4-H'ers earn awards at District Horse Show

by Greg Kaase
Haskell Co. Extension Agent

Haskell County 4-H members participating in the District 3 4-H Horse Show held June 18-20 at the Finley Arena in Vernon, were Chad Brendle, Cassie Lamb, Hegan Lamb, Landon Terry and Levi Terry.

In the breakaway roping competition that kicked off the Horse Show, Hegan Lamb was in 2nd place after the first go around, with an excellent loop thrown in the short go. He finished in the lead and received a buckle for winning the breakaway competition.

In the tie-down division, Hegan also had excellent time, finishing in 2nd place after making the short go again. He also competed in the team roping competition on Thursday evening. Roping on three teams, he finished 8th, 9th and 10th.

The Friday morning events began with team penning. In the event, 4-H'ers have two minutes to pen three head out of a herd of thirty steers. One Haskell County team consisting of Chad Brendle, Landon Terry and Levi Terry, had an excellent start by breaking away their three head from the herd, but had some difficulty penning all three head.

The other team representing Haskell and Knox County, consisting of Cassie Lamb, Hegan Lamb and Roni Morrow, had a great run and won the competition. These three took 1st place and another set of buckles.

Other events held Friday were the Reining and Working Cow Horse Divisions. Hegan Lamb finished 3rd place in Reining, and 5th place in the Working Cow Horse. By the end of Friday's event, Hegan Lamb had gathered enough points to take the Overall Open Competition and was rewarded with yet another gold buckle.

Saturday's events in Vernon concluded with the speed events; barrel racing, pole bending and the stake race. Following in her brother's great horsemanship skills, Cassie Lamb won the barrel racing competition and qualified for the State 4-H Horse Show to be held in Abilene in July.

All of our 4-H'ers who competed in the District Horse Show are to be congratulated for their good job.

TAX PLANNING

Written By Richard E. Rodgers, CPA

IRS TAX UPDATE

Electronic deposit extension. The IRS is giving businesses an additional six months to switch from paper filing to electronic filing of federal tax deposits. So if your business was required to start making electronic federal tax deposits on July 1, 1998, you now have until January 1, 1999, before the IRS will impose penalties for not filing electronically.

1999 auto depreciation limits. The IRS has published the depreciation deduction limits for automobiles placed in service during 1998. First-year depreciation cannot exceed $3,160, second-year $5,000, and third-year $2,950. For all years after the third year, maximum allowable depreciation is limited to $1,775.

Disaster areas. The IRS recently published its listing of locations that have been designated as disaster areas. Taxpayers who suffered a loss as a result of a disaster (such as a hurricane or flood) in one of the listed areas can make an election to deduct the loss for the year prior to the one in which the disaster actually occurred. Making this election is intended to provide taxpayers with refunded tax dollars that can help disaster recovery.

Tax season report. The U. S. Treasury expects to collect almost $1.7 trillion dollars in tax revenue this year, with 46% of that coming from individual income tax returns. Social security and Medicare taxes will account for 34% of the total, and corporate income taxes will provide 12%. Other tax levies will account for the balance, with only about 1% of total revenue coming from estate taxes. The IRS reports that tax refunds on 1997 tax returns filed this year increased over last year. The average tax refund rose 4% to $1,342. One complication in the recent tax filing season was the new and very complex Schedule D used to report capital gains for 1997. Many taxpayers whose only capital gain income was a mutual fund capital gain distribution failed to include a Schedule D with their returns. These taxpayers are being notified by the IRS that they must submit the missing Schedule D.

If you have questions about any notice you receive from the IRS concerning your 1997 tax return filing, contact our office. We can help.

OPINION

Mandatory New Hire Reporting begins October 1, 1998

By Dan Morales Attorney General

The Texas legislature has amended the Texas Employer New Hire Reporting program to comply with the federal Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996. This act is a core part of federal welfare reform. Beginning October 1, 1998, Texas employers will be required to report all newly hired or rehired employees to a state database.

The Office of the Attorney General's Child Support Program, as well as other state and federal programs, will use this information to assist in the collection of child support. The information will also be used to detect and prevent fraud involving unemployment insurance, workers' compensation, Medicaid and the food stamps.

The Child Support Program will be working in conjunction with other state agencies to inform employers of the new requirements for this program.

The process

Texas has had a voluntary New Hire Reporting program in place since September 1993. Currently, there are more than 16,300 employers participating. However, with over 380,000 employers in the state of Texas, there is much work yet to be done.

On October 1, 1998, all Texas employers will be required to report the name, address and social security number of every new employee within 20 days of the hiring date.

All New Hire information collected by the state will be transmitted to the National Directory of New Hires, operated by the federal government. This National Directory will make it more difficult for parents who have not taken financial responsibility for their children to avoid statewide tracking systems.

The security of New Hire information is of utmost concern to all agencies involved in the implementation of this nationwide program. All data from the State Directory will be transmitted to the National Directory on secure and dedicated lines.

Working together

The assistance that employers provide to this program is invaluable. By following the requirements and meeting reporting deadlines, Texas employers will greatly assist in the location of non-custodial parents who owe child support.

Identifying a non-custodial parent's employer is essential if we are to execute a wage withholding order. Currently, our office receives more than 60 percent collected child support through this method. Also, location of non-custodial parents and collection of past due child support will allow many families to reduce or eliminate their reliance on public assistance. The Texas Employer New Hire Reporting program is good for Texas children and Texas businesses.

Over the next several months, the Office of the Attorney General will provide Texas employers with an information packet containing brochures, reporting forms, electronic reporting specifications and answers to frequently asked questions regarding the Texas Employer New Hire Reporting program.

In addition, employers will receive an informational flyer from the Texas Comptroller's Office and the Texas Work Force Commission in their quarterly tax package mailing. The Texas Employer New Hire Reporting program has made an article available for inclusion in various newsletters and publications from the Comptroller's Office, the Texas Work Force Commission and Chambers of Commerce throughout the state.

For further information

Employers can begin reporting their new hire information prior to the October 1, 1998 start date. Those needing further information on beginning early, or on the program in general, can contact the Texas Employer New Hire Reporting Center Operation Center at Post Office Box 149224, Austin, Texas 78714-9224. The Center can be reached by phone at (888) 839-4473 or fax at (800) 732-5015. The Web site address is www.TexasNewHire.state.tx.us and the e-mail address is txhires@flash.net.

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

Today, July 2, is one anniversary that Tom and I never fail to remember and celebrate. On this day in 1985 we moved to Haskell from Austin to begin that phase of the poet called "best yet to be, last of life."

We haven't been disappointed. After thirteen years here in our old 1926-built home on historic Brick Street, we still have the opinion that we made a good decision in our choice of a place for retirement. In fact, so strongly do I feel about it, I think Haskell should "go for it" in promoting, along with the other socio-economic enterprises, its natural assets that are conducive to attracting retirement-age people. Of course, along with some great built-in benefits already to be enjoyed and offered here, some quality retirement-living housing is needed for those who might be ready to forego the responsibility of their larger homes, yet not ready for care-home living. (With the large boomer generation coming along in the aging process, not too many years ahead the field will be "white unto the harvest" for some farsighted investor/builder, willing to prepare for it.)

Several years ago I wrote about some of what we experienced when moving to this small town. The following is an excerpt from a 1990 column, which still speaks to just some of the reasons we feel about it as we do.

In this amazing era of instantaneous communication, this fax-it-now, E-mail time of technological development, the world is getting smaller every day. With all of us hearing and seeing the same news of events, fashions, fads, trends, literary and entertainment offerings, there is more universal awareness than ever before in memory of history. Never have so many of us known so much about what the rest of us are doing, saying, thinking, wearing, eating or becoming. In many ways we are becoming homogenized.

But, we're not there yet. Even in a state where the natives have so much on common, their eternal Texanisms, one quickly realizes, on coming in off of the six-lane freeway of commercialism onto the two-lane farm-market road of small-town living, that there are more differences here than just the height of the buildings and the time it takes to get across town.

There is a wonderfully efficient communication system operating in a small town that rivals the most modern inventions for "getting things around." A combination of grape-vine, phone line, ESP, honest caring and plain old curiosity keeps information of all sorts, both vital and trivial, moving and shaping the daily affairs.

It is inherent in small places that folks tend to know everything there is to know about each other, but the redeeming grace of that phenomenon is that at least they know each other. Strangers in town don't have to stay that way for very long.

Coming as we did from the impersonal congestion of city driving, a drive around the courthouse square, on our first morning in Haskell, gave us a feeling of belonging as we made our way from the water department to gas and electric companies, paying our deposits. The custom of waving in greeting to every driver met or passed, making eye contact and speaking to every person within eyesight or hearing, is contagious. Exchanges of news of weather and family, politics and the price of cotton, can turn a trip to the post office into a social event or a business deal.

On my first trip back to Austin, I felt foolish to find myself waving, smiling and nodding to strangers. I found this to be exhausting and physically impractical when practiced in the city. Besides, it can get you looked at 'funny'. Failure to do it in the small town can earn you the repugnant reputation of being "uppity and stuck-up", virtually a country epithet.

In their manner of taking time to look at things in a down-to-earth way, a trait not always cultivated in more crowded, hurried areas, most people in this small town believe and practice the same straight-to-the-point philosophy as the writer of Proverbs 18:24, "A man who hath friends must show himself to be friendly."

Legal Matters

by Dan Morales, Attorney General

Prepaid telephone cards cost $10 to $20 each and let you call anywhere in the world. The catch?

While many prepaid phone cards work as advertised, some are either blatant rip-offs or simply don't work at all. Some cards include hidden surcharges or charges for uncompleted calls. Some expire without warning. Some offer big savings but don't back up their claims.

The Office of the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division receives complaints about these types of cards.

Billion dollar industry

Prepaid phone cards are a billion dollar industry—over 300 million prepaid phone cards are sold each year. This number is growing rapidly. Many are being sold at convenience stores and gas stations. The cards are popular with college students and are now being marketed to business travelers. Many of the cards are sold to immigrants calling family and friends overseas.

A prepaid phone card, in reality, is an account number in a computer. The seller of the card buys access time from a local or long distance carrier or reseller.

Each time you use the card, your call is routed through to the long distance carrier and the computer reduces the balance in the card's account. When all the card's value is used up, the computer will no longer provide service on that account. Unless, in the case of some so called "rechargeable" cards, additional time is purchased through the use of the consumer's credit card.

Problems may occur if the card vendor has not purchased enough telephone line capacity to handle all the calls made by card buyers. For example, if the card company sells 100,000 cards to international travelers, but has only one line going into each country, the chances are low that any given call will go through on the first try.

Consumer tips

Make sure you clearly understand the services you are buying and the rates you are paying. Some cards simply give you telephone time. Other cards offer extra services such as speed dialing, services in a variety of languages, or the ability to add extra value by recharging the card.

To get the most out of prepaid calling cards:

- If you are calling overseas or from a pay phone, find out in advance if international rates or surcharges apply.

- Find out if the card has an expiration date.

- If a card offers you big savings on telephone calls, make sure you understand how the savings are calculated, as well as any restrictions you must meet to qualify for them.

- Watch out for cards that offer the same low rate to every country. This is a sign of a scam.

- Find out if the card is billed in full minute increments even if you only use a few seconds.

Use cards offered by companies you recognize, but remember that the business advertised on the card (such as a department store or theme park) may not be the company providing the telephone service. Many of the established local and long distance telephone companies are now issuing prepaid calling cards to their customers.

For more information

If you have purchased a phone card that did not deliver what it promised, you can file a complaint with our Consumer Protection Division. To request a consumer complaint form, call 1-800-621-0508.

You can also download a consumer complaint from our Web site at www.oag.state.tx.us. Once you have completed the form, mail it to: Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Post Office Box 12548, Austin, Texas 78711-2548.

Pool safety urged

As outdoor temperatures begin to climb, swimming pools, hot tubs and spas become increasingly popular with both adults and children. But along with the fun and sun comes the potential for injuries and death. Paying attention to safe actions and to pool or spa maintenance, whether in a backyard or public park, can be a lifesaver, Texas Department of Health (TDH) officials say.

"One of the dangers in a pool or spa is the drain that can trap a person's body or hair," said Jim Soper, chief of the TDH's Recreational Sanitation Branch, which regulates public swimming pools. Particularly at risk are the children who often enjoy playing around drains.

According to the TDH's Injury Prevention and Control Program, 337 Texans sustained submersion injuries in 1996, with 126 people drowning. Of those where the location was known, 44 percent of the injuries occurred in swimming pools. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has records of 18 incidents, including five deaths, of children ages 2 to 14 trapped by swimming pool, wading pool or spa drains since 1980 nationwide.

Water draining or circulating in pools and spas creates a suction. If something blocks the drain, the amount of suction may become so strong that a person's body can be trapped by a vacuum seal, leading to drowning. In addition, long hair of swimmers or spa users can become entangled in drain covers and grates, trapping people under water and leading to drowning.

"One of the keys to safety in public pools is drain covers that are in place and secure," Soper said.

In some instances, anti-vortex covers, which are dome shaped with numerous openings on the perimeter, may help to prevent some entrapment problems. Dealers can provide anti-vortex drain covers that meet voluntary standards.

Two or more drains for each pump can lessen the amount of suction at any single outlet and reduce the risk of being caught. In addition, automatic shut-off switches that detect an increase in suction may be an effective emergency backup.

Especially dangerous is for a young child to sit on the drain outlet in a wading pool. Despite the small amount of water, the strong suction together with a broken or missing drain cover can cause entrapment or disembowelment.

TDH establishes and enforces minimum health, safety and sanitation standards for public swimming pools and spas. Such public facilities can range from swimming and wading pools in public parks to pools, hot tubs and spas at apartment complexes, health clubs, recreation center, youth camps or child care establishments. Local standards may be more strict.

Inspection and maintenance is vital, for both public and residential pools and spas. "We recommend that people get with a swimming pool professional to see if their home pool or spa meets current industry standards," said Charles Branton, director of the Texas Department of Health's Product Safety Program.

This program works to ensure that consumer products, including residential pools, are manufactured, packaged and labeled to protect the public's health and safety. Also, CPSC is developing national safety guidelines for new pools and for modification and maintenance of older swimming pools and spas.

"The most important steps in preventing children's drownings and injuries are to stop unauthorized access to the pool, hot tub or spa," Branton said, "and to constantly watch children while they are in or near the water."

"Leaving a child unattended during a three-minute telephone conversation can have catastrophic results," he said.

Among other safety recommendations:

- Be sure all children are supervised in any swimming pool, hot tub or spa no matter how shallow the water. In large groups, appoint a designated watcher to protect young children from pool accidents.

- Be sure children do not play with drains.

- Do not allow children to sit on a drain in a wading pool or hot tub.

- Pin up long hair, cover with a cap or keep it away from drains.

- Make sure that drain covers are in place and are not cracked or missing.

- At residences, know where the cut-off switch for your pump is so you can turn it off quickly in an emergency. Have a professional check your pool, spa or hot tub regularly.

- Where possible, use a locked safety cover when a spa or hot tub is not in use. Never use or leave a pool with its pool cover partially in place. Do not allow children to walk or crawl on the cover.

- Completely fence the pool and install self-closing and self-latching gates, with latches out of children's reach.

- Steps and ladders to above-ground pools should be removed when the pool is not in use.

- Pool chemicals are hazardous. Always follow manufacturer directions carefully. Be thoroughly familiar with first aid instructions on the container label and always store chemicals in a secure place where children cannot get to them.

- Keep all electrical appliances away from the pool or spa.

Health official warn that alcohol consumption and reckless behavior are major safety problems around an body of water. "In general, public swimming pools are safer than natural bodies of water," Soper said. "It just takes people thinking and acting safely."

Tech student-athletes excel in classroom

Texas Tech University student-athletes excelled not only on the athletic arena but in the classroom as student-athletes combined to achieve the highest-ever grade point average for a semester during the Spring 1998 semester (2.790) according to academic totals released by the athletic department recently.

"I think you have to give the kids and coaches credit," Texas Tech associate athletic director for student services Steve Uryasz said. "In my mind the coaches play a key role in the success of student-athletes academically. Coaches are the most important variable in the equation. They control the practice, the playing time and those types of things. We have also made significant changes in the academic services department, our staff has been increased and that's a credit to Athletics Director Gerald Myers, Dr. Haragan and Chancellor John Montford. They've given us a budget that allows us to be successful."

"Next year, our goal is to have 90.0 percent of our athletes above a 2.0 per semester and to have 50 percent of our student-athletes achieve above a 3.0 or higher."

Other 1997-1998 Texas Tech

academic facts achieved by Red Raider student-athletes include:

- Texas Tech student-athletes posted a combined 2,790 grade point average last fall, the highest ever for a semester at Texas Tech University.

- 42 percent of all student-athletes achieved a 3.00 GPA or higher during the Spring 1998 semester.

- 19 student-athletes posted a 4.0 GPA, 51 were between 3.5 and 3.99 and 96 posted a GPA between 3.0 and 3.49 during the Spring 1998 semester.

- Women student-athletes posted a combined GPA of 3.023 while men finished at 2.662 for the Spring 1998 semester.

- 87 percent of student-athletes earned a Spring 1998 GPA at or above 2.00.

- Five teams earned Spring 1998 semester cumulative GPAs at or above 2.00.

- Seven teams improved their team cumulative GPAs from the Fall 1997 semester during the Spring 1998 semester.

- The average cumulative GPA for all student-athletes is at its highest since the fall of 1991.

- The average cumulative GPA for male student-athletes is at its highest since the fall of 1991.

Butterfat shortage is ploy reports

Texas Farmers Union

Claims of a shortage of butterfat and predictions of sharp increases in the prices of butter, ice cream and other dairy products appear to be nothing more than a ploy to put public pressure on the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to increase its import quota, according to Texas Farmers Union.

"As dairy processors receive the lowest prices in 18 years—ostensibly due to an oversupply of milk—it is inconceivable that there is a shortage of butterfat," said Wes Sims, a dairy farmer from Sweetwater and president of Texas Farmers Union. "Dairy processors are using the threat of higher prices to get USDA to raise its quota on butterfat imports in order to have greater availability of cheaper, subsidized butterfat from foreign countries."

USDA several weeks ago denied the dairy processing industry's request to raise the U. S. annual dairy import by 40 million pounds. Amid the industry's claims of a butterfat shortage, U. S. milk production increased 3.5 percent last year.

Dairy farmers are currently receiving $10.88 per hundred weight, or 94 cents per gallon, for their milk. Between March and May of this year, milk prices paid to producers dropped 28.5 cents per gallon, yet retail prices remained constant.

"Dairy farmers are losing money, while consumers are being gouged," said Sims.

"There's no excuse for price increases of milk and other dairy products at the retail level, given the price farmers are being paid. If farm prices go up, retail prices go up much more, but when farm prices fall there never seems to be a declining drop at the grocery counter."

"Keep children away from mowers. Never let a child ride with you on a riding lawnmower."

"Never leave a child unattended in a car in the summer heat. The temperature inside your car can reach 109 degrees in 15 minutes, even if it's 83 degrees outside and the windows are down two inches."

"You may be suffering from heat exhaustion if you become fatigued, exhausted, nauseated, or light-headed. Heat stroke is a life-threatening emergency, and victims should be attended to immediately."

"Alcohol and water don't mix. Never consume alcoholic beverages if you intend to swim or operate a boat. Judgement, balance and coordination are impaired by alcohol."

"Coast Guard-approved life jackets should be available and worn when boating or fishing."

"The sun can be brutal on lakes and at the beach. Wear sunscreen and avoid direct sunlight between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m."

"Sun glasses are like sunscreen for your eyes. Wear eye protection to guard against ultra violet rays."

"Burns and cuts from glass are common when feet are bare."

"Read all posted signs at water parks and follow directions given by lifeguards."

"Never tube or raft in rivers after a heavy rain."

"Beware of tick bites and insect stings. Ticks can carry Lyme Disease and should be removed by pulling slowly and firm. Remove the tick close to the skin using fine tweezers."

"Grills and lighter fluids should be off limits for children."

"When planning outdoor activities, be aware of changing weather conditions."

"Power tools and sharp gardening equipment should never be left unattended. Even small construction projects can be hazardous."

Fireworks can cause a perilous night

Amateur fireworks can set off a perilous night. Warnings are as much a part of the Fourth of July as fireworks themselves: Let the professionals handle the red rockets and bursting bombs.

Despite the annual warnings, says Dr. Ronald Charles, assistant professor of emergency medicine at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, hospital emergency departments still treat patients of all ages who have been injured by fireworks set off by amateurs.

"We see fingers torn off by fireworks, and burns and wounds to faces," Dr. Charles said. "Clothes can catch on fire."

Fireworks can damage eyes, and their loud noises can cause permanent hearing loss, especially when they are being thrown and explode near the ear. In most places, it is illegal to put on your own fireworks display.

Dr. Charles adds, "But, if you insist, keep children far away. And remember there's a reason the fireworks professionals wear thick protective gloves and cover their faces."

Softball tournament set

On July 17 and 18 the Munday Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture will be hosting a co-ed softball tournament and is currently soliciting area teams to join in for a great week-end of homeruns, fly balls and double plays.

The co-ed teams should be made up of a maximum of six males and six females with five each on the field. Each team will be charged an entry fee of $100.00 (which includes a $20.00 deposit) with the top three teams netting t-shirts for their winning efforts. There will also be a homerun contest.

Make plans for a safe summer

It's summer and time to take a break and have fun. But with so many activities it can also mean it's time for injuries and accidents.

With dangers lurking around every fun time, it's best to take a minute or two to review safety measures. The Texas Medical Association urges everyone to take the following precautions when participating in all activities:

"If you are going to be around water, learn how to swim. Always swim with a friend and in supervised areas. Know your swimming limits."

"Never leave a child unsupervised around water. Always keep your eyes on the child even in your own backyard wading pool."

"Pay attention to 'No Diving' signs. They are there for a reason."

"Alcohol and water don't mix. Never consume alcoholic beverages if you intend to swim or operate a boat. Judgement, balance and coordination are impaired by alcohol."

"Coast Guard-approved life jackets should be available and worn when boating or fishing."

"The sun can be brutal on lakes and at the beach. Wear sunscreen and avoid direct sunlight between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m."

"Sun glasses are like sunscreen for your eyes. Wear eye protection to guard against ultra violet rays."

"When planning outdoor activities, be aware of changing weather conditions."

"Power tools and sharp gardening equipment should never be left unattended. Even small construction projects can be hazardous."

"If you are working on construction projects at home make sure someone is around in case you need assistance in the event of an accident."

"Keep children away from mowers. Never let a child ride with you on a riding lawnmower."

Sagerton News

By Dorothy M. Clark

More hot weather continues and we approach July 4 with anticipation of a "day off" for the employed, Stamford Cowboy Reunion activities for some and just another hot day for others. Today when you get the paper you might want to call Yvonne Swofford and wish her a "Happy Birthday"...it's not every week that a citizen's birthday falls on Thursday!

The community is invited to a baby shower for Pastor and Marie Zell to be held Sunday night, July 12 in the fellowship hall of Faith Lutheran Church. This will be in conjunction with the Family Night, beginning with a potluck meal at 6:00 p.m. Everyone is cordially invited to come and celebrate with the congregation. The Zells have registered at Toys R Us in Abilene.

Jacob Manske's name was omitted from the list of grade school students from here that received awards at the ceremony at Rule at the closing of the school year. He, like all the rest, won numerous awards for school programs that he participated in and excelled in. Congratulations to Jacob and my apology for this error.

Jacob Manske, Ross Teichelman, Samuel and Matthew Turner, Kim Smith, Robin and Heidi Diers have returned from church camp at Brownwood. Adult sponsors included Brenda Turner and Pastor Zell.

Mrs. Joe Clark has returned from the Lutheran Women's Missionary League District Convention held at the Omni Bayfront Convention Center in Corpus Christi. She represented the Mesquite Zone and her League group from Zion Lutheran of Abilene where she serves as president. She traveled with ladies from Abilene and Brownwood. While there she visited with Mrs. H. E. Driessner a former resident of Sagerton who now lives in Onalaska and also with the former Joan Druessedow of Old Glory, now residing in Houston. Conventions are a great way to become reacquainted with former church members, relatives and friends from all over Texas.

Jacob Manske and Tully Brown attended Cub Scout Day Camp in Haskell June 9, 10 and 11. Jacob won first place in archery and third place in BB guns. Tully won first in archery and arts and crafts.

Diane and Daniel Martin of Abilene spent Monday night in the home of Leon and Mae Stegemoeller. The Martins were on their way to their new home in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The family of Delbert and Joyce LeFevre enjoyed their annual reunion and vacation at Lake Brownwood last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. All family members were there at some time.

Peggy Tabor has returned from Austin where she had been staying with her daughter, Vanessa and family, while Vanessa was recovering from surgery. The family came home with Peggy for an extended visit and recuperation here.

Bill Clark of Weatherford visited in the home of Charles and Dorothy Clark and also with Joe last week. He is a cousin of the Clark boys.

Parents must overcome challenge of communicating with new baby

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
Parents of young children ages birth through 3 face the challenge of communicating with small people who are in the process of learning how to communicate. Newborn babies communicate by crying and making sounds that range from cooing to yelps. In the first months of life, infants expand their communication by adding new sounds such as squeals, growls and vowel sounds. In the second half of their first year, babies begin to use specific vocalizations for concrete objects such as ba-ba for bottle.

By 18 months, many toddlers have learned a vocabulary of around 50 words; by 2 years, most toddlers communicate with a vocabulary of about 200 words and are beginning to use the grammar of their native tongue.

Parents are learning to communicate with their new child, too, said Dr. Linda Ladd, a family development specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

First, parents must learn to listen to how their unique infant communicates. Second, parents must track and interpret how their infant is learning to communicate, Ladd explained. With newborns, parents depend on sounds, facial expressions and movements to determine if their child is wet, hungry, tired, needing attention or just talking.

Within a short time, however, infants become more complex and parents need more tools. Fortunately, each person carries their basic five communication tools with them. They are the five traditional sensory organs which include eyes, ears, nose, tongue and skin. While parents and children have more than five senses, these five are crucial to how parents listen as their new child learns to communicate, Ladd said.

Newborn babies are not born with full sensory capacity. At birth, a baby's vision is the least developed of her senses. A typical newborn can focus on objects between four and thirty inches away. This same newborn can see an object at 20 feet that an adult with 20/20 vision can see at 600 feet.

By 60 months of life, the newborn's brain has developed so that the infant can use both eyes to track a moving object and both hands to grab at stationary objects. A month or so later, that same infant can adjust their reach to catch a moving object.

At birth, the newborn has more sensitive hearing than vision. At a month old, many infants can discriminate multiple sounds while others cannot. At 6 months of age, babies can hear high-frequency sounds but not low-frequency sounds. Many parents observe that their babies move in rhythm to the sound around them.

Newborns have a well-developed sense of taste and smell—far superior to most adults. Newborns can discriminate the smell of their mother from other women. Young children often dislike the smell of a food and refuse to eat it.

The sense of touch actually includes five different receptors: touch, pressure, warmth, cold and pain. Babies vary in their reaction to these five senses of touch.

So what can a parent do to increase their understanding of how their baby uses his senses to communicate? Listen, listen and then listen harder, Ladd said. As unique individuals, parents have their own sensory capabilities and disabilities. One parent might rely more on their hearing while another communicates most effectively through the sense of touch. Parents must challenge themselves to consider that their newborn infant is unique and in being unique this child has his or her own capabilities in communicating via their senses, she said.

Parents, Ladd said, often say, My baby is unhappy, but it's not about anything. This isn't likely. Humans use communication to contact their world and the people in that world. All communication has meaning to the communicator—the baby.

The baby may be communicating to his parent that he is content with his world or that he is practicing a newly learned skill over and over, Ladd explained. When parents listen to their child with an eye and ear to the total communication of the infant, parents will have more success in understanding their child's talk.

live in San Antonio. Then they went back to Mesquite where they visited Brenda (Cox) Sartain and her boys and then back to Weatherford to spend the night with their brother, Jacky Sanders and his family. Another sister and brother-in-law, B. D. and Marie Kirkland who have recently moved back to Fort Worth came over to eat supper with all of them at Jacky's. They had a good time and were happy to see all their family.

Visiting all last week with Marvin and Lynn Blair was his sister and husband, Woodrow and Brenda Royster, from Columbus, Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilda Medford spent the weekend in Ruidoso, N.M. They reported the weather there is just as hot as it is here.

Prisoners benefits suspended

From March 1997 to April 1998, the Social Security Administration (SSA) suspended Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments to 44,376 prisoners who are ineligible to receive them. For that same period, 4,059 facilities received incentive payments for providing information that resulted in the suspension of SSI to prisoners. Federal law prohibits the payment of SSI to recipients who are confined to jails, prisons and certain public institutions for more than 30 days. For confinements beginning March 1997 and later, the law also provides for incentive payments to penal institutions for timely reporting of inmate data to SSA that leads to the suspension of SSI payments.

The incentive payments are designed to help offset some of the costs that law enforcement offices incur in collecting the data. State and local penal facilities that want to participate in the incentive payment program must sign reporting agreements with SSA. Participants are required to transmit information electronically to SSA's headquarters in Baltimore, Maryland.

Since 1995, SSA has suspended SSI payments to more than 200,000 recipients. Increased participation of state and local law enforcement facilities nationwide has improved the collection of inmate data, helps save taxpayer dollars and ensures that SSI payments are made only to eligible individuals.

Texas A&M offers new agribusiness degree

Those considering graduate school have a new option at Texas A&M University. The Master of Agribusiness degree has been approved by the Texas Board of Higher Education and the university is now accepting applications for the fall semester.

Dr. Charles R. Hall, Extension Economist and assistant professor, said the degree is one of the few nationwide that is a collaborative effort of two colleges.

Hall said the Master of Agribusiness degree is expected to be extremely popular, because it will appeal to undergraduate business students, undergraduate agricultural students and undergraduate agribusiness majors, with a program designed to provide a view that integrates agriculture and business management.

"We also expect to pull some people from industry," he said. "Often people will be in the workforce a couple of years and realize they could use some extra training."

The requirements of the Master of Agribusiness degree are flexible to meet the needs of the students. They will work closely with their advisory committees in developing programs to meet their unique backgrounds and career goals. The minimum requirements are the completion of 39 credit hours of course work.

Hall said the program is set apart because the curriculum is strong in both business courses and quantitative analysis courses.

"Students gain knowledge of the decision making tools of analysis in addition to the management skills, Hall said. "That's why this program offers the best of all possible worlds."

The program is jointly administered through the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the Lowry Mays College and Graduate School of Business through a program director, program executive committee and intercollegiate faculty.

Food for thought

by Charles H. Spurgeon
"A house divided against itself falls."

Luke 11:17

Satan's strategy is to use a problem situation to put you and your spouse at odds with each other. Jesus said, "A house divided against itself falls" (Luke 11:17). Many times I have said to parents, "Don't let this pull you apart." Inevitably they glance at each other, because that's precisely what's been going on.

"If you would be more firm with our child, this wouldn't have happened," one blames.

"It's because you didn't set the standards by having family devotions every night," the other retorts.

Of if they did have devotions, "You just read to the children, you never communicate with them!"

"If you were home more often, I'd have more time to communicate with them!"

There may be a grain of truth in every statement above. But it's history and tearing each other down will only make the problem worse. You must be united in order to survive the crisis. Character-bashing is from the pit.

Many parents are intimidated by a child's threats or find it easier to give in to a temper tantrum than not to. But you cannot let a rebellious child rule the home. It takes an iron will and the grace of God to stand your ground and not let your child control you. Sad are the children whose parents let them rule the roost. Even sadder are the children whose parents rule without love. If you manage to control through loveless intimidation and force, your child will be emotionally crippled. Rules without a relationship lead to rebellion.

Any crisis in the home can make or break you. You can choose to grow through the crisis and become a better person than you were before. Romans 5: 3-4 "Not only so, but we also rejoice in our sufferings, because we know that suffering produces perseverance; perseverance, character; and character, hope. We also exult in our tribulations, knowing that tribulation brings about perseverance; and perseverance, proven character; and proven character, hope."

Lord, I refuse Satan's strategy to divide our home by quenching our love or overemphasizing rules. Help me do my part to keep our home united in You.

This Week's Devotional Message: FAITH CHANGES A DISABILITY INTO A SOURCE OF STRENGTH

A woman in her senior years was given the bad news by her eye doctor. After a series of unsuccessful implants and transplants, he had realized that nothing in his power would restore her sight, and that she must spend the rest of her life in darkness. Also, perhaps as a result of her troubles, she had developed a dependence on alcohol. Nonetheless, at the moment of truth, a miraculous transformation occurred. With the help of the clergyman at her House of Worship she discovered an inner strength that she would have believed non-existent. She stopped drinking, and now tells others of the folly and futility of it. Thus, with the aid of faith she not only acquired a new serenity, but also changed from a person in need of help to a helper of others. When her eyes could see, she had been handicapped by her weaknesses; but blindness opened her eyes to the power of faith.

Instill a good work ethic in your child

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent

With summer coming up, many youngsters can earn a little extra money while getting a lesson in life. Extension family economics specialist Dr. Lynn White says the main benefits of children working for them to learn how our economy works. They also gain an appreciation for the people and businesses that provide goods and services. She says it helps them realize that a person's time and skills are valuable and that some jobs may pay better because of the time and expense incurred to gain those skills.

A summer job also offers the opportunity to teach the child basic money management skills. Ask them what their goals are and help them save and plan for the future, whether it's buying birthday presents in a few months or paying for college in several years.

White says target the child's interests so they will want to work at the job and not just feel as if they have to work. If they're interested in animals, perhaps they can clean cages at the veterinarian's office. If they like housework, set up jobs within your own home. Wherever the job is, the child should get paid a fair market price. If they're paid too much, their expectations later in life may not be realistic. If they're paid too little, they may develop a bad attitude toward work.

The cost of the job may be another factor. If you have to drive your child ten miles to work each day, it may not be worth the trouble. White says it's best if the job is convenient and beneficial for everyone involved.

Congress urged to provide disaster relief to Texas farmers

Texas Farmers Union President Wes Sims called upon members of Congress to act soon to provide badly needed disaster relief to Texas farmers. Sims explained that Texas will not receive the much needed disaster assistance unless Congress passes legislation to change the 1996 farm law. For the last 2 1/2 months, many parts of Texas has seen no rainfall and there is not relief according to weather reports.

"Some people in Texas are mistaken when they claim that the Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman is not doing enough to assist farmers and ranchers in drought stricken areas. It is Congress, not Agriculture Secretary Glickman that is responsible for the lack of disaster assistance in our state," said Texas Farmers Union President Wes Sims.

"When Congress passed the 1996 farm law, it eliminated important disaster relief programs and capped the marketing loan rate at 1995 levels," Sims explained. Due to the caps placed on the marketing loans in the 1996 FAIR Act, the loan rate is $5.99 per bushel lower for wheat, $3.32 per bushel lower for corn, $3.30 per bushel lower for soybeans and $0.779 per pound lower for upland cotton because the rates are capped. Texas Farmers Union is urging members of Congress to reestablish the Emergency Livestock Feeding Programs and pass legislation to remove the caps on the commodity loan rates and extend the loan period.

"The 1996 farm law was based on the false assumption that farmers and ranchers could depend solely upon the international market to receive a fair price for their product. The continuing Asian financial crisis proves that currency fluctuations and other factors will continue to lower farm prices unless a safety net is in place and trade agreements are improved," Sims said. Texas Farmers Union is calling upon the Clinton Administration said Congress to address currency fluctuation, dispute resolution and other key issues during the upcoming World Trade Organization (WTO) talks scheduled for 1999.

Sims explained that the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform (FAIR) Act Congress approved in 1996 changed farm laws that were critical during times of disaster. The FAIR Act eliminated the emergency livestock feeding and other programs which are much needed now in Texas due to the severe drought.

"We are now experiencing the worst possible situation in many parts of the southwest. With the drought the low prices and the low yields we expect in this state, unless Congress acts now, many farmers and ranchers will be forced out of business," Sims warned.

Texas Farmers Union is a general farm organization representing farmers and ranchers in the state of Texas.
