Haskell schools awarded for service to migrant students and families

Haskell CISD has won the Harvest of Hope Award for three consecutive years due to services provided to migrant students through the implementation of a federal program designed to help the children of migrant farm workers.

More than a thousand children in the Big Country come from families that move in order to work in the fields and ranches. According to Randy Deming, Region XIV ESC, every situation is different. "Some go to California or Michigan or some other state during the summer in order to find work. Others only go to a nearby farm or ranch, working cultivation of cotton, wheat, peanuts, cantaloupe, or they work in dairies or on cattle ranches."

The law uses the word "migrant" to describe these families that travel from one place to another in order to do ranch or farm work. Some of the children from these families stay in the same school all year, but some change schools up to three times in a single year. Statistics show that in the past, the majority of these students didn't finish high school.

The federal program forms a part of the "Title I" initiative, whose goal is the academic success for all children, Deming said. "This program helps students overcome interruptions in their education, cultural barriers and language problems."

Different services offered by the program to the students and their families include summer school, correspondence courses, materials and books for preschool children, university scholarships, health screenings, online record transfer and orientation classes for the parents.

Persons enrolled in the program do not have to be U. S. citizens or legal residents. By law, all information provided to the local school district is confidential.

Migrant students can be of any race, ethnicity or language group.

Anyone wishing more information in order to enroll their children can call Cindy McCulloch at 940-864-2654, or write her at Haskell CISD, 306 S. Ave. G., Haskell, TX 79521.

Prison population, equipment updates reported by DCOH

by James Elam, Director

Tues., Jan. 21, the Rolling Plains Regional Jail and Detention Center population was 182 in the detention center and 20 in the jail. This is the highest number to date.

Tues., Jan. 14, Warden James Frawner sent vans to Dallas and transported 48 detainees to the facility. Late Mon., Jan. 20, INS from the Chicago area brought in 35 detainees and will pick up 5 to be returned to Chicago.

The phone company has completed installation of the circuits required to connect the video conference equipment at the facility. This equipment was scheduled to be installed on Jan. 23.

When this equipment is operational it will be possible to conduct arraignments and hearings by video conference. This is one method the INS uses to reduce their cost and improve efficiency.

Rule school collects box tops

If you buy Cheerios, Betty Crocker mixes, Green Giant vegetables, or Gold Medal flour, you can earn money for Rule ISD. Just look for a coupon labeled "Box Tops for Education" on products you use, clip it out and send it to the Rule ISD.

Rule ISD is enrolled in the "Box Tops for Education Program," sponsored by General Mills Corporation. Box Tops coupons are found on hundreds of General Mills products throughout the grocery store. Rule ISD will receive cents for each coupon turned in to General Mills.

"This is a project that everyone can help with. Students, parents, grandparents, anyone in the community can do this simple thing to help our school. While ten cents for one coupon doesn't sound like much, hopefully, they will add up to something when we all work together," Renee Dudensing, 4-H manager said.

A complete list of participating products is available at the Rule ISD offices and on the internet at www.boxtops4education.com.

Several major stores that have pledged to donate a percentage of purchases made to the participating school you select when you shop online. Go to "Box Tops Marketplace" at boxtops4education.com and shop online beginning from that website. Be sure to select Rule as your choice!

The Rule 4-H club along with the Rule Beta Club are conducting this program as a community service project to benefit our school. For more information, contact Larry Bills, principal, at 997-2246 or Renee Dudensing, 4-H Club manager, at 997-2738.

Cosechas de Esperanza
escrito por Randy Deming, Region XIV ESC

Mas que mil niños en el área llamada "El Big Country" proceden de familias que trabajan en los campos agrícolas. Cada situación es diferente. Algunos van a California o Michigan u otro estado durante los veranos para buscar trabajo. Otros solamente van a un lugar cercano, trabajando en el cultivo de algodón, trigo, cacahuates y melones, o trabajan en las lecherías o la ganadería.

No siempre tomamos en cuenta la impotencia de este tipo de trabajo a nuestra economía. Sin el trabajo arduo que estas familias hacen, no tendríamos alimentos y ropa tan barata o abundante.

Los niños de estas familias asisten nuestras escuelas. Algunos quendan en la misma escuela todo el año pero otros cambian de escuela dos, tres, o mas veces en un solo año. En el pasado la mayoría de estos estudiantes no terminaron la secundaria. Esto ya está cambiando por causa de un programa federal que está diseñado a ayudar los niños de familias migrantes. (La ley utiliza la palabra "migrante" para describir las familias que viajan de un lugar a otro para trabajar en la agricultura.) Este programa fue reautorizada por el gobierno por medio de la ley pública 103-382 en el año 1994. Forma una parte de la iniciativa que se llama, "El Titulo uno," cuya meta es el éxito escolar de todos los niños. El programa ayuda al estudiante superar las interrupciones en sue educación, las barreras culturales, y los problemas de lenguaje.

Hay diferentes servicios ofrecidos a estos estudiantes y sus familias que incluye: clases de verano, cursos por correspondencia, materiales y libros para niños pre-escolares, becas universitarias, exámenes de salud, transferencia de calificaciones, y clases de orientación, para los padres.

Las personas, inscritas en este programa, no tienen que ser ciudadanos o residentes legales. Por ley, toda la información es mantenida en absoluta confianza.

La escuela de Haskell ha ganado este "Cosechas de Esperanza" para tres años.

Si desea mas información para inscribir sus hijos en el programa llame: Cindy McCulloch 940-864-2654 o escribe: Haskell CISD, Atte: Cindy McCulloch, 306 S. Ave. E, Haskell, TX 79521.

Inspection of gas equipment could save lives of loved ones

by Lou Gilly

Haskell Co. Extension Agent

A professional inspection of all gas equipment in your home could save your life and the lives of your loved ones. Flu and bad cold systems such as headaches, nausea, pains and mental confusion may actually be caused by gases in your home.

Two kinds of dangerous gas can leak into your home, one you smell, and one you can't smell.

You probably know that if you "smell gas" you should immediately shut down your furnace, heater, or cook stove and call for help. This is the gas that is delivered to your home from the gas company through the pipeline or from your propane tank. There is a special chemical put into these gases to make them smell like rotten eggs so you will be sure and notice it if there is a leak. If either of these gases were to build up in your home, it could explode and destroy your home.

The other dangerous gas is actually produced inside your home. It is produced by incomplete combustion or poor ventilation of fuel-burning appliances such as oil or gas furnaces, gas cooking appliances, water heaters, fireplaces or wood stoves. This gas is the same toxic gas that comes out of the tail pipe of your car if you leave it in a closed garage with the engine running. It is called carbon monoxide. You can not smell it. Even though carbon monoxide will not explode, it can be dangerous (even deadly) to you and your family.

Two common sources of carbon monoxide in home in Texas are the gas furnace heat exchanger and the gas hot water heater. As homes have been built to be more energy efficient, they have fewer places where fresh air can leak into the home. In order for fuel-burning equipment to operate correctly and safely, it must have a source of fresh air for complete combustion. If the fresh air is not available, the equipment will pull the combustion gases back into the house rather than exhausting them up the flue.

Things you can do to protect yourself and family are:

Have your furnace checked and adjusted by a professional to be sure the burner and vent systems are operating properly and that the heat exchanger has no cracks.

Visually inspect the area around your furnace to make sure there is enough air flow for the burner to bring in fresh air. The furnace should not be in a tightly sealed space.

Inspect both the water heater and furnace flue for internal obstruction or leaks around the joints.

Test a gas water heater while the burner is on by holding a lighted match under the draft hood. A match that flickers downward or goes out may indicate an exhaust backflow. The flame of the match should burn upward toward the flue.

Burn fireplace or wood stove with damper open so that all combustion gases will flow to the outside.

Secure carbon-monoxide detectors and place at least one near the sleeping area, and others near the fireplace, furnace and near any other fuel burning appliances.

Select a detector that has Consumer Product Safety Commission and Underwriters Laboratories' seals of approval.

If a carbon-monoxide detector activates, call the fire department. They have sensing equipment to determine where dangerous levels of carbon monoxide are located. Since home detectors are made to alert before the environment is hazardous, this gives the homeowner a chance to contact appropriate service personnel to "fix" the problem.

If any person in the area when the alarm sounds has an extreme headache, nausea, flu-like symptoms or disorientation, they should be transported to the nearest emergency care facility and checked for carbon monoxide poisoning.

Institutions endure, not office holders

AUSTIN—Permission Letter to Highland Park Elementary.

Dear teacher:

Thanks for excusing Hallie from class last Tuesday so she could go with me to see the inauguration. I'm glad you agree that not all learning takes place in the classroom. I can't think of a much better civics lesson than seeing a new governor take the oath of office.

About the time the four Texas Air National Guard F-15s flew low and loud over the Capitol dome, Hallie said you had asked her, if she got a chance, to tell Gov. Rick Perry to give teachers a pay raise. The closest Hallie got to the governor was looking down on him from the top of an eight-story building across from the Capitol, so she didn't get a chance to do that.

But after being sworn in, Perry did say it was time for the Legislature to reform the present school finance system, the so-called Robin Hood plan.

That definitely could have an impact on teacher salaries. And after taking the oath as lieutenant governor, David Dewhurst said essentially the same thing.

Both officials also said that Texas could cope with its nearly $10 billion budget deficit by reducing spending, not raising taxes. Speaking of taxes, no state funds were used for the inaugural festivities, from eating barbecue to dancing. Donated money covered the bulk of the $1.5 million event, with ticket sales making up the rest.

Of course, at this point in her life, the only money Hallie is particularly interested in is what she gets selling Girl Scout cookies and how much more allowance she needs to buy the special doll she wants.

But I think she got the point I tried to get across as we watched the proceedings: The biggest thing about all the hoopla was not who won the election, no matter how excited their supporters might be, but the democratic institution all that pomp and circumstance symbolizes.

We couldn't hear much through the glass from our vantage point overlooking the inaugural platform and all the people, tents and television satellite trucks, but when I told Hallie that I thought everyone below was saying the Pledge of Allegiance, she snapped to attention.

Even though we were by ourselves in an empty office, she put her small hand over her heart and recited the oath. (Okay, she missed a few of the words, but so do a lot of grownups.)

Still a month on the sunny side of 9, Hallie is not yet well-versed in what Republicans or Democrats stand for. What I explained to her was that the democratic process is bigger than partisan politics. Sure, the man or woman who serves as Texas' governor leaves a legacy for better or worse.

Their picture gets to hang in the rotunda of the Capitol and, as we have seen, being governor can lead to higher office. But the only thing that really lasts is our imperfect-but-better-than-anyone-else's Constitutional system of government. The system endures, I told my daughter, the players do not.

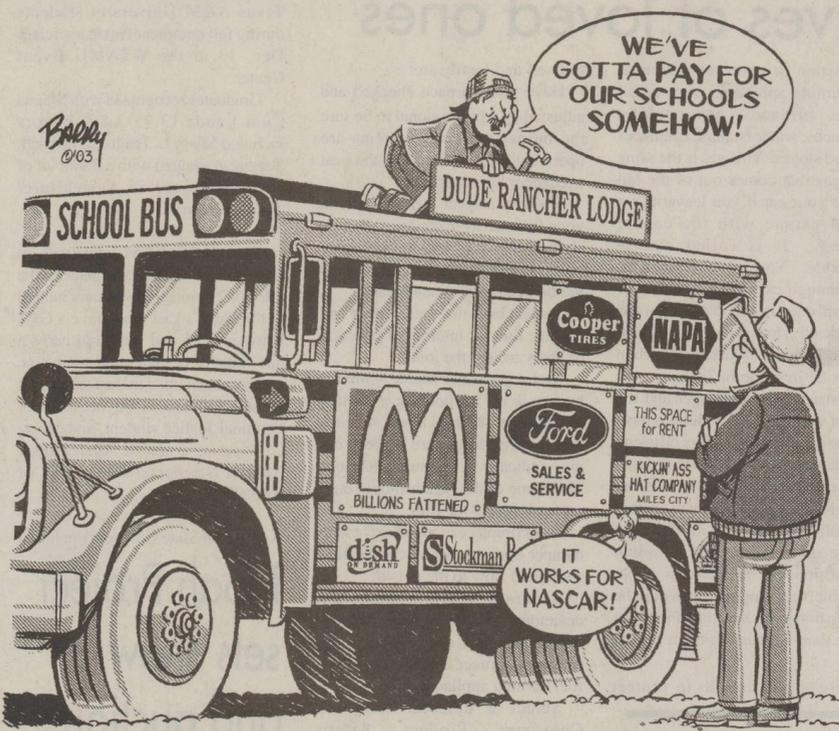

Of course, anyone who saw even one political ad last fall knows the system is not always pretty, but voters still get to make a choice. And there's always another election if you don't like the way the ballots added up.

The other reason I kept Hallie out of the classroom for a few hours last week is less abstract—family tradition. More than 50 years ago, as I told her, my granddad took me as a small child to the first inauguration I ever saw, the swearing in of Gov. Allan Shivers in 1952. Security not being much of a consideration back then, Granddad set me up on a first-floor Capitol windowsill near the governor and his family, giving me practically a front row seat.

Nearly a decade later, at Gov. Price Daniel's 1961 inauguration, I stood with Granddad in the old Walton Building at 11th and Congress as the almost 90-year-old building literally shook from the shock waves during the 19-gun salute that concluded the ceremony. I haven't missed many inaugurations since.

Someday, I hope Hallie will bring her kid to the Capitol to see someone who may not even be born yet put his or her hand on the Bible and swear to defend the Constitution and in the process, try to make Texas a better place. Maybe she'll tell her children that institutions endure, not office holders.

And just maybe she'll tell them how her daddy took her out of school one unseasonably warm winter day when she was in the third grade to see the inauguration of governor what's his name, that guy with the great hair.

Who is This Mystery Reader?

I was born in Knox City. I have been married 30 years.

I attended school in Rochester and Hardin-Simmons University.

No one knows that I was a Hardin-Simmons Cowgirl.

My favorite TV show is "Law and Order."

My favorite type of music is Classic and Christian. My favorite song is "Rushing Wind."

I like to knit, crochet, rubber stamp and cook.

The last book I read was Jack the Ripper-Case Solved, by Patricia Cornwell. I am now reading The Third Reich, by Albert Speer.

My favorite place in Texas is Fredericksburg. My favorite vacation spot in the world is Mexico City.

My best quality is my concern for other people who are hurting, both physically and emotionally.

My worst quality is that I am too sensitive about things. I cry at the drop of a hat. I hate that.

I hate it when people are nice to your face and talk behind your back.

My greatest personal accomplishment is raising wonderful children. (not by myself, of course).

For me, the best thing about Haskell is the people. They are friendly and concerned about one another.

Watch next week for the identity of this Mystery Reader.

Update

Last week's Mystery Reader was Amanda Hadaway of Haskell, teacher of three different computer classes at Haskell High School.

She and her husband, attorney Shane Hadaway, have three daughters; Carson, who is a second grader, Reagan, in kindergarten and Hollyn, age two and a half.

The family attends the Church of Christ, and they enjoy attending all sports events together, as well as watching the Sports Channel on TV.

Amanda started teaching here in the fall of 1991. It was her first teaching job. She first taught an adult computer class, and two of her students were Dan Riley Griffith and Tiffen Mayfield.

Not only busy with her young family, she is involved in projects and programs at the high school. Sponsor of the National Honor Society, she is also the cheerleader sponsor, the permanent senior sponsor and oversees the high school graduation activities each spring.

Amanda said that she and Shane love Haskell, and plan to be here the rest of their lives. "I will probably be buried right here at school," she added.

Thoughts for the Week

Last year, after the passing of Allie Belle Smith, her son, Bob Smith, received the following letter from a friend, who speaks of the loss of elderly parents and a generation of hardy people who helped to make us what we are. Thanks to Bob for sharing his message with us.

Dear Bob,

It was only yesterday that I learned of the recent passing of your mother. I am sorry.

I understand your mother was in her 90s. Since my father was 97 and my mother 90 at their passings, I have a philosophy of sorts about our loved ones who live such long lives. More than grieving at my parent's respective funerals and afterwards, I only felt gratitude they had been allowed to live long, productive lives, and that it had been possible for me and my sister to share in those lives well past our own middle ages.

To me, the real tragedy of death is when it involves those who go well before the time they might have anticipated, or die in some needless avoidable accident.

Our parents, yours and mine, were tough! They had to be to survive in some of the most trying times this country has ever endured. Life in West Texas (or in the case of my parents, Oklahoma) was no piece of cake. But they persevered because that's all they knew to do. They endured the droughts, the wars, the depressions because they knew they had to. They didn't complain, they didn't feel sorry for themselves, they just did what they had to do, which was TO LIVE.

I fear we will never see their ilk again. They were far more resilient, more optimistic, and yet suffered through far more difficult times than we have had to do, and most of them did it with a smile and a friendly wave of the hand.

So, I think we must not only feel gratitude for their strength, but even more so, that we were given the wonderful opportunity to share it with them for such a long time.

Don't feel badly at the loss of your mother any more than I did when my parents passed. I am just grateful to have had them in my life for such a large portion of my life.

Having said that, it's still hard. Sincerely, Tommy

The Haskell Indian Band was honored to march in the 2003 Governor's Inaugural Parade, Tues., Jan. 21. They represented the home county of Gov. Rick and Anita Perry. The band's color guard carried maroon and white flags in honor of Paint Creek High School, where Gov. Perry graduated.

The group's performance, attitude, dress and behavior were a wonderful reflection of their school and community. They demonstrated the excellent traditions they have been taught by their parents, teachers, coaches, Sunday school teachers, ministers and other mentors and role models. As a community you have always had high expectations for our students and have provided the support necessary to maintain them.

The students and sponsors left Haskell at 5 a.m. in order to be ready to march in the parade which started at 2:30 p.m. They were supported by a large contingent of Haskellites and exes who were attending the inauguration and the inaugural ball.

While waiting in the staging area, band members got to visit with members of the Buffalo Soldiers group from Fort Concho. In the parade they followed the famous Texas A&M Band.

First Lady Anita Thigpen Perry was a member of the Indian band while attending Haskell High School. She and Gov. Perry took time to stop and greet the band before taking their place in the parade.

Another thrill was seeing Haskell graduate, DPS officer Robert Rodriguez, who is in charge of the governor's security.

The weary group arrived back in Haskell about 10:00 p.m. after an experience of a lifetime.

Haskell County Junior Livestock Show results

Even with 24 fewer youngsters than last year entering the Haskell County Junior Livestock Show and Sale, the average dollar sales return per entrant was better than last year's, said Dale Bullinger, treasurer.

With more expected to come in before the final tally, the sales figure had reached $65,000.00 on Monday following the sale on Saturday. Last year's final sale totaled over $70,000.00. It was a record sale for the annual event.

Of the 104 students showing stock this year, 99 went through the sale, selling their animals.

Those involved in promoting this year's event were pleased with the interest and dedication exhibited by all those who contributed to the success of the show.

Congratulations to each of the following winners.

This Week's Devotional Message:

IT'S ABOUT TIME—FOR FAITH TO MAKE YOUR LIFE COUNT

How soon the days and years will pass
We know beyond a doubt;
Like sand within the hourglass,
The time is running out.
Of course we can't reduce its speed,
But to a great extent,
By doing any kindly deed
It can be wisely spent.

In church, your faith will show you how
To make each moment last
Enough to do some good right now,
Before it joins the past.
You'll learn you have so much to give,
As time alone will tell;
And so, it's not low LONG you live;
What matters is, how WELL!

If you said a prayer, wrote a card, offered an encouraging or comforting word, brought food, flowers, or helped at the church or house during our time of loss, we are truly grateful. We called him Husband, Daddy, Papa, Paw-Paw, Pee-Pa, Bob, and several other names, but evidenced by the many offerings of condolences, many of you called him "Friend." He will truly be missed. We are more mindful everyday of how great it is to live in a small community where people really care about their friends and neighbors. Thank you again for everything. Also thanks to Haskell Home Health, Bro. Donny Harbors, and Bro. Steve Peace.

Post-holiday slump?

Now that the holidays are over are you feeling a letdown? If so, you're not alone, says Dr. Madhukar Trivedi of UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Trivedi, an associate professor of psychiatry and expert in mood disorders, says most people suffer from post-holiday blahs. He has some suggestions to recover from the malaise:

Set realistic resolutions. If you aim too high, you'll just frustrate yourself.

Don't dwell on things that went wrong—think, instead, of what went well.

Do something nice for yourself. After all, you've been doing for others.

Exercise. It's been shown that exercise makes people feel better.

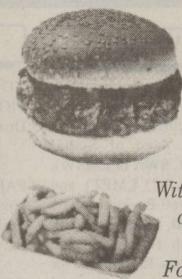

If after trying these tips you still feel out-of-sorts, you should make an appointment to talk with a specialist, such as your family physician or a counselor, psychologist or psychiatrist.

All deadlines are 5 p.m. Monday.
