is one fly that keeps pestering you and will not go away? Well, the Haskell Indians were not at a picnic Friday night, but had one fly, Dustin Flye, pestering them. One of the Big Country's premier running backs, Flye led the Munday Moguls to an opening football victory in this 2003 season, defeating the Indians by the score of 33-6.

The Moguls scored twice in the first quarter when Flye scampered to pay dirt on runs of 35 and 58 yards. Both tries for the PAT failed. Early in the second quarter, Munday blocked an Indian punt to gain a safety. The Moguls scored on an offensive fumble recovery to end their point production for the first half.

The gallant Indians moved the pigskin from their own 35 yard line in seven plays to cross the Mogul's goal line. Senior running back Holton Hernandez had two big plays in the scoring drive. Hernandez had a run of 21 yards and then caught a 21 yard TD strike from quarterback

Brandon McClatchey. The PAT try

Haskell 6, Munday 20.

The Indians shut down Munday's offensive weapon during the third quarter with a good defensive effort. Haskell dominated this quarter, having 15 offensive plays to Munday's 8.

However, it is really hard to keep an explosive back like Flye from coming back strong. Munday ended the scoring in this game with two scores and one extra point in the fourth quarter. Dustin Flye and Junior Sanchez both crossed into the end zone to put the score of this game at 33-6.

"We got beat by a good team Friday night. We didn't get the job done," said Coach Brad Brunson. "Our goal is to get better every week to be playing our best by the time district gets here. I thought our kids played very hard and didn't quit. This group will get better every week. We have to keep our heads up and keep working to progress. I'm certainly not down on them."

Deshea Phemister to serve one year in mission group

By Mary Kaigler

Young Deshea Phemister, junior student at Hardin-Simmons University, has early in her life heard an inner call to reach out, lift up, and perhaps even to bind wounds in the name of Christianity.

On Fri., Sept. 5, flying out of Dallas by way of Atlanta, Georgia, she will leave her studies in Abilene for a year, to live in the inner city in the southwest part of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, as part of a Mission Year group.

In Philadelphia, she will be part of a team of five other girls, ages 18-28, coming from across the country. Two are from New York, one from Washington, one from Arizona and one from Minnesota. Together, they will live in a house as a family unit, and will be working with Word Tabernacle, an inner city church. The team leader will be one of the older girls. Deshea said she is looking forward to being part of such a diverse group of young women.

community service site to work in, which can be anything from a hospital to a homeless shelter to one of the inner city schools. Each girl will work 15 hours a week in one of those places. The rest of the week they will be going out into the neighborhood on their own, purposely establishing relationships with their neighbors, shopping in the same stores, sharing with them about Jesus Christ, and becoming involved with the community.

The 2001 graduate of Haskell 7 High School is the daughter of Carlb and Lisa Milburn of Haskell and Randy and Lori Phemister of g Canyon.

In her freshman year at Hardin-Simmons she first heard about thesi Mission Year program during aH Grace Bible study one Tuesday.jg Becoming interested in the idea, she applied, and after interviews with o two representatives of Mission Year, was selected to be a part of the program.

When she returns from Philadelphia after a year, she will have two more years of study at₁₁ Hardin-Simmons toward getting her degree in Elementary Education. Weighing the time lost away from 12 her schooling against the personal gain of being a part of something she Abelieves to be of value, and having the time see and learn about a_{st} historical part of the country, Deshea? Phemister sees this next year as being 1 an important, ongoing part of her education as a human being.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Gubernatorial election gets 3-year head start

AUSTIN-The gubernatorial election is more than three years down the road, but it looks like the 2006 Republican primary will be a real political brawl.

Gov. Rick Perry likely will run again, but he could face Comptroller Carole Keeton Strayhorn, Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Potential Democratic gubernatorial candidates? To be announced. For roughly a century, from Reconstruction into the late 1970s, being chosen by voters in the Democratic primary was tantamount to winning the general election against whoever the Republican candidate happened to be. (Most folks soon would have a hard time remembering.)

But since Republican Dallas oilman Bill Clements got elected governor in 1978, the guarantee has been gone. Strayhorn, as Dewhurst pointed out recently, already seems to be campaigning. She recently hired two veteran communications operatives, and the most recent issue of Fiscal Notes, a publication begun when Bob Bullock was comptroller, points out on page one that of 91 recommendations she made in two reports to the Legislature, 61 were enacted for a combined general revenue savings of $1.3 billion.

To the great annoyance of other Republican officeholders, Strayhorn also recently pointed out that while the regular session had held to the no-new-taxes mantra, fee increases passed in lieu of tax hikes will cost Texans $2.7 billion more in fiscal 2004-05.

September 11 memorial set...

It's hard to believe that it has been nearly two years since the September State Cemetery in Austin. The memorial, created by a group of Austin architects who volunteered their time, is made from two steel columns salvaged from the World Trade Center in New York.

On a plaque detailing the events of that day is an excerpt from a speech by President Bush: "These acts shatter steel, but they cannot dent the steel of American resolve."

A different kind of lottery...

It doesn't get the publicity the bigdollar lottery games receive, but Texas has another lottery of sorts. For $10 a shot (so to speak), Texas hunters can register with the Parks and Wildlife Department for no-cost, once-in-a-lifetime hunts.

The package hunts range from a three-day alligator hunt (limit one, has to be longer than 10 feet) to a bird hunter's dream with a chance to bag turkey, dove, quail and pheasant.

For more information on the drawing, check the agency's Web site at www.tpwd.state.tx.us or call 800-895-4248. Deadline for entering is Nov. 1

Onions ring cash registers...

Don't tell 'em to cut the onions. They can make you cry or give you bad breath, but onions are making big money for Texas agricultural interests.

Texas is the nation's fourth-largest onion producer, growing 5.7 million hundredweight (100 pounds) of onions in 2002. Only California, Oregon and Washington, in that order, grow more onions than Texas.

The value of Texas' 2002 crop, according to the comptroller's office. was $122 million. The value of the crop has been growing every year since 1999, along with the amount harvested. A final onion fact: Texas

Threat of West Nile Virus not over yet

I NEVER WON A BLUE RIBBON

TIL I ENTERED

THIS COW WITH A

MAKEOVER!

A Texas Agricultural Experiment Station entomologist is warning all Texans the threat of mosquito-borne diseases may be just beginning for humans this year.

"The reason people need to be even more cautious now of West Nile virus and other such viruses from now on is because these birdreservoired, mosquito-borne viruses tend to build up during the early- to mid-part of the summer," said Dr. Jim Olson

"Mosquito-borne diseases like West Nile then begin to spill over into human populations in late-summer, from August until the coming of cold weather in mid- to late-September. Usually by the 15th of October, things begin to quiet down," he said.

"Thus, the chances for people to be encountered by an infected mosquito go way up in late summer and early fall," Olson said.

Even with the beginning of the school year, outdoor activities continue, and people still need to think about preventing mosquitoborne diseases. "In fact, if anything, they need to intensify their protective behaviors," he said.

By the end of July, the Texas Department of Health reported 13 human cases of West Nile virus in nine counties this year.

Certain occupations-such as those that require working outside in the early morning or at night-carry more risk. Police officers, firefighters and those who work in open-air facilities such as refineries "need to be extremely careful," he said.

Everyone needs to make sure mosquitos don't enter their homes, particularly the species that primarily cycles the virus. The Culex quinquefasciatus, or southern house mosquito, is primarily a bird feeder and will only feed on humans when they have no other choice, such as being trapped in a building or home, Olson suggested wearing clothing that is loose-fitting. "With tightfitting clothing, mosquitos can drill right through the fabric," he said.

Long-sleeved and long-legged clothing provides protection for skin. Clothing should be light-colored because mosquitos are attracted to darker hues, he said.

•Prevent mosquito breeding around the house by removing all sources of standing water, dumping artificial containers and removing those containers.

•Prevent mosquitos from getting into homes with the proper screening and sealing frames doors and windows. Many human infections of West Nile and other encephalitis viruses are caused by bites either in the home or places close by, such as yards and patios.

Citronella candles offer some protection outside if they are used in areas with little wind movement, but Olson urged people to practice fire safety when burning those. Insect-killing devices, such as the "bug zappers" and the newer mosquito-trapping devices should be placed at a distance-about 50 feetfrom the area you're trying to protect. "They do tend to attract more mosquitos than they kill," he said.

Protect animals against

While you're taking precautions against West Nile virus and other mosquito-borne diseases for yourself, take them for your horses and pets as well.

"Animals are susceptible and, in some cases, can be severely affected by the West Nile virus," said Dr. Jim Olson, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

If horses have not been vaccinated, owners should do this immediately. Since the vaccination is not always effective, protect horses from bites by covering them with blankets in the early-morning and evening hours; placing them in mosquito-proofed buildings, or treating with approved repellents.

The symptoms of West Nile are listlessness and high fever, followed by a drop-off in eating. Dogs become unstable while walking, then become comatose, Olson said.

West Nile virus, or encephalitis, is an infection of the brain, Olson said. The most serious manifestation of West Nile virus is fatal encephalitis in humans and horses, as well as certain domestic and wild birds and animals.

The West Nile virus was first isolated in the 1930s in the blood of a woman in the West Nile Province of Uganda. Officials do not know how the virus migrated from Central Africa to the United States, where it first caused problems in the New York area in the summer of 1999. A total of 753 human cases and 17 deaths have been reported since it entered the U.S.

Humans and horses are usually infected by the bite of a mosquito that has fed on an infected bird.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, West Nile virus is primarily transmitted by infectious mosquitos, but there are other ways this can occasionally happen, such as transfusions with contaminated blood, organ transplants and through mother's milk, and bird-to-bird transmissions have been proven in lab settings. There is no documented evidence of person-to-person transmission of West Nile virus by contact.

People can protect themselves and their animals by reducing mosquito populations. Since mosquitos lay their eggs in standing water, dump any found in old tires, flower pots, bird baths, or other artificial containers, Olson said. Keep wellfitting screens on doors and windows. Olson said.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, West Nile virus is commonly found in Africa, West Asia and the Middle East. It is closely related to the St. Louis encephalitis virus and can infect humans, birds, mosquitoes, horses and some other mammals.

People who have contracted the virus will have flu-like symptoms to begin with, Olson said.

"Generally, that's where it stopsthe headache, the fever, general ache," he said. However, the virus can lead to a stiff neck, lack of coordination, coma, and possibly death.

To avoid mosquitos and the possibility of disease, Olson recommended the three P's:

•Protection of self, by wearing protective clothing and a repellent of choice and avoiding being outside during the times of day when mosquitos are active.

Weathers Whys: Wind Shear

Q: You hear the term "wind shear" a lot. What does it mean?

A: Wind shear is an abrupt change in direction or speed of the wind, and it can be deadly for aircraft, says Andrew Odins of Texas A&M University. "Wind shear can occur at just about any altitude," Odins explains.

"Wind shear can accompany a microburst, which is a strong downward wind usually associated with a thunderstorm and these can be very powerful and also deadly. On some days, the winds near the ground can be almost completely still, but just a few thousand feet above the winds can be very powerful. When you have such rapid changes in wind speed and wind direction with height, wind shear can occur. That's why many airports now have special equipment used to detect wind shear."

Q: How does wind shear affect an airplane?

Community-wide spraying can be effective if done properly, he said.

"Any spraying that is done needs to be based on need, as indicated by the presence of mosquitos and, even more so, the presence of the virus in that area," Olson explained.

Proper surveillance by health authorities can determine whether spraying is needed.

"Indiscriminate spraying of mosquitos that is not out of a sense of need is not recommended. There has to be an actual need. Otherwise, other measures are sufficient," he said.

A: Wind shear can cause havoc on airplanes in flight, especially during takeoff and landing, Odins adds. The abrupt change in wind direction can be extremely tricky even for flying into a headwind, it tends to create extra lift on the wings, and the City Council report

At a regular meeting of the Haskell City Council, Aug. 25, approval was given for proceeding with the City's acceptance of the Memorial Civic Center. Attorney Shane Hadaway was named to do the legal work involved in the new arrangement of ownership, as necessitated by law. An appointed board of directors will oversee the operation of the Center.

The Council accepted the property bid received from Sheri Morrow by the Appraisal District for purchase of the lot behind the Heads or Tails building.

The next regular meeting of the Council was set for Mon., Sept. 8.

cicadas and their killers ontrolling

Summer's hot weather is stirring up two irritating insects-cicada killers and their noisy prey, cicadas.

Dr. John Jackman, an entomologist with Texas Cooperative Extension, said cicada killers-wasps that can grow to 1.5 inches in length -paralyze cicadas with their stings, drag paralyzed prey to their sandy, burrowed nests, lay eggs upon them and allow their larvae to eat the captive cicadas.

Only cicada killers' larvae eat cicadas, he said. Adults feed on flower nectar.

"They're large enough that when you see them, you get concerned," he said. "They'll fly at you, but they're only bluffing, trying to chase you away from their nests. They almost never sting."

Jackman said he has never heard of cicada killers stinging people; they might sting if captured.

"It's not likely at all," he said. "It just bothers people when cicada killers fly at them."

Jackman said aerosol insecticides hardly knock down flying adult cicada killers, but changing the texture of sandy soil, planting groundcovers or covering sandy soil with plastic might help control them.

Controlling cicadas ought to help control cicada killers, but he said cicadas, insects with oversized eyes, transparent wings and musical membranes in their abdomens, cannot be controlled.

"There's not much you can do to control adult cicadas but to wait them out," he said. "You could spray insecticide, but that becomes a question of where to start and, where to stop."

Jackman said spraying trees from top to bottom and killing each and every cicada seems useless because more would fly into those trees within days.

Adult cicadas spend their summer afternoons in treetops, he said, where adult males make music to attract females with two vibrating membranes in each side of their abdomens.

"They're the guys that make the big, loud buzzing sounds in the heat of the day," he said.

Jackman said adult cicadas use their beaks to suck nectar from twigs, and females lay their eggs in twigs, which causes some twigs to snap. Within weeks, cicada nymphs hatch, fall and burrow into soil, where they feed on tree roots and mature for three to 17 years. Overall, he said, cicadas cause little damage to trees.

The theme for National 5-A-Day Month is "Get Healthy America!" The theme for National Food Safety Education Month promoted by the National Restaurant Association Educational Foundation as well as ignore it." These efforts are supported by many organizations and establishments.

Educators are working to increase public understanding of foodborne illness, also known as food poisoning, and how it can be prevented. Each year, it is estimated that one in four Americans will become sick from a foodborne illness, 1 in 1,000 will be hospitalized, and more than 5,000 will die. Foodborne illness is caused by eating foods contaminated with bacteria. Bacteria cannot be seen, smelled or tasted.

Fruits and vegetables are an important part of a healthy diet. Research shows that eating at least five servings of fruits and vegetables each day can reduce the risk for diabetes, heart disease, cancer and other chronic diseases. However, fruits and vegetables can become contaminated with microorganisms during the time between harvest and when they are eaten. If contaminated, foodborne illness

Simple steps can be taken to prevent foodborne illness from fresh fruits and vegetables during storage. These include:

Separate raw meat from fresh fruits and vegetables in the refrigerator. This helps eliminate cross-contamination, which is the transfer of harmful bacteria from one food to another. An example of crosscontamination would be if juice from raw meat dripped onto fresh produce in the refrigerator.

growth, do not wash fresh fruits and vegetables before storing them. Instead, wash them right before eating or preparing.

Refrigerate cut fresh fruits and vegetables at 40 degrees F or below within two hours of purchase or preparation. Store these as well as whole fresh fruits and vegetables that require refrigeration in the crisper or produce drawer.

Discard any pre-cut or prepackaged fresh fruits and vegetables with a expired 'use-by' date. Also, spoiled.

Keep refrigerators clean. Wipe up spills.

Make sure that room temperature storage areas are cool, dry, dark, and pest-free.

Separate fresh fruits and vegetables from household chemicals

BRIGHTEN YOUR LIFE WITH THE GOLDEN RULE

- Do unto others, the Bible has said,
- As you'd have others do unto you; And if you will follow this passage you've read, You will find it is certainly true
- That in business, your home life or simply with friends, It is easier getting along
- If you'll never be forced into making amends, Just because you have done someone wrong.
- So to learn more about this unfailing advice That will frequently serve as a warning.
- You should go to your church, where it's only the price Of an hour on next Sunday morning.

Paint Creek FFA elects officers outstanding members, the Paint Creek FFA Chapter held their officer election for the 2003-04 school year, on Aug. 25.

Before the election, time was given for each candidate for office to express their vision for Paint Creek FFA and to answer specific questions on specific concerns and goals.

At the conclusion of the question-
