

SCOOP SAYS
By J. M. FORBES

Well, Clean Up Week has done some good. We have seen more people wielding hoes and rakes about their premises in the last few days than even before in Muleshoe. But I want to put the Chamber on the carpet for a second. Next year have the Clean Up week way up in June.

We had mowers ready to mow, but where were the weeds? They don't show their heads until they know it's going to be warm and stay warm. We'd have had more clean vacant lots this summer, if we would have procrastinated a little. Clean Up in this section, we fear, can't be tuned in with the national observance.

First Baptist folks have grass growing nicely on their church lawn, and it certainly improves the looks of things. A little later on, drive by the A. S. Stovall estate on West Fifth and look their terraced lawn over; it's a pretty spot, and Mrs. Stovall is certainly to be congratulated.

Lee Pool and Jesse James are coming along pretty well with their shrubs and grass on the First National lawn. Well, Jesse says he much prefers a sit-in-down job and yesterday was wondering how long it would take him, if he worked steadily, to become cashier. He doesn't want to be president, just cashier, so he can handle more money.

But that's kinda getting off the clean up idea. You wait until Muleshoe has 84 more blocks of paving and you'll see some of the finest grass lawns and shrubs in the whole area. Paving just naturally makes people want to pretty things up.

When Charles Lenuu, the lumber man heard about Clean Up Week, he didn't wait to set the wheels in motion in his own balliwick. With men and a truck, he scoured the alleys and vacant lots of Lenuu addition, cleaned it up proper, and the Chamber of Commerce committee in charge was most happy.

They thought Charles and his forces ought to have special mention and we do, too. But he went further and furnished a man and a truck for Thursday, the day when all trash all over town was to be gathered up and made ready for the volunteers to haul it to the dump grounds.

This is the sort of cooperation that made Clean Up Week a success, in the whole community.

Cleanliness, both personal and around the premises where one lives or does his work, and in public places, ought to be taught in school so that when the youngsters grow up they will be in the habit of keeping things orderly.

If everyone would see to it that he lets no piece of paper get away from him, for instance, the town would look better all the time and much of cleaning up expense would be eliminated for the city.

Brighten the corner where you are and keep it bright.

HE WATCHES OUT FOR THE LITTLE FELLOWS

Howdy, Mr. Redwine!

As he watches out for the kids at grade school while they cross the busy street, J. J. Redwine, constable, is usually grinning, like above.

We figure only way to get the grin off his face would be to drive careless around his kids. But motorists are very considerate around the schools and very careful.

The Journal salutes, on behalf of all the people, a grand fellow who's doing a grand job. Mr. Redwine thinks he's working with a grand bunch of people, too, so it's a mutual feeling.

All Precincts In County Approve Lyndon Johnson

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, in his bid to head the Texas delegation to the Democratic National Convention this year, made a clean sweep of all seven precincts in Bailey County in conventions held in each voting box Saturday.

Bailey County went along with the great majority in Texas; Senator Johnson won a great victory over Gov. Allan Shivers, who sought to again lead the Texas group.

Bailey County precincts held conventions at 2:30. Here in Muleshoe nearly 100 attended the meeting, which was over promptly in 20 minutes.

The group was called to order by precinct chairman George Johnson, and Karl Lovelady was unanimously chosen for convention chairman. A slate of candidates and alternates was presented and unanimously elected. C. D. Gupton was elected convention secretary.

These delegates and alternates were pledged to support Senator Johnson for state delegation leader.

Senator Johnson won control of delegates from a big majority, 4 to 1, of the precincts of Texas.

Water Wrangle Protests Posted By Mad Merchants

Although little overt action is being taken in the dispute between Bailey county citizens and the City of Lubbock over the latter's taking underground water from the sandhills, considerable planning and work is being carried out quietly and without fanfare and publicity.

At least one group of Muleshoe merchants are silently protesting the plan of Lubbock to pump millions of gallons of water from beneath Bailey county to Lubbock.

In one block of main street, merchants have posted signs in their windows proclaiming their disapproval. The signs read, "Bailey County minus water equals desolation," and "1956. Capital of the West Plains. 1960. Desert suburb of Lubbock," and others in a similar vein.

Although there is comparatively little being done on the surface locally, many meetings are still being held and more and more communities pledge their cooperation in the search for some way to prevent the draining of water from this area.

Monday night the Sudan Water Conservation Committee was formed, following a meeting at which members of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce, Jay Cees, Bi-State Water Committee and others spoke. The Sudan group voted to elect a representative from their area to the governing board of the Bi-State Water Committee.

Plans Completed For First Annual Celebration Of National Cotton Week In City May 14-19

Alfalfa Mill Here Begins Processing Hay From An Estimated 1600 Acres

Muleshoe alfalfa dehydrating plant began operations Tuesday, first hay to be processed this year coming from the farm of E. A. Ivy, who lives west of the city.

Arl's Leveridge, manager, said it was good quality hay and turnout appears to be good. Aphids went to work on alfalfa early in the year, but lady bugs came to the rescue and ate nearly all the aphids. Unless something else untoward occurs, this will likely be a good year for hay growers.

The mill was paying $12 per ton, same as the price paid last year.

Hay in the area is growing nicely, Leveridge said. He thought acreage this year will be about the same as last year, with newly planted hay about equaling that plowed up. The mill has tentative agreements on nearly 1600 acres of alfalfa for this season, and a busy time ahead is seen.

A 24-hour schedule of operation likely will be instituted by Monday of the coming week. There are plenty of field hands and workers at the plant. The alfalfa crop puts money to circulating here early in the year, what with payments for the hay and to the workers.

City Paving Bids To Be Opened Here At 2 pm Tomorrow

Bids will be opened tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 2 o'clock for paving approximately 84 blocks in Muleshoe and for resurfacing an estimated 96 blocks of streets already paved but needing repair.

The City Commission will meet to open the bids with city engineer Ralph Douglas and a representative of a San Antonio bond agency.

The opening of the bids will advance one step further the program for paving city streets which began with voters passing a $50,000 bond issue in April.

The city's specifications for the bidders offer two plans of bidding. In one plan, the contractor bids on the job to be paid in cash at the completion, with all the preliminary work of securing property owners approval, etc., being done for the contractor.

The alternate method of bidding would pay the contractor in paving assessment certificates, and he would be responsible for securing approvals, liens, and similar paper work.

The Commission feels that by offering two methods of payment to bidders they will increase the number of bids, and will also have a better chance to make a better contract with the successful bidder.

Candidate Rally Set At Needmore

A candidate speaking and pie sale is scheduled for Needmore tomorrow, Friday night, May 11. The affair will be held in the Community Center building under sponsorship of the Needmore Home Demonstration Club.

Candidates are especially invited and will be given the opportunity to get acquainted with lots of people and to enjoy the fellowship.

This is the second such event to be held in the county. Last Friday night the people of Three Way were hosts at a candidate rally held in the school house.

Thirteen Seek County Political Posts As Filing Deadline Passes

Bailey County lagged far behind Parmer County which had more than $24 million; Lamb County, with $37 million; Castro with $23 million.

Parmer County, Bailey's neighbor to the north, was in 9th place among Texas counties

Music for both evening's program will be furnished by the high school band and chorus. Several local implement dealers are expected to display cotton machinery during the two nights of the celebration.

All next week, Muleshoe merchants will feature cotton merchandise in their display windows, and everyone is expected to wear a cotton week emblem. These emblems will be on sale by local organizations.

FLAGS TO DECORATE MULESHOE

Muleshoe business firms will be able to decorate their fronts quickly and economically when the Rotary Club's flag program is completed in the near future. In fact, the town can be decorated in a proper manner quickly for July Fourth, Flag Day, parades, or special community events.

Business houses are being offered a "turn key" job on flags, poles, ropes, a metal housing in their sidewalks, all installed and ready to go.

Two grades of flags are being offered, and the installed price will be $15 for the cheaper flag, $20 for the better grade flag.

It is hoped that a large part of the work can be completed in time to decorate the town for the climax of National Cotton Week observance in Muleshoe next Friday and Saturday.

Thereafter the flags will be available for display on any proper occasion. The poles will be placed in line on each side of the street and it is believed the people will consider this quite a decoration scheme, as well as a patriotic gesture.

Any business missed by the canvassers might call any member of the Rotary Club for more information. Every place in town will be given the opportunity to purchase a flag.

Pleasant Valley In Top Five For Rural Contest

The Pleasant Valley Community has been rated one of the top five in the state in the Texas Rural Neighborhood contest sponsored by Farmers-Stockman magazine and the Extension Service.

Anyone from the Muleshoe area is welcome to be present.

The community won district first place honors in judging for the contest held at Pleasant Valley on April 20.

Marketing Survey Questionnaires Mailed In Area

West Texas farmers received questionnaires this week from the department of agricultural economics at Texas A. & M. for information to further the college's are marketing survey.

The two page questionnaire will indicate the cost of producing vegetables. The college will take this information and correlate it with shipping cost and compare it to the actual price going in a particular market area and thus determine whether the crops can be sold profitably.

The survey is the outgrowth of a number of meetings held by the West Texas Vegetable Council over the area in recent months.

Before going into vegetable production on a large scale, agricultural economists advised area farmers to await the results determined by the survey now being made.

It Was Just One Of Those Weeks

BY DOROTHY GILES

Pity the poor society editor of the weekly newspaper on a week when there are no weddings, no engagement announcements, no parties, and most of the club meetings are cancelled.

This writer, during the week, called 10,299,653 phone numbers, but all to no avail; no one had been anywhere, seen anything, or had any company, or if they had, they didn't want to put it in the paper.

Usually on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, I spend my faithful old Underwood from the time I arrive at the office, "usually about fifteen minutes late," until I leave in the afternoon. But this week, it was different. I was beginning to think, as my boss does sometimes during a trying week, that "this would be the one we never did get out."

By Tuesday afternoon, when I still didn't have enough news to fill even one column on the society page, I decided that this was the week when I should have taken my vacation.

Due to the fact that there were no weddings, engagement announcements, no parties, no club meetings, and no one did anything, had any company, or went anywhere, I am writing this to fill the hole where the other news would have been if there had been any.

I sure hope that someone gets engaged or married or dog-bit or something next week, so I won't have to do this again.

P. S. I didn't make quite that many phone calls, I really just made 10,299,652.

Bula 4-H Girls Met April 24

Home Economics room of the Bula School was the scene Tuesday, April 24, of the meeting of the Bula 4-H girls. Eleven members were present.

The next meeting is to be held May 22.

Eighth Graders In First Place Win At District Meeting

The Muleshoe 8th grade track team placed well in the top rank at the district track meet in Lubbock recently.

Court Rules Out Election Expense Penal Provisions

AUSTIN, May 2. The Court of Criminal Appeals today threw out the penal provisions in the Texas Election Code which limited expenditures by individuals toward the election or defeat of a candidate for public office.

In issuing its opinion the court dismissed charges against Vern Sanford, general manager of the Texas Press Association, who had been indicted by a McLennan County Grand Jury on the charge that he had spent $76 for political advertising with two Waco newspapers during the 1954 campaign.

Pointing out that one state law makes excessive expenditures by individuals a felony, while another law makes such expenditures both a felony and a misdemeanor, the court held that this direct conflict between the two laws rendered both laws invalid.

Thus, in the absence of any applicable law on which to base the indictments, the court dismissed the charges against Sanford.

The question of constitutionality of the limitation of expenditures, a point which had been raised by the Texas Press Association on the ground that it infringed upon freedom of speech was not decided by the court's ruling. In order to rule any law unconstitutional, it is necessary first to have a law. Under the court's opinion, there is no valid penal law on the Texas statute books which governs a person's right concerning such expenditures.

Social Security Representative To Be Here May 17

A representative of the Lubbock Social Security Office will be in Muleshoe on May 17, 1956 at 10 a. m., at the courthouse in the court room and will be glad to assist in all matters pertaining to Social Security.

Many school students and housewives plan to work in jobs covered by Social Security during the summer. These workers will need Social Security cards, according to Mr. John G. Hutton, district manager of the Lubbock Social Security office.

Mr. Hutton urges all persons who plan to work during the summer and who do not already have social security cards to apply for them immediately. Those who have lost their cards should ask for duplicates. Persons having social security cards at the time they file their applications for jobs will secure employment quicker, declared Mr. Hutton. Many employers will not hire employees unless they have in their possession social security cards issued in their correct names.

Persons who live in Lubbock may visit the Social Security office located at 1616-19th street and apply for their numbers. Those residing in or near other towns may go to their local post offices, secure and complete an application, Form SS-5, and mail it to their nearest Social Security Office. The amount of benefits to which a wage earner or his survivors may be entitled will depend upon the amount of wages posted to his old-age and survivors insurance account. A social security account cannot be set up for an individual without first securing a social security card, declared Mr. Hutton.

As pajamas become more and more like sportswear, women are wearing them for lounging as well as sleeping. This outfit by Kaylon Sleepwear consists of "Tommy" striped cotton pajamas with matching sleepcoat.

Dinner Highlights Final CTA Meeting

A dinner held Monday evening of this week in the high school cafeteria here in honor of T. C. T. A. president, Mrs. Maybelle McDaniel, of Ft. Worth, highlighted the final meeting of this year for the Muleshoe Classroom Teachers Association.

Following the dinner, Mrs. Lois Witherspoon, president of the local C. T. A., introduced Mrs. Elizabeth Watson, program chairman, who in turn introduced Mrs. Joe Walker. Mrs. Walker presented two piano solos.

Incoming officers were installed during the evening by the guests of honor. Joe Walker is the new president; Mrs. Effie Childress, first vice president; Mrs. Jack Beddingfield, secretary; Miss Roberta Biles, treasurer; and Miss Lillie Williams, parliamentarian.

Mrs. McDaniels presented each of the new officers with a key with blue, white and black ribbons attached, explaining that the white ribbon stood for bravery in going forward; the blue ribbon for loyalty to the organization; and the black ribbon to remind each that there would be criticism, but to press forward in their work, regardless. Mr. Walkers key held an additional ribbon in red, standing for courage.

In her address, Mrs. McDaniel discussed some of the objectives of T. C. T. A., including pupil interest, welfare of the teacher, closer relationship between the school and community, and better citizenship for all.

She also stressed the value of T. C. T. A. in working on the local, district, state and national levels for the improvement of the Nations educational system, pointing out the close cooperation with other organizations, such as the Texas State Teachers Association, and the National Education Association. The T. C. T. A. was represented

Mrs. Roger Babson Claimed By Death

Grace K. Babson, wife of Roger W. Babson, passed away last week at her home in Wellesley Hills from a cerebral hemorrhage. They were married in 1900 and started in a little house, which served as home and office, at a combined rental of $22 per month. Shortly after their marriage, Mr. Babson was taken ill with tuberculosis and was "given up for dead." He was really pulled through by the untiring efforts of Mrs. Babson, who after her studies at Mt. Holyoke College, had taken up nursing.

Besides being a faithful mother and housewife, Mrs. Babson became an expert on Sir Isaac Newton's writings and studies. She collected the third largest Library of Newtonia in the world; and, in fact, brought a portion of Newton's London house to Wellesley. Here one can turn the actual door knobs and open and shut the actual shutters having Newton's "finger prints." Sir Isaac Newton's Law of Action and Reaction, as applicable to business and investments, is often referred to by Mr. Babson.

With thrift, patience, and courage, and without any gifts from him, or ever having borrowed a penny, she developed her own savings of $600 into several millions. Most of this money has been given by her to economic, educational, and religious institutions. Among these are the Babson Institute, Weber College and Midwest Institute.

She gave large funds for the World's Greatest Revolving Globe, in which this newspaper had a part. Through a combined study of this Great Globe and of Rare Metals believed to be inside our Earth, she has hoped to help scientists discover why the world revolves and apply this same power to giving every reader a certain amount of free power. To aid in accomplishing this the Babsons have founded the Gravity Research Foundation of New Boston, N. H.

Mrs. Babson's father was the Reverend Richard Knight of Holyoke, Mass., who died many years ago. He was a real pioneer — very active in getting his anti-slavery friends to settle in Kansas during the great Kansas-Nebraska struggles of Civil War Days. Yet, in all these things, she has been "modestly personified," as well as showing what a poor and frail girl can accomplish.

Dudley C. Sharp supervises the spending of $10 billion a year, to build and maintain the most powerful air force in the world. That is for materiel only and does not include salaries and other operational costs. It is the largest single item in the national budget.

Before coming to Washington, Mr. Sharp was president of the Mission Manufacturing Company, of Houston, an oil industry supply firm. He served in the Navy from 1942 to 1943. He is as proud of the Air Force as if he had originated the idea.

"My first striking impression," he says, "concerned the tremendous size of the U. S. Air Force — and when a Texan admits to being impressed by the magnitude of anything, it must be big."

His second impression was one of respect and admiration for the military and other people he works with. "We have," he says proudly, "thousands of career Air Force men who draw salaries only a fraction of what they could command in private industry. It is a tribute to their patriotism that they continue to serve the Air Force."

Mr. Sharp talks easily and freely about the Air Force and the great job it is doing, but very little about his role in it. The two most striking things about him, say his associates, are mental alertness and his ability to inspire confidence. When he boasts it is about the Air Force. He is proud of the outstanding Air Force record of many billions of dollars spent with a remarkable record of efficiency and honesty. Air Force records show that in the past three years, only one employe out of more than 1,360,000 has been found guilty of dishonesty. Efficiency and economy in an operation the size of the Air Force is a remarkable achievement. It is by far the world's largest business; with assets of $70 billion. That is $12 billion more than the combined assets of the 24 largest corporations in America.

Rock and Roll Set Call Cotton Coolest

Cotton "sends" the rock and roll set!

A survey made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture recently shows that teen-age girls rate cotton as their favorite fiber for 11 basic items in their wardrobes.

An analysis of the USDA study reveals that cotton's easy washability is the outstanding reason for the preference expressed by teenagers.

The survey included 1,751 interviews with a representative sample of all girls aged 14 to 17 in the United States.

The report showed that 99 per cent have cotton summer skirts in their wardrobes; 98 per cent have cotton summer blouses; 76 per cent have cotton summer dress-up dresses; 78 per cent have cotton summer everyday dresses; 95 per cent have cotton winter blouses; 69 per cent have cotton winter everyday dresses; 92 per cent have cotton pajamas; 88 per cent have cotton anklets and bobby socks; 55 per cent have cotton sport jackets; 98 per cent have cotton shorts; and 87 per cent have cotton slacks.

By large majorities, the teenage girls told interviewers they like cotton best of all fibers in the seven categories where this question was asked — skirts, blouses, dress-up and everyday dresses for summer; blouses and everyday dresses for winter; and bobby socks.

In addition to cotton's ease of care and laundering, several other reasons were listed by the teenagers for their partiality to cotton. These included cotton's durability and wearing quali-

Plan New Package For Cotton Bales

The bale of cotton which provides milady with some plain and fancy creations may step out in a new dress itself in the near future, a report on the industry's experimental packaging project shows.

Set up three years ago by the National Cotton Council, the project seeks to develop an improved bale package that would adequately protect lint against contamination and provide neater bale appearance.

In 1953 and 1954, the Council conducted small-scale tests with numerous types of wrapping materials. By 1955, the field was narrowed to five — non-woven fabrics including cotton, paper, burlap-plastic laminates, and polyethylene and vinyl films.

During the past harvesting seasons, these five types of test covers were applied to more than 6,000 bales. A tentative evaluation of the various materials indicates that some have better properties than others.

"We need to combine the good features into one cover, either through a new material, or thru laminations or combinations of one kind or another," a Council spokesman said. "We believe it can be done, and at a cost in line with the job expected."

Several hundred of the test-wrapped bales have arrived at mills and, in general, results have been good. An incomplete tabulation shows that:

Eighty-seven per cent of the bales were in better condition; its general appearance — described as neat, crisp or nice, pretty, good looking; and in fact that it is generally available in a variety of colors and styles.

Farm Tractors Are Cause of Over 1000 Deaths Each Year

Farm tractor accidents now take more than 1,000 lives annually. A great majority of these lives could have been saved, says W. L. Ulich, extension agricultural engineer, if the tractor had been operated with care and foresight.

From now until "lay-by time" the farm tractor will be the work-horse on most farms. Operators will spend long hours, planting, plowing, applying insecticides and performing the many other jobs now done with a tractor. Use the tractor safely. Be sure operators are properly instructed and supervised and always remember, points out Ulich, that fatigue is often a factor in farm accidents.

Excessive speed is the number one cause of tractor accidents. The improper use of wheel brakes, rough roads or a quick turn can bring tragedy if the speed is too high.

Far too many teen-age tractor operators are involved in accidents. Work with these youngsters, urges Ulich, and give them instructions and supervision until they are fully qualified. A tractor cannot carry extra passengers safely and ranking high as a cause of accidents is the extra rider. Children, in particular, often meet with serious injury or death as extra riders.

About a third of tractor fatalities occur on public roads while many more happen on private lanes and drives. Mile for mile, it is safer, points out the specialist, to operate a car on public roads than a tractor. The heavier the traffic, the greater the hazard. Plan farm work so as to reduce the exposure of slow-moving tractors and farm machinery to traffic hazards. If machinery must be on the road after dark, be sure it is properly lighted. White lights on the front and red lights on the rear. Reflective material applied to tractors and machinery is an added safeguard. A red flag helps to warn motorists of slow-moving equipment during day-light hours.

But above all, cautions Ulich, think before doing any job with the tractor. It can be a killer.

Leaf Shedding One Method Speed Up Cotton Harvesting

Modern cotton farmers speed up nature's processes by making plants shed their leaves prematurely.

Twentieth Century research has armed them with commercial chemicals and technical know-how to do this job.

Defoliating cotton plants facilitates mechanical harvesting, and also helps avoid leaf trash and leaf strain in cotton lint. This process allows air and sunlight to get through to bolls, preventing fiber damage from rot, mildew, and disease.

Farmers in some areas have encountered a problem in administering this practice, however. They have found that after the cotton plant is defoliated, favorable weather often forces a second growth on the stalk's branches. Research came to their rescue again with a brand new chemical known as amino triazole which inhibits second growth while causing the original leaves to fall ahead of nature's schedule.

controls are suggested for the entire acreage if early and frequent checks for insects show that control measures are needed.

Local county agents can supply copies of the 1956 Texas Guide for Controlling Cotton Insects and the information can be most helpful in determining rates, methods of applications and the kinds of materials to use in the insect fight.

Wage the insect battle carefully and effectively on all cotton planted and if credit is needed, Bates believes it can be obtained without difficulty for loaning agencies are interested in seeing a profitable crop produced.

Late Crops Need Good Management Says Specialist

Recent rains over much of the state have greatly improved the prospects for a cotton crop. The lack of moisture had forced a delay of planting and in some areas crops will be as much as three weeks late, says C. H. Bates, extension farm management specialist.

Growers generally realize, points out Bates, that greater risks are involved with late cotton. Experience last year showed that late planted fields produced below average yields and returned little or no profit. But, he adds, the use of the best known production practices can help close the gap.

Of prime importance are early weed and insect control. The use of the rotary hoe on cotton will eliminate grass and weed seedlings. This type of cultivation is cheaper than slower row-type cultivation and gets the young cotton off to a fast start, says the specialist. If a rotary hoe isn't available on the farm, Bates suggests renting one from a neighbor or consider a purchase. Spot-tiling for controlling Johnson grass is also recommended.

Insects must be controlled on late cotton in order to get a set of the first bolls. Early season

NEW LOOK AT AN OLD ENEMY

Texas farmers are warned to keep an eye out this spring for an old enemy — the grasshopper.

Early season surveys show the grasshopper threat is more serious this year than in 1955. The Texas Panhandle can expect the biggest threat, but Central Texas is likely to have infestations also.

This threat is a warning to start early in planning a hopper control program. Early control means less work at less cost while a "wait-and-see" attitude can result in heavy losses with more acres to treat later in the year. One dollar spent for early control can save as much as $38 in crops and grazing later on.

Early season methods work best just after the grasshoppers finish hatching. This can be anytime from April 1 to late June, depending on the weather. Cold, wet seasons delay hatching while warm and moderately dry weather favor it.

Idle land, field margins, fence rows, ditch banks and roadsides are good places to start. These are favorable habitats for the hopper to lay eggs. And they lay 200 to 400 eggs a season if the female is a migratory hopper.

To show what you can be up against, if all eggs hatch and young hoppers are permitted to develop into adults, they can average 24 to 32 hoppers to the square yard. Then you're in the middle of a serious outbreak.

A control program which provides federal assistance is available only in range land areas, in cultivated land, you're on your own. And controlling grasshoppers that originate on your own land is only part of the job. Your place can be overrun by hoppers from nearby areas.

History of Southwest Cattle Empire Reflected In Davis' Branding Irons

What might well be termed a heritage-rich tradition, exists in the collection of more than 125 old cattle branding irons proudly owned by Cecil A. Davis, Bailey county Hereford rancher, eight miles south and two east of Muleshoe. His collection dates back to an iron from the Fernandez ranch in New Mexico which started with a land grant from the Spanish King. Other irons are as modern as the horn branding irons Davis uses to brand his own registered whiteface cattle.

Collecting the branding irons is only a small part of Davis' hobby. He keeps a detailed history of each brand and of the ranch from which it came. A large book relates the story behind each brand, and in many cases, these histories are small cameos of contemporary living in the great Southwest.

Keeping the irons together is quite a task, and Cecil has decided for the present to keep them in a dugout near the ranch house located on a high hill.

The irons demonstrate a great deal of ingenuity on the part of their creators in designing a mark that could be easily seen from horseback, that would be simple to make in a ranch blacksmith shop, and one that would quickly identify the cattle of a particular owner.

Shunning intricacies, for the most part, the early ranchers concentrated on designing a distinctive brand in a few simple strokes. Circles, half circles, diamonds, triangles, and squares, as well as initial letters formed the majority of the brands. Some ranchers did go for curlicues, and many an old time blacksmith must have muttered over his forge as he shaped out a Flying J-R brand or some such similar iron.

Among the irons of contemporary present day and famous ranches of this area in the Davis collection are those of the Spade ranch, in the shape of a spade; XIT which was made with a straight, or "running" iron; the Mashed O, the U-Bar, and the Spur ranch. The Fernandez brand oldest in the collection, was a Slash F Slash brand.

Often when more than one letter or figure was required for a brand, a straight iron was used in several angles to complete the brand. The XIT used a straight iron, and the half circle or complete circle was also used to make more intricate brands by repeated application to the cow's hide.

A straight iron was called a running iron, and was outlawed in many areas. It was favorite tool of rustlers, who used it to alter existing brands on strays or cattle they had stolen.

Davis has been associated with ranching for 36 years in this area and has a wide acquaintance with ranchers and cattlemen in the Southwest. It is through this acquaintanceship that many of the brands and their histories come into his hands. His friends know of his interest and they send irons or tell him of irons that can be obtained.

Branding irons are not necessarily limited to the Southwest. One brand in the Davis collection was sent to him by a friend in Massachusetts. The iron came from a Maine cattle ranch.

Reading the histories of the

The Muleshoe Journal

DEDICATED TO THE PROGRESS AND DEVELOPMENT OF BAILEY COUNTY AND THE GREAT MULESHOE COUNTRY

VOLUME 35, NUMBER 19

THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1956

irons and the ranches they represent makes for an awareness of the vast cattle empire. And there are touches of humor. In describing the brand of an iron he was sending Davis, one old timer said, "I think it is a good brand. I used it on my cattle, and some of my lady friends had it embroidered on their stocking tops."

Davis' own brand is a Circle Bar branded on the left jaw. He has this brand registered as well as the horn brand.

His interest in brands and the lore of ranching is reflected in an extensive library on Southwest Americans. Mrs. Davis shares her husband's interest, and both have other interests which make their lives full and busy. Mrs. Davis is active in the work of the Muleshoe Methodist Church. She has a collection of salt and pepper shakers and is a hand gun enthusiast.

Interest in family history, antiques and ranch life all brighten the hours for this couple.

A prized family possession is a Seth Thomas chiming clock which has a place of honor in the Davis living room. The clock has been in the family since 1830, and was brought to Texas by wagon when Davis' great grandparents settled in Milam county in 1878 and was presented to his grandparents when they were married and then to his parents and then to him.

The clock keeps accurate time and has a melodious mellow tone when it chimes the hour.

An account of the Cecil Davises would not be complete without mentioning the large jar of rattlesnake rattles and the miniature chuckwagon, buggy, buckboard and stage coach which Davis keeps in his trophy case. But more about these things another time.

FARMER COUNTY Farm Bureau News

By RAYMOND EULER

Nearly everyone we have talked to is ready for a rain of one kind or the other. It does seem that it is about time for something like that. People who have irrigation are reaching the state of desparation and irrigation farmers could use the supplement to their efforts.

As widespread as the drought is, it is a little surprising that rain was not mentioned in some of the prosperity promising amendments offered to the agricultural bill. It would be no harder to fulfill a promise of rain than some others that have been made. Perhaps if we reconsider and place our faith where it should be, in God, instead of man, several very difficult problems could be solved.

The Texas Farm Bureau Convention will be held in the Rice Hotel in Houston, November 12, 13 and 14 this year. Austin and several other towns bid for it, but there are not too many hotels in Texas that have the facilities for handling such a large delegation for three or four days.

"We farmers in the United States have the highest standard of living of any agricultural people in the world. The peasants of Communist Russia or the farmers of Socialist Sweden would gladly change places with us despite our present temporary reverses. The folks who made our successful system possible took risks and made sacrifices. The least we can do towards passing on our heritage is the sacrifice of a little time to discharge the duty of a free citizen. Let us resolve now, not only to vote in each election, but to work through our organization to secure increased understanding and participation of all citizens in the affairs of government."

The preceding quotation from this month's editorial of Charles B. Schuman, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation in the Nation's Agriculture.

FROM KRESS

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Jones, of Kress, were weekend guests in the home of his brother Owen Jones and family. The Jones baby has just been released from the West Plains Hospital here, where he received medical attention for a severe attack of asthma. He is reported by his mother to be improved now.

Work will begin immediately on a national inventory of soil and water conservation needs. The inventory, according to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson, is intended to equip the Department for more efficient planning and carrying out of its work involving soil and water.

Each county in the United States will be inventoried. Plans call for completing the initial work in three years, with periodic revisions thereafter to keep the information and figures up to date.

Benson said, "With the inventory, we can make reasonable estimates of the magnitude and urgency of the various conservation measures needed to maintain and improve the country's productive capacity for all the people."

The Secretary has directed the Soil Conservation Service to carry out the study with the help of the Agricultural Conservation program Service, Agricultural Research Service, Commodity Stabilization Service, Federal Extension Service, Farmers Home Administration and Forest Service.

Representatives of these agencies will make up a national Soil and Water Conservation Needs Committee which will develop procedures and guide the program. Comparable committees in the states and territories will be named to carry out the work at that level.

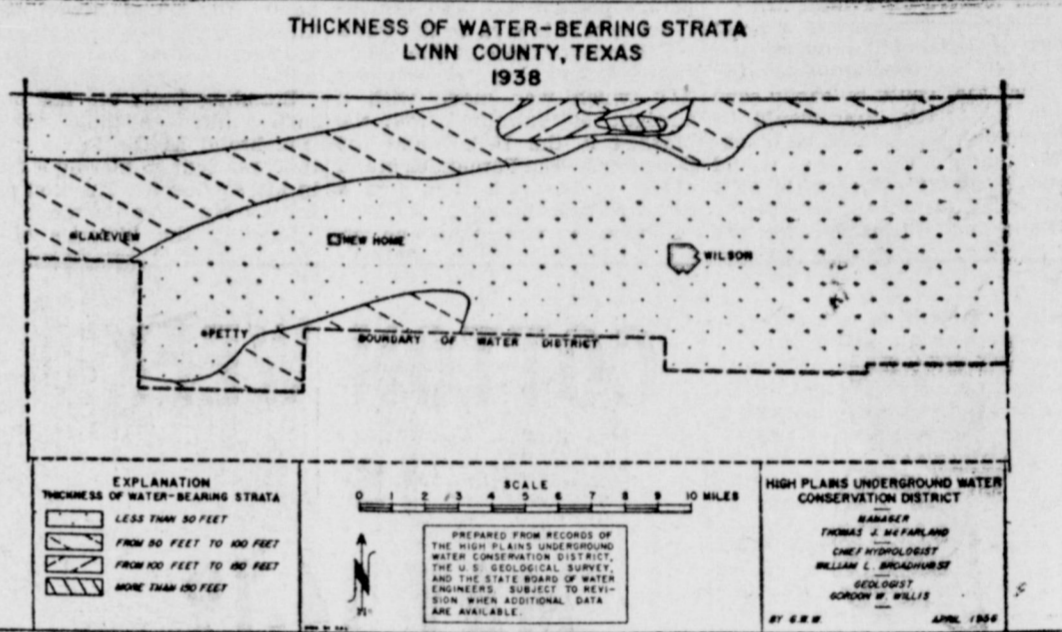

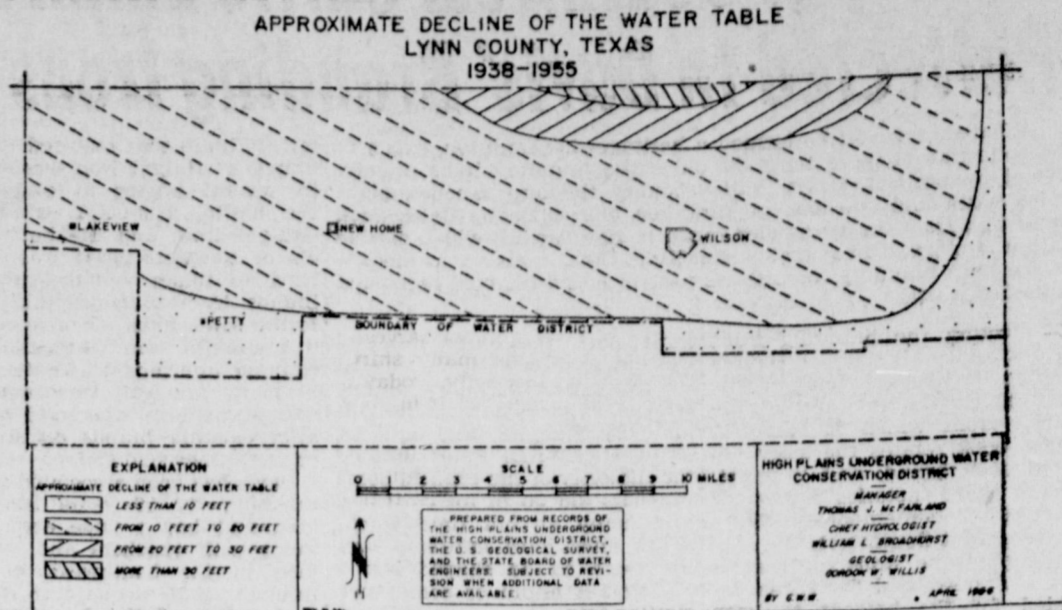

In addition, cooperation of state and local agencies, organizations and groups concerned with soil, water, forest, range and wildlife conservation will be actively solicited. These include the land-grant colleges, soil conservation districts, state forestry and conservation departments, water agencies and similar groups.

It's Bigger than Both of 'em

-but its price makes it one of America's 3 best sellers!

It's as simple as this:

Only two cars in all creation outsell Buick. And they are two of the well-known smaller cars.

So maybe it will pay you to ask how come Buick has zoomed to the No. 3 spot with such fast-selling company.

Well, one answer is the beautiful and brawny Buick Special you see pictured here - and the low price it carries.

It's the biggest bundle of high-powered performance and high-fashion luxury ever offered in Buick's lowest-priced Series.

And that means more people want it and can afford it, because it's priced only a few dollars more than its two smaller-car rivals—even less than some models of those very same cars.

But the big answer comes from a sure fact more folks have discovered: you get more pure automobile for your money in Buick than you get elsewhere.

Here, you get the extra wallop of big new Buick power raised to a new high—and pouring in smooth whisper from a brand-new 322-cubic-inch V8 engine of true high compression.

Here, you get the matchless buoyancy of Buick's great new ride—the extra-safe feeling of Buick's new handling ease—the extra stretch-out comfort of Buick roominess—the extra solidity and strength of Buick structure—the extra pride and prestige of Buick's new styling and dash.

Here, too—and nowhere else—you can get the silk-smooth performance and flash-fast response of Buick's advanced new Variable Pitch Dynaflo*—the world's only transmission with the gas-saving mileage and switch-pitch action of the modern airplane propeller.

This week—this very day, if you wish—you can sample all these Buick blessings to your heart's content and your pocket's joy. Why not drop in on us and do just that?

*New Advanced Variable Pitch Dynaflo is the only Dynaflo Buick builds today. It is standard on Roadmaster, Super and Century—optional at modest extra cost on the Special.

Story of Cotton Includes Mystery, Main Street & Some Park Avenue

Take mystery, scientific progress, Main Street, and Park Avenue and roll them into one bale and you'll have the story of cotton.

Mystery shrouds the origin of cotton's story. Its first written records go back to India in 3000 B. C., but scientists found cotton fabrics in prehistoric Peruvian graves and cotton itself in Utah excavation.

American cultivation of cotton began with the colonization of Virginia in 1607. From this small and simple beginning, cotton moved to today's million farms in 18 states and to scientific methods all along the line, from farm to finished product.

Take an evening dress worn at a Park Avenue party and a man's shirt seen up and down Main Street on a Monday morning. Both came from cotton, and with a few variations both followed the same path from farm to retail counter.

Cotton is that versatile. The path began in the fall. A farmer chopped down old cotton plants with a stalk cutter. He turned this residue under to decay and in the spring disked, or plowed, and bedded the land into rows.

When the ground was warm enough, a mechanical planter opened a small furrow, dropped and covered seed, and packed earth on top. Fertilizer was applied at the same time.

Within 7 to 10 days, seedlings emerged from the soil. Squares, or flower buds, formed a month to 6 weeks later. In another three weeks, creamy white blossoms appeared. After three days, each blossom withered and fell, leaving a young ovary. The ovary ripened, enlarged, and formed a pod called a cotton boll.

Inside, moist fibers grew. The boll matured, became a giant raindrop in shape, about an inch in diameter and an inch and a half long. Between 45 and 65 days after it was formed, the boll opened and fluffy white cotton burst forth.

Many actions helped complete this cycle.

When the young plants were a few inches high, hoehands thinned out part of the plants so others would have room to grow. Later the hands probably returned to keep, with the help of several mechanical cultivations, weeds and grass from choking out the crop. Another fertilizer application, or side dressing, was made.

Airplanes or ground equipment dusted or sprayed poisons up to a dozen times to control insects like boll weevils, thrips, leaf-worms or aphids.

Late in the season the farmer may have used a chemical to make the plant shed its leaves. This modern practice, called defoliation, lets sun and air in to hasten boll maturity and make harvesting easier, especially if mechanical strippers are to be used.

Picking at the rate of 200 pounds of seed cotton a day, a laborer in five minutes harvested enough for the man's shirt. Operating at capacity, today's mechanical picker did it in five or six seconds.

At a modern version of the gin invented by young Eli Whitney, whirling saws with small teeth pulled lint from the seed and removed foreign material. The lint left the gin packed tightly with steel ties.

A cotton merchant examined a sample from the bale. He quoted a price based on color, fiber length and cleanliness of the lint. After the sale the bale moved to a warehouse to await shipment to a mill. Other bales, destined for overseas shipment, were compressed into smaller sizes.

The textile mill fed cotton from the bale, along with that from several others, into a blending feeder to insure fiber uniformity. Machines called "pickers" removed foreign matter and formed the cotton into rolls, or laps, resembling huge rolls of absorbent cotton about 18 inches thick and 45 inches wide.

The rolls went into a carding machine. It straightened the tangled mass of fibers and shaped them into a thin web and finally into a silver, a ropelike strand about the diameter of your finger. A comb also straightened and cleaned the slivers.

An action called "drawing" combined several slivers into a strand about the size of an original sliver. The condensed sliver moved to the "slubber", first of a series of machines called "roving".

Finally the roving went to the spinning frame to be drawn out, twisted into yarn of the required size, and wound on bobbins — in a single operation.

Prior to weaving, the yarn was rewound from bobbins into cones or cheeses. Several hundred yarns at a time were rewound onto a large "warper beams", resembling spools 26 to 36 inches in diameter and four to six feet long. Yarns were coated with a thin layer of starch or other sizing material to prevent fraying and possible injury from chafing in the loom.

After sizing, warp yarns were drawn through the eyes of fine steel wires of the loom harness or tied to the remaining length of an unwoven warp.

From the harness were suspended needles of fine steel wires with an eye through which yarn ends were passed to the weaving section of the loom, when one harness was lowered the other was raised. At this precise moment a shuttle, containing the filling yarn, was driven at a very high speed through the opening between the upper and lower layers of yarns. This harness motion was then reversed. The upper set of threads became the lower, and vice versa, as the shuttle was driven back through the new opening, thus weaving the yarn into fabric.

The cloth—grey goods at this stage — was inspected, graded and sent to the finishing plant to be bleached, dyed, printed or finished in other ways.

Singeing or gassing to remove loose threads was the first step in the finishing process. Next the cloth was washed to prevent ignition from the heat of the singeing process and to remove starch or other sizing. Another boiling in tanks called "kiers", and rinsing, and it was ready for bleaching in large stainless steel boxes. Then the fabric was treated with caustic soda in a process called "mercerizing".

Since the cloth had become irregular in width during this process, it was restored to proper dimensions by "centering". The damp fabric was run over a frame where it was grasped by tenter hooks on each side and stretched to the desired width.

To remove surface irregularities, the material was sheared by being brought into contact with a series of rotating spiral blades against which the surface was brushed as it passed.

After it was dyed or printed, and starched to impart the basic finish, the cloth was sprinkled and then put through a series of heavy rollers. This step, called calendaring, removed wrinkles and gave it a smooth, ironed appearance.

Water spray, steam, and heat were used in "Sanforizing" the shirt fabric so it wouldn't shrink. Then it was ready for the manufacturer who cut the cloth and made it into a shirt, for the wholesaler who distributed it to the retailer—and finally for the customer.

Spring Styles in Hats and Cars

Style has come a long way since 1914—in both women's clothes and automobiles. Dodge's 1956 Golden Lancer (left) is a thing of beauty compared to the 1914 touring car (right), one of the first Dodge automobiles made. Pretty Detroiters Patricia Morris and Patricia Kelly show how fashions have changed too. The new "mushroom" hat worn by Miss Morris (standing beside the Lancer) reflects the 1956 trend toward larger hats. But it's a far cry from the "Merry Widow" bonnet on Miss Kelly (right) who is tastefully attired (for 1914) in a linen duster and protective scarf.

Cotton Textile Manufacturing In American, One Greatest Industry

Slow in getting started in this country because England jealously guarded its secrets, the manufacturer of cotton textiles today is one of America's greatest industries.

An early Philadelphia mill using imported spinning jennies was burned by the British in 1777. Samuel Slater, who served as an apprentice in one of England's newest cotton mills, learned the secrets of yarn manufacture. Defying the law which forbade technicians to leave England, he made his way to America and re-created from memory the famous Arkwright spinning frame. This was in 1790.

Although Slater introduced modern yarn making methods, all weaving still was done on hand looms. British manufacturers vigilantly protected the secret of their new power looms. While visiting England, however, Francis Cabot Lowell, a young Boston merchant, observed a power loom. War broke out during his voyage home in 1812 and his ship was captured. British marines searched his possessions for plans of the precious power loom. He was interned at Halifax but managed to escape to Boston by small boat and, from his memory of English machines, built America's first power loom.

Lowell built a small mill near Boston. It was the first to bring together, under one roof, power machinery that performed all steps in cloth making.

Across the country today over 22 million cotton system spinning spindles are in place. Of the active spindles consuming all cotton, 86 per cent are located in the cotton-producing states. Cotton accounts for approximately 93 per cent of all spindles in this country. In an estimated 1,500 plants in the 14 states comprising the broad Southland, a total of more than 650,000 men and women depend upon textile for their livelihood. Thousands of others depend on them indirectly.

Cotton mills were established in the South as early as 1789 and were in operation in the Carolinas and Georgia in the early 1800's.

Whereas in 1880 the South had only 5.3 per cent of the nation's spindles, compared to 81 per cent in New England, by 1920 the percentage had risen to 22.4 in the South, and had declined to 67.6 in the New England area. The cotton-producing states went into the lead in 1927 and have forged steadily ahead ever since.

The bulk of Dixie's textile manufacturing now is concentrated in the Carolinas, Georgia, and Alabama, but plants continue to spread over other areas of the region. Textiles are the second largest industry in Tennessee and are growing in importance in Virginia and Mississippi. Since the mid-1920's, South Carolina has led the entire nation in total spindle hours run. Its more than 300 textile plants house more than six million spindles—about a fourth of the nation's total in place—and about 130,000 employees. South Carolina mills consume an average of 2,300,000 bales of cotton annually; the industry represents an investment of more than $575 million, and its payrolls aggregate $360 million annually. They turn out products valued at more than 1.6 billion yearly.

From the standpoint of mills and number of employees, North Carolina is the largest textile state in the country. Its 525 mills employ approximately 233,200 persons, and comprise the state's largest single industry. Nearly 27 per cent of the country's active cotton-consuming spindles are in North Carolina mills.

Textiles, too, are the largest single industry in Georgia, where an annual average of 110,000 workers in about 208 plants receive $280 million a year. These mills consume about two million bales of cotton annually.

Although total textile employment in Alabama is less than in the other three major states, its approximately 115 mills employ 55,000 persons—more than any other industry—and their annual aggregate payroll exceeds $160 million.

Virginia has 29 mills with 40,000 employees; Tennessee, 178 with 39,200 workers; Arkansas, 14 and 2,400; Florida, 12 and 250; Kentucky, 11* and 3,350; Louisiana, 8 and 2,100; Mississippi, 29 and 5,500; Oklahoma, 1 and 700; Texas 53, and 9,800; and California, 2 with 250.

A BOOST FOR TEXAS POULTRY PRODUCTS

The Texas Department of Agriculture is laying groundwork for a new and important marketing program aimed at helping the Texas poultry and egg industry.

Plans are for inauguration of a marketing service intent on improving inspection and grading, boosting the Texas egg industry through a grading and standards program, and thereby expanding market outlets for Texas poultry products.

Since there are at present no state laws which regulate quality or set standards for the sale of poultry or eggs within the state, Texas producers often run into marketing problems both in local and national trade. Lack of standards often causes Texas to be used as a dumping ground for producer from neighboring states which fails to meet proper standards.

For lack of poultry inspection and egg standards laws, Texas cannot compete successfully on the national market with graded and inspected produce from other states.

Trade sentiment is strongly in favor of state laws providing for such poultry, and egg inspection programs, and chances are excellent for their eventual passage. However, until such legislation is adopted, the proposed self-help program is needed to help promote Texas poultry products as quality merchandise on the national and home markets.

Such a plan, properly executed, could put thousands more dollars in the pockets of Texas growers. Through information and demonstration programs showing proper grading, handling, shipping, display and storage methods, poultrymen would learn how to market quality produce at a minimum cost.

Research would be made to determine causes and cures for seasonal glutts and shortages of certain products with special emphasis on balancing the over all supply-demand situation.

Texas has long been a leading state in poultry production. In fact, the U. S. commercial broiler industry had its first beginning in the heart of the South Texas broiler area. In order to meet growing competition from other areas, highest standards must be maintained to protect Texas' interests in this big and important industry.

Readings from King James Version of the Bible and correlative passages from "Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will comprise the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Adam and Fallen Man."

From the Bible will be read this passage from Timothy (3:16, 17): "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Included in selections to be read from Science and Health is the following (304:14): "The perfect man — governed by God, his perfect Principle — is sinless and eternal."

BABSON DISCUSSES . . . "Business and Worry"

Babson Park, Mass., May 10. Continually I am being asked: "What could cause the next Business Depression?" It could be overbuilding, too much installment buying, stock market speculation, or the unreasonable demands of union labor; but I forecast the next depression, with its unemployment, may come from worry, fear, and exhaustion.

REAL CAUSES OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Already worry is causing executives to have heart attacks, causing wageworkers to demand pension security, causing housewives to get divorces, and causing almost everyone to seek more entertainment in order to forget their troubles. If too many people get scared and stop buying, this will surely bring on bad business and unemployment.

Most of us hesitate to discuss our personal religion for fear of being called "hypocrites." But at the risk of being so-called myself I will this week make a confession: My education as a statistician taught me to seek the truth. Hence, when I became a Church Member, I naturally sought to learn what Jesus taught. Among other things, I found that He taught us not to worry. One of His most emphatic teachings was to avoid "being anxious about tomorrow." I, therefore, have never allowed myself to worry.

WHAT THE BIRDS TEACH US

When Jesus held up the birds as an example for us to follow (Matthew, 6th Chapter, Verses 26 to 29). He realized that the birds are obliged to hunt their own food. God does not throw food in their nests for them. God even compels the birds to build their own nests. Unlike most young people today, the birds build their "houses" and pay for them before "getting married" and raising little birds! Jesus never told us not to THINK about tomorrow, or not to PREPARE for tomorrow. Read His parable of the Ten Virgins in the 25th Chapter of Matthew, Verses 1 to 13. It was WORRY which Jesus condemned.

Therefore, I have constantly fought worry and conquered it when it faced me: First, when I had an attack of tuberculosis and was "given up for dead"; then, during the Great Depression when my many clients got scared and left me; and always when some personal misunderstanding arose with some relative, or friend, or businessman. Two things I have learned to avoid - worry and liquor - one often leads to the other.

DEBT TO MY WIFE

Furthermore, I do not give any credit to psychiatrists, or to pills, or to reading books. I give the credit to my Religion and to Mrs. Babson who, until her recent passing, was my companion and counselor for half a century. I feel that those readers who worry are ignoring Jesus' teachings. They, moreover, must realize that worry is a vice which will harm them like any other vice or drug.

Mrs. Babson, more than anyone else, helped me to avoid worry by never talking grief to me after our evening meals. Neither of us ever "carried our troubles upstairs," so to speak. We never discussed anything after going to bed. If ever we had trouble getting to sleep, instead of "counting sheep," we counted our blessings and the many things for which we have to be thankful. Moreover, we have both tried to live naturally, pray sensibly, avoid keeping up with the Joneses, and have kept out of debt!

IMPORTANCE OF CORRECT DECISIONS

Let me guess as to why Jesus believed that worry is so dangerous. I believe it was because worry prevents a person from making correct decisions. Our health, our jobs, our income and our happiness all depend primarily upon making correct decisions. - saying "No" or "Yes" at the right times. Our present and our future depend upon making correct decisions, and we cannot make them unless we are free from worry.

One final thought: I make my important decisions only when I am "alone with God." I may be quietly in my home garden; or in the N. H. woods; or by the seashore at Gloucester. But to get the cobwebs of worry from my old brain, I surely must be away from a telephone and from other people! Forgive these personal words of confession and warning. I would not give my column this week to such a subject except for the real possibility that "too much worry" could

SAND HILLS PHILOSOPHER FROWNS ON CITY WRITER'S IDEA TO SOLVE FARM ILLS BY PART-TIME FARMING

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm is worried about the farm surplus again this week, we think, as nobody can pin any of the surplus on him.

Dear editor: Being a student of the solutions people all over the country are offering for the farm problem, on the theory it's interesting and comforting to know others are thinking about you, whether their ideas are worth anything or not, I'm naturally on the alert for new ideas along this line.

And the other day I ran across what I thought as first was going to be a wonderful idea. According to this one, put out by a city newspaper writer, everybody knows the farmer is caught in a cost-price squeeze and the way for him to work out of it is through part time farming.

According to him, part time farming is the answer, and I was fixing to write him a letter congratulating him on his idea, when I kept on reading. It wasn't what I thought it was at all.

"Part-time farming is the answer," he said, then explained that what he meant was farmers could whip their problem of a shrinking income by taking a job in town, working eight hours there, then rushing home and getting in their farming after hours and on Saturdays.

That doesn't strike me as part of the cause of the next business depression.

where there is enough water to carry on our agricultural program. But we do not have enough water to carry on other towns and cities industry.

Let us keep what we have, and let the other places keep their most important products. We can do this by all working together in complete unison to keep our water at home. It belongs to us, so why settle for anything less.

While attending school away from home, a child had been converted and challenged to do Christian work. An elderly lady, a deaconess, was one day trying to persuade the child's mother to let her go on to a deaconess training school.

The mother said, "I don't know what you mean by being a deaconess. I don't know what it means to give oneself to full-time Christian service. All I

WOLF AT THE DOOR

AN EDITORIAL

The wolf of competition is knocking at the door of one of the country's greatest agricultural industries, and one that is important indeed to the economy of Texas.

Millions of dollars are being spent on research and promotion to capture the fiber markets traditionally claimed by cotton. The organized cotton industry, through the National Cotton Council, is fighting this threat hard with the same weapons.

National Cotton Week, May 14-19, is sponsored each year by the Council to stimulate the sale of cotton products. Stores throughout the country and communities all over the Cotton Belt join in this celebration. This is one of the Council's many projects aimed at protecting markets and expanding consumption of our most important agricultural commodity.

It means a great deal to Texas. The value of cotton and cottonseed produced in this state in 1955 amounted to $777,081.00, approximately 38 per cent of the total farm income. Cotton is grown on 126,011 Texas farms or 43 per cent of the total farms in the state. Last year they produced 4,025,000 bales and 1,682,000 tons of cottonseed, providing income and payrolls for 1801 gins, 124 warehouses, 81 oil mills, and 53 textile mills in Texas. These dollars circulated many times in the communities of Texas.

This is something to think about when you go to the retail counter and buy clothing, household furnishings or other fiber products. Be sure and pick cotton.

time farming. What it looks like to me is full time working and over-time farming.

It's nothing new to me to know that I could go to town and get a job. I've known that for years. A solution to the farm problem that requires me to work twice as hard as I am now is no solution as far as I'm concerned!

If this country is ever going to get rid of the farm surplus, the farmers are going to have to farm less, which suits me fine, but what they do with the rest of their time is none of any city newspaper writer's business.

I don't know whether there's a solution to the farm problem or not, I doubt it, but doubling my work load to do it is one of the most radical ideas I ever heard of.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Let's Keep What We Have

OUR STORES AND US

AN EDITORIAL

Lifted From The Plainview Herald

You can't dissociate yourself from the stores and service establishments of the community in which you live. They are a vital part of the community and your daily life.

So frank talk about the outlook for retail business is always in order.

An illuminating appraisal of the retailing field has been made by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

It sees intensified pre-selling of brand products by manufacturers and accentuates the trend of high volume, low-margin selling as significant development to watch in retailing this year. It sees a definite trend in distribution.

That study of trend points out that as the volume of demand and production reaches new heights, the distribution system must be prepared to mass-distribute products with increased efficiency and flexibility.

New methods of marketing are sought, as well as new channels of distribution and new concepts of management, merchandising and perhaps pricing.

For 1956 the U. S. Chamber, according to Retailing Daily, predicts keener competition, a tendency of rising prices to face stronger consumer-resistance, and continued trading-up.

What's the answer?

Stepped-up promotional campaigns by retailers with increased use of advertising; more effective application of self-service principles in stores, and improved packaging to boost sales.

The study predicts other things: reasonable expectation for retail sales between $190 billion and $195 billion, a gain of 3 to 5 per cent over 1955. Outside the automotive industry retailers should set their target for an increase of about 6 per cent, the report suggests.

The alert retailer will step outside the routine of waiting for customer arrival and will cash in on the understanding of the trends which prompts alert distributors to use national media, and link up with all advertising media at his disposal, concentrating on the ones he deems most effective.

It's to the alert firms that business comes and a community is as alert not as the average, but the whole of its retailers.

Plainview can make itself the dominant trading point of its area in proportion to the alertness of its retail firms and those who provide services.

It's no time for wishful thinking but for real energetic, imaginative, realistic improvement in merchandising. Then advertising with a punch to it will bring home the bacon.

What's good for our retailers and our people in service is good for all of us.

Dollar Day is a case in point. It comes on Monday. Those of us who let the other fellow do all the promoting of this trade event may be lagging behind and not performing our whole duty.

We can think that over, and each determine for himself his own right position.
