MATTHEW BLAGG

Matthew Blagg to perform at East Side

Recording artist Matthew Blagg will be appearing in concert at Haskell East Side Baptist Church at 7:00 p.m. this Sun., May 20. The public is invited to attend.

A singer/song writer, Blagg has been immersed in music for 27 years. His trumpet playing and soulful lyrics have led to performances in nearly every United State, Mexico, Canada, and Europe. His better known venues include the W. C. Handy Blues Awards show, B. B. King's Blues club in Memphis, the Oklahoma City and Tulsa Arts Festivals, the Bricktown Blues Festival. He has also performed with groups such as the Temptations and The Four Tops.

However, Blagg says he remains dedicated to bringing his music and message to people in every hometown. Every year, he gives more than 200 performances in churches, schools, college campuses and coffee houses across the nation.

Although he travels the world mainly as a solo act, his recording albums feature Rhythm and Blues versions of old favorites, backed up by top studio musicians, and offer exciting arrangements of classic hymns, with the goal being to "breathe new life into old favorites," he says. His new album offers "a sentimental journey into the heartland of gospel music."

A Breakfast at Night Fellowship meal will be held at the church beginning at 6:00 p.m. Sunday, before the concert at 7:00.

A nursery will be available for the evening.

Online driver license renewal service now available to Texans

Online driver license renewal is the latest online government service available to Texans at www.TexasOnline.com, the official eGovernment Web site for the State of Texas. This new feature allows eligible citizens to conveniently renew their driver license or identification card from home or work using a valid credit card.

The State of Texas, in partnership with KPMG Consulting, is working to provide citizens online access to many state and local government services. With TexasOnline.com, citizens now have two new convenient options for renewing their driver's license or identification card, by phone (866-DL-RENEW) or on the Internet.

"We're pleased that the Department of Public Safety Express Service offers the citizens of Texas a convenient way to renew their driver licenses 24 hours a day, seven days a week," said Col. Thomas A. Davis, Jr., Director of the DPS.

DPS hopes to increase the percentage of citizens renewing without having to visit a driver license office. Citizens are eligible to renew online if they did not renew by mail last time, their license expires no more than a year from when the license customer renews, their license has not been expired for more than two years, or their record indicates they are not eligible to renew online. Citizens can also change their residence and/or mailing address while renewing online.

"Online driver license renewal is technology Texans can use today to help make their lives easier," said Governor Rick Perry. "In providing this internet option, Texans no longer must adjust their schedules to coordinate with the office hours of state government. Technology allows this service to be available at the customer's convenience. By continuing to expand the services available through TexasOnline, we are making state government more efficient and putting Texans first."

Visitors can access TexasOnline's services with confidence because the site is designed to handle numerous transactions simultaneously and incorporates the highest level of security available today. "Security is a top priority for TexasOnline," said Carolyn Purcell, Executive Director of the State of Texas Department of Information Resources, the state agency coordinating the development of TexasOnline.com. "TexasOnline was created using the latest state-of-the-art security features, including the fully-redundant firewalls and monitoring systems found in some of the largest and most secure Web sites on the Internet."

Get ready for your high school reunion

So your high school reunion is just around the corner and you're getting excited to see all of those friends that you haven't seen in years. Are you ready to present yourself and make an effective first impression all over again?

Here are some tips to help you look and feel great before your reunion:

- Start an exercise program at least two months before the reunion. Buy some new shoes and start running or walking or join an aerobics class that fits your hectic schedule. But if you haven't exercised in a while, start slow.
- Buy a new dress or suit that compliments your figure. Also pick out a great outfit for your spouse to show him or her off to your old friends.
- Get your hair done. A strong haircut works like sharp clothing and only adds to your look.
- Make your skin look great. Use a facial cream or lotion that contains retinol. Retinol reduces the appearance of fine lines, spots and other visible signs of aging and rejuvenates the skin by helping to build new collagen and prevent collagen breakdown.
- Pick a nice fragrance. Oriental fragrances are usually perceived as sexy and powerful because of the high doses of intriguing and pungent ingredients. Fruity fragrances are usually light, crisp and clean and perfect for active women shuttling between the office, gym and home.
- Go to the dentist. Keeping your teeth and gums healthy and clean can help your self-confidence as well as your appearance. If you are afraid of the dentist, keep in mind that you shouldn't be, because up-to-date equipment today eases the pain associated with drilling and shots.

Minutes count in an emergency

Lights flashing. Sirens blaring. Emergency crews on the run. Comforting sights and sounds to those needing help.

But the time between the call to 9-1-1 and the arrival of an emergency team can seem like an eternity of fear and indecision when someone is ill or injured.

Minutes count in an emergency and what people do before EMS arrives makes a significant difference to an injured or ill person, according to Kathy Perkins, chief of the Bureau of Emergency Management at the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

When you call 9-1-1, Perkins said, "you access the emergency care system and its personnel, available by telephone everywhere in Texas 24 hours a day. But until a trained team arrives, there are things people can do to help."

Recognizing an emergency is the first step in getting assistance for an ill or injured person. Most people consider auto crashes, severe chest pains, obvious broken bones and serious burns to be emergencies. But not all emergency situations are so apparent. Call 9-1-1 immediately if any of these conditions are present:

- Serious bleeding
- Unconsciousness
- Neck or spine injuries
- Signs of a heart attack including uncomfortable pressure or fullness in the chest or chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating or shortness of breath.
- Unexplained paralysis
- Burns
- No indication of breathing
- Choking
- Broken bones
- Head, chest or abdominal injuries.

Common sense and knowing the victim also are important to assessing an emergency. "Factors such as stressful events, a pre-existing medical condition or abnormal behavior may signal that a person is in an emergency situation," Perkins said.

How you make the 9-1-1 call also is important. Stay calm or have someone else make the call. Give the 9-1-1 dispatcher any information requested. This information usually includes the address or location of the emergency, your name and the telephone number at your location, name of the injured or ill person and information about the illness or injury.

Stay on the phone with the dispatcher until you are told to hang up. Send someone to wait near the street or in the parking lot to direct the ambulance to the victim.

Do not move the injured or ill person unless the person is in immediate danger. Do not allow the person to eat or drink anything or to smoke. Keep the person calm and still.

"While we can be proud of the emergency medical services in Texas," Perkins said, "prevention is still the best way to avoid needing help." Safe, healthy lifestyle habits include:

- Wearing seat belts and buckling children into child safety seats
- Being sure that all children 12 and under ride in the back seat
- Driving at safe speeds
- Avoiding alcohol and drug use while driving
- Keeping immunizations current
- Eating right and exercising regularly
- Keeping guns and poisons locked in a safe place.

Choose toys carefully

by Lou Gilly
 Haskell Co. Extension Agent
 Children can acquire essential life skills by playing with toys. Extension associate Jasmine Ng (ING) cautions parents and caretakers to be careful when choosing toys for children. Ng works with Extension's Partner for Parenting program.

There are four types of toys for children: social and fantasy materials like dress-up clothes; music, art and movement materials such as drums; exploration and mastery toys similar to blocks; and total motor playthings like tricycles.

Reading is important

by Lou Gilly
 Haskell Co. Extension Agent
 Reading helps children's minds grow and develop and reading out loud to children can be a bonding experience for families. Access to books is very important and public libraries and events such as the Texas Book Festival help stimulate children's interest in reading.

Children as young as one year can participate in reading by pointing out pictures in a book and helping turn the pages. Toddlers and older children like to have story time they often prefer to hear the same story time and again.

Children need different kinds of books to help them develop different skills including picture books, concept books, counting, color, alphabet books and participation books.

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Mike Cox
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — That loud sighing you hear is coming from all the folks across the state with a vested interest in some piece of legislation.

Some are sighing in relief that a bill they opposed has died in committee. Others are sighing because their particular issue made it through the process.

But to paraphrase the old Texas expression, the musical performance is not completed until the weight-challenged lady performs her solo.

In other words, with so much dependent on legislative rules the Legislature promulgates, anything is possible until that gavel cracks the hardwood.

And even then, it may not be over.

Already, folks are talking about the possibility of a special session.

"One day you hear there is going to be one, the next day you hear 'no way,'" one legislative staffer said.

A special session has already been threatened, but the governor is the one who must call it. And a spokesman for Gov. Rick Perry said the governor remains optimistic that lawmakers can get everything they need to do accomplished in the next two weeks or so.

Still, lawmakers can create the circumstances that force a governor's hand.

If a 30-day special session does come about, it will be because the legislators can't get a state budget passed before the regular session ends May 28.

"We're willing to stay here all summer before we'll renege on our commitment to health and human services and employee pay raises," said Sen. Chris Harris of Arlington last week.

A House-Senate conference committee has been working on a budget that would be about $110 billion, give or take a million or two here or there.

More money woes ahead
Even as the Legislature

struggles with a tight budget this session, the Center for Public Policy Priorities is warning that more trouble lies ahead.

Several bills that seem likely to pass this session would have no impact on the 2002-2003 budget, but considerable affect on the 2004-05 fiscal budget, the center said in a recently released report.

A chart prepared by the center lists 13 bills it maintains could cost millions in future revenue.

With tax revenue already down because of the downturn in the economy, the future picture is not pretty no matter how rosy the tint of your glasses are.

Police Memorial Day

The Texas Department of Public Safety already had its annual Memorial Day observance planned for this Tuesday when it lost another officer in the line of duty.

License and Weight Trooper Richard Cottle, 51, was killed in a traffic accident north of Waco last Wednesday when his patrol car crashed into the back of a disabled truck on I-35.

He became the 76th DPS officer to die in the line of duty since the creation of the Highway Patrol.

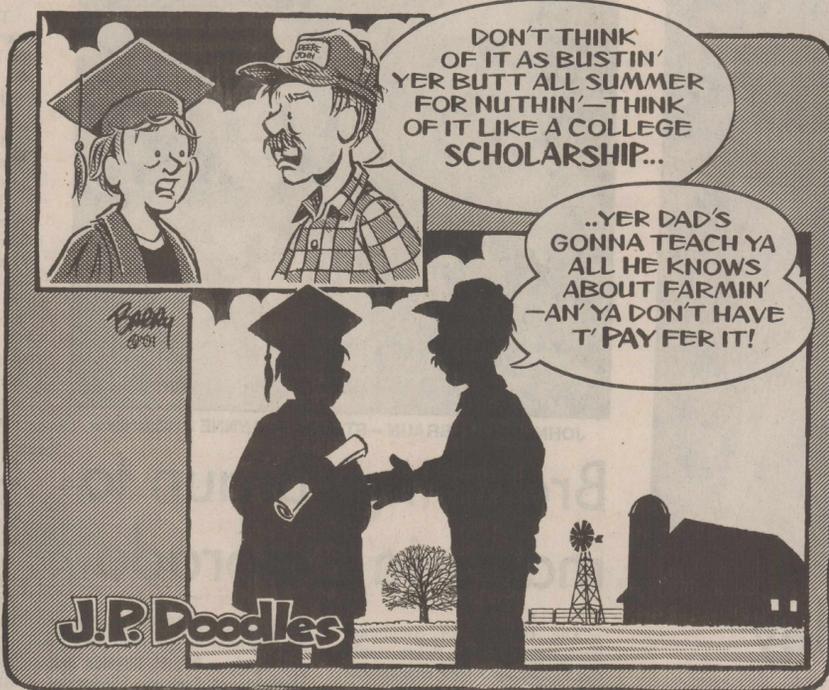

Cottle, whose son is a DPS Capitol Police officer in Austin, was the eighth Texas law enforcement officer killed so far this year.

Last year, according to DPS spokesman Tom Vinger, 13 Texas police officers were killed in duty-related incidents. In 1999, the count was 9, he said.

Aquatic trivia

Only Alaska has more inland water than Texas.

Nearly 5,000 square miles of the state are covered with water, according to the Comptroller's monthly publication, Fiscal Notes. Texans have 630,000 boats and personal watercraft to use on all that water.

Ask the AG

By John Cornyn, Attorney General

May is Older Americans Month. Instead of my usual question-and-answer column, I would like to take this opportunity to inform you about services available to senior Texans through the Office of the Attorney General.

When I was elected Attorney General, I made it a priority to protect the health, safety and well-being of our State's most vulnerable citizens, especially children and the elderly. Several divisions within the Office of the Attorney General focus specifically on helping seniors.

Protecting Senior Consumers
My Consumer Protection Division works to identify and prosecute those who commit deceptive business practices. We work to protect all Texas consumers through enforcement of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act and through our voluntary dispute resolution service.

My Consumer Protection Division staff work to protect senior consumers by halting business practices that directly affect them. We target scams that are aimed at the elderly. Recently we sued a company that was allegedly using deceptive means to bilk seniors out of their oil and mineral property rights. Many of these Texans used their interest payments to cover their living expenses. The defendants specifically targeted seniors and used deceptive means to rob them of their nest eggs.

Triads

My office actively participates in one of the country's best crime prevention program for seniors. Triads unite senior citizens with law enforcement agencies to ensure the safety of the elderly within the community. At the end of April, there were 108 Triads in Texas, and we are working to increase that number.

Elder Law

The primary focus of my Elder Law and Public Health Division is to ensure quality treatment for patients in nursing homes and assisted living facilities. The Texas Department of Human Services inspects nursing homes and investigates alleged violations of state and federal nursing home standards. When that agency refers a case to us for enforcement, we take legal action to put an end to violations and protect the safety and well being of the residents.

Fighting Medicaid Fraud

The Medicaid Fraud Control Division investigates allegations of criminal abuse and neglect in facilities that serve Medicaid patients and in non-Medicaid care facilities. The division can refer cases of abuse or neglect to prosecutors for legal action.

In addition, the Elder Law and Public Health Division contains a Civil Medicaid Fraud Section that is authorized to take civil action in cases of Medicaid fraud, with enhanced penalties for cases involving injuries to elderly persons.

Outreach Efforts

My office has a staff of outreach personnel who travel the state giving speeches and presentations at various conferences and meetings. Their prime goal is to educate Texans on issues that are of importance to them.

For More Information

My office also has a number of publications that address senior issues. One, Elder Alert, is a quarterly newsletter that provides information on issues of importance to senior Texans. We also have brochures on senior rights and nursing homes. All of our publications are available on our Web site at www.oag.state.tx.us. You can also obtain copies by calling (800)252-8011.

Seniors who have consumer complaints can request a complain form by calling (800)621-0508. You can also file a complaint online through our Web site.

To file a complaint against a nursing home or assisted living facility, call the Texas Department of Human Services at (800) 458-9858. To report suspected Medicaid provider fraud or abuse, contact the Medicaid Fraud Control Unit at (512) 463-2011.

For information on Triad programs, contact Nancy Gresham in my Elder Law and Public Health Division at (512) 936-1317 or by e-mail at nsg@oag.state.tx.us.

To arrange to have a member of our Outreach staff attend a function, contact Kevin O'Keefe, director of Outreach at (512) 463-2063.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank all those who helped make the Scholastic Book Fair at Haskell Elementary such a great success again this year. Our elementary students had the opportunity to look at many new books and old favorites and take home their own selections at reasonable prices. Without the cooperation and support of the Haskell Elementary School personnel, this would not have been possible.

Thanks to all of you who helped get ready for the book fair with scheduling, promotion, volunteering, or just by enthusiastic attitudes. Each day was fun and exciting and the Thursday night "Family Event" was a big hit for parents, family members and many others in the community.

Many thanks also to the faithful ladies who volunteered their time to help at the book fair. Without your assistance, we would be unable to have this event. Finally, thanks to everyone who came and helped us celebrate books and reading. We'll look forward to seeing your next year.

Keeping an Eye on Texas

What's the hubbub about businesses in Texas?

Companies from around the nation and the world are choosing Texas as a hub for U.S. and regional business operations in a variety of sectors, and they are setting up shop in both the state's urban centers and smaller cities.

Factors that attract businesses to Texas:

- no personal income tax;
- labor force grows by nearly 100,000 each year;
- reformed worker's compensation laws, which result in lower employers' costs;
- right-to-work state with low unionization;
- low business taxes, and low energy and real estate costs; and
- convenient time zones for conducting national and international business.

May 25 to June 5 is time to control pecan pests

by Brandon Anderson
Haskell Co. Extension Agent

The pecan crop last year was poor over much of the Rolling Plains. This was due in part to the hot, dry conditions that prevailed during much of the spring and summer. Since pecans are alternate bearing, especially when the trees are older, this could be a good pecan year. However, the spring and summer rains will be needed and now much of the area is in need of a good rain. Trees should be inspected to determine the probability of producing an economical crop and to determine if pecan nut casebearer control is needed. The catkins or male blooms are very apparent on many trees and the female blooms or small nutlets have been or soon will be set on the end of the new growth.

The pecan nut casebearer and the pecan weevil are the two pest that cause most of the damage to the developing pecan crop. Pecan nut casebearers are most damaging during the first generation which occurs from late May through June. Pecan weevil adults do not emerge from the soil until mid-August or later and often are delayed because they emerge after a rain or when the orchard is irrigated. The eggs of pecan weevils that develop in the pecans as larvae, are deposited in pecans from the pecan gel stage until the shell is too hard for the weevils to gnaw through.

The time to control the pecan nut casebearer is usually from May 25 to June 5, however last year control measures were needed 5 to 10 days earlier in Parker and Jones counties. Insecticidal control measures are usually needed in the southeast part of the area first and about a week later in Childress and Hall counties which are in the northwest part of the area.

Producers should begin inspecting for pecan nut casebearer eggs by May 10 in Parker County and by May 15 or 20 further north and west. Eggs are flattened and are placed on the dark tip of the nutlets or just under the bracts near the end. The egg will be white to green when newly deposited, but as they near hatch will have red spots. When eggs are found, tie a bright colored ribbon on the limb so the eggs can be inspected daily. When the first small casebearer larva, which will be about 1/16 inch long, begin tunneling into the small nutlets it is time to apply an insecticide labeled for pecan nut casebearer control. Research has shown that two infested pecan clusters of 310 inspected clusters will result in the loss of about 5 percent of the pecans and this is enough to justify control measures.

Each year County Extension Agents work with producers in determining when to apply control measures for the pecan nut casebearer. However, by inspecting and applying control measures when the larvae begin to damage the crop, the amount of insecticide needed can be reduced. One or two well timed application depending on the duration of nutlet entry period, will often result in effective pecan nut casebearer control. A second generation will occur about 6 weeks after the first generation. The second generation usually does not cause excessive damage to the pecan crop.

Use caution when co-signing a loan

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent

What do you do when your best friend, a co-worker or a relative asks you to co-sign a loan? Of course, you want to be helpful. And you know you can trust this person to make the payments. Right? But is that really a good decision?

"We would all like to help someone who is down on their luck, but it may really put our own financial future in jeopardy," said Lou Gilly, family and consumer science agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Haskell County. "So be very careful about co-signing a loan for anybody. Most people end up being burned when they try to help. That not only ruins your relationship with the person, it may also damage your family's financial security."

Gilly gives the following tips for anyone considering co-signing a loan:

- Never co-sign a loan if you cannot afford to make all of the payments yourself. If someone needs you to co-sign with them, the lender does not consider that person a good risk.

- Think through the possible impact on your family budget and your relationship with the person if he or she does not make the payments. Talk it over with your spouse or other family members before agreeing to co-sign.

- Ask the person you are helping to sign a written agreement that he or she will make all of the payments on time and will reimburse you for any additional expenses incurred if he or she does not keep up the payments. Even though this agreement will not prevent you from being held liable for the loan payments, it serves as a contract to help get the borrower to reimburse you later.

In addition, Gilly offers some warnings to potential co-signers:

- Your own credit history can be ruined, especially if the loan recipient is late making payments or fails to make them at all. Because your name is on the loan, the "bad" information is listed on your credit file as well as on theirs.

- You may have more trouble getting additional credit until the loan is repaid. When you apply for a loan in your own name, your credit file shows that you are liable for the payment of the other person's loan. As a result, those payments and the total amount owed are computed into your debt load, which impacts your ability to get a loan.

- You may not be notified that the borrower is late with payments or is not making them until it's too late and the borrower defaults on the loan. That leaves you stuck with making up all the back payments; you may even be required to pay the entire amount owed in one lump sum.

- You may be agreeing to more than you expected. Remember, credit card companies often increase the credit limits, leaving you responsible for a larger amount of debt.

"Only you can make the choice about what to do when asked to co-sign a loan," Gilly said. "Just be sure you are aware of what can happen before you say yes."

This Week's Devotional Message:

It's almost graduation time. Whether you are a young adult just starting out in life or a more mature person who returned to the halls of learning either for pleasure or to acquire new skills, the joy of accomplishment is the same. However, it should be remembered that graduation is not the end of something, but the beginning. Every day of our lives is spent in learning something new, wherever we are, and we are constantly adding to our store of knowledge; if only by observing the world around us with an open mind during our daily travels. We also learn about life and the Creator who gave us this world in which to live, by our regular attendance at our House of Worship. There is no graduation from this kind of learning, and that is the way it should be, for as long as we live.

BEWARE OF SCAMS PROMOTED ON THE INTERNET
 Con artists are quickly adapting old schemes to an online world and targeting millions with the effort it once took to target a few. Microcap investment scams are currently a target of the SEC investigators. Fraudsters purchase shares in unknown companies with low trading volumes. Then, using email, websites, and online bulletin boards, they distribute false information about the company's incredible potential. As share prices skyrocket, the cons dump their stock leaving victims with nearly worthless investments. At least these shares are real. Other scams include invitations to purchase shares or partnerships in business ventures which prove to be totally fictitious. Recently, promoters offered the opportunity to purchase high-yielding "prime bank notes," supposedly traded in secret markets. Unfortunately, there are no secret markets and no such investments. In another scheme, investors are offered jewels at bargain prices and receive periodic false updates on their increasing value. Later, they are invited to upgrade even more by returning their original stones and making an additional investment. Unfortunately, the gems turn out to be trinkets, worth far less than their reported value. Here are a few things to remember when going online:
 •Don't be fooled by a fancy web site. Anyone with a computer can create a professional looking web site.
 •Check out companies before investing. Legitimate information is readily available online at secure sites. (Try www.sec.gov for publicly traded companies.)
 •Beware of opportunities that offer above-market or "guaranteed" returns. If something sound too good to be true, it probably is.
 •Be suspicious of pressure to make immediate decisions.
 •Don't invest in anything you don't fully understand.

"Timing has a lot to do with how a rain dance turns out."

Beth Ann Smith was a city girl when she arrived at her new ranch home with her husband Richard in 1971. It was lonely at first; but three children and a lot of living later, she's come to love the wide open spaces — and the people who are as open as the land. "They look you in the eye."

Beth Ann and Richard count on co-op power for their ranch. They belong to a Smart Choice cooperative. What's "Smart Choice?" We're a coalition of Texas co-ops committed to making the right decision on electric deregulation.

Smart Choice Co-ops have made it possible for farm and ranch families, no matter how remote, to enjoy the same comforts and amenities as urban dwellers. For rural Texans, co-op power means more than lights and television and farm machinery and household appliances. It means freedom from drudgery, independence from the dictates of corporate boardrooms, and the power to decide their own path to the future. For Texans, co-op power means many things, but foremost it means freedom. We intend to use that freedom to decide whether deregulation is right for our members.

Electric cooperatives in Texas have been providing power to Texans since 1937. As co-ops, we are non-profit and member-owned. To learn more about deregulation, visit us at our web site, or call your local Smart Choice cooperative.
