Older adults need regular exercises

Exercise is important for all ages, but for older adults it can mean more than just staying in shape. It also can help mitigate disease and prolong life.

"Some 85 percent of older Americans with chronic diseases could benefit from exercise along with proper nutrition," according to Dr. Mary Kinney Bielamowicz, professor and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension at Texas A&M University.

"By increasing muscle strength through exercise, the percent of body fat associated with increase risk of chronic diseases such as diabetes or heart disease can be reduced," she said. "Physical activity greatly enhances the ability of insulin to metabolize glucose."

Also, high blood pressure is often aggravated by increased fat and inactivity, she said. Exercise plus weight loss increase the high-density lipoprotein or good cholesterol, exerting a protective effect against heart disease.

"No single feature of age-related decline can more dramatically alter caloric intake, overall nutrient intake or status, breathing, ambulation, mobility and independence as the decline in muscle mass," Bielamowicz said.

Stenholm asks critics for honest assessment

By Charles Stenholm
U.S. Representative
17th District

Recently my thoughts have returned to Theodore Roosevelt's eloquent comments about the ease with which the critic on the sidelines can condemn the one struggling to make things better. Like Roosevelt's fighter, I figuratively have had my "face marred by the dust, sweat and blood" of political battle, and again like his fighter, I readily acknowledge there have been times when I have come up short. What I would ask of my critics is that they begin by making an honest assessment of what they are demanding.

During the Memorial Day work period I heard repeatedly from constituents who (1) want the deficit reduced; (2) do not want their taxes raised; and (3) do not want to see any spending they prefer (e.g. social security, military bases, law enforcement, Medicare reimbursements, veterans benefits, Meals on Wheels, etc.) reduced by one cent. The combination of the three elements of that demand are so far removed from both political and fiscal reality that I honestly know of no reasonable response.

Some Perot supporters have argued that if I would only follow his deficit reduction plan, all would be well. Once it is pointed out that, among other things, the Perot plan phases in a 50-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax, doubles the tobacco tax, cuts the Medicare program by $120 billion over the next five years (60 percent more than the amount contained in the House Democratic proposal) and Medicaid by nearly $60 billion, and cuts agriculture by $17 billion, their enthusiasm rapidly fades.

The people to whom I make my appeal are not those whose demands are impossible to meet, but rather to those who say (1) we must reduce our deficit; (2) we must cut spending first and significantly but, if there is a guarantee of fairness and deficit reduction, we may raise taxes a reasonable amount; and (3) we must choose spending priorities rather than trying to fund every good idea (and some not-so-good ideas). To them, I say the reconciliation bill was a major step in the right direction.

I never could have voted "aye" on reconciliation had I not been given strong, dependable guarantees that the improvements we made in the President's proposal would be complemented by BTU tax changes and additional spending cuts in the next step of the process. What guarantee did I have that those commitments would be met? The guarantee which comes from conservative and moderate Democrats holding the power to kill unacceptable legislation produced by the conference committee as the bill completes its legislative journey. Naturally, I am gratified that news of these changes is now circulating.

Those folks who have been critical of my strategy are like football fans who think a game is over after the first quarter. The easiest decision for me would have been to "take my ball and go home" before the first quarter ended, just because my team had scored only twice instead of racking up the 42 points I wanted by the end of the game. Instead I decided that I could not make the irresponsible choice of refusing to "play ball," just standing on the sidelines shouting my criticism. Greater deficits, stock and bond market upheavals, complete government gridlock, and the economic stagnancy that would result from a four-year lame duck Presidency could have been part of the price of my irresponsibility.

How have we already scored? Before supporting the reconciliation bill, I worked with my conservative Democratic colleagues to achieve three major changes to the President's package: (1) first-time ever limits on entitlement spending... (2) a hard freeze on all discretionary spending; and (3) a commitment from the White House that the BTU tax would be significantly changed and more spending cuts would be added before the final bill is signed into law. These improvements made the bill worth moving forward.

It is easy to say we want to reduce the deficit. Despite what the critics may think, getting 218 members of the House, 51 Senators and the President to agree on a specific budget that reduces the deficit is much more difficult, and unless you can get that majority support, all the brilliant ideas in the world do no one any good. For example, the Republican alternative which relied entirely on spending cuts received only 138 votes, with nearly one-fourth of the Republicans themselves voting against it. Refusing to accept political reality guarantees that a deficit reduction will be accomplished.

I supported the reconciliation bill not because I believe it is a perfect bill, nor the one I would write if I were "king." But it was a good "first quarter of play" for a bill which could gather majority support, allowing an unprecedented discipline and control over deficit spending, and it is the bill which will move us forward towards greater national economic security. I am proud to have gotten into the legislative battle, succeeding in achieving dramatic improvements to the bill. I have confidence that the bill will continue to be improved before it is finally signed into law.

When it came to the reconciliation bill, I chose to get into the "dusty, sweaty fray" rather than stand on the sideline as a critic. Two weeks after the reconciliation vote, I remain confident that helping to move legislation in a positive direction is always my proper role as representative of the 17th District of Texas.

PUMP UP SAVINGS with a Heat Pump

When the dog days of summer put a bite in your utility bills, it may be time to consider an energy-efficient heat pump. Heat pumps transfer heat to the outside air in summer and draw heat from the outside air in winter. This method of transferring heat is much more efficient and means substantial savings to you.

Athlete's foot warnings given

People who wear a favorite pair of sneakers repeatedly or who use communal showers are candidates for athlete's foot.

But there are ways to minimize the chances of acquiring the disease, according to Dr. Andrea Dominey, a dermatologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston:

¶Wear shoes that allow the feet to "breathe."

¶Apply anti-fungal cream, powder or spray daily if you are prone to athlete's foot.

¶Wear clean hose and cotton socks to reduce perspiration.

¶Avoid wearing the same pair of shoes daily.

¶Completely dry between the toes after swimming or bathing.

¶Wear rubber thongs when using a public shower.

Homes need 'hosing' down

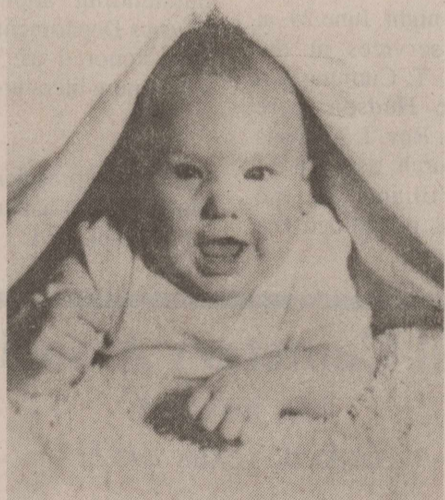

One of the best investments a homeowner can make is to buy a water hose and spend a little time using it around the home.

"Most home shoppers are usually impressed by the artistic and functional features of a house, but it's what's underneath---the foundation---that is far more important," said Dr. Susan Quiring, housing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "If the foundation doesn't receive proper moisture, it can crack, causing the value of the house to drop drastically."

A house with a cracked foundation decreases in value to about two-thirds.

CAPITOL JOURNAL

STEVEN A. CARRIKER
State Senate

It is with a mixture of satisfaction and disappointment that I look back on the 73rd Regular Session of the Texas Legislature. In the Senate, we tackled a large number of tough subjects over the 140 days of the session.

A $70.1 billion two-year budget was passed that holds the line on taxes and makes no major cuts in services. The state's penal code was overhauled, doubling the prison time for violent criminals. The governor has already signed bills revamping products liability laws and making it harder for foreigners to sue in Texas courts.

Among the 53 bills I sponsored which passed were measures to expand the 9-1-1 emergency response system, make more money available for rural loan guarantees, and bring economic growth to the oil patch.

Toll-free local telephone service will now be a reality for many citizens who have been paying long-distance rates to talk to relatives, doctors, churches and friends just a few miles away. S.B. 632 expands toll-free local calling areas to include many of the non-metropolitan communities across the state.

S.B. 405 recreates the Texas Department of Commerce, refocusing its efforts towards helping smaller communities who need assistance in economic development projects. The Office of Rural Affairs will coordinate the department's current efforts to help rural communities. This legislation also doubles the amount of rural business loan guarantees available, without costing more state dollars. In addition, it continues the Texas Enterprise Zone Act and requires annual cost-benefit studies of the impact of the program. This Act provides financial incentives for companies to locate or expand their operations in an economically depressed area.

Renewed growth in the oil patch will be possible under H.B. 1974 and H.B. 1975. Economic incentives in the form of severance tax credits for new field discoveries could bring a net tax gain to the State of almost $40 million. This measure will also deliver additional revenue from currently inactive oil and gas wells returned to beneficial production.

Providing adequate health and human services for Texans is of primary importance. The Outstanding Rural Scholar Program, which I passed in 1989, has been expanded to cover all medically underserved areas of the state, whether urban or rural. Under H.B. 2241, communities sponsor students who plan to become health care professionals. Under the principle of "grow your own", these students can receive loans in exchange for agreeing to return to practice in the sponsoring community.

Five to ten million dollars in additional donations for Texas charities could be raised to support critical health and human service needs under H.B. 903. With passage of this legislation, Texas becomes the 50th state to allow voluntary payroll deductions by state employees for charitable contributions.

Retirees who have relocated to Texas now have protection from other states trying to rob them of their retirement income by assessing a "source tax". S.B. 17 blocks tax claims against retirement income from these other states, most notably California.

Ensuring the survival of our state banking system is the function of S.B. 238. The FDIC had recently begun treating state banks with a different set of rules than federally chartered banks, refusing to guarantee their federal funds accounts. This legislation forces the FDIC to continue guaranteeing these accounts, allowing Texans to keep control of our financial system.

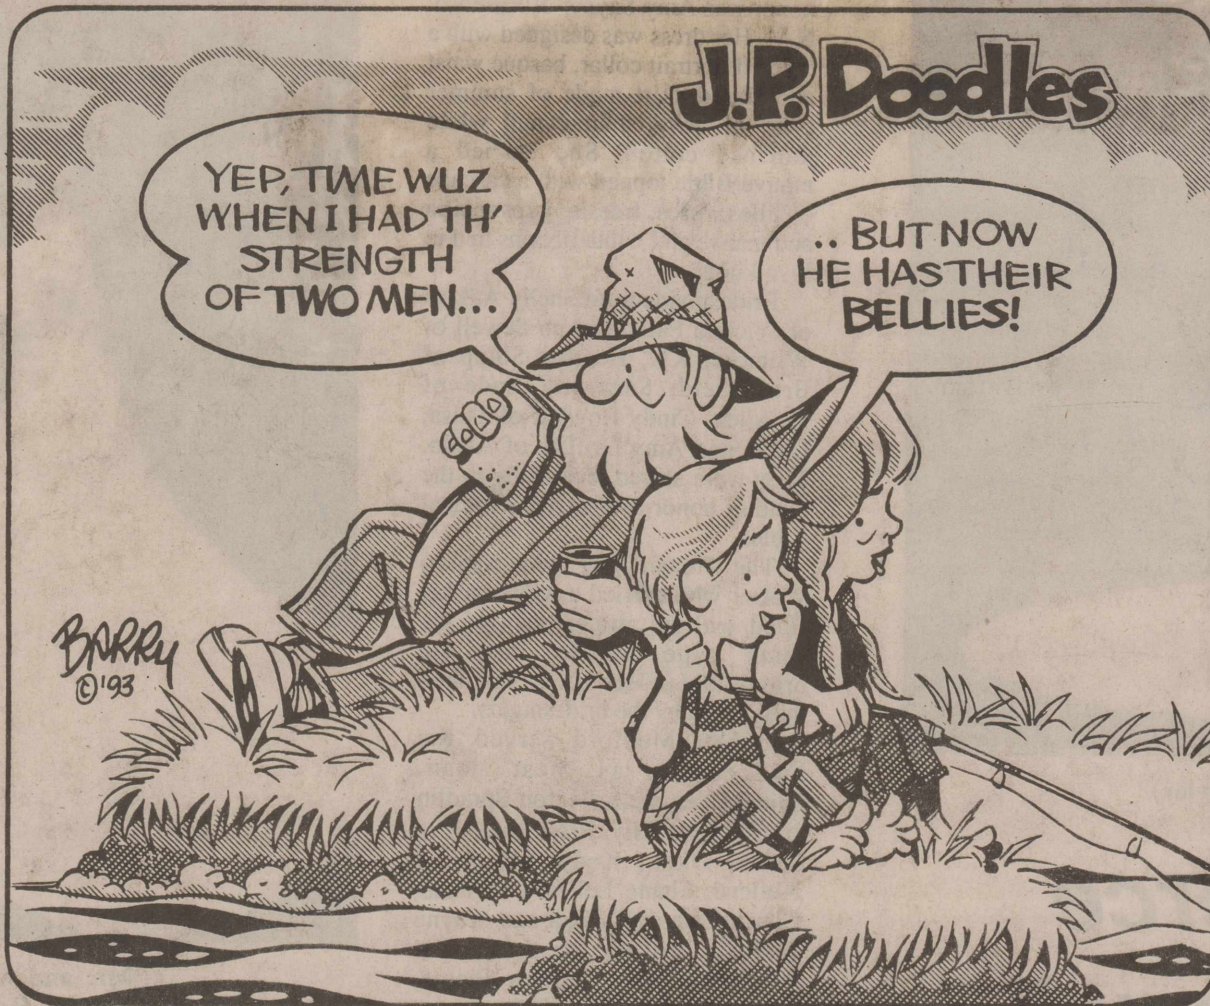

S.B. 1110 builds on the partnership between volunteer and paid firefighters begun two years ago when legislation I sponsored created the Texas Commission on Fire Protection. This bill allows volunteer firefighters to receive limited compensation, benefits and reimbursements. The Commission also provides grants and loans to local fire departments to upgrade equipment and provide training.

If success is measured by how much work was completed, the 73rd Legislature accomplished more in 140 days than any other session in recent memory. The diligence that resulted in the passage of 1500 bills should spare us from the special sessions that have so often been the consequence of unfinished business.

11th Airborne schedules reunion

Veterans of the 11th Airborne Division will celebrate their 50th anniversary Sept. 16-19 with a reunion in Portland, Ore.

Gene Wells of Paint Creek, who served with the 11th Airborne during World War II, said several Haskell County men were members of the famed unit.

Wells said that two Haskell County men were killed in action in the Philippines. Robert Frank Ejem was killed at Luzon and Elvy D. Newsom died at Leyte.

Two others from Haskell County were wounded in action, Kenneth Tanner at Leyte and Wells at Luzon. Others who served in the 11th were Leonard R. Hoppe, D. B. Patterson and Benjamin Frank White, Wells said. "There may have been others," he said.

The 11th Airborne Division was activated in 1943 at Camp Mackall, N. C. Along with the First Cavalry Division and the 37th Infantry Division, it liberated Manila in 1945.

Commanded by Major General Joseph M. Swing, the 11th landed at Batangas, south of Manila, while the 511th Parachute Infantry and the 457th Parachute Field Artillery RCT team dropped by parachute on Tagatay Ridge near Lake Taal on Feb. 3, 1945.

The 11th Airborne gained its nickname "The Angels" from a daring raid behind Japanese lines to liberate 2,147 internees at the Los Banos prison camp, by land, water and parachute. The defending Japanese force was wiped out and the internees who suffered over three years of imprisonment declared that the paratroopers looked like "Angels" descending from Heaven.

After Luzon was secured, the 11th was the first American unit to land in Japan for the surrender and it occupied the country until March 1949 when it moved to Camp

Campbell, Ky. Several units of the division were withdrawn to move to Korea where they served with distinction.

For more information about the 50th anniversary reunion, contact the national secretary, Jim Hembree, 20 Binks Drive, Clarksville, TN 37042.

Baseball

Editor: We, the Haskell Senior League, would like to thank the following people who purchased new uniforms for our teams this year:

Haskell Lions Club, First National Bank, Haskell National Bank, Nanny Plumbing and Pogue's Meat Processing.

We appreciate your support of the youth in this community.

John Connally

Editor: I hope your readers will take a moment to stop and recall a few of the many ways in which the late Governor John Connally made Texas and America better for us and for our children.

Gov. Connally is known as a three-term governor, of course, and as secretary of the Navy and the Treasury, but he was also a father to Texas' great university system. In fact, at every major milestone of contemporary Texas, John Connally was there, standing tall, leading, making a difference, making history.

He strode across the eras with grace, dignity and iron determination. He will be missed, but more importantly, he will be remembered.

Selective Service

Editor: Were you, or was someone you know, involved with the drafting men into military service during World War II?

Perhaps you were a volunteer draft board member or an employee of the Selective Service System. Maybe you worked for a local draft board in the early 1940s. If so, Uncle Sam wants you back... but this time it's not to serve; it's to say "Thank You."

That's right, the Selective Service System wants to recognize you as part of the events commemorating the 50th anniversary of the agency's role in World War II.

In connection with the scores of official observances of the 50th anniversary of World War II, Selective Service will honor those who served on the home front during those crucial years. This small federal agency which ran the World War II draft from October 1940 through the war's end is now searching for men and women who had any official connection with the Selective Service System during that period, but not the draftees themselves.

Our search does not include the 10 million men who were drafted during the war, because their distinguished services is being commemorated by the military and veterans groups. Instead, we're limiting our search to identify anybody still alive who worked for the Selective Service System itself, either as a volunteer or employee. These individuals may include volunteer board members, office workers, state directors, or reserve officers who served the agency in any official capacity. They worked for the draft system in virtually every city and town throughout America.

Records showing who worked with Selective Service during the war were not kept. When identified, the agency's World War II volunteers and employees will receive letters of appreciation, commemorative posters, and distinguished Selective Service lapel pins. They will also have the opportunity to share memories and contribute artifacts to the agency's growing historical collection.

If you think you qualify, contact Andree Hager, by calling (214) 266-6713, or writing to Selective Service System, Region IV, Building 1239, Naval Air Station, Dallas, TX 75211-9506. The agency would like to hear from you before July 31.

--Social Security--

Today, the elderly account for an increasing percentage of the world's population. In the United States, the population aged 65 and older grew at a rate more than twice the rate of the population as a whole during the 1980s, and the trend will accelerate as the baby boom generation begins to reach retirement age in the early part of the 21st century.

One of the most important links that older Americans have to their government is Social Security. Here in the Big Country area, senior citizens receive over $22 million each month in Social Security benefits. The other services that we provide to older Americans are important as well.

Local Beverly Nursing Home Is Creating 'Magical Moments'

A housekeeper at a Beverly Enterprises' nursing home returns after her shift that day with her three young children to give a grieving resident a much-needed lift... The kitchen staff at another Beverly facility get together and bake two delicious pies for a resident to take to her sister's annual potluck... Two nursing assistants surprise an 80-year-old resident on his birthday with the same double-chocolate cake his wife used to make for him...

Beverly Enterprises calls these simple but beautiful acts of kindness and concern Magical Moments—that explosion of good feeling that both the giver and receiver experience when service goes above and beyond the expected. They happen every day at nursing care facilities around the country, but often aren't acknowledged. That's why Beverly Enterprises recently launched a nation-wide initiative in all its facilities called Create Magical Moments. Do Right '93.

The program isn't something extra Beverly is asking its employees to do—they're already doing it. Instead, it simply asks employees to recognize when those Magical Moments occur—and make a commitment to creating more of them.

Beverly is putting real conviction behind that commitment on a company-wide scale. Everyone, from the employees to facility administrators, to regional managers, even to the CEO, are asked to pledge their commitment to a set of principles called the 24-Karat Customer Service Attitude. These attitudes form the heart of this initiative:

- 1) Extend a warm welcome to all customers with a greeting and a smile.
- 2) Show patience, kindness, and respect for all customers.
- 3) Take time to listen because our customers are important.
- 4) Respond to the customer's needs quickly, courteously and to their satisfaction.

In addition, 24-Karat Customer Service Teams were formed in each facility to help implement the program, and check its progress periodically. Each month, the teams meet and create several customer service activities and suggestions, allowing each facility to focus on its own individual needs, concerns and areas of improvement. Beverly employees also receive premium items such as hats, t-shirts and buttons with the Create Magical Moments logo as a constant reminder of their common goal and commitment.

The key to Beverly's success may be in how Magical Moments differs from other customer service efforts. While other initiatives have focused on just residents, Beverly's program focuses on all customer groups—residents, their families, fellow employees and vendors. Another difference is the tremendous amount of support that comes from Beverly. Rather than simply directing participants, they themselves stay just as committed and involved. In fact, the company has made a long-term commitment of three to five years to the program, an approach to customer service that's unique among long-term care providers. One Beverly says is already making their health facilities even better places to live and work.

As David Banks, President and CEO of Beverly Enterprises, observed recently, "this tremendous effort has impacted more people—our residents, their families, our associates, even entire communities—than anything in the company's history."

Beverly Enterprises, an industry leader in quality health care, has nearly 100,000 employees in 865 nursing care facilities in 35 states nationwide.

Haskell Nursing Center, a Beverly facility here in Haskell, is practicing the Magical Moments philosophy. They submitted this article to the Haskell Free Press.

PHARMACY NEWS

By Eibert Johnson, Registered Pharmacist

Insulin-like Growth Factor Helpful in Diabetes: People with type 2 diabetes that cannot be controlled with diet, exercise, or oral hypoglycemics may find that a genetically engineered growth factor could help to control their disease. Researchers in two separate studies found that administering large doses of the insulin-like growth factor subcutaneously reduced the fasting blood glucose and fasting blood insulin levels in patients. It also has been suggested that the growth factor might lower blood triglyceride and cholesterol levels.
