Now is the time to start thinking about taxes

Tax season is over but now is the right time to recap and implement strategies to have an easier process during your next filing season. The beginning of the year for small business owners is usually somewhat stressful mainly because of tax season. No matter whether you're a sole proprietor or corporation, if you sell goods or services for financial gain, you should have an accounting structure in place and if you collect sales tax you must send that money to the government. Tax returns and payments are due by April 15 or the first business day thereafter.

The first questions you will be asked when filing taxes is: What is your accounting period? For almost every business it's from Jan. 1-Dec. 31 of the same year. The year is broken down into quarters and typically you should be paying an estimated tax to both state and federal offices each quarter. But to pay taxes is necessary to keep a record of your sales as well as your expenses. The best way to keep up with it is with preparation during the year.

What is meant with preparation is to gather all of the information required to prepare and file your taxes. This can include bank statements with copies of checks, invoices, a record of the vehicles and equipment that you have bought and sold, business vehicle mileage, and the records of all other expenses. Making this a monthly habit will bring great benefits to you but mainly to your business.

Reviewing your income and expenses on a monthly basis is like reading a book about your business. By looking closely at these challenges and opportunities, you may be able to avoid making some of the same mistakes next year. Keeping track of your income and expenses will show you how much money you need to set aside to pay your taxes quarterly. I always suggest to my clients to set up a business savings account linked to your checking account and place a percentage of all income there. Pretend it doesn't exist until it is time to pay taxes.

Understanding your deductions is crucial. My suggestions for this is to label your receipts of all expenses and to keep all your income and expenses organized. Your accountant will alert you to appropriate deductions.

Your accountant charges you by time, so try to have all paperwork as organized as possible with sufficient notes for them to be able to deduct the type of expense eligible. You can also use a bookkeeping software to assist you in keeping track of all the paperwork. If you're still a small business with few expenses and invoices, you can do it yourself but if you're growing and things are getting complicated, consider hiring an expert.

If school finance system is legal, what's the incentive to fix it?

A Texas Supreme Court decision saying the state's school funding system is a big, stinking mess — but not an unconstitutional one — might be just the medicine to keep things just the way they are.

One of the truisms of Texas politics and government is that it's practically impossible to pass significant school finance legislation without an open threat from a court. This is not as cynical as it might sound. The latest lesson came about a year ago, when state Rep. Jimmie Don Aycock, R-Killeen, introduced and then withdrew a sweeping overhaul of how Texas pays for schools.

This time, nearly everybody who was paying attention thought the courts would find something in the current system unconstitutional, and that the resulting ruling could have as much influence over the state budget as the trouble in the state's oil and gas sector.

State District Judge John Dietz ruled that the state's method of paying for schools was unconstitutional in almost every way: that it didn't give every kid in public schools in Texas access to the same quality education, that it relied so strongly on local funding that it accidentally amounted to a state property tax, and that the state and local spending was too low to meet the academic standards set by the state itself.

That's just a sampling from a pile of legal hurt Judge Dietz dumped on the state of Texas: 200,000 pages of records, 1,508 findings of facts and 118 conclusions of law, according to the Texas Supreme Court.

The state was clearly in for a financial storm, just as soon as that high court reviewed Dietz's ruling and handed down its own. The court heard arguments last September, and the looming school finance decision has been a centerpiece of political and budget presentations ever since.

Those storm preparations were apparently for naught: Hurricane Dietz never made landfall.

In their decision, announced on Friday, the Supremes said the funding system for public schools in Texas is totally fouled up. They detailed some of the troubles. They called it names. They made their plea for change.

But they didn't give reformers any leverage, saying they found no violations of the Texas Constitution that would force lawmakers to make changes. Legislators are running around like the owner of a smoking, rattling jalopy who has just learned that the car passed a vehicle inspection. The justices could have learned this trick from one of those mechanics who details everything your car needs and then says, "But you can still drive it out of here if you'd like to skip these repairs."

The justices talk fancier than some mechanics, but the message is familiar. "Texas's more than five million school children deserve better than serial litigation over an increasingly Daedalean 'system,'" Justice Don Willett wrote for the majority. "They deserve transformational, top-to-bottom reforms that amount to more than Band-Aid on top of Band-Aid. They deserve a revamped, nonsclerotic system fit for the 21st century."

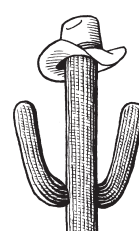

So here's what happens when the Legislature isn't staring down a muscular court opinion. Aycock, in a Facebook post (he was unavailable for interviews after the court ruling), described what happened to his last effort: "Even the proposed $3 Billion funding increase left districts divided about how to distribute the money. All wanted the dollars. None wanted the pain of the needed corrections. When added to those who wanted to wait for the court, and those who don't support school funding in general, there was simply no way to get the bill passed. I was probably foolish to try."

He won't be back — he's not seeking another term. He offered some advice, though, writing that the schools shouldn't expect big changes and that the Legislature will never do anything unless the schools can get a consensus of their own.

The courts aren't going to do it. Maybe somebody else will step up.

Unidentified Fruity Object

IT'S THE PITTS

LEE PITTS

Besides being a great-granddaughter of the former President, Laura Eisenhower is a professional clairvoyant and spiritual healer who reads Tarot cards and gives astrology readings for a living. In an interview with Fox News Laura said that vegetarians are more apt to see UFO's than meat-eaters because, "we are multidimensional beings and based on our frequency, perceptions and our vibratory levels that we are functioning from, we are going to see things differently."

I'm not sure "vibratory levels" are something we should discuss in a family publication but Laura says we see things differently because conventionally raised foods may contain "toxic energies" while vegetarian and vegan diets produce a cleaner and purer energy. She explains, "When you are dealing with eating animals, it is a heavier density to process in our physical bodies. When we eat veggies, we are lighter, so we can connect easier with higher beings." According to Laura you don't have to be vegetarian or vegan to experience what she calls sky beings, "but it is a lot more appropriate."

I'm not sure I want to meet these friends of Laura's. It's not because I'm afraid or anything, it's just I'm not willing to eat the diet Laura says we should eat in order to have a better chance to see them. To see the sky people Laura recommends eating something called Kombucha, turmeric and raw food. "And keep your digestive tract flowing," she says. I think that we can then surmise that constipated people hardly ever see sky people and that adventurous readers should rush right down to the Rexall for a big jar of Metamucil®.

Hooking up with these sky beings sounds like hard work. It's not like merely becoming a Facebook friend. Speaking of which, I went to Laura's Facebook page to learn more about Ike's fascinating great granddaughter. Laura says she "has gone through the depths of the World Soul as an Alchemical Warrior". And you'll be glad to know she is "working to create transformation and retrieve all aspects of the Goddess back into wholeness while breaking through from the grips of the Archons, patriarchy hidden agendas, including a Mars recruitment and the Ancient Game." She also working hard to "guide us back to the Pieroma."

Huh? I know where Pie Town is (New Mexico) but I've never heard of this Pieroma place. And let me just say that Laura sounds nuttier than Jamoica Almond Fudge and belongs in the HaHa House. She's a UFO herself... an Unidentified Fruity Object.

I admit that as a meat eater I've yet to meet Laura's sky beings but I was abducted once, not by aliens but by my grandparents who took us on a much needed vacation from our parents. I am fascinated by the subject though, and wanting to know more about Ike's granddaughter, I Googled the words

Eisenhower and UFO's and you're never gonna believe what I found! (Try it yourself!)

According to the knower of all things, the Internet, in February of 1954 Ike was vacationing in Palm Springs, California, when he went missing. His doctor later said he'd had dental issues but it was leaked that Eisenhower was taken to Edwards Air Force Base for a secret meeting with extra terrestrials. I assure you, I'm not making this up. This was supposedly the first of many such meetings which led to Ike signing of a peace treaty with the Aeroforms, the extra terrestrials which were said to resemble the Nordic race.

I'm guessing that Ike just ate some bad chicken, got confused, had a fuzzy bloated feeling and forgot that he'd merely signed a peace treaty with Norway.

At this point I'm reminded of the words of the brilliant physicist, Stephen Hawking when he said, "I'm discounting reports of UFO's. Why would they appear only to cranks and weirdoes."

I do wonder however, if these Aeroforms are the same sky people Laura Eisenhower says we could meet if we just ate more cauliflower I know one thing, if teachers would have taught us history like this when I was young fewer of would have slept through both World Wars, the depression and Gettysburg.

Clearly the Eisenhower clan could use a few quarter-pounders as a first step towards sanity. In the very least they should ease up on the veggies. The psychedelic mushrooms especially.

High court rules school finance method is constitutional

AUSTIN — The current method devised by the Texas Legislature in 2011 to fund public education does not violate the state constitution, the Texas Supreme Court unanimously ruled May 13.

The lawsuit challenging the state's education-funding method originally was brought in 2011 by more than 600 school districts identifying themselves collectively as the Texas Taxpayer and Student Fairness Coalition. Lawyers for the coalition argued that the state falls short of the constitution's imperative of equitable funding by failing to provide enough money for school districts' classroom instruction, maintenance and operation and other critical budget areas.

Article 7 of the constitution says: "A general diffusion of knowledge being essential to the preservation of the liberties and rights of the people, it shall be the duty of the Legislature of the State to establish and make suitable provision for the support and maintenance of an efficient system of public free schools."

In a 100-page ruling, the court said the current system ensures that "all Texas children have access to a quality education that enables them to achieve their potential and fully participate now and in the future in the social, economic, and educational opportunities of our state and nation." The court agreed that the current funding system, while imperfect, is "good enough" to satisfy the constitutional mandate, and going forward, it is up to the Legislature, not the courts, to amend the funding formula.

Gov. Greg Abbott called the ruling "a victory for Texas taxpayers and the Texas Constitution." Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick, House Speaker Joe Straus, Attorney General Ken Paxton and many Republican lawmakers joined the governor in welcoming the ruling. Paxton echoed the ruling in saying school finance "must be debated and shaped by the Texas Legislature, not through decades' worth of ongoing litigation in the court system."

In contrast, organizations such as the Texas Association of School Boards, the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, the Texas Democratic Party and a number of Democratic lawmakers expressed disappointment over the nine-member, all-Republican court's ruling.

Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, said, "The Texas Supreme

Court's ruling held that the state's school funding system met 'minimum constitutional requirements,' turning a cold shoulder to at least two-thirds of Texas school districts that were desperately seeking relief from an inequitable, inefficient and unsustainable school

The politics of meat is a 'hot potato'

The World Health Organization (WHO) released a two-page report last October entitled Carcinogenicity of Consumption of Red and Processed Meat. It warned that processed meat categorically causes colorectal cancer in humans, and red meat "probably" does.

Does it matter what the WHO says about meat and cancer? Yes!

WHO's report cited 20 observational or epidemiological studies and made headlines around the world. It had a very significant impact on the status quo about the consumption of meat and health. Most pro meat-eater critics find the report unconvincing and recognize the statistical information is faulty, and there is very little risk of getting cancer by eating meat, processed or not.

In May 2015, Dr. David Klurfeld, National Program Leader, USDA Agricultural Services, investigated the gaps in understanding the relationship between meat and health. In his published review he states, "Meat is one of the most nutrient dense foods, providing high-quality protein, heme-iron, zinc, and vitamins B6 and B12. Despite these advantages, epidemiological studies have linked consumption of red and processed meat with obesity, type 2 diabetes, cardiovascular diseases, and cancers.

Most observational studies report small, increased relative risk. However, there are many limitations of such studies including inability to accurately estimate intake, lack of pre-specified hypotheses, multiple compar-sons, and confounding from many factors including body weight, fruit and vegetable intake, physical activity, smoking, and alcohol. All these can limit the reliability of conclusions from these studies. This observational research is heterogeneous and does not meet the standards to infer cause and effect."

In November 2013, twenty-three cancer experts from eight countries gathered in Norway to look at the science relating to colorectal cancer and lean or processed meat. They concluded that "...the interactions between meat, gut and health outcomes such as CRC [colorectal cancer] are very complex and are not clearly pointing in one direction... Epidemiological and mechanistic data on associations between red and processed meat intake and CRC are inconsistent and underlying mechanisms are unclear...Better biomarkers of meat intake and of cancer occurrence and updated food composition databases are required for future studies."

The truth be known, the WHO looked at over 800 epidemiological and observational human studies of red or processed meat and cancers of all kinds. It chose to base its apocalyptic declaration on studies of CRC alone, out of sixteen types of cancer studied. One can only assume the evidence relating to the other types of cancer was lacking.

Dr. Georgia A. Ede, MD, is a psychiatrist, psychopharmacologist and nutrition consultant. On the epidemiology of red meat and cancer, she states; "Of those 800+ epidemiological studies, a mere 29 were put forth by the WHO as "informative" about the connection between unprocessed red meat and colorectal cancer.

"Of those 29 studies, 14 suggested that red meat was associated with a higher risk for colorectal cancer in humans; 15 of them did not.

On the epidemiology of processed meat and cancer, she adds; "As for processed meat, the WHO chose 27 of the 800+ studies to make its case for the cancer connection.

"Of those 27 studies, 18 suggested that processed meat was associated with a higher risk for colorectal cancer in humans; 9 did not."

For me, it's very simple. Meat has been the major element in our way-of-eating and present in every generation throughout the evolution of humanity; some 2.5 million years. It has enabled us to survive through countless genetic metamorphoses. All our body's systems, faculties and functions evolved and are powered by the nutrients in meat.

Think; if meat gave us cancer, we would not have survived even our first generation. Here's to your health.

Visitor center grand reopening Saturday

BY JEFFERSON R. SPILMAN
FORT LANCASTER

SHEFFIELD, Texas — A two-year project culminates Saturday, May 21, at 1 p.m., at the Fort Lancaster State Historic Site, one of the Texas Historical Commission's (THC) 21 historic sites, celebrates the grand reopening of its new visitors center.

This event is in conjunction with Fort Lancaster's free annual Western Frontier Days (Friday, May 20 and Saturday, May 21, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. each day).

Fort Lancaster will come alive with soldiers, pioneers, Native American dancers, chuck wagons, cooking demonstrations, livestock, camels, a stage coach, and much more.

The new visitors center and the annual Western Frontier Days will feature appearances and comments by THC Commissioner Gilbert E. "Pete" Peterson, III, THC Executive Director Mark Wolfe, Crockett County Judge Fred Deaton, and others.

"The Fort Lancaster visitors center project highlights the commitment of the Texas Historical Commission and the State of Texas to historic preservation and education," said Jefferson Spilman, site manager, Fort Lancaster. "This renewed building will provide a 21st century experience and ensure the history of Fort Lancaster continues to inspire people of all ages."

The THC recently completed a two-year renovation that includes a new visitors center built from the original building with a substantial new gallery exhibit on the north side.

the story of Fort Lancaster through artifacts, images, scale models, a life-sized camel replica, and an introductory video.

To increase visitor comfort, a large outdoor canopy was built facing the fort ruins.

This project marks the first major site improvement since the 1970s, and reflects the THC's commitment to protecting cultural resources while providing enjoyable educational opportunities for the public.

Spanning 82 acres and surrounded by the wide open spaces of West Texas, Fort Lancaster State Historic Site is located between Sheffield and Ozona in Crockett County. It commemorates the vestiges of one of the forts established in the 1850s to protect the route between San Antonio and El Paso.

Fort Lancaster played an important role in westward expansion by providing escorts for mail carriers, wagon trains and settlers.

The fort is located at 629 Fort Lancaster Road in Sheffield. Take exit 343 off of Interstate-10.

MCKENNA MOSES placed second in the 1600-meter run at the UIL State Track Meet Saturday in Austin.

and finished my senior year on the medal stand. These two girls were the two girls that placed with me last year as well, in the same places. I'm so proud of them and glad to say we all competed," Moses said.

Moses followed up with another silver medal later that evening in the 1,600 meters.

She finished with a personal record time of 5 minutes, 20.11 seconds.

"I came in with the third-best time and I ended up PRing by 10 seconds so I was really excited about that," Moses said. "Around the second lap, my legs started feeling heavy and I thought, 'Oh, I want to slow down,' but I knew my coaches were going to kill me if I did so I kept pushing through. About the last 10 meters I knew I had to go so I gave it everything."

Due to the four-hour delay that pushed the 1A/4A afternoon session so far back that it was combined with the night session for 2A and 6A, Moses ended up running about an hour later than scheduled: 9:55 p.m. instead of 8:45.

"I was tired but I think it was better because it ended up being cooler because of the rain and the ground was cooler," she said.

Last year Moses finished fifth last year at state in the 1,600.

Moses also finished seventh in high jump on Friday.

She finishes at OHS with four state track and field medals.

Moses will continue competing in track at the University of Incarnate Word in San Antonio.

CROCKETT COUNTY 4-H NEWS

4-H Shooters compete in local event

The Crockett County Whiz Bang was held on Saturday, May 14, at the Crockett County 4-H Shooting Sports Complex. Fifty shooters ranging in age from third grade to 12th grade participated.

Crockett County had nine competitors, including Leland Wellman, Carson Childress, Chantz Elliott, Jacob Childress, Ethan Criswell, Asa Forehand, Seth Childress, Tell Nowell and Grant Childress.

4-H kids competed from 14 different counties throughout Texas.

The Ozona shooters have been practicing for the last two months and everyone of them have improved their scores.

"It is amazing to see how quickly they improve," said Shelly Childress.

The shooters shot in three different disciplines including:

- Skeet - which involves two houses throwing clay targets left and right.
- Trap - which is a clay-bird thrown straight away from the shooter.
- 5-Stand - which is claybirds thrown from eight different machines in a random pattern.

Awards were given first through fifth.

The Ozona participants who received awards are as follows:

In the Junior Division, Seth Childress won third in 5-Stand, Asa Forehand won third in Trap, Grant Childress won fifth in Skeet and fifth in 5-Stand.

In the Intermediate Division, Carson Childress won second in Trap, third in 5-Stand and fifth in Skeet.

All of the Ozona shooters did very well.

The 4-H shooters that come to Ozona are some of the best in the state. Many of them have and will be the top scores at the state shoot in San Antonio in July.

"I was very happy with how the Ozona kids held in there. A lot of it is due to the fact that Crockett County has really good facilities that the kids can use," said Clay Childress.

"Ultimately, what we need to consider is the experience on the ground. No matter which company we pick they all are probably going to bid to the same subcontractors," said Commissioner Eligio Martinez.

The commissioners will hold a special called meeting at 6 p.m. Monday, May 23, at the courthouse annex. The meeting will be open to the public.

finance system that Texas courts had previously labeled unconstitutional."

Rep. Carol Alvarado, D-Houston, said, "Our children deserve more than a minimal education and the Legislature should do all they can to ensure we repair this broken system. Over five million public school students are counting on us."

Speaker Straus acknowledged "there is ample room for improvement" in school funding and said the Texas House "will continue working to deliver value for taxpayers and provide an outstanding education for our students."

REVENUE IS UP SLIGHTLY
Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar on May 11 announced his office would send cities, counties, transit systems and special purpose taxing districts $767.7 million in local sales tax allocations for May. The total was based on sales made in March by businesses that report tax monthly, plus sales made in January, February and March by quarterly filers. It is 1.1 percent more than allocated in May 2015.

"The cities of Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso and Fort Worth saw noticeable increases in sales tax allocations," Hegar said. "Energy-centric cities such as Houston, Odessa and Midland continue to see decreases in sales tax allocations."

BLAZE RULED INTENTIONAL
The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on May 11 announced its research laboratory's finding that the April 17, 2013, fire at the West Fertilizer Company plant in the town of West, Texas, was intentionally set. Fifteen people died and some 160 were injured in the fire and explosion.

"We will gladly assist in any way possible in the days ahead to expose the criminals behind this heinous crime," said David Maxwell, director of law enforcement for the Texas attorney general's office.

Public Notice

Q&A

What is a public notice?

It's information about important government activities. Notice in the newspaper is required for a good reason — to make sure it's NOTICED. It's crucial to government transparency...and government accountability.

Your local paper is the most visible, independent source for this crucial service. We not only print notices in the paper, but post them on our website and a statewide website at no extra charge. And they're archived forever, so there's a permanent and unalterable record.

Texas newspapers have published public notices since 1836. As your hometown paper, we're proud to provide this service to our communities.

Violation of the one-per-household rule constitutes violation of FCC rules and will result in the suspension of Lifeline service. Only eligible consumers may enroll in the program. Consumers who violate these rules may be subject to a Lifeline suspension or be barred from the program. Consumers must provide proper documentation proving eligibility for the Lifeline program.
