

Coal miners OK tentative agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The striking United Mine Workers union today reached a tentative contract agreement with a major independent coal producer as Labor Secretary Ray Marshall began consulting with congressional leaders about "definitive" action to end the 77-day-old soft coal strike.

The large, coal companies BCOA members mine about half the nation's coal. P&M has 800 to 1,000 mine employees and six mines in Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas. The tentative P&M pact must be approved by the union's bargaining council and the union's membership. "If the contract is approved by the miners, P&M could begin producing coal, helping to ease shortages in some areas. But more importantly, the tentative agreement is expected to intensify pressure on the BCOA and the UMW to come to terms

It was not immediately clear how long it will take for the tentative P&M contract to be voted on by the miners. Merlin Breaux, Gulf Oil's vice president for industrial relations, said the tentative P&M contract represented a compromise between what the UMW wanted and what BCOA wanted. The UMW's bargaining council had previously rejected a BCOA offer because the union objected to clauses imposing penalties on miners who go out on wildcat strikes. Breaux said other coal companies have three alternatives follow the P&M contract pattern, continue negotiations with the UMW or stand by and let Carter intervene. Sources said the tentative P&M contract does not provide fines for miners participating in wildcat strikes. Wages could rise a maximum of $2.40 an hour over three years including cost-of-living allowances. UMW miners now average $7.80 an hour. The contract calls for P&M to guarantee the health and pension benefits of miners and their dependents. This has been a key sticking point in the negotiations between the BCOA and the union. The breakthrough in the P&M contract came as administration officials were exploring the possibility of encouraging individual settlements between BCOA companies and local UMW units. The government could provide mediators for such an effort, for example, although this process would be time-consuming. Carter is going to consult with Congress on "definitive" action to end the 77-day coal strike which already has forced some power cutbacks and industrial layoffs and is threatening more. White House officials say the administration will consult with the congressional leadership on a series of options including temporary federal seizure of the coal mines, binding arbitration or invoking the Taft-Hartley Act. Sources said Carter is likely to recommend a combination of these. "You have to have a lot of tools in this bag," said one source. The strike began Dec. 6 with most utilities reporting 90-day emergency stockpiles of coal, but those supplies have dwindled and electricity cutbacks already are in effect in some areas. Mass industrial layoffs are feared with some government estimates saying the number of those out of work could reach five million.

Carter has authorized Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky to temporarily relax air pollution standards so that remaining coal can be burned more efficiently. Congress would have to enact special legislation to permit a takeover of the industry or to allow binding arbitration to end the strike. In addition, administration sources say that invoking the Taft-Hartley Act is unlikely because of the widespread belief that the striking United Mine Workers members would ignore a back-to-work court order. The White House announced its intention to take "definitive action" after conceding that the collective bargaining process failed to end the strike. "The possibility remains for the two parties to resolve their remaining differences," White House press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday. "However, it is clear that we can wait no longer to initiate the process of resolving this matter by other means. We hope that as the process proceeds both parties will seriously reflect upon the unfortunate consequences of this breakdown in the bargaining process," Powell said in a prepared statement.

Cypriots release Egypt commandos

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Greek Cypriot government said today it is releasing the Egyptian commandos who survived their abortive attempt at a Cypriot airport to capture the killers of one of President Anwar Sadat's chief spokesmen. But it rejected Egypt's request to send the two Arab assassins to Cairo for trial.

The two terrorists, who had been holding 11 Arabs hostage aboard a Cypriot jetliner after a futile attempt to find refuge in the Arab world, surrendered to the plane crew as soon as the shooting started Sunday night. The hostages and the four members of the plane crew were unhurt. The Cypriot government today issued a statement on behalf of the terrorists, who claimed to be Palestinians, saying they belonged to no organization.

Radio Cyprus and a government spokesman announced that Egyptian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kamel had interrupted a visit to West Germany and rushed to Cyprus to confer with President Spyros Kyprianou. But Benjamin told reporters later Kamel had not arrived, and aides of the Egyptian foreign minister in Bonn said he was not interrupting his visit to Germany. Kyprianou accused Egypt of violating his island nation's sovereignty. But he said his government would do what it could to "restore normalcy" to its relations with Egypt.

Washington's birthday observed

If America was ever to have had a nobility, it would have begun with George Washington. There were some who wanted to confer the title of king upon him. In observance of Washington's birthday today, banks, savings and loan associations, post offices and federal and state offices are closed.

The interior minister Christodoulos Benjamin told a news conference that the captured Egyptian soldiers would be allowed to return home with their arms. But he said Cypriot and not Egyptian courts would try the two Arab terrorists, who killed Cairo newspaper editor Youssef el-Sebaei in a Nicosia hotel Saturday. They were formally charged with murder today.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, which had deplored Saturday's assassination, charged in Beirut, Lebanon, that the two acted for the intelligence service of Iraq, a hard-line Arab state opposed to Sadat's peace dialogue with Israel.

The two terrorists said they were Palestinians. They were identified in court as Samir Mohamed Qatar, 28, a Jordanian citizen, and Zayed Hossni Ahmed Alali, 26, who carried a Kuwaiti passport. The two gunmen shot and killed editor Youssef el-Sebaei, a close confidant of Sadat, in the lobby of the Nicosia Hilton Saturday morning. Brandishing pistols and grenades, they seized 30 hostages but released 19 of them after the Cypriot government supplied a Cyprus Airways DC-8 and a crew of four to take them out of the country.

The Dallas Times Herald Sunday said potential hazards from leaky lines that can't meet state and federal safety standards are depicted in Texas Railroad Commission records. Joe Piotrowski Jr., director of the commission's gas utilities division, said, "It's a miracle that we haven't had a major disaster yet. Gas is funny. You can't see it. You can't smell it or taste it, but it's there and it's dangerous. The fact is that many of our systems were laid in the 1940s and 50s. They are not cathodically protected and they corrode. With a cold winter, the pressure increases, and they spring leaks."

Despite the dangers, some Texans tend to adopt an attitude similar to the one Californians have regarding earthquakes. A shopping center in Grangerland last month registered gas concentrations at the explosive level. Gas remained in the building for three days after the system was shut down and the building was evacuated. "Why it's been leaking for 30 years and nothing blew up yet," remarked a service station attendant. Piotrowski said the East Texas town of Huntington, where three Texas Railroad Commission engineers worked all last week to patch 28 dangerous leaks, is far from the only potential disaster among Texas gas systems.

An Egyptian C-130 military transport arrived in Cyprus today to pick up the four dozen surviving Egyptian commandos and the bodies of 15 comrades reported killed in a battle with Greek Cypriot troops who foiled their Entebbe-style raid Sunday night at the Larnaca Airport 30 miles southeast of Nicosia. A British Royal Air Force spokesman reported the plane landed at the RAF's Akrotiri base, 50 miles west of Larnaca. It was not known when it would leave.

The C-130 that brought the commandos to Cyprus Sunday was badly damaged in the airport battle. The government announced that in addition to the 15 Egyptian the interior minister said the battle Sunday night was "one of the saddest incidents" in the history of the Cypriot republic. But he said Cyprus "continues to regard Egypt as a friendly country."

Allen, D-Ala., took the floor to say he would try to reverse the order the Senate now is scheduled to vote on the treaties.

Opponents of ratification want the Senate to vote first on the treaty turning control of the waterway over to Panama in the year 2000. But supporters of ratification, including the Senate's Democratic and Republican leaders, have scheduled consideration first of the treaty committing both the United States and Panama to keeping the canal neutral and open to all shipping.

Supporters of ratification feel they would have a better chance to obtain the two-thirds majorities necessary for Senate approval if the first treaty considered is the one which establishes the U.S. right to intervene militarily, if necessary, to keep the waterway open. Congressional activity returns to normal on Tuesday with most interest centered on the canal debate and the resumption of efforts to reach a compromise on energy legislation.

The allegations are contained in Drug Enforcement Administration reports turned over to the Senate Intelligence committee.

Mother, children burn

HOUSTON (AP) — A fire believed started by a pet goat kicking over a portable electric heater, engulfed a small three-bedroom house in flames early today, killing a mother and four children she ran back inside the burning house after trying to save. Dead were Esther Garcia, 37, Faustino Garcia Jr., 12, Melda Garcia, 10, Veronica Garcia, 8, and Roxanne Garcia, 4. Two other children, John Paul, 13, and Lora, 9, escaped. The father, Faustino "Joe" Garcia Sr., a truck driver, was working at the time. He was notified of the tragedy and was driving back to Houston from Laredo early today. "They had a screened-in back porch, and that's where the fire was burning when we saw it," said Nell Slay, who lives about 175 feet west of the Garcia residence. "It was just a matter of minutes before the house was completely engulfed in flames," said Mrs. Slay, who called the fire department at 1:23 a.m.

An official with the Harris County fire marshal's office said the start of the fire was traced to the kitchen and a portable electric heater, which had overturned. The two surviving children said the heater was being used to keep several pet baby goats warm. Officials theorized the heater was kicked over by one of the goats. Mrs. Slay and her husband, James, were up late with company, she said. They were in bed, just fixing to go to sleep, she said, when they noticed a glare out the bedroom window, which faces the Garcia residence.

Texans sit on leaky gas lines

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Billions of feet of natural gas seeping out of antiquated pipelines in hundreds of Texas communities create the potential for a major disaster, but some persons in those communities aren't too concerned about the dangers. The Dallas Times Herald Sunday said potential hazards from leaky lines that can't meet state and federal safety standards are depicted in Texas Railroad Commission records. Canal treaty vote month away

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today moved closer to its first vote on the proposed Panama Canal treaties as a leader of the opposition to ratification declared his intention to press for a test of strength on a procedural issue. But it probably will be at least a month before final Senate votes on the two treaties are taken. After a week-long recess, the Senate returned to another full day of debate on the treaties, and Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., took the floor to say he would try to reverse the order the Senate now is scheduled to vote on the treaties.

The right direction

The $25 billion tax cut package that President Carter has proposed indicates movement in the right direction. In his campaign for the White House and indeed for much of his first year there, Carter presented himself as a tax reformer come to spread the wealth around more equitably. Now, however, he presents himself as a tax cutter ready to offset some of the burdensome taxes that the Social Security, energy and other of his programs are soon to place on the country.

We like the tax-cutting better than the other one, but what we would like best of all is a different tax cut package. Carter's package is built from the wrong economics, and his misdirection concern for the appearance of equity has slipped to produce the wrong kind of cut.

For example, take the proposed tax changes on personal incomes. Certainly any reductions would be welcome, but Carter's proposals would cut the rate by 3 percent on the highest bracket, 14 on the lowest, and so the progressivity of the scale would be increased. This way Carter thinks he can return some money to everyone and give some "fairness" to low-income earners. It is extremely doubtful, though, that this type of cut will much help the economy.

The reduction that would help is one that cuts the same percentage from every bracket. This is what President Kennedy did in 1962, when he reduced each bracket about 25 percent, from 91 to 70 percent at the top and 20 to 14 percent at the bottom. The difference in approach is a difference in theory. Lowering each rate by two percentage points, as Carter wants, reflects the view that tax cuts work by producing government deficits, which jack up total demand, thus causing economic growth.

On the other hand, cutting the rate by the same proportion, as Kennedy did, reflects the view that tax cuts work by creating incentives for everyone, especially those who are greater producers, to work more. Consequently, there would be more savings, more investment, and the economy would grow more rapidly. Now as then this is the theory that accords with the reality of a sluggish economy and promises real economic growth.

Carter also has proposed cutting the corporate rate from 48 to 44 percent. This proposal would reflect the Kennedy theory only if Carter weren't also proposing to phase out the Domestic International Sales Corporation, which has meant a smaller tax bill to many corporations. The two would trade off, and there would be no real incentive to greater business production.

Nor will there be much confidence that Carter is serious about economic growth because of his proposal to reduce by half what businessmen can deduct for the now-famous "three-martini lunch." Here again Carter shows himself in the thrall of "fairness," though it may be asked whether it is fair to barkeepers and maids to reduce their business.

It's only dismemberment

Whether it be horizontal or vertical divestiture, it is just bureaucracy for dismemberment. Having been less successful in foisting vertical dismemberment ideas for the oil industry, members of Congress are not talking more in terms of horizontal chopping of petroleum companies.

The vertical variety was to cut up big oil firms into smaller segments within the petroleum industry. The horizontal is designed to cut off activities in the production and supply of other forms of energy.

The intent is bad in either case, but right now is probably the worst possible time for government to try its hand at more inhibiting activities. It can also be the most devastating area for misuse of government power.

At present, oil companies are taking the most active role in research for alternative energy forms. They are also showing their capabilities in bringing other fuel uses out of the laboratory and into production for consumers.

Dan Stevens, marketing executive for Texaco Inc., says the industry's progress is being threatened by governmental regulations resulting from laws already enacted. He charged that "horizontal divestiture" now proposed in Congress is unwarranted and a threat to future energy development.

"There is no monopoly in the oil business," Stevens said. "Energy is much too important for the government to begin tinkering blindly with it. Oil company funds account for one-third of the total alternative research and development monies expended last year. It just doesn't make sense to shut out oil companies or any other companies from helping to solve our energy problems."

More than most, the oil industry firms have the money, talent and organization to be effective in bringing alternate forms of energy fuels into the marketplace. They are daily proving this in their activities, especially in our most immediate need for coal.

This is not to say that there are not companies in other industries who could also make a contribution. The field is wide open and any that wish to try their talents can find a place to use them.

We do not need government finding that place for them by the dismemberment of successful private enterprise companies now operating to keep us in fuel and working assiduously to enhance their contributions for needed energy.

Wasn't that Joe Califano?

Chavez' failing farm union

The old adage — "Nothing succeeds like success!" — appears to work in reverse in the case of unions with their organization drives; particularly in the case of Cesar Chavez, honcho of the United Farm Workers union (UFW). As applied to Chavez and his bully boy tactics, "Nothing fails like success!" would seem to be more accurate.

Last spring, when the International Brotherhood of Teamsters union agreed to give up any jurisdiction over field workers in California, leaving the UFW an organizing potential of over 300,000 worker members, Chavez and cohorts must have thought they had it made. With the teamsters' union out of the way and UFW power to organize both workers and growers thus enhanced, clear sailing for the farm union seemed assured.

Unfortunately, for the union, it isn't working out that way. As farm wage rates in California have risen 20 percent faster than in other states, chiefly because of UFW pressure, growers in California's $3 billion-a-year fruit and vegetable industry, trying to cut production costs, have increasingly been replacing manual labor with mechanical harvesters and other labor-saving devices. In short, as unions have so often done in the past, Chavez' pressure tactics are pricing his own union members right out of the market.

Reacting to arbitrary wage rates imposed by the UFW, growers are introducing mechanical pickers even for crops such as wine grapes, lettuce, and fresh-market tomatoes, that traditionally have been harvested by hand. "Business Week" magazine points out in its current issue, which, of course, causes "stoop labor" farm jobs to disappear.

Moreover, according to an estimate just made by a research office of the California legislature, the pace of labor displacement in that state is likely to increase. Between now and 1982, 20,000 of the current 112,000 harvest jobs in California's 10 major crops are likely to disappear, the researchers found.

And this, the magazine went on to add, could cause further social and economic problems for California, where thousands upon thousands of low-skilled, mostly Mexican-American, workers derive a large part of their income from peak-season harvest jobs. And now, the magazine article continued, a reaction from farm workers, themselves, is beginning to occur. Apparently waking to the fact that the UFW has been instrumental in reducing the number of jobs available, potential members are now more reluctant to join, which, in turn, "appears to have slowed the UFW's rate of growth."

Thus, Chavez is faced with a dilemma: Either mount a campaign against mechanization and efficiency in farming — meaning higher farm products prices paid by consumers — or, as an alternative, concentrate on winning higher wages for an ever dwindling number of farm workers and union members via further pressure tactics.

"As of now," "Business Week" noted, "the UFW is fighting mechanization," calling for a "halt to research on farm mechanization and for a tax on the purchase or use of farm equipment."

And that, of course, is a typical union reaction. Having caused the trend into mechanization with its pressure tactics, Chavez' farm union now tries to "turn back the clock" by tilting against mechanical pickers and other labor-saving devices.

Recognizing ignorance

There has been published an Encyclopaedia of Ignorance, which features, according to its editors, leading scientists writing about those profound matters they as yet ache to know and understand.

This is a salutary reflection on the state of human knowledge, marking the beginning of the end of an age in which science pretended to be omniscient. There has even been the time, not by any means concluded, when politicians sought a scientific cloak to hang on their legislative enthusiasms. The foolishness of it is now enormously transparent.

That is not to say science should not be consulted in formulating public policy. Indeed, the trouble with too much public policy is that it is not scientific enough: consider the preposterous experience with laboratory rats.

No, the happy news is that science may be approaching a new humility — which is the beginning of wisdom (not to mention the scientific method) in any case. The most profound minds among us come, soon or late, to the ages-old mystical paradox: the more we know, the more we know we don't know.

This would be a far more blessed planet if politicians and bureaucrats — beginning in, say, the Department of Energy — assumed the same humility.

Drop in a bucket

By Don Graff

What do 35 Iraqis, 100,000 Indochinese and quite possibly several million Mexicans have in common?

All are refugees. The common bond is brought to mind by an incident at New York's Kennedy International Airport, one of the great crossroads of contemporary nomadic man and thus the setting of countless human dramas, most of which go unnoticed.

One which did not occur the other day when 35 passengers on a Moroccan airliner suddenly bolted their seats and fled the plane.

They were, they explained in requesting asylum in the United States, Christians from Iraq, victims of persecution in their own country who had come halfway around the world to find, they hoped, freedom.

The incident made a good story, but it is less than a paragraph of a much greater story. For in the sum total of refugees from various styles of oppression around the world, the 35 fugitives from Iraq are as nothing, a drop in a monstrous bucket.

Consider the 100,000 plus Vietnamese, Laotians and Cambodians who have sought refuge in Thailand since the Communist triumph in Indochina. Thailand has been a reluctant host, and is in the process of closing the door. These refugees, however, may consider themselves lucky compared with the "boat people" — Vietnamese seeking asylum somewhere, anywhere, via the sea.

Their small boats more often than not are refused entrance to harbors in neighboring non-Communist countries. Passing ships do not stop to take them aboard, rarely even resupply them. The flow of boat people has been estimated at an average 1,500 per month since the Communist take-over, but no one knows for sure how many may have reached land somewhere — or how many may have perished at sea.

The International Rescue Committee, which has been in the business of aiding refugees since 1933, reports that its resettlement and relief programs processed at least 75,000 people during 1977 alone. These are mostly in Southeast Asia and Africa. The Communist world also continues to make its contribution to the total.

These, however, are only the most obvious among the displaced, the easily identifiable and, in some respects, easy to assist political or religious refugees.

But in any comprehensive reckoning of displaced humanity, those who for some reason find themselves strangers in their own world, an additional category must be considered — the economic refugees.

Which brings us to those millions of Mexicans. Unauthorized immigration into the United States from south of the Rio Grande has reached floodtide in recent years. No one, again, knows for sure how many Mexicans and others of Latin origin are illegally resident in the country but estimates run into the millions.

They are also fugitives from oppression, that of underdeveloped economies incapable of absorbing or supporting them. To their numbers might be added the millions of foreign workers — Algerians in France, Turks in West Germany — from similarly depressed areas who have played a large but largely unappreciated role in Western Europe's postwar affluence.

Aiding the economic refugees is much more than a matter of relief centers and resettlement programs. It depends in the end on an equalization of economic productivity, to achieve which the world has at least as far to go as it has to resolve its political differences.

Man began history as a nomad, in wandering tribes moving and often driven across the face of the earth. For too many today, the human condition may not seem to have changed all that much over the millennia.

Money still talks

The year 1977, as everyone knows by now, was a bad year on Capitol Hill for organized labor and the consumer movement. Business lobbyists scored unaccustomed triumphs in the heavily Democratic Congress, blocking at least three of big labor's pet proposals, plus the Consumer Protection Agency.

Now Common Cause has reported that business groups, for the first time, pulled ahead of labor unions in political contributions to congressional candidates, $987,000 compared to $844,000 during the first 10 months of last year.

Who says money doesn't talk?

By JIM FITZGERALD

I doubt if anyone else in America knows what Michigan publishers and editors know.

They know what caused the great blizzard of 1978. The blame belongs to the Michigan Press Association (MPA).

I'll explain.

The MPA convenes every January on the Michigan State University campus. Traditionally, the three-day convention is held during a snowstorm.

Many years ago, MPA officers would consult the weather bureau months before scheduling the convention to get expert advice on which January dates were most likely to produce blizzards.

The weatherman's predictions proved amazingly accurate. The lousy weather always arrived exactly when forecast. Convention delegates were never disappointed. They could always depend upon losing their cars in snowbanks, freezing their families in parking lots and either arriving or departing three days late.

In fact, the certainty of the convention-snowstorm forecast was so far above average, the weather bureau was soon prompted to flip the procedure. In recent years, the MPA has scheduled its convention before calling the weather bureau. When the weatherman learns the convention dates, he forecasts blizzards for those three days, no matter what the meteorological charts say. Never fails.

Amazingly, until this year, the MPA convention was never canceled because of the weather. This is because newspaper people are determined and fearless. They know that each convention features several seminars at which they learn how to produce better newspapers. No amount of snow is going to prevent these dedicated people from improving their professional skills.

Also, there are certain editors and publishers to whom a snowstorm is an incentive, not a hazard. The more it snows and blows, the more determined they are to get to the MPA convention. This is because of their insatiable appetite for hospitality.

There are several "hospitality rooms" at every MPA convention. The hospitable proprietors of these rooms are either merchants who sell supplies to newspapers, or corporations who want the newspapers to write nice things about them.

Obviously, these merchants and corporations have good reason to invite newspaper people to come in and enjoy some hospitality. I've never been in a hospitality room myself, but I imagine the hospitality consists of a warm embrace, a soft place to sit and some cocoa and cookies.

Whatever, as mentioned, there are some newspaper people who require extraordinary amounts of hospitality. That's why they like conventions held during blizzards. They know many delegates won't make it to get their share of the hospitality, which means there will be more hospitality available for those intrepid delegates who were not turned back by the weather. Genuine hospitality is perishable and must be enjoyed as soon as it is exposed to hotel air. It can't be mailed to the homebound.

This January's blizzard provided the sternest test in the MPA's 111-year history. Over 700 delegates had convention reservations. Only three showed up.

They were Herb Boldt, executive sports editor of the Detroit News; John Harrington, publisher of the Ganese County Herald, and my friend Jim Sherman, who publishes several insignificant sheets in Oakland County.

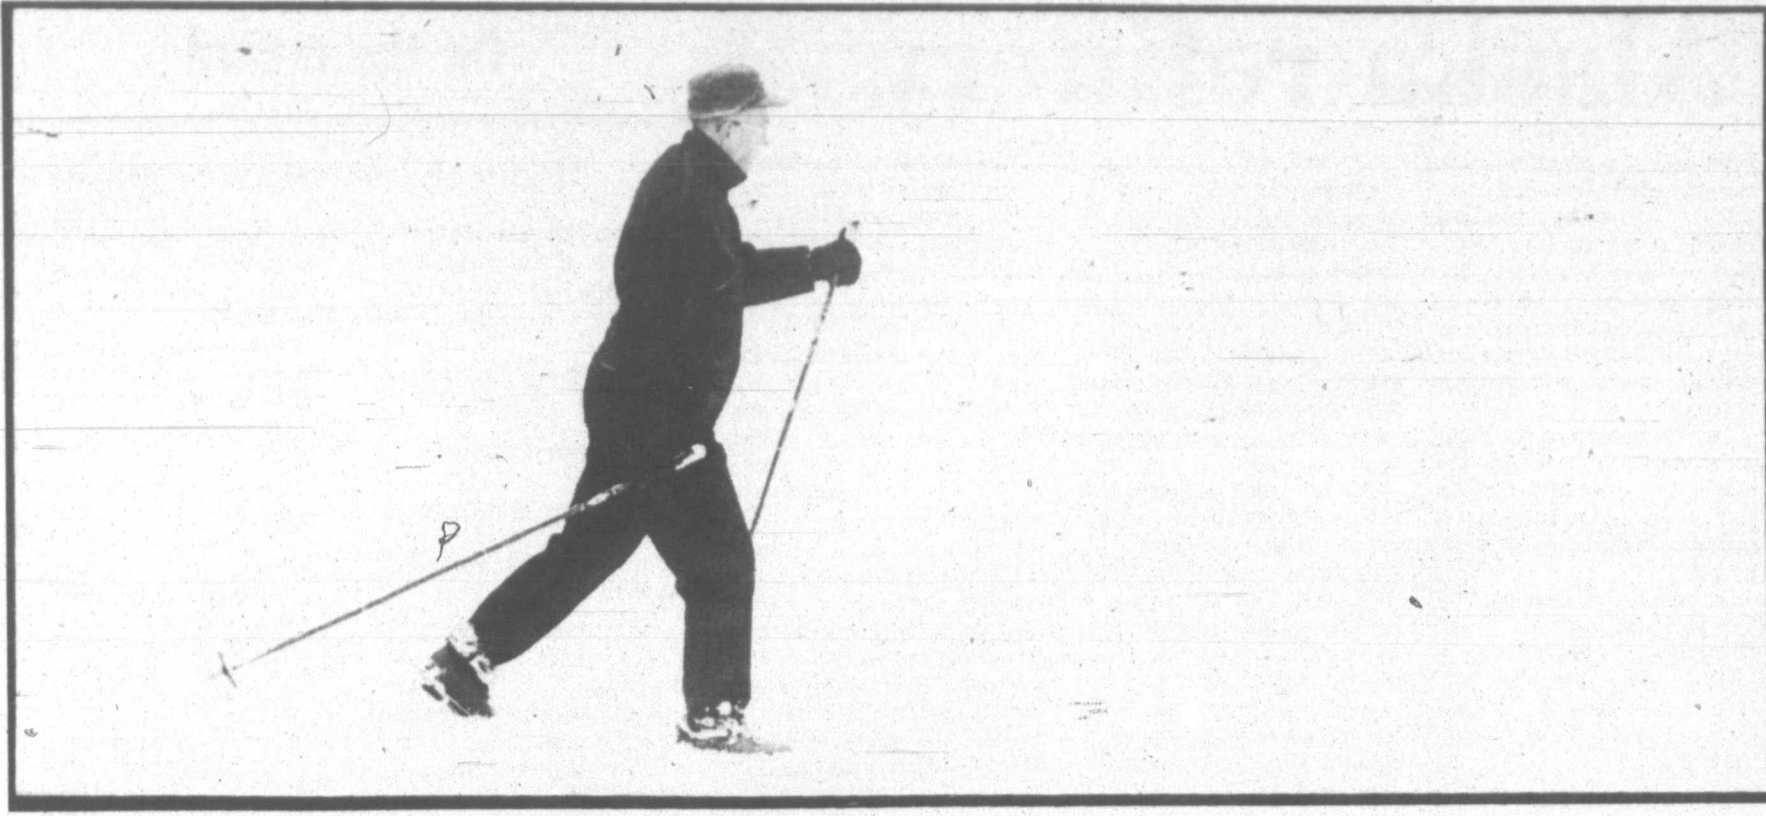

Only Sherman, however, should be honored for showing superior devotion to hospitality. Boldt doesn't count because he arrived a day early, before the blizzard began. Harrington doesn't count because he hadn't gone home from last year's convention yet.

But my friend Sherman did it the hard way, driving 100 miles through the worst storm in his never-flinching quest for hospitality. I ask you to join me in saluting him.

Of course, you know what my friend Sherman said when he learned the convention had been canceled: "What kind of hospitality is that?"

Raleigh's lady mayor, 73, passes out marshmallows

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Isabella Cannon, the 73-year-old widow who launched her successful run for mayor in tennis shoes, has settled into her $500 per month job, "working harder than I ever did in my life."
The five-foot tall, white-haired woman with a smiling face full of gentle wrinkles evoked little more than headlines and jokes when she appeared at a news conference last year in her tennis shoes to announce she was running for mayor.
Her supporters wore T-shirts that bore her emblem — a cannon with daisies popping out of the barrel. And she campaigned on the theme of citizen involvement in government and preservation of the city's neighborhoods.

Mrs. Cannon's opponent, Mayor Jyles Coggins, 56, a wealthy contractor seeking a second term, said he could not debate someone the age of his mother, Coggins, who was unable to campaign in the final weeks because of gall stone surgery, lost the November election by a 2-percentage-point margin.
Now, after two months in office, the retired librarian and widow of a foreign service officer says she has undergone a "tremendous learning process."
Her goal, she said, has been "to create a feeling of trust and a feeling that the office is open to citizens."
But her style has drawn criticism. A newspaper editorial recently took Mrs. Cannon to task for her casual approach to presiding over City Council meetings, which usually last five to six hours. The editorial said voters elected her as a way of expressing dissatisfaction with the "buzzsaw approach to running city council."

But they did not expect to go from buzzsaw to marshmallow in leadership styles, to trade abrasive domineering for disorganized permissiveness.
The mayor took note of the editorial by passing out marshmallows at the next council meeting. Most people in the audience did not realize the meaning of her gesture, she said, "but the people who knew just died laughing."
She admits the council meetings have developed into "a long, tedious, not very efficient process."
But, she said, "one thing I believe in very strongly is citizenship participation. People who come have a right to be heard. City government is the closest they ever get to democracy in action."

Anita blasts Madalyn

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Entertainer Anita Bryant brought her "Revive America Crusade" to deepest West Texas Sunday, assailing homosexuality and taking the opportunity to fling a gauntlet at the feet of a famous atheist.
Miss Bryant's familiar anti-gay stance was coupled with a plug for reinstatement of voluntary prayer in public schools.
Referring to atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, Miss Bryant said, "Whereas one woman took prayer out of schools, the day has come when it may take one woman to put it back."
Speaking before a crowd of about 3,000 in the El Paso Civic Center, Miss Bryant encountered little attention from area gays.
It was a quiet contrast to an earlier appearance in San Antonio, where some 75 placard-bearing demonstrators touched off at least one confrontation. No one was injured during the San Antonio appearance.
Her appearance was in tandem with evangelist Cecil Todd, who asked for contributions for a planned crusade special he said would be shown on national network television.
Todd, founder of Revival Fires Ministry of Joplin, Mo., lashed out at what he called "unwholesome" television programs.

Miss Bryant said the point of her campaign is to "hate the sin and love the sinner."
"I've never had any hate or malice toward these individuals (homosexuals)," she said.
Her husband and manager, Bob Green, said the couple has received several letters from former homosexuals who have changed their lifestyles "and thank Anita Bryant for it."
Miss Bryant entered the campaign via her successful efforts for the repeal of a gay rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla.
She called that campaign a battle for separation of church and state because the ordinance required private schools to hire "flaunting homosexuals" as teachers.

Desert conflict involves Horn

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
Associated Press Writer
ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The conflict between Ethiopia and Somalia has growing implications for the United States and the Soviet Union as well as the nations around the strategic Horn of Africa.

Together with other Moslem states, including Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Syria, Egypt is sending military supplies to Somalia, but they do not match the sophisticated Soviet weapons.

An AP News Special

The fighting is over Ethiopia's Ogaden region, a semi-desert area claimed by Somalia and inhabited mostly by nomads of Somali origin. Either directly or indirectly the war involves a bewildering array of interests—from the two big powers to Arab and African states and Israel.

Why is the Horn of Africa important?

Here in question and answer form are the basic facts of the situation:
Who are the fighting forces?
Basically, an estimated 80,000 Ethiopian regular troops and militia are on one side. On the other are ethnic Somalis living in the Ogaden, fighting under the banner of the Western Somali Liberation Front, and Somali army troops, according to various diplomatic sources. They are estimated to total about 30,000.

How did the Soviet Union and the United States become involved?

Each side accuses the other of using foreign troops and military advisers. The U.S. State Department said Friday 5,000 Cuban troops now are helping Ethiopia in the Ogaden. Other reports say there are also 2,000 South Yemeni troops, 1,000 Soviet military advisers and others from Eastern Europe in Ethiopia.

The original Soviet intention was to persuade Somalia and Ethiopia to form a Marxist federation, giving Moscow unchallenged influence in the region. This plan went astray when the Somalis told the Russians they would not shelve their claims to the Ogaden in the interests of international socialism.

The Soviets have naval facilities in Aden on the other side of the entrance to the Red Sea. They lost such facilities in Somalia at the port of Berbera. The latest intelligence reports say that they are re-establishing facilities in the Ethiopian Red Sea port of Assab.
This again gives the Soviets the opportunity to blockade Red Sea shipping lanes in any international crisis.

Past Amarillo mayor, 48, dies
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Former Amarillo Mayor L. Ray Vahue died of an apparent heart attack in his home here Sunday night, authorities said. He was 48.
Vahue served two terms as mayor from 1971 to 1975, and previously was a city commissioner.
An autopsy was ordered, but the coroner's office said the cause of death was probably a massive heart attack.
Vahue was a past president of the Outdoor Advertising Association of Texas and a past chairman of the Outdoor Advertising Association of America.
He is survived by his wife and a daughter.

Western military analysts in Addis Ababa believe the foreigners at least are helping operate communications equipment, directing artillery attacks and possibly manning tanks. It is only logical, they maintain, that as the war intensifies, they will take on frontline combat roles.
Ethiopia claims that 5,000 Egyptian troops are on their way to Somalia and that other Arab soldiers already are participating in the fighting. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has said that he is considering sending troops.

The lights go back on in Westwood today, but one state official promises to keep the heat on the electric company that provoked townfolk to a self-imposed "blackout."
Most of the lumber town's 2,500 residents turned off their electricity Feb. 12 in protest against rate hikes.
Citing nearly 2,000 computer billing errors and sporadic meter reading by California-Pacific Utilities Co., public utilities commissioner Claire Dedrick said Sunday she would personally investigate the situation.
"There appear to be a number of management irregularities on the face of it," Mrs. Dedrick said. "We intend to get to the bottom of all of them and get them straightened out."
Mrs. Dedrick said she would bring the town's problems up at a Public Utilities Commission meeting in San Francisco on Wednesday, and planned to visit the mountain town within the next 10 days. She said she would ask officials of the utility to go along.
She said the company admitted to having overbilled, through computer error, 1,644 customers in Westwood and nearby Susanville and Chester, and another 335 customers near Needles in Southern California. The overbillings during the last 41 days totalled $14,412, she said.

She also said not all customers' meters had been read regularly, further complicating the billing.

The utility is asking the commission to boost its electric rates by about 8.5 percent. The four-member panel sets rates for all utilities in the state.
The weeklong blackout dimmed streets in the town. Most people turned to candles, kerosene and oil lamps to light their homes. They heated bath water on wood stoves and let their hair dry without hot air.
According to the utility, electrical consumption decreased about 22 percent through Friday.

What is the stand of black African states?
Except for Kenya they have remained silent. Kenya supports Ethiopia because of Somali claims to parts of northern Kenya.
But no other black African government is likely to support Somalia. If it managed to take over the Ogaden, it could open a Pandora's Box for the other nations since boundaries drawn by the colonial powers divide ethnically related populations all over the continent.
What are the origins of the war?

Sheriff arrests dragsters

NEWTON, Texas (AP) — Newton County sheriff's deputies showed up Sunday at a drag racing session south of Newton that attracted about 130 persons.
Officers arrested everybody they could find and hauled them to the county jail, where a justice of the peace assessed fines ranging from $23.50 to $103.50 on charges of participating in racing or being "spectators of racing."

The arrested ranged in age from 10 to 70.
Sheriff Wayne Powell said his office had been hearing reports for several weeks about Sunday drag racing on Farm Road 1416 and he sent officers out for the latest community event.
When officers arrived, they found about 30 to 40 cars parked along the road. They used a bus to cart about 70 of the arrested to jail.

Texans to build Alaska refinery

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A consortium of Texas oil men and Alaska Natives has been picked by Gov. Jay Hammond to construct a world-scale refinery and petrochemical complex to be fueled by the state's royalty share of Prudhoe Bay oil.

Alaska's Republican announced his selection of Alaska Petrochemical Corp. (Alpetco) over three other royalty oil bidders in a statewide radio broadcast Sunday night.

Hammond said he picked Alpetco because the consortium best met a long list of administration prerequisites for the sale of about one billion barrels of royalty oil valued at up to $10 billion dollars at today's prices for use in an in-state processing facility.

But in a major warning, Hammond said he could not guarantee that Alpetco could succeed in its goal of constructing a $2.5 billion facility in Alaska which could compete with world market conditions on refined fuels and petrochemicals.

Hammond said, however, that he was willing to give Alpetco a chance because the firm had agreed to sign a contract which imposed no risks on the state even if the project failed.

In one major condition, Hammond said Alpetco had agreed to pay the same in-value price for Alaska's one-eighth royalty share of North Slope crude as is currently being paid by the major oil companies.

But most importantly, Hammond added, Alpetco had submitted to contract terms "that will insure that the state is fully protected from the risk of the venture."

The proposed contract also meets administration mandates for strict environmental standards, job training for Alaskans and a commitment to give preference hiring rights to Alaskans.

Hammond said he will submit the contract to the state's Royalty Oil and Gas Development Advisory Board today for its statutory approval. If the board endorses the contract as expected, it will be presented to the state Legislature for its okay.

Alpetco is a consortium of Alaska and Texas interests. Included are Alaska Interstate Co. of Anchorage, which owns Anchorage Natural Gas and Alaska Pipeline Co.; Alaska Consolidated Shipping Inc., a joint venture between six Alaska regional Native corporations and Seatrain Lines Inc., a Texas-based refiner and shipper; and Barbour Oil Co. of Houston.

Brown & Root Inc. of Houston, an international construction firm, is the project manager.

The Alpetco proposal calls for using up to 150,000 barrels a day of the state's royalty oil to fuel a combination refinery and petrochemical plant, the location of which has yet to be decided.

The refinery would produce at least 30,000 barrels per day of fuel products for Alaska consumption, increasing in-state refinery capacity by nearly 50 per cent. It also would manufacture an estimated one billion pounds year of petrochemicals, primarily aromatics such as benzene and olefins such as ethylene and propylene.

Company officials have said the project would create more than 2,500 jobs during a five-year construction timetable and 1,500 permanent positions.

In complying with the state's insistence that it not be subjected to any risk, Hammond said the Alpetco contract includes provisions which require the firm to have firm commitments on financing and marketing within 18 months or lose the state's oil.

Once the firm meets the 18-month benchmarks, Hammond said it would begin receiving delivery on state royalty oil, but added that the state may reclaim the crude without loss if the project fails at any time in the future.

Hammond also said state negotiators had inserted a unique provision in the contract "to influence of the Roman Catholic Church.

"From the pulp it's being called murderers," said Carolyn Buell, executive director of the PETA Clinic in Cleveland.

William Baird of New York City, founder of the Abortion Freedom League, said the situation will "turn into another Northern Ireland unless the Roman Catholics stop feeding the winds of hatred."

But the Rev. Frank Kosem, director of news for the Diocese of Cleveland, said violence goes against Catholicism and the pro-life movement.

"At the same time, we have no control over people who do irrational things, but we can't condone them," Kosem said. "I am sorry this has happened. It is unfortunate."

Cleveland Battalion Fire Chief James Higginbotham said police are investigating a possible link between the two clinic attacks.

Abortion clinic bombed

By NANCY VARLEY Associated Press Writer CLEVELAND (AP) — Officials are checking for a possible link between the weekend firebombing of a Cleveland abortion clinic and a $200,000 fire at a Columbus abortion clinic last month.

Aurelia Elliott, 48, a worker at the Concerned Women's Clinic, suffered chemical burns Saturday when a man entered the clinic and threw a bag at her. The bag, which hit her in the face, was believed to contain gasoline, police said.

The man also tossed a device which started the fire, causing $30,000 in damages to the clinic. The facility had only reopened Friday after being vandalized Wednesday night. In that incident, iodine was thrown on the walls and floors and telephone cords were cut. Damage was put at $500.

Two abortion rights leaders blamed the incident on the influence of the Roman Catholic Church.

"From the pulp it's being called murderers," said Carolyn Buell, executive director of the PETA Clinic in Cleveland.

William Baird of New York City, founder of the Abortion Freedom League, said the situation will "turn into another Northern Ireland unless the Roman Catholics stop feeding the winds of hatred."

But the Rev. Frank Kosem, director of news for the Diocese of Cleveland, said violence goes against Catholicism and the pro-life movement.

Cleveland Battalion Fire Chief James Higginbotham said police are investigating a possible link between the two clinic attacks.

"I must say to you in all frankness that there remains some concern that this type of facility can be self-supporting," Hammond said.

Hammond said the state faced two choices in the decision on the sale of its royalty share of Prudhoe Bay oil for fueling an in-state processing plant.

"We could say that such a refinery is an uncertainty and we should do nothing," Hammond said. "We would then continue to ship oil outside and receive the revenue from it."

"Or we can make a virtually risk-free commitment and try to achieve beneficial in-state processing of the oil at no price loss. The latter has been my choice since we lose little by making the effort and may achieve a great deal."

Alpetco proposed the fund as a way to give a tax deductible price premium to the state.

Locals to show livestock

Eight 4-H members from Gray County and 18 Future Farmers of America (FFA) members from Pampa and Allison will participate in the 1978 Houston Livestock Show Wednesday.

Open show and junior exhibitors will vie for $470,210 in prize money and premium auction prices above market value.

Gray County 4-H members who will be showing market barrows are Stormy Fulton, Brock Parker, Mindy Romines, Christel Archley, Stephen Archley, Randy Eldridge, Stink Archley and Treca George.

Mindy Romines will also show in the market steer competition.

Pampa FFA members who will show their market steers are Bobbie Skaggs, Randy Skaggs, Cindy Gage, Cricket Lowery, Jerry Tice and Steve Seely. Those in the market barrow competition are Bobbie Skaggs, Randy Skaggs, Cindy Gage, Mike Craig, Jim Morrison, Tim Branley, Mike Graham, Randy Williams, Kevin George, Mark Miller, Lucinda Myner, Roy McCoy and Janneice Couts.

Bennie Boydston and Jim Donaldson of Allison will show in the market barrow competition.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew celebrated his 18th birthday without a party and Buckingham Palace declined to say what presents he received. But one "gift" was a state allowance of about $39,000 annually.

Now that he has turned 18, Andrew can begin drawing on the allowance.

The prince spent his birthday Sunday in his Scottish boarding school, away from the press and his royal family.

NEW YORK (AP) — H.R. Haldeman's book leaked out and now part of former President Richard Nixon's autobiography has become public — one sentence of it, that is.

Nixon begins his book with, "I was born in the house my father built," according to the Feb. 27 issue of New York magazine.

check of the car's license plates showed it was stolen Saturday, authorities said.

Miss Carne had some marijuana and "some kind of opium derivative" and Bergmann was carrying cocaine for which he had no prescription, police said. Bail was set at $1,500 each.

Miss Carne was arrested at her Los Angeles home last Monday after deputies found a plastic bag filled with powder and assorted narcotics paraphernalia. The powder turned out to be non-narcotic, but Miss Carne was booked on a misdemeanor charge of possessing less than an ounce of marijuana. Miss Carne also faces charges of drug abuse and illegal possession of a drug document in Ohio for allegedly trying to obtain a tranquilizer with a forged prescription.

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — An elderly recluse — armed and believed to be a trained marksman — kept police at bay for the 11th straight day by threatening to kill anyone who approached her home.

Mary Regina Connor, 71, told The Boston Globe by telephone Sunday that she would also kill herself if police attempted to enter her house.

Police were first called to the home Feb. 8 when the family next door complained that Mrs. Connor threatened to shoot their two sons in a dispute over fees for snow shoveling. Officers have stalked out the house every day since.

Mrs. Connor, a retired telephone worker who has rarely been seen by her neighbors in the last decade, said she would "rig up the gun to kill myself if anyone tries to come in."

She said she has a rifle with a telescopic sight and a shotgun. Police have not seen any weapons, but say Mrs. Connor's late husband, Eugene, owned weapons and taught her to shoot.

Officers say they have put off a direct confrontation with the woman, hoping that she would give up. A warrant was obtained for her arrest after the alleged threat.

Murder suspect won't talk

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Officers believe they are playing a psychological game with accused murderer Theodore Bundy and will not say when they might again question him about the killings of two Florida State University sorority sisters.

Leon County Sheriff Kn Katsaris told reporters on Sunday that Bundy, one of the FBI's most wanted fugitives, was last questioned on Saturday about the Jan. 15 deaths of two Chi Omega women. Bundy refused to discuss the killings, the sheriff said.

Earlier, Katsaris said moving Bundy from Pensacola to Tallahassee might give his interrogators a psychological edge.

"We've played his game until now. A change in jails might make a difference," Katsaris said.

Two named to lead Hill campaign

Mary Simpson and Myrt Leigh were recently named as local campaign chairman for gubernatorial candidate John Hill. His campaign will begin in Pampa today.

The campaign will travel from Pampa to Panhandle to Amarillo today. The purpose of the campaign is to distribute literature for Hill.

Anyone wishing to help in the campaign should call 669-2066 or 665-1339.

White Deer to consider ambulance buy

Members of the White Deer City Council are considering buying an ambulance that would be operated through the Council and driven by volunteers.

Under consideration is a $15,000 van-type vehicle available through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC). The PRPC would pay 60 percent of the cost, with the city picking up 40 percent.

Ambulance runs would cost a minimum of $25.

Jail death reports conflict

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Citing a preliminary report from a Houston medical examiner, Ector County District Attorney John Green said Sunday the death of a county jail inmate can't be termed a homicide.

Larry Lozano died Jan. 22, sparking state and local investigations after allegations that he died from beatings he received at the hands of law officers.

Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk of Houston was brought into the case at Green's request as a consultant. Jachimczyk, however, said he has made no ruling in the case.

"I have not reached any conclusions," he said. "I've been reviewing everything and I don't know when the report will be ready."

Jachimczyk did say, however, one theory might be that Lozano suffocated as a result of restraining holds used by officers to subdue him when he reportedly became irrational in a padded isolation cell.

Green confirmed late last week he had received Jachimczyk's preliminary report but would not reveal its complete findings until an after an inquest and grand jury review.

"The doctor in Houston has confirmed what we believed all along," he said. "He confirmed it was impossible to reach a conclusion it was homicide and Jachimczyk is considered to be one of the outstanding specialists in the world."

Ector County Sheriff Elton Fought said Lozano died from blows when he bashed his head repeatedly against cell bars. He maintains no officers beat Lozano, but merely tried to restrain him.

El Paso Medical Examiner Dr. Frederick Bornstein, commissioned by Lozano's family to conduct an independent autopsy after the death was initially ruled a suicide, stated the "mode of death was homicide."

Green said Jachimczyk had reported that most of Lozano's serious injuries appeared to be of the type that would be sustained by resistance and officers' attempts at restraint.

Chamber sets member seminar

A membership development seminar will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. today for members of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce membership development committee and chamber board of directors.

The seminar, in the Chamber conference room, will explain the history of the chamber and the philosophy of successful chambers. Participants will use the information to recruit prospective members.

The chamber February membership luncheon will be conducted at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday at the Coronado Inn, 1101 N. Hobart, with a program by the Pampa High School Choir and Ron Friedman of Friedman and Associates in Houston.

Friedman will describe plans to build the Pam Apartments, a senior citizen apartment complex, in Pampa.

A door prize of $50 will be given to one person at the public luncheon, and a membership drawing will be conducted for $150. If the person is present, he will win the money, but if the person is absent $50 will be added to that prize for a membership drawing of $200 for the March breakfast.

Reservation deadline for the luncheon is 10 a.m. Tuesday at 9:30 a.m.

Other Chamber activities this week include a meeting of the agriculture committee at noon Thursday at Tom's Country Inn Steak House, 1101 Alcock.

Final plans for the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show and Sale will be discussed and committee assignments for the show and sale will be made.

The livestock show and sale will be conducted March 13-15.

Deadline entry is Feb. 22.

Also on Thursday, the Chamber community relations committee of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the chamber conference room.

This new committee, composed of members of the Rodeo Board, civic club representatives, merchants and interested citizens, will explore the possibilities of developing a celebration around the Top O' Texas Rodeo July 13-15.

On Friday, the aviation committee will meet at 10 a.m. in the chamber conference room.

Items for discussion will be courtesy car transportation to and from Perry Lefors Field, improvements at the airport, the All-Texas Air Tour, Fly-ins and air shows.

Area mourns coliseum roof

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Area residents are "mourning" the death of a loved one — the collapsed roof of the Civic Center Coliseum.

Three University of Connecticut psychiatrists say people are taking the collapse so hard that they will formally research the reaction. They also are urging city officials to set up an information line to relieve fears about other roofs collapsing.

The 1,400-ton roof caved in Jan. 18 under the weight of ice and snow. No one was injured in the early morning disaster which did millions of dollars in damage and closed the facility, which was used for such events as hockey games, concerts and the circus.

The psychiatrists, Drs. Allan Tasman, David Goldberg and Mahlon Hale of the university's Health Center in Farmington, say they have found indications of a "stress wave" in the community, but they are refusing further public comment until their research is complete.

The Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce is considering the doctors' suggestion to fund an information line for the calls coming in from people with fears about roofs collapsing on them.

Chamber spokesman Robin Hogan and civic center director Frank Russo said the doctors told city officials that the reaction studied in the Hartford area resembled that observed elsewhere after a catastrophe.

"They say we are now in a denial phase just like a person who has someone close to them die would be," said Russo.

Russo said the doctors also have noted signs of the second phase in the traditional reaction cycle to loss: anger. He said some politicians have already reached that stage.

"They (the doctors) also said that feelings of guilt are interfering with the denial phase for some persons, such as perhaps the architects, engineers and steel company executives," Russo said.

Following the anger stage of mourning comes grief and then the recovery stage.

City officials say they hope recovery will be speeded by plans to rebuild the roof.

"We even have a target date for when the new coliseum will be finished, and the doctors told us this is helpful in dealing with the blow to the community's self-esteem," said Russo.

Mainly about people

Celanese Women's Club has related the Valentine Coffee for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at PamCel Hall.

The VFW Auxiliary to Pampa Post 1657 will cancel the Tuesday night meeting.

The Pampa police responded to 20 calls during the 24-hour reporting period which ended at 7 a.m. today.

Officers arrested a juvenile Sunday on charges of destruction of city property and disorderly conduct after he was observed shooting out a traffic light on Foster and Somerville.

Joyce Patricia Tollerson, employee of 7-11 at 400 Ballard, reported that two white males entered the store and took two bottles of wine without paying.

Patricia Roach of 1036 S. Dwight and Melbia Riddle of 704 Lowry were involved in a non-injury accident at 9:50 a.m. Sunday.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Another blast of cold air and snow entered Texas today.

Scattered snow fell in the Texas Panhandle before dawn, accompanied by another surge of cold air. Early morning skies were overcast along the Gulf Coast with rain and fog in the southern Rio Grande valley.

With the exception of the Panhandle, fair skies prevailed across the rest of the state.

Temperatures early today were mostly in the 20s and 30s across Texas. It did get as low as 15 degrees at Marfa and as warm as 47 degrees at McAllen at 4 a.m.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My problem is not having enough strength to break up with a guy I've been going with for nearly three years. He's 24 and I'm 23. I have become so emotionally involved with him that it's tearing me apart because I know he's playing me for a fool.

He never takes me anywhere unless it's my treat, and for the last three years, he has always managed to pick a fight with me just before the holidays so he doesn't have to buy me anything. (I always give him something, however.) We've talked about marriage, but he's careful never to get pinned down to a date.

I'd like to have a home and kids, Abby, and when this guy is sweet, there is nobody in the world sweeter, but most of the time I'm walking around with an aching heart. How can I either get him to marry me or forget about him for good?

ACHING HEART

DEAR ACHING: I doubt that you can get him to marry you, which is a break for you. Tell him it's over and to please do you a favor and stay out of your life. Keep busy with other thoughts, other activities and other people. It will hurt for a while, but it's preferable to continuing in a relationship that's bound to hurt worse—and possibly forever.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school student. Last weekend my very best girlfriend slept over. The day after she left, my mother missed about $20 worth of her good cosmetics. I didn't want my mother to think my friend had taken them, so I said I had "borrowed" them and left them somewhere.

Now I am being punished, but I would almost rather take the punishment than have my mother think my girlfriend is a thief. Abby, I turned the house upside down looking for those cosmetics, and they are just gone!

Should I tell my mother I had nothing to do with it, and it just had to be that girl? Or should I take the punishment and let it go?

HIGHLAND PARK

DEAR H. PARK: If you can catch your girlfriend with the evidence, do so and give her a chance to return the stolen goods. If you can't, tell your mother that you didn't take her cosmetics and that you lied to protect a friend who may not have deserved it.

DEAR ABBY: The first six years of our marriage we had four singles and a pair of twins. My work was never done, and I felt tired and dragged out all the time. Naturally, I took it out on my husband. The poor guy used to sit in bars just to get away from my nagging and complaining.

Then I read a letter in your column from a woman whose situation was almost identical to mine. In your answer you said, "Mothers of small children tend to forget that their husbands need love and attention, too. Quit feeling sorry for yourself and concentrate on your husband. No matter how many complaints you have, keep quiet, and find something to compliment him on. Kill him with kindness!"

Well, I felt like killing him, so I was willing to try anything. At first it was a real effort to be nice to him, but I forced myself. Pretty soon I discovered that the nicer I was to him the sweeter he was to me.

That was a year ago, and I am just getting around to thanking you for an answer to a letter that I didn't write. But it worked for me.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M. D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a woman 73 years old, 5 feet 8 and weigh 112 pounds. My cholesterol is 310. Since the test I have been living on a low cholesterol diet as much as possible. I take niacin, 100 mg three times a day, plus a daily vitamin, zinc, bone meal and once a day a water pill.

The trouble is I must deny myself all the foods I like and still my cholesterol does not go down. My doctor says my body produces too much cholesterol. Can't anything be done other than what I'm already doing?

DEAR READER — One cholesterol test usually doesn't tell the whole story. In some people it does go up with stress. And the tests are different depending upon the laboratory procedure. The other interesting point is that in people in your age group the level of the cholesterol may not be so important as the number of larger versus smaller fat particles (lipoproteins) that contain the cholesterol. It may be that despite your high cholesterol level that most of it is in the smaller fat particles. In that case it isn't likely to harm you. More specialized tests are needed to make this determination.

Just limiting the cholesterol intake usually is not enough to decrease abnormally high levels. You need to limit the calories to a level to eliminate or prevent obesity. You must limit the total fat intake (all kinds, saturated and unsaturated) and particularly limit the saturated fat. I am sending you the Health Letter number 1-3 Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis which summarizes the main features of the diet recommended by the Inter Society Commission for Heart Disease Resources to help prevent heart disease. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there more than one estrogen hormone? And I've heard that men and women both have testosterone, is that true?

DEAR READER — There are many estrogenic substances. Your body normally produces three well-recognized estrogen compounds that are chemically different. Technically they are called estradiol, estrone and estriol and they do have slightly different actions.

Progesterone, the female hormone that dominates half of the menstrual cycle, is changed chemically to form the male hormone testosterone. The testosterone undergoes further changes to become estradiol, one of the estrogens. So testosterone is really an intermediate chemical compound between the conversion of the female hormone progesterone to estrogen.

Yes, the ovaries and the testicles both form male and female hormones. The ratio as well as the amount is important in affecting secondary sexual characteristics. That is not all. Progesterone, the female hormone, also undergoes changes to form important hormones, essential to life functions, from the adrenal cortex. And the adrenal cortex can become the main source of sex hormones. This is particularly important to women after the menopause; how much female and male hormones are produced by the cortex may determine whether a woman needs estrogen treatment or not.

Then there are many synthetic female hormones that are available that have similar or part of the action of the natural female hormones.

Reluctant mistress of Woburn Abbey

By NAN ROBERTSON
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

WOBURN, ENGLAND — The Marchioness of Tavistock, two decades ago the most publicized English society beauty of modern times, is now the reluctant mistress of Woburn Abbey.

For three years, since the age of 34, she has presided, glamorous and outwardly serene, over one of Britain's stately homes and one of the richest hoards of Empire-glorry loot in the United Kingdom. There are 21 Canaletto's in the family dining room, a Sevres dinner service from Louis XV, the Armada Portrait of Queen Elizabeth I in the Long Gallery, tigers and elephants on the 3,000 acres of grounds — and a million visitors a year to look at it all.

"I never wanted to live here," Lady Tavistock said. "When Robin asked me to marry him, I made a deal with him — that we would never have to live at Woburn. Robin said it would not happen, that unless his father died, Woburn would skip a generation, would skip us, and go to our eldest son. But I married for better or for worse. It's very sad."

Robin is the Marquess of Tavistock and Lady Tavistock's father-in-law is the Duke of Bedford, the man, she said, "who almost invented the stately home business."

For three hours recently, sitting under the Gainsborough that dominates her office at Woburn Abbey, the young Marchioness told what it is like to live in, run and raise a family in a house that is a national treasure. And what it was like to be plucked out of a cherished privacy she thought she would have for the rest of her days.

Lady Tavistock, born Henrietta Tiarks, was the only child of Henry Tiarks, a multimillionaire banker. She was photographed by Anthony Armstrong-Jones just before her debut at the age of 17 in 1957 and presented to the world under the headline, "Is This the Most Beautiful Face in England?"

She was called the deb of the year, one of the great debbs of the century with her offset looks, taste and stardust quality. When she was 21, the face and fortune were crowned with a coronet. She married her childhood sweetheart, the Marquess of Tavistock, in a wedding that snarled London traffic.

"The blessing when I got married was to know that I'd never get any publicity ever again," Lady Tavistock recalled.

She bore two sons and went to live in a Queen Acne farmhouse in Newmarket, "with a duck pond in front of the door."

Women waits tables to find son

ALEXANDRIA, Ky. (AP) — Judy Holliday, whose 6-year-old son disappeared four days before Christmas, has gone back to work as a waitress as donation funds to find her boy dwindle.

"We're going to have to start another campaign for money, another plea, because we are almost out of money," said the 32-year-old woman.

She and her husband are considering selling their home for money that would keep the search going for son Keith, who disappeared outside from the front yard Dec. 21.

"We can't stop now. We have gone this far and we're going to keep going," she said.

New chapter of TWU formed

A new Panhandle Chapter of the Texas Women's University Alumnae Association was formed recently in Amarillo.

Gloria Branham and Dorris Foreman were elected as co-chair of the Panhandle Chapter.

"I was wife, mother and hostess, breeding thoroughbreds and racing," she said. "Horses are my special love. We still have the house. There's not way I could part with it, because, to me, it's home."

Stitching away at her petit-point by the sparking fire, she added: "No, we don't live in this house. We open it, we work in it. Living in a house like this makes it difficult to maintain a family existence. Woburn Abbey has 75 rooms — proper rooms, that is, not counting the little ones. The poor receptionist has to make 20 to 30 calls before she can begin to find us."

"Us" includes Lady Tavistock; her husband, a stockbroker who still works in London three days a week; Andrew, Lord Howland, 16; Robin, 14; and James, who was born after they came to Woburn three years ago.

There are more than 300 persons on the staff, including those who work in the Wild Animal Kingdom, the 42 shops in the antique center, the farm and the great house.

"Some of the servants are fifth generation," Lady Tavistock said. "It's our own little world. Anyone who's worked on the estate for more than 10 years is housed for life."

In 1961, when she married, her father-in-law was in his 40s. "I didn't think he'd give up the place until he was about 60," she said.

But the Duke of Bedford, forced by $15 million in inheritance taxes in the 1950s to become a show-biz aristocrat, had had enough by 1974. He handed over the estate to his heir, Robin, and became an expatriate with his dashing Duchess, Nicole, in her native France.

Lady Tavistock said: "It was extremely selfish of them to go. My husband was enjoying his life. At 34, to be made a prisoner of inheritance is very cruel. My father-in-law and mother-in-law showed a total disregard for the human element, the family element."

She went on: "We moved in the day after they left and the entire staff remained the same except for the administrator. We didn't change anything for a long time. I felt at any moment they'd be back."

"I said the night we moved in, 'Robin, I won't sleep where they slept before,' Robin said. 'Get used to it, we'll never move out of here.' I used to lie in bed at night and think that I was seeing my father-in-law coming through the door, saying, 'What are you doing here?' My father-in-law's valet was here for a year packing up their furniture and their clothes and their china. It was all very weird."

For the first 18 months, Lady Tavistock said, "all I heard was,

'Her Grace didn't do it like that,' or 'His Grace did it this way.' I felt like hanging up a notice saying, 'Under new management.'"

Repairing briefly to the Caneletto room in the family quarters to be photographed, Lady Tavistock waved a hand at the artist's 21 views of Venice on the walls and the long table down the middle.

"We eat in here every day, down at one end," she said. "It's the only dining room in the house except that state dining room, which we can't use. There's a drawing room next door. These two rooms are open to the public every day; tourists come in before our lunch and after lunch."

The work goes on seven days a week, 365 days a year. Woburn Abbey is never closed, not even on Christmas Day.

Allison wins at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bonnie Allison said a little prayer for her father last Friday before he and Buddy Baker crashed in a qualifying race for the Daytona 500.

"It weighed on me," said Bobby Allison. I don't like to have a child's prayers not answered.

He took it as a bad omen but everything turned out great Sunday for the 15-year old girl when Allison won the world's richest stock car race and the $56,300 first prize.

Scarcely anyone would have predicted Allison and Baker would race to a showdown for the top money after they crashed Friday and were forced to start from far back in the field, Baker in 31st place and Allison in 33rd.

They ran as a tandem from the start, but a mile behind the early front running trio — Richard Petty, David Pearson and Darrell Waltrip. Then Petty blew a tire and the three spun into each other and the concrete wall 150 miles into the race.

They were unhurt but A.J. Foyt wasn't so fortunate when he took a spectacular barrel roll down the asphalt at 180 miles an hour in a chain-reaction collision.

Foyt was hospitalized overnight, but doctors found no broken bones and said his worst injury was a possible separation of the left shoulder.

Benny Parsons, who blew a tire, triggering the Foyt mishap, dropped out of contention after spinning into the infield.

Baker and Allison waged a duel with Cale Yarborough through the last half of the race until valve trouble slowed Yarborough.

The bad luck that has plagued Baker for 11 years in this race struck again five laps from the finish when his engine blew.

Allison finished 33.2 seconds ahead of Yarborough.

One lap back, Parsons nosed Hutchinson in a photo finish for third and Dick Brooks took fifth, another lap behind.

It was Allison's first victory in the Daytona 500 after 19 years of trying, and his first victory on the Grand National circuit since 1975. Also, it was the first time a Thunderbird has been in Victory Lane here.

The popular 40-year-old veteran didn't escape trouble, which he so many contenders.

"One of the orange cars (Hutcherson) put me into the wall late in the race," he said. "I radioed my pit a back tire was flat and a fender was bent on the tie. The crew did a great job of changing two tires, bending out the fender and fueling me."

Some of the newer machines — the Oldsmobiles of Yarborough and Parsons, Buicks of Foyt and Hutchinson and Petty's Dodge Magnum — ran fast but handled less effectively.

But Allison said his Thunderbird cornered better than any of them.

Ranger G.M. says Kuhn fine 'unjust'

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn was "unjust and unreasonable" in declaring the Texas Rangers guilty of tampering with former Minnesota outfielder Larry Hise, club general manager Dan O'Brien says.

O'Brien, whose remarks at a press luncheon last September apparently started Kuhn looking into the Rangers' alleged tampering with Hise, said he will pay the fine out of his own pocket.

"I'm going to pay it. I don't know how and I do know it will take me at least five years, but I'll pay it," O'Brien said.

"If the commissioner is fining the team that kind of money for something I said, then the club shouldn't be held responsible. I thought the fine was steep, very steep," he added.

O'Brien was asked last fall if the Rangers would be interested in signing Hise, who was playing out his option. O'Brien replied that Texas would, indeed, like to have the man who was leading the American League in RBIs in the lineup.

"If I know the people who run this team, I wouldn't be surprised if he (Hise) were playing outfield for the Rangers next year," O'Brien said, adding a joking aside that money would be no problem because the Rangers would "ink up the presses."

After the remarks were reported nationally, Minnesota complained the Rangers were hampering their efforts to sign Hise, who eventually inked a contract with the Milwaukee Brewers.

McTear highlights S.F. indoor meet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sprinter Houston McTear figures it's just a matter of time — two years at the most — before he is recognized as the fastest man in the world.

"After the '80 Olympics, I'm going to be called the world's fastest man because I'm going to win the gold in the sprints," McTear said in the wake of an easy victory Saturday night at the San Francisco Examiner Games.

McTear, the world record holder in the 60-meter and 60-yard dashes, finished his indoor season undefeated with a 5.6 second clocking in the 50-meter dash.

McTear beat Olympian Don Quarrie, World Cup champion Steve Williams and high school sensation LaNorris Marshall despite easing up in the final 15 meters.

"I was told that even if I ran a world record time, it wasn't going to count because the times were hand-timed," he explained. "So I figured why try to break a record when it

In LA Open tourney

Morgan holds off Jack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As a student optometrist, Gil Morgan studied the eye charts. As a golfer, he says he doesn't even look at them.

But his vision was good enough to see that Jack Nicklaus had shot a double bogey on the 15th hole and a bogey on the 16th in the $200,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open tournament.

Dr. Morgan readily admits that as an eye doctor he couldn't make the $40,000 he collected Sunday for winning the tournament and he figures to keep playing golf until he is 40 "or until I'm not competitive."

The doctor, who went into golf instead of optometry, never trailed at the end of a round over the par 71, 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club course. He led the first two rounds and was tied with Nicklaus at the end of the third round.

"I didn't look at the scoreboards," he said after winning with a final round 70 and a 278 total. "I play a course, not an individual. I heard the crowd and figured Jack had made a bogey at 15. I was shocked when I got to the 17th green and saw what he shot. I expected to come to the last hole one shot behind or even."

As it was, Nicklaus finished with a 72 and 280 total, and Morgan had posted the second victory of his PGA career even though "I was nervous driving on the 18th and didn't shoot well and took a bogey."

As a crowd watched under sunny skies, just the first three finishers were under par. Forrest Fezler shot a final round 68 for 283 and third place.

Morgan's wife, Jeanine, said she would rather be married to a golfer at this time than an optometrist.

"This is what he wants to do, so this is what I want him to do," she said. "I go to nearly every tournament with him and follow him on every round. He may not see them, but he knows that I am there."

Marquette claims No. 1

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Everybody wants to get into the act, and the way the college basketball season is going, eventually most everybody will be in it before it's over.

So far this season, the No. 1 ranking has been the property of three teams — North Carolina, Kentucky and Arkansas — and figures to be held by a fourth as a result of what happened over the weekend.

Now it's Marquette's turn to sit in the hot seat, it would seem.

"There's no doubt we should be No. 1 now," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds following a 57-45 victory over Cincinnati Saturday night.

The victory by the second-ranked Warriors was almost certain to promote them into first place over Arkansas this week. The Razorbacks, top-ranked for only a week, were beaten 84-75 by Houston as upsets continued to underscore this zany college basketball season.

Three other Top Twenty members were beaten by unranked teams over the weekend. Notre Dame, No. 7, lost 65-60 to South Carolina. No. 15 Illinois State was beaten by Athletes in Action 100-97 in overtime Saturday.

Sunday, Minnesota upset ninth-ranked Louisville 72-71. The loss was the third straight for Louisville in a week.

"It's certainly no disgrace to lose on the road to a team like Minnesota," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "This was our fourth straight game on the road and we were tired. I thought both teams played well, though."

In another game Sunday involving a Top Twenty team, No. 13 Providence beat Boston College 92-74.

In Saturday's other big games, No. 3 Kentucky edged Mississippi State 58-56; fourth-ranked UCLA blasted Washington 104-64; fifth-ranked New Mexico defeated Texas-El Paso 59-51; sixth-ranked Kansas trimmed Nebraska 75-70; eighth-ranked DePaul defeated Loyola of Chicago 73-63, and 10th-ranked Michigan State trimmed Ohio State 79-74.

Also, No. 11 North Carolina beat No. 17 Virginia 71-54; No. 12 Texas whipped Texas Tech 78-63; Providence downed Campbell College, N.C. 63-54; No. 12 Syracuse stopped St. John's 77-65; No. 18 Georgetown walloped St. Peter's, N.J. 55-38; No. 19 Detroit hammered Canisius 124-89, and No. 20 Duke beat Maryland 81-70.

Jerome Whitehead and Bernard Toone each scored 14 points in leading Marquette over Cincinnati. The Warriors weren't able to pull away to their sixth straight victory, and 21st in 23 games, until the closing minutes.

Butch Lee, the Warriors' standout backcourtman who led them to the national championship last season, was held to eight points but was not the least bit frustrated by his sub-par performance.

"It's a compliment that they think if they cut me off, they can stop the best team in the country," Lee said.

South Carolina upset Notre Dame with the help of clutch free throws by Kevin Dunleavy and sophomore Kenny Reynolds in the closing seconds. Dunleavy's two free throws with 13 seconds remaining were his only points of the game, but gave the Gamecocks a 63-60 lead. Two more free throws by Reynolds with five seconds left clinched the victory.

"You've got to give credit to Frank (McGuire) and his kids today," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "They played the entire game with great intensity and I felt the key was their work on the boards. We didn't shoot well, but credit their defense."

Brad Hoffman's 26 points and 19 by Ervin Kiffin led Athletes in Action over Illinois State. Reserve guard Bill Harmon scored all five of his points in the last three minutes, sparking Minnesota past Louisville. Harmon's points helped Minnesota gain a 70-68 lead, then the Gophers secured the victory on Kevin McHale's stuff shot.

The victory was the Gophers' 12th in their last 13 games, a dramatic turnaround brought about mainly by the return of center Mychal Thompson.

Dwight Williams scored 16 points and four other players hit double figures as Providence defeated Boston College. A three-point play by Jack Givens at the end helped Kentucky hold off Mississippi State. Roy Hamilton scored 26 points as UCLA beat Washington and clinched at least a tie for the Pacific-8 Conference championship.

Playoff set

Wheeler (22-6) and Hedley (29-4) will clash in a Class B boys' bi-district basketball game at Harvester Fieldhouse Thursday night. Admission for the $70 contest is $2 for adults and $1 for students.

NCAA near USOC reaffiliation

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association is close to rejoining the U.S. Olympic Committee, more than five years after it withdrew in disagreement over the way the committee was being run.

"The signs are positive toward a resumption of the NCAA in an active role within the USOC," said Charles Neinas, former chairman of the NCAA's international relations committee.

The USOC Executive Board met in Chicago during the weekend and voted unanimously to back a revised athletes' bill of rights supported by the NCAA, apparently clearing the way for reaffiliation.

If the NCAA makes a formal bid for reaffiliation, the USOC House of Delegates would vote on it at its meeting April 14 in Florida, said USOC communications director Bob Paul.

USOC Executive Director Don Miller said the Board of Delegates probably would vote to readmit the NCAA.

"It's an injustice to our athletes and our country to have several organizations going separate ways," Miller said.

"I think it would bring into the Olympic Committee one of the major organizations representing a very important segment of amateur athletics," said Neinas, who resigned as committee chairman in December to become chairman of the games committee for men of the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States.

McTear, the world record holder in the 60-meter and 60-yard dashes, finished his indoor season undefeated with a 5.6 second clocking in the 50-meter dash.

McTear beat Olympian Don Quarrie, World Cup champion Steve Williams and high school sensation LaNorris Marshall despite easing up in the final 15 meters.

SWC tournament spots open

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

The Southwest Conference basketball race is so jumbled that after 15 games of the league campaign the only thing decided is that Southern Methodist will play at Baylor in the first round of the postseason tournament Saturday.

Texas, the No. 12 ranked team in the country, can claim a bye to the championship game March 4 by defeating SMU Tuesday night in Austin. This would come about through the SWC's eye-crossing tie-breaker formula.

Should No. 1 ranked Arkansas defeat Texas Tech in Fayetteville Tuesday night then both the Razorbacks and Longhorns would finish the regular season at 14-2. They split in head-on meetings.

However, Arkansas' 84-75 loss to Houston Saturday was a biggie. Texas had previously lost to Baylor. Houston will finish in at least a tie for third place.

3 grapplers win medals

All three Optimist Club grapplers who entered won medals at the Irving Invitational Junior High Wrestling Tournament Saturday in Irving.

Brent Bradford placed first at 166 pounds, Jeff Franks took second at 81, and Mark Campbell placed third at 81.

The Carrollton Invitational Tournament for elementary-aged wrestlers was cancelled.

Pampa Coach Manny Holden is scheduled take a team of junior high and elementary wrestlers to the Texas Amateur Wrestling Association State Championships in Fort Worth Saturday.

Baylor is fifth. Because Arkansas lost to a team finishing higher in the SWC standings, the Hogs will have to go through the tournament grind if Texas doesn't fall flat against SMU.

The tournament is so constructed that the No. 2 team hosts No. 9, No. 3 hosts No. 8, No. 4 hosts No. 7, and No. 5 hosts No. 6. Currently, TCU and Rice are tied for last place. Texas A&M will finish seventh behind SMU. Coin flips will be used to break ties in the other positions.

Houston is 11-5 and will be idle Tuesday night. Tech at 10-5 needs a victory to tie the Cougars. If Tech loses, then the Red Raiders will host Texas A&M in a first round game Saturday.

It sounds rather confusing—and it is.

"I believe we need some help ... that (bye) thing is so complicated everybody is confused," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "The likelihood that we will have to fight our way through the tournament is not a pleasant one."

Six die in trailer blaze

KEENE, Texas (AP) — A pre-dawn fire in a rented mobile home in this North Central Texas community left three adults and three children dead Sunday.

"The trailer was rented to Paula Sifford," said Johnson County sheriff's investigator Bill Brinker.

Mrs. Sifford, 21, died in the blaze along with Bill Manly, 24, of Hot Springs, Ark.; Mrs. Sifford's son, Aaron, 1; Debbie Bryant, 20, her daughter, Felicia, 3; and Dianna Moore, 3.

Police Chief Don Beeson said all the female victims were from the Cleburne area in Johnson County about 30 miles south of Fort Worth.

Brinker said Dianna's mother, Sheila, and her 1-year-old son, Chris, escaped fire when Manly pushed them out the door and dashed back inside to help the others. Brinker said all of the victims were found in a back bedroom of the 10-by-55 trailer.

"Sheila Moore was staying there with her (Miss Sifford)," Brinker said. "Manly was Sheila's boyfriend, Debbie Bryant's car, we're told, got stuck in a ditch and she decided to spend the night."

Brinker said Mrs. Moore told him she and Manly were asleep on a living room couch when the fire woke him up.

"He went in and grabbed her son and shoved both of them out the door," said Brinker. "Mrs. Moore said the fire started in a center bedroom where Debbie Bryant and her two children were sleeping.

NOTICE OF SALE UNDER EXECUTION
WHEREAS, by virtue of an Order of Sale issued out of the 223rd Judicial District Court of Gray County, Texas, on a Judgment rendered on the 30th day of November, 1977, and filed and entered on the 18th day of December, 1977, in favor of Canadian Production Credit Association, as Plaintiff, against Kathrine Kuhns, Defendant, No. 20, 451 in the 223rd Judicial District Court of Gray County, Texas, I did on the 7th day of February, 1978, at 11:00 o'clock A.M. levy upon the following described tract and parcel of land situated in the County of Gray, State of Texas, and being the same land described in said Order of Sale, to-wit:

All of the Southeast Quarter (SE-4) of Section No. Seventy-seven (77), Block M-2 of the H&GN RR. Co. Survey, Gray County, Texas, Certificate No. 13-2657, Abstract No. 305, Patent 30, Volume 28, dated March 16, 1976, and containing 160 acres of land, more or less, located in said County approximately three (3) miles north of Laketon and commonly referred to as the F.J. Prescang land, and which Order of Sale was issued pursuant to said Judgment for foreclosure of the deed of trust lien of the said Canadian Production Credit Association on the above described land as same existed on the 1st day of July, 1970, and renewed and extended on the 25th day of June, 1975, subject, however, to the prior lien on said land held by The Federal Land Bank of Houston, Texas.

And on the 7th day of March, 1978, being the first Tuesday of said month, between the hours of 10 o'clock A.M. and 4 o'clock P.M., on said day, at the courthouse door of said County in Pampa, Gray County, Texas, I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, for cash, all the right, title and interest of the said Kathrine Kuhns in and to said property, but subject to the lien of the said The Federal Land Bank of Houston, Texas.

DATED this 7th day of February, 1978.
