we certainly can't relate them to our own lives.

Why do Americans know so little about their country, even a year after we celebrated its Bicentennial? Why do our leaders make so many mistakes? Can't they learn from those of their predecessors?

"The standard approach to history deadens people." — David Herbert Donald, Charles Warren professor of history, Harvard University.

There is a non-standard approach that historians and sociologists agree provides many Americans with their knowledge of history. It's called fiction, often a movie or television version thereof.

"Gone With the Wind," a best-selling book for three generations of Americans, also is the most-widely seen film of all time. Its message: Peaceful plantation life with happy slaves disrupted by evil Yankees sweeping down on Atlanta, sacking and burning everything in their wake. The Yankee commander, Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, justifies the pillage with three words: "War is hell."

Except that reputable authorities do not consider "Gone With the Wind" an accurate picture of Civil War-era Georgia. "A stereotyped, shallow, sentimental romance," says Professor Floyd Watkins of Emory University.

Nor did Sherman ever say "War is hell," at least in that context. He did write a letter to the mayor of Atlanta pointing out that the war had become a total war, particularly since Southern troops were shelling his army from within the city limits. "War is cruelty, and you cannot refine it," is how he phrased it.

School is for work. Movies and television are for fun. People tend to remember more when it's presented to them in an atmosphere of leisure.

"The impact of a film on our consciousness is extraordinarily deep," says Dr. Harvey R. Greenberg, a New York psychologist and author of the book "The Movies on Your Mind." "They take complicated issues and make one side God and the other side the devil, and we leave the theater remembering the message."

One such message repeated incessantly was the settling of the American West. Until the last decade or so, the screen depicted it as peaceful white men set upon by hordes of savage Indians. Then the Indians entered our consciousness; the whites had usurped land that native Indians had lived on for ages. And the screen duly showed it.

But what concerns experts is that we rarely see a middle ground. "Historically accurate movies are boring," says Greenberg.

Michael J. Arlen, a television critic, also is wary of the screen version of Indian affairs.

Two years ago, ABC presented a film on the plight of the Nez Perce Indians, driven from their homes in 1877 by the U.S. Army. It was, Arlen wrote in The New Yorker, a good attempt at showing the mistreatment of Indians. But he was dismayed at some historical inaccuracies and "political highlighting of white brutality and avoidance of Indian brutality."

He added: "Much of the genial haziness of our historical perceptions certainly lies in our restless modern tampering with reality in the guise of providing 'attractive information,' or even of righting past wrongs; thus, if Indians were once misshown as savages, we will now presumably assist the Indian by mis-showing the settlers as brutes."

"Most history courses are survey courses. They have no people in them," says Harvard's professor Donald, who won a Pulitzer Prize for a biography of Charles Sumner, a Civil War-era senator.

It is Donald's contention that we can gain most by studying people; by depicting Abraham Lincoln and George Washington as human beings rather than demigods. He thinks Jimmy Carter might do well to read, as Woodrow Wilson did, the diary of Gideon Welles, Lincoln's secretary of the Navy. It might tell him how, or how not to, deal with his cabinet members.

Several years ago, Clark Clifford, the Washington lawyer who has advised Democratic presidents since Truman, talked about his turnaround on the Vietnam war. At first an ardent hawk, he became secretary of defense in 1968 and was so disillusioned, he persuaded President Lyndon B. Johnson to de-escalate the war.

"When Vietnam came along, he said, 'there was never any difficulty for me to accept the concept that we had better do something. I saw how in the '30s we had done nothing to stop Hitler, and I related the same way to Vietnam. I thought we had Munich all over again.'"

But that was wrong, he said.

The analogy didn't work. The times, the events, the places were different. Professor Donald talks about that too — that the world has changed and it can often be dangerous to apply long-ago events to the present.

There is a theory among historians, enunciated by Donald in a recent article on the New York Times op-ed page, that the 20th century began in 1945; that until then we had an unlimited supply of resources and that now we don't. His conclusion was that much of our history is irrelevant, as was applying Munich to Vietnam.

But that means, Donald says, it is all the more important to study history, for it teaches us to collect evidence and draw conclusions from it.

He notes that as a graduate student, he worked on a biography of Lincoln. Just before it was to appear, some Lincoln papers were to be unsealed, and the publisher worried the book might be dated before it came out.

A real turkey

Wilma's backyard ZOO

Story by Steve Williams
Photography by Ron Ennis

Bobcat

Mrs. Fillingin feeds her chubby raccoon a marshmellow.

If Noah ever needed to replenish the ark, he could devote at least 200 cubic cubits to the Fillingin ranch over by Briscoe.

The place abounds with critters. Willa Fillingin has been collecting them, in all shapes, sizes and dispositions, for the past 30 years.

A partial list would include cattle, horses, chickens, ducks, geese, three old tom turkeys, a yearling deer, two flying squirrels, a pair of spotted mice, a dozen greyhounds, three peacocks, a sassy raccoon, some guinea pigs, a whole passel of rabbits, some quail, a pregnant goat, more dogs and cats than you'd find in a city pound, and two bobcats.

With the exception of the bobcats, they're all tame.

Willa used to have a pet badger, but it died. She's also had some pet beavers, several other pet deer, coyotes, meadowlarks, skunks, sheep, pigs ... the list is endless.

They all seem to get along reasonably well, although the goat tolerates no nonsense from the dogs, lowering its head and charging at almost every opportunity. She purchased the goat, which is due to kid in April, to suckle the deer.

Her husband, E.G., keeps the greyhounds to hunt coyotes, but Willa is threatening to get rid of them. "They're just too much trouble and they eat too much," she says. "And besides, they belong to E.G. and he's been laid up with a busted pelvis for a couple of months, so I have to feed them." E.G. sustained the injury in a fall from a horse while chasing a coyote.

Willa keeps chickens around so she can sell the eggs, and occasionally feed some to the raccoon and bobcats.

The bobcats, Kep Kelly and Caper (Caper's the female), mate once a year. So far, Caper has thrown 10 cubs, four in the first litter and three in each of the last two.

Willa had an offer of $75 each for the first four from a pet shop owner in Wisconsin. She put them in a box with "Bobcats" prominently labeled on the outside, and put the box on a plane bound for Milwaukee via Dallas. The box never arrived, and backtracking by the airline revealed it had never left Dallas. "And we never got our money for them, either," Willa recalls with a trace of annoyance in her voice.

Kep Kelly and Caper live together in a ramshackle cage affair constructed of odd bits and pieces of wire, tin, boards and other scavenged building materials. Every once in a while, according to Willa, one of the chickens will wander too close to the cage, a long, razor-clawed paw will flash through the wire, and ... no more chicken.

"A while back I was walking past the cage and Kep reached out and ripped open my fingernail with his claw," she says, holding up the offended digit for inspection. But that's not usual. For one thing, she's learned to keep clear, and for another, the big cats usually stay in the back of the cage when anyone's around.

She's had the male since 1973, and the female was live-trapped by a neighbor and given to her in 1974. It's legal to keep them caged under Texas law, since they're predators. The same is true of the raccoon, who's not dangerous but who would wreak havoc and destruction among the feathered folk, given half the chance.

A grove of cottonwoods out back of the house shelters most of the menagerie, and a makeshift fence circles the grove to give a generally defined boundary to the place.

Any skunks she comes across, she's able to deodorize herself. Wiley McRea, the old Rodeo clown who used animals in his act, used to buy them from her for about $5 each. "He was buying them from pet shops at about $30 a throw until he found out I had 'em," she recalls.

Willa says that every once in a while she'll take some baby animals to her Sunday School class, and area children will come out on occasion to do some petting and fondling amongst the feathered and furry denizens.

But not often ... which is too bad, because it really is better than any zoo. And for kids, it's the kind of place to dream about.

Head nurse has few minutes to spare

By CHRIS EDWARDS
Pampa News Staff

Mrs. Geneva Gobin, director of nursing at Highland General Hospital, really doesn't have time to talk to reporters.

Not that she's rude about it or anything — she's not — but planning and coordinating the activities of 81 nurses is indeed a task.

"I've got six minutes to spare and two people to see," she said shortly before a meeting — probably one of many — at the hospital.

In between phone calls and dor knocks, the 35-year nursing veteran talked of the need for continuing education for nurses. "Let's upgrade," she said.

Mrs. Gobin, nursing supervisor since November, plans to encourage programs that will keep the nurses she supervises up-to-date on the latest medical advancements.

A nurse must keep educated on advancements, know how to work with others and learn how to control her emotions, she said.

"If someone is really sick lots of times they're not themselves. You have to understand people," she said.

Mrs. Gobin, a registered nurse, received her training at the Union Hospital School of nursing in 1943. She moved to Pampa in 1944 and was supervisor of coronary care at Highland before moving to her present job.

A dying patient is something all nurses must learn how to deal with, she said.

"Of course we get upset, but you have to learn to preserve yourself," she said. "Don't show any emotion."

Nursing care has improved in the last 35 years, Mrs. Gobin said. Among changes she noted were more male nurses, which she approves of, and the practice of getting a recuperating patient up out of bed as soon as possible.

Married to Paul Gobin, a retired Cabot Corp. employee, since 1944, Mrs. Gobin has two children and a grandson.

When she isn't making sure patients get well, she quilts.

"You can really relax. It's fun," she said.

"Someday my children and grandchildren will want something for a keepsake."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Tuesday, Feb. 14, is St. Valentine's Day, so don't say you weren't tipped off in time to come up with some flowers, an appropriate card, or some thoughtful little token of your affection for HIM—or HER.

But being lovable is a full-time job, so if you want to make yourself lastingly lovable (and absolutely irreplaceable), post this checklist where you can see it daily:

FEMALES:
Never ASK him if he loves you. But do tell him often that YOU love HIM. (And if you can back it up with several good reasons why, lay it on!)

Never criticize him in public. But if you have a criticism, be sure it's constructive and offered in the spirit of helpfulness and love—never in anger or as a put-down.

Clip newspaper and magazine articles that might help him in his work—or perhaps a cartoon or some amusing item you think he'll enjoy.

Don't bad-mouth his friends. Or worse yet, his family. (He can't pick his relatives.)

Never keep him waiting.

Every man needs a desk, a cupboard, a closet or nook to call his own. Don't try to "tidy it up," even though it's a mess of clutter and an eyesore.

If he likes your hair a certain way—wear it that way. (At least when you're with him.)

Don't call him at work unless it's very important.

If he eats (or drinks) too much, don't nag him about it. But do remind him in a loving way that you wish he'd take better care of his body because you want him to be around for a long, long time.

Develop some interests other than him. The more outside interests you have, the more fascinating he'll find you.

Don't quiz him about where he's been or who he saw when you weren't along.

Never try to make him jealous.

Never lie to him. If there's something you don't want to tell him, reserve the right to refuse to answer, but if you tell him something, be sure it's the truth.

Don't sulk. If something is bugging you, talk it out and clear the air.

Keep yourself kissing clean from top of your head to the tip of your toes. A woman can't bathe enough!

Surprise him occasionally. A little love note left on his pillow, in his lunch pail or taped to his bathroom mirror will warm his heart.

MALES:

Tell her you love her.

If you like the way she looks, cooks, dresses, walks, talks, smells—let her know it. You can't compliment a woman too much. All women need constant reassuring.

Never keep her waiting. If you know you're going to be late, call her and let her know.

Tell her you love her.

Dig up a date for her homely, lonely cousin.

Never try to make her jealous.

Remember your manners, and show her the same respect and courtesy you give to those you don't know as well.

Tell her she's prettier than her mother.

In addition to remembering her on all the traditional gift-giving occasions (her birthdays, your anniversary, Christmas and Valentine's Day), surprise her with a small gift for no special reason.

If you've had an exceptionally wonderful evening, on the following morning, send her a single rose—or make it a daisy—they don't tell.

If she's flat-chested and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice.

For no reason at all, walk up behind her and plant a kiss on her neck.

If you have a criticism to make, do it in private. (And never in anger.)

Tell her you love her.

Remember, cleanliness is next to godliness, so when you feel turned on, turn on the shower and jump in!

When you're at a party together, never leave her alone while you're off being charming with someone else. Most women are inclined to be insecure and not as aggressive as men in social situations.

Tell her she is absolutely the most wonderful person in the world—and she'll believe YOU are!

Now—both of you—if you want to be loved—love! It pays enormous dividends—and it won't cost you a dime.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M. D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I was hospitalized with a coronary last November. The actual diagnosis was acute myocardial infarction essential hypertension, which my doctor never fully explained. I would appreciate it if you would explain in layman's terms.

I have lost about 30 pounds but the doctor wants me to lose another 10. He recommends walking and watching calories. I'm currently on Hydrochlorothiazide for water and five Aldomet daily. My latest blood pressure reading was 170 over 210.

I used to smoke two packs of cigarettes a day and quit cold-turkey in the hospital but now find the urge very strong. I haven't smoked since and would like to know exactly how harmful a low-tar filter cigarette would be. I have sneaked a few, but that is all.

DEAR READER—Your diagnosis means you have fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries to your heart muscle and that the obstruction they caused was enough to cause part of your heart muscle (myocardium) to die (infarct). The dead heart muscle is replaced with scar tissue. You have a serious and, if not controlled adequately, fatal disease.

Three of the important factors that need to be controlled to prevent progression of your disease are your blood pressure, and your level of blood cholesterol, as well as the cigarette smoking.

It is very important to control your blood pressure. The medicines and reduction in body weight should help. You should lose every ounce of fat under your skin until there is no evidence of a roll or fat pad around your trunk anywhere. You will not get the maximum benefit out of weight control unless you go this far. Many doctors let patients stop losing weight too soon and never see the remarkable benefits that can be achieved with adequate treatment.

Smoking cigarettes may increase your chances of having a heart attack or dropping dead three times what it would be for a non-smoker. And those low tar cigarettes help some, but not enough. In addition to the nicotine in cigarettes, smoke also contains carbon monoxide. This may be higher in some of the filtered cigarettes that cut down tar and nicotine. You are making a terrible mistake in "sneaking a few." That is enough to get you back on the habit. The only way to stay off cigarettes is to stay off completely and forever. Don't be trapped into thinking that you can smoke just one.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-12, After the Heart Attack, to give you more information on what kind of program you should follow to achieve the best recovery possible. It is, incidentally, the same program everyone should follow in the first place to avoid a heart attack. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Homemakers news

By ELAINE HOUSTON
County Extension Agent
Check Home-Canned Foods for Safety

The art of home canning enjoyed a revival last year as homemakers tried to beat rising food prices. This renewed interest in home canning makes it especially important to be sure the foods are safe to eat. Check your cans to make sure there are no bulges (lids should be concave), no off colors and no off odors. A can with any of these characteristics should be discarded.

All home-canned foods should be cooked—at boiling temperatures in an open saucepan for 15 minutes. This insures that if harmful bacteria are present, they will be destroyed and the food will be safe to eat.

Keeping Frozen Food Safe

Consumers should be aware of the safety of frozen food from the time they first look into the display case in the store. Be careful to buy frozen foods stored in commercial freezer cabinets only if they are stored under the line marked for safety level. Buy frozen or refrigerated foods last, then take them directly home to the freezer. Home freezer temperature should be kept at 0 degrees F. Labels on many frozen foods tell whether the product can be refrozen. It's not a good idea to refreeze unless the label says this won't harm the food.

When using frozen foods, plan ahead so they can be defrosted in the refrigerator. Thawing foods at room temperature for long periods can permit bacteria to grow, producing illness. Thaw foods in the refrigerator.

Food Safety Mailout Series

Some of the unpleasant symptoms such as diarrhea, headache, vomiting and stomach cramps that spoil a family's fun may not be due to a "bug"—virus or influenza. Improperly handled foods could be the culprit. During family gatherings, many times foods are left on the table for hours where room temperature can lead to the growth of bacteria. Many foods provide the warmth and moisture that bacteria need to thrive—they begin to grow rapidly in foods held for three or four hours at temperatures between 60 degrees and 120 degrees F.

The growth of harmful bacteria can be controlled with a few basic precautions.

To learn more about food safety sign up today for a food safety mailout series. The free mailout series will consist of eight letters on how to serve safe meals, storing leftovers, specific bacteria and their symptoms, and food-borne illness. The series will begin March 1 with one letter to be mailed each consecutive week for eight weeks. It is available free—everyone is invited to enroll.

To sign up contact the County Extension Office at 669-7429 or write Star Route 2, Box 33, Pampa, Tx. 79065.

Abortion rules planned

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A woman shall be shown that the fetus growing inside her can squint, frown, swallow and make a fist. She shall be told that aborting that fetus may make her feel depressed and suicidal.

These are among detailed provisions of a proposed abortion ordinance now under consideration by a committee of the Akron City Council. The ordinance would regulate three abortion clinics and a fourth family clinic that sometimes performs abortions. There were 5,574 abortions performed at those facilities last year.

The proposed ordinance, written by an anti-abortion coalition called Citizens for Informed Consent, also dictates how the remains of an aborted fetus would be disposed of, requiring they be taken to a licensed funeral director.

Public hearings on the ordinance last week included testimony from supporters, who say it would serve as a model for other cities, and opponents, who say it demeans and aims to intimidate women.

Robert Goehler, chairman of the city council's health and safety committee, said a recommendation on the ordinance to the full council would come before the end of February.

Details of the proposed ordinance include:

—Any woman seeking an abortion would have to give 24-hour notice of the operation either to the father of the fetus or, if she is younger than 18, to her parents. A girl younger than 15 must have the written consent of her parents.

—Abortions would be prohibited after 22 weeks of pregnancy except to save a woman's life. The presence of two physicians would be required if the fetus might survive—one to perform the abortion, the second to care for the fetus.

—A woman seeking an abortion would have to be informed "that her unborn child can squint, frown, swallow, move the tongue, make a fist and is sensitive to touch, if more than nine weeks have elapsed since the time of conception."

—That abortion is a surgical procedure which can result in serious complications, including sterility, miscarriage and prematurity in subsequent pregnancies, and even death.

—That abortion may leave essentially unaffected or may worsen any existing psychological problem she may have, and can result in severe emotional disturbances, including depression and suicide.

—Calorie-watchers will enjoy steamed codfish served with a tomato sauce enlivened with green pepper and onion. Use more of the green pepper than the onion.

TV Star Scene

Robert Conrad doesn't forget a favor it seems. Twenty years ago, the late movie and TV star Nick Adams offered to help Conrad get started in Hollywood. Adams introduced Conrad around Warner Bros. Studios where he won his first lead as one of the stars in the 'Hawaiian Eye' series. Today the roles are reversed: Conrad introduced a blond, blue-eyed 16-year-old to the executive producer of 'Black Sheep Squadron'; thus Jeb Adams will make his television debut via the man who got started through his father. Adams will play Jeb Pruitt, an under-age Marine replacement pilot who causes problems for Gregory 'Pappy' Boyington, who is played by Robert Conrad.

Glynnis O'Connor is happy these days... she played a headstrong 22-year-old who ends up jilting her boyfriend on 'NBC Family Circle Choice Presents 'Black Beauty'' on Jan. 31. Says Glynnis, 'I meet this boy, we fall in love and become engaged. He buys the horse, Black Beauty, in order to impress me and to court me. But, as things turn out, I leave him and run away - a free spirit, who doesn't want life to pass her by.' Glynnis will also play the late tennis great, Maureen Connelly, in 'Little Mo.' She's being taught championship tennis play for the movie by Nancy Chaffee Kiner, a former opponent of the real 'Mo.'

The ABC series 'Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew Mysteries' will have an 18-year-old blue-eyed blonde in the starring role. Nancy Drew fans will meet actress-fashion model Janet Louise Johnson who will make her series debut in the 'Voodoo Doll' episode, also starring Parker Stevenson and Shaun Cassidy.

Ted Knight, the pompous, preening anchorman from 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' is expected to star in his own CBS series next month. He'll play the head of a New York escort service in 'The Ted Knight Show'... Richard Thomas will be rejoining his family for two episodes when he returns to 'The Waltons' after a one-year absence from his role as 'John-Boy.'

PBS will challenge our perceptions of world events in their new series 'World.' The new series will begin with a day in the life of NBC Nightly News, as an example of the means through which most Americans view the world. Documentaries from other countries will also be used.

Singer Olivia Newton-John doesn't just sing and look pretty; it seems she also studies cheetahs. The singer recently made a trip to South Africa where she took a look at cheetahs in captivity. The expedition will be shown this season on ABC's 'American Sportsman' series.

Elizabeth Montgomery will go from witches to pioneers starting Feb. 19 when she stars in the new NBC miniseries, 'The Awakening Land.' The series will depict the settling of Ohio through 30 years in the life of a pioneer woman. Hal Holbrook - a native of Ohio - will play the heroine's reluctant suitor, who is married off when he's drunk. Says Holbrook, 'Like most couples, these two are slight misfits, and their sins are visited upon the young.'

Zsa Zsa Gabor will remember the burning of her Bel Air home in the March 15 edition of 'When Havoc Struck,' the syndicated series about natural disasters of this century. Gabor was philosophical about the disaster that struck her home in 1961: 'I wasn't a victim - the insurance company was,' joked the actress.

And where has George Chakiris gone? The star who seems to have disappeared since his 1962 performance in 'West Side Story' has actually been acting steadily since in film roles ranging from a Hawaiian doctor to an Aztec prince. 'I've done quite a lot of acting since 'West Side Story' but the pictures were just not very good or very successful,' says George. 'For some reason people seem to correlate failed pictures with a failed career. I started being asked where I had gone. Well, I hadn't gone anywhere.' One place George recently appeared was ABC. On Jan. 20, he starred in 'Return to Fantasy Island.'

TV Dialogue

TURN-ON — Could you please tell me who was that handsome, sexy hunk of male who played Edgar in 'The Class of '65' set in Appalachia? I haven't seen him in and when? A.M. Stevens, Portsmouth, Ohio

It's good to know someone's getting something out of TV. The fellow who flickered so sexily across your screen was Don Johnson, somewhat of a newcomer to TV. His exposure has been kept to guest shots so far, on such shows as 'Streets of San Francisco' and 'Police Story'. Don't know what he's working on right now. But your best bet for catching him again is to keep his name in mind and an eye on the listings.

DEAD DUCK — Why was Adam 'Drake' dropped from 'Edge of Night'? He was the star, and I never figured they'd murder him? Mrs. Betty Ogden-shier, Kansas City, Kan.

The actor who portrayed Adam was proving a bit difficult, particularly in the salary department I'm told by sources on the soap scene. So the producers simply decided it was cheaper and easier to not renew his contract and kill-off Adam Drake.

HIGH FLYER — Where can I write to congratulate Robert Conrad and NBC for keeping Black Sheep Squadron on the air? Some of us "young" WW II fliers tried to help keep 12 O'Clock High on the air, but we were shot down. Sure glad "Pappy" and Co. are still hanging in there. The series shows that American troops are really, after all, human beings. L.R. Newport News, Va.

I'm sure they'll be glad to hear from an old-time flyboy. Write Conrad and crew care of the show at Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

BETTY BYE — Could you tell me all you can about Betty Buckley of 'Eight Is Enough'? How old she is, when her birthday is, etc. I think she is a terrific actress. D.S., Oakville, Conn.

Although she hasn't let loose on the show yet, Buckley has a huge Broadway-style singing voice, which is how she came to debut in her home town of Fort Worth, Tex., in "Gypsy" at age 15. She continued from there to work her way through school singing in summer stock productions.

Since her father disapproved of show business, Betty majored in journalism at Texas Christian University. While there, she won Miss Fort Worth and appeared in 'The Miss America Pageant'. After graduation, she went to work as a reporter for the Fort Worth Press and also toured Southeast Asia with a U.S. troupe. Finally, she took the plunge and went to New York, starring in '1776', 'Pippin', and in London, 'Promises, Promises.' She then did the film, 'Carrie,' and now 'Eight Is Enough'. Her birthday is July 3, but the year is undisclosed. Betty's latest endeavor was to travel to India as part of her study of Hatha Yoga.

BOB'S BOY — I recently saw a movie on TV about a young man who tries to avenge his father's death by mobsters. Karl Malden was in it, looking like he just walked off the set of 'Streets of San Francisco'. But who was the guy, blond, blue eyed, etc? P.S. That was Olivia Hussey in the picture, no? Marcie Blybecker, Jonesboro, Tenn.

The movie was 'Summertime Killer,' by the sound of it, and I'm surprised you didn't recognize that blond fellow. He's Chris Mitchum, Bob's son, and something of a look-alike for his father. Yes, it was Olivia Hussey. Actually the real stars were the motorcycle and dog.

DUSTY DOINGS — Was 'The Graduate' Dustin Hoffman's first movie? How old was he then, and now? Jackson Kennedy, Dallas, N.C.

Let's say it was the first movie he'd want to talk about. Actually, earlier that year (1967) his real debut was in 'Madigan's Millions,' an Italian production in which he played an IRS agent opposite Cesar Romero. Hoffman was 30 in '67 when he played misunderstood Benjamin, so add 10 and he's 40 now. Hard to believe isn't it?

Send your questions to TV Dialogue care of Pepper O'Brien NEA, 230 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

New farm customers sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the farm sector clamoring for more intensive efforts to promote U.S. commodities abroad, the Agriculture Department and the Overseas Private Investment Corp. have devised a new program aimed at long-term new customers in underdeveloped countries.

Unlike many foreign-aid programs that are aimed at modernizing the farming practices in the so-called Third World, the USDA-OPIC approach announced Thursday is a business-insurance plan aimed at establishing new consumers in those nations: grain-processing mills, granaries and livestock herds.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lobbying of American Agriculture. While most witnesses continue to detail the crunch two years of low grain prices are putting on individual farm families and the rural businesses that depend on them, some told the few panel members present that the issue is a moral one as well as an economic problem.

The Rev. Andrew Gottschalk, rural-life director of the Denver Catholic archdiocese, said, "The farm folks who have been stalking you ... the last four weeks are asking for that which is their right to have and your solemn duty to secure." equality with other citizens.

Another Texan, Seagraves school Superintendent W.L. Willingham, told the panel in a letter that 25 students have dropped out since mid-January as their farmer-parents move to seek jobs elsewhere; absenteeism is up among pupils who have inadequate clothing; and tax collections are running 12 percent below a year ago.

Members of Congress this week continued to focus their responses to weeks of lobbying by protesting supporters of the American Agriculture group on domestic actions.

On Thursday, for example, the Senate adopted by voice vote a non-binding resolution that calls on President Carter to pay farmers an average of $70 an acre to take 50 million of the 270 million acres they plant to grains and cotton out of production this year.

The Senate resolution also calls for one-year boosts in the price support levels that a sweeping overhaul of farm policy set four months ago.

Carter and agriculture secretary Bob Bergland have opposed both that and the diversion payments, urging farmers instead to put part of what's left of three years of bumper harvests into long-term storage as collateral for loans and to trim wheat acreage by 20 percent and feed grain planting by 10 percent, without payments.

In Paris Thursday, Bergland summarized his position for other nation's agriculture ministers at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development meeting.

"Governments should be responsive but not over-reactive to short-term circumstances. We will continue to have ups and downs, shortfalls and over-production, and should permit enough flexibility so that natural adjustments can occur."

The House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, completed the first four days of its seven days of hearings into the general farm situation, spurred by

The sale will be at the Texhoma Livestock Commission Co. Yards in Texhoma, Okla., will be on April 1.

While visiting with some cattlemen and with Dr. David Woods in the McLean area, we learned some producers are having some phosphorus deficiency problems in their cow herds. Cowmen sure need to keep out some good mineral year-round. Salt or mineralized salt just isn't enough to do a good job.

What is a good mineral? It should have at least 8 to 12 percent of calcium and phosphorus. This may be hard to find, but one old stand-by that will certainly get the job done is steamed bone meal. It has about 26 percent calcium and 12 percent phosphorus. You can then mix the bone meal in with loose salt to prevent it from blowing away. By self-feeding the salt-bonemeal mixture cattle will generally get enough to balance their needs.

Some of the symptoms being observed in these phosphorus deficient cows include abortions, small calves, lower calf crop, decreased appetite, rate of grain and milk production.

Range, Pasture Short Course

A two-night Short Course on pastures, range and brush control will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 14, in the McLean High School Agriculture Building. This meeting will center around Weeping Lovegrass production. Topics will include establishment, fertilization, management, and production economics. Dr. Frank Petr, area Extension agronomist, and Dr. John McNeill, area Extension beef cattle specialist will present the formal program. A panel discussion which will include some local producers will participate in a question-answer session at the conclusion.

The second night program will be held in Pampa at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 16, at the Courthouse Annex. This program will cover Range Management and topics discussed will include brush control, weed control, grazing systems and expected economic returns from improved management practices. These topics will be explained by Dr.

Cancer risks believes lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary results from a major study of young women whose mothers took the synthetic hormone DES indicate the daughters may face less of a risk of early genital cancer than previously believed.

The federally sponsored study found no cancers after examining about 1,500 daughters of women who took DES while pregnant, the project coordinator disclosed Thursday.

However, many of the young women had abnormalities in the cells lining the vagina, and it is unknown if this could indicate a greater risk of cancer later in life, he said.

Dr. Leonard T. Kurland of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., disclosed the first findings at a meeting in Washington of the advisory committee of the National Cancer Institute's Division of Cancer Control and Rehabilitation.

Kurland, head of the institution's department of medical statistics and epidemiology, cautioned that the unpublished findings are preliminary and that more work has to be done

Would you help this kid?

When the dam broke at Buffalo Creek, West Virginia, a lot of people weren't as lucky as this little guy.

Jamie and the rest of the Mosley family made it up the hill just in the nick of time. Seconds later, a wall of water swept all their earthly possessions away.

Here you see Jamie in the Red Cross shelter, thinking it all over.

One look at that face, and we're awfully glad we were there to help.

Every year, you know, Red Cross touches the lives of millions upon millions of Americans. Rich. Poor. Average. Black. White. Christian and Jew. With support. With comfort. With a helping hand when they need it.
