School board tables decision on graduation policy

BY MELISSA PERNER
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

Changes to the CCCSD graduation policy were tabled, after the school board received more information about the policy and students involved. At the March 25 regular meeting, information presented by OHS Principal Ronny Clayton showed that four students have not met the policy's requirement in regards to attending extra tutoring and help. OHS offered summer school and a boot camp during four Saturdays in November to help students pass the end-of-course exams required by the state. According to Clayton's information these four students did not attend either program offered. The district's policy states a student who fail pass their EOC tests by the end of grade 11 shall "enroll in, attend, and participate in the remediation summer school session and the summer retest session, as well as in all applicable remediation courses, tutoring programs, and retesting opportunities throughout the grade 12 school year until the student has met all applicable exit-level and EOC testing requirements." The policy also states that "teachers and counselors shall consider the student's particular circumstances in determining appropriate opportunities, which may include, but are not limited to: individualized work, tutorial sessions, testing to verify mastery of the essential knowledge and skills and early final examinations." Nineteen students attended summer school. Six students passed all their EOC tests, three of them didn't attend summer school at all. Two students withdrew and one student attended summer school for credit recovery only. The information presented to the board also showed that only two students attended the November boot camp. Students took the test in July and December 2014. Tests are also offered this week, in May and July. "We are two months away, is there anything these students can do to make sure they can comply with our policy," said Orlando DeHoyos, board vice president.

'A good fire:' prescribe burn helps ranch

BY MELISSA PERNER
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

Not all fire is bad. For Philip Walker, fire is a way to improve his family's ranch. Over the weekend, officials and firefighters from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife conducted a prescribed burn on the Ward Walker Seven Oaks Ranch. The ranch is located around 40 miles south of Ozona off of County Road 107. The burn encompassed 870 acres with federal firefighters from Texas and New Mexico overseeing the blaze. As landowner, Walker, who spends part of the year in Crockett County and the other as a wildlife guide in Alaska, sees the prescribed burn as a way to bring his family's ranch back to life. "Dollar per dollar it's the best way to go," Walker said. Walker conducts the fires with the help of the Partners for Fish and Wildlife Program, which provides technical and financial assistance to private landowners and Tribes who are willing to work on wildlife restoration projects. "The program helps benefit wildlife habitats," said Chris Harper, private lands biologist with Partners for Fish

A FEDERAL FIREFIGHTER begins a prescribed burn on the Ward Walker Seven Oaks Ranch on March 27 south of Ozona. This is the third prescribe burn on the ranch since 2009. The three-day burn encompassed 870 acres with federal firefighters from Texas and New Mexico.

EPA regulations: clear as mud

I'm not a conspiracy theorist, but the only reason that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) wants to regulate dry creek beds is because they want to get on your property. That's unacceptable.

Trying to redefine what constitutes a navigable waterway is another example of overreach from this administration. The proposed Water of the United States (WOTUS) rules, like almost all government regulations, are vague and confusing. But it's concerning that drainage ponds or normally dry shallow ditches may come under their jurisdiction. Actually, it's more than concerning. It's a dangerous power grab that will give government unprecedented control over private property.

The fact that the maps detailing the proposed rules were created in secret and kept from the public for so long should send up red flags for everyone, especially since they come from an administration that claims to be the most transparent in history.

The truth is that the rules stand to negatively affect every American in one way or another - but the agriculture industry will feel the impact to a greater degree. Under these rules, many of the common, every-day practices of farming and ranching will suddenly require federal permits. The uncertainty behind these complex rules will mean that farmers and ranchers will have to operate at continuous risk of incurring fines or facing government lawsuits.

These rules will affect you even if you are not a farmer or a rancher. If you consume the products they produce, be prepared to pay more as their cost increases reverberate into your life in their efforts to remain compliant with the rules.

I represent many of these people and on their behalf, I'm telling the EPA, "That's enough." It's time to rein in EPA red tape.

Last week, the U.S. House of Representatives started the process by passing two reform bills that will make the EPA more accountable and more transparent. The science behind any EPA rules should be accessible, reproducible and undisputed. And the objectives should never, ever be political in nature.

These bills are a start, but it's not enough. Last week, I joined my colleagues in a letter to the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee requesting that they prohibit the use of any funds to be used for the WOTUS proposed rule.

Congress needs to make sure that the EPA and Army Corps of Engineers continue to define navigable waterways the way it's always been defined, as well. We also need to continue increasing public oversight of the regulatory process, giving the public, local governments and other stakeholders the opportunity to chime in before rules are put into place.

Putting more sunshine on the process of creating laws and regulations is always a good thing.

Where'd Everybody Go?

I don't get out much these days and the other day I went to the auction market for the first time in a long time. At least I thought it was the same auction market. There was a freshly painted sign out front, the auction barn was sporting a coat of fresh paint, the parking lot was covered with a fresh layer of asphalt and it was full of brand new pickups and Cadillacs. Was I lost? Was this a dairy auction barn?

I saw an elderly couple in the parking lot that looked vaguely familiar but it couldn't be my longtime friends Ma and Pa Wilson because they were getting out, or trying to get out, of a brand new four wheel drive truck that was four feet off the ground. It couldn't be the Wilsons because they always bought their pickups from farm and repo auctions. But both of them waved at me like they knew me. It sure looked like the Wilsons.

I walked inside and could barely navigate because there was such a long line of consignors waiting impatiently at the pay window. They all had worried faces and wanted their windfall immediately for their crippled range bulls, barren cows and $1,500 calves before the bank closed, the market crashed, the cow buyers stopped payment on their checks, or they woke up and realized the wild market had all been a dream.

It was lunchtime so I went into the Saddles and Spurs Cafe only to find out it was now a restaurant called Le Patisserie. It kind of looked like the old coffee shop only it had curtains on the windows, they served wine instead of beer, the menu featured Thai food and failed to list any prices. A big machine hanging from the roof went "ZAP!" every time it electrocuted a fly. And there was new naugahyde on the booth seats so you didn't feel like your butt was falling into the Grand Canyon when you sat down. I recognized the old waitress, Aphis, only now she was wearing a white apron and she greeted me in a foreign language. I think it was French.

IT'S THE PITTS

After I ate I went into the restroom and was shocked. It actually looked like it had been cleaned recently. The communal experience had been eliminated as all the stalls had new doors and locks and there was a air blower so you no longer had to wipe your hands on your jeans. At least not much anyway.

When I entered the sale pavilion it was like entering a new dimension and my first reaction was "Where'd everybody go?" Was that Charley who'd been working the outgate for as long as I could remember? He had a facial resemblance to Charley but he was wearing a new Stetson, Cinch jeans, a Wrangler shirt and boots so fine you could see the wrinkles in his socks. Instead of a whip he had a rattle paddle in his hand and was treating the livestock with new found respect. He probably didn't want to damage the high priced steaks and roasts as they walked out of the ring.

A cow buyer I'd known had a beautiful lady on either side of him and the dog that usually sat under his seat was now sitting in his lap, sporting a new collar encrusted with fake diamonds. At least I assumed they were fake. Instead of tobacco juice leaking down both sides of his mouth he was now smoking an e-cigarette. You won't believe this but I swear I almost saw him smile.

It appeared that Rulon, the auctioneer/owner, had finally hired a new auctioneer but he later got off the block and passed by me in the hallway. "You certainly are rude. Aren't you even going to speak to me?" he asked.

"Is that you Rulon? I thought it was you but I wasn't sure. The diamond stickpin and Polo player on your shirt threw me off. I haven't recognized anyone or anything since I got here."

"Well," said Rulon, "you better get used to it. This is what good times in the cow business look like."

"Oh, is that it? You'll have to excuse me Rulon but I have a good excuse. I'm only 63 years old and never knew what good times looked like."

House, Senate continue with primary task: adopting budget

AUSTIN — The House Appropriations Committee on March 24 unanimously approved the General Appropriations Act (House Bill 1) — the first hurdle toward passing a state budget for fiscal years 2016 and 2017.

The committee's chair, state Rep. John Otto, R-Dayton, and the 27-member committee's work earned the praise of House Speaker Joe Straus, who said HB 1 is "a responsible, disciplined plan that sets the right priorities for a growing state. It addresses education and transportation, it increases transparency and it will allow the House to provide meaningful tax relief."

HB 1 awaits consideration by the full House and a long list of proposed amendments to it will be debated on the House floor in the coming days.

SB 2, the Senate version of the state budget, is still under construction in the Senate Finance Committee. Differences in SB 2 and HB 1 must be reconciled by the two bodies in order to become enrolled as law.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

Comptroller Glenn Hegar's biennial revenue estimate for fiscal years 2016 and 2017 suggests $113 billion in state funds will be available for general purpose spending. Lawmakers' promises of fiscal conservatism suggest a finished state budget well under the available amount.

SENATE PASSES TAX-CUT BILLS

Senate Bill 1 and Senate Joint Resolution 1 were passed by the Senate last week and have moved to the House for consideration. The bills, by Senate Finance Chair Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, seek to tie the homestead exemption to home prices and allow homeowners to write off 25 percent of the average home price in Texas in any given year. This is projected to reduce property taxes in the state by $2.1 billion over the next two years. Because this change in the law will require an amendment to the state constitution, voters will get a chance to decide on this issue in September, according to Senate documents.

Two other Senate bills seek to reduce the franchise tax. Nelson's SB 7 reduces the overall rate by 15 percent and cuts the 'EZ Rate' used by businesses that make less than $20 million, by 40 percent. SB 8 by Sen. Charles Schwertner, R-Georgetown, would exempt businesses that make less than $4 million in annual revenue from the franchise levy. Currently, only businesses with less than $1 million in revenue are exempt. More than 60,000 small businesses would no longer have to pay the franchise tax if SB 8 becomes law.

House passes cell phone bill

On a vote of 104-39, the House on March 26 passed legislation regulating the use of a portable wireless communication device while operating a motor vehicle.

Pioneer Days at Big Bend

BY CATHY ENGLISH
OZONA, TEXAS

Early last month, the Big Bend National Park hosted its 27th Annual Pioneer Reunion.

Held each year on the first Saturday in February, the event focuses on the Big Bend area and celebrates the history of local families and events that have shaped the past and continue to shape the future.

This year's reunion was held in the Panther Junction Community Center at the park headquarters.

Local Ozona resident, Ben H. English, was the keynote speaker of the day finishing the afternoon with a talk reflecting on the years he spent growing up in and around Lajitas and Terlingua. Some of the topics he discussed were helping out on his parents' ranches, starting school in a one-room schoolhouse and spending time with his grandparents who operated the Lajitas Trading Post in the 1960's.

He described what Lajitas had been like before the resort, chili cook-offs and population growth brought "progress" to the area.

He also gave a brief history of the settling of Lajitas and Terlingua, and how the establishment of the Big Bend National Park had impacted the communities.

Although many at the time had criticized the U.S. Park Service because landowners had been forced to sell out when the land was set aside, today people from all over the world can come to enjoy the beauty of the park and see the land unspoiled by the changes witnessed in the area around it.

Preserving that beauty for future generations, said English, is a priceless inheritance and there is nothing better that this generation can offer its children.

THE EMPTY TOMB

Years ago my wife and I went on a trip to Israel and we saw many wonderful things like the Dead Sea, Sea of Galilee and City of Jericho. We spent a good deal of time in Jerusalem and I was impressed with the city. We visited the Wailing Wall, the Temple Mount and the Mount of Olives. But two things that really caught my attention were a nearby hill that looked like a giant skull and a nearby empty tomb, (Matthew 27:33-37). It may or may not be the tomb where they laid Jesus Christ after His crucifixion on the cross. The Bible and Jesus Himself foretold of His death and His resurrection from the grave, (Matthew 28:6&7, Mark 8:31, 16:1-16). His close friends went to the tomb where they had laid Him and He was not there. Shortly, He appeared to many and at one time to over 500, (1 Corinthians 15:6). He was not a ghost or a departed spirit as He ate fish with the disciples, (Luke 24:36-49). His death or shed blood made a way for our sins to be forgiven and His bodily resurrection from the grave was evidence that His offering for us was acceptable to God, (Romans 4:24&25, 5:6-11). Just as He had victory over death, all of us that have accepted as Savior and Lord will live in Glory forever with Him, (John 3:16-18, Romans 10:9-13, 1 Peter 1:3-9). See you in Church next Sunday.

Clayton said all students that still need to pass EOCs are in tutorials as part of their school day.

He also said as soon as the district found out the results, letters were immediately sent out to parents and given to the students about summer school and the boot camp.

Clayton also said how he interprets the policy is that the tutorials in school do not count, only tutorials or help offered outside of the regular school day.

"The state sometimes doesn't send the results until the day of graduation. We got those letters out as fast as we can," Clayton said.

"This isn't Ronny's decision. He is trying to follow the policy. We're here to help the students," added Superintendent Raul Chavarria. "I think this policy is a good policy. It holds kids accountable. We are doing what we could come up with to help these students, but the kids have to show up and be there. I'm asking the parents to get involved and make sure our kids show up and be there. That's the bottom line. We can't teach an empty desk. The kids have to be there."

The state legislature is currently dealing with this same issue. On March 17, the Texas Senate passed Senate Bill 149, which would allow panels made up of educators, counselors and parents to weigh factors like grades, college entrance exam scores and attendance to decide whether a student should graduate despite poor performance on state standardized exams. The issue is now in the house for debate. The bill would affect students graduating in May.

"That bill is actually going to set up a committee that we already have in our policy," said Amy Newton, board member.

"Whatever decision is made tonight may be null and void in the next few weeks," Chavarria added.

The board decided to table the issue for a couple of weeks to monitor what happens in the legislature.

Newton said when the board meets again there also needs to be a local plan.

Board President David McWilliams asked Chavarria and Clayton to research what other schools are doing.

"It's a shame that the state sets these standards and puts our kids in this situation. Our goal is to provide these opportunities. We don't set these standards, but we have to abide by what the state sets for us," Chavarria said.

SCHOOL COLORS

A discussion about a school colors policy took place immediately after the board finished with the graduation policy.

"I'm disappointed in having to identify this with the important academic issues we have. I am traditional with this. I've been seeing our school teams wearing black

'I'm asking the parents to get involved and make sure our kids show up and be there. That's the bottom line. We can't teach an empty desk.'

primarily in their uniforms. That is not reflective of tradition of history. I'm willing to get some policy going, if there's not one," Orlando DeHoyos said.

Athletic Director Edward Perez said he has talked with the vendors that the school works with and has told them to not provide uniforms that don't meet the district's standards. He also said sometimes they are given limited choices, such as workout gear.

"I agree with you, purple and gold that's it. I'm placing efforts out there to make sure our vendors understand. If something comes in not like that, I'm going to do my very best to hold that coach accountable," Perez said.

OHS Band Director Chans Mollendorf said color guard uniforms can't always be purple and gold due to the theme of the marching show. He also said that if the color guard uniforms do not compliment the show the band could get points deducted at contest.

"We can work with that," said Orlando DeHoyos.

McWilliams said he didn't think they needed a policy since the issue was being handled.

SUPERINTENDENT'S CONTRACT RENEWED

After meeting in executive/closed session for two and a half hours, the board unanimously approved to accept Chavarria's evaluation and extend his contract.

The board also approved their own self evaluation.

BUSES

The board approved to purchase two activity buses from Blue Star Bus Sales, LTD. in Lubbock.

The purchase of the buses is part of a settlement agreement between Blue Star Sales and the school district, after the district had previously purchased buses that kept breaking down and needing repairs.

According to documents from Blue Star Bus Sales presented at the meeting, the dealership will give the school district $31,282 for one of the buses and $30,953 for the other making the new buses cost around $128,000 each.

Chavarria said the settlement had a confidentiality clause, so the full details are not available to the public.

"We were our own worst enemy in this case," said Dwight Childress, board member. "Anything that goes wrong with these buses we need to contact them (Blue Star Bus Sales). Every school district that had these buses had the same problem we did. Hopefully, the new ones will not have these programs."

SCHOOL CALENDER

Chavarria presented two drafts of the 2015-2016 school calendar. The drafts come from work done by the District's Site-Base Committee Meeting on March 23.

The only difference in the two drafts was having Jan. 18, Martin Luther King Jr. Day, or Feb. 15, President's Day, off as a student and teacher holiday.

The board talked about alternating the holidays at their February meeting.

Chavarria said instead of having MLK Day or President's Day off, the district could take Jan. 8 to host a speech meet at the high school.

This year all Ozona campuses spent MLK Day learning about King and his work. The board was presented booklets with essays and artwork from OES fourth and fifth grade students.

Assistant OES Principal Vicky Munoz said the day created a lot of dialogue among students and teachers about racism, civil rights and history.

"We are using that day the way you should use it, as an educational opportunity instead of taking that day off," Childress said.

"I would rather see a speech meet where we are actively participating and running the show. If we are going to host a meet we want to be there full presence," added Orlando DeHoyos.

Chavarria said he would prepare two calendar drafts with Feb. 15 as a student holiday and Jan. 8 as a student holiday for the speech meet.

The board will look at approving the calendar at the April 15 regular meeting.

Both calendars also included Oct. 30 as a teacher workday/student holiday due to traveling to Anthony that day for football.

Bad weather days are March 25 and April 25. Early out days are Sept. 25 for homecoming, Nov. 24 for Thanksgiving, Dec. 18 for Christmas and Feb. 17 for STAAR training for teachers.

"I do appreciate the site-base committee's work," Newton said.

Board member Grizz Medina was absent from the meeting.

The board's next regular meeting will be 6:30 p.m. April 15 at the Administration Building. The meeting is open to the public.

IF OUR CUSTOMERS FROM 115 YEARS AGO WALKED IN TODAY, THEY'D FEEL RIGHT AT HOME.

When Sonora Bank opened for business in 1900, folks came to the bank in horse-drawn carriages. So much has changed in 115 years. Or has it?

Although our little bank grew to serve San Angelo and Boerne and embraced the latest products and services, we haven't forgotten where we came from. If those old-timers could come back today, they'd see we still look a person in the eye, offer a firm handshake, and close a deal with a smile. They wouldn't be surprised that we remember their names and genuinely care about their well-being, because it's a part of our Texas tradition. As we enjoy our 115th year, we don't know what the future has in store, but we can promise this – our tradition of excellence continues.

Moses flies at Angelo Relays

OHS Lady Lion McKenna Moses broke personal and meet records at the San Angelo Relays last week.
Moses tied for first in pole vault by reaching a personal best of 11-feet.
Faith Roberson, of Wall, also vaulted 11-feet.
Overall, Moses was pleased with her efforts in the event, but is still looking to rise above the 12-foot mark later this season.
"I haven't gone over 11 feet all year, so it was nice to go over that mark on my second try," Moses said. "The tailwind was really pushing us all at the top of the vault. But I feel really good going into district."
"It's been a little slow, but I've been switching between poles — one a little shorter than the other. But I think I can hit 12 this year."
Moses also won the high jump and tied the meet record of 5-2.
In the 1600, she placed second. She also competed in the 800.
Alyssa Newlin also placed sixth in the Long Jump (14-08).
For the Lions, Omero Rodriguez placed fourth (4:54), Adrian Rodriguez sixth (5:01) and Alex Hopper 11th (5:13) in the 1600.
Omero Rodriguez also placed fourth in the 3200 (10:40). Adrian Rodriguez placed eighth (11:07) and Alex Hopper placed ninth (11:17).
Noe Medina was sixth in the 800 (2:09) and Bryce Gutierrez was seventh (2:09).
Ben Badillo was third in the 200 (24.45).
Roman Esparza was seventh in the pole vault (10-6).
The OHS Track Teams will compete at the District Meet Tuesday, April 7, in Mertzon.

A FEDERAL FIREFIGHTER oversees a prescribe burn on the Ward Walker Seven Oaks Ranch on March 27.

and Wildlife Austin Ecological Services Office. "A prescribe burn can restore natural grassland habitats for migratory birds and native species. It's a good fire."

Walker said the land had become overgrazed and almost "unrecognizable" from his childhood.

In 2009, The Nature Conservancy conducted the ranch's first prescribed burn. Since then Walker said the land has "gone 180 degrees" in change.

Quail, deer and turkey numbers are up, as well as wild species such as horned toad lizards and owls.

"It's really become a good education experience," Walker said.

Prescribed burns are often used to improve habitats for species, recycle nutrients back to the soil, promote growth of trees, wildflower and plants and they can help reduce extreme wildfires.

"This country is in a long term drought. This part of the state is the hardest hit," said Carl Schwoppe, fire department officer with the Balcones Canyon Lands National Wildlife Refuge in Marble Falls.

In 2011, the ranch's second prescribe burn was conducted just six weeks before the Deaton-Cole wildfire destroyed 1,500 acres on the ranch.

Walker said the prescribe burn saved the ranch house in the Deaton-Cole fire.

In 2011, ranch manager Bob Buchholz worked with Walker and suggested to "rest" the land for three years from livestock and hunting.

"This country hasn't fully recovered," Schwoppe said.

Preparing for prescribe burn takes time and there are strict guidelines involved, Walker said.

Surveys and studies of the land have to be conducted months before. Safety is also a big concern on fire days. Briefings are conducted prior to burning with instructions and maps discussed.

Burn plans consider temperature, humidity, wind, moisture of the vegetation, and conditions for the dispersal of smoke. Prescribed fire specialists compare conditions on the ground to those outlined in burn plans before deciding whether to burn on a given day, according to the U.S. Forest Service.

Firefighters then start slowly and work into making the fire bigger as humidity levels drop during the day.

"We have a lot of country to burn," Schwoppe said. "Kill as much of the cedar as possible."

Walker's family has owned the ranch since 1934. It was part of the original Kincaid Ranch purchased in 1912 by Thomas A. Kincaid.

The name "Seven Oaks" comes from the magnificent oaks outside the ranch house, which are part of the largest oak grove in Crockett County and are several hundred years old.

For years, like many Crockett County ranches, the Ward Walker Seven Oaks Ranch was home to sheep, goat and cattle.

Walker said the process of restoring his family's ranch is something he has enjoyed.

"I've taken a liking to the ranch. It's a way to help the family," Walker said.

By the end of the weekend, Walker said "everything went off without a hitch."

"It was a well-executed burn. I'm already getting fired up about the next one," Walker said.

Bill 80 sets a fine of at least $25 and not more than $99 for the misdemeanor offense involving the operation of a vehicle by a person under 18 years of age while using a wireless communication device or the operation of a motorcycle or moped by a person under 17 years of age who holds a restricted motorcycle or moped license while using a wireless communication device. The bill enhances the punishment for such offense to a fine of at least $100 and not more than $200 for a previous conviction of an offense relating to the operation of a vehicle by a person under 18 years of age.

One of the bill's many effects is a requirement that the Department of Public Safety include in driver's license examinations a test of the applicant's knowledge of the effect of using a wireless communication device or engaging in other actions that may distract a driver.

TXDOT LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN

Texas Department of Transportation on March 27 launched an impaired driving awareness campaign titled, "Drink. Drive. Go to Jail. De Veras."

The bilingual effort runs through May 23 to overlap with Easter, Fiesta and Cinco de Mayo. The Spanish phrase, "De Veras," meaning "For Real," is a common expression used by Spanish speakers when responding to expressions of disbelief, TXDOT Media Relations explained. Recent census numbers show that 38 percent of the Texas population is Hispanic, the media office added.

UNEMPLOYMENT RATE DECREASES

Texas' seasonally adjusted unemployment rate fell to 4.3 percent in February, down from 4.4 percent in January, Texas Workforce Commission reported on March 27.

The rate decreased thanks to the statewide addition of 7,100 non-agricultural jobs during the month of February.
