to end Haskell season

On a cold, clear night in December, the wrath of Windthorst clouded the hopes of the Haskell Indians for victory. Thus ended the dream for the state championship.

The Indians warmed the crowd when running back Josh Barbee, Mister Outside, took the opening kickoff some 69 yards to the Trojans' 27 yard line. Barbee got the next two offensive plays, and picked up 8 on one play and 12 on the other; first and goal from the 7 yard line for the Indians. On the fourth down and 2 yards to go for the "touch," Mister Inside, Cameron Short, got the call and blasted his way to the promised land, the Windthorst end zone. The PAT kick try was blocked, but a penalty was called on the Trojans. The Indians then elected to go for the 2-point conversion, which failed when Barbee was tackled on the oneyard line.

At the 8:29 mark in the first quarter, Haskell led 6 to 0. The Indians then used the on-side kick, to the surprise of the Trojans, to regain the pigskin at the Trojans' 49 yard line. This was a great call by the Indian coaching staff. Haskell was unable to move the football, and was forced to punt.

Windthorst then put together a 10play, 70-yard drive to tie the game. Upon a successful PAT kick, the Trojans took the lead 7 to 6 at the 2:55 mark in the first quarter, and they never look back. Windthorst, the defending State Champs in Class A, would score in every quarter.

With only 0:59 seconds to go in the first half, the Trojans put together a 49-yard drive in 6 plays. They again tacked on the PAT kick to lead 14 to 6 at the intermission.

During the third and fourth quarters, the Trojans' running back, Kevin Hoff, a 6'1," 208 pounder, would score once in each quarter. One TD on a 15-yard run, and one on a one-vard run. Windthorst would add only one extra point during the second half.

The Indians fought as gamely as possible, but could not get anything going on a sustained drive. Haskell did not have any good field position to start any series on offense the entire second half. Although outsized, and not as speedy as Windthorst, the Indians put forth great effort and made the Indian fans really proud of their own Haskell Indians.

It looks as if Windthorst has the team to again win the Class A State Championship. This loss to them brings to a close one of the most successful football seasons in Indian history.

Haskell closes its 2004 campaign with a record of 12-2-District Champs, Area Champs, Regional Champs, and Quarterfinal Runnerup-a truly impressive record.

The entire town of Haskell, thanks the Indians, the school, and Coach Brad Brunson and his staff for an enjoyable and successful football season.

Haskell had 142 yards on 44 rushes, with Brandon McClatchey getting 22 yards on 9 carries. Josh Barbee had 21 rushes for 71 yards. Cameron Short got 35 yards on 13 rushes and one TD. Ronald Chapman had 14 yards on one rush. McClatchey threw for 7 yards, having one completion for 5 attempts and one interception. Ronald Chapman had one catch for 7 yards.

The Indians had one of the best offensive rushing teams, and one of best defensive teams in the Big Country this year; something that Coach Brad Brunson can build on for the next campaign.

"Very proud of these young men," said Coach Brunson. "They are a true testament to the fact that the grandest quality of a true achiever is not natural talent or acquired skill, but persistence-the will to keep going when the way grows hard. The true achiever never gives up when difficulty comes. He fights off the discouragement of defeat. Persistence is the important quality of a consistent winner. Every one of these kids have seen that hard work can overcome adversity in any situation. That's what this game teaches. That's what athletics promotes. And that's what makes the difference between a life of happiness and a life of mediocrity."

Students in the News

The 2005 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges will include the name of B. J. Opsahl of Haskell, a student at Texas State Technical College West Texas who has been selected as a national outstanding campus leader.

Campus nominating committees and editors of the annual directory have included students based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

Opsahl joins an elite group of students from more than 1,000 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Whenever I go to the grocery store, I can get "lost" in the produce section; like a little kid in a candy store, I want everything I see. But one item I never pass up is fresh Bing cherries; even if they're so pricey that I have to start thinking about a second mortgage, they're going home with me.

Now there's some news from Agricultural Research Service scientists that soothes my conscience (if not my wallet) a little bit about splurging on those cherries: Results from a preliminary study by the ARS scientists and their university colleagues suggest that some natural compounds in those plump, juicy Bing cherries may reduce arthritic inflammation.

If you're like me-in other words, with more "miles" on yourself than you'd care to admit-you're probably finding that these days you have just a few more aches and twinges in your joints than in the past. According to these scientists, cherries could helpand what's more, eating cherries may also help lessen the severity of other inflammatory conditions, such as cardiovascular disease.

Actually, this isn't the first time someone in the scientific community has suggested that cherries can fight inflammation. But the ARS study was the first ever to track the antiinflammatory effects of fresh Bing cherries in a controlled experiment studies, whereas the ARS scientists were the first to test key inflammatory disease indicators in blood samples from healthy volunteers who were fed precise amounts of fresh Bing cherries.

Hours: M.-Th. 8:30 to 5; Fri. 8:30 to 1

In the ARS study, conducted in California, 10 healthy women (gosh, where was I when they were asking for volunteers?) were asked to eat 45 fresh, pitted Bing cherries for breakfast. The women, aged 22 to 40, were told not to eat strawberries or other fresh fruits and veggies, or to drink red wine or tea, for two days before the cherry breakfast. That's because those foods have high levels of antioxidants, thought to fight inflammation, and they might have interfered with the scientists' ability to gauge the effectiveness of the cherries.

The researchers were particularly interested in a very painful arthritic condition called gout. During an attack of gout, crystals of a naturally occurring chemical called uric acid accumulate in joints (especially the toes) and cause pain. Urate in blood plasma is a "precursor"-sort of a "preview of coming attractions"-of these uric acid crystals. So what the scientists monitored very closely was the volunteers' blood plasma levels of urate, checked before the volunteers ate the cherries and at intervals of 90 minutes, three hours and five hours afterward. They also after they ate the cherries. Also, the levels of urate removed from they body in urine increased during thosel five hours.

The scientists also checked the levels of certain substances in thel blood that indicate a healthy immunel system is at work, fighting inflammation. One of these is called C-reactive protein, and it's produced by the liver. When you have an inflammation, such as a gout attack, the level of C-reactive protein in your body increases rapidly. But in a healthy body, the levels of C-reactive protein in the blood are extremely low.

Another indicator of an inflammation is increased levels of a natural substance called nitric oxidea "bad guy," since it's thought to play a role in damaging arthritic joints.

In the California study, when the volunteers' blood was checked three hours after they ate the cherries, their levels of C-reactive protein and nitric oxide were lower than at the startnot dramatically lower, but definitely headed in the right direction.

For me, finding out that I really need to eat lots more of those Bing cherries is the best science news I've heard since they announced that chocolate is actually good for you!

Baitz family holds reunion

Emmalee and Rick Phemister recently hosted the Fritz and Emma Baitz family reunion in Haskell on Friday after Thanksgiving. The Baitz family grew up in the Old Glory community, and the gathering marked the first official reunion since the death of their parents.

The Baitz's lived on a farm east of Old Glory, and their mother primarily raised the children after the untimely death of their father in 1938, when he was killed by lightening. Emma Baitz continued to farm the land and raise her family of five children, all under the age of ten, instilling in them respect for the land and love for God and all His creation.

Attending the reunion were Dorothy (Baitz) and Joe Clark of Sagerton; Patsy, Don and Tom Bivens, Emmalee, Rick, Chambray Jean and Cassidy Jo Phemister, all of Haskell; Ray and Nancy Clark of Stamford; Mae (Baitz) and Leon Stegemoeller, Clayton and Paula Stegemoeller, all of Sagerton, Stephanie and Matt Dudensing of San Antonio; Michelle Stegemoeller and Ross and Christi Stegemoeller, all of Lubbock; Bryce Jonston of Lubbock and Water Valley; Calvin and Cherrye Lynn Stegemoeller of Duncan, Oklahoma; Eric Stegemoeller of Dallas; Clyde Stegemoeller of Richardson; Clifford, Brannon and Bailey Stegemoeller of Hamlin; Ruby (Baitz) Olson of San Angelo; Melvin and Annella Baitz, Fred and Tami Baitz, all of Sagerton; Kacy, Grace and Aiden Fred Baitz of Waco; and Kami Baitz of Dallas.

After the Thanksgiving meal, families were introduced and Leon Stegemoeller gave a brief history of the Baitz family for the benefit of the younger generation.

Four new additions to the family in 2004 were, Aiden Fred Baitz, Cassidy Jo Phemister, Micah Ray Smith and Eric David Vogel.

Family members recognized for serving in the United States military were Mindi Stegemoeller, with the Army in Germany; Brandon Cotton, with the National Guard in Iraq; Phillip Clark, with the Army in Korea; and Eric Vogel, with the Marines in Yuma, Arizona.

Games of Bunco concluded the evening's entertainment. The family plans to meet regularly in reunion in the years ahead.

Sanders family celebrates holidays

Several of the children, grandchildren and great grandchildren of the late Jack and Sallie Sanders, longtime residents of Weinert, gathered over the weekend at the Circle S Ranch, southwest of Haskell, to celebrate their Thanksgiving and Christmas gettogether.

In the past, as long as their parents lived, the family always went home for the holidays, Now, each year, their oldest sister, Lona Mae Phelps of Haskell invites all the family for a gathering between Thanksgiving and Christmas. This year Phelps had all of her immediate family there.

Attending were Kenneth and Elaine Campbell and their daughter Karen Mitchell and her children, Kendall and Allison, who brought two of their friends and their Aunt Donna Tidrow; Travis Sanders of Coleman; Andy and Marlene Sanders of Cross Plains; John Hardman, son of the late Eva Hardman of Cary, North Carolina, who traveled the farthest; Martha and Bill Maupin and Loretta of Odessa; B. C. and Marie Kirkland of Fort Worth; Walter and Sue Cox, Brenda, Austin and Sallie Sartain, Junior, Christi, Kade, Drew and Macy Cox, all of Omaha; Jacky, Sandra and Jaclyn, Ricky, Shana and Shambry Sanders of Weatherford; Rocky Sanders and his son, Shawn; Kathy and their two children of Abilene.

Sunday morning, the family exchanged fondest memories of spending Christmas at their Grandma and Daddy Jack's house in Weinert. The house had twelve foot ceilings and a Christmas tree almost reaching the ceiling, stacked high with presents. Their Daddy Jack always bought all the daughters and daughter-in-laws a dress, and Mamma bought the boys and sonsin-law a shirt for Christmas. This year the family learned that two of their sisters always opened the boxes ahead of time, picked out which dress they liked best and put their own names on the box. Several members of the family could not be there to exchange these memories this year.

Tom and Mary Kaigler of Haskell were married in Lubbock, Dec. 8, 1944.

MR. AND MRS. TOM KAIGLER

Kaiglers to celebrate

60th anniversary

Sun., Dec. 19, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m., they will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary at a reception in their honor for community friends and family at the Haskell First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

The Kaiglers have been residents of Haskell since July 4, 1985, when after retiring, they moved to Tom's home town. Born and raised in Haskell, he is the son of the late C. M. and Lela Park Kaigler, longtime speech teacher with the Haskell school system. His grandfather, Mose E. Park, was an early-day settler and sheriff of Haskell County.

The couple met in Lubbock, after Tom returned from serving in World War II as a medic attached to the 25th Infantry Division in the South Pacific, where he was wounded on Guadalcanal and awarded a purple heart.

Through the years they have lived in Lubbock, Amarillo, Midland and Austin. Beginning in early 1944, until his retirement, Tom was associated with franchises of the Tom Huston Peanut Company.

In her working career, Mary was employed ten years as a bookkeeper with Sears, Roebuck and Co., in Midland, and retired after sixteen years as a decorating consultant with the Sherwin-Williams Co., in both Midland and Austin. In 1997 she began writing for the Haskell Free Press, and later became the editor.

The Kaiglers have one daughter, Dr. Karen Kaigler-Walker, professor and chair of the Department of Marketing at Woodbury University in Burbank, California. She and her husband, M. E. 'Bud' Walker, live in Altadena, California, and will be hosting the event.

They invite everyone who would like to join the Kaiglers in celebrating their anniversary, to come and share in their happiness at having reached

Judge: State should pay for school construction

AUSTIN-District Judge John Dietz ruled parts of the state's school funding system inadequate last September, but the final judgment he issued last week had a major- and initially overlooked-surprise: The state should pay school districts for bricks and mortar as well as teachers and books.

He had not mentioned paying for facilities in his initial ruling. In the written order, however, Dietz said a school district "cannot provide a constitutionally adequate education without a sufficient support network." That network, the judge said, included adequate and properly maintained facilities.

In his 125-page "Findings of Fact," Dietz used El Paso county's Ysleta Independent School District as one example.

The district has not floated a bond issue in two decades. Now it has 21 schools more than 40 years old and more than 60 percent of its classrooms more than 30 years old. To bring all its facilities up to standard, the judge said, the district would need $550 million.

The school funding issue remains academic until the Texas Supreme Court acts on the state's appeal of Dietz' ruling.

> Judge denies injunction request...

State Farm Insurance went to district court in Austin late last week seeking an injunction to block the Texas Department of Insurance from requiring it to lower its homeowner rates and issue refunds but the judge quickly threw out the request.

million. In the motion filed last week, State Farm argued the state was attempting to get around an earlier court ruling that the company did not have to reduce rates and make refunds. Bottom line: Don't base your holiday shopping budget on getting a check from State Farm.

Recounts don't change results... The recount requested by incumbent Rep. Talmadge Heflin (R-Houston) shows he still lost to Democrat Hubert Vo by 33 votes. (The recount netted Vo one more vote.) Heflin also has filed a challenge in the House, but Vo came to Austin last week along with 16 other freshmen House members for an orientation at the Capitol. In another contested race, Democrat Yvonne Gonzalez-Toureilles of Alice added 11 more votes to her margin, defeating Rep. Eric Opiela (R-Karnes City) by 846 votes.

New state auditor...

It's not a large agency, but the state auditor's office plays a big role in Texas government. The office audits state agencies and their programs and acts as a watchdog agency that does more than count beans.

Last week, the agency got a new head, retired Legislative Budget Board director John Keel, a former state representative who worked for Bob Bullock. He replaces retired auditor Lawrence Alwin.

The amount of money involved in the dispute may not be significant enough to justify retaining an attorney, and so you may think there is nothing you can do. Do not give up. You may be able to address your complaint through small claims court.

Small claims court is an attractive, economic alternative to litigation. Hiring an attorney and engaging in litigation can be very costly and time consuming. Legal battles can cost tens of thousands of dollars and take several years to reach a verdict.

Small claims court, on the other hand, does not require you to hire an attorney. You are required to pay a filing fee, which ranges approximately from $70 to $100. You can sue for an amount up to $5,000.

Small claims court is handled through the appropriate local justice of the peace in the county where the person or business you are suing is located. In order to begin the process, call the court clerk and tell him or her that you want to file a small claims lawsuit.

You will need to provide the clerk with the correct name and address of the person you are suing. If you are suing a business, you will have to find out who the agent of service is. You can obtain this information from the Secretary of State's Office. If the business has a sole proprietor, you can sue the owner directly.

A constable or sheriff will serve the defendant, who must respond to your allegations. The court clerk will then set a date for trial and you and the opposing party are required to attend. If you do not appear, you may lose your case by default.

Weathers Whys

Wind Chill And Freezes

Q:Does the wind chill temperature make water freeze faster?

A: It might seem that way, but the answer is no, says Brent McRoberts of Texas A&M University. "Wind chill is how we measure the affect of cold air on people," McRoberts explains. "It is based on how much heat loss from exposed skin is caused by cool air moving over it. The more wind, the higher the rate of heat loss at a quicker rate. So because wind chill is based on how much heat is removed from a human body, there is no such thing as a wind chill on non-living things. So water will not freeze faster than the actual air temperature."

Q: So the wind chill temperature does not affect water pipes either?

A: No, adds McRoberts. "There is a faster heat loss because of the higher winds, so the amount of time for an object to cool to the actual air temperature is less," he adds. "But things such as pipes or car radiators will not get colder than the actual air temperature no matter how high the winds are. So if the 'real' temperature is 10 degrees but the wind chill makes it feel like minus-30, your car's radiator will not drop lower than 10 degrees.'

Carefully collect and prepare your evidence. You may want to bring eye witnesses and relevant documents such as photographs, bills, or written leases or contracts. Get to the point quickly by describing the actual event that gave rise to your claim, stating how much money you are requesting, and telling the judge the events that led to your loss. It is a good idea to practice your presentation in advance to avoid forgetting key points.

The trial is heard by the justice of the peace, unless either side asks for a jury. The procedure is relatively informal. Both sides simply tell the judge their stories. The judge may also question witnesses in attendance.

As the plaintiff, you have the burden of proof and you will go first. After you finish, the defendant will make his or her presentation. In most cases, the judge will immediately make a ruling. If you prefer, you can request a jury trial instead.

If you win, hopefully the losing side will comply with the ruling and satisfy the judgment. However, this is not always the case. You, not the court, are responsible for enforcing the judgment. If the opposing party does not comply with the judgment, you may be able take further civil action such as filing a lien or a writ of execution. You may also be able to report the judgment to the major credit bureaus.

You may wish to consult with an attorney at this point. And while you may think consulting with an attorney afterwards defeats the purpose of small claims court, bear in mind that the consultation will involve procedural options and still be much cheaper than litigation.

In addition, if you lose, you can file an appeal in county court. You must file within 10 days to have the case reheard at the county court.

Vaccine helps protect children from flu risks

As the weather turns colder and children are together indoors more, the chances of youngsters getting the flu increase.

The local Department of State Health Services (DSHS) clinic has vaccine available for children covered under the Texas Vaccines for Children (TVFC) program who are considered "high risk."

The high-risk groups include children who are: ages 6 months through 23 months; ages 2 through 18 years with chronic medical conditions; ages 6 months through 18 years on chronic aspirin therapy; ages 6 months through 18 years who live in a home with a child age 6 months or younger.

Children who are uninsured or underinsured, covered by the Children's Insurance Health Program (CHIP), who are of Native American or Native Alaskan heritage, as well as those on Medicaid are eligible to receive vaccine through the TVFC program. This program guarantees that flu and other childhood vaccines are available to health care providers at no cost for children meeting the criteria

"All children need plenty of sleep, physical activity, nutritional food, lots of water to drink and encouragement to wash their hands frequently," said Dr. James Zoretic, medical director of DSHS Health Services Region 2/3 in Arlington.

"Good prevention practices for children and adults include thorough hand washing and covering coughs and sneezes," he said.

To schedule a high-risk child for a flu shot, contact the DSHS clinic in Stamford at (325) 773-5681.

Citrus vs cancer

by Jane Rowan Haskell Co. Extension Agent

Orange juice could be the secret weapon against childhood cancer. Texas Agriculture Experiment Station scientists found compounds in citrus, called limonoids. These targeted and stopped tumor cells in the lab.

Unlike other anti-cancer drugs, limonoids are naturally occurring and have no harmful side effects to humans. Eight of the discovered limonoids were found in extractions at the Weslaco Citrus Center.

This Week's Devotional Message:

FAITH WILL TEACH YOU HOW TO PRAY

A prayer is intended to be a beautiful communion with the Almighty, but we sometimes turn it instead in to a request for some material gain: often of doubtful benefit. To do so is to dishonor God by assuming that He is not already aware of your needs. So go to your church this Sunday and pray for His guidance to help you become a better person. And, instead of attempting to give God information, just thank Him for what you already have and reaffirm your trust in His infinite wisdom in knowing what is really best for

Holidays don't have to be so stressful

by Jane Rowan Haskell Co. Extension Agent Christmas can be a trying time for families. During the holidays it's easy to let time and money run out.

To have a holly-jolly Christmas, Extension specialists recommend that families stop and look at their priorities. If it is important to save money this season have children hand-make gifts. Draw names in large groups so each person only has to buy one gift. Gag gifts can also be given.

If spending time with loved ones is most important make time to do that. Sometimes times it is the best present.
