Escapee, police officer killed in gun battle in Oklahoma

CADDO, Oklahoma (AP) — Three law enforcement officers and two prison escapees were killed in a gun battle at mid-morning near this Southern Oklahoma town, the Oklahoma State Police reported.

The two prisoners are believed to have killed five persons in Texas and Alabama.

At least one other officer was reported wounded in the gun battle.

Details of the gun battle in this hilly, tree-covered area were sketchy.

Officers converged on Caddo after a resident reported seeing the two escaped prisoners, object of a multi-state manhunt for several weeks.

The gun battle broke out as law enforcement officers converged on the scene.

The search shifted to Caddo after a futile search of the Lake Texoma area to the south.

The hunt had been in the Little City area, north of the lake, after a car believed stolen by the two escapees, identified as Claude Eugene Dennis, 35, and Michael Lancaster, 25, in Alabama was found Wednesday.

Dennis was serving 35 years for manslaughter and Lancaster 25 years for robbery when they escaped from the Oklahoma state penitentiary April 23.

Oklahoma highway patrolmen, FBI agents, sheriff's deputies, agents of the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation, off-duty city police and Texas Rangers sat up roadblocks and began searching the area after the station wagon belonging to a slain Alabama woman was found in a wooded area late Wednesday.

Officers said the center of the search was 17 miles northwest of Durant in Bryan County. Full roadblocks were maintained within a 30-mile radius of where the vehicle was found.

Late Thursday night, an area resident reported he thought he had spotted Dennis in a blue vehicle near Fort Washita south of Durant.

The patrol was checking the area heavily in hopes the report was accurate and would further pin down the escapees.

Alabama authorities have confirmed that the two escapees are suspects in what they termed the "thrill killing" of Mrs. Beavers.

Besides the Alabama slaying, Dennis and Lancaster also are wanted in the wounding of a Butler, Ala., policeman last week and for shooting at a state trooper.

In Texas, officers believe the two are responsible for the slaying of a Hemphill, Texas, man, a Denison convenience store operator, a Garland service station attendant and a Garland minister.

Police at Garland said Lancaster has been "positively identified as an assailant in May 2 shooting death of Mithal Thanmikal Mathew, 31, an attendant at the Shamrock Service Station in Garland.

In addition, the escapees are suspects in the killing of David Bobo, a Garland minister whose body was found May 16 in a heavily wooded area in eastern Collin County. His wallet, shoes, pants and car were missing.

Bobo was reported missing six days after the two escaped.

broke into a penitentiary guard's home and stole some weapons. His body was not found until May 16 and not identified until May 18.

Police said that Mathew was robbed of less than $100 on May 2 and was shot in the side after he handed the money to the robbers.

Bobby Lee Spencer, a Lake Texoma bait shop manager, was shot to death and his wife was abducted, but later escaped, on May 10.

Soviet accuses US

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union accused the United States today of "harping on the myths" of Soviet military threat and demanded a "clear and unambiguous" American answer to a Soviet-bloc proposal to ban production of the neutron bomb.

In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly's special session on disarmament, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said neutron weapons "must be banned once and for all." He called the American-developed weapon "a particularly vicious and cruel means of mass destruction, intended specially to annihilate all things living."

Gromyko had indicated before the speech that he would make a major issue of the neutron weapon, bringing this response from James F. Leonard, a U.S. delegate to the session.

"As far as we are concerned, we've dealt with this question. The president has decided not to build it, at least for the time being, and it's up to the Soviets to show some comparable measure of restraint on their side."

An authoritative diplomatic source, who declined to be identified, said the United States wants the Soviet Union to halt the deployment of the SS-20, a new mobile, intermediate ballistic missile, in return for a U.S. decision not to produce neutron warheads.

President Carter has decided to defer production of the neutron bomb in a bid for new Soviet concessions on troop and weapons strength in central and eastern Europe. Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has said Moscow will not produce the weapon if the United States agrees to a permanent ban.

But U.S. officials say the Soviet response is meaningless, because the Soviet Union is not capable of producing the weapon and because Soviet-bloc superiority in Europe makes it less desirable for the Soviets.

In the first speech to the disarmament session by a Warsaw pact official, Polish Foreign Minister Emil Wojtaszek called on the United States Thursday to "renounce altogether" production of neutron warheads.

Wojtaszek pointed out that Warsaw Pact members on the Geneva disarmament committee had proposed a convention to ban production, deployment, dissemination and use of the neutron weapon and attached particular importance to it.

"We would like to express the hope," he said, "that the United States and other NATO members will accept the convention on the total prohibition of the neutron weapon."

The American-developed weapon is a small nuclear warhead intended for placement on Lance missiles and artillery shells in the Atlantic Alliance nations to counter the numerical superiority of Soviet-led Warsaw pact forces. It produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than a tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout. This means the bomb can kill people while causing little damage to buildings.

Carter pleads for ERA passage

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — President Carter held a surprise "town meeting" today with members of the Illinois Legislature playing the role of citizen-questioners.

Scheduled to make a formal address at a joint session of the legislature, Carter announced at the outset he was distributing copies of his text and, after speaking briefly and informally, would invite the legislators to "ask me any question that you have regarding national and international affairs."

The first question gave the president an opportunity to promote labor law revisions, now the subject of a Senate filibuster in Washington, and to argue that the wage rate between the North and the South have narrowed significantly in recent years.

In his opening remarks, Carter declared that "the eyes of the nation" are on the Illinois Legislature because it is soon to vote on ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, a proposal it has rejected in the past.

Carter, who responded with a grin and wave to pro-ERA demonstrators as he entered the Illinois Capitol, said the outcome of the votes here may well determine the ultimate fate of the equal rights proposal.

The president said he knew the pressures that were on the legislators and he urged them to vote their consciences and convictions.

In the speech text he distributed, he noted Illinois has one of the few state constitutions that guarantee equal rights to all citizens and he said, "I hope that you will carry out your historic responsibility by voting to add an Equal Rights Amendment to the federal constitution as well."

Illinois is the only major Northern industrialized state that has not ratified the ERA.

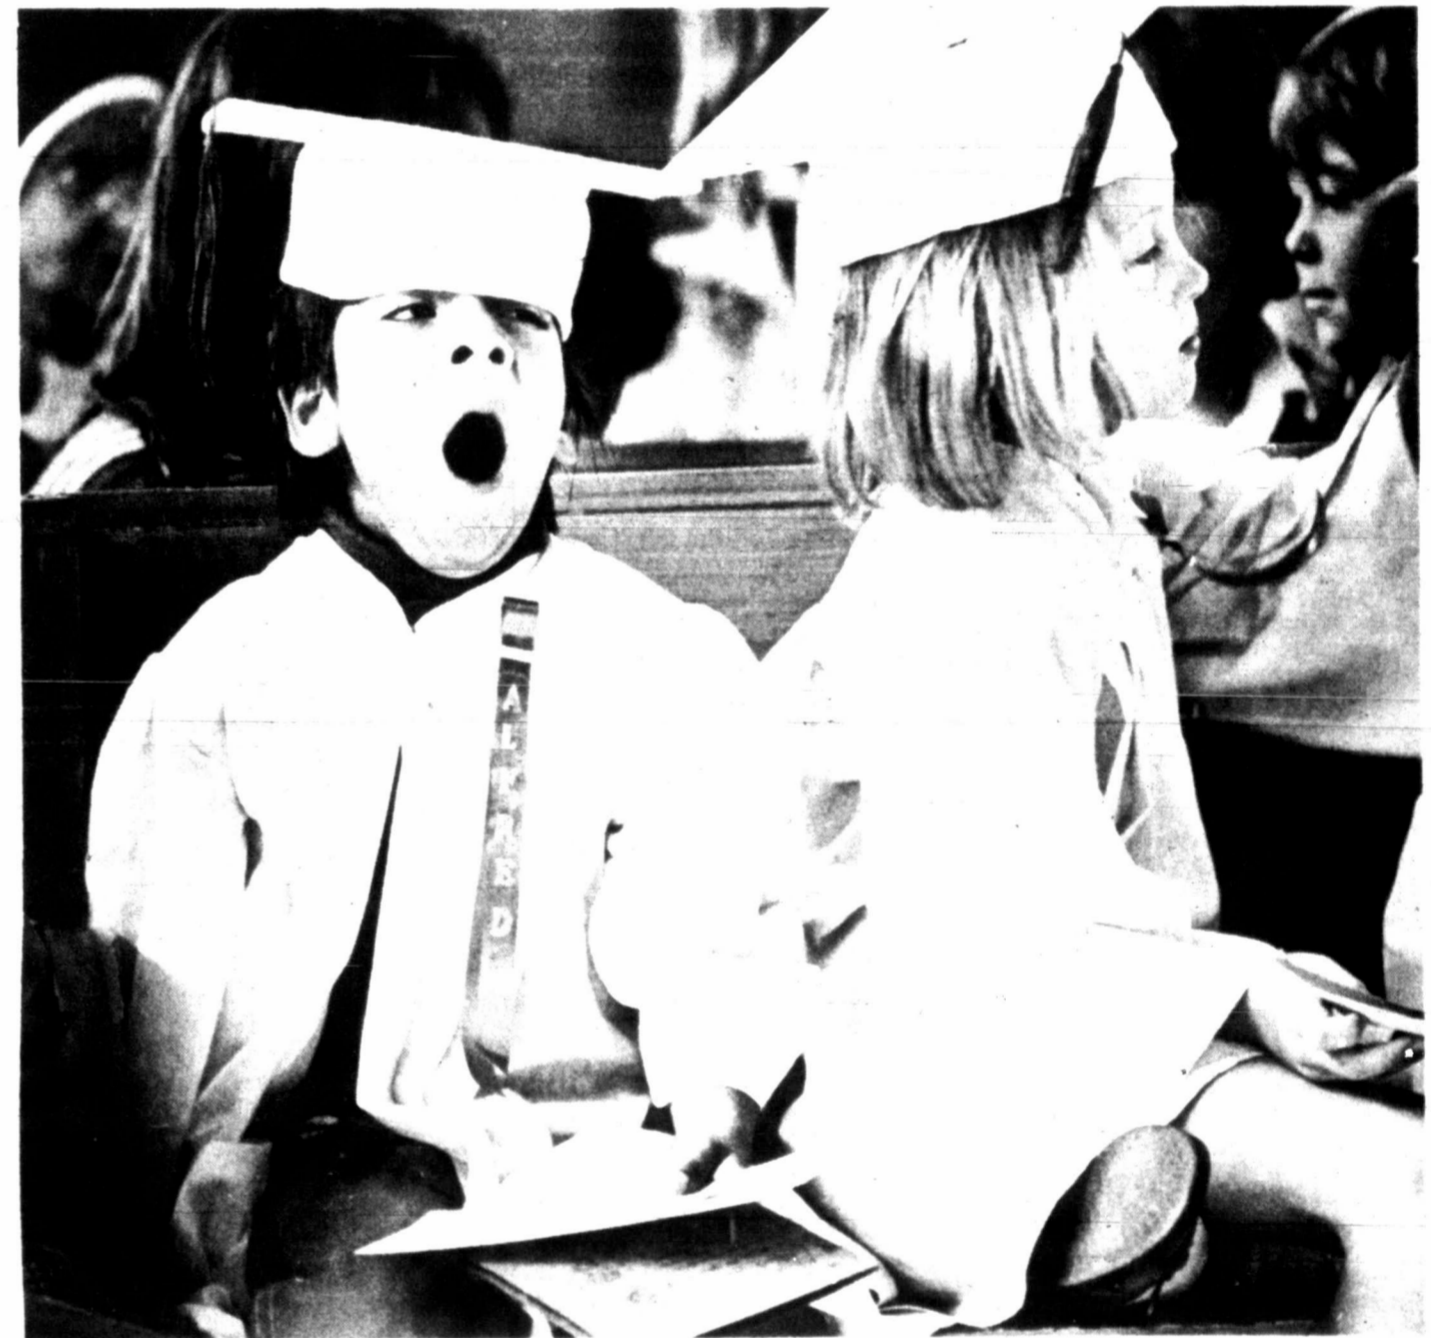

Carter's spoken remarks on the subject drew no audible reaction but the legislators, who remained silent throughout his low-key informal speech, gave Carter a standing ovation as he launched into the question-and-answer session.

The exchange between legislators and the president was reminiscent of the town meetings Carter has held in different sections of the country. He broke no new ground in responding to questions on topics ranging from the administration's Middle East policy to prospects for a rollback in scheduled Social Security tax increases.

Carter was spending much of today politicking in Illinois and West Virginia and flew to Springfield after an overnight stay in a private home in a Chicago suburb.

Illinois is one of 15 states that have not ratified the ERA, which is intended to guarantee equal rights to women. To become law, the measure must be ratified by three more states by March 22, 1979, bringing the total to 38 states.

Carter predicted that 1978 "is going to be a very difficult year for Democrats in Illinois."

Sunset misses two

AUSTIN, Texas — Members of the Sunset Advisory Commission voted today to retain two state agencies up for review but only after internal changes.

The Battleship Texas Commission and the Board for County and District Road Indebtedness were two agencies before the commission today for a recommendation whether they should be continued or abolished.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, moved that the Battleship Texas Commission be continued, but that all its funds be deposited in the state treasury and appropriated by the Legislature.

Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, authored a motion that the road board be retained in name but that its responsibilities be enlarged to allow counties more leeway in building county roads.

Jackson's motion would raise the limit that counties are allowed to keep of the state motor registration fee from $175,000 to $300,000, plus 1 percent of all fees collected beyond that.

He estimated counties would gain about $18 million from this change with a similar amount being lost to the general highway fund.

The 1979 Legislature will have the final say on Jackson's motion.

A former governor told the commission Thursday that the Legislature should not abolish the Texas Good Neighbor Commission, a sometimes controversial agency created to smooth relations with Mexico during World War II.

"If I were governor again, I assure you I would recommend the continuation of this good commission," former Gov. Price Daniel, now a Texas Supreme Court justice, said of the Good Neighbor Commission.

Court upholds Keyes sentence

The conviction of Marshall E. Keyes, convicted of the sexual abuse of his 12-year-old daughter, has been upheld by the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Harold Comer, district attorney, said today that Keyes was judged guilty of performing a deviate sexual act to his daughter on July 5, 1976. That January 18, 1977 convicted was in Judge Grainger McIlhany's 31st district court.

Keyes is now serving time in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Bailing out 'Fun City'

The three years of scheduled federal "loans" to New York City will end June 30. By then the government will have lent $2.3 billion in all. Seasonal financing is what this was originally called — based on the idea that the city had only a temporary cash flow problem.

But New York City officials again have been banging on the U.S. Treasury door, asking for federal guarantees of long-term bonds they would like to sell. This exposes the seasonal financing scheme as pure pretense. New York has had much more than a cash flow problem all along.

The immediate problem is the need for credit, which gross mismanagement has forfeited. The city is simply not credit-worthy. The budget deficit is at least $1 billion and even larger budget deficits are in the offing. New York's budget remains in this perpetually red condition because city politicians simply refuse to make hard political decisions, like being tough about unreasonable wage demands and paring down municipal spending.

These root causes are plain to see, yet the Carter administration proposes that American taxpayers guarantee some $2 billion in New York bonds. And who does Washington suggest as the lucky purchasers of these bonds? The city's employees, through their pension funds. But the employees aren't fools; already they've announced they're not buying.

The very idea of the federal government guaranteeing city bonds is a silly subterfuge to have Washington bail out a bankrupt municipality. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, the architect of the administration's proposal, might as well propose an outright grant of $2 billion to the city.

Meanwhile, New York City officials have been engaging in a little sly blackmail, warning the nation that if the city government is permitted to go under, it will drag down some important U.S. financial institutions in a national chain reaction of disastrous proportions.

In reality, it is the other way around. The more likely way to hard times for the nation is through a federal bail-out of New York City. This will open a door that cannot be closed. Other mismanaged cities, any number of which have vast pension fund problems, will get the message. They will cease to worry about the consequences of their politically motivated excesses. They can assume they, too, can successfully beg in Washington.

The Carter administration should close the Treasury door to New York.

Working clothes

That cab driver in Portland, Ore., who wants to wear three-piece, pinstriped suits to work has got himself into a mess of trouble with his employer.

The driver, Edward McGuire, says that he just likes to dress up when he drives his cab. It gives him a lift, takes away some of the monotony of driving all day long, and he believes that it gives his customers a better impression of the person he is.

But the cab company owner says that such an attire is bad for business. The owner believes that any driver who dresses better than the people he hauls is going to slice off a piece of trade that will never come back.

We are sure that the cab owner knows more about operating a cab company than do we but there is something ruggedly individualistic about this driver's thinking that makes us want to cheer him on.

He is not dishonest. He is merely saying that he has a lot of respect for his image, and who can fault him for that?

In a day when rock stars making millions can report to work in jeans and an unbuttoned shirt down to the navel, when college professors can stand before their class in sandals sans socks, turtle-neck and uncombed hair, then it becomes refreshing, indeed, to read about a little cabbie in Oregon who wants to drive a hack while dressed as a banker.

If the cab owner persists in his tom-foolery, a curse on his house. May all his tires go flat.

Tax limitation

By GEORGE W. TRIVOLI, Ph.D.
R.C. Hoiles fellow
Hillsdale College

At a recent Philadelphia Society meeting William F. Ruckelshaus of the National Tax Limitation Committee said, "I have good news for the first time in 20 years!" The good news was in state after state there is progress towards a constitutional limit on state taxes. Recently the Illinois House of Representatives approved a tax limitation amendment. If the issue is approved by the Illinois State Senate, the question will appear on the November ballot. A Tennessee Constitutional Convention adopted a tax limitation plan to be presented to voters this year.

Moreover, there is a move in several other states toward tax limitation, including Massachusetts, Michigan, and California. Significantly these are all high tax states. Although tax limitation was defeated in California and Michigan, the odds seem to favor passage this next election.

The state of Michigan, for instance, is among the 10 highest tax states. State and local taxes have increased over two - and - a - half times faster than the income of Michigan residents. Over the past 10 years, the population of Michigan increased 6.7 percent while the number of state government employees over the same period grew 50.3 percent, and state spending rose 250 percent. States such as Michigan are ripe for a constitutional limit, or perhaps even a rollback of state taxes.

The group in Michigan leading the non-partisan fight for tax limitation is called Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation, which includes among its membership some 41 Lansing lawmakers. The purpose of their drive is to have the legislature draft enabling acts which would link state tax revenues to residents' personal income.

Specifically, the proposed amendment to the Michigan State Constitution would do four things:

1. Require the legislature to pass public acts regulating taxation on the state level that would be proportional to the rate of personal income.
  2. Require that the tax rates could not be raised beyond the current rates unless an emergency is declared by the governor and affirmed by the legislature, or the taxpayers themselves voted to raise taxes.
  3. Prohibit the state government from shifting the burden of taxation to local governments by mandating local programs.
  4. Prohibit local governments from raising taxes without a vote of the residents.
- There has been a similar movement in the U.S. Congress to pass a spending limitation - balanced budget constitutional amendment.
- Behind the entire question of tax limitation is the issue of individual liberty, limited government, and reversing the trend toward a totalitarian welfare state. If the size and power of government — federal, state and local — is not checked and reversed, Americans will surely end up poor and enslaved by the state.
- The tax limitation movement is an encouraging sign of a grass roots movement some have referred to as a "tax revolt." The tax burden on all Americans — rich, middle income, and poor — far exceeds that for which our forefathers declared independence from Great Britain. At the federal government level, the U.S. Congress and federal administrators not only have increased the tax burden to the highest level in our history, they now purposefully plan inflationary deficits in the Federal budget which further destroys the wealth of our people. Moreover, we have new phenomena with which all Americans are most familiar — "tax-flation." This is the process by which federal income taxpayers are pushed into ever higher tax brackets by inflation without a commensurate increase in real income.
- This writer has been annoyed by the apparent willingness of all Americans to pay ever higher taxes, bear the burden of inflation, and still vote for elected representatives promising the free hand-out.
- If you want to become active in forming or aiding a tax limitation movement in your state or locality, write to the National Tax - limitation Committee, Box 1000, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. 10610. Tell them Uncle sent you!

Voice of business

Implications of corporate free speech

WASHINGTON — "Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it."

Those words from Thomas Jefferson's First Inaugural Address are still the definitive statement about freedom of speech, as the Supreme Court reaffirmed on April 26.

The case was The First National Bank of Boston et al. v. Bellotti. The National Chamber Litigation Center participated as a friend of the court, in support of First National Bank.

In its decision, the Court struck down a Massachusetts law which prohibited corporations from trying to influence voters on any issue "other than one materially affecting ... the corporation."

Writing for the majority, Justice Powell said, "The proper question ... is not whether corporations 'have' First Amendment rights ... Instead, the question must be whether the Massachusetts statute abridges expression that the First Amendment was meant to protect. We hold that it does."

In other words, it is the speech that matters, not the speaker. This position is the only one consistent with political democracy. If there cannot be free competition in the marketplace for ideas, then a society is in reality controlled by those who define what is an "acceptable" idea. Voters cannot choose among alternatives that are never presented to them.

Surprisingly, the Court's decision has been criticized by some pillars of the liberal community, whose fear of business (other than their own) is evidently greater than their devotion to freedom of expression. Corporate wealth can buy public opinion, they charge.

Taking that view seriously requires both a monumental contempt for the intelligence of the American people and a gross misunderstanding of the business world.

Even if America's corporations were free to expend all of their resources in support of a unified stance on public issues, all they could do is add to the information available to the voter, not subtract from it.

But the two conditions above are impossible conditions. First — and most obviously — corporations often disagree among themselves about the proper approach to public problems. Such disagreement would be reflected in most issue advertising undertaken by the business community. And second, the vast majority of corporate funds are committed to running the business. Any management that began to spend recklessly on political issues would be quickly replaced by angry directors and stockholders.

So don't lie awake nights worrying about a deluge of corporate advertising imploring you to vote for or against proposition something — or other. If you notice any change at all, it will be only a slight increase in such activity.

There are, however, some other interesting implications of the Court's decision:

1. Regulation of lobbying. Statutes intended to regulate business lobbying are now suspect and subject to challenge if they abridge First Amendment rights of speech, association or petition.
  2. Tax implications. Current Internal Revenue Service regulations impose a tax "penalty" on certain forms of corporate and trade association communications. It can now be argued that these rules have a "chilling effect" on the exercise of free speech.
  3. Independent political advertising. If the Bellotti decision is read broadly, it can be interpreted to permit independent expenditures by corporations to advocate the support or defeat of candidates for public office.
- Let me emphasize that these last three points are not settled. They will have to be thrashed out in the courts before a corporation may safely ignore present restrictions on the activities listed.

It will be years before the last of the fallout from the Bellotti case reaches the earth. But the decision clearly strengthens the American tradition of extending freedom and encouraging debate. Mr. Jefferson would approve.

Some comments at graduation time

By Anthony Harrigan

SEWANE, Tenn. — Graduation is a time of beginning for young men and women. At every college and university, however, it is also serves as a ceremonial conclusion for distinguished teaching careers.

I am reminded of this as I ponder the forthcoming graduation ceremonies at the University of the South, in which I have personal interest.

Let me tell you something about the University, or Sewanee as it is called, for the story of this institution is an interesting chapter in the history of American higher education.

Like so many American colleges founded in the mid-19th century, Sewanee was built in a near wilderness — on a mountaintop. Its earliest foundations were destroyed in the Civil War. The University was revived in the late 1860s through the generosity of British Anglicans.

Over more than a century, the University has remained small in size and dedicated to high academic standards. Its buildings are neo-Gothic in design; its president is titled Vice Chancellor, in the Oxford fashion, and the ablest students wear academic gowns — another Oxford touch. The institution has gained and maintained an enviable reputation for supplying its region with educated citizens in a variety of occupations. Bishop Gailor, who saved Sewanee for extinction in the early decades of this century, described its mission as one of transmitting Anglo-Saxon civilization.

Younger members of the faculty might not describe the University's current mission in those terms, but the traditional goal and outlook continues to have meaning for many of the graduates. It's a worthy mission in an age that's increasingly alienated from the historic values of the Western world.

Transmitting these values depends on the scholars constitute a university. At Sewanee, I had the privilege in recent years, as a visitor to become friends with two splendid, inspirational scholars.

My friend Robert Lancaster, chairman of the Dept. of Political Science, at Sewanee, steps down this year after a long career as teacher, Lawyer, wartime naval officer, and patriot. There's no way to calculate the enormous benefit Red Lancaster's teaching and example have had on Sewanee, and no the institution itself. I salute him.

My late friend, Bayly Turlington, who died last fall, was a professor of classics at Sewanee for 23 years. His untimely death deprived students and the University of a rich understanding of the classical era and the lessons the past contains for the present. He opposed all the narrow, mean, partisan aspects of modern life.

At a time when so many institutions are in a state of near collapse, Americans are fortunate indeed to have their small, independent colleges and universities that have rich, individual traditions. Many of these institutions have attracted splendid scholars.

A great scholar, in the Lancaster of Turlington tradition, however, is more than someone with a Ph.D. and a list of published books. He is a man of cultivated taste and respect for the traditions of our country and civilization. He is dedicated to the maintenance of an ordered society based on the enduring things in life. Every college or university, worthy of the name, has need of such men.

Your money's worth

When a dependent's income tops $750

Sylvia Porter

(Fifth in a series of seven columns)

You may provide more than half the support of a parent, but still miss out on a dependency deduction because your dependent's gross income from various sources is $750 or more a year. And as a general rule, that eliminates our dependent as a tax deduction.

But does it? Income counts for the gross income test only if it's taxable. And Social Security payments are tax-free, thus are disregarded for the gross income test.

Q. What about interest and dividends? Let's say your father's income is from stocks paying $825 in dividends. The $100 dividend exclusion cuts your father's taxable income to $725, so he passes the test. But the exclusion isn't enough if, say, the dividends add up to $900 or $1,000.

TAX MOVE NO. 1: So now, when there's plenty of time before yearend, consider registering your mother as joint owner of some or all of the stock. Result: your father's share of the joint dividend income will be reduced below $750.

Q. Still not enough? Say your father's investments throw off $2,000 of dividends and interest. Then, suggests Prentice-Hall: TAX MOVE NO. 2: Have him switch into investments that pay tax-free income — tax-free municipals in the many forms in which they are now available. Do it right and your father's dollar income will remain the same while you win a dependency deduction.

Q. What if your parents have a substantial sum of cash in municipal and want to keep this nestegg because having it available gives them a valuable sense of security? The $750 test is no problem — but there still is the requirement that you provide more than one-half their support.

TAX MOVE NO. 3: You still may be a winner, for what matters is not how much money your parents have, but how much they spend on their own support. Use enough of your money to provide more than half the support of your mother and father. Then you get two new deductions. By providing more than half your parents' support, the medical expenses you pay for them are deductible on your return — and you are entitled to two new $750 dependency deductions (assuming neither parent has $750 or more of income subject to tax). These deductions are much more significant to you than your parents. And you are entitled to the tax writeoffs, for the key point is that it's not what they can afford to spend on their support. It's what they do spend.

A revealing decision by the Tax Court recently approved deductions for a son who supported his parents, despite the fact that the parents had more than $60,000 in the bank.

Both of Mr. Jewell's parents were ailing and lived in a rest home. Although the parents had $60,000 in joint bank accounts, Jewell was concerned that funds would not last his parents' lifetime. Medicare picked up only a nominal amount of the medical expenses. Jewell paid nearly all of them, amounting to more than half the parents' support. So he claimed a deduction for the medical expenses and took a dependency deduction for his mother. The IRS agreed that her gross income was less than $750. (His father's taxable income exceeded $750.)

The IRS denied Jewell's deductions. His parents had deposited funds in the bank topping one-half their support in that year. His father had included Jewell's name on the joint bank account when he opened the account years before this was done, so the money would go to Jewell without probate. Thus, the IRS argued, Jewell was being reimbursed for the medical expenses he paid by the funds available in the joint account.

The Tax Court held that Jewell's deductions were valid. It didn't matter that Jewell's parents had enough to support themselves. The Court looked only at the fact that Jewell provided over one-half his parents' support.

Also under the laws in Jewell's state, he had no current right to any of the money in his parents' account, despite the fact that his name appeared on the account.

Caution: Check your state's laws to find out whether or not you can use funds deposited by your parents in a joint account with you. In effect, you would be reimbursed for your expenses and would not be providing for your parents' support.

WHAT TO DO NOW: Discuss with your parents how their accounts are set up. Find out whether Jewell's approach would work in your family situation. Make sure your parents deposit their funds in a joint account that gives you no right to the money until your parents are deceased.

For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Bentsen pleads for support for PCP bill

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Recalling more examples of bizarre behavior exhibited by those under the influence of "Angel Dust," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen continues to preach the virtues of a bill that would increase the maximum penalty for trafficking in the devilish drug.

The Texas Democrat quoted from an unpublished report by a Washington doctor that stated PCP — angel dust — "presently remains the major drug of abuse in the Washington metropolitan area."

Bentsen's comments came during a Thursday speech as he tried to rally Senate support for a bill that would increase the maximum penalty for trafficking in PCP from five years in prison and a $15,000 fine for first offenders to 10 years and a $100,000 fine.

Phencyclidine — PCP — is legitimately used to cure rubber and to tranquilize large animals, such as elephants.

Its effects on the human mind are devastating, the report said.

And Bentsen offered his Senate colleagues several grotesque examples.

A school teacher observed a student carving initials in his arm during class while under the drug's influence, Bentsen said. Another high school student walked through a plate glass window, falling among the razor-sharp glass splinters and thrashing madly.

"Abuse of this very dangerous drug is increasing to epidemic proportions nationwide and the consequences are staggering," Bentsen said Thursday. "Experts have now established that even short-term use of angel dust can produce treatment-resistant schizophrenic psychosis in certain individuals."

"Dr. Paul Luisada, deputy medical director of St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, D.C., reports that a sudden tripling of schizophrenic patients admitted to his institution during 1973 was later traced to PCP abuse," Bentsen continued.

In a report given in February to the National Institute on Drug Abuse conference on phencyclidine, Luisada stated that angel dust epidemics began during 1973. "Similar admissions rose from a trickle to a flood, peaking in February, 1974 at the rate of one-third of the first in-patient admissions," said Luisada. "The epidemic ended even more suddenly...following by several weeks a police raid on a local PCP laboratory."

Since late 1974, however, angel dust abuse has been steady-ly rising, continued Luisada.
"By the beginning of 1976, the Drug Enforcement Administration was calling the Washington area the PCP capital of the country."

"However, despite a proliferation of local laboratories and an in raids on these laboratories, admissions to our center for PCP psychosis began a slow but steady decline. At the same time, experienced drug users presenting themselves for treatment of other drug abuse problems began referring to PCP
as a drug to avoid 'because it makes people crazy.' Meanwhile, the suburbs began experiencing noticeable increases in the incidence of PCP psy-choses."

Luisada also stated in his report that PCP abuse "tends to be under-reported" because PCP abuse is often mistaken for schizophrenia and "this is compounded by the amnesia induced by PCP."

Also, routine laboratory screens for drugs do not detect PCP and "in the absence of a routine toxicologic test for PCP, medical examiners may report (violent or accidental) deaths as accidents rather than as the consequences of drug use."

Angel dust numbs the nerves of its victims, Luisada added.
"They feel invulnerable. They don't feel pain so there is nothing to hold them back. They feel they have superhuman strength."

"Often, they pose more of a danger to persons around them.
We had one case where a man was caught choking a small boy in an apartment corridor.
He told us he thought the boy was his son and needed to be punished, yet the man had never had a son.

"There is something about being naked that seems to appeal to the persons intoxicated by PCP," continued Luisada.
"It's not uncommon for persons to be found singing naked in the supermarket or walking down the street."

Day said of his first seven most of them are prominent people."

Music groups from church win honors

Two groups of young people from the First Assembly of God Church in Pampa recently took top honors in musical competition for the West Texas
District of the church.

Trombone players Robbie Edwards and Crispin Bradsher won in trombone ensemble competition.

Honors for the vocal ensemble portion of the contest went to Tricia Snuggs, Dietra Bradsher, Retha Bradsher, Dawn Carter,
Janet Smith, Vanessa Brassfield and Andora Smith.

The two groups will represent the West Texas District on July 11 at regional competition against groups from seven states.

Winners of the regional contest will compete in a national contest later in the year at Kansas City, Mo.

Carter seeks freedom in foreign policy deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is going public with his campaign to stem what he considers a dangerous congressional trend toward interfering with presidential conduct of U.S. foreign policy.

Carter, who has frequently expressed his frustration in private meetings with members of Congress, used a nationally broadcast news conference on Thursday to complain that he "can't compete at all, even peacefully," with Soviet and Cuban adventurism in Africa.

"There's a trend in Congress that is building up that puts too much restraint on a president to deal with rapidly changing circumstances," he told reporters in Chicago.

In his remarks, Carter seemed more determined to draw a line against further restrictions than to repeal those already on the books.

The president also was careful to emphasize that he has "no intention of getting involved in Angola" or of sending U.S. troops into Africa.

His complaint concerned use of peaceful forms of economic and humanitarian aid to combat Soviet-Cuban involvement.

Meanwhile, a senior U.S. official told reporters traveling with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance in New York that the administration has dismissed any notion of intervening in Angola to back pro-Western guerrillas fighting the Marxist government.

What the administration would like to have, this official said, is a contingency fund from which it could make special, spur-of-the-moment grants to friendly African governments needing help for a particular economic project.

Carter said he has asked Vance, in cooperation with congressional leaders, to review existing restrictions on presidential action. Until that is completed, Carter said, "I am not going to advocate any change in existing law."

But, he added, "I will oppose further restrictions."

Carter made a point of saying he has "no present intention" of seeking repeal of the Clark amendment, which bars direct or indirect U.S. assistance to factions fighting in Angola without approval of Congress.

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, who sponsored the amendment, said that if Carter has no intention of getting the United States involved in Angola, the question is raised "why a specific plan was presented that would do that."

But, said Clark, "I'm confident the president did not originate the plans and did not have any intention of carrying them out."

Clark was referring to a plan, presented to him earlier this month by Stansfield Turner, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and David Aaron, deputy White House national security adviser, that would involve funneling U.S. arms through a third party to pro-Western guerrillas in Angola.

Clark opposed the idea. The White House said on Wednesday that although administration officials are considering sending U.S. aid to Angola guerrillas, the president had not decided whether to seek re-

Dollar declines; oil national worry

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister Jamshid Amouzegar says the world's major oil producing countries may be forced to find a substitute for the dollar to pay for oil if the value of the U.S. currency continues to decline.

Unless the United States takes steps to reduce its budget deficit, he said, "the dollar is not going to recover and oil producers might have to peg oil prices to the World Bank's Standard Drawing Rights," a kind of composite world currency created by the International Monetary Fund.

Iran, the world's second largest oil-producer, is a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which decided earlier this month in Saudi Arabia to keep the dollar as the standard pricing currency.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Amouzegar said OPEC may begin raising oil prices annually beginning next year to encourage investment in alternative energy sources.

"It is better that each year a small percentage be added to the price of oil rather than freezing prices three or four years and then all of a sudden in the mid-1980s, we will have to double and triple the price again," Amouzegar said, noting that when OPEC quadrupled oil prices in 1973 the impact on the world economy was disastrous. OPEC's base price now is $12.70 for a 42-gallon barrel.

Some OPEC countries have suggested creating a new unit of payment for oil based on a combination or "basket" of currencies, but Amouzegar said "for the time being we maintain we should stick with the dollar because we believe the basic structure of the American economy is strong."

If the dollar continues to weaken, however, OPEC "might be forced" to dump the dollar in favor of another pricing system, he said. It might be difficult for OPEC to agree on a currency basket because the producing nations have different trading partners, and each would back the currency that most affected its imports.

The prime minister said Iran and other OPEC members have suffered because of the dollar's weakness but that changing to another currency system wouldn't necessarily solve the problem because the dollar would be one of the currencies in the "basket."

Saudi Arabia is the world's leading oil producer. Other OPEC members are Algeria, Iraq, Kuwait, Venezuela, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Libya, Algeria, Qatar, and the United Arab Emirates.

Student's hearing today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Hume Cofer must decide whether to keep in custody John Christian, 13, a straight-A student accused of the May 19 rifle slaying of his English teacher.

A hearing was scheduled in Cofer's court today, with lawyers to be present for the prosecution and the youth, who is the son of former White House press secretary George Christian.

Christian has been held in the county juvenile detention center since Rod Grayson Jr. was slain by three bullets from a semi-automatic 22-caliber rifle.

Grayson, 29, was hit as he sat on a stool conducting a first-period class for exceptional students.

Zaire president clears civilians from zone

PARIS (AP) — President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire has ordered his troops to clear civilians from a 65-mile stretch of Shaba Province and create a free-fire zone to block further infiltration of rebels from bases in Angola.

After Thursday's announcement by the French Defense Ministry that it was withdrawing Foreign Legion troops from southern Zaire, Mobutu told a news conference he was evacuating the area along Zaire's border with Zambia and Angola and ordering his forces to "shoot at anything that moves within the area."

The Defense Ministry said all of the 600 paratroopers dropped into the copper-mining city of Kolwezi last week had begun their withdrawal to the provincial capital of Lubumbashi prior to their return to France.

The announcement said the legionnaires had "accomplished their mission" of rescuing white expatriates trapped in the city by the May 12 invasion of Katangan exiles who crossed into Zaire from Angola through northern Zambia. Zairian troops, aided by a contingent of 100 Moroccans will take over responsibility for security in the area, the ministry said.

Mobutu, in Paris to discuss defense measures for Zaire, said at the news conference he was not informed in advance of the French withdrawal, but he avoided criticism of French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

"Giscard d'Estaing is the European chief of state who best understands the problems of Africa," he said. "In the West's total abandonment (of Africa) to the Russians and Cubans, only France has shown a willingness to take up the challenge — but France does not have the means to do it alone."

The president did not say whether he had asked the French to remain in Zaire. He agreed the French mission had been achieved as far as Kolwezi was concerned, but said "there is still the problem of some 60 white hostages taken away by the invaders for whom the search continues."

Names in the news

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope may be going "On The Road" again, and this time with his longtime friend and fellow comedian George Burns.

Hope said Thursday that "George and I are discussing his taking the part Bing (Crosby) would have played" before plans for the movie were dropped when Crosby died last fall.

"It'll be nice working with God," Hope quipped in referring to the title role Burns played last year in the film comedy "Oh, God."

"On The Road To Hong Kong" and "On The Road To Singapore" were just two of several "On The Road" films that Hope and Crosby starred in during the '40s.

Hope made his comments to reporters after an hour-long special session of the House of Representatives that paid tribute to the comedian's 75th birthday, which is Monday.

The Duke turns 71

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — When John Wayne celebrates 71 years today, it will be nothing like his rip-roaring birthdays of yore.

"I keep thinking I'm well, but when I try too much I realize I'm not," said the actor, who underwent heart surgery April 3. "It hurts where they cut me open. When I do too much I feel sore."

Wayne said he was getting stronger every day, and doctors advise he can return to work in July. He spoke by telephone from his sprawling house beside Balboa Bay, sounding like the John Wayne of 20 years ago.

At appearances earlier this year, his voice was only a raspy replica of his familiar California drawl. He had also seemed cranky and depressed.

"Getting the voice back was a residual I didn't expect out of the operation," he remarked. "I had undergone all kinds of tests to find out why my voice had gone bad, and nobody could tell me. I just couldn't get any timbre out of it."

"There's a blood vessel that runs from the heart to the vocal cords, and one of the valves wasn't working. The operation fixed that."

The faulty heart valve was replaced with a similar part from the heart of a pig during surgery in Boston.

"You know, I still got only one lung; that's one thing you can't fix with pig valves," he said. He lost a lung in a cancer operation in 1964.

Since returning home, Wayne has undergone a daily regimen of rest, half-hour walks and pulmonary exercises.

For diversion he watches television "day and night" and he sees a lot of John Wayne — on commercials for a savings and loan company.

"One of the reasons I want to get back to work is so I can make some more ads for Great Western Savings," he said. "I'm sick and tired of seeing the same ones over and over again."

Canada cuts Cuba's aid

By DOUG SMALL Canadian Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — By accident or design, Canadian aid to Cuba is being eliminated at a time when Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's government is under heavy pressure to repudiate the Castro regime for its military activity in Africa.

Reports that Cubans may have helped train rebels involved in recent killings in Zaire have drawn protests from opposition critics. Some have demanded an end to Canadian-Cuban diplomatic relations.

Trudeau has made clear that he regards the presence of Cuban troops in Africa as "indefensible." But in the past, he has argued that Canada separates aid from other considerations in its dealing with Cuba and other countries in order to help the needy.

"It's not a comfortable policy," he told a news conference recently. "But it certainly is better than just say you're going to help those who agree with you on everything in terms of values and institutions, because then you would end up helping very few people."

Since then, Trudeau appears to have shifted ground. This week, he said Canada has "no present plans" for future aid projects to Cuba.

Current projects "are either terminated or on the verge of being terminated," he said, referring to a $10 million line of credit Canada granted Cuba two years ago to cover public health and animal health services and an additional $2.7 million in technical assistance.

But the line of credit, granted at a 3 percent interest rate for 30 years, will be used up this year in any event. And Trudeau's statement leaves open the possibility of future aid should conditions change.

His comments appear to herald a new cool phase in Canada's relationship with Fidel Castro's Cuba, but little damage is expected in Canadian-Cuban trade ties, which have remained secure through periodic tiffs in the past.

Last year, Canada sold Cuba about $182 million worth of goods — 80 percent grain, 20 percent manufactured goods.

Widow OKs amputation

ARLINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Rosaria Candura has changed her mind and allowed her gangrenous leg to be amputated.

The operation Thursday ended a family struggle caused by the 77-year-old widow's previous refusal to undergo the life-prolonging surgery.

Officials at Symmes Hospital said Mrs. Candura was in good condition after the amputation.

Mrs. Candura's decision to agree to the surgery followed a lengthy Wednesday night discussion in her native Italian with her brother, Salvatore Napoli, 62, of Fitchburg.

Napoli came to the hospital at the urging of one of Mrs. Candura's three sons.

"We don't know what he said, but he promised to visit her often after the operation," said Vincent Candura, Jr., one of the sons.

Earlier this week, the state Court of Appeals rejected a plea by Mrs. Candura's daughter, Grace Lane of Medford, that she be made a legal guardian in order to authorize the operation.

The ruling declared Mrs. Candura "has not been shown to be legally incompetent," and reversed a Middlesex County Probate Court order giving Mrs. Lane temporary custody over her mother.

The woman's sons opposed Mrs. Lane's lawsuit, saying they wanted the decision to be made by their mother.

Doctors said the gangrenous leg would have killed Mrs. Candura in three weeks if it had not been removed.

Another son, Charles Candura, of Braintree, said his mother was despondent because of the death two years ago of her husband of 53 years and because of two previous amputations of a toe and part

Devil ordered man to kill

PLAINS, Texas (AP) — Final arguments were scheduled to begin today in the murder trial of an 18-year-old man who says the devil ordered him to kill his high school principal.

Ricardo Lopez took the stand to testify in his own defense Thursday, and said, "The devil was not satisfied with my sacrifice and instructed me to take a human life."

Lopez told the court he was a satan worshipper and had sacrificed frogs, cats and snakes.

Malcolm Omar Tripp, 31, was shot to death as he stood in front of Whitharral High School in April 1977.

The defense is trying to prove Lopez was insane at the time of the shooting. He was confined at Rusk State Hospital for several months before being returned here for trial.

Dr. James A. Hunter, Rusk clinical director, testified Thursday he found no evidence Lopez was insane at the time of the principal's death.

Prosecutors said they will seek a life sentence if Lopez is convicted.

The defendant's mother, Mrs. Floencia Lopez, testified Wednesday that her son was obsessed with "evil spirits" and fascinated by the techniques of Mexican-American folk healers called "curanderos."

Mrs. Lopez said her son was concerned with demons, sorcerers and black magic.

The trial was moved to Plains on a change of venue from Hockley County.

Mary Hartman is dead

Louise Lasser conquers anxieties

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is in a home for unwed mothers, has decided to put her baby up for adoption. She's not even sure who the baby's father is, so I think she's doing the right thing. (She's only 14.) She doesn't even want to see the baby after it's born. She says it will be easier to forget if she doesn't.

Abby, even though it would be a lie, what harm would there be in telling her that her baby died at birth? I wouldn't ask the doctor to tell the lie—I will take all the responsibility myself. I just want the doctor and the people at the hospital where she will have the baby to back me up on my story.

My daughter has suffered enough already, and it will be much easier for her if she thinks that her baby died. Then she won't have to go through life wondering where her child is. I can see only good in this lie, but if you think I'm wrong, please tell me why and I'll do as you say. Thank you.

HEARTSICK IN SEATTLE

DEAR HEARTSICK: Although your intentions are good, you can't accomplish good through evil acts. Please, dear, abandon this dishonest scheme. Regardless of how well-intentioned it is, it's wrong.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am bragging, but my problem is that I am too attractive. When I was in high school I never had any girlfriends because they were all afraid I'd take their boyfriends away from them. When I went to work I had to quit one job after another because my bosses were forever making passes at me. Now that I am married, I have the same problem.

All of my husband's friends proposition me, and I have to tell them off. And we don't have any married couples to go around with because the wives are afraid of the competition. Sometimes I wish I were born ugly. What's the solution?

"RED" IN REDWOOD CITY

DEAR "RED": Face it, dear, if you aren't consciously inviting the attentions of the opposite sex, you must be doing so unconsciously. No man in his right mind makes a pass at a statue. He needs some encouragement. A woman who has to beat off every man she meets should find out why.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became engaged to a very pretty girl. She's from a good family and so am I. All our friends and relatives think we are just right for each other, but the more I see of her, the more doubts I have about how this marriage would work out.

She can be sweet as honey one minute and very sullen and pouty the next. She has at times revealed a side of herself that I never saw before. She's spoiled, demanding and selfish. And stubborn, too. I'm not saying I'm perfect, but I don't think I could take this girl's unpredictable moodiness for a lifetime.

What I am trying to ask, my Dear Abigail, is this: How does a gentleman break an engagement?

IN DEEP IN INDIANA

DEAR IN: The same way a lady breaks one. He simply tells his intended in the kindest manner possible that he's decided to keep his bachelor button and forgo the orange blossoms. You may be in for a few unpleasant moments, but you'll both survive it. Better a broken engagement than a broken marriage.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if estrogen causes a woman to grow hair on her face. Since I started taking it I feel better but I am growing hair on my face. I've asked two doctors; one said it would and one said it won't, so could you please let me know.

DEAR READER — The main estrogen hormones will not cause you to grow hair on your face. However, some of the medicines women take after the menopause, for a variety of reasons contain combinations of hormones, including some male hormones in some preparations.

Male hormone does increase the prominence of hair on the face. You may be surprised to know you have had the same amount of hair all along but the hair shafts become thicker, darker and hence more noticeable. The very fine hair you usually have may not be noticed.

You should know that women normally have increased prominence of hair on their face at the time of the menopause and thereafter. It may also be more prominent during the onset of puberty and during pregnancy. Your increased hair prominence may be from your menopause, not your medicine.

At the time the ovaries stop, the adrenal gland becomes the major source of sex hormones. Often it produces more male hormone than female hormone. The change in balance has a lot to do with many of the changes a woman notices after the menopause. The skin may change, hair changes on the scalp, the voice may change and hair may be more apparent on the face.

When doctors give female hormones they often give enough to limit symptoms such as hot flashes. There is still an increase production of male hormone in some women from the adrenal gland and this will cause some of these changes.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, to give you more information on female hormones and what to expect with the menopause. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Just what is neuralgia? Is it inflammation of the nerves? I have pain from the back of the neck to the left shoulder blade and around the left rib cage. My family doctor says it is neuralgia. My 87-year-old husband has rather severe pain in the back of the neck and it seems to radiate to the skull. Does not act like a headache. Could this be neuralgia too?

DEAR READER — Neuralgia means pain along the course of one or more nerves, usually in a periodic fashion. Since you have innumerable nerves you can have neuralgia almost anywhere. If a nerve between the ribs is involved the pain will be between the ribs and it is called intercostal neuralgia. If it involves the trigeminal nerve over the jaw area it is trigeminal neuralgia. Neuralgia is also classified as to its cause. If a diabetic has pain in a nerve because of changes associated with diabetes it might be called diabetic neuralgia.

Unless the disease causing the neuralgia is identified the term neuralgia is merely descriptive. You could have neuralgia because of changes in your spine, if the nerve roots in that area are under pressure. The same could be true of your husband if he has arthritic changes in the neck. Your doctor probably has a pretty good idea of what is causing your pain and what he can or cannot do for it.

LOUISE LASSER: "I am a tortured soul."

By Dick Kleiner

Hollywood (NEA) - If you have any compassion at all, after an hour or so with Louise Lasser you find yourself wanting to reach out and touch her and say, "There, there. Everything will be all right."

She has the air of a put-upon soul, of a little girl who has been told she has to go to bed without her supper. There is something, obviously, that keeps her from enjoying her success, something deeply troubling that hovers around her continually.

And she admits it. "I am a tortured soul," she says, and you don't often find tortured souls any more.

Some of that torture comes out in a television drama she wrote, which NBC grandly called, "Louise Lasser's Just Me and You." They also called it "a zany human comedy," and it had some zane about it, but a lot of tortured soul, too.

In the recently telecast film, Louise Lasser played an unhappy lady who answered an ad for a driver-rider and found herself driving cross-country with Charles Grodin, who played a very square salesman.

The format permitted Miss Lasser, in her first writing effort, to say a lot of things which, she confesses, are autobiographical. One example is this speech her character (Jane) had:

"I'd like to feel, uh... less anxious... all the time about what I'm gonna do this day or this night or this holiday or this Sunday. I don't wanna worry about that."

Louise Lasser says that anxiety is a big thing with her. That contributes to the torturing of her soul. She says she has always worried, been nervous, anxious. Even when there's nothing to be worried, nervous or anxious about.

At the moment, you would think she would be anxiety-free. After all, she is a major success, thanks to the "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" hit. But that carried the seeds of more anxiety for her, despite its making her a major star.

The problem with "Mary Hartman" was that it was too tiring, too demanding, too all-consuming. She started in 325 episodes of the soap-opera-for-adults. For her, doing those 325 shows with virtually no break was mind-boggling. Worse, it also bogged her body and helped boggle her emotions, too.

"I was exhausted," she says, "and I was beat. After it was over, I went to my apartment and I withdrew for five months."

It was, she says, a real withdrawal. She seldom went out. She seldom entertained. She sat and read and wrote and, for hours, did nothing.

"I'm still not sure I'm over it," she says.

When she came out of the apartment, she was a new person. Mary Hartman had gone in, with her braids and bangs. Louise Lasser came out, with a totally new hairstyle. The braids and bangs had been Louise's own style, at first, but it got to be so closely identified with Mary Hartman that she couldn't stand it.

Now, with a new hair style, she is seldom recognized by the public. Mary Hartman's fans are looking for braids and bangs and Louise Lasser has none. Mary Hartman is dead.

And Louise Lasser survives. She isn't sure where she's going, however. Offers, feelers, scripts, deals are flooding in to her, with all the cigar-chomping Hollywood producers wanting her because she is important now.

"I am being selective," she says. And that's an understatement. This NBC film is the first thing she has done since "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" went off, and she has nothing definite set for the future.

Maybe she'll do more writing. She found it a pleasant release to get it all down on paper. She began writing, some time ago, by churning out 300 pages of nothing but dialogue — no plot, no point, no theme, just 300 pages of people conversing.

"I don't know why I did it," she says. "I had never written a letter before that. I stopped writing that dialogue when I went into 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman.'"

But, once, she showed those 300 pages to Deanne Barkley, an NBC executive in the movies-for-TV arena. And it was Miss Barkley who said she should do more writing.

When she first started "Just Me and You" she created a girl who was basically flighty. But the more she rewrote, the less flighty and the more serious the girl became.

"I guess," she says, "that's because it became more and more me, and I am more serious and not so flighty."

Today, the serious, unflighty Louise Lasser is trying hard to conquer her anxieties and to face tomorrow unworried. It isn't easy — and you wish you could somehow help her through the future.

Quilts tell history of country

HOUSTON (AP) — Quilts have come out of the attic, out of storage and gone "outta sight" in price, says Diane Giles, proprietor of a quilt shop in Houston.

"Your Aunt Jane's pride and joy has reached an apex in decorating, to the delight of those of us who revere our heritage, as well as to collectors of America folk art," says Mrs. Giles.

For bed coverings, wall hangings, to use as throws and as tablecloths, quilts add the personal, handmade original touch to home interiors — a look coveted by decorators, both professional and amateur, she adds.

The first patchwork quilts were not beautiful like the ones we see today, according to Mrs. Giles, past president of the Houston Quilt Guild and proprietor of The Quilt Collector shop here.

"The Pilgrims had only drab, sturdy cloth for patching worn coverlets they brought with them from England. But they were the beginnings of the beautiful piecework patterns of the 1700 and 1800s — original designs which chronicle the history of the settling of North America," she explained.

Quilt patterns recall important political figures and events (Whig Rose, Clay's choice, Lincoln's Platform); daily life of early America (Indian Trail, Bear's Paw, Log Cabin); religion (Jacob's Ladder, Star of Bethlehem, Joseph's Coat), and the westward movement (Cowboy's Star, Road to California).

The areas of America which were settled first have the best examples of fine old quilting. Mrs. Giles found on a recent quest for quilts, during which she traveled to 19 states.

"Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri and Maryland have especially high standards and keen competition among quilters," she said.

Good contemporary quilts are found all over the country, she added, especially among the Amish and Mennonite people who continue to live the lifestyle of their ancestors, so the tradition of handwork has been unbroken in their communities.

Antique and old doll and baby quilts, a size especially desirable for use as wall hangings, are becoming difficult to locate, Mrs. Giles says.

New collectors may wonder why antique quilts are so thin contrast to the newer puffy quilts. Mrs. Giles explains that the cotton batting used as traditional filler required fine, close stitches.

"In the North and Northeast, the practice was to pull the batting thin for tiny stitches — the thinner the batting, the better the quilting."

The Dacron batt used as quilt filler today does not have to be quilted so closely and "you will only find it in contemporary quilts — meaning quilts made in the past 10 years or so."

Country quilts found throughout the United States have a thicker, heavier batting and consequently large quilting stitches placed farther apart. They are usually quilted in all-over designs such as fans, half circles or simple grids that do not follow the pieced pattern lines.

Considered to be practical quilts made for warmth, countryquilts frequently have exuberant colors and charming designs which make them delightful to live with, Mrs. Giles points out. They usually contain scraps from the children's school dresses and Grandpa's Sunday shirt, and were intended to be tangible memories.

The patchwork quilts collectors most frequently find are Friendship quilts containing individual patchwork blocks designed by a number of women and pieced together as a gift. Because these quilts were cared for meticulously and used only occasionally, many examples exist today.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Basically, I am person with a great deal of faith and literally put myself into the hands of the Deity.

I feel if God does not want me to make fattening yeast rolls. He will let the expiration date on my yeast expire.

If He does not want me to bake a three-layer chocolate cake from my favorite recipe. He will see that I do not have three squares of unsweetened chocolate on my shelves.

The other morning, I awoke and said, "Lord, if you do not want me to go on a diet and get sick, give me a sign."

The sign couldn't have been more obvious. It was posted over the lettuce in the produce section of the supermarket and read: LETTUCE 98 cents.

I don't need a bolt of thunder and a flash of lightning to fall on me. How could I possibly have a lettuce orgy at 98 cents a head? The omen held true all up an down the produce aisle. The price of celery was exorbitant. Spinach was a luxury item. And when I viewed the price of tomatoes. I didn't know whether to buy three of them or make the house payment.

To some of you who never diet, you will fail to see the ramifications of this piece. In simple language, it means to me that God has taken a side — the side of the dieters. The thousands of men and women who face famine daily — who jog, sweat, groan, exercise, are pounded, patted, steamed, who count calories, pop pills, take shots and who just... don't forget just. Who wake up every morning knowing that they will never see gravy again.

The sticky little buns rolled in cramel and nuts hadn't gone up in price at the supermarket. Neither had German chocolate. French garlic bread, pasta, or sour cream dips.

When I told my friend, Mayva, she said, "That is the most ridiculous reason for falling off a diet you have come up with to date. I don't for a minute believe these orders came from that big spa in the sky."

I'm used to doubters. I took her to the supermarket and placed her hand on the head of lettuce marked 98 cents and said, "Now do you believe?"

At the checkout, I grabbed up a candy bar which had not gone up one penny in price. Wickedness never tasted so good!

Institute fights cults

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — "We're fighting the ancient enemies of the Church dressed up in new clothes," said Walter Martin, founder of the Christian Research Institute dedicated to defending the faith against the challenge of cults.

"It is not a negative approach but a positive one. The church is not attacking the world, the world is attacking the church and it is our responsibility to give a reply," he explains.

Over 11 years ago, Martin became concerned about American youth by Eastern religious cults as well as new sects that have emerged in the United States, sects that claimed traditional Christian beliefs were all wrong.

One of Martin's most well-known battles has been with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. A ranking Mormon accused him at a public meeting of lying about its doctrines and their historical foundation. Martin sued for slander and the case is pending.

Martin believes the Christian Church was caught off guard by the 20th century proselytization of youth to Eastern religions and the birth in the United States of a number of "new" religions.

"God called me. I believe uniquely, for a specific purpose to bring to the people in the cults the truth so they won't be misled and to strengthen Christians in their faith," Martin said.

Destination Unknown

These super highways, these interlocking cloverleaves of shiny concrete that crisscross our land are an amazing marvel of our nation's engineering. And yet for all the time and inconvenience they save unless we know exactly where we are going they can become a confusing maze... a motorist's nightmare.

We can easily compare our lives to the automobiles that travel these highways. A driver without a known destination in mind, a motorist that does not know where he is going, a man without a map or a guiding plan is soon lost amid the complex interchanges. And so it is with life. Each of us has but one true destination and that is toward God and His promise of Eternal Life. The church, your church, is the guidepost that lights the way; it is the sign on the highway that points the route. Give your life a known destination... Go to the church of your choice this Sunday.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Astro - Graph

by Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

May 28, 1978

This coming year you are likely to have more opportunity than usual to obtain things you've always desired and do things you've wanted to do. Be enterprising. Set your sights high.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Rather than try to run the whole show yourself today, let others take the more active roles. This is your most profitable course. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's extremely important today to think positively and see yourself as a winner. Try it. The results could amaze you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Intuitive feelings could furnish clues today that your logic may not perceive. Hunches shouldn't be ignored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) For the sake of your image, don't back down on agreements you've made. Things will work out provided you don't rock the boat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be a doer today, not a rationalizer. Once you commit yourself, you may even startle yourself with your achievements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is not a good day to try to squeeze people you're involved with socially for favors. The results could embarrass you as well as them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In an important family matter today if there's something you can do for everyone's ultimate good, do it regardless of their full approval.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Important plans shouldn't be implemented piecemeal today. Keep your over-all objectives in mind at all times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your potential for acquisition today will be through your normal channels. Speculation could be disappointing for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) With friends today, your popularity is likely to be at a high point. With members of your own family you may not make such a big hit.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Early indicators may be a trifle negative, but they won't be indicative of the outcome of today's events. You're lucky in the stretch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be fortunate in most situations today, with the exception of ones relating to your finances. Don't tempt the fates in that area.

Bullets outplay Sonics

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The monkey is off Washington's back.

After nine straight losses in the National Basketball Association's championship finals, the Bullets have finally won one, beating the Seattle SuperSonics 106-98 Thursday night.

And they did it the way they know best, by going to their strength. Forwards Bobby Dandridge and Elvin Hayes bounced back from poor performances in Sunday's series opener to score 34 and 25 points, respectively, mostly from within 15 feet of the basket. The Bullets rebounded Seattle 48-39, Washington center Wes Unseld hauling down 15.

"We followed our game plan perfectly," said Washington Coach Dick Motta. "We got the ball down low to Elvin and Bobby D. where it belongs, and we crashed the boards."

Seattle center Marvin Webster saw something more.

"They were looking to prove something tonight," observed Webster. And how right he was.

Above all else, the Bullets wanted to prove that they could indeed win a game in a "title series. For all the public denials and statements about how past failures should have no bearing on the present, the fact that the Bullets were 0-9 in title play had to be in the backs of their minds — if for no other reason than that they were constantly being reminded of it by the local media.

"I'm glad we broke that streak, and I hope this puts an end to all the talk," said Motta, whose club evened its best-of-seven series with Seattle at one victory apiece, with a third game to be played here Sunday.

Dandridge and Hayes had something to prove on a personal level, too. Limited to just three baskets between them in the second half Sunday, when the Bullets blew a 19-point lead and lost at Seattle, they wanted to show they could meet a challenge.

Dandridge, who scored just six points Sunday, completely outplayed Seattle's John Johnson. He shot 14-for-22, time and again working his way along the baseline and then shooting his quick jumper over Johnson.

At the other end, he limited Johnson to four points.

Hayes, meanwhile, shot 12-for-22 and got 12 of his points in the third quarter when the Bullets turned back a Seattle challenge and put the game away.

Washington had raced to a 16-point lead in the first period, beating the Sonics downcourt on layups and short jumpers.

But Seattle responded with a 36-point second quarter to cut the halftime margin to 56-52, then pulled within two points early in the third period. Three times the Sonics had chances to tie, but each time they blew the opportunity with a wild shot or an errant pass.

Then Hayes took over, scoring four of his team's last five baskets as the Bullets built the lead up to 80-71 at the end of three periods. They led by at least five points throughout the fourth quarter.

Rangers win, 7-1; Jenkins again

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins throttled the Minnesota Twins on seven hits and one walk as he pitched the Texas Rangers to a 7-1 victory Thursday in 89-degree temperatures at Met Stadium.

It was his 218th major league victory and his fifth victory of the year. Richie Zisk and John Lowenstein drove in two runs apiece.

"It was an easy game," Jenkins said. "I felt real good out there. We were due to score some runs and we finally did. I didn't think I'd get a chance to start until about June. Last year I was stuffed into the bullpen by an ugly, old bald-headed man (Boston Manager Don Zimmer) who didn't know anything about pitching. Now I have the opportunity to start, and I'm just doing what I do best."

Rangers Coach Billy Hunter said of Ferguson, "No question about it, he's been a savior for us. Today was a typical Jenkins game — he kept the ball down, threw his breaking ball for strength and used the change of pace effectively."

The Rangers got a run in the first inning when Mike Hargrove walked and came around on a grounder and singles by Al Oliver and Zisk against Gary Serun, 3-1.

The Twins tied it in the second on consecutive singles by Butch Wynegar, Roy Smalley and Hoskin Powell. But the Rangers went ahead to stay with an unearned run in the sixth when Bobby Bonds singled, stole second, continued to

Astros downed

Philadelphia. Doubles by Madlock and McCovey gave the Giants a run in the first against Houston, J.R. Richard's bases-loaded walk made it 2-0 in the fourth, then Clark did most of the rest of the damage with RBI singles in the fifth and seventh and a two-run single in the eighth.

Cubs 5, Phillies 1
Madlock doesn't like to dwell on seasons past. Sutter and Reuschel don't even like to look back to yesterday.

"What we did today counts, but everything else is in the past," Sutter said after his 22-3 innings of two-hit relief. "And tomorrow, nothing we did today will count."

Reuschel posted his 11th victory in 14 decisions. Manny Trillo, the Cubs' second baseman, who hit a 10th-inning homer to beat the Phillies Wednesday, hit another homer and a run-scoring single as well Thursday.

Expos 11, Cardinals 2
St. Louis, which had lost 11 straight games before beating Montreal Wednesday night, reverted Thursday to the form that has made it the losingest team in the majors.

Andretti starting last at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Starting last increases his chances of running into trouble early in the race, says Mario Andretti, but beyond that, it's a little more than an inconvenience to overcome in his drive to a second Indianapolis 500 victory.

Andretti, whose Penske PC6-Cosworth was qualified by Mike Hiss because Andretti had to race in the Belgian Grand Prix last Sunday, starts in the 33rd and last position in Sunday's $1 million, 500-mile classic. He has finished in that position before but never started that far back.

"My strategy? I don't know," said the 1969 Indy winner. "I had a similar situation a couple of years ago, starting in the back. I had a pretty good break and was able to come to the front in no time at all."

"You know, starting position in a 500-mile race isn't that important as far as the final outcome is concerned. If your car is in good running condition it doesn't matter where you start. Starting so far back just increases your chances of being knocked out in the first couple of laps."

Asked if he was worried about starting behind a couple of rookies, as well as a number of other relatively inexperienced Indy drivers, Andretti recalled some of the disastrous starts in the race.

"You worry a little, yes," he said. "But just the fact that everyone seems concerned about the potential danger may help the situation."

If trouble develops, Andretti may find himself in the middle of it because it is not his nature to lay back and wait to see what's going to happen.

"I'm not going to drag along in the back," Andretti added. "If I can go, I'll go. Just how far and how fast is one thing I'll have to weigh."

"One thing, I'm going to try to do it with normal boost (power) settings to save whatever bite that may be in the car for the last."

Andretti's teammates, Tom Sneva and Rick Means, will have quite a jump on him, since they are in the front row.

"Charlie O" - a thorn in the side

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It's that darned, infernal telephone that finally gets you, says Hank Bauer, a two-striper in baseball's most unique club — managers fired or simply hounded out of the job by Charles O. Finley.

"I've had it both ways — one time I quit, the other time I got the sack," the former New York Yankees outfielder said from his home in Overland Park, Kan.

"The second time I knew I was going to get fired even before I took the job. But the salary and the two-year contract were so tempting I couldn't turn it down."

"Managing for Charles O. Finley is quite an experience. He calls you day and night, 24 hours. He wakes you up in the middle of the night with some hair-brained suggestion. He calls you in the dugout with the game in progress."

Eichelberger leads at Atlanta golf classic

ATLANTA (AP) — "I've never played a better round than I can recall," said Dave Eichelberger. "This is about as good as I can come up with, I think."

It was outstanding.

It was two shots better than any round previously recorded in the Atlanta Golf Classic, a torrid 10-under-par 62 Thursday that sent the Texan into today's second round of the $200,000 event with a two-shot lead over Bob Murphy.

Ford's advice: back off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said Thursday that Congress should "back off" and give President Carter the flexibility to deal with foreign crises on his own authority.

Ford also said that if he were still in the White House, he might tell the Soviet Union that there will be no new strategic arms limitation agreement until the Russians and the Cubans stop meddling in Africa.

He said a president should be able to act swiftly, and without special congressional clearance, to deal with a situation like that in Angola. Administration officials have discussed possible U.S. aid to the guerrillas combating the Cuban-backed government in that African nation.

But Carter has complained that congressional strictures are an obstacle to executive action in such foreign and military matters.

Ford said Congress has gone too far.

"I believe that Congress has encroached much too far on the prerogatives of the executive... to conduct foreign policy," the former Republican president told a news conference.

"I hope that Congress will back off and give to the president as commander-in-chief a freer hand to do what is right for American foreign policy."

Ford also said that while he would strongly support a sound strategic arms limitation agreement that guarded U.S. interests, he does not think such a pact should be negotiated without consideration of Russian in-

Government recalls diet meal bars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government says it's recalling 14.1 million Carnation brand Breakfast Bars and Slender Diet Meal Bars because some may contain pieces of wire.

While some of the products may still be on store shelves, all of them have been reclaimed from warehouses, the company said. The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday it had not confirmed the company's report and the recall was still in effect.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles-based company, George Wilkins, said, "We do not believe there is any significant health hazard."

He said the wires, "about a quarter-inch long and the thickness of a paper clip," apparently got into the processed bars through a contaminated shipment of raw material.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines agreed that the wire "is not likely to cause adverse health consequences."

terventionism in Africa. He said such issues are inter-related.

Ford said the Carter administration must take a firm position "someplace in Africa" to deter Soviet and Cuban adventuring there. He said a harder line on the SALT negotiations would be one place to do it. And he said that if Moscow doesn't pull back in Africa, the United States may well have to declare that "SALT II is not a possibility."

Ford fended off questions about his political plans. While a new Louis Harris survey shows him leading Carter in a hypothetical rematch of their 1976 contest, Ford said he won't make a decision on 1980 candidacy for 12 to 18 months.

But he also said the polls indicate Carter "may have some problems" gaining renomination, and more trouble in the 1980 presidential election.
