

Nobody wins with child support

By CHRIS EDWARDS
Pampa News Staff

A Pampa man sat slumped in a chair in his home trying to talk about his divorce and child support payments.

His face is etched with pain; the divorce was bitter and he's reticent about baring his soul on such a sensitive subject.

He will talk, but information about how much he pays for child support and how many children he has must not be published.

The curtains in the home are drawn on a sunny afternoon — perhaps to ward off nosy neighbors. The home is nicely furnished but hardly extravagant.

He has never missed a child support payment. That check he sends monthly to the district clerk's office for the support of his children comes "off the top."

"They're my kids and I want to help support them," he said. "But I'd like to make sure that money is spent only on my kids."

Although either a man or a woman may be assigned custody of the children after a divorce, it's usually the woman, said Don Cain, 23rd district judge. Of the estimated average of one a day divorce-child support cases he's handled in the year he's been district judge, he has only assigned child support payments to one woman.

And that was only $25 per month per child, compared to the up to $450 a month men are ordered to pay.

But sometimes the man fails to pay or disappears, as in the case of an estimated 10 percent of the child support cases Cain handles. At other times, the woman refuses visitation rights or leaves with the children without telling the father where she's gone.

In both cases, the accused can be found in contempt of court.

"Til death do us part, huh? So what happens to the kids even if the payments are made?"

One little girl who once took dancing, music and swimming lessons can no longer have those things. No money.

The Pampa mother of the child, whose divorce was not in Gray County, clears about $450 per month at a full-time, semi-professional job. Her ex-husband makes $16,000 a year.

Their divorce was amiable, and her ex has never missed the $160 a month child support payment. But she has no credit and pays all her bills at the first of the month to be sure they'll get paid at all.

The payment is buying food and clothes for her daughter and the woman pays the rent and utilities with her salary. The car is paid for ("Thank God," the woman said), but she sometimes doesn't have enough money to visit her son, who is in custody of her ex.

"It's supporting her," the woman said of the payment. "As far as being able to give her anything extra — no."

"It's so hard to tell a kid that you just can't afford it. Maybe one of these days."

Child support payments are awarded according to the needs of the child and the ability of the parent not in custody to pay, Cain said.

If, for instance, a child has asthma, bad teeth or needs any sort of medical attention, the court will take that into consideration when awarding benefits. But if a man has a child or children on a hospitalization plan, payments will likely be lower.

Cain follows no set formula. If a wife is a professional, working woman who has divorced a man who makes little money, payments will be lower than if the mother is uneducated and has few working skills.

David Martindale, county attorney, has seen women and children who were "poorly fed, relying on welfare just to survive" with ex-husbands and fathers making $15,000 a year.

But he's also seen women who could do more to support themselves and their children.

"It's hard for some women to leave and go get a job," he said. "There are jobs available, places to take the kids, but some take the attitude 'I'm not going to leave my kids.' That's admirable but..."

The often-bitter parties to a divorce are sometimes in district court again and again, fighting over custody, non-payment of support and visitation, Cain said.

The squabbles could be ludicrous if they weren't so sad. And they affect the children.

"I think they like to hit each other over the head with the frying pan," Cain said of the squabbling parents. "It's not good for the children because they keep constantly stirred up. The parents have to grow up and consider what's in the best interest of the child."

One Pampa woman's ex-husband has seen his children only once in eight years. After a rare visit with him, their child asked his mother if she would go to her ex-husbands' funeral if he died.

The mother said she weighed her words carefully, not wanting her bitterness about fights over child support, hassles in trying to get the support raised and the problems of the long-ago divorce to rub off on the child.

"I don't know," she answered. "Would you?"

The child said no. "My ex-husband reminds me of a dog that chases after a bitch, fathers children and then walks on to the next one," she said of the man. "A man just can't get married and father children and not look back. It's not fair."

"Fair," of course, is a subjective term. Cain said sometimes a woman will file for non-payment of support and a man will file for the denial of visitation rights at the same time. All's fair in love and war?

"A lot of times they're just spiting each other," he said.

The problem is increased by relatives, in-laws and friends who give poor advice and egg the parties on, he said.

"The reason they run to court is because they get mad at each other," Cain said. "But I've seen some couples grow up."

Meanwhile, the children are growing up. And they're watching.

Aunts caught with hash

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — They lived in a modest mobile home in Central Oregon with an aging poodle and a rock collection — two retired women filling their days with gardening, fishing and civic functions.

Neither Florice May Bessire, 61, or Vera Todd Hays, 60, had ever been to Europe and didn't expect to at their age. Then Miss Hays' nephew offered them a free trip — if they'd drive a Mercedes-Benz camper through Europe for him.

Miss Bessire and Miss Hays, known to friends as Toddie and Beezie, left the unincorporated town of LaPine, Ore., population 4,100, on August 26, 1977.

Last December they were arrested in Sydney, Australia and charged with smuggling two tons of hashish, valued at $15 million, into the country. The drugs were concealed in the floor and walls of the camper. Police called it the largest drug seizure in Australian history.

The women pleaded guilty to charges of smuggling the drug under the floorboards of the camper, which they drove from West Germany to India and shipped to Australia. They face a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

At a hearing Friday in New South Wales District Court, the women said they were tricked into transporting the drug by Miss Hays' nephew who had promised them an all-expenses-paid trip overseas during a meeting last May.

"Vern Todd mentioned grass in the May 1977 meeting," Miss Bessire said. "He said there might be a little grass. But his emphasis was on getting the vehicle here to Australia."

Miss Bessire said they weren't aware of the size of the drug shipment until their arrest.

"I am so sorry for the humiliation I have brought on the United States," a sobbing Miss Hays told the court.

Her attorney said Miss Hays had been hospitalized recently after five falls during her imprisonment and was in need of special care for a chronic back ailment. The judge postponed sentencing for the pair pending outcome of a medical report on Miss Hays.

Arrest warrants were issued for the nephew, Vern Todd, and an Australian, Phillip Edward Shine, on charges of conspiring to import hashish.

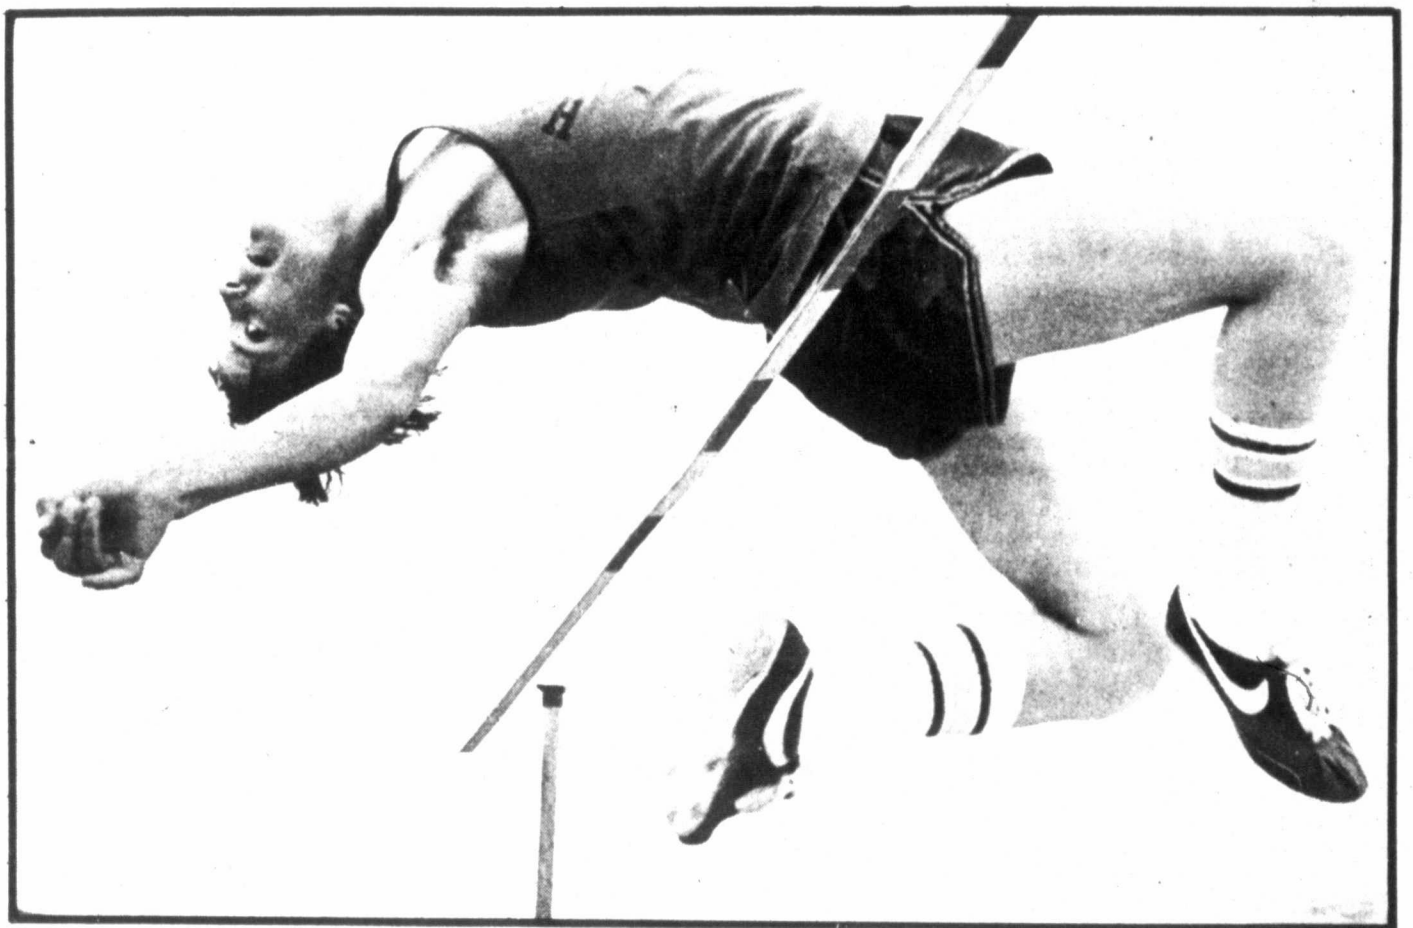

In LaPine, Nancy Carter, who runs a hardware store where Miss Bessire had worked part-time, said the women had "talked about the trip for three months solid."

"They were so excited at their age to get a chance to see foreign countries," she said.

Thelma Mitchell, who lives across the street from the women, received frequent postcards and letters from them as they traveled from Germany to Bombay and then to Australia. Her last letter from them was sent March 31 from the correctional institution in Sydney.

Mrs. Mitchell said the women thought Miss Hays' nephew was in the import-export business and that the trip to Europe was connected with promoting a baby bathtub he designed.

"They are real nice gals. I don't know how they could have gotten mixed up in anything like they had," said Mrs. Mitchell. "Vera was very fond of her nephew. I don't think ever in her wildest imagination she dreamed he would ever do anything dishonest."

Marshall to head press association

Results of the Panhandle Press Association's annual newspaper excellence competition included first place honors for column writing to former Pampa News sports editor Paul Sims, currently managing editor of the Hereford Brand.

The Hereford paper also won first place in editorials and in general excellence competition for papers of more than 1,500 circulation.

The annual convention of the association was Thursday through Saturday in Amarillo. Members of the organization include publishers and editors of papers throughout the Panhandle.

Contest chairman was Thom Marshall, co-editor of The Pampa News.

Marshall was elected president of the organization for the coming year. Vice president is Henry Wells of the Wellington paper and new board members include Ron Choate of Borger and Lynn Brisendine of Brownfield.

Those attending the convention heard reports from Max Sherman, president of West Texas State University; Bob Price, state senator; and Jack Hightower, U.S. representative.

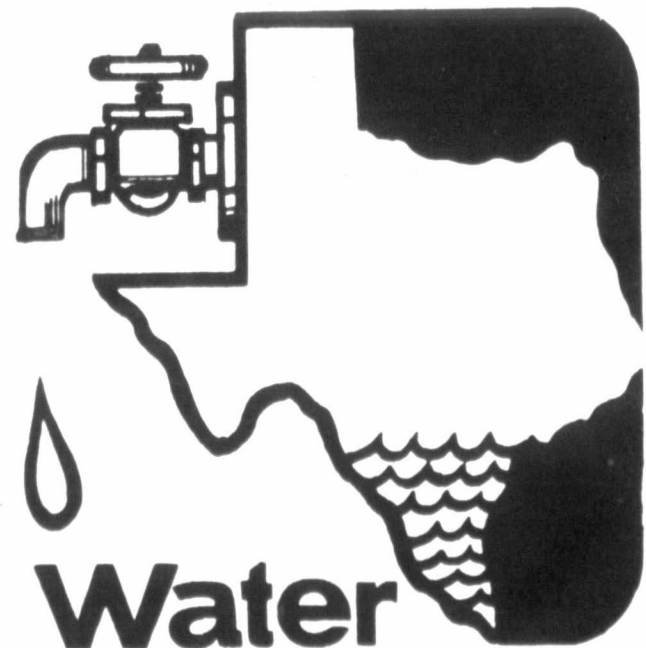

Sherman outlined some of his hopes and plans for the area's only four-year college.

Hightower talked of the nation's capitol, quipping "There's room for improvement," and he expressed disappointment with the recent failure of his proposed farm legislation.

Price used much of his time responding to recent criticisms of his beginning efforts as state senator that have appeared in several Panhandle area newspapers.

Texas water--rags or riches?

EDITOR'S NOTE—A Union Army general, unawed by Texas' charms, once allowed as how if he owned Texas and hell, "I'd rent out Texas and live in hell." He was probably an old sorehead. But there could be similarities between the two if Texas does not solve its critical water problems. This special report, last in a series, explores those problems and potential solutions.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Not so long ago, West Texans joked about the rich rancher who, quite obviously distressed, was drowning his woes at the local saloon.

"What's wrong?" asked a friend.

"I drilled a water well," he moaned, "and struck oil."

It's a story whose time may have arrived. "In the not too distant future," says Bill Wilson, an Odessa businessman, "water is going to be more valuable than oil."

"We have to have it. And it's going to have to be brought in from somewhere."

Just last week Gov. Dolph Briscoe touched on the two vital resources, saying

"There is a critical relationship between the availability of water and the availability of energy to meet the state's future needs. Energy, in one form or another, is essential to irrigation which enables agricultural production in many areas of Texas."

"Without a dependable supply of water and energy, some producers would be forced to utilize dryland farming methods which could have a disastrous impact on sorghum, cotton, wheat, corn and soybean production."

But that "disastrous impact" is not confined to the farmlands.

It is felt, for instance, in Fort Worth banks. Dallas specialty stores, Houston ports and the pocketbook of everyone who enters a supermarket.

"What the people of Texas have got to realize," Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, a West Texan, said once, "is we're all one. We're compact. We're a unit. If you tear us apart, it hurts us all, not just one of us."

Although the High Plains, with its diminishing underground water supply, rules as the gut problem in Texas, no area is without its special water woes.

"Consider everything west of Fort Worth — and south of Corpus Christi a water shortage area," said Harvey Davis, executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

"They will have a big need for more water sometime in the future."

In a grossly oversimplified nutshell, the problem is this:

Texas gets most of its water from the ground, and much of it is pumped from diminishing pools by irrigation farmers, a vital sector of the state's economic structure.

It is a harshly indisputable that some of those aquifers will run dry in the future, although no one can say just when. Likewise, municipal and industrial users will get first crack at existing supplies.

Therefore, irrigation farmers face the grim prospect of surrendering their fertile lands to the whims of Mother Nature, often an unpleasant and unpredictable lady.

The obvious solution: importation. Unfortunately, it's not that simple.

Actually, Texas is not so bad off as it appears, and some experts sincerely believe the state can and will meet its future water needs.

"We're cleaning our water up and we're learning how to use it better, more efficiently," Davis said. "What is a better development than keeping the water you've already captured?"

He added, "We've got critical problems but we've also got a group of brilliant, knowledgeable and superbly talented people working on those problems. I'm hopeful we can make

Botulism confirmed in Clovis

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Health and Environment Department has confirmed 24 cases of botulism poisoning in the Clovis area, making the outbreak one of the worst in the country in years, officials said.

Dr. Jonathan Mann, the state's chief health officer, said Saturday the victims ate at the swank Colonial Park Country Club Restaurant in Clovis between April 9 and April 13.

During that time, the restaurant hosted a golf tournament and several banquets attended by some 800 persons. An army of health officials was attempting Saturday to contact those persons, using lists of country club members, dining reservations and banquet reservations.

The health specialists were also attempting to determine the cause of the food poisoning outbreak.

"What we fear is that the source of the poisoning is possibly a commercially sold food product, which could mean others in other parts of the country will get hold of it also," Mann said.

Robert G. Brett, an official of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, said Saturday the FDA was called in when it was suspected a commercial food caused the outbreak.

"Our concern is finding the source of the poisoning and, if it involves a commercial food, we must find out the extent of its distribution," Brett said.

Brett said food samples from the restaurant have been flown to the FDA laboratory in Dallas, Texas, for testing.

Botulism poisoning is a serious form of food poisoning caused by toxin produced in certain bacteria sometimes found in foods that were improperly canned or prepared.

Mann said the first symptom of botulism is blurred vision, followed by blurred speech and, more seriously, paralysis of the neuromuscular system, which affects the muscles that control breathing.

Mann said botulism victims must be placed on respirators until the illness passes. He said botulism fatal in 20-30 percent of the cases.

To combat the "large outbreak" of food poisoning, Mann said anti-toxin is being flown into Clovis from major cities in the western United States.

He said if further cases are detected, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta will have to find additional sources of the anti-toxin.

Earlier Saturday, Mann said the restaurant's sanitation and managerial practices appeared good and said the contaminated source probably could not be identified prior to the outbreak.

When the ninth case of the illness was confirmed earlier Saturday, Mann said by national standards it was a "large outbreak." But, he said, 24 cases make it one of the worst outbreaks in this country in years.

Mann said the botulism victims are being hospitalized in Lubbock, Amarillo and El Paso, Texas, and Clovis and Albuquerque. The names and conditions of the victims were not available Saturday afternoon.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Is there a road back?

It has been projected that the national debt could reach 871 billion dollars by Sept. 30, 1979. The same projection stated it is a whopping "temporary" increase in the debt ceiling. We doubt that it will be temporary. Accelerated will probably be more nearly a correct term.

Is this just a debt of all Americans owed to other citizens of the United States? It is not. Now foreigners hold more than 15 percent of the mortgage on U.S. citizens' future.

This year foreign holders of part of the U.S. debt will get near seven billion dollars in interest from the mortgage placed on all Americans. There has been a 675 percent increase in holdings by foreigners in just the past seven years.

As this trend increases, and increase it will, there may come a time when we will owe our souls to people who can be manipulated by foreign politicians. Is it possible that we could be taken over by a means other than military? Possibly not, but the ramifications of this present trend can boggle the mind.

At the very least, outside pressures could sway our destiny and the future of our children in ways we would never tolerate, if we still had a modicum of control over our economic lives.

Many of us still believe that we do have most of that control within our grasp. Some of us think we have the reins in our hands since we can vote to choose those who are supposed to represent us. If we carry that thought a bit further, we may think that by getting enough of the "right" people in office, we can find our way out of the dilemma.

But consider: we can only change a few at a time and if we did select only the "right" people, how long would they stay "right"?

Most of the government agencies have been given powers exceeding the three branches of government which were set up to curtail too much power accruing to any one branch. Example: the Internal Revenue Service has the power of an administrative agency to find that your tax return needs an audit, it can then take on the legislative mantle to manipulate or invoke a rule; after that, it can don judicial robes and put you on trial in its own court, then determine the penalty.

Is there then, no hope for a return to fiscal responsibility and a sane approach to cutting the power of big government? There is hope but it gets dimmer by the day. If enough people become aware and concerned enough to say stop, whatever the immediate cost, we could start on the long treacherous road back. It will not be easy but it can be done.

The first lady budget

Rosalyn Carter has asked Congress to authorize funds for a First Lady staff. First Cousin Hugh Carter Jr., himself attached to the White House in one of those ambiguous jobs, said there is enough "precedence" for such a budget, even if one has not been authorized previously.

Of course First Ladies have in past administrations enjoyed their own staffs. And the taxpayers did — though it may have required some presidential bookkeeping skills — provide the money.

One can argue that a genuine First Lady Budget would be more up front, obviating the need to hide it among other White House expenses. But one can also argue — and plausibly — that the budget device legitimizes the establishment of a First Lady Budget, and a tax-supported budget, once legitimized, grows like topsy. Just watch.

Nuts and jolts

This bit of information was passed on to his readers by columnist L.M. Boyd:

"People in mental institutions who are permitted to vote make fewer mistakes on their ballots than do other voters. Also, more of them vote, proportionately. Over-all, their returns coincide exactly with the returns of the general public. So reports the American Psychological Association."

It seems as if there's something in that paragraph for everyone, including the character who says anybody that votes is crazy; and that other fellow over there who says we put the smart ones in the mental establishments and leave the rest of us nuts on the loose to be politicians, critics and therapists. Then too, we suppose there's something for the one who says everybody's crazy these days.

Nation's press

Blackist won't win sympathy

Wall Street Journal

It is not often that we stick our nose into a strictly private conflict between management and labor. Especially when the slugging match goes back 15 years. We just assume that sooner or later one party or the other will throw in the towel, or both sides will be so black and blue that they'll come to a gasping compromise.

But the beef between the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union and J.P. Stevens & Co., which dates to at least 1963, has gotten out of hand. The union has essentially lost its long fight to organize Stevens. Most of the 44,000 workers of Stevens' 83 plants through the South have made it painfully clear that they do not want to be represented by Amalgamated. Over the years the union has tried elections in the 12 likeliest locations and lost all but one, at Roanoke Rapids, N.C., which voted union 1,685 to 1,448 in 1974.

The union has lost a fortune in its long drive, and its frustration and bitterness are not hard to understand. But we can't sympathize with the union's last-ditch tactics. Because Stevens can't be beaten in a fair and square stand-up fight, Amalgamated has now resorted to terrorizing businessmen who do business with Stevens. The object is to starve Stevens into submission by isolating it from the rest of the business and financial community.

The tactic isn't likely to achieve the union's goals, but it is having dramatic short-term effects. Manufacturers Hanover Corp., threatened by the union with having union pension funds yanked out of the bank, has parted instead with two directors associated with Stevens. They are James D. Finley, chairman and chief executive of the textile firm and David W. Mitchell, a Stevens director who also is chairman and chief executive of Avon Products Inc.

Then it was Avon's turn, yanking Mr. Mitchell off Stevens' board after the textile union threatened a boycott of Avon products, on top of its unsuccessful boycott of Stevens' products. A string of labor leaders, politicians and clergymen — including a number of Catholic bishops — openly advocate the severing of all corporate ties to Stevens' board. Unlike a straight forward boycott, a la Cesar Chavez and his grapes, the textile union tactic concentrates wrath not on inanimate products but on human beings.

And it is all mindless fury by now. There is no denying that Stevens has been a tough union foe but union claims that the company does not fight fair are more dubious. It's true that over the last 15 years the union has been able to make unfair labor practice charges against Stevens stick 12 times. On the other hand, hundreds of its complaints have been dismissed. Considering that the National Labor Relations Board is scarcely anti-union, this seems to us the record of a rogue employer. Even the 12 successful complaints seem to have little to do with the union's inability to win elections.

Clearly, labor's problems with J.P. Stevens, the Southern textile industry and the South in general go well beyond the toughness and intransigence of a single corporate management. The textile industry is subject to fierce international competition. That's the reason it fled to the South from the North in search of lower costs. Many Southern workers apparently think that management is right when it claims that unions can't do much for them but price them out of a job and make more work for the Taiwanese.

It is significant that although the AFL-CIO union the Roanoke Rapids election in 1974, no contract has yet been negotiated nor has the union called a strike. This could be called another sign of Stevens' toughness, but it also suggests that the union itself recognizes a fundamental weakness in its economic position.

Blackmailing Manny Hanny and Avon won't cure that. Nor will the "labor reform" bill the AFL-CIO is trying to push through Congress as a new weapon for organizing the South, even though it will put dubious new strictures on management. It will be illegal, for example, to fire a worker who is organizing other workers on company time.

Labor's problems are serious. But it will solve them sooner by looking inward, not by trying to threaten individual corporate directors with the novel weapon of the secondary blacklist.

Space Age — it isn't just for astronauts

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-Editor

Space age technology. Have you stopped, lately, to consider just what that means?

Yes, it means man has overcome gravity's clutch and can travel to the moon and beyond. So what. I live in Pampa.

So I went to the optometrist for a checkup on Wednesday. Hadn't been in four or five years. I was led to a room containing a computer-looking machine and asked to sit down at one end and peer into the thing.

There was a pleasant and colorful picture inside there. A street scene from Paris or someplace. I followed some very simple instructions from the operator on the other end of the contraption for a couple of minutes.

Then I asked what the machine was and what it was doing. The operator of it handed me a little brochure entitled, "The 'Eye Computer' and You," subtitled, "How your doctor uses an optical computer to give you the most accurate prescription possible."

Inside the brochure one paragraph explained, "It might interest you to know that (the eye computer) was originally developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to test the vision of our astronauts in the space program."

The computer measures a patient's eyes by taking a "numerical picture" of the eyes and then instantly calculating the lens power necessary to correct any error it may find in "visual acuity."

Measurements from the computer are dialed into the trial lenses apparatus (phoropter) the doctor uses and he then refines the results to provide a quick and accurate prescription.

Fascinating. Oh, and there was another new machine in that office. Another computer type box which spits a tiny burst of air into each eye to measure the pressure to determine if there's any glaucoma.

It was about the quickest I ever remember having and eye examination but I left the office feeling quite confident in the results. Space age technology in the doctor's office.

New things everywhere we turn. I thought about the machine all afternoon. I made one of my infrequent visits to the barber and found that he'd been off to some meeting somewhere and had learned a new method of cutting hair so that it will look better and be easier to manage. He didn't say whether or not the method had been developed for the astronauts, but it makes no difference. It's the attitude prevalent in our space age society — experiment, develop, improve, apply.

Wednesday evening we got to share a celebration dinner for the employees of Lee-Tex Valve Manufacturing, a local company that is joining Chromalloy — "A Corporate Family of Creative Companies."

That's what it says on the business card of Leon H. Toups of Houma, La. Toups is president of Chromalloy's Natural Resources Co. and he's an impressive, sharp individual. About 40.

His background includes a stint at the space center in Florida where he was one of the many involved in making the space shots the successes they were.

Over dinner, I asked him how he'd come to be a company president — what personal qualities he considered most important. Intelligence?

"No," he said. "A lot of people are intelligent."

Energy?

"No many people are energetic."

What then? He said the two things he considered most important are the ability to work with people — inspire them to do their best — and the ability to achieve goals.

He said that goal achievement quality is something he polished to a fine art when in the space program. Problems had to be answered. New ideas, new equipment had to be developed. Everything had to be right. Deadlines had to be met.

Space age technology in business management. We watch television signals that have bounced off a satellite. Space age technology in our living rooms.

Cook up some provisions in the microwave. Space-age technology in the kitchen.

Some folks don't like the complexity of it all. They long for the days past when paces were slower, life seemed simpler.

Not me. I think it's a fascinating, creative, inventive, stimulating and exciting time to be around. And I like it.

'Of course I can trust you not to let it burn a hole in your pocket...'

The system still works

(c) 1978, Los Angeles Time Syndicate
Our system of government still works.

Technically tripartite — our President, Congress and Court — are intended to watchdog one another.

During the year that we have had an inexperienced President, our Congress registered his fumbles.

The system still works. While Congress appears to be considering President Carter's programs, what it has really been doing is developing programs of its own.

The Congress did not approve the President's energy package, did not approve his consumer protection agency, his cargo preference act or his welfare proposals.

The Congress did not approve the President's common situs picketing authorization or his hospital cost control act.

Yet it cannot be called a "do-nothing" Congress because, in the past year, Congress was in session 88 days more than the previous year and passed 210 bills.

One of the things the Congress did do was to build an adequate tax foundation under Social Security.

Where President Carter has sought to camouflage any new taxes by the political shell game of taking the money from a different pocket, Congress has the forthrightness to take the increased Social Security taxes out of our paychecks, from whence all taxes come eventually anyway.

Now in 1979, when the soaring costs of Social Security really begin to pinch, we will know what's pinching.

A year ago the Wall Street Journal was expressing anxiety about the fledgling President's whirlwind approach to the Presidency. Recently the same publication was applauding his now "more deliberate style."

If his style is now "more deliberate" it is because Congress would not let him scuttle the capital gains tax. Congress did not let him "nationalize health."

This year, 1978, the shoe may be on the other foot.

This year enough senators and congressmen are seeking reelection so that there will be an inevitable tendency to approve tax cuts — however inflationary — and other legislation which has proved to be good vote bait.

This year perhaps a "learner" President will tend to temper that tendency.

Anyway, never more than in 1977 did we rediscover that the American system still works.

The President, the Congress and the Court are managing to check and balance one another as it was intended they should.

There is one other factor recently introduced into this equation. The news media in our country has become sufficiently influential as to be able almost to exercise veto power over significant legislation.

As a fourth wheel we can help to stabilize government; but as a steering wheel we might mislead.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Price - Fixing? By Supreme Court Order?

A while back, a small TV outlet called Continental TV wanted to sell GTE Sylvania sets at some new locations. GTE objected, Continental went to court — and lost.

Would you have guessed that this tiny tale would cause a revolution in attitudes about who can sell what to whom in the U.S.?

Herewith a slightly longer, even stranger story:

A decade ago, the makers of Schwinn bicycles told the local stores carrying the bikes that they could purchase the products only if they agreed to sell in a limited territory and not to outside "bootleg" dealers. The Justice Department's antitrust division attacked this as a restraint of trade and won. The Supreme Court ruled that when you buy something, it's yours and you can sell it to anybody else you want to. If somebody tries to stop you, it's illegal.

In the case involving Continental TV, the present Burger Court in a decision written by Justice Powell, has said this was all wrong. Limitations such as Schwinn's they now say, aren't necessarily inside or outside the bounds; it all depends on whether the particular judges looking at the particular case think it is reasonable.

This has several implications, a few deeply disturbing.

ITEM: Some businesses already are treating the Continental TV decision as a signal to go ahead and tell their dealers to sell only to approved outlets and not to sell to "dirty" discounters. This could create major trouble for them, for the decision doesn't actually say that anything is OK. It just says that nobody can tell you in advance. There also is a footnote 18 on page 15 of the opinion that says anything ruled in the opinion doesn't help you if you are trying to fix prices!

SO BE WARNED: If you are a business owner planning to walk across this wooden bridge, you may find some of the planks are rotten and other planks aren't even there.

ITEM: Since the "reasonableness" of a trade barrier may depend on a wide variety of factors, the decision is certain to open the door to a multitude of lawsuits.

ITEM: This is the first significant case in which the Burger Court has actually overruled an important precedent of the Warren Court. Up to this, there had only been some reinterpreting and perhaps a little chipping away here and there. We might now have received the first clue that the time finally has come for a big shift by the Burger tribunal to the right in the whole field of economics.

ITEM: Although the footnote says that the Continental TV case does not allow price-fixing of any kind, some firms are sure to try to limit sales just to retailers who maintain high prices, and to tell them in turn not to "trans-ship" to any retailer who will cut prices. Thus, in fact the decision may promote price-fixing, even though it says precisely the opposite.

SO BE WARNED: If the analysis above is as accurate as experts insist it is, you, the consumer, will end up paying the higher prices — in fact the fact that Congress repealed fair trade just to stop this form of price-fixing.

To be even blunter, although the Court doesn't allow price-fixing, its decision has made it easier for price-fixers to get away with behind-the-scenes efforts to peg prices.

Can anything be done about this? Should it? That is up to you, the consumer, who will pay the price for whatever is or is not done. While it is true that in constitutional cases there is no appeal from a Supreme Court decision, this is not true in this instance. When the Supreme Court decides what a law passed by Congress means, Congress can change the answer for future cases — and often does.

In the Continental TV case, as in the Schwinn bicycle case, the nine Justices were deciphering the meaning of the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890 — which is very much under Congress's control.

Back in 1911, for instance, when the Court ruled that the Sherman law outlawed only what the judges themselves decided was unreasonable, it set off a flood of antitrust laws and led to the Clayton Act of 1914. In the Clayton 1914 law, Congress listed many practices it wanted to say were illegal — whether particular judges thought them reasonable or not.

A similar outcome might emerge from the Supreme Court's latest ruling on what is reasonable, what is not.

Surgery gives hope to cataract patients

By JANE E. BRODY
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times
News Service

NEW YORK — A pilot for a major airline was removed from flight duty at age 41 because cataracts had seriously reduced his visual clarity. The cataracts were removed surgically and his own defective lenses replaced by implanted artificial lenses. Now he's back working as a top-grade pilot.

A 7-year-old boy accidentally pushed a fork into his baby brother's eye and a cataract developed in the injured lens. The cataract was removed and the baby was fitted with a contact lens, which he, at age 3, is now able to insert and remove himself.

Nearly half a million Americans will have "clouds" removed from their eyes this year, the first step toward restoring sight lost because of cataracts. At the same time, however, more than 5,000 persons will become needlessly blind because they are ignorant of or irrationally fear the operation that can help them to see again.

Thus far, there is no way to prevent the development of most cataracts or to slow their growth. But better than 95 percent of patients who undergo cataract surgery see better as a result. Thanks to improved techniques, the operation today is one of the safest in the surgical repertory, even for aged and chronically ill persons, and convalescence is far simpler and shorter than in the past. Nor is it necessary any longer to postpone surgery until a cataract is "ripe" and has caused near-blindness.

A cataract is an opacity, or clouding up, of the normally transparent lens of the eyes. The lens, a tiny oval capsule about an eight-of-an-inch thick and convex on both sides, fits behind the pupil and iris, the colored part of the eye. Its job is to focus light rays so that they converge on the light-sensitive cells of the retina. Muscle fibers attached to the lens contract or relax, enabling the lens to flatten so that distant objects are in focus or to fatten so that near objects can be seen clearly.

Cataracts are the result of a chemical change in the protein of the lens which converts the lens from transparent to opaque, thus interfering with the passage of light rays. A cataract usually starts as a very small spot in the center or near the side of the lens. At first, there may be no noticeable effect on vision. But as the cataract enlarges, the clouding of vision becomes apparent.

Personal health

As one victim described it, "It's as if there was a veil in front of your eye and you always had to look through it." Gradually more veils are added and vision becomes cloudier and cloudier.

In addition to fuzzy or blurred vision, which may prompt the cataract victim constantly to seek brighter light for reading or to hold things very close to his eyes, other symptoms of cataracts include occasional double vision and difficulty with night driving because light from oncoming headlights is scattered by the cloudy lens. As a cataract develops, frequent changes of eyeglasses prescriptions may be necessary, but after a while new glasses no longer help.

Cataracts may form in only one eye or in both eyes at the same time. They may grow very slowly and never develop to the point where surgery is needed. Or they may enlarge rapidly. If there are cataracts in both eyes, they may not grow at the same rate.

The most common cause of cataracts is simply the degeneration associated with age. The so-called senile cataract. Of the more than three million Americans who have cataracts, three-fourths are 65 years of age or older. Only one in five are between ages 45 and 65.

Other causes of degeneration cataracts include exposure to X-rays, microwaves and infrared radiation; an injury in which the eye is penetrated; an illness such as diabetes associated with high blood sugar levels; an inflammation of the eye called uveitis, and certain drugs and chemicals taken orally or by injection, including cortisone and its derivatives, a cholesterol-lowering agent called MER-29 (no longer marketed), and a now-banned food chemical, dinitrophenol.

Some cataracts are developmental, rather than degenerative. These may be congenital (present at birth), caused by some noxious prenatal influence, or they may develop shortly after birth, possible the result of a genetic disorder.

If the mother has rubella (German Measles) early in pregnancy, her baby may be born with cataracts. Infants afflicted with the hereditary metabolic disease galactosemia will develop cataracts shortly after birth. Both these types of developmental cataracts can be prevented, the first by rubella vaccine or the actual infection before pregnancy, the second by placing the newborn infant on a special diet that lacks galactose, a sugar found in milk.

However, no drug, diet or exercise can prevent or dissolve cataracts. Surgery is the only effective treatment, and it is best done by an ophthalmologist who has a lot of experience with cataract surgery or has been trained in microsurgical techniques. The operation should be done when the cataract has reached the point where it interferes with a person's normal life.

There are a number of different ways to remove a cataract. The entire lens and its capsule may be removed (intracapsular extraction), a method usually done for senile cataracts. Or a large portion of the lens and capsule is removed, but part of the capsule left intact (extracapsular extraction). In children, the soft lens may be aspirated through a hollow needle.

A cold probe may be used to freeze the cataract, which then sticks to the probe, making it easy to remove. Another method, called phakoemulsification, uses ultrasound to break up the cataract, the pieces of which are then sucked out through a hollow needle.

Although initially hailed as a breakthrough, this method has since been shown to give no better results than older techniques. Some ophthalmologists have been trained to operate through a special microscope, which enables greater precision and the use of finer needles, minimizing the trauma and complications of surgery.

Local or general anesthesia may be used. With local anesthetics, surgery can be done safely on elderly and chronically ill persons. The operation usually takes less than an hour. If both eyes need surgery, only one eye is operated on at a time; the second is best done months later to reduce the risk of complications spreading from one eye to the other.

A number of physicians do not even keep their patients in the hospital overnight; others require only an overnight stay. However, although usually unnecessary, it is still common practice among ophthalmologists to keep cataract patients hospitalized for several days to a week. Ask your doctor about his practice regarding hospitalization before you decide to have him operate.

Convalescence is also much simpler than in the past. No longer must the patient lie heavily bandaged and perfectly still, with his head immobilized for days by bandages. Most patients can return to normal activities within a few days, as soon as their visual abilities allow them to. If the surgery is well done and the wound properly sutured, there should be no need to restrict activities significantly for weeks after surgery.

But surgery is only half the story. To restore vision, a new lens must be used to replace the one that was removed. In the past, cataract patients were obliged to wear thick glasses. "Coke-bottle" lenses which so magnified the image in the operated eye that the brain could not integrate the images from both eyes. (This is not a problem if both eyes are operated on.) The glasses also restrict undistorted vision to straight ahead, requiring the wearer to turn his head to see clearly to the side of him.

Now there are other choices. One is a lens that is implanted permanently in the eye at the time the cataract is removed. Since experience with this intraocular lens varies greatly from doctor to doctor, it's important that such an implant be done only by one who is specially trained in the procedure. The results with this type of lens are particularly good for the elderly.

Peripheral (side) vision is also normal. But the wearer must be able to insert and remove contact lenses daily and to keep them clean.

The particular choice of lens type should depend on the patient's needs, abilities and wishes. Often, however, it is determined by the doctor's expertise and experience. Before surgery, ask the doctor what type of lens correction works best in his hands. If you are not satisfied with the method he will use, consult another ophthalmologist.

Urban policy 'political'

On the record

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — This is a story about the public and private faces of the Carter administration. On urban policy, they are not the same.

It tells how much the president knew but didn't say about his urban policy's weaknesses and political considerations, even to Cabinet secretaries directly affected.

The Associated Press has obtained a copy of a memorandum sent to President Carter on March 21 by chief White House domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat and budget director James McIntyre.

On White House stationery and labeled "administratively confidential — not for circulation," the 13-page memo outlines their private recommendations for the urban policy Carter announced six days later.

It shows how blunt and how political was the advice that reached Carter as he prepared to decide, and sheds light on the limits of "Cabinet government."

It also discloses: —White House advisers didn't discuss two sensitive administrative issues in another paper for the president because that memo was circulated to Cabinet members and other agencies.

—The two aides recommended that Carter publicly announce that his new national development bank would be jointly administered by competing agencies, but that he should quietly alter the organization early next year. They said this would head off criticism from blacks and big city mayors and avoid "a visible defeat for (Housing and Urban Development) Secretary (Patricia) Harris, your lead urban expert and the only minority member of your domestic Cabinet."

From AP special assignment team

—Eizenstat recommended more aid for states as a gesture to assuage governors though he conceded not all of it would be spent.

—A public works proposal including a deal with the AFL-CIO, which the administration would later call a breakthrough, was described by McIntyre as too costly, too diffuse, and too temporary to provide any real remedy for urban problems.

—In contrast to their public optimism, Eizenstat and McIntyre acknowledged the dim prospects in Congress for two major legislative proposals — the national development bank and the administration's welfare reform package — and predicted that blacks and mayors would criticize the urban policy as inadequate.

—They revealed displeasure with Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano for testifying, without approval of Eizenstat's or McIntyre's staff, that the administration would back certain spending on welfare relief for states and cities.

The Eizenstat-McIntyre memo was attached to a 200-page "decision memorandum" listing individual programs on which Carter was to decide. He had 60 decisions to make.

The 13-page memo provided Carter private recommendations on the 60 decisions and "discusses issues which are too sensitive to be aired in the decision memorandum which was circulated to the agencies."

In short, the Cabinet secretaries most affected were to be excluded from the final internal debate over two issues: how to structure the development bank and whether to set up a White House coordinator for urban programs.

On the first issue, politics provoked Eizenstat and McIntyre to recommend a bank structure different from the one they thought would be most effective.

They acknowledged that "a bitter struggle has developed between Commerce and HUD" to be designated as home for the bank, listed arguments on both sides and concluded, in an underlined sentence, "Based on the substantive issues alone, we would recommend that the bank be located in Commerce." Then they added that the issue "is fraught with political difficulties."

"Most important, a decision to put the bank in Commerce would alienate the urban policy's principal constituencies — black leaders and, to a lesser extent, big city mayors."

"Moreover, placing the bank in Commerce would be a visible defeat for Secretary Harris, your lead urban expert and the only minority member of your domestic Cabinet."

They recommended that an independent bank jointly administered by HUD, Commerce and Treasury be proposed until the Office of Management and Budget's reorganization planners finish work early next year on economic and community development programs.

They felt this would allow Carter to "make the location decision at a later time in a less inflammatory environment" and "the bank can be quietly folded into the President's Reorganization Project plan."

Carter decided to propose a jointly administered independent bank. Deep in a 7,800-word message to Congress, he said it would function this way, pending recommendations from his reorganizers.

The president also proposed the bank be authorized to spend $2.4 billion in the fiscal year beginning in October despite an Eizenstat-McIntyre prediction that "final congressional action on the bank is unlikely this year."

The second issue too sensitive for a memo that Cabinet officers might see was whether to accept Califano's proposal for a Special Representative for Domestic Affairs in the White House.

Califano proposed the representative have a staff of 15, power to "broker" deals involving aid from several agencies and discretion to spend $250 million to $500 million to "sweeten" the deals.

Eizenstat and McIntyre proposed instead an interagency coordinating council of departmental assistant secretaries, no special funding, limited staff and limited power to broker deals.

They said, "It is unwise to vest an EOP (Executive Office of the President) agency with grant-making powers. The funding authority would be controversial with Congress."

Carter opted for the interagency coordinating council.

Treaty vote Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exactly one month after the narrow victory of the first Panama Canal treaty, the Carter administration finds itself right back where it was — teetering on the brink of a foreign policy calamity.

With the crucial vote on the second treaty due Tuesday, President Carter himself already is on record as describing it as "hanging by a thread."

That phrase was echoed last week by treaty supporters on Capitol Hill.

A month ago the administration barely survived the initial Senate test of its Panama Canal policy, when the chamber ratified the first of the two treaties 68-32, one vote to spare. That treaty provides for neutrality of the canal after the turn of the century.

Under Senate rules, two-thirds of those voting — meaning 67 if all 100 members are present — must vote for approval of a treaty.

The treaty still pending provides the mechanism under which the United States would relinquish control over the canal to the Panamanians by the year 2000.

An informal survey of the Senate by The Associated Press shows 59 senators solidly in favor of the second treaty, with 31 solidly opposed and 10 uncommitted.

That means eight of the 10 uncommitted would have to vote yes for the treaty to be ratified, but only three would have to vote no for it to lose — a situation nearly identical to that facing the administration

Stock market tops record on Friday

NEW YORK (AP) — The long-depressed stock market, suddenly infused with enthusiasm, erupted this past week in a rally that broke trading-volume records at the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 25.55 points to 795.13 for its sharpest weekly gain of the year.

The biggest chunk of that rise — 19.92 points — came Friday in the heaviest trading in New York Stock Exchange history.

Volume for the day reached 52.28 million shares, eclipsing the previous record of 44.51 million set Feb. 20, 1976.

The full week's turnover of 160.07 million shares was the heaviest since late February two years ago.

Sheriff Baker cleared

AMARILLO — T.L. Baker, Potter county sheriff, was cleared of allegations of misconduct and incompetence Friday night after five hours of deliberations by the nine-woman, three-man civil jury.

The jurors answered "not true" to six questions in a civil suit seeking to remove Baker from office.

Questions of official misconduct answered "not true" by the jurors included charges of making a false statement under oath, trying to impede an investigator into county transactions and the misapplication of a count-owned air compressor.

Questions of incompetence were related to the supervision of the county jail in which an 18-year-old hitchhiker was reportedly sexually assaulted, the failure to fire two jail supervisors named in a criminal indictment in connection with alleged sexual abuse and the furnishing of liquor to sequestered jurors.

Baker will still face criminal charges of aggravated perjury, theft of more than $200 and less than $10,000, official misconduct, attempted official oppression.

Eight witnesses testified to Baker's good reputation, including Rufe Jordan, Gray County sheriff.

One of Baker's defense attorneys, Robert B. Wallis of Houston, quoted Adolf Hitler in his speech to the jury. Wallis said Hitler said: "Tell a lie often enough, make it big enough and some people will believe it."

Prosecuting attorney was district attorney Tom Curtis.

Another defense attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, said, "We knew all along right will always win."

Reflections: dwarf among giants

EDITOR'S NOTE — Matthew Johnson, an all-around boy who happened to be a dwarf, died in his bed last week of as yet uncertain causes and was buried Saturday morning. His father, James Johnson, a reporter for the Oklahoma City Times, reflects on Matthew's life among giants.

By JAMES JOHNSON
Oklahoma City Times
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Living among giants is a great adventure. But you have to be a giant.

Matthew Johnson played the game hard for 16 years. The adventure was worth it.

Giants don't think of themselves as giants. But when you're just 4 feet tall — if you cheat a little — you see things which they are unaware of.

Here are some more observations about giants.

Giants make good friends, even if they're height-conscious. Matthew found that if you act big, they usually accept you as one of them.

If you love giants, they will love you.

They take giant steps. At their pace, you have to take three steps for two of theirs, Matthew found. But it's worth a few extra steps to keep up with a friend.

Matthew had a secret dream that one day he, too, would be a giant.

Being a giant would have eased life last winter when he pushed through hip-deep snow to deliver his Oklahoma City Times paper route while the giants were trudging in snow only up to their shins.

An avid sports fan, he didn't deliver that first newspaper until he read the sports page.

When Johnny Bench stepped up to the plate for Cincinnati, Matthew dreamed that one day he, too, would make that big swing that would knock in the winning homer while the fans went wild in the stands.

His dream varied according to which sports season was in progress.

He agonized with Barry Switzer at the Orange Bowl, thrilled with Kentucky cagers and just knew that the sports fortunes of both the University of Oklahoma and Northeast High School would improve "next time."

Being game takes heart, and a busy little heart like Matthew's finally plays out.

In his own bed, surrounded by his Harlem Globetrotters poster, a hockey stick given him by a reporter friend, his baseball bats and a Johnny Bench decorated wall plate, Matthew was thinking of tomorrow as he closed his eyes and began his longest dream in a place where size makes no difference.

As news of the unexpected loss was announced in four schools and as the word spread, Matthew's friends talked about their "biggest fan" and "great little guy."

And they demonstrated something that Matthew, happy in their company, never realized. Giants weep big tears.

Antenna heights restricted

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is being asked to decide whether local governments may restrict CB and ham radio antenna heights, an issue described as a "national legal crisis" involving the future of both radio services.

The immediate issue is a Cerritos, Calif., ordinance that says base station antennas "shall not exceed 40 feet in height from ground level or 15 feet above the roof height, whichever is least, unless permitted by the Planning Commission."

Snake bite victim dies after fight

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Rhonda Tagliabue, a 19-year-old rattlesnake bite victim from Victoria, has died at a San Antonio hospital following a two-week struggle for survival.

Miss Tagliabue died Thursday night of complications from severe snakebite, said officials at San Antonio Community Hospital.

She was a freshman at Victoria College. She was found Mrach 28 on a beach at Port O'Connor sitting next to a fence and sobbing hysterically.

Miss Tagliabue had been bitten severely on both legs and was bleeding profusely, investigators said.

She was taken first to a Port Lavaca hospital for treatment and later flown to San Antonio and put under the care of Dr. Thomas G. Glass Jr., a snakebite specialist.

Hospital officials had listed her in critical condition and said one of the complications from the snakebite was that her kidneys stopped functioning.

But any decision could affect hundreds of municipal laws governing radio antennas used by 340,000 amateur (ham) and an estimated 25 million CB operators throughout the country.

John D. Schroeder, a Cerritos ham operator, contends his city's ordinance is unconstitutional because the federal government has sole jurisdiction over radio operations and because it violates his right to free speech.

Schroeder had applied to the Cerritos Planning Commission for a permit to erect at his home a 70-foot tower and antenna.

The application was denied on grounds the antenna "would be out of character with the aesthetics of the neighborhood, would be a visual and aesthetic blight" and could cause interference with television and other home entertainment equipment.

Schroeder built his antenna despite the commission refusal and was charged with violating the municipal zoning ordinance. He appealed to the Supreme Court after California courts refused to block his prosecution.

Schroeder is joined in his appeal by the American Radio Relay League, a national organization with more than 130,000 ham members.

Since the CB sales boom of the last four years, the Federal Communications Commission and local governments have received numerous complaints about TV and other interference often caused by CB radios.

In response to these complaints, says the ARRL in a "friend of the court" brief, "many city councils and their counterparts have adopted, as part of zoning ordinances, severe restrictions on the size and height of outdoor antennas

Such restrictions, Schroeder argues, are unconstitutional.

Rare bald eaglet born in Waco zoo

WACO, Texas (AP) — "The biggest thing to ever happen" at Waco's small, out-of-the-way Central Texas Zoo in a tiny, scrawny fluffy critter with a sharply hooked beak. It's only a few days old and they don't even know yet if it's male or female.

Truck leads to slaying

DRIPPING SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Hays County sheriff's deputies say an arrest in Arizona led them to the body of a man apparently beaten to death in his trailer home. Hays County Deputy Sheriff Alfred Hohman found the body of Spenser Rhodes, 32, Thursday when he went to tell Rhodes his truck had been located in Phoenix, Ariz.

An autopsy showed Rhodes died from "blunt force trauma to the head," which fractured the skull, said Laura Corona of the Travis County Medical Examiner's Office. Phoenix Policeman Joel Corey said he had arrested Gary Harvey, 32, on a traffic charge, and later determined the truck Harvey was driving was registered to Rhodes.

Hohman estimated that Rhodes had been dead two or three days. No charges in the death were filed immediately.

It does, however, happen to be a rare baby bald eagle — only the second to be hatched in a public zoo in the last 62 years.

Zoo officials discovered the yet unnamed bird Wednesday afternoon. The proud parents are Loma and Alicc, longtime residents of the zoo. Mother and eaglet were reported doing well.

Incredibly, on the same day as the Waco birth, another baby bald eagle was hatched in the Columbus, Ohio, zoo. It is not yet clear which eaglet came first, but Central Texas Zoo Director Tim Jones is already claiming precedence.

"We just barely beat 'em," boasted Jones, who calls the extremely rare birth "the biggest thing that ever happened here."

Jones has posted signs reading "Quiet Please, No Trespassing, Eagle Nursery" and roped off the area around the cage. By Friday, word had spread and the zoo was "solid people." "We're going to have to hire extra people this weekend," said Jones.

The bald eagle, the national symbol since 1782, is an endangered species in most of the United States. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service experts estimate there are only 700 breeding pairs not in captivity in the lower 48 states.

An eaglet was hatched in Miami in 1973 — the first recorded hatching in 57 years. Jones has been buzzing around the nest — built inside an old oil drum — like any anxious grandparent.

"I wish to hell he (the father) would feed him. They're making us a nervous wreck," Jones said as Alicc dangled a piece of chicken meat over the fuzzy gray chick, then ate it himself.

Jones has contacted eagle experts around the country. If, for some reason, the eaglet has to be taken from its parents to save it, incubators and a diet supplied by a Cornell University professor will be ready.

Right now, the eaglet appears to be doing well and is being guard zealously by his parents, especially his father, who has hardly left the nest since the birth.

"Today I notice he (the eaglet) was vocalizing, which he wasn't doing yesterday," DeWayne Clark, the zoo's education director, said Friday as he sat by the cage all day with a notepad, tape recorder and movie camera to record the slightest activity.

It is unclear why the Central Texas Zoo was able to succeed in mating its eagles when larger, better-equipped zoos have failed.

"It's just hitting everything right," said Jones, who added, "I think we're proving that small zoos can do their part (in breeding endangered species)." Jones is also keeping a watchful eye on another egg in the nest, which was due to hatch this weekend.

Tower says Korean link won't hinder re-election

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Saturday his re-election chances will not be affected by his "social relationship" with Korean businessman Tongsun Park. Tower disqualified himself from participating in the closed door questioning of Park by the Senate Ethics Committee, which is investigating allegations of influence peddling on Capitol Hill by Park and other Koreans.

"I don't think it's having much of an impact, because there are no Texans involved," Tower said at a news conference. "The honorable thing to do was to disqualify myself. I testified before the ethics committee three weeks ago and there's nothing there (to investigate)."

Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, who is seeking the Democratic Senate nomination against Joe Christie, brought Tower's relationship with Park to attention in a Capitol Hill news conference. Krueger said Tower actually was forced to step aside from the closed door questioning.

Tower, who has no opponent in the Republican May 6 primary, said he has raised about $1 million and expects to spend $3 million, compared to the $2.7 million he poured out for his 1972 re-election.

In addition to the Democratic nominee, Tower will compete for votes with Hank Grover, former Republican gubernatorial candidate who is running as an independent.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements has said his winning the nomination over Ray Hutchison in the primary would give Tower an added 200,000 votes in November.

"I have not expressed a preference, either privately or publicly, and that is the extent of what I will say on the matter," Tower said. "Both are qualified men, they're friends of mine and I will support the nominee in November."

In other comments, Tower said he thought President Carter made a mistake in deferring production of the neutron bomb.

16-year-old to be sent to state center

Probation was revoked for a 16-year-old Pampa juvenile Thursday in judge Don Cain's 223rd district court, and the juvenile will be sent first to the Statewide Reception Center at Brownwood and from there to one of the state's training centers for youth.

Bill Leonard, Gray county juvenile probation officer, said the youth was placed on probation last year for theft and probation was revoked because of a connection with burglary.

He said the youth will complete rehabilitation in one of the training centers.

Judge to clear 400 docket cases

More than 400 misdemeanor cases listed on the docket for county court jury week starting Monday are being cleared rapidly by guilty and no contest pleas and some dismissals.

Don Hinton, county judge, said Friday that the misdemeanor cases, mostly driving while intoxicated charges, must be cleared by July, when the Speedy Trial Act becomes effective.

The Speedy Trial Act would require that class C misdemeanors be heard within 30 days; class B within 60 days; class A within 90 days and felony cases within 120 days.

Some of the cases before Hinton this week and next week date back to as far as 1970, Hinton said.

Carter nurses 'blues'

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter, facing difficult issues such as inflation and strategic arms talks with the Russians, prepared Saturday to meet with his Cabinet and senior advisers to examine what one aide called "the 15-month blues."

Carter and the key members of his administration planned to isolate themselves Sunday among the maples and oaks of this mountaintop presidential retreat.

The officials were believed ready to ponder such topics as centralizing long-range administration decision making and getting top-priority programs through a Congress preoccupied by the Panama Canal issue.

"It's that time after 15 months to see what works and what could work better," said one senior administration official who declined to be identified publicly. He characterized the weekend summit as dealing with the administration's problem case of "the 15-month blues."

James Homer Hayes, $100, court costs, and 30 days probated to six months; Rogelio Villarreal, $50, court costs and three days; and Charles David Huntsberger, $100, court costs and 30 days probated to six months.

The court awarded a default judgment in the case of Lorene McCathern versus Velda Jo Huddleston, because the defendant failed to appear. The defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiff $527.61, which included a debt, attorney's fees and interest.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale headed the list of top administration officials flocking to the private meeting.

The conference was scheduled to last through noon on Monday, and was believed aimed at reviewing a decision-making process that has sometimes plagued the administration in its first 15 months.

During that period, Carter and his Cabinet members have come up with welfare and tax revision proposals, economic stimulus and energy plans and foreign policy strategies, each with self-imposed deadlines.

Carter's urban policy, unveiled last month, reportedly was drawn up on a schedule that had the president spending only five hours on a series of decisions involving a 200-page policy statement.

The presidential aide predicted that the secluded meetings would bring about a "fine-tuning of procedures" in both the White House and the Cabinet operations.

Plight of Allergy Sufferer Examined in New AP Booklet

As many as one of every six Americans suffers from an allergy of some kind, according to an Associated Press booklet, "ALLERGIES: YOUR PERSONAL POISONS" which is now available to readers of this newspaper.

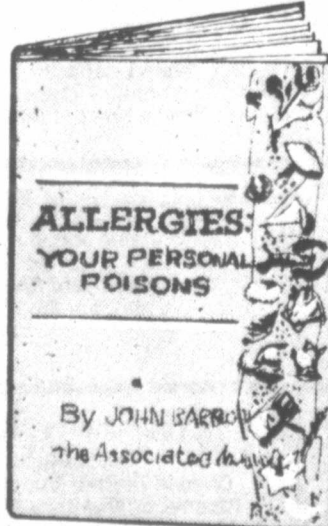

The illustrated booklet is the work of John Barbour, nationally-known AP Newsfeatures writer and author with a special background in science.

In a preface to the booklet, Dr. Richard M. Krause, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, National Institutes of Health, notes:

"Allergies are more common and frequently much more serious diseases than you may think. The runny nose, the itchy eyes, the wheezing and sneezing are but the outward manifestations of underlying illness which is often incapacitating. Such illnesses as asthma, hay fever, and allergies to medications are shared by more than 35 million Americans."

"ALLERGIES" delves into the various "personal poisons" that manifest themselves through itching, coughing, wheezing, sneezing—and sometimes more severe reactions—from house dust to pollen, cats and lobster, pillows and penicillin.

It discusses the causes of allergies, the various forms they may take—and some things the sufferer can do to relieve that unpleasant and often dangerous discomfort.

"ALLERGIES" details the roots and possible remedies for hay fever, asthma, and the myriad miseries many suffer from some foods they eat, drugs they take, the very air they breathe.

The booklet gives advice on what allergy sufferers can do for themselves and cautions: "Above all, see a doctor—preferably an allergist—to develop a personal program against your personal poison."

"ALLERGIES: YOUR PERSONAL POISONS" is now available for just $1.50.

Texas water

breakthroughs to extend the life of the water sources we have and to help find new ones."

J.D. Belfort, who heads the department's desalting unit, contributed this encouraging statement:

"Recent research and development activities in desalting processes have reduced the cost of converting saline water to fresh water. Several of these processes are now being used commercially to provide municipal and industrial supplies of fresh water."

The desalting program offers the promise of developing an entirely new source of fresh water, from huge known supplies of inland brackish water as well as the oceans and seas.

And from the High Plains, comes this word from Duncan Ellison, executive director of Water Inc.:

"I'd say the irrigation farmer is way ahead of the urban water user insofar as water husbandry goes. The farmer shuts the water off when the crops have enough."

"At one time it was pure economics. I think he realizes today he's using up a vital resource."

"Twenty years ago in this area it wasn't uncommon to see a farmer water his cotton six or seven times during the season. Today it will average three times."

"Not only that, he's getting better yields. He's not drowning his cotton. Who was it that said, 'The older I get the smarter I get?' The farmers aren't any different."

Many areas are slicing doggedly through bureaucratic and environmental red tape and constructing dams to capture water to meet, essentially, municipal and industrial requirements.

Recreational benefits are a frequent spinoff of reservoir development but only a small portion of the state's surface water is earmarked for irrigation. And that, when one gets down to the nitty gritty, is the crux of the long range issue: Importing water for irrigation.

Do you spend billions of dollars locating and importing water to the High Plains and other areas where shortages are imminent?

Or do you cripple, if not kill, a billion-dollar segment of the economy, simultaneously triggering social upheaval of perhaps staggering magnitude?

Once again, there are no easy answers.

Here's what some have said: Harry Burleigh, a retired engineer and former state water official: "What's the real issue? That's a breadbasket out there for America. Today we're 200 million. By 2020, we're going to be 400 million..."

"How bad does this country need that production out there? Can this nation afford to let that tremendously profitable economy that's grown on the Llano Estacado blow?"

"If it does let it blow, what's it worth to the nation not to let it blow?"

A.L. Black, chairman of the Texas Water Development Board: "To let any part of our state go down the drain for lack of water would be an American tragedy."

Jay Tapp, Houston business consultant: "I'm not unsympathetic... but behind the ringing phrases and fiery appeals is simply an unanswered question: Who the hell's going to pay for it?"

"The water hustlers talk in wild rhetoric, but the burden of proof is on the people who are proposing all these wild schemes. It's in the economic area that the importation scheme falls apart."

"The economics of it just don't work. The water hustlers in effect want the Texas taxpayers to subsidize the irrigation farmers. But when you ask whose going to foot the multi-billion bill, the silence is deafening."

Rep. Bill Clayton of Springlake, an irrigation farmer: "I don't think the nation can afford to let this thing go down the drain."

With a touch of philosophy camouflaged behind an engaging drawl, Duncan Ellison, in his Lubbock office, provided this view:

"The whole problem is the history of water development. The gestation period for planning and implementing the water development process is a tedious one and a long one."

"One of our problems is that this nation, not just Texas, is crisis oriented. We talk, talk, talk, but until we get into an actual crisis we don't do anything."

"Then we pull off a crash program, and it costs us three times as much as if we'd planned realistically for the long range."

The space program, he said, is a perfect example. America did nothing from the time Godard invented the rocket until the Russians Sputnik.

"Then President Kennedy said we'd put a man on the moon in 10 years regardless of what it cost. We did and it cost." Ellison said.

"One of the real stumbling blocks for long range water planning is that our state and national leaders too often look forward only to the end of their tenure."

"If I could make one real plea it would be, insofar as water development goes, for our politicians to forget politics and turn into statesmen."

"We don't need a program that goes to the end of the present term of whoever's in office. We have to have a program that looks ahead 5, 10, 25 years."

Texas will meet the challenge of its water problems, including importation, Ellison said.

When? "When enough people become concerned."

Peace People heads quit

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The founders of Northern Ireland's Peace People said Saturday they will give up leadership of the pacifist movement, which won them a Nobel Peace Prize but now is torn by internal feuding.

"We want to make sure that all members are equal," said Kieron McKeown in announcing the decision by him, Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan to step down in October from their positions at the head of the 8,000-member organization.

The two women gave Peace People its start in August 1976 and won the Nobel prize in recognition of their efforts to end the 8 1/2 years of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland. With McKeown, they have dominated the organization from the beginning.

Mrs. Williams, a 36-year-old Roman Catholic housewife, said she and Miss Corrigan, 33, still "will be taking a leading role, but we are letting other people come forward."

McKeown said: "We are not quitting what has been our life's work. We want to give a chance to the new talent... There will still be as much work for us to do. It's just that there will be different people in the driving seat."

The leaders' decision was announced to the Peace People's executive council Thursday night, along with the pledge that the trio "will work for the executive in any role they see fit."

Mrs. Williams formed the group after three children were killed by a runaway terrorist car in Belfast. Miss Corrigan, the children's aunt, soon joined her.

Initially the crusade stirred widespread support among the war-weary people of Northern Ireland. Rallies drew 20,000 people at a time.

Despite international acclaim, however, the movement gradually became mired in ideological squabbles. Grass-roots support dwindled as criticism of the women's leadership grew in proportion to their emergence as international fund-raisers and media celebrities.

In recent months there has been growing disillusionment with the Peace People for what is seen as a failure to live up to its promise of bringing Northern Ireland's Protestants and Catholics together.

More than 1,800 people have died in the fighting in Northern Ireland, where the mostly Catholic Irish Republican Army is battling to end Protestant domination and British rule.

Widespread criticism of the

There are 10,000 known fern species. Of these, 1,500 are suited for growing in temperate regions such as America.

Lovegrass Management

The warm weather has started Weeping Lovegrass to green-up. Better grazing utilization will be obtained this year if old growth from last year is removed or gone over with a brush beater-stalk shredder immediately. It would have been better if this old growth was already removed but now is about the last opportunity before the grass really starts.

Also a spring application of fertilizer is needed now. A general recommendation for Weeping Lovegrass is an application of about 30-20-0. This may not give the maximum amount of total grass but it should give the biggest return on the fertilizer dollar you spend. A soil test would give you a more exact recommendation to dilute your individual situation.

Irrigation Efficiency

Farmers with irrigation wells may want to check the output of their wells with a water meter available from the County Extension Office. We have rate meters installed in 6 inch and 8 inch flow line. These are relatively short pieces of pipe which can easily be connected in aluminum flow line.

Care of Spring Bulbs

I have seen alot of colorful spring flowering bulbs lately. However, don't be in a hurry to get rid of the foliage once they have finished flowering. Wait until the foliage has matured and died back to the ground before removing. Daffodil foliage, due to its height, can be very unsightly and by tying a loose knot in the leaf cluster you can lower its silhouette.

Farm roundup

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers will plant less cotton, grain sorghum and corn this spring, according to figures from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Cotton plantings will be down by 400,000 acres or 6 percent, grain sorghum will decline 500,000 acres or 9 percent, and corn plantings will be down 400,000 acres or 22 percent.

Slight increases in rice, oats and peanut plantings are expected.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said this is the first year since 1972 that corn plantings have decreased.

"It takes a tremendous amount of input, especially water, to grow corn," he said. "Ninety-nine percent of the corn grown on the High Plains is on irrigated land. Couple this with the high cost of energy and the decrease in corn prices and you can see why farmers are cutting back."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are cutting back on planting of some important crops this year but there is no sign of a massive attempt to beat their plowshares into swords.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday that a national survey among 48,000 farmers on April 1 showed that corn plantings will be reduced to 80.2 million acres, down 3 percent from 1977, but that soybeans will be increased almost 8 percent to 63.7 million acres.

replant a bed of bulbs depends upon how long they have been planted, and how crowded they have become. Crowded bulbs will produce only small flowers, if any. Usually most bulbs should be dug and the beds renovated every 3 to 5 years.

After digging the bulbs they can either be replanted immediately into the renovated beds, or they can be dried for several days and placed in well aerated bags for storage in a cool dry place during the summer months.

Remove any seed pods that may have formed while waiting for the foliage to die. Seed formation will utilize the food being produced by the leaves at the expense of the developing bulb needed for next spring's flowers.

It is a good idea, after flowering ceases, to apply a complete fertilizer over the bed area using about 2 to 3 pounds of 12-12-12 or its equivalent per 100 square feet of bed area. The nutrients are needed and utilized by the plant in developing the bulb and storing carbohydrates for rapid growth next spring.

Grand slam stops tough Pampa

The Amrillo Sandies took the first round title in 3-AAA baseball with an 8-5 win over the Pampa Harvesters. The Sandies were undefeated in four district games. The Harvesters (1-3) finished fourth in the first round behind second place Tascosa (3-1) and third place Caprock (2-2) Palo Dro (0-4) was fifth. The Harvesters took control of the game early when Johnny Hays scored on a Sandie error in the second inning. Amarillo managed only one hit in the second inning and fell behind 1-0. The third inning saw Pampa put two men on, but a double play by the Sandies retired the Harvesters with no runs. While the Sandies were unable to manage a hit in the third, two Pampa errors allowed a score. After three, the score was knotted at one all. Neither team could get on the scoreboard in the fourth. Pampa grounded out twice to the infield and flied out to the shortstop. All three outs for Amarillo came on fly balls to the Pampa outfield. Pampa's Gary Dumas led off the fifth inning with a single to shallow center. Amando Soto came to bat and cracked a triple to deep center that sent Dumas home for a run. An error by Amarillo's center fielder stretched Bobby Taylor's single to a double and sent Soto home for a second run. The next Pampa batter was out on a fly ball to right. With one away, Pampa had scored twice and had a man on. Pampa's next batter, Hays, grounded out to the infield. Amarillo's first baseman, in attempting to cut off Taylor's advance to third on the play, overthrew third base, allowing Taylor to score. With two away, Mark Jennings singled to center. Rick Dougherty promptly drove him in with a double. Pampa's final out came on a drive to center. With four runs on five hits, the Harvesters led 5-1 and seemed to have the game in hand. In the process, they had forced the removal of Amarillo's starting pitcher Pat Jnrncr. The fifth inning became a nightmare for the Harvesters, though, as the bases loaded on a combination of walks, beanballs and hits. Amarillo scored its first run of the inning when a pitch hit the fourth batter, Jordan, and walked a man in from third. With the bases loaded and Pampa's pitcher Dougherty in trouble, Coach Scott replaced him with Steve Stout. Stout walked in another run before striking out an Amrillo batter for the first out. It still looked like Pampa could get out of the inning without losing their lead. Tim Munkres, Amarillo's next batter, had other ideas. In the longest drive of the day, Munkres belted a grand slam over the centerfield wall. Munkres' shot was not enough for the Sandies, however. After an infield out, Dave Swafford belted a one-run homer that ended the scoring for the day. The Sandies had managed to dig their way out of a hole with a seven-run inning on three hits. Pampa could manage nothing in the last two innings and Amarillo walked away with the 3-AAA first-round title.

Affirmed faces test HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Affirmed, the winner of 10 of his 12 lifetime starts and the early favorite for the Kentucky Derby, faces his final California test Sunday in the $284,750 Hollywood Derby. The 38th running of the 1 1/4-mile Hollywood Park event has drawn a field of nine 3-year-olds. Radar Ahead, Balzac and Noble Bronze are expected to be the top threats to send Affirmed off to the May 6 running of the Kentucky Derby with a loss in his final tuneup. The winner of eight stakes events and more than a half-million dollars in his career, Affirmed is unbeaten in three races this year and was a runaway winner in the recent Santa Anita Derby. Regular jockey Steve Caution, who missed a ride on Affirmed in the Santa Anita Derby, will be aboard this time. Radar Ahead, unbeaten in three career starts, will be making his stakes debut in the Spahn, a 19-year-old from Greenville, S.C., won the 100-meter butterfly and the 100-meter breast stroke. Spahn's time of 52.29 in the 100-meter butterfly shattered the oldest U.S. record on the book, Mark Spitz' clocking of 55.70 10 years ago. Cynthia Woodhead, a 14-year-old from Riverside, Calif., was a double winner, taking the 200-meter freestyle and the 800-meter distance events. The Russians, coming off a surprising dual meet victory over East Germany last week, were expected to flex some muscle in the middle and long distance events. However, with a crowd of 2,000 fans cheering them on, the U.S. squad of North Carolina State Coach Don Easterling clobbered the Soviets at every turn. The United States finished on an intimidating note, taking both the women's 400-meter freestyle relay anchored by Miss Caulkins, and the men's 800-meter freestyle relay, anchored by David Larson. A full schedule of events was set for Sunday in this third dual swimming meet between the countries. The U.S. has never lost, winning 212-132 in 1977 in Leningrad.

Swimmers dunk Russians

Easterling, asked if he was surprised by the sweep, said, "No, not really, it's about like we thought it would be." He said Sunday could be just as good "because we have a whole lot going for us as far as confidence... now we have the momentum going our way." Russian Coach Sergey Vaytskhovskiy said, "There were three races we had hoped to win today — 200-meter breast stroke for women, 100-meter breast stroke for men and the men's 400-meter freestyle. "We had good times but they just swam fantastic."

63-point show against New Orleans that gave him a 27.2 average. Gervin, a 6-foot-7 guard nicknamed "Iceman" for his cool court demeanor, proved especially effective against Washington this year, averaging an even 30 points per outing. A starter on the East team in the NBA All-Star game, Gervin is half of the Spurs' one-two punch. The other half is Larry Kenon, a 6-9 All-Star forward who is averaging almost 21 points per game. Kenon is also the Spurs' leading rebounder. The Spurs run a free-lance style offense which was second in NBA scoring, but their "I-hope-they-miss" defense was 17th among 22 teams in the league, allowing 111 points per game. The defense, however, was stronger near the end of the season. Washington, which suffered some key injuries during the season and finished eight games behind San Antonio in the Central Division, is considered a more physical team with the powerful 6-9 Elvin Hayes, 6-10 Mitch Kupchak and Bobby Dandridge on the front line. Kevin Grevey hit 41 points Friday night as the Bullets got past Atlanta. "I'm glad that series did not go seven games. They're tough, physically tough," Bullets Coach Dick Motta said of the Hawks. "Our approach against Washington," Moe said last week, "would be to prevent them from scoring or taking advantage of us on the boards."

San Antonio, Texas (AP) — Coach Doug Moe and his San Antonio Spurs have been granted their first wish in the National Basketball Association playoffs—a Sunday start for their best-of-seven series against the Washington Bullets. The Bullets complied with Spurs' wish by downing the Atlanta Hawks, 107-103 Friday night in Atlanta to give Washington a two-game sweep in the best-of-three mini-series. Had Washington lost, San Antonio still would not know its opponent and the Spurs' first game would not come until Wednesday—10 days after they closed out the regular season. Moe did not want to keep his team out of action for 10 days. "I hope whoever wins it takes it in two straight," Moe said last week of the Atlanta-Washington series. Tipoff for Sunday's game will be 12:30 p.m. CST in the HemisFair Arena. San Antonio, by virtue of its 52-30 record and regular season Central Division championship, had a bye in the first playoff round. And, the Spurs will have the home court advantage against Washington should their series go the full seven games. The home court advantage could be important, since San Antonio and Central Division runnerup Washington split their regular season series 2-2. Both teams won their two home games and lost on the road. San Antonio brings the NBA's leading scorer, George Gervin, into the series. Gervin closed out the regular season with a

Ballesteros' lead grows

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros, struggling and slashing through wet and windy conditions, lost a stroke to par but stretched his lead to four shots Saturday in the third round of golf's $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

The young Spaniard, an accomplished globetrotter despite his 21 years, could produce only a 1-over-par 73 in his quest for a second American title in three weeks.

But the rest of the elite, winners-only field could do little better and Ballesteros, with a 54-hole total of 207, increased by a stroke the margin he'd held when play started in cool, cloudy, breezy weather that produced one brisk shower.

Mac McLendon, who acquired a spot in this event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months with his victory in the Citrus Open, took over second with a 71 and a 211 total.

Although Ballesteros' leading margin increased, the number of players within reach of him going into Sunday's final round also increased. Four players, led by British Open king Tom Watson and Lee Trevino, were only five strokes back at 212.

Trevino shot a 70, Watson 71 despite a double bogey, Bobby Cole of South Africa had par 72 and Bill Kratzert a 75.

South African Gary Player, winner of the Masters last week, once moved into sole control of second place in this event — then shot himself out of it about the time the showers started. He bogeyed the 11th and made double bogey 7 on the 12th. It sent him reeling to a 76 — including 40 on the back nine — and a 214 total.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus couldn't get started. He finished with a 73 and 214. PGA titleholder Lanny Wadkins was 72-215 and U.S. Open king Hubert Green 70-217.

Although the field is one of the strongest golf has seen, only big Andy North was able to break 70 on the tough, 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course. He put his 68 on the board before the weather took a turn for the worse. He was at 214.

Ballesteros and McLendon both made bogey. Ballesteros on the 17th and McLendon on the 18th.

Ballesteros' bogey came after a drive into the deep, wet rough, forced him to play back out into the fairway. He eventually took 3 from the fringes. McLendon, playing in front of him, 3-putted the 18th about the same time.

Ballesteros, winner of the Greater Greensboro Open a couple of weeks ago in his first start on the American tour, rallied, however, and birdied the 18th from about 15 feet.

At one time he appeared poised to run away from the field, but was ambushed by bogeys on the 13th and 14th. He missed the green on both.

But he got one back with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 16th and goes into Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for a $45,000 first prize in commanding position.

"He's a good, strong player," observed Watson. "He's won, what? Seven of his last eight starts or something like that? He won't give up. He won't back off."

Rivers, four others fined

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Rivers, one of five New York Yankees fined before the game for missing a "Welcome Home" luncheon, smashed a two-run, inside-the-park homer Saturday to carry the Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Rivers connected in the eighth inning after Mickey Kluttz, filling in for third baseman Graig Nettles, who also was fined, had opened with a double against loser Francisco Barrios.

Willie Randolph sacrificed Kluttz to third and then Rivers ripped a drive that sailed to the fence in left-center field. He circled the bases, just beating the relay to the plate with a head-first slide.

The White Sox had taken the lead on Eric Soderholm's seventh-inning single and a two-out double by Wayne Nordhagen.

Earlier, the White Sox had picked up a run in the third on singles by Nordhagen and Ralph Garr and a force-play grounder by Chet Lemon.

Jim Spencer, acquired by New York from Chicago over the winter, tied it for the Yankees with his second homer of the season in the fourth inning.

Tourney slated

The Pampa Industrial Softball League will hold a three day tournament Friday through Sunday of next week.

Deadline for those wishing to enter the slow-pitch contest is Wednesday. Entry requirements are $50 and one new ball per team.

Pampa falters

Amarillo High finished first and Caprock finished second in the boys' division of the 3-AAAA District tennis tournament.

In the girls' division, Caprock took first followed by Amarillo and Tascosa who tied.

Pampa was unable to get into the finals of the A division but the doubles team of Von Kluyve-Kessel division B. Von Kluyve-Kessel were defeated 6-2, 6-2 by Gulde-Stevens.

Sox clobber Rangers

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice, Butch Hobson and Bernie Carbo led a 17-hit attack Saturday as the slugging Boston Red Sox rolled to a 12-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Hobson and Carbo drove in four runs apiece while Rice collected two RBI with his third homer of the season.

The Red Sox clobbered Texas starter Dock Ellis and former teammate Fergie Jenkins in winning their second straight game at home.

Rice, the 1977 American League home run champion, got the Red Sox rolling with a tremendous smash high over the left field screen off Ellis in the first inning. Hobson reached Ellis for a three-run homer, his second, in the second inning.

Carbo, making his 1978 debut, doubled home a run in the second and then led off the fourth with a homer into the bleachers, just to the right of the 420-foot mark in center.

Rice, Carbo and Hobson had three hits apiece while Carl Yastrzemski, Carlton Fisk and Jerry Remy had two hits each.

Boston starter Bill Lee recorded the victory, his second without defeat, with eighth-inning relief help from Bob Stanley.

Lee struggled for seven innings, allowing eight hits, including solo homers by Kurt Bevacqua and Al Oliver. He threw 112 pitches before leaving the game.

Stanley was nicked for two infield hits in the eighth but was helped by Boston's second double-play of the game. Rookie right hander Jim Wright then made his major league debut in the ninth, retiring the Rangers in order and striking out two.

Carbo, a veteran left-handed swinger who sat on the bench in the Red Sox' first six games, got a chance to bat when center fielder Fred Lynn reported with pain in his lower back. He took over the designated hitter role as Rice went to left field and Yastrzemski moved to center.

Carbo doubled high off the left field wall to drive in a run in the second. After his homer, he struck out. Then he keyed a four run seventh with a bases loaded double off the wall. Both doubles appeared to be homers, but were held back by a stiff wind blowing in.

Hobson had a double and a single to go with his homer. The rugged third-baseman also made the defensive play of the game, diving to his right to spear a hot grounder and robbing Bevacqua of an extra base hit in the sixth.

NBA playoffs shaping up

By ALEX SACHARE AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia 76ers and San Antonio Spurs swing into National Basketball Association playoff competition Sunday after a week's rest, a time that may have been a mixed blessing.

Which should work to their advantage.

Not necessarily, according to Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch.

"Right now the action is better than the layoff," Fitch said after the Knicks knocked his team out of the playoffs. "The first game will tell the tale. If New York is going to win at Philadelphia, its best chance is Sunday. I rate them the underdog in the series, but if any team can beat Philly, New York's got the personnel to do it."

The Washington Bullets, in the playoffs for the 10th straight year, got 41 points from guard Kevin Grevey in closing out their series at Atlanta. They'll need more of the same if they hope to keep pace with the run-and-gun Spurs, who boast two of the league's most explosive players in NBA scoring champion George Gervin and Larry Kenon.

Chicagoan: fan for all seasons

CHICAGO (AP) — The baseball wars are under way and Bob Rosenberg, Chicago's fan for all seasons, is ready.

He's a season-ticket holder, but not your ordinary kind.

Rosenberg, 37, says he's held season tickets to the White Sox since 1961, the Bears since 1956 and the Black Hawks since 1959. And he's seen every Bulls home game as official scorer and statistician since they began playing in 1966.

When the White Sox open their season against Boston this afternoon he and his wife can be found in Box 40, Tier 10, Seats 14 and 15 at Comiskey Park, the same spots they occupied last season.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said of the new campaign. "I cut out all the spring training box scores from the paper. I paste them in a book. I've been doing that for years."

The balding, bespectacled delicatessen worker probably will get into more White Sox home games than most of the players. He expects to spend about 70 days during the next six months at Comiskey Park, an average of nearly three days a week.

Does he ever get tired of all that baseball that he could be watching on television from the comfort of his suburban Skokie home, a half hour from the ballpark?

"No, not when they're winning. When they're losing, yes," he says.

Rosenberg says his two tickets cost him $10 for each of the 78 home dates, a total of $780. But he says he may make that back by selling old programs, ticket stubs and other items to fellow collectors.

"I got a lot of old stuff that doesn't go very cheap, like old Bear programs from the early '30s," he says. "I bought them for 25 cents or half a dollar. They would go for $10 or $15 alone. And if you put it up at an auction you might get $100."

The Chicago native says "I really couldn't tell you" how his obsession with sports began. He says he was about 12 years old when he first went to games and 20 when he became a statistician for the Chicago Packers of the National Basketball Association.

"Some friends have asked me, 'Don't I get tired of it?' and you do, especially when the weather is bad and you have to drive to the Bulls game or Hawks game in the snow," he says.

But he adds that his wife of four years doesn't mind that she married a sports nut.

"She goes to all the ball games and keeps score, too," says Rosenberg. "There are times I don't feel like going to a ball game and she wants to go."

They often take pictures of players which they give to the subjects, sometimes in exchange for a bat. Rosenberg collects those also.

And how will the White Sox do this season?

"I always pick them for first every year. I think they've improved defensively and that's what really hurt them last year," he says.

Despite that rose-colored, debatable prognosis, Rosenberg appears right on target when he assesses his checkered career as a fan.

"There's nobody who goes to as many events as I do."

Hungry Mets a team of castoffs

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Pinch 'em. Maybe the New York Mets are for real.

"Vicious — that's the word for us," says an exuberant Lenny Randle. "No superstars. No paranoia. Just a young, hungry spirit trying to reverse what happened last year."

"The key lies in the definition of the word 'team,'" adds Bobby Valentine. "Individually maybe we don't have the talent to go man-to-man with clubs like the Phillies. Together I think you will find we can be highly competitive."

"A lot like the team in '69," says veteran Ed Kranepool, the lone remaining original Met. "Young and unproven but high on desire."

Around Shea Stadium, where everyone hung funeral wreaths with the departure of ace pitcher Tom Seaver and Jon Matlack and long-ball hitting Dave Kingman, there has been a sudden reawakening.

One sparrow doesn't make a spring, nor does a fast spurt from the starting gate mean a pennant push in September. But the demeaned, patchwork Mets insist they're not one-day wonders.

"Our good start doesn't surprise me," said General Manager Joe McDonald, basking in early prosperity in his plush second-floor office. "We felt in the spring we were assembling a good team. We worked hard. Morale was very good."

"Our biggest improvement has been in defense. Young Doug Flynn has given us a great double-play potential at second base. He is very agile, sure-handed with a quick, powerful release. Our pitching is better than any one expected."

"And Bobby Valentine has instilled a fantastic spirit in the team. He is our cheerleader when things go good, our comforter when things go bad."

"We have a winning attitude — and Bobby has stoked the coals."

Bobby is a 5-foot-10 dynamo who, as a utility infielder and pinch-hitter, sees restricted service. But he has enough pep and vinegar to spark a dozen locker rooms.

"This team is made up of a bunch of castoffs — professionals put together from other teams, guys who resent other people deciding what their fate is going to be," he said. "They're bitter that they have been listed as liabilities in trades that weaken the team. All are determined to prove they are equal commodities."

Valentine relates the Mets to a tug-of-war. "Show me 10 men pulling a rope individually on one side and 10 men all pulling together on the other and I'll show you the winner."

"Our team was not all that bad last year. It simply got down on itself. We had a locker room of malcontents and our critics were not charitable enough to say, 'Let's give the Mets a chance.'"

Pampa sixth at Amarillo

Pampa took sixth in a field of seventeen to qualify for the second round at the Amarillo Boys' Relays Golf Tournament on Friday.

Pampa played the opening round in a combined total of 321. Pampa was just one stroke ahead of two other schools to grab the last slot.

In the final round of play, Pampa carded a 332 for a final combined score of 653 which placed them sixth.

Hereford finished the tournament with a score of 635 to place first.

Scott Barrett of Pampa led the team with a 36-hole score of 155, fourth best in the tournament. Dusty Hudson was second for Pampa at 164. Barry Terrell (166), Scott Nichols (168) and Paul Beck (181) rounded out the Pampa squad.

Medalist of the tournament was Kirk Maynard of Dell City, Oklahoma. Hereford's McDowell was runner-up with a card of 152.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Non-public elementary and secondary schools get less than 1 percent of the school aid under the existing federal programs although they enroll nearly 10 percent of the nation's students, a Catholic group said Saturday.

Two officials of the U.S. Catholic Conference estimated that private schools receive only $54.2 million from the federal programs they are entitled to participate in. The overall federal school budget is $6.9 billion. Father Patrick Farrell and Richard Duffy disputed HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.'s estimate that non-public schools receive between $100 million and $250 million in federal aid or approximately $60 per student.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Governors Association urged its members to contact their representatives in Congress this week about a lobbying bill due for House debate on Wednesday.

As reported by the House Judiciary Committee, the bill would require disclosure reports by organizations representing state and local governments. The association is asking lawmakers to support an amendment that would delete it from the measure. "Backers of the amendment argue that these organizations already fully disclose the kind of information the legislation is designed to elicit," the association said in a statement.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee says another vote will be taken on the nomination of a New Orleans magistrate to a federal judgeship post. But Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., did not specify whether the vote will be conducted this week.

Late Friday, the panel failed on a 5-5 tie to approve President Carter's nomination of Robert F. Collins. The vote came after several days of closed hearings on Collins' nomination. Sen. Dennis D. DeConcini, D-Ariz., presided over the sessions, which dealt with allegations that Collins, a black, traded judicial favors in return for prostitutes. Collins has steadfastly denied the charge.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common Cause, a citizens lobbying organization, is criticizing House and Senate energy conferees for barring the public from their negotiating sessions on pending legislation.

In a letter distributed to members of the House and Senate over the weekend, David Cohen, the organization's president, said, "The American people cannot be expected to trust decisions directly affecting their lives which are made behind closed doors out of the view from the public and press." Cohen noted that the House already had voted overwhelmingly against any more closed conferences being held by House and Senate conferees.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.

(AP) — Two space vehicles will be launched this year to explore the cloud-shrouded planet of Venus, officials at the Kennedy Space Center say.

The Pioneer orbiter, a drum-shaped, 1,300-pound space traveler, is to be launched May 20 and enter orbit around Venus on Dec. 4. On Aug. 7, a "multi-probe spacecraft" will be launched, taking a more direct route and arriving at Venus four or five days after the orbiter, officials said.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes has asked President Carter to delay implementing federal clean air standards for three years while scientists look for an economical way to burn high-sulfur Ohio coal.

Rhodes, in a telegram to the White House, said federal environmental policies will result in higher inflation, unemployment, welfare payments and electricity bills to Ohioans, his aides reported Saturday.

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary said after three days of hearings around the state that officials need to answer more questions about a proposal to bury nuclear wastes in salt beds of southern New Mexico.

O'Leary, who headed a panel of federal energy officials hearing public comments on the plan here, in Carlsbad and Albuquerque, said Friday he'll tell Energy Secretary James Schlesinger that "we have a difficult job in finding enough to satisfy me and the other technical members of this panel that we can safely proceed with the project."

GREEN RIVER, Wyo. (AP) — A broken wheel on a freight car caused the derailment of 21 railroad cars near here Saturday, three of them carrying a flammable liquid that caught fire, Union Pacific spokesman Ed Schafer said.

He said each of the three burning cars contained up to 18,000 gallons of methyl alcohol. There were no injuries but the railroad's main east-west line was shut down, Schafer said.

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Two members of the Bob Seger rock band entourage are among 63 persons scheduled for arraignment here Monday on alcohol and drug charges stemming from a weekend rock concert.

Police said Anthony D. Munt, who travels with Seger's road crew, and the band's road manager, whose name was not released, were charged with furnishing alcohol to minors during a concert at the Allen County Memorial Coliseum.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military revoked all permits for fireworks displays in the Philippines Saturday to keep the explosives away from "terrorists, insurgents and subversives."

13 newspapers endorse Briscoe for gov

By The Associated Press
Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe has a wide lead over Attorney General John Hill in endorsements by daily newspaper.

A check by the Associated Press of state campaign headquarters showed Friday that Briscoe has seven endorsements, compared to only one for Hill.

In all, thirteen daily newspapers have taken sides in the Democratic governor's race and the race for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination.

Briscoe has been backed editorially by the Abilene Reporter-News, the Houston Chronicle, Galveston News, Wichita Falls Record-News, Laredo Times, Del Rio News-Herald and the Port Arthur News.

Hill has been endorsed in the governor's race by the Kilgore News Herald.

Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, has been endorsed by the Abilene Reporter-News, the San Angelo Standard-Times, the Dallas Times Herald, and the Snyder Daily News in his race for the U.S. Senate nomination.

His opponent, Joe Christie, has been endorsed by the El Paso Times, his hometown newspaper.

Christie says he will leave it up to the appropriate committees in Congress whether Krueger has showed "wholesale and cynical disregard for the regulations of the House" by using 11 of his congressional employees in his campaign.

Christie said last year the 11 employees received federal salaries totaling $73,952 during the time the Krueger campaign reimbursed them for $6,416 in travel expenses.

Krueger said he will travel into virtually every region of Texas the next nine days on a campaign trip that will touch the Gulf Coast, Panhandle, Central Texas, East and West Texas and the far south region of the state. Traveling to more than 35 cities, Krueger will take part in a "mini-car caravan" that began Friday in Dallas and went on to Orange and Beaumont.

Hill took part in the organization of "The 200 Women," a group made up of 200 women who have given at least $100 each to Hill. Organizer of the group was Travis County Commissioner Ann Richards of Austin.

Speaking at a news conference at Houston, Briscoe said "Mr. Hill poses as a candidate for the times when in reality he is a throwback. His style of politics is to attempt to answer every problem with more problems and more government. This has been disastrous to other states."

"He (Hill) is out of step with the Texas of 1978 because Texans are fed up with big promises, big tax bills, and bigger and bigger government — and because they know that these are not the solutions to our problems," the governor continued.

FBI enrages Texan with 'apology'

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is walking on the fighting side of Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez — again.

Last month during a House speech, the San Antonio Democrat demanded an apology from the FBI for referring to the congressman in file memorandums as receiving "communist support."

Friday, Gonzalez acknowledged receipt of a letter from FBI Director William Webster along with copies of additional file memos.

"I don't know whether to laugh or cry," said Gonzalez. "Mr. Webster insinuated an apology in his letter when he wrote a review of our files indicate no knowledge or participation on your part in obtaining communist support."

"But I have never confronted, rubbed elbows with, been introduced to anyone suspected of, identified as or even a sympathizer with the Communist Party," said Gonzalez.

"Yet the FBI called me 'a liberal Texas congressman who has received communist support.'"

Based on Webster's letter and the additional memos, Gonzalez said beginning Monday he will "bring the House up to date, as I promised to do in my earlier speech because I believe this involves every member of Congress."

Newspaper headlines reflect that FBI agents are being challenged as to their God-given right of being above the law. The FBI agents seem to believe they are privileged, not accountable for their actions. "Power has to be accounted for. Whenever you have unaccountability in any branch of government, you're going to have these abuses. This is the issue as I see it."

Gonzalez said he has already requested an appearance before the House Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights. "I want to do all I can to correct this situation legislatively," he said.

"Mr. Webster also explained that the FBI couldn't reveal its informant who told them I received communist support and the funny thing is, I know who told them that and I would consider that person a wholly unreliable informant," Gonzalez continued.

"The informant, whom I had known for a number of years, had a fit of conscience one day and came to my San Antonio office and told me what the informant had done."

"I told the informant that I didn't know if any communists had voted for me or not but if the devil himself came to San Antonio carrying his pitchfork and said he was going to vote for Henry B. Gonzalez, I wouldn't tell him not to."

Gonzalez also said the additional FBI memos reveal the agency had begun its file on him as early as 1957.

"That was when I was a state senator... why in the world was the FBI watching a state legislator?" he asked.

Gonzalez said the FBI memos indicate he was watched by agents while attending NAACP meetings and "even an AFL-CIO conference on youth" during the late 50s.

"One memo referred to a NAACP meeting in Seguin... you can't find a less subversive area in the country than Seguin," he said.

"I was in the state senate 21 years ago and I never dreamed that the FBI was keeping tabs on me."

The agency also kept up with Gonzalez when he ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate in 1951 and for governor in 1958. "Back then, they were spelling my name with an 's' instead of a 'z'... now, at least, they spell it right."

Gonzalez, a House member since 1961, said he was told that local FBI agents had actively opposed his election, "but since I won, I didn't look into it but if I had known about the dossier on me, I would have."

"After the election, the local agents sent a memo suggesting that a letter of congratulations on his election is inappropriate."

Gonzalez, who has a legislative history of supporting individual rights' measures, said based on his contact and understanding of the FBI, "that if we expect the FBI — or even the CIA or military intelligence — to be our salvation, we're lost."

Gonzalez said the FBI memos tended to reflect the mood of the agency's former iron-willed boss, J. Edgar Hoover.

"They (agents) treated Hoover like he was a king... a potentate," began Gonzalez. "If I had made a statement or a speech that was favorable to the FBI, they would refer to me (in memos) as just a 'Texas congressman who has cordial relations with our office.' But if I had bad-mouthed

Church men preview 'Holocaust'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The event — the monstrous horror of it once it registered on a shamed world — has gnawed at human consciences ever since. The "holocaust" shook the basis for civilization itself.

Broken runner returns

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four years ago, doctors gave Roger Reynolds little chance to live, let alone ever run again. Most of the bones on his left side, including his shoulder, ribs, hip, pelvis, arm, leg, ankle and heel, were shattered in a 2,000-foot fall during a stunt parachute exhibition. Neither of his parachutes opened. "I don't like to be told I'm unable to do something," Reynolds said. "It goes against my grain."

So Monday, his 25th birthday, Reynolds will cap his run to recovery by competing in the Boston Marathon.

It has been a torturous road, one that astounds Dr. Frank McHugh, head of the Division of Sports Medicine at the University of Virginia and the man who treated Reynolds. "Amazing is the correct word," McHugh said. "If you dustrialized, culturally rich societies on earth had become an officially condoned, systematic hell — Hitler's "final solution" — the worst orgy of mass murder in history.

Is that the payoff of progress? What use civilization if increased knowledge and science bring such unprecedented barbarity? Why did a mostly Christian population submit to it? Why did God? Can you still have "faith in humanity" after Auschwitz?

These are some of the questions that have festered through the years about the Nazi slaughter of 6 million Jewish men, women and children between 1939 and 1945, though inclinations sometimes are to forget, to avoid it.

It's hard even to talk about rationally, says philosopher George Steiner. It "lies outside speech as it lies outside reason."

But it's due to be widely talked about in hundreds of churches, schools and synagogues as the result of a powerful dramatization, "Holocaust," over the NBC television network April 16 through April 19.

It is "bitter medicine," says the Rev. Dr. John H. McCombe, dean of Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University and one of many religious leaders who have previewed the 9½-hour series. "But it is a medicine that heals," he said.

Leaders of major religious groups, Jewish and Christian, including the U.S. Catholic Conference and the National Council of Churches involving most larger Protestant and Orthodox denominations, are urging their people to confront the message. It should "send a shiver of conscience through viewers," says Archbishop Torkom Manougian of the Armenian Church in America. It can do much toward "sensitizing mankind to rampant inhumanity."

An estimated 10 million study guides have been distributed by various religious, educational and cultural groups for use in conjunction with the series by schools and congregations.

It "offers us as Christians an opportunity for an examination of conscience, leading us to look more closely at the very concepts of our 'culture,' 'civilization' and 'religion,'" says a guide distributed by the National Council.

Many churches and synagogues, in some cases jointly, plan congregational viewing sessions on large screens with discussions afterward. At a state maximum security prison at Newburgh, N.Y., the Jewish and Protestant chaplains have arranged such sessions for prisoners.

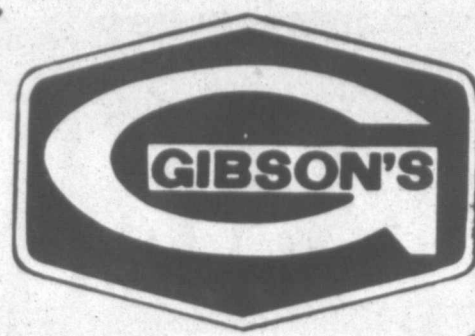

The series "will be an overpowering emotional and educational experience for Jews and non-Jews," says Albert Vorspan of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in recommending study programs on the series by its 720 Reform synagogues with church groups. Some fringe efforts have been made to pressure NBC affiliates not to show it, including a letter circulated to them by James K. Warner, president of the "Christian Defense League" of Baton Rouge, La., threatening pickets and litigation, calling the series "Zionist propaganda" and saying NBC is run by "Zionist Jews."

But spokesmen of the major Protestant and Roman Catholic bodies have repudiated the attack, terming the league a "small anti-Semitic organization" in no way representing Christians, and calling the series "authentic, sensitive and fair... a story which every American needs to know."

It can create "improved Christian-Jewish understanding in our nation," they said. Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, called the series a "monumental achievement" that can "heighten the consciousness of millions of people... to their moral responsibility."

The Rev. Dr. Paul M. Stevens, head of the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission, termed the series a "watershed in the moral and spiritual life of many of us who feel that somehow our day and generation should learn some things from the failures of the past."

He became mower and mower determined to get at the root of the matter

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-Editor

Some of the people who live in our house might disagree, and she usually does, but I like to think of myself as determined — you know, once I see something needs to be done, I do it no matter how long it takes or what the obstacles.

"Take our lawn, for instance ("please," as Henny Youngman might quip.) Three years ago when we moved into the house, we noted that the front yard was in need of something to loosen it up.

Old cuttings had matted down and the new grass coming through appeared in need of room to breathe. At the time I wasn't knowledgeable in the ways of bermuda — mow and water was all I knew.

But I figured a severe and strenuous raking might get to the roots of the problem. However, it is a large yard when viewed from the end of a rake handle, and hands accustomed to playing over a typewriter keyboard do not seem to fit said handle in comfort.

And anyway, once the grass reached a certain point in springtime, sometime after lawns in neighboring yards already had greened, the need for thatching was not so noticeable. I determined to table the matter until I could research it a bit further.

Then last year the discussion resumed. "We really have to do something about the lawn," the rest of the people in the house said.

"Yeah," I agreed with her, "maybe I ought to rent some kind of machine or something." Still didn't think much of spending long hours fighting a rake.

"Whatever," she said. "But it really needs something." Weekend followed weekend, each filled with higher priorities, until again the new grass managed to struggle above the accumulated thatch and the need for removal of the old straw seemed less urgent.

Through last winter the problem became more noticeable than ever. I began to ignore the thick, brown, unhealthy mass of dead-looking grass between the front door and the sidewalk. I'd shut my eyes as I walked from door to car or from car to door.

I appreciated nature's equalizing white carpet each time it came. Under cover of snow our yard looked as good as any of our neighbors'.

Finally I looked into the matter of the matted lawn enough to learn that an inexpensive blade-type apparatus is made for use on mowers which, by use of some spring-like devices on each end, is designed to thatch grass.

"Aha," I announced at a meeting in our house on the subject. "I'll get one of those suckers and fix up the yard."

"When?"

"Why, I'll go down and purchase the item on the morrow and get the actual project underway this very Saturday," I rejoined. "I'll need to pick up a catcher bag for the lawnmower, too," I mentioned, "so I won't have to rake up all that grass I'm going to thatch out."

In the security and comfort of the living room it seemed a valid plan. A feeling of accomplishment warmed me just thinking about the project.

Next day, however, something came up at the office and I didn't get around to picking up the needed attachments. Same on the next day. And the next. You know, it's really been a busy season down at the office.

I'd seen the thatching blades around in various stores so I wasn't too worried about locating one of those. But ours is an old and unusual make of lawnmower and the occasional attempts I'd made to locate a catcher bag in previous seasons had been met with defeat.

I was still giving the matter careful thought and consideration, trying to figure out the best place to look for the item when the co-ed determined she'd take the matter in her own hands. She called a dealer of the brand of machine and asked that a bag be ordered. He said it wasn't possible because they are no longer manufactured.

It was quite a dilemma. I didn't see how I could proceed with the project without a bag to catch the thatch. No person with an ounce of human compassion could possibly condemn another person to such a term on a rake as a non-bag thatch job would produce.

"Could they?" I reasoned. "Okay, okay," she acquiesced. "Go down to Pampa Tent and Awning and see if they have some canvas that we could use to make a bag."

I said I would go the first thing next day after I got caught up down at the office. I did it, too, just to illustrate how determined I was becoming about the project.

We spent the next three or four evenings laboring over said catcher bag — working out a suitable design, cutting, machine sewing, hand stitching — until finally we had our bag.

"Now, I'll go down tomorrow and get one of those spring-blade things and get the thatch dispatched," I promised with a self-satisfied smile.

Sold out. The place I'd remembered seeing some of the thatcher blades had no more of them. Another place said their insurance company won't let them sell them because they are considered too dangerous.

Finally I located a store that had one of them left, at about twice the price they normally sold for in the discount store, and that was reduced from the normal price at the place because the springs had been swiped from the package.

But (remember my determination) I bought the blade anyway, returned to the store that had sold out of the blades to purchase a set of replacement springs, and made my way home with a song in my heart. There still was enough daylight left to slap the new device on the mower and proceed with the operation.

No washer. Without a big washer to fit between blade and nut, the thing looked apt to come apart, and fly off the handle. I had no washer and stores I knew that did were closed. Friends I thought who might possess such a washer either didn't or weren't home.

Still worrying about what might come apart and fly off the handle, I reported to the co-ed that I'd made considerable progress and it looked like everything could be wrapped up lawnmower on the following afternoon. I think she could see the determination in my eyes.

Got the washer okay, and got the blade on. Feeling most efficient, I determined that I'd check the spark plug that had not been changed in the five years we'd owned the machine ... and we purchased it used. It appeared to be somewhat worn.

I pocketed it and took it with me so as to pick up a replacement while on the same trip needed to but a can of gas. It seemed most efficient to me, combining two things in one trip that way.

Two auto parts stores later, I learned that spark plugs of that particular description did not exist in Pampa stocks.

"Okay, then, gimme one of those. I'll try it. Do you think it'll work?" I told the parts man in a determined voice.

It did. Fired right up. Considering how everything else had gone, I was a little surprised. Pleased. But surprised. And determined.

I headed into the garage to get the bag and, simply because I was feeling so efficient, decided to look over the instructions that came with the thatching blade.

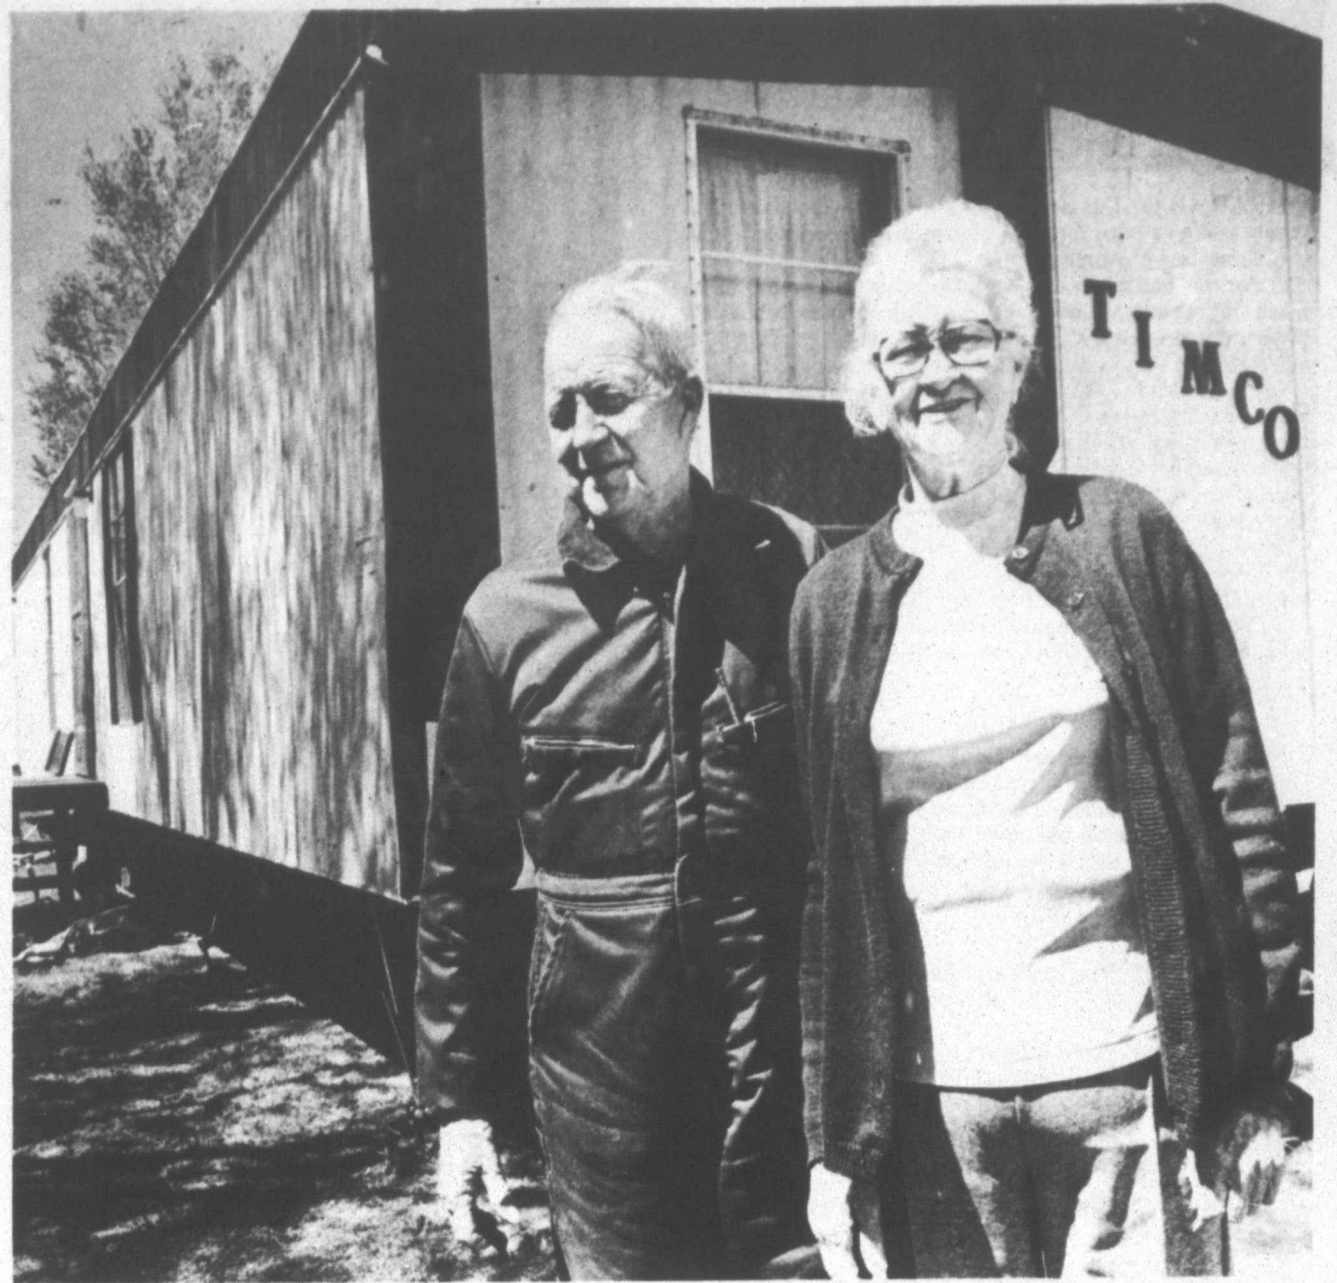

Shouldn't have. They instructed that a bag is not to be used in the process. The thatcher loosens the packed clippings to the surface where they are to be ranked.

I could have spit. Probably did, in fact. I sometimes chew tobacco when I'm working outside the house. It's the only time my wife lets me chew.

All my planning and bag-making and heart-aching over getting everything set to go just right and it all falls apart at the last minute. I had been so clever in getting around the raking and now...

I fired up the mower and thatched the damn yard. Then I got a rake and spent all the rest of that Saturday afternoon in painful misery — blisters, sore arms. Same thing Sunday morning.

I didn't like it but it had to be done. And once I made up my mind...

The C.H. Spencers are proud of their new home.

After the fire, the Spencers found friends

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

It was difficult combination of emotions. Mr. and Mrs. C.H. Spencer of 524 S. Cuyler hadn't talked about the Feb. 7 fire which destroyed their home and put them in the hospital for two weeks, but they wanted to.

They wanted to tell about all the friends who helped them, tell how much they appreciate it.

Mrs. Spencer told most of the story, but when her voice quivered and she stopped talking to blot her eyes dry, Spencer would add a comment or two.

They sat together in the living room of a new mobile home which replaced the frame structure that burned. There was some insurance. That with help from friends and children, enabled the Spencers to purchase their new home.

The fire began about 2:30 p.m. during that cold winter's night.

"I was standing at the foot of the bed, and I never walk in my sleep," Mrs. Spencer recounted.

And Charles said, "Why are you up?" I said "Well, I thought I smelled smoke." And Charles said, "I think I do too." I opened the door to the living room.

Her voice quivered a bit. "It was smoke," Spencer said. "Plenty of it."

They got out of the house with their lives and nothing else.

"I had on my gown and he had on his shorts," Mrs. Spencer said.

"The snow was ankle deep out there," Spencer said. "I know. I measured it with my ankles in several places."

Somebody had called the fire department and "You know," Mrs. Spencer said, "as we were trying to get out, the fire wagon was out there."

The fire victims also expressed appreciation for the Pampa Police Department.

"The police really did an outstanding job," Mrs. Spencer said. "They pulled the patrol car up where we could sit in it. It was warm."

Then that policeman said, "I think you ought to go to the hospital." I said "Why?" He said "Well, you're burned." I said "Not bad." And he said, "Well your husband's got some second degree burns."

And they both had inhaled quite a bit of the smoke. So the policeman called for an ambulance. And officers went to the hospital to check on the Spencers' condition.

"Part of them stayed at the emergency room to be sure we were all right," Mrs. Spencer said.

Officers earlier, at the site of the fire had asked the Spencers who they could call for them.

"We were just so upheaved ... we couldn't even think of our children's names," Mrs. Spencer said.

Five of their seven children live in Pampa — sons Henry and Paul and daughters Clarence Laycock, Katrina Bigham, and Charlene Blalock. Daughter Janice Ferguson lives in Palma, Spain. Son Don lives in Denver. Son Morris G. died in 1975. His widow, Delores, also lives in Denver.

Too upset to think of calling their children, the Spencers sat in the police car and watched their home burn.

"It gutted it," Spencer said. "Part of it fell in."

Everything was gone. "Pictures of our family; the things we'd had for so long; things that's precious to you. I suppose you'd say: things from when the children were growing up," Mrs.

Spencer said. They watched them all turn to smoke and ashes.

"This is the way I tried to accept it," she said. "Those were just material things. You can't do anything about material things, so we just put our faith and trust in the Lord."

But He had some help when it came to seeing after Mr. and Mrs. Spencer.

"People have really been good," Mrs. Spencer said. "They've given to us ... People we don't even know have helped us. We wouldn't have been able to stand it like this if people hadn't been praying for us. It gave us the spiritual strength to go on."

The tears flowed for a short time, then she went on.

"We have not talked about it and have not dwelt on it because there's no way we can bring anything back by doing that."

"You just don't know, until you have something come up like that, how many friends you have who will stand by you."

When the news got around that they'd been burned and were in the hospital, the flow of visitors began, Mrs. Spencer said.

"Some of them we didn't know very well; some had bought bait from Charles ... Big old men come up there with tears in their eyes."

A retired painter, Spencer generates a little income by selling fishing bait.

"We're just poor people and our house burned down," Mrs. Spencer said. "And we're thankful for what we've got. We've got three bedrooms and two baths and a kitchen and a living room."

And they've got a lot of friends. "I'd like for people to see how it turned out for us," Mrs. Spencer said.

So the Spencers are having an open house this afternoon. They want their friends to come by and share some good emotions with them.

Nurse retires after 28 years

By CHRIS EDWARDS
Pampa News Staff

She doesn't look tough enough to be the nurse that conned irritable patients into taking their pills. After all, she's rather small and rather shy. Modest. Has a hard time talking about herself. Doting grandmother type.

But that's what Mrs. Belva Vance did for 28 years, she gave medication to patients at Highland General Hospital. And although she is a doting grandmother, she was also tough enough to give a lot of shots to winning patients.

On the day after her retirement from Highland, Mrs. Vance sat in the pleasant living room of her brick home at 621 N. Frost laughing about the surprise of her retirement reception.

A money tree with $152 in bills fanning from the branches set on a table. That's what her friends and fellow employees at the hospital gave her. She's worth quadruple that much, a letter from nursing director Mrs. Geneva Gobin and hospital administrator Guy Hazlett would indicate.

What's she going to do with the money? "I think I'll keep it a while," she said wistfully.

"Then I might buy a coffee table."

Mrs. Vance started to work at Highland only two months after it opened, in April 1950. She remembers her first day well.

Even though a friend was the nursing supervisor, "I was scared within an inch of my life," she recalled.

But her children, Mrs. Louis Rogers and Charles Vance of Pampa, were old enough for Mrs. Vance to leave them, and she wanted the job.

As it happens, she made it just under the wire as a licensed vocational nurse. Starting in 1950 as a nurse's aide, Mrs. Vance had two years of experience before she was licensed by waiver, which then was done after one year's experience and the recommendation of administrators.

In 1953 the laws were changed, and Mrs. Vance would have had to attend school for her license. "There aren't very many of us waived nurses left," she said.

She counts the number of hospital administrators at

Highland since she started: "Let's see..." she said. "One, two, three... six I think — but they didn't affect me."

No, she was too busy concentrating on making sure the right patients got the right medication every day on that 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift. "I was always very careful about checking and re-checking my medication," she said. "It's very rare mistakes are made."

Retirement won't be a mistake for Mrs. Vance, because she's all set to "live it up." She hopes to spend some time with her two grandchildren and visit her brother in Denver. Then in winter, when it's colder, she wants to crochet and take up quilting.

Visit Denver she might, but she won't ever leave Pampa. "Pampa is my home," she said, emphasizing each word. "I don't think I could live anywhere else."

Mrs. Vance has another concern now, besides living it up and visiting friends from Highland — a young German schneider named Heidi.

Ten to one Heidi will never get sick — not with Mrs. Vance ready with the medication.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing a woman for about four months. We're both married and in our 30s, and work for the same large company.

After we had been seeing each other every day for work for about three months at her house (while her husband was at work), she decided to break it off, saying she felt guilty and was afraid her husband would find out. We'd stop for a few days, but we'd see each other at work and the desire to be together was so strong in both of us, one or the other would break down and ask, "How about a cup of coffee after work to talk?" Then we'd go to a public restaurant to talk, but we'd always end up back at her house.

I can't get this woman out of my mind, and she admits she's miserable, too. This off-again, on-again business is about to drive me crazy. I love her and don't want to lose her. We both have small children, so divorce is out... at least for now. What should we do? No names or locations please.

LOST MY HEART.

DEAR LOST: You are being selfish and unfair. Obviously, the woman is trying to keep her marriage intact, which is what you should be doing in view of the fact that you both have small children. Show some manliness and avoid situations that lead to temptation. I know it's not easy to suppress strong physical feelings, but in this case, it's the lesser of the evils.

DEAR ABBY: You quoted Edith Head, a famous fashion designer, as saying that all women look alike in the bathtub.

I'll wager that I've seen more women in the bathtub than you and Edith Head combined, and if there's one thing I'm sure of, it's that all women DO NOT look alike in the bathtub.

HOUSTON SWINGER

DEAR SWINGER: Technically you're right. (But they all have the same standard equipment.)

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a psychiatrist for several months. I think I know what is at the root of my trouble, but I am too ashamed to tell him.

I have been shoplifting for a long time. Not anything very expensive—just little things. I have never been caught, but I think some of the clerks suspect me by the way they look at me.

I have made up my mind to stop completely, but I am so sick with guilt feelings that I am on the verge of a nervous breakdown. If I tell my doctor, do you think he will report me to the police? I will do anything to be cured, but I wouldn't want to shame my family with any publicity. Please, please help me.

NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Tell your doctor. Your secret will be safe with him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband does business with investment firms, and he claims that in order to get preferred treatment he has to "be nice" to the girls in the office.

I realize that if a secretary or a telephone operator likes you, she will be more inclined to put you through to the boss or give you an early appointment, so a gift of perfume or some little gift at Christmastime is OK. But I think my husband is overdoing it.

He is always taking one of these girls out for dinner and dancing. He says he can put it on his expense account—it's not taking anything away from me, so I have no kick coming.

Not only that, but he refuses to tell me who the girls are or where he entertains them. In other words, it's strictly business, so it's none of my business. What do you think?

SITTING HOME

DEAR SITTING: I think your husband is using the "strictly business" excuse to justify a lot of monkey business. Furthermore, if you hold still for this, you are out of your tree.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I had a hysterectomy when I was 33 years old. They took out the uterus but not the ovaries.

I have been having such terrible spells of hot flashes and sweating. It runs down my face behind my ears; my entire body gets wet. Would this come from not having the ovaries out? Should I still have them removed? I'm 58 now.

DEAR READER—If the ovaries are not injured they function the same as before your hysterectomy. That means a woman will continue to have cyclical changes in female hormone levels and the associated mood changes—if any for her. The only thing missing is the uterus and its response with menstruation.

Your ovaries will cease functioning when you reach the menopause age, the same as they do in a woman who has not had a hysterectomy. And when that happens you can have hot flashes. You may be having hot flashes and still be in the menopause.

I would suggest that you see your doctor and have a thorough examination. The ovaries can undergo changes and it is important to still have annual examinations for that reason alone. If you are deficient in female hormones now and don't have a uterus you may be able to take small doses of hormones to control your hot flashes.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, to give you more information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB—When I was young I was always sick and therefore had to take a lot of medicine.

Due to the medicine or something in it my teeth have been stained a deep yellow. I always brush my teeth, but it doesn't help. The dentists say that nothing can be done about it. Because of this problem I never smile and when I do I usually cover my mouth. There must be something that can be done about this. Please send me any information on this you can. I'm 14 years old.

DEAR READER—Since you are only 14 you have years of smiles ahead of you and I hate to think of you not smiling all your life.

You probably were given tetracyclines—one group of antibiotics—and you probably needed them if you had serious illnesses. But these medicines can cause permanent discoloration to the teeth if given to children. The stain is in the enamel and it won't brush off and you can't cover it with anything either.

For this reason doctors try to avoid using these medicines in mothers after the mid-pregnancy stage, and in the infant until he is at least six months old. This is the period when the baby teeth can be stained. From six months to as long as 7 years of age there is a chance that the permanent teeth may be stained causing the type of problem you have described. After that age there is no danger of discoloring the teeth from giving tetracyclines.

I wish there were something I could recommend that would solve your problem. The best I can do is to say that if it is really bad when you are older your dentist may consider capping the teeth at the front of the mouth. You can understand a dentist's reluctance to do this to a good tooth just for cosmetic reasons. But if it made the difference of a life without smiles and one with smiles, it may be worth considering.

Bracelet means alert

TURLOCK, Calif. (AP) — When the red light flashes at Medic Alert headquarters here, Joanne Hull knows somewhere, someone's life is on the line—and it's her job to deliver life-saving medical information in a matter of minutes.

So in the three to four minutes it takes to find the proper microfilm records and read the vital information into the phone, she has continued a practice begun here more than two decades ago—that of saving lives from hidden killers.

It began when Dr. Marion C. Collins realized emergency medical identification could save more lives than he could during a life-long career as a general practitioner and surgeon in this town in Central California.

After his daughter Linda nearly died in reaction to a test for a tetanus antitoxin, Collins fashioned a slender silver bracelet bearing the insignia of the medical profession with the words "Medic Alert" on the front. On the back was a warning about his daughter's allergy.

Now an international organization with 12 million members and 14 foreign offices, Medic Alert is a long way from those early days when Collins ran the service from his home, filling thousands of requests at no charge.

The foundation's services, offered today for a one-time fee of $10, are based on standards set by the American Medical Association.

Collins died nearly a year ago, but the goals he set in founding Medic Alert continue to guide the tax-exempt foundation.

"These goals have remained very consistent because of the challenge of educating 40 million Americans to recognize the value of emergency medical identification," says Alfred Hodder, the executive director.

Start dental care early, dentist says

Many adults have learned the hard way that dental care should begin with baby teeth. Neglect of one's mouth in the formative years can later result in a good deal of illness, discomfort and expense.

The pediatrician usually gets the first look at a child's teeth. Hence, it is his or her job to start the child on the right path, says Dr. Abraham E. Nizel, professor of oral hygiene at Tufts Dental School in Massachusetts.

"Dentists seldom see their patients before the age of three. Most times it's between six and seven. By that time damage to jaws and teeth often cannot be undone," he explains.

Sugar is the number one enemy of children's dental health, Nizel recently told a Boston symposium sponsored by the Children's Hospital, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Johnson and Johnson Baby Products Co. However, he says, some sugar is necessary for an adequate diet.

But Nizel holds out some hope for improvement — "if pediatricians remember to prescribe fluoride in drops, lozenges or mouth washes."

Fluoride is especially important in the youngster's earliest years, says Nizel. "Once decay is established, fluoride defenses are useless," he cautions.

Experts also advise that a dentist should check a child's teeth as early as possible. But how do you get a reluctant tyke into the dental chair?

"Use patience and intelligence," says Dr. Seymour Stiber of Lenox Hill Hospital Dental Department in New York.

He suggests an initial get-acquainted visit to the dentist before any actual work is performed.

"I have seen frightened children quiet down and become interested in the instruments the dentist uses by letting him handle all the gadgets on the first visit," remarks Stiber.

Husband, wife team up in Antarctica

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — John and Donna Mitchell Oliver are back from a full year in Antarctica — the first husband-wife team ever to spend a winter at a government research station on the frozen continent.

"I think we're going to see a lot more women working down there soon," said Mrs. Oliver, a 29-year-old laboratory technician at Scripps Institution of Oceanography where her husband is a graduate student in biological oceanography.

The only woman among 87 men at McMurdo Base, she helped her 31-year-old husband collect animal types and studied the effects of winter isolation on 43 of the men.

The companionship "makes the winter a lot more bearable," Oliver said in an interview after their return. But he said selection of government explorers "should be based solely on an individual's work qualifications and personality — without regard to sex."

Mrs. Oliver returned with 800 pages of notes and 43 taped interviews.

The American explorers, she said, "suffer from lower motivation levels, shorter attention spans, lower energy levels and a sort of dullness which is hard to describe." But generally, said Mrs. Oliver, "I saw no serious psychological problems develop among the men."

Dr. Edward P. Todd, director of the National Science Foundation's division of polar problems, praised the Olivers in a statement from Washington as "a new breed of biological problem solvers."

"The success of the Olivers' effort may encourage other research couples to participate in winter Antarctic programs funded through the National Science Foundation," Todd said. Only two other women have spent a winter at the South Pole with the government's blessing. Dr. Mary Alice McWhinnie and Sister Mary Odile Cahoon lived and worked together at McMurdo in 1974.

The birthday observance for the Pampa chapter for May was discussed. Plans were made for the selection of a scholarship recipient.

Life CAN be beautiful.
It is, here.

TEN GOOD REASONS WHY YOU OR SOMEONE YOU LOVE SHOULD LIVE AT LEISURE LODGE.

HAPPINESS. Everyone has the inalienable right to the pursuit of happiness. And for many of us, as we grow older, true happiness comes from being around people our own age — people with whom we can enjoy conversation, reminiscences, our real feelings — people who understand.

COMFORT. At Leisure Lodge, we recognize that we are all individuals; everyone is different, and has different needs. Thus, we make every possible effort to see that these needs are met — from turning a thermostat up or down, locating a more comfortable chair, opening the drapes, or closing the drapes — or whatever it takes.

COMPANIONSHIP. We think one of the best reasons for living at Leisure Lodge is knowing that there will always be someone to be with; someone like you (or perhaps someone different, if you prefer.) At Leisure Lodge, you're alone only when you want to be — and we think that's awfully important.

LOVE. That's what living at Leisure Lodge is all about. From the Nurses, to the Aides, to the Cooks, to the Administrators — and certainly, from one guest to another, our home is filled with love. It always will be. Because that's what makes it a home. And we wouldn't have it any other way.

FOOD. There just isn't any better food anywhere. Hot, home-cooked meals, as much as you want, planned and supervised by a dietician, and prepared with love. (We eat here, too, you know, and we eat the same food as our guests.) Strict attention is paid to special diets. Everyone gets what he or she needs; no one gets what they shouldn't have. And usually, with older people, that's not true in even the best of private homes.

CLEANLINESS. We take special pride in making Leisure Lodge shine. Every part of our home is cleaned daily — and you know how important that is, when it comes to preserving good people's good health, at any age. Linens are always clean and fresh, and our guests' personal laundry is done right here in the home, at no charge.

ECONOMY. You might think it costs a lot of money to live here — but it doesn't. In fact, it doesn't cost a bit more to live at Leisure Lodge than at any other home. We're approved by the State Welfare Department for Medicaid — and of course, we're licensed by the State Health Department. Yet the fact is, you can probably live here for less than you can live at home.

ACTIVITIES. Want something to do? Want to have fun, with people your own age? Come to Leisure Lodge, and you've come to the right place! Our Activities Director has more ideas than fifteen computers! There's always something going on. And you'll love it!

NURSES. Ours are the very best anywhere. Bar none! We think so, anyway, and we'd bet you will, too. They care for our guests. They see to it that the proper medications are given, at the proper time. And baths, and shots, and all the other things. But, most of all, they like what they're doing, and they love our guests. And they always remember that a smile, and a cheerful greeting, are sometimes the very best medicine of all!

THERAPY. It comes in all types. Not just in helping people learn to use limbs that have grown weak, or to do things for themselves. We do that, of course, but we do other things, too, that may be even more important. Like making people feel good inside. At Leisure Lodge, we really do care.

CHOICES

Karen Blaker Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I am worried about my college roommate. It all started last week when she lost her diary. It was very dear to her and she has been depressed ever since. At first I could understand why she was upset. But I really can't be sympathetic any longer. Enough is enough! I would expect this reaction from an immature 15-year-old, but not from a college junior. I can't ask her any more about the problem because we have not been very open with each other. For example, after she goes out on a date, she comes back and writes in her diary rather than telling me what happened. That diary has made me so mad I have even thought of destroying it. It is impossible to get close to a person like that. Sometimes I ask myself why I had to get stuck with a roommate like mine. How should I handle the problem? Maybe I should just buy myself a diary and stop fighting it. DEAR READER — What if, once upon a time, there were two sisters who lived in a castle deep in the forest. One sister wanted to talk about everything, but the other sister never shared her secrets. Instead, she sewed her thoughts into a magic quilt with invisible thread. Consumed by jealousy, the talkative sister plotted ways to destroy the quilt. One day she threw the bag of invisible thread from the highest tower of the castle. A bird found it and returned it to the storage place. A few days later, she buried the quilt in the garden beneath the rosebushes. By the next morning, tunneling moles had left the quilt exposed to daylight. Nothing worked. Then one day the quilt was burned beyond recognition in a fire that swept through the east wing of the great castle. The quiet sister was greatly bereaved. All her thoughts were lost. She tried to tell her sister about her sorrow, but to no avail. As the quiet sister started another quilt, she thought, "I am glad I never trusted her with my thoughts. She cannot possibly understand my feelings." The years passed. The talkative sister withdrew and started her own quilt. They rarely talked except to inquire about the progress of their respective quilts. There was no more jealousy and hate in the castle — but there was also no love.

Park rangers stress boating safety in lake

The National Park Service urges visitors to the Lake Meredith Recreation Area to take precautions during the boating season. Boaters should use caution by the shoreline because the depth of the lake has dropped about two feet and reefs have become a hazard. Boaters at the upper end of the lake should reduce speed and avoid mud and silt. Park rangers recommend that boaters leaving a list of names, addresses, telephone numbers and personal data on all boaters with a friend who would be concerned before all outings. They also recommend that boaters carry extra clothing, food, a flashlight, matches, and other survival equipment just in case. If vehicles are to be left in the parking lot overnight, a park ranger should be notified. Other precautions include not mixing alcohol with boating, and waiting a storm out in a cove.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

We have a scene at our house every evening that makes Sadat and Begin sound like buddies at camp.

It's called whose turn is it to do the dishes, and if I do say so myself it has turned into a classic maneuver in diplomacy.

DETENTE: All during dinner, nothing is mentioned about dishes. The conversation is pleasant, but never once touches upon the issue.

TESTING THE POLITICAL WINDS: "Well, I got a lot of homework. The rest of you can sit here and talk if you want."

CONFRONTATION: "You leave this table and we'll break your face. We have to decide who's stuck with this mess."

PREMATURE WITHDRAWAL: "It's not my turn. I didn't eat anything so I'm out."

NEGOTIATIONS OPEN: "Wait a minute, we ought to be able to figure this out. I did them Tuesday because we had spaghetti. I always get stuck doing them when we have spaghetti because Mom never liked me."

"Get off our cases, you haven't done them in three weeks because of ball practice. I don't even think you're on the team. I think you just suit up and sit in the shower room to get out of doing dishes."

"That's a pretty rotten thing to say for someone who lets the dog help him clear. You think we haven't seen you?"

"At least I don't leave the broiler in the oven, the pans soaking in the sink, and put a bowl in the refrigerator with a peach pit in it."

BREAKDOWN IN TALKS: Food on plates begin to petrify.

ASSESSING ALTERNATIVES: "Look, we can sit here all night or we can just start at the beginning again and go according to age. (This spoken by the youngest.) I'm calling Chuck. He'll remember." (Backup troops.)

WITHDRAWAL: "Hey, I've got homework. When all of you decide whose turn it is, call me and I'll come back and debate it some more. BUT..."

RECIPROCITY: "If you decide it's my turn, someone is going to get punched out."

Peace in the Middle East is a probable certainty (I only say that to hear Edwin Newman give a primal scream) — but peace in the kitchen... NEVER!

Oatmeal hermit cookies spicy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
DEAR CECILY: Have you ever made Hermit Cookies with oatmeal? My mother used to bake them and when she did the kitchen always smelled so good. Now I'd like to make them for my children, but I don't know how. "The Joy of Cooking" has a recipe for Hermits and so does "The Good Housekeeping Cookbook" but these do not include oatmeal. — I LOVE TO COOK.

OATMEAL HERMITS

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
3/4 cup butter or margarine
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1/2 cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs
1-3rd cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cups quick-cooking oats
1 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

On a sheet of wax paper stir together the flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg.

In a large bowl cream the butter, brown sugar and granulated sugar. Beat in until blended the eggs, milk and vanilla. Add the flour mixture and mix well. Stir in the oats, raisins and walnuts.

Drop by rounded tablespoonfuls, well apart, onto ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. With a wide spatula remove to wire racks to cool.

Makes about 3 1/2 dozen.

TV Star Scene

After a seven year absence during which he finally found some long-sought stardom, Robert Duvall will be returning to television in the role of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for ABC's six-hour drama, "Ike." Filming will get underway this month on the lengthy project, with locations in California and the British Isles.

Model Maude Adams, who has always seemed something of an ice queen, will let her hair down for an NBC pilot about a mad crew of stunt-car drivers. Called "Big Bob Johnson and His Fantastic Speed Circus," the hour film set to air in May also stars Charles Napier, Connie Forslund and Robert Stoneman.

All the major roles will be played by actors with Indian blood in NBC's four-hour series, "Indians," which should do for the red race what "Roots" did for the black. Will Sampson, who debuted in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," will play the head of his family and a village of Plains Indians at the height of their culture around 1803.

Henry Darrow, last seen regularly in "High Chaparral," A. Martinez, Rose Portillo, Linda Redfern and Guillermo San Juan are some of the other stars in this promising presentation. Currently filming in Arizona, "Indians" will be presented later this year.

Jaelyn Smith's Southern belle sweetness will be toned down a bit when she stars as a retired prostitute married to an aging Hollywood actor in ABC's dramatization of Joyce Haber's "The Users." Tony Curtis plays the actor in the fall offering... Sam Wanamaker, who is appearing in NBC's "Holocaust," takes time off from work whenever possible to work on his own pet project — to reconstruct Shakespeare's original Globe Theatre in London.

Carrie Fisher, who shot to semi-stardom in "Star Wars," will come down to earth to co-star opposite John Ritter, in his dramatic acting debut, in "Leave Yesterday Behind." The ABC movie slated to air this spring will feature Fisher as a young woman who falls in love with a man (Ritter) who has been paralyzed from the waist down.

John Wood, a man who receives raves wherever he graces a stage, will honor television with his presence, when PBS's "Theatre in America" presents Moliere's "Tartuffe." Famed method-acting guru, Lee Strasberg, will show how it's done when the stars as an old man forced to move to a nursing home in ABC's "The Last Tenant," a TV movie being filmed in New York for summer broadcast... Cindy Williams is on leave from "Laverne & Shirley," but still hard at work. She's starring in Ross Hunter's NBC movie, "A Time for Love."

Well, "The Love Boat" has not been set adrift. ABC has given it an early go-ahead for next season, and guests are already signing up for the second year's voyage. Among the first were Nancy Walker and Abe Vigoda... Dan Haggerty is another series star on hiatus. He's left his critters back in the woods to appear in MCA's Operation Prime Time entry, "The Bastard," based on John Jakes novel and starring Edward Stevens.

Vince Andrews won't be lonely while filming his new space-shuttle pilot, "The Joshua Tree." His wife, Linda Foster has been added to the cast, along with Dandy Don Meredith... Two of the men in the lives of NBC's "Little Women," will be Cliff Potts and Richard Gilliland from "Operation Petticoat."

Before the season is out, ABC plans to telecast a retrospective of the career of Bing Crosby, entitled "The Best of Bing." Guest-starring in the tribute will be such friends and co-stars as Bob Hope, Fred Astaire, Frank Sinatra, Princess Grace of Monaco, Donald O'Connor, Perry Como, Ella Fitzgerald and Al Rinker, a member of Bing's 1920s band.

Vocal cords may be crib death clue

BOSTON (AP) — A pediatric surgeon believes he has found a key to "crib death," a mysterious killer that claims the lives of 10,000 apparently healthy infants each year.

Dr. Lucian Leape says susceptible infants may choke to death when overflowing stomach juices touch off a reflexive closing of the vocal cords. He has figured out a surgical way to stop the stomach overflow.

But he has not been able to explain vocal cord "sensitivity," which he says helps close off the cords in some infants.

And he says "we're a long way off" from the next step — identifying patients before they have the spells.

Leape, of the Tufts New England Medical Center, says one factor in Sudden Infant Death Syndrome is a relatively common condition known as "esophageal reflux," a failure of the valve that normally closes off the stomach juices.

Sensitive babies have had non-fatal daytime spells in which mouth-to-mouth resuscitation has prevented the crib death, and "if you stop the reflux, it's been 100 percent effective in stopping the spells," Leape says.

"From that standpoint, it's an operation that works," adds Leape, who says he or his colleagues have performed 50 operations in which the stomach is stitched about the lower esophagus to form a valve.

"What sensitizes the larynx we don't know ... Maybe previous episodes of reflux have caused irritation of the vocal cords. Maybe the child has some congenital abnormality ..."

The reflux spells can be avoided by feeding affected babies smaller amounts of heavy food more frequently and having them sleep in an inclined position, Leape says, adding that he prefers the surgical answer.

Cooks beef about price

By The Associated Press

The latest "beef" that Texas housewives have with their supermarket managers is in fact beef.

Beef prices have risen from 5 to 12 cents per pound in recent days at Texas grocery stores because of a severe winter and what agricultural officials term "the old cattle cycle."

The weight of animals being sold on the market is averaging about 40-50 pounds less than normal, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official at Amarillo.

Prices are also on the increase at restaurants. Hamburgers at Whataburger, a fast food chain with restaurants across a wide section of Texas, have increased about four cents each, according to area supervisor John Ewing at Dallas.

Customers of other restaurants also face higher prices. A spokesman at Bonanza Sirloin Pits in Dallas said the chain has had to increase prices from 20 to 60 cents per meal.

Beef prices are up about 5 cents per pound for "unpopular" cuts such as chuck and chuck steak and up about 12 cents per pound for steak cuts, according to Ira Kiker a spokesman for Safeway Stores. Ground beef is up 6 to 8 cents per pound, he said.

Choice slaughter beef in Amarillo sold for 82 to 82.5 cents per pound this week, compared with only 69.25 cents per pound early in the year, according to Carl Sorenson of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This figure also compares with 63 cents per pound a year ago.

But, before one starts thinking about record high prices, it must be remembered that in June of 1975, beef was selling for 85.25 to 89 cents per pound.

Explaining that inventories of beef are at a reduced level, Sorenson said the low and high prices of beef run in a predictable cycle. High inventories and low demand causes cattle producers to liquidate their herds. Then prices go up, cattlemen re-stock their herds and the cycle starts all over again.

STAND UP FOR AMERICA

It's hard to be a cynic when they're playing the national anthem. It's hard not to notice that lump in your throat, that tear in your eye. That's our flag. Our country. Home of freedom. Land of free enterprise. Where a kid can grow up to be President. Or maybe an Olympic champion. Sure, America has problems. And people like to talk about them. But it's still the best nation on earth. Isn't it about time someone talked about the good that is America? Your local board of REALTORS® thinks so. Enough to lead a letter-writing campaign to Congress to tell the world: "I'm proud to be an American. I'm proud of our free enterprise system. I'm proud of my freedom, proud of my rights, including the right to own private property."

REALTORS® are speaking out on behalf of their country. And they need your help. If you'd like to help them to "Score Another Letter for America," talk to a REALTOR® today.

Hurricane: big disaster for insurance industry

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas coast has escaped hurricanes since 1970, but such a catastrophe could bring on the "biggest disaster in insurance history," says the chairman of a special insurance pool.

Don Manthe of Dallas said on Thursday that the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association — "catpool" — is a "potential monster" with $1.6 billion in property insurance in force.

Already, Manthe said in a statement, there are approximately 52,000 risks insured in the 14-county coastal area served by the association.

More than 62 percent of the coverage is concentrated in Galveston and Brazoria Counties, with approximately 52 percent in Galveston County alone.

"We have always known we were in charge of a potential monster, but we had hoped inflation would cool and that the dollar amount of insurance in force in the pool would not keep getting bigger," Manthe said. "The shocking reality of what will surely come with another Hurricane Carla has obligated us to take further action now."

Carla hit Texas in 1961 and caused an estimated $408 million in damage, he noted.

"A major catastrophe could cause some company insolvencies, restrict building for years to come, make it extremely difficult to obtain some kinds of property insurance, and send property insurance rates higher than they are now," he said. "Also, more importantly, lives and property would be threatened during the storm itself."

The pool was started in 1971, one year after Hurricane Celia struck and caused insured losses totaling more than $350 million.

Celia, Manthe said, made it difficult — if not impossible — to get windstorm insurance in coastal counties. In "catpool" all insurance companies doing business in Texas combine their resources to offer year-round coverage for wind and hail damage. It is primarily designed, however, to cover losses from hurricanes or other catastrophes.

This year, Manthe said, the association plans to step up on-site inspections of new buildings insured in the windstorm pool to be certain that they comply with building code requirements.

He said the association had already spread the liability, "particularly to larger companies which had legally been able to avoid it."

"We have to remember," he said, "that we have the potential for the biggest disaster in insurance history. Avoiding such a consequence is the responsibility of the insurance companies, as well as insurance agents, the State Board of Insurance and the general public. We are all in this together."
