

Bomb wrecks Palace of Versailles

VERSAILLES, France (AP) — A powerful bomb planted behind a statue exploded early today in the historic Palace of Versailles, wrecking three rooms of Napoleonic art and damaging seven others in the ornate complex that is one of the jewels of French culture. A guard was slightly injured. There were no reports of damage to the Hall of Mirrors.

where the World War I peace treaty was signed, or to the royal apartments, the opera house and the chapel that are the chief tourist attractions in the vast 17th century palace 11 miles southwest of Paris. Three militant groups — two leftist and one Breton separatist — claimed responsibility for the 2 a.m. bomb blast. But police gave little credence to any of the claims. Hubert Landais, director of French museums, said one large painting of Napoleon was almost destroyed and 15 more paintings and wall panels were heavily damaged. He estimated the restoration cost at $1 million — possibly higher if, as feared, an exterior stone wall suffered structural damage. "Some (paintings) are in ribbons," said Versailles curator

Gerald van der Kamp. "They can be restored, but it will be like a jigsaw puzzle." Seven hours after the 2 a.m. bomb explosion, police were tipped that another bomb was ready to go off in one of the two Trianon palaces in the palace park. Bomb experts searched both the Grand Trianon and the Petit Trianon, and some art works were removed, but the tip apparently was a hoax. The explosion occurred in the Mid Wing of the main palace, to the left of the front entrance, and wrecked the three-room Empire Suite on the ground floor which was opened to the public May 16 by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. "Three of the paintings are reduced to fragments and are irreparable, including a very famous painting of Napoleon awarding the first Legion of Honor medals," Jean Dumont, the chief architect for the palace, told reporters. "Other paintings are damaged but probably can be restored. The sculpted woodwork of the rooms has been shattered and there is at least six months' solid restoration work."

Dumont said the bomb blasted a hole — said by other sources to measure 10 by 12 feet — into the floor of the Gallery of Battles on the second floor. "But there does not appear to be other damage in the Gallery of Battles," he said. He denied earlier reports that the damage extended to the third floor. No monetary estimate was available of the damage.

Officials said it was the first such attack they could recall on the palace. The explosive was hidden in a small room in an alcove behind a statue. Dumont said it was not known how or when it was placed there, but police noted that a Sunday evening festival had given the public access to the palace grounds until almost midnight.

Following harvest north

This combine, its task of harvesting wheat south of Pampa completed, was caught this morning as it was heading north on Texas Highway 70, south of the city. As it continued slowly along its way, other motorists carefully passed the overwidth machinery. The parade of harvesting equipment will continue its northward trek throughout the summer, finally stopping somewhere in Canada. News photo by Ron Ennis

Carter meets with Callaghan

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter spent more than an hour today conferring at breakfast with British Prime Minister James Callaghan. Neither man spoke to waiting reporters as the prime minister, who was scheduled for a 45-minute visit, was escorted to his limousine by the president. Callaghan arrived here Saturday on a private visit, his third stay here in three months. The prime minister's daughter Margaret is the wife of the British ambassador, Peter Jay. The two leaders will meet again in Bonn in mid-July at a seven-nation economic summit.

The president also was holding a nationally-broadcast news conference in late afternoon. Carter returned Saturday night from a two-day trip to Texas, where he drew enthusiastic applause by pledging to hold the line on federal spending. Implicit, and sometimes stated, was a companion promise to use his veto powers to the fullest if necessary. The Texas trip was on Carter's mind Sunday as he conducted an adult Bible class at the First Baptist Church here. Conveying a "judge not" message to his fellow Baptists, Carter said former President Johnson is not yet recognized as a "great hearted, big hearted" political leader. The president, who said the trip reminded him of Johnson, observed that some of his White House predecessors were "condemned as a result of one act," often in situations over which they had little control. In Johnson's case, said Carter, national feeling about the Vietnam War caused people to forget that LBJ "cared more and did more" in behalf of blacks, the poor, and the underprivileged generally than any other recent president. A million-dollar demonstration of military firepower at Fort Hood, Texas, that climaxed Carter's trip also seemed to be on the president's mind.

Nuclear power demonstrations vary with area

By The Associated Press
While thousands of Clamshell Alliance supporters began wrapping up their peaceful protest against the construction of a nuclear power plant in the Northeast, 156 backers of the Crabshell Alliance were arrested when they occupied the construction site of two atomic power plants in the Northwest. About 50 Grays Harbor County sheriff's deputies began arresting the Crabshell demonstrators immediately after they approached the 275-acre Satsop project construction site Sunday evening near Elma, Wash., about 70 miles southwest of Seattle. The Washington Public Power Supply System, a quasi-public agency, is constructing the two multibillion-dollar plants. Sheriff's spokesman Richard Romanelli said the people arrested were released on their personal recognizance, and Sheriff Harold Sumpter said they would be arraigned on trespassing charges beginning Wednesday. Romanelli also said that demonstrators found on the construction site today would be charged with violating a judge's restraining order. A few miles from the Satsop site, more than 1,000 Crabshell Alliance members and other opponents of nuclear power capped a day of entertainment by marching peacefully through Elma. In what may have been the largest demonstration in the history of the nation's anti-nuclear movement, police said Sunday's protest against a nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H., attracted 12,000 people, including tourists, vacationers and curiosity seekers.

Court limits media rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court narrowly ruled today that news organizations have no special right of access to investigate prisons and other government-run institutions other than what is granted to the general public. In a 4-3 decision written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the court denied news reporters from an educational radio-television station special access to investigate conditions at the Alameda County, Calif., jail.

Burger said the Constitution does not mandate "a right of access to government information or sources of information within the government's control. The media has no special right of access to the Alameda County jail different from or greater than that accorded the public generally."

Hart trial resumes

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Attorneys for Gene Leroy Hart, charged in the slayings of three Girl Scouts last year, began their trial today in a preliminary hearing to determine if Hart will be tried for murder. The hearing resumed in the Mayes County Courthouse following a one-week delay. Court observers predicted the defense portion of the hearing may require all week, or perhaps longer. More than 100 witnesses have been subpoenaed. Hart, who was arrested 10 months after the Girl Scouts were killed at Camp Scott in June 1977, is being held in the county jail here. At the end of the state's portion of the preliminary hearing, District Judge Jess Clanton overruled a defense motion that the charges against Hart be dismissed. Garvin Isaacs, Hart's attorney, contended the state's evidence was circumstantial. Isaacs described the state's case as "an inference based upon another inference."

Isaacs had produced only one major witness before the recess a week ago. That was Jimmy Don Bunch, who was once on death row at the state penitentiary at McAlester. Isaacs expected Bunch to testify that he had been offered early parole by the state for testimony incriminating Hart in the slayings. Instead, Bunch testified it was Isaacs who had promised him help in obtaining a parole in exchange for his testimony. Bunch also testified Hart told him during one conversation he didn't know if he had killed the Girl Scouts.

Gay activists meet in Houston

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — About 3,000 gay activists met in Houston Sunday afternoon to discuss their problems, call for political action, and hear Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, president of a New York college, call for an end to "blatant discrimination against this large majority." Farenthold, twice a Democratic gubernatorial candidate in Texas and now head of Wells College in Aurora, N.Y., told the session. "You have organized, you have identified and isolated the social and legal injustices levelled against you. You have overcome the crisis of timidity. Only in this way can your human rights be implemented. Some seek to make this into a religious issue, and a few politicians seek to make this into a tool, but this issue must be seen first and foremost as a human rights issue — an issue spanning color, creed, sex and national origin."

white women with four grown children is addressing this convocation of gay men and women. The answer should be self-evident, no one is free unless we are all free." She added, "Many people remember the yellow star of David worn by persecuted Jews but few recall the pink triangle forced upon European homosexuals at the time of the holocaust. Let it be remembered in America. We in America are not a society caught up in genocide, but such intolerant religiosity, as we have witnessed recently in this country, can lead to similar wholesale destruction of rights as happened in Germany. This Houston town meeting is the beginning of the reality of a society with a goal of not simply equality but complete transformation. The coming together of gay men and women is the first step in a valuable healing process."

Ray Hill, a leader of the Gay Activist movement in Houston, was sharply critical of the appearance of a local television crew (KTRK-TV, Channel 13) that filmed the speeches made from the platform. Hill had asked that no cameras be admitted to the arena and said, "A face on a television screen or in a newspaper can end a person's career." Steve Shiflett of Houston, co-chairman of the rally, advised the gays to work together politically in November and to vote for the Democratic party nominees, especially in the governor's race. Shiflett said, "This is perhaps the only time we should vote as a bloc. To vote for the Democrats will give us a voice at the precinct level and to higher levels and the voice of the gay community will be heard. At the meeting were representatives of many organizations, including the Lesbians, Sisters' Symposium, Executive and Professional Association of Houston, the Chicano Caucus, Gay Parents of Houston and the Parents of Gays. At most of the tables there was literature and petitions to be signed. But Lynette Brannon, of an organization called Safari Growth, displayed eye creams, vibrators and a small aerosol can of a foamy lubricant with a strawberry flavor. One young woman, who asked not to be identified because she is an employee of the Harris County Welfare Department, said, "I am a long time volunteer in the feminist movement. Everytime you come to a group movement like this one, you get a real feeling of support." Pokey Anderson, 29, a secretary, said, "resolutions are only words, but this gives a feeling of unity and strength. You feel like valid people, a valid life style." And Kent Naasz of Houston said, "From this will come a growing group of strong leaders in a feeling for our identity, showing us we are beautiful people concerned not only with their tribal community but with issues important to the United States and to the world."

Egypt, Israel reject offers

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt and Israel have rejected each other's latest proposals for Israeli-occupied Arab lands, but U.S. pressure is keeping the peace effort going. President Anwar Sadat on Saturday turned down Israel's offer to talk about the status of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip after a five-year period of limited self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinians of the two territories. Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Israeli cabinet on Sunday rejected an Egyptian proposal that the West Bank be returned to Jordan and the Gaza Strip to Egypt — from whom they were taken in the Six-Day War of 1967 — while the Arabs negotiate security arrangements with Israel. "Israel rejects without reservation these suggestions by President Sadat," spokesman Arieh Naor said after the weekly cabinet meeting in Jerusalem. However, the United States still hopes to get Israel and Egypt talking again and is pressing ahead with a summer diplomatic drive praised by Sadat as a "serious attempt" to boost the peace process. It includes: —A meeting in London of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. Egyptian sources say the meeting is tentatively scheduled for July 9, although Dayan said Sunday he had no information about such a meeting. —Expansion of Vice President Walter F. Mondale's visit to Israel this week to include a meeting with Sadat in Alexandria. The Egyptian proposal for the West Bank and Gaza which Israel rejected is part of a peace plan still being drafted that informed sources say presents for the first time a detailed alternative to Israel's proposal for the occupied territories. Naor indicated one thing Israel objected to was giving up the territories, a major bargaining counter, before arrangements to guarantee Israel's security are negotiated.

Special session set by city commission

The Pampa City Commission will conduct a special meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the city commission chambers at City Hall. The special meeting has been called to review the proposed annexation of some 1,400 unincorporated acres in north and northwest Pampa. A public hearing concerning the proposed annexation will headline the regular meeting of city commission at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the commission chambers of City Hall. The city is studying the proposed annexation in an effort to regulate residential growth in the unincorporated area adjacent to the city limits.

Also, during Tuesday's meeting, the commission will again consider a rate increase request by Metropolitan General, Inc. Ambulance Co. Metropolitan is requesting an increase in its basic monthly payment from the city and increases in certain basic emergency runfees. Rounding out Tuesday's agenda will be the appointment of two local representatives to the Amarillo Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board and consideration of resolution authorizing limousine service between Pampa, Perry LeFors airport and the Amarillo airport.

Perseverance

By SAM CAMPBELL
Register Associate Editor

Perseverance, not brilliance, is the common denominator of business success.

That thought is not likely to win an election. It flies in the face of perceived reality. How often have you read about the impatient swain who made a million in real estate, in construction, or insurance before he was a dozen years out of high school?

Conspicuous achievement usually is credited to conspicuous merit. Who bothers to look for inconspicuous merit? How can the public scribe pen as a serenade to that charwoman of the marketplace—Capacity for Drudgery? Spell it with a "P" and it comes out Perseverance.

This writer has interviewed scores of successful enterprisers over a period of decades. One question that invariably brings a strong reaction is, "Did you ever meet an obstacle too high to climb over, too wide to go around, and then what did you do?"

Without exception, the answers, though variously phrased, boiled down to, "I just kept on keeping on."

For that reader who strives for success by following in the footsteps of great enterprisers, the point is significant. A businessman is not one quality, but a bundle of qualities. An outstanding individual may become known because he is a practical economist, a visionary who also has a gift for planning, staffing and control, or he may attain distinction as a salesman.

So you see these several traits and you emulate one or more. Very well. But don't leave out tenacity. That means "hang-on." It's a shorter word for perseverance. Among those interviewed by this writer, that's the quality they all had.

If you pictured the success formula as a fraction, special talents would be the numerator, but the common denominator would be uncommon perseverance.

To be sure, all business is a risk. And it is possible to identify an occasional individual who persevered into ultimate failure.

Now and then you hear of a person who stuck with a right idea, but who was ahead of his time. You can measure by the multitude of enterprisers who went down with the ship because of undercapitalization.

Such are the fortunes, or rather the misfortunes, of the marketplace. Not even sterling character is a guarantee of safety in the stormy seas of capitalism.

Yet the probabilities are that the individual who "keeps on keeping on" will find a way. In the process of failure, he will come upon some service, method or product by means of which he matches or betters all competitors. In that sense, to the perseverant, failures are the school where success is taught.

In former times, perseverance was also known as patience. That stubborn missionary of the first century, St. Paul, said you get perseverance out of tribulation. And when you have perseverance, he said, you get experience. And out of experience, he said, comes hope.

In other words, the persevering individual can hardly help but learn something

Fleecing Tax Payers

SEN. WILLIAM PROXMIER'S Golden Fleece Award, given for "the biggest, most ridiculous or most ironic waste of the taxpayer's money," has gone to the National Institute for Mental Health for a $97,000 grant it gave to University of Washington sociologist Pierre Van den Berghe.

It seems Van den Berghe's grant was used in part for a study of a Peruvian brothel.

"With the federal research budgets so tight and the needs for mental health research here at home so great," said Proxmire, "it is unbelievable that NIMH would... fund the field trip to Peru."

Although the award is not generally coveted, Van den Berghe told the Washington Post, "My reputation in the academic community will be enhanced. Six colleagues already have come in spontaneously to congratulate me for the Golden Fleece."

It would seem Van den Berghe's rendezvous with the Golden Fleece has long been in the cards. He is the author of a book entitled "Academic Gamesmanship"—a how-to-book which tells the ambitious scholar how to get federal grants.

Labor's Changing Collar

An interesting thing is happening on the way to the post-industrial society. It might be called the whitening of labor's collar.

For the past decade, employment in the United States has been expanding most rapidly in what would be considered for the most part white-collar occupations—primarily in the areas of services and government. These now absorb 72 percent of the entire working population.

The shift has not, however, been reflected in organized labor, which has continued to draw most of its numbers from and shape its policies primarily in the interests of blue-collar workers.

That organizational lag may be approaching an end.

One interesting omen is the emergence of a public-employee union, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), as possible the largest entity in the AFL-CIO. Topping the million-member mark with its absorption of a previously independent New York employees union, the AFSCME is challenging the United Steelworkers for the No. 1 position.

The consequences not only for the labor establishment but for the economic and political status quo could be considerable.

The employees leadership has long been critical of blue-collar orientation of the AFL-CIO and in particular of the policies orientation of the policies of its 83-year-old president, George Meany. The AFSCME leadership has made it clear that with its new membership clout, it will demand "first-class membership" in the labor movement and a strong voice in the formulation of its policies.

Which could eventually make a considerable difference in where and how labor and similar unions on key public issues tends to be more liberal than that of the blue-collar dominated AFL-CIO, which has become one of the more conservative power centers in U.S. society.

The expansion of the white-collar work force is in large part a natural consequence of a maturing economy's shifting emphasis—away from labor-intensive basic manufacturing industries—has coincided with the decline of the blue-collar unions. The AFL-CIO dropped a half-million members between 1975 and 1977, down to a current official figure if blue-collar shrinkage had not been largely offset by expansion of the organization's white-collar affiliates.

Much of the huge new work force, however, is non-union, in part because many of the jobs are not easily organized along traditional lines but also because the AFL-CIO's blue-collar image has not exerted a strong appeal.

A successful assertion by the white-collar unions of their growing strength within the AFL-CIO could change that situation. It could both open a new period of growth for big labor, ending decades of stagnation, and accelerate the shift of power within the movement from blue to white.

NO TIME FOR MERRIMENT

When was the last time you had a good laugh with the boss?

According to a study reported in the current issue of International Management magazine, it could well have been a long time.

Humor is going out of fashion in the office. It seems, and being replaced by a dead serious approach to the business at hand.

"The joke, the quip and the humorous anecdote are now often viewed as time-consuming, costly diversions from the very serious regimen of operating a business at maximum potential."

The reasons are several—no non-union training programs, intense executive suite competition and unprecedented pressure on managers for efficiency and profits.

And as any boss could tell you, it's not easy to get a chuckle out of any of that.

Back to Barter

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Carter is missing the point when he rattles off facts and figures proving middle-income families would gain more from his student aid proposal than from a tuition tax credit.

In dollars and cents, Carter is no doubt correct. But there is more at stake in his fight with Congress than the amount of money any given family might receive under the two alternatives.

The impetus behind the tuition tax credit is as much philosophical as fiscal. Its greatest appeal is that parents could take advantage of it with a simple check mark on their income tax returns—without first shipping their money to Washington and filling out pages upon pages of applications to get it back again.

The popularity of the tuition tax credit is part and parcel of the public backlash against big government and high taxes. Carter's enlarged student loan and grant plan, although welcomed warmly by colleges and the teachers' lobbies, remains just another expansion of Big Brotherism.

People are getting tired of Big Brother in all his guises. Federal, state and local taxes combined now gobble up more than 40 percent of all national income, and those who pay the bill increasingly feel they are getting precious little in return.

It is true that increases in state and local taxes over the past decade have far outpaced the growth of federal income taxes, but Uncle Sam remains the primary target of taxpayer resentment. And no wonder.

Those who pay state and local taxes at least see what their money buys—schools, garbage collection, street lighting, recreation centers and other visible programs. But the people who pay federal income taxes are seldom the same people who benefit from them in any direct fashion.

In fiscal 1977, for instance, 69 percent of total federal tax receipts went for "income transfer" programs—Social Security, medicare, medicaid, welfare, food stamps and the like.

By any measure that is income redistribution on a massive scale, and conservatives are beginning to draw blood when they rail against such a huge transfer of money "from those who earn it to those who yearn it."

Most taxpayers are not clamoring to get a piece of the government pie for themselves. What they want is to keep a larger slice in their own pockets, to spend as they see fit.

The overt signs of a taxpayer revolt are evident all over the political landscape these days, both in Washington and in the states. But there is a hidden and more ominous side to the rebellion as well.

Although the government prefers to ignore the phenomenon, a "subterranean" economy is growing by leaps and bounds. It is an economy based on cash transactions and barter, unreported and untaxed.

Government figures show that by the end of 1976, some $381 in cash for every man, woman and child in America was sloshing around somewhere outside of banks. Economist Peter Gutmann of Baruch College in New York estimates the "gross national product" of the underground economy at $200 billion a year—which represents a tax loss to Uncle Sam of some $40 billion.

Barter clubs are springing up across the country as professionals and businessmen trade services, without reporting the transactions to the tax man. Small retailers are dealing "out of pocket" instead of from the cash register.

When otherwise law-abiding citizens start resorting to this kind of widespread tax evasion, it's clearly time for the government to take a new look at what it is doing.

Today in history

Today is Monday, June 26, the 177th day of 1978. There are 188 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1945, delegates from 50 nations, meeting in San Francisco, signed the United Nations Charter.

On this date: In 1284, according to legend, the Pied Piper of Hamelin, Germany, lured 130 children from the town. Their fate was never determined.

In 1541, Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro was slain in Lima, Peru.

In 1549, the 17 provinces of the Netherlands were declared independent of the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1844, President John Tyler married Julie Gardiner in a secret wedding in New York.

In 1941, Finland announced that it was at war with the Soviet Union for the second time in two years.

In 1944, Allied forces captured Cherbourg, France, from the Nazis.

Ten years ago: The U.S. flag was lowered on Iwo Jima and replaced by Japan's Rising Sun, 23 years after American Marines had raised the Stars and Stripes atop Mount Suribachi during World War II.

Five years ago: The House of Representatives passed a bill barring funds for bombing operations in Cambodia and Laos.

One year ago: There were 42 fatalities in a fire in the Maury County Jail at Columbia, Tenn.

Today's birthdays: Writer Colin Wilson is 47.

Thought for today: Honesty is the best policy—when there is money in it—Mark Twain, American writer, 1835-1910.

The entire outlook for your job security, profits and cost of living may be vastly brightened by SIMPLIFICATION of the tax laws—NOT President Carter's "reforms"—increasingly likely to be signed into law in this year of 1978.

No matter how confusing and conflicting the news reports you have been hearing and reading, the prospects are growing that significant, meaningful tax legislation will be shepherded through the House by the increasingly respected and powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Al Ullman. Basic agreements are now being reached in private by House and Senate leaders in the tax field. It is possible (even probable) that the legislation will be ready for President Carter's signature this fall.

Much of the legislation (particularly on easing of capital gains taxes) would become immediately effective. The economic impact could be electrifying and keep our economy in a healthy advance without igniting more inflation than already built in.

During a lengthy, exclusive interview with the Oregon Democrat who now heads Ways and Means, Ullman gave refreshingly responsive answers to my tough, direct questions. Here's a quick rundown on some of the tax changes you will may see in this year of tax ferment.

(1) Your dependency deduction would be boosted by one-third from today's outmoded $750 per dependent to $1,000 per dependent. This could pay off in big dollars, with both the IRS and the courts becoming more and more liberal in their interpretations in this area.

This means the orientation in recent years toward dependency credits instead of dependency deductions would be junked. (A credit is a dollar-for-dollar reduction of your tax bill; a deduction cuts your income subject to tax.)

(2) Your deduction for gas taxes would be killed; there is little support for retaining this deduction. Your deduction for personal property taxes—that's PERSONAL property only—also would be killed. Don't let this frighten you, for your real estate property taxes would still be fully deductible. This deduction apparently can withstand any onslaught from the White House or elsewhere.

(3) The 10 percent investment credit would be made permanent, to spur business into buying new, more modern machinery and equipment and to increase their productivity. How would this help you, a wage-earner and consumer? By helping U.S. businesses to become more efficient and competitive in world trade.

(4) There will be tax cuts or an extension of the current tax cuts for individuals. Since rates automatically go higher at yearend unless Congress acts, you can be sure of this.

(5) Small businesses would get a special break. On the first $100,000 of earnings, the rates would be slashed by two percentage points. This means a tax cut for larger companies, too, on the first $100,000 of earnings.

(6) Now to long-term capital gains—where the real surprise and sleeper lies. Bills in Congress today would slash the capital gains tax rate back from what could be as high as 49 percent to a top of 25 percent and they are picking up a provocative amount of support.

To head off this cut (unacceptable to the White House) Ullman has come up with a compromise plan which would, in blunt summary, place the maximum at 35 percent, and would, in the process, simplify the tax laws tremendously while lowering the tax maximum.

His compromise simply would remove that "tax preference" label from capital gains, eliminate all the complex alternative tax methods, and be of general benefit to taxpayers in all income tax brackets.

In response to my queries, tax experts at Prentice-Hall declared that the unwinding of the complications would assist not only higher-income bracket taxpayers but also would be precisely the technique needed to save you a bundle of tax dollars when, say, you sell your home. Consider just this one tax trap:

You and your spouse bought your home many years ago for $15,000, sell it now for $55,000 net after commissions and fees—a $40,000 profit. You move into a rental apartment, and have $20,000 in other taxable income for the year. Under the present law, you must pay $6,957 in capital gains tax, and pay an extra $1,500 in the so-called "preference" or "minimum" tax, too. That's an additional 20 percent-plus that you are paying in taxes—and that's the 20 percent the two of you would pocket for yourselves under the new tax measure.

Finally—despite the conventional wisdom you hear around Washington and New York—much, if not all, of these tax changes could become law this year.

The difference between delegating authority and being told to get cracking escapes us when we have the work wished on us.

The success of Proposition 13 in California, the property tax limitation initiative, has raised immense hope that tax limitation proposals will succeed elsewhere in the nation. The major, long-term target of the tax limitation movement, of course, is the federal government.

Tax limitation is right, just and necessary. If ever there was an idea whose time has come, it is tax limitation. The American people are being taxed to death.

The foes of tax limitation—the advocates of massive spending—cry that tax limitation won't work or that it will work terrible hardship. They say that tax limitation laws will put teachers out of work, close libraries, and result in drastic curtailment of police and fire services. None of these things need happen.

The taxpayers are willing to pay taxes for essential services. What they are angry about is the unchecked growth of local, state and federal bureaucracies and the exploitation of the government grant mechanism for make-work projects and programs.

To work successfully, tax limitation has to be applied across the board—from the local level to Washington. Anyone who has experience with government agencies or who has worked in a government office knows that government spending can and must be cut.

Where is the waste of which taxpayers complain? The waste is in "renticery," in overstaffing in government offices at every level, in the manipulation of government grants to provide per diem, travel funds and fees for consultants.

The waste is in food stamps for people who drive new model cars, in public medical care programs for persons who can afford to buy liquor, in programs for the federal government to subsidize sewer construction for local communities or police cars for city hall. The waste is in state arts funding that create plush headquarters for state arts commissions and state cars for employees of countless state and local agencies.

The waste also is in the swollen Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare that has a bigger budget than the Dept. of Defense, and in the countless surveys done for and by government, in public relations aides for almost every local, state and federal office.

The waste is in an excessive number of "educational" seminars for bureaucrats, usually in faraway, interesting cities, in "leisure services" departments in municipalities and in the array of paid consultants at all levels of government.

The foes of Proposition 13 complain of a "meat axe" approach to spending. Well, the time has come for drastic surgery on government budgets. If you listen to the foes of tax limitation, every item in every public budget is sacred and represents a major public or human need. That's simply not true.

The colossal spending that the taxpayers resent is fuel for the bureaucracy. The bureaucrats get their good life by taking from the taxpayers. They will fight against losing their privileged position in America today.

Unfortunately for the entrenched bureaucrats, the taxpayers have decided that they won't live in serfdom any longer. They have demonstrated in California that they can get their way. They know that essential public services can be maintained on cost-effective budgets while the excessive spending is eliminated.

We are witnessing a great awakening.

Test own knowledge of health and safety fairly stable throughout state

By Science Research Associates

A little knowledge is not necessarily a dangerous thing. It could save your life.

In recent years, statistics have taught us that many people who ordinarily would have died of injuries or sudden illnesses have been saved by rapid action from paramedics, cardiac units, or ordinary citizens who possess a little rudimentary information.

The United States, in fact, ranks lowest among the countries of the world in the rate of deaths attributed to most kinds of accidents (falls, drowning, fire, etc.), although it is by far the highest in the rate of deaths by homicide, and has an above-average rate of deaths from transportation accidents.

One doesn't have to be a physician to draw certain conclusions about one's health and how to safeguard it. One doesn't need to be a paramedic to know some of the live-saving techniques that can be used when accidents occur or when illness strikes.

Public information programs often are designed to provide these skills on a community-wide basis. In these programs, people are taught the Heimlich technique for people who are choking, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation for those whose breathing has stopped, and other basic life-saving skills.

Not everyone can be trained as a paramedic, but there is certain information that practically everyone could reasonably be expected to learn that could add immeasurably to the health and safety of people in any community. The most basic piece of information is knowing how to reach a doctor or paramedic quickly in your community.

Not all this information is included in the health and safety section of the SRA Coping Skills Test—but some of it is.

Mark your answers, then check with the key printed on page 00 to see how much you know about safeguarding your health and safety.

- Which of the above labels is replacing the skull and crossbones as a poison warning symbol?
A. B. C. D.

- When buying an electrical appliance, which of the above labels should you look for as an indication that the appliance has been tested for safety?

Pillow talk for a bed of roses

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "A rose garden is a very special place — it's a flower that needs to be visited," advised the gardening columnist in one of the big metropolitan dailies last week.

Intrigued, I read on. The centerpiece of the essay was an interview with a country gentleman who not only regularly visited her 250 rose bushes but talked to them.

"Roses need your shadow," the lady said, apparently with a straight face. "If you are going to have a rose garden, make love to it. Even talk to them."

Ever since William Booth penned the line, "feather-footed through the plashy fen passes the queuing vole" before going on to become the model for all foreign correspondents in Evelyn Waugh's "Scoop," I have always been a sucker for that kind of bucolic prose.

After dipping into the sports page and the gossip columnists, I always drop in on the peat moss and fertilizer cribblers to learn what new insights on life they have gained from a worm's eye view of creation.

This time, I figured, they must be onto something: a bedside manner for the rosebush. The idea seems to be catching on. Just this morning a car went by with a bumper sticker: "Have You Talked To A Plant Today?"

Well, yes, I have, on the strength of all this, and frankly we don't seem to have much to say to each other.

I didn't really know how to begin. There was my shadow, right over our two rather limp-looking tea roses and a few trailing buds, and words failed me. How do you strike up a conversation with a rose bush? And how long should a visit last? The only words that had passed between us previously were "ouch" and a few rhetorical vulgarities when I embraced a thorn in snipping a boutonniere to cut a more dashing figure in the periodontist's waiting room.

Should I try poetry for openers? "Flower in the crannied wall, I pluck you out of the crannies. I hold you here, root and all, in my hand . . . Perhaps I should just get in there and give them the old top sergeant's chewing out. You know, "All right, you sad sacks, you ought to be ashamed to call yourself roses. Look at them dandelions. Look at the ragweed. You don't hear them crying out for food and conversation all the time. This is your last chance to make this outfit. Shape up or be snipped out."

It might be better, like the lady said, to speak to them of love, a little verbal cooing and billing.

On the plus side, there is new life in one of Reagan's favorite issues: government spending and taxes. He is making the most of Proposition 13, and of his own effort as governor of California to put a constitutional cap on state taxes. In 1976, his call for a reduction of $90 billion in federal spending through a transfer of programs to state and local jurisdiction, to be financed or rejected there, became a campaign problem. Now it looks like an asset.

He knows, says one, that neither fate nor a draft is going to get him that nomination. There is a shadow organization ready to surface and go to work, perhaps as early as next winter. There have been candid discussions of his pluses and problems.

Age, for example. He will be 69 years old at the time of the next presidential election, 70 shortly after the next inauguration. He has been told that opponents in a new campaign would almost surely raise that as an issue, but that it can be handled so long as his health is sound and his performance vigorous.

Reagan was a bashful candidate-in-waiting for months before he challenged then-President Gerald R. Ford in 1976. In the next campaign, he will not be facing the problems that confront a candidate trying to wrest nomination from a president of his own party.

Perhaps as important, his associates sense a new commitment and a new realism as Reagan looks at the prospect of another campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

He knows, says one, that neither fate nor a draft is going to get him that nomination. There is a shadow organization ready to surface and go to work, perhaps as early as next winter. There have been candid discussions of his pluses and problems.

Age, for example. He will be 69 years old at the time of the next presidential election, 70 shortly after the next inauguration. He has been told that opponents in a new campaign would almost surely raise that as an issue, but that it can be handled so long as his health is sound and his performance vigorous.

On the plus side, there is new life in one of Reagan's favorite issues: government spending and taxes. He is making the most of Proposition 13, and of his own effort as governor of California to put a constitutional cap on state taxes. In 1976, his call for a reduction of $90 billion in federal spending through a transfer of programs to state and local jurisdiction, to be financed or rejected there, became a campaign problem. Now it looks like an asset.

Agricultural prospects remain

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Except for a drouth east-west strip through Central Texas, the state's agricultural picture remains fairly stable.

The dry corridor starts in the far west and extends to East and Northeast Texas, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Grazing conditions are deteriorating fast, hay cuttings are skimpier than usual and field crop growth is slowing. However, livestock are holding up well, and marketing is steady.

Elsewhere in the state, crop prospects continue to brighten due to rains in recent weeks. But they, too, will soon need more moisture. In most places, cotton, corn and sorghum look promising. Melon and grain sorghum harvesting is well under way in the Rio Grande Valley.

Almost all peach crop reports describe bountiful production and favorable prices. Reports also are good for

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 Wind gusts that topped 30 miles per hour in El Paso and some isolated thunderstorms in the Panhandle were the only exceptions to another fair and mild Texas night Sunday.

Some low clouds were over south central parts of the state.

Winds during the night around Texas were mostly southerly at 10 to 15 miles per hour. The higher winds at El Paso were from the west.

National weather

By The Associated Press
 Parts of Indianapolis remained without power early today following a devastating storm system that spawned tornadoes and dumped heavy rain and hail in the Ohio Valley and other parts of the Midwest.

The National Weather Service said two tornadoes touched down Sunday night in Indianapolis, causing extensive damage, and one hit at Pittsboro, northeast of the capital city.

Hospital workers campaign

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — The Communications Workers of America today readied a media campaign designed to win public support for union members employed at Wadley Hospital.

About 450 of the hospital's 685 employees belong to CWA Local 11271. The union members — mostly nurses, maintenance workers and food service personnel — were expected to walk off the job Sunday morning, but did not.

Union spokesman Dale Magee said that by reporting for work Sunday, the hospital workers did more harm to the hospital's pocketbook than if they had stayed away.

The 385-bed hospital slashed its patient load to 190 patients in anticipation of a strike Sunday. Magee said revenues are down, and with the hospital workers on the job Sunday, the hospital was put in an "economic squeeze."

The administration resumed admitting non-emergency patients after Magee announced there would be no strike.

By Sunday night, Magee was saying there would be a strike, but he would not say when it would be called.

"They (the hospital administration) think we don't have the strength to go out, but they're going to get the shock of their life," Magee said.

The union must give 12 hours notice before striking, he said. Magee and other union officials contacted Texas state legislators and Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office Sunday and requested their intervention in the contract dispute.

No further contract talks have been scheduled. The last bargaining session was held Saturday night, when union officials asked that a special committee of three be appointed to examine the hospital's latest contract proposal.

The committee was to have been composed of a union member, a hospital official and a representative of Briscoe's office. The hospital rejected the request and compared it to "a shotgun wedding" performed by a third party.

The major stumbling block to a settlement appears to be wages and other economic issues. Hospital officials have pointed to a 10 percent pay increase given employees at the beginning of the year as evidence that employee wages have not been neglected.

Union officials say the pay increase was insufficient. The union contends that 40 percent of its members earn less than $3 per hour.

Rangers study death

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers here are investigating the shooting death Sunday night of a Mexican-American by a West Texas reserve deputy sheriff.

Tim Rosales, 25, of Hale Center, was fatally wounded about 6:30 p.m. near Mayfield, Hale County sheriff's officials said. The shooting reportedly occurred as Rosales struggled for a pistol held by reserve deputy Charles Cyfert.

The sheriff's office said that Cyfert, 25, a radio repairman in civilian life, stopped Rosales' car after answering a call about an alleged drunken disturbance. Rosales was shot once in the head.

The case was immediately turned over to the Rangers for a complete investigation, officials said.

THESE PHILADELPHIA militiamen march off to the tune of "Yankee Doodle" one day each year to do battle against the Redcoats. It's not that news of the British surrender at Yorktown has not yet reached the nation's first capital. These "colonials" are just part of the annual "Spirit of '76" festivities at the city's Elfreth's Alley, the oldest street in the United States in continuous residential use.

Equal rights group continuing battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment are disappointed at their most recent defeat in Illinois, but they're not giving up.

They figure a victory in one more state would generate the momentum needed to make ERA part of the Constitution. "Frankly, I think if we could get one state, the momentum would build again and it wouldn't be difficult to get two others," Nancy Neuman, a vice president of the League of Women Voters, said in an interview.

The proposed constitutional amendment, approved by Congress in 1972, would prohibit discrimination based on sex.

But opponents claimed they could hold on to the votes of opposition state legislators long enough to defeat the amendment.

"I think the momentum is going strongly against the ERA," said Phyllis Schlafly, national chairman of Stop ERA. "The 15 states which have not ratified it have rejected it again and again and again. I see no indication that the proponents are gaining votes."

Starting this year, employers are required to pay social security taxes on any cash tips earned by their employees which are "deemed to be wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act," according to Howard Weatherly, manager of the Pampa social security office.

Weatherly said that under the Act, an employer can pay an employee less than the federal minimum wage by an amount equal to the tips received by the employee but not less than one-half the minimum wage.

"For example," said Weatherly, "if a waitress is laid a salary of $1.50 per hour plus tips, the employer will have to pay social security tax on all tips received up to $1.15 per hour (the difference in the $1.50 salary and the $2.65 per hour minimum wage)."

Weatherly added that if an employer pays a salary of $2.65 per hour or more, then he would not be required to pay social security tax on tips received by the employee.

Correction

Garland Kysar, 929 Nelson, was incorrectly listed in Sundays paper as being charged with driving while intoxicated. The information was taken from the county clerks record, which incorrectly listed as Kysar as driving while intoxicated. The record should have read that he was driving while his license was suspended.

Former congressman competent for trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former congressman from Louisiana, Otto Passman, was declared competent today to stand trial on conspiracy, bribery and tax evasion charges arising from rice sales to South Korea.

"Perfect physical and mental health is not required," said U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker. "Good physical and mental health is not required."

Rather, he said, it was important that a defendant have a rational understanding of the proceedings and that he be able to assist his lawyers.

Passman, who will be 78 on Tuesday, is charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud the United States, three counts of bribery, and three counts of accepting illegal gratuities. He is charged in a separate indictment with two counts of income tax evasion — failing to report the money the government said he got through the acts charged in the other indictments.

The government says that Passman accepted $213,000 from South Korean rice-dealer Tongsun Park because he helped pave the way for Park to act as middleman in rice sales to Korea.

Before reading his ruling, a process that took nearly 40 minutes, the judge arraigned Passman.

The former congressman, speaking audibly, said, "I'm not guilty, your honor," to each of the indictments. Passman was a congressman for 30 years before a challenger beat him in the 1976 Democratic primary.

The judge had heard testimony from psychiatrists, neurologists and internists for four days last week.

A court-appointed psychiatrist, Dr. Leon Yochelson, said that nothing in the testimony by defense witnesses made him change his opinion that Passman will understand the proceedings and be able to aid his lawyers if proper care is taken so that he is not overtaxed.

Most of the expert witnesses agreed that Passman is suffering from Alzheimer's disease, which involves shrinking of the brain, loss of recent memory and a short attention span.

The major difference between the experts was on the severity of the disease, which claims its victims' lives in an average of 7 1/2 years.

School obtains help from panel of experts

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Hoping to cut waste while making school lunches tastier, dieticians sought help on planning next fall's menu from a panel of experts — seven elementary school children.

Armed with rating forms, sharpened pencils and their appetites, the youngsters sat in the school system's central kitchen recently, eagerly eyeing a 25-foot-long table laden with fruit juices, coleslaw, potato salad, vanilla pudding, sandwiches, plate lunches and their favorite — pizza.

Meatloaf No. 5 drew an "ugh" and the green beans were described as "icky," while Salisbury steak and pizza-burgers drew raves. "They were not very happy with the barbecue beef," said Mary Filko, director of the schools' kitchens. "So I don't think I'll use that one at all."

The youngsters' opinions will help Mrs. Filko decide which bids from food contractors to accept.

A few years ago, she said, the low bidder on the pizza concession came in about a penny a slice below the competition. That penny represented big money, because the system serves pizza as often as once a week.

But Mrs. Filko was not sure the children would like the less expensive pizza, so she arranged a pizza eating contest among some youngsters. They refused to eat the less expensive variety, and the company offering the higher-priced pizza got the contract.

She also hopes the taste tests will reduce "plate waste," a polite term for the mounds of food that children refuse to eat and must be thrown away each day.

The final ratings showed the youngsters preferred the pizza served last year to that provided by any of the competitors seeking a contract with the schools this year.

They turned thumbs down on last year's orange juice, saying it was too watery.

The experiment could rebound on some of the testers, however. Scott Harter said he liked nearly everything he sampled at the test, even though his mother said he often grumped about the fare last year.

"You won't be able to complain next year," she told him.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband has three brothers and one sister. He also has an 81-year-old mother who has been a widow for 15 years. She owns her own home, has money in the bank and gets a substantial pension. For the last four years she has been unable to live alone because she has a heart problem, so she has been spending one month at the home of each of her children.

She has never offered to pay anyone for her keep, so her daughter told her (a year ago) to get some money up or she couldn't stay with her. My mother-in-law refused this request, stating that she had taken care of her daughter when she was young, and now it was her daughter's turn to do for her.

Well, my mother-in-law hasn't been to her daughter's home for the last year. Now we sisters-in-law are getting disgusted. Whose place is it to take care of this woman? The daughter's or the daughters-in-law?

DISGUSTED IN ATLANTIC CITY

DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, the daughter "owes" her mother more than the daughters-in-law owe her, but it's not uncommon to find many daughters-in-law who do more for their mothers-in-law than their own daughters do.

DEAR ABBY: I hope Carl in Murrysville doesn't claim that his doggerel about Betty Jones ("No hits, no runs, no errors") is original. I heard a version of it in 1925 at the Old Howard, a renowned burlesque theatre in Boston. It went like this:

"Here lie the bones
Of Mary McGinnity
For twelve long years
She kept her virginity
And that's the record
In this vicinity."

BEN IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will select this letter for publication because it contains an important safety message.

Yesterday I was the first to arrive at the scene of an accident after a 4-year-old boy had been hit by a car.

No one knew where the child had come from. A few minutes later, several people walked across the highway from a picnic area to see what all the excitement was about. A man collapsed and a young woman became hysterical when they recognized the child. He was their son, who only moments before had been left "sleeping" on the back seat of their car.

I had to tell these grief-stricken parents that it was too late for a doctor.

Many people left the scene muttering, "I have learned a good lesson."

As the father of two young children, I learned one, too: Don't ever leave children unattended (sleeping or awake) in an automobile.

STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: Thanks for a very important "lesson."

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please tell me if Efudex is the same thing as 5-fluorouracil? I am using this salve on my face and hands to remove those spots that make skin cancer.

DEAR READER — Yes, Efudex is the trade name for a salve containing 5-fluorouracil. It is very useful in removing those spots on the skin that are caused by the sun which some people call solar keratosis. They also remove superficial basal cell cancers of the skin.

I would like to point out that this salve has to be used under a doctor's direction and is a prescription item. It is an interesting medicine as it seems to affect primarily abnormal cells. If you have cells on your skin that look perfectly normal to the naked eye but already have some changes, the salve will cause these cells to flare, turn red and eventually, in the course of treatment, they will be sluffed off. This is not supposed to happen to normal cells when the salve is used properly.

Skin cancers are one of the most common forms of cancer. Fortunately, the type that follow from sun exposure (which are the most common form of skin cancers) do not progress rapidly. Nevertheless, it's important to detect them early and treat them properly to avoid disfigurement at the time that they are removed. The earlier they are treated and the smaller they are when they're treated the better will be the results.

People can help protect themselves from skin cancer by taking good care of their skin. This means the proper use of solar screen and proper precautions on exposure to sunlight. I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer, to give you more information about this. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I wonder which is more effective in treatment of sinusitis, injection of an antibiotic or medication by mouth? If there is a difference any information would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — Some antibiotics are poorly absorbed and these must be given by injection. The goal, whether the medication is given by mouth or injection, is to increase the blood level high enough to effectively eliminate the bacterial growth. To illustrate the point, a number of years ago penicillin was given effectively only by injection as it was not absorbed in sufficient amounts when taken by mouth. Concentrated penicillin tablets have been developed which are adequately effective in many circumstances.

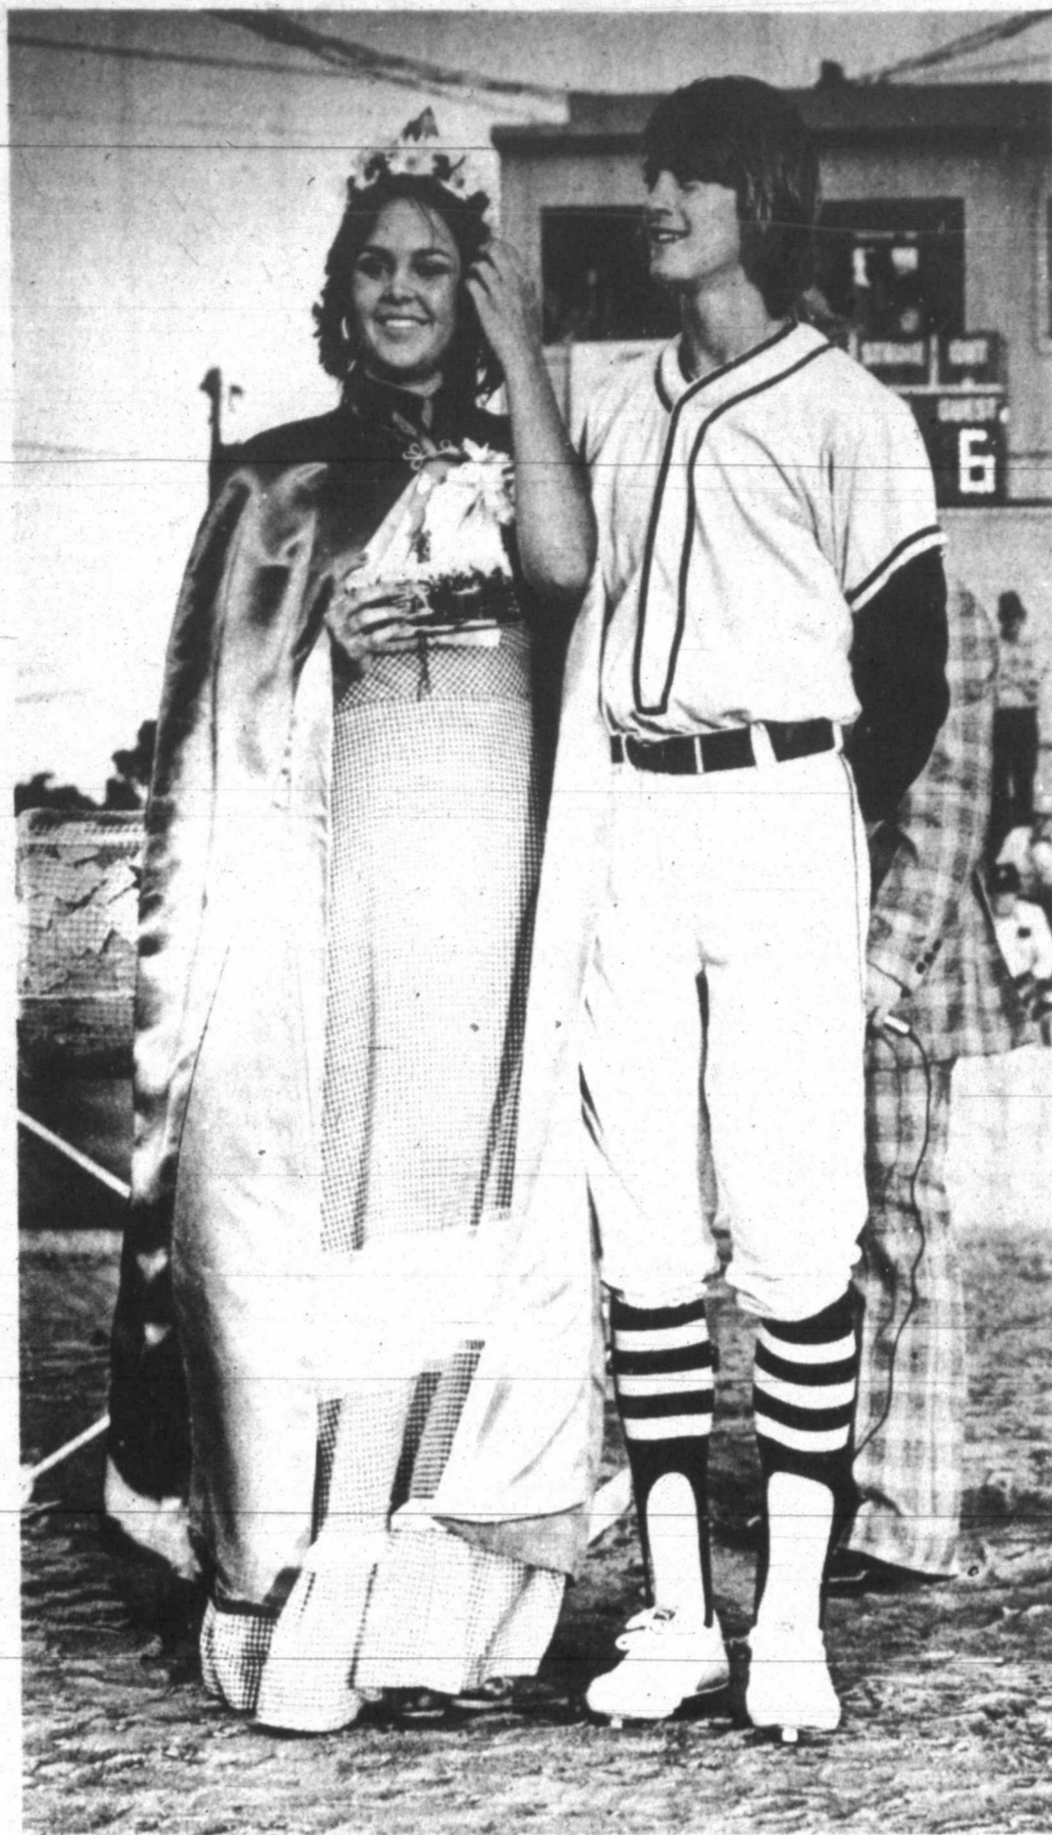

The choice of the antibiotic and whether it is to be given by injection or mouth depends almost entirely on what kind of organism is causing an infection. Some organisms are sensitive to one antibiotic but not sensitive to another. In difficult cases doctors may need to run sensitivity tests by actually growing the bacteria that's causing the infection, whether it's in the sinus or somewhere else. The next step is finding out which antibiotics, and in what concentrations, are effective in eliminating the infection.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — This is my first letter to you but I never miss reading the Pointers. I would like to know how to clean the burned burners on my gas stove. They are black but need a good cleaning. — MRS. G.S.D.

DEAR MRS. G.S.D. — I presume you mean the plates around the burners on your gas stove. If they are black enamel a soap-filled steel wool pad should remove the burns. Thorough and frequent washing with soap and water should keep them in good shape. Never wash them while they are hot. If they are cast iron you might remove them and boil in three-fourths cup of washing soda and water in an enamel pan. Then rinse and dry. If the burns go through the finish on such burner plates there is not much you can do. — POLLY

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Museum of Science and Industry celebrated its 45th birthday in 1978.

The museum, founded by philanthropist Julius Rosenwald, opened in 1933, and it still occupies the reconstructed Palace of Fine Arts from the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition.

The museum was visited by some 300,000 people its first year and currently draws about four million visitors a year.

Equality for separated family

Historically, there have been few options open to divorced or separated parents. Usually, the child or children lived with the mother; in rare cases, the father had custody.

Frequently, battles would rage with regard to child support; court orders would be ignored; visitation privileges would be abused or wrongly refused. To make things worse, there just didn't seem to be any way of avoiding all of this unpleasantness and confusion.

Now, there is a viable alternative to traditional custody with all its problems, which in the past few years has become increasingly more popular. That is, shared custody, a situation which Miriam Galper describes in depth in her book, Co-Parenting: A Source Book for the Separated or Divorced Family. (Running Press, $8.95).

Ms. Galper, a social worker for over fifteen years, is eminently well-suited to write such a book. Since she herself is a divorced parent, she has had to cope with the problems that arise with regard to custody, has stumbled along the very same path as so many other people.

It is what she distilled from her own experiences, as well as what she learned from other families in a similar situation (the children as well as the parents provided important insights, somewhat to her surprise), that she has collected and unified into this one slender volume.

Co-parenting, or shared custody, is, according to Ms. Galper, a situation whereby both parents share equal responsibility for their child or children even though they themselves live apart. This prevents children and parents from losing touch with each other, and allows children to share with each parent a life and a world from which they might well have been excluded under an ordinary custody arrangement.

It is so easy for people who do not live together to become strangers. Co-parenting aims at preventing just that, by making it possible for the child or children to live with each parent at different times: alternating weeks, months, or even years, in cases where parents live too far apart to permit a more frequent exchange of households.

Ms. Galper recommends that everything, all the rules and arrangements, be worked out in advance, and written out formally as a contract. In cases where parents are hostile, a third party can act as a go-between. What each parent will be responsible for financially should be clearly set out, along with a schedule of who will have the child or children, when.

It is always best to explain the arrangements to the child in depth. Ms. Galper asserts, so that he or she will not feel either rejected or afraid. If the parents get along well enough, they can do this together. Otherwise, each should explain the situation for him or herself.

Children need to identify positively with both parents, not be pushed into situations in which they are forced to express loyalty to one parent over another, explains Ms. Galper. The parents' first consideration should always be the child and the effect the separation or divorce is likely to have on him or her.

With co-parenting, children and parents may well get to know each other more intimately than they would otherwise. This would be particularly true, of course, with regard to the relationship between father and children, which is often far too limited within the confines of the ordinary family situation.

The amazing and exciting thing about co-parenting is when the parents begin to discover how much they have grown in the process; that, in fact, it is as good for them as it is for their children. For those who are ready, as Ms. Galper herself was, the responsibilities of co-parenting may well prove their own reward!

Officials change mind about livestock charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has changed its mind about requiring livestock markets to charge for their services on a per-head basis rather than on a percentage of the selling price of cattle and other animals, a practice that can be lucrative when livestock prices are high as they now are.

On March 31, the department announced that it was considering a proposal which would require all markets to charge per-head fees for handling farmers' livestock sales. Recently, however, USDA decided to support a plan in Congress that would allow markets to continue charging fees based on the value of livestock.

Rep. R. H. Thornton Jr., D-Ark., earlier sponsored a bill which would have excluded all but the largest auction markets from USDA regulation of rates charged for selling livestock.

In a letter to Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said on March 14 that the department opposed Thornton's bill and mentioned that USDA soon would be proposing administrative changes affecting livestock markets.

Bergland said that Thornton's bill would limit USDA regulatory authority to "only 103 of the 1,980 stockyards now regulated" but did agree with an overall objective of the legislation to reduce federal regulation "if the economic position of the livestock producers is not jeopardized" or affected adversely.

The March 31 proposal did include provisions that would reduce federal regulation of selling rates charged by public markets, including permission for them to change their selling charges after a 30-day public notice, subject to "valid complaints" from the public and a USDA review if complaints were received.

Farm roundup

Copies of Bergland's letter to Foley and subsequent correspondence on the matter were made available by his office at the request of a reporter.

Bergland on June 7 sent identical letters to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, president of the Senate in which he proposed amending the Packers and Stockyards Act so that marketing charges on a percentage basis could continue.

Bergland said that "the judicial officer of the department has held that such tariffs (sales charges) are inherently discriminatory since different rates are charged for the same services" and that the law as it stands requires charges on a per-head basis.

However, the draft bill sent to Congress in his June 7 letter would amend the law "so that such tariffs would not be prohibited as unreasonable or unlawfully discriminatory merely because of the fact that they are based on percentages of the gross sales prices of livestock."

In an impact statement sent Congress along with Bergland's letter, USDA said that in 1976 firms operating at affected stockyards handled 60.2 million cattle and calves, 32.3 million hogs and 5.1 million sheep and goats valued at more than $14.3 billion.

At that time — June 30, 1976 — there were 2,536 firms operating at stockyards selling livestock consigned by producers. Currently, it said, there are almost 900 commission firms which have selling charges based on the value of livestock handled.

For example, choice feeder steers weighing about 450 pounds sold in Kansas City last December for $197.28 and — using value-based rates ranging from 3 percent to 5 percent — were marketed for fees of $5.92 to $9.86 per head.

But cattle prices have risen since then and in March the same steers were selling for an average of $259.38 each, causing the value-based marketing charges to range from $7.78 to $12.96 per head, the report said.

Although the report did not make a prediction, it raised the question of rising value-based fees if higher livestock prices continue the rest of this year.

"This increase would amount to approximately $36,572,622 or an average of approximately $40,000 per market per year based on their present rate schedules," the report said.

On June 12, five days after Bergland sent his legislative proposal to Capitol Hill, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review a pair of decisions by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the rate system employed by USDA is valid.

On June 13, the day after the Supreme Court upheld the USDA's right to regulate livestock marketing fees they way it wanted, Assistant Secretary P. R. (Bobby) Smith, acting on behalf of Bergland, wrote Foley that USDA "has no objection" to Thornton's amendment.

THE MOST POPULAR fashion in some quarters of violence-torn Italy is not a Pucci original. Instead, it is the bulletproof vest this man is modeling. As a result of an epidemic of kidnappings and shootings, Italians are paying as much as $230 for such vests. Cars being grabbed before prices soar

By DONALD WOUTAT Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — New-car buyers have turned ravenous in the face of a "nibble, nibble" pricing policy by U.S. automakers, but analysts are at odds over whether the surge is a feast for the industry or a harbinger of hard times to come.

Six months ago, the nation's bellweather industry had everyone nervous as it struggled through an unexpected winter-long slump. But on "some magic day in March," as one analyst put it, auto sales took off.

Americans bought more cars in May than in any month in history, and two straight 10-day sales records have been set so far in June. Auto sales are running at a remarkable 12 million-plus annual rate.

Everybody agrees it cannot last, and that some motorists are grabbing up new cars to beat future price increases. But there is less agreement on what that means for sales next fall or in 1979.

Richard Haydon, auto analyst for the Goldman Sachs investment firm, says it is no coincidence that sales started to soar after U.S. automakers decided to institute periodic small price increases rather than one big boost with the introduction of new models in the fall.

"The frequency of the increases reinforces in the consumer's mind that today's prices will be lower than tomorrow's prices," Haydon said. "I believe there has been some pre-buying. It's going to have an adverse effect, but it's impossible to quantify."

Other analysts note that price-conscious consumers buying cars late in the model year to avoid fall price increases is not new.

"The question is whether more people are pre-buying this year, causing an unseasonal bulge in sales that must be paid back later. The answer is not known," says a Ford Motor Co. analyst who asked anonymity.

The Ford analyst is even more optimistic. He argues that the sales figures closely correspond to increases in non-farm employment and the Gross National Product more than a year ago and that the latest buying spurge has merely canceled out the winter losses.

News watch

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Isabel Peron and about 35 members of her administration will be returned to their homes under house arrest by July 15, the newspaper La Nacion reports.

The report said the military government would take the action in an attempt to offset some of the criticism of its violations of human rights.

Mrs. Peron, 47, and leading members of her administration were arrested on charges of corruption after her overthrow in March 1976. She is kept in a bungalow at a naval base 250 miles south of Buenos Aires, and the others are in jail.

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein's government has approved a death sentence in absentia against two West Bank Arabs who sold real estate there to Israelis.

A government announcement said Eid Shihadeh Eid and Assad Ibrahim Faraj would be hanged if caught. Israel captured the West Bank of the Jordan River in the 1967 war, and Hussein's government enacted a law ordering the death penalty for Arabs there who sell property to Israelis.

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadian residents this week are celebrating the 111th anniversary of the British North American Act, which gave Canada dominion status.

Festivities are planned in more than 1,000 communities across the country, financed by $4.5 million in government grants plus funds from municipal and provincial governments. The theme for the week is "Canada, it's you and me."

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Hilton Hotel chain has announced it will take over management of the 1,200-room Fontainebleau Hotel, which will undergo a $13 million refurbishment to begin immediately.

Hilton president Barron Hilton said Sunday the beachfront resort, the largest luxury hotel on Miami Beach, would be renamed the Fontainebleau Hilton.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A satellite that will provide detailed surveys of nearly all the world's oceans every 36 hours is to be launched tonight from Vandenberg Air Force Base.

Alan Wood, spokesman for Jet Propulsion Laboratory, described the $95-million Seasat A as a new breed of satellite, the first to take measurements exclusively with remote microwave sensors.

Wood said the experimental project, funded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will measure winds, currents, temperatures, water vapor in the air, and ice in the water and on the coasts of Greenland, Canada and Alaska.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — If the readers of The Sacramento Union had their way, the forced economies of Proposition 13 would come first out of welfare and last out of law enforcement.

The newspaper said in a poll published Sunday that 1,367 readers completed questionnaires listing their funding priorities for 18 local programs.

Recommended for the biggest budget cuts after welfare were new construction and management personnel. And recommended for the least cutting, after law enforcement, were fire protection and public schools.

Gambling stocks are big market noise

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The big noise in the market these days is coming from gambling stocks, which even conservative investors seem to be saying are the only sure things invented since loaded dice.

Class A shares of Resorts International, operator of an Atlantic City, N.J., casino, have doubled in the past two weeks, and now sell for more than $80, or 80 times their price of just a few years ago.

Bally Manufacturing, which plans to equip the Atlantic City casinos, has more than doubled in 1978, and Atlantic City Electric, which keeps the lights burning, has gained more than 20 percent in the same time.

But while the stocks associated with Atlantic City gambling are soaring like Fourth of July rockets, one of the major purveyors of market information reminds us that other stocks also can crackle.

Standard & Poor's, the old standby, a service that never can be accused of sounding shrill, has come up with a list of more than 100 stocks that should show a 1978 profit gain of at least 20 percent.

While 20 percent would be more than double the expectations for corporate profits in general, more than one-third of the companies are expected to lift earnings at least 30 percent. About 20 percent might boost earnings 40 percent, and several should do even better.

Business Mirror

Much better, in fact. Acme-Cleveland, a machine tool manufacturer, is expected by S&P to report a gain for the year of about 106 percent. Prime Computer is seen boosting earnings 99 percent over those of 1977.

S&P doesn't suggest that you run out and buy stocks such as those it has on the list, but it does recommend them for your study. Some of them, it observes, still have lower than average price-earnings ratios.

P-E ratios, as you might need to be reminded, are the number of times earnings at which shares are selling, and based on estimated 1978 earnings, the P-E for the S&P 500 index is now 8.3.

However, more than one-half the issues S&P believes will have earnings gains of at least 20 percent are selling for less than that ratio. In other words, their potential conceivably may not be appreciated.

Whittaker Corp., for example, is believed heading for an earnings gain of 71 percent, based on earnings per share rising from $1.05 to $1.80 for the year ending Oct. 31. But it currently has a P-E ratio of 7.8.

Among the larger earnings

gainers, it lists Arndahl Corp., Bally Manufacturing, Boeing Co., Ennis Business Forms, Falcon Seaboard, GCA Corp., Gardner-Denver, Itek Corp.,

Pueblo International, Rapid-American, Southeast Banking, Standard Oil (Ohio), Storage Technology and United Inns.

Some of these stocks already have had sizable runups.

Anyone seeking the entire list might find it at a nearby brokerage house. If you are in an expansive mood, you can subscribe for $34.50 a quarter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For a person who is essentially optimistic you may be leaning more toward self-doubts today. Fortunately, praise will lift your spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial conditions are a mixed bag today. If you're not careful, your outlays will exceed what you take in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An overly assertive associate may try to force opinions on you today. Stand up for that which you know in your heart is right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You can be of greater help to a friend with a problem today by showing him how to solve it himself. If you resolve it, he'll learn nothing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes, doing business with friends, we don't always get the best deal. This could happen to you today because you don't want to hurt a pal's feelings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In some cases a straight line is not the shortest distance between two points. Work through intermediaries today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't turn a deaf ear to sound advice today just because it comes from a person who is not one of your favorite people.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In business matters, today, you'd be wise to work with the resources of others instead of yours alone. Be sure everyone antes up equally.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Proceed with your plans, rather than debating them prematurely with another. As events unwind themselves they'll prove you right.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll enjoy being helpful today as long as you don't feel it's demanded of you. In those instances, you're apt to back off.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For business purposes or other personal reasons, you may be obliged to cater to people you're not overly fond of today. Don't lay it on too heavily.

Millions celebrate in streets Argentina's overtime goals win World Cup

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — It was Mardi Gras, Oktoberfest and New Year's Eve all wrapped into one as Argentina began a four-year reign today as the world's soccer champions.

The country's 25 million soccer fans poured out the streets and cheered their hearts out after the team took the final match and the World Cup title in a drama-packed 3-1 overtime victory over Holland.

The win meant more to Argentina than just a sports title. Through four years of effort, $700 million in stadium investments, and a vibrant young team, Argentina changed part of its image abroad not only as a soccer power but as a developing nation.

It took the Argentines seven games to reach the final of the month-long tournament. And the last match, played over the roar of 77,000 spectators, was fittingly the most dramatic.

At the end of a championship marked by defensive play and few individual stars of the magnitude of Pele or Johann Cruyff, the Argentines squared off against the goal-making machine of Holland.

The Dutch had scored more goals than any other team and had a roster that included eight veterans from their luckless 1974 Cup final against West Germany.

But Argentina came through with the goals when they counted and finally provided a hero to a tournament which had none.

His name was Mario Kempes, a husky 23-year-old with a shaggy black mane of hair, whose gift is to score with his left foot.

Kempes booted in two of Argentina's three goals.

His technique: to slither through the defense on the front edge of the goal area and force in cannonball shots.

It took the goalies three minutes to get their first try, Kempes comes back for more, scooping up the ball for a second attempt.

Kempes gave Argentina the lead in the first half when his low kick got past Dutch goalkeeper Jan Janbloed.

The Dutch tied it with only nine minutes remaining in regulation time when substitute Dirk Nanninga beat Argentine keeper Ubaldo Fillol.

Kempes scored the game-winner for Argentina mid-way through the 30-minute overtime period and Daniel Bertoni added the clincher late in the required overtime session.

Cesar Luis Menotti, the Argentine coach who rebuilt a team which was known as the "Animals" for their rough play in the 60s, would not give all the credit to Kempes.

"Look," he said to a packed news conference after the 120-minute game. "This was a team performance. Argentina is a team, not individuals. We have no prima donnas. We play for each other."

"Today we showed that we could win the World Cup by being a team. That is what soccer is all about."

Lopez feels heat of media pressure

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Still smiling, rookie Nancy Lopez turned to her caddie on the 18th green and whispered: "At least we got a standing ovation. That makes it worthwhile."

Rangers nail down first

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) —

The Texas Rangers' high-paid collection of players finally did what owner Brad Corbett has been longing for them to do — take over first place in the American League West.

Texas batted around in the fifth inning Sunday night, exploding for six runs and a 7-0 trouncing of California. It completed a sweep of the four-game series with the Angels and moved the Rangers into first place, a half-game ahead of Kansas City.

"Have we made our move? I hope it's the start of it," Ranger manager Billy Hunter said. "It's nice to be in first place. More important, I want to be there when it's all over. But by more than half a game. We're there. Now we want to stay there."

It was Texas' sixth straight victory and eighth win in the past nine outings. It was also its third shutout of the series, after Ranger pitchers had picked up only one in their previous 65 games this season.

"We ran into California when they were struggling, just like our hitters were struggling a couple of weeks ago," Hunter said. He was speaking of a stretch when opposing pitchers had no-hitters going into the sixth against his team three times in one week.

Corbett shelled out plenty of cash to acquire such hitters as Bobby Bonds, Richie Zisk and Al Oliver in the past year to shore up the Texas hitting attack and bring a pennant to Ranger fans this season.

He also acquired pitchers such as Ferguson Jenkins, Jon Matlack, Doc Medich and Dock Ellis toward the same aim.

Medich, 23, scattered seven hits and retired 14 in a row in the latter stages in Sunday's victory, picking up his first

Astros are hurting

SAN DIEGO (AP) — manager Bill Virdon unofficially disqualified his Houston club from the National League West pennant race after his squad dropped a double-header to the San Diego Padres.

"Right now we're far from contenders," said Virdon following Sunday's doubleheader, which the Padres won by scores of 6-1 and 7-4. "We'll have to start doing a much better job of fielding, hitting and pitching before we could even be considered close to a contending ballclub."

The Padres have now won five straight games, their longest winning streak of the season, following their sweep of four games from the Astros. San Diego is now two full games ahead of Houston in the NL West.

Dave Winfield and Oscar Gamble combined to drive in seven runs in the doubleheader while Tucker Ashford chipped in two hits and three more RBI.

In the opener, left-hander Bob Shirley struck out eight and walked two while going the distance to pick up the win and improve his record to 4-9 with a four-hitter on his 24th birthday.

"Shirley had an outstanding fastball," said San Diego Manager Roger Craig. "He was in complete charge."

Wimbledon opens

LONDON (AP) — Bjorn Borg, the ice cool Swede who defends his Wimbledon title for the second time this year, gives the impression of being entirely free from emotion, but he says it's not true.

On court, Borg — who takes on American Vic Amaya in the opening match of the 1978 championships today — gives no clue to his feelings.

Yet Borg, only 22 and aiming to become the first man in 42 years to win three consecutive Wimbledon titles, says he is a perfectly normal guy off the

Lietzke grabs Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke has some adjusting to do, some goals to set.

"This was a big, big stepping stone in my career," Lietzke said Sunday after he'd hung on with a 2-over-par 73 to score a 1-stroke victory in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I'm going to have to do some mental adjusting. I've never been a goal-oriented person. After winning those tournaments last year, I kind of put it on cruise. I've gone for more than a year without a goal in mind."

during the final round but drifted back with his bogey-par-bogey-bogey string in the stretch run and let rookie Pat McGowan come on with a last-hole birdie and take second alone at 284. McGowan had a closing 72.

Trevino and Ben Crenshaw were next at 285, each missing a medium-range birdie putt on the last hole. Trevino matched par 71 over the last round while Crenshaw shot 72.

Bridge-builders amidst a nation of islands

By Brandt Ayers
(Last of a Series)

CAPE TOWN (NEA) — There are bridge-builders at work in this nation of islands who could possibly unite many elements of the white, black, brown and Indian people into a majority coalition of immense political force.

It is necessary to be extremely guarded in writing publicly of these developments because, among other reasons, multiracial political organizations are illegal under South African law. However, these new political developments are being undertaken by influential, pragmatic people with a tough-minded sense of power politics in their country. They are regarded seriously by American officials here.

This very recent development alone would seem to merit a shift in American thinking away from economically punitive policies and toward one of positive, though deft political support of constructive action when it becomes visible.

Beating South Africa with an economic stick seems to be a futile exercise anyway.

With only 17 per cent of the total foreign investment, the United States doesn't have sufficient economic leverage. We could make a moral statement by stopping all investment but such action would be easily absorbed by the South African economy at a cost of more black unemployment.

South African blacks would be asked to suffer in order to make Americans feel all warm and righteous inside. A policy of moral self-gratification is not very admirable in a great power.

To send a shudder through this nation's economy which would cause an urgent reappraisal on the part of government and business leaders would require a united effort of the major industrial nations.

A trade embargo that would displace more than a million workers, hurting blacks savagely but also stunning the government and complacent business leaders.

However, that is a far-fetched political and economic possibility. It would require the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan to march in lock-step.

Western unity and resolve currently are too feeble to force change from the outside and the efficient and ubiquitous security forces are too strong to allow a spontaneous revolution from inside Soweto and other urban townships.

In the near-term (five, maybe 10 years), the best real-world hope for orderly change comes from the new internal political developments rising from the ideological center — although the difficulties cannot be underestimated.

One element of this bridge-building effort has already become visible. It centers on the charismatic but touchy personality of Chief Gatscha Buthelezi, leader of the four million Zulus who regard him almost as a God-King.

During a fascinating three-hour dinner with Chief Buthelezi, we discussed the adhesive power of the coalition he has made with the Coloured (mixed-blood) Labour Party and the Indian political leadership, and his limited success in broadening his base to include urban blacks.

The other bridge-builder is a new player on the political scene, Colin Eglin, leader of the new opposition party, the Progressive Federal Party. He is no flighty white liberal, interested only in scoring debating points off the ruling Nationalists in Parliament.

Over breakfast his conversation was shrewd and tough. American officials here confirm my impression of a strong, hard-working, canny practitioner of Chicago-style power politics, a South African Richard Daley.

Both are hard for the government to strike against because of their legitimacy within the system.

Buthelezi, a seeming bulwark of apartheid as leader of the KwaZulu Homeland, and Eglin as recognized leader of the legal parliamentary opposition.

But each seems intent to use his base within the system to fight against it. Within the next few months and years I can see these two men engaged with others in intense behind-the-scenes discussions to agree on a common agenda with which they can emerge publicly as a united front.

The bridge may not meet in the middle, or it may collapse because of weakness at the ethnic seams of so broad and diverse a coalition.

But if it holds, it would be immensely significant. The coalition could speak with the voice of nearly 20 million South Africans versus the nearly three million Afrikaners who are the Nationalists' base. American and Western policy toward South Africa has largely been a negative reaction to the policies of the ruling white tribe, the Afrikaners and their Nationalist Party.

There was no credible opposition, representing a majority of South Africans, to which we could respond. Now, a powerful and legitimate opposition is trying to be born there.

United States policy should be to nurture it without affectionately smothering it. We should avoid either undercutting its leaders or making them appear at home to be Jimmy Carter's little boys.

Instead, our policy-makers should listen with respect to the bridge-builders and respond to their advice whenever possible and, thus, increase their power and influence internally.

We should be ready to oppose government attempts to smash the emerging political structure while strengthening it where we can. It represents the one, shaky bridge to safety over a gulf of blood and fury. (END OF SERIES)

Monaco marriage one of contrast

PARIS (AP) — She is 21. He is 38. She is of straitlaced Catholic upbringing. He is a playboy. She is a princess of Europe's oldest dynasty. He is a commoner.

Can Princess Caroline of Monaco find happiness with Philippe Junot of the Paris society circuit?

Her parents, by all accounts, are doubtful. It is common knowledge that there was quite a row behind the heavy oaken doors of the Monaco royal palace over Caroline's choice. Her father Prince Rainier III and mother Princess Grace, the former movie star Grace Kelly, wished she would pick someone closer to her age and less flamboyant of reputation.

But Caroline, a pretty young woman with a mind of her own, was insistent. And in ceremonies Wednesday and Thursday in the tiny principality tucked into France's Mediterranean coast, Princess Caroline Louise Marguerite Grimaldi will take an additional name: Junot.

"It is not chic," declared the French newspaper Le Matin, "but what a triumph for democracy." Junot, an international financier and a ruggedly handsome man in the Gallic manner, has bought her a ring with a giant sapphire. But that is as far as extravagance goes in this wedding.

Perhaps reflecting the family's reluctance over the marriage, the ceremonies will be low-keyed compared with the sumptuous wedding of Rainier to Grace Kelly in April 1956.

The palace has even banned aircraft overflights during the ceremonies to prevent photographers from snapping the proceedings from the air.

But the wedding tumult of 26 years ago took its toll on Princess Grace's nerves, and that is one reason the princely couple, who also have a younger son, Albert, and daughter, Stephanie, decided to keep their elder daughter's affair at a low profile.

But the Monaco citizenry was disgruntled. A big wedding meant lots of fun and a boost in tourism, the principality's main source of income. They protested, and Rainier met them halfway, agreeing to a festive reception for his 4,500 citizens and a luncheon for 300 guests.

Krueger blasts Tower

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Bob Krueger, Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, said Saturday that all Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, knows about the cattle industry is what Tower has read.

"John Tower's 17 years in the Senate won't lift a forkful of hay on a Texas cattle ranch," said Krueger in a speech to the Texas Independent Cattlemen's Association.

"As a legislator and former college professor, I have studied the problems involved with ranching," Krueger said. "As a Brangus owner, I have lived through and understand the economic hardship placed on Texas cattle ranchers during this decade. As solely a college professor, John Tower has only read about them."

Krueger said he owns a Brangus ranch near Crockett in Houston County and was one of the first 40 inductees into the American Cattle Breeders' Hall of Fame in Christoval.

"If cattlemen are to get a fair break on this beef import issue, they are going to need a voice in the Senate that can appeal to senators from every part of the country," Krueger said.

Market reacts to high interest rates

NEW YORK (AP) — Only a few weeks ago, higher interest rates were being greeted with unusual enthusiasm on Wall Street.

But traditional fears of tight credit are resurfacing as stock prices have begun to slip.

Rising interest rates traditionally have led to falling stock and bond prices as investors attempt to increase yields on their securities. But this spring, stock prices were rising as interest rates climbed.

The higher rates were said to be good news because they would help check inflation. The rising cost of money in the short-run would be outweighed by the slowdown in cost-of-living gains, the optimists said.

"Now you throw the same news out and the market falls apart," commented Larry Wachtel at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

The interest-rate rise was attributable partly to Federal Reserve action. The Fed, fearful that the nation's money supply during the past 15 months has grown faster than targeted, has been tightening credit to fight inflation.

According to David Jones at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. Inc., that policy would continue. In the past week, the Fed let the key target rate on "Federal funds," the name for loans among banks, move up one-quarter point to 7 1/4 percent.

"They might wait a week or two before considering pushing it up to 8 percent. They're going to let the dust settle a bit," he said.

In addition, the spread between the discount rate — the Fed's charge on short-term "emergency" loans to member banks — and the Federal funds rate has widened to 3/4 percent.

"At 7 percent, loans at the 'discount window' are mushrooming. The Fed has become a cheap source of funds, and the Fed doesn't like this," said Jones.

A 3/4-point spread "has been a trigger point," and the Fed is likely to consider "another firming move" to boost borrowing costs, he said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which gained nearly 120 points between February and mid-June, finished this week at 823.02, down 13.95. The drop came after a 22.26-point decline the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index was off 90, at 53.90 and the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 2.89 to 147.27.

Big Board volume averaged 27.64 million shares a day, against 30.89 million the week before.

"We've had a lot of damage done in the past week and a half in the market," said Charles Jensen at Merkin & Co. "Each time the stock market went up in the face of higher interest rates there was an attempt to rationalize the move as an answer to actions against inflation. That rationale in the past hardly ever worked, and now we're back where we should be."

His business is grave one

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "This just might be the key that unlocks my future," Michael Chellel said, gravely. Any rising actor needs a break, but, heavens, who would have guessed this?

He calls his brainstorm Michael's Memory Map. He sells it on the streets of Hollywood for $5 a copy, and he can't get copies printed fast enough to keep up with the demand.

It is a map locating the graves of movie stars.

Michael's Memory Map, then, is not only more innovative than the usual maps peddled to tourists, which locate celebrities' homes, his is also less likely to become outdated.

"I was as surprised as anyone to find out that people are interested in where movie stars are buried," he said. "When I discovered it, the idea for the map was a natural."

"I did it just to earn money to pay my bills, but as a result, people are noticing me. I've been invited on talk shows. Just a simple map, but it could be the break I've needed."

Well, not so simple. The map is divided into diagrams of six cemeteries. A seventh section rounds up stars in less popular graveyards. Numbers on the diagrams pinpoint the graves, like so: 17 Rudolph Valentino. Enter Cathedral Mausoleum, 22nd left, 3rd right, No. 1205."

As with others who deal in the business of death, Michael pretties up the language. Nowhere does the word "grave" appear on the map, but "final resting place" (FRP).

Perhaps some sharp-eyed tourist can locate these dear departed and experience the adventure and excitement Michael and his friends experienced. A regular treasure hunt.
