is irregular with respect to stage of growth, the early planted cotton is making good progress to date. However, decisions on when to irrigate or whether to even apply water to some late cotton will be critical in view of increased emphasis on fiber quality and recent rains this season.

We must remember that cotton has a low water demand until the first blooms appear. Thereafter water use increases rapidly through the peak fruiting period. Generally cotton planted during the latter part of April and May will be blooming at the present time (July 15) and will be in the peak fruiting period in late July or early August. Soil moisture must be adequate during this period or yields will be reduced. If recent rains have not provided sufficient moisture for cotton which is now blooming, the first summer irrigation should be applied at this time.

Some wilting will be observed during mid-afternoons. This is normal and does not always indicate a need for irrigation. Temporary wilting is due to moisture being lost faster through the leaves (transpiration) than taken up by the roots and not due to lack of soil moisture. The plants recover & look normal during the evening and morning hours. Decisions on whether to irrigate should be made by checking soil moisture and not on wilting of plants during the afternoon. However wilting during morning hours usually indicate low soil moisture levels and a need for irrigation.

Generally late May or June planted cotton has sufficient moisture at the present time. In some cases this cotton has sufficient moisture to make a crop. It is extremely important not to irrigate June planted cotton until it blooms. Because of current emphasis and the need for producing mature fiber of good quality, we need to get late planted cotton fruiting as early as possible. Water applied prior to blooming will delay fruiting and further shorten the period left for maturing the crop before frost.

Unfortunately, we cannot "catch up" or make up time lost to replanting or late planting by such practices as early watering or putting on additional water. In fact the opposite effect is the usual result, that of delayed fruiting and production of a large vegetative plant. Low quality lint (especially low mike) in our state as well as other states, has been traced to cotton receiving improper irrigation (applied either too early or too late) along with late applications of nitrogen.

er irrigation (applied either too early or too late) along with late applications of nitrogen. Therefore, we should avoid any practice that tends to delay maturity. Such practices as the prudent use of irrigation water applied at the proper time will go a long way in producing quality fiber from late-planted cotton on the South Plains.

SANDHILLS PHILOSOPHER

Us 8 Per Cent

(Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm has had some trouble napping, if we understand his letter correctly.)

Dear editor:

At first I thought I was suffocating but when I finally woke up under the tree where I was napping I discovered a copy of The Fort Worth Star Telegram had blown over my face and when I flailed around and got it off I decided I might as well read it. Sometimes this is a good way to get back to sleep.

It didn't work, because of two articles I found in it.

One was a report quoting a big city mayor as saying every city in the United States needs help from Washington. New York alone could use 10 billion in the next few years.

The cities' problems are so big and so complex, he said, that the financial burdens are now too big to bear alone. "No big city can exist without help from Washington," he said. "The problems of slums, ghettos, schools, crime, traffic, violence, drinkable water, sewage disposal, air pollution... these can't be solved without outside help."

The other article said the farm population has now dwindled to only 8 per cent of the population. In other words, 92 per cent of the people in this country are non-farmers. I got to thinking about this and it's got me worried.

Clearly, while they need more money, the cities can't tax each other to keep going, and Washington can't tax itself, so who does that, leave? You're right. It leaves us 8 per cent who are farming and ranching.

What it means is that 92 per cent of the population is saying it can't make it without help from us 8 per cent.

Now this is flattering enough, and I sure would like to help and would hate anything to see New York City or Chicago or Philadelphia go under, but I've just looked over my Johnson grass farm and I'm afraid that if they're looking to me for financial salvation they're in worse shape than they realize.

They'd do better trying to get their notes renewed, or maybe turning to some other country, say Cuba, for foreign aid. Or try some testimonial dinners.

No use looking to Washington. The farmers tried that and the farm population dropped from 30 per cent of the population to 8 per cent.

Yours faithfully,

him because at that time, all the police cars had those accessories as standard equipment. Not to be outdone, Price bought the car, and before it was removed from the garage, had both placed in it, and still for the price of $1175.

When traveling to California in the 40's, Price checked his gas mileage on the car. 25 miles per gallon seemed much to high and he thought he had misfigured his mileage. The return trip showed that he was indeed correct for the return trip measured 24 and one-quarter miles per gallon. On recent trips, his gas mileage has still run about 22 miles per gallon.

Price's colorful career spans more than seven decades, in which time he has owned only owned four different automobiles, and during which time he has worked from Washington to Texas.

Born in Weatherford, Texas, in 1895, he was raised in Portales, N. M. and Hereford, Texas. Graduating from Hereford High School in 1914, he then attended the Baptist Academy at San Marcus for one year. Enrolling in the University of Texas in 1916, his education was cut short when the Army decided they needed him more than his alma mater did.

At the time he was drafted, he was teaching about airplane engines in the school of aeronautics. The army sent him to Texas A M where he learned the whys and wherefors of motor transport operations. Soon he was made an electrician specializing in ignition systems.

While on a troop train somewhere in Georgia, the non-con called for all electricians to report to the last car on the train. Heeding the call, he joined his fellow electricians and consequently was allowed to remain in the States while the other fellows who had shared the same car were sent overseas to fight Kaiser Bill.

World War II hit the country with all its demands. Materials of all kinds became in short supply and had to be rationed. Copper wire, because of its value to defense was dealt out to rural electricians only on an emergency priority basis. With this embargo placed on wire, Lyntegar had to shut down its expanding operation and consequently Price & Hawk Consulting Engineers had to close down. (Price took on a partner when he opened his consulting engineering firm, a Cecil Hawks.)

With the war raging in Europe and Asia, Price was forced to seek other employment.

Price soon found work with Freeze and Nichols Engineers at the Pan Tex Ordinance Plant in Amarillo. There he designed six process steam plants for the government. It was here that he received the title of Mechanical Engineer. From there he moved to Tyler where he was engaged in more power plant construction work. When this job played out, Douglas Aircraft in California hired Price to work in the flight test division as engineer in charge of all electrical equipment on Douglas Aircraft.

Lyntegar again called in Price after the war to do their consulting work. With his partner, Cecil Hawk, their pre-war relationship was again renewed. Soon the consulting engineers had accounts in New Mexico, Arizona, and the Plains of Texas. It wasn't uncommon to see Price anywhere on one of five rural systems in his trusty '40 Ford.

Price and Hawk combined operations with several fellow engineers and formed Continental Engineering. Price was soon sent to Lovington, New Mexico, to work on a new power plant project for the Rural Cooperative. The resulting plant today serves a large portion of the Southeastern part of New Mexico.

Price and Hawk was dissolved in 1952, and Price joined the firm of Egglehoff Engineers as a sales man. From 1955 to 1960, he taught Electrical Engineering at Texas Tech.

Today, Price is employed both by Lyntegar Electric Cooperative and by South Plains Electric Cooperative at Lubbock, as an inspector of lines and associate engineer.

At 72 years of age, he is sharp as a tack, and moves like a man half his age.

Yes, Edward Price is a man who "makes things do", and judging from his strength and character, it would n't be to much of a risk to bet that he could "make things do" with his '40 Ford for at least another 100,000 miles, perhaps longer!

Wilson and New Home) was formed, it was thought that the league's champion would advance directly to the Vernon championships without a playoff. Only last week it was learned that, due to an increase in the number of Connie Mack Leagues throughout the state, a playoff between Lynn County and Lubbock Leagues would be necessary. With Tahoka already established as the league's champion, playoff plans could be made to coincide with the end of the Lubbock league's season.

Under the rules of the Connie Mack organization, the league champion may pick up to three players from the other participating team's roster's before entering tournament competition. Joining the Trojan's regular slate of players will be Kenneth Vestal, O'Donnell, and Alex Olivias, New Home.

As either a warmup for Vernon or an end to the season, whatever the case be, the Trojans are also slated for participation starting July 25 in the second annual Post Jaycee Teenage Baseball Tournament.

In his proclamation, County Judge V. F. Jones said: "All the citizens of Lynn County are deeply concerned about the safety and well-being of farm families from whom we receive our abundance of food and other essential agricultural commodities."

"Farm and Ranch accidents reap a grim harvest of approximately 150 fatalities and thousands more suffer painful disabling injuries each year in Texas, plus the great economic loss, causes profound physical and psychological damage suffered by members of farm families that are involved."

"During this special week, a statewide farm accident prevention education program will be undertaken by the Texas Farm Bureau, the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, 4-H Clubs, the Texas Safety Association, Future Farmers and Future Homemakers of America, Young Farmers and Young Homemakers of Texas and the Lynn County Farm Bureau, with the theme "Think and Act Safely."

County Farm Bureau President L. C. Uafred said that a different phase of safety would be emphasized each day during the week; Sunday—reverence for life Monday—safety begins at home; Tuesday—agricultural chemicals; Wednesday—rural safety; Friday—farm machinery; Saturday—recreation safety.

Trousers will retain shape best if hung from cuff hangers. The weight of the trousers, suspended from the cuffs, can stretch out most wrinkles. If shirt collars and cuffs are badly soiled, try rubbing in some plain chalk and allow to stay for a few hours. When brushed off, most or all of the embedded dirt may come with it. Around now, collars of outer-coats can stand a going over with a cloth dampened in cleaning fluid. This will help keep shirt collars clean.

Theda Gandy On Eight State Trip

Miss Theda Gandy, 16, has recently completed an eight states vacation with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Houston, Stratford. Leaving July 4, the group visited in New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Montana, Wyoming, and South Dakota.

Miss Gandy said they saw much of the beautiful landscape, as well as the aweing sight of Mt. Rushmore, two Indian Reservations, Yellowstone National Park, with an ample supply of bears, as well as a heavy showing of oil wells. She noted that the bears at Yellowstone would walk right up to the cars, or people, and sit down to have their picture taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Rueben Gandy, Theda's parents, left July 8 with the other children, Inita and Kerry, and visited Six Flags and Brownwood, then went on to Stamford, to bring Theda home.

Mr. and Mrs. Travis Inman and Kirby Shearer visited in Lubbock and Brownfield Sunday.

Ann Duncan, CHDA Says:

To keep drippings in the best condition, pour them in to small jars so that the bottom layers won't become rancid. Date or number the jars and store them in the refrigerator. Use the oldest fat first.

One pound of bacon will yield anywhere from one to one and a half cups of drippings. There are any number of ways to use this excellent energy food. It's an ideal seasoning for vegetables. Use it as a basis for soups and white sauces. It adds meat flavor to scalloped dishes, soups and creamed mixtures.

Use bacon for frying eggs. French toast, potatoes, apple slices, and meats. Drippings are excellent for "buttering" crumbs for casseroles, Light muffins, coffee cakes, gingerbread, spice cakes and rich cookies can use bacon drippings to advantage.

In baking with drippings, use one fourth less than for other specified shortenings because its shortening power is greater than other fats.

Salmon packed in flat cans is often higher priced, per ounce, than that in tall cans. Solid packs of the center cuts are often packed in flats, making a more expensive item than those in the tall cans, which usually contain cuts near the head and tail of the fish. However, variations in the size of the catch of a species will effect the supply and the price.

Many stores sell canned salmon under two kinds of labels. The private, or distributor, label is the retail store's own label. The packer label may be available in stores nationally. Products with a packet label may cost a few cents more due to national advertising and distribution. It is wise to try both private and packer labels and make your own comparison as to relative values.

Frozen fish supplies are adequate, and some stores are offering special prices on packs of perch, cod, haddock, and sole, along with fish sticks.

Abundance means lower prices, usually, so salmon, tuna, and other fish work well in meal and budget planning.

Careful pressing is a must if a garment is to have a professional look when finished.

Every dart should be pressed before a seam crosses it, and every seam should be pressed open before being crossed by another seam.

Some fabrics should be pressed open before being crossed, by another seam.

Some fabrics are more difficult to press than others, and some extra equipment is helpful when pressing particular fabrics. For example, a needle board is helpful when pressing nap and pile fabrics. If a needle board is not available, you can press such fabrics as velvet, velveteen, corduroy, wool, broadcloth, etc., by placing a heavy terry towel or leftover piece of the fabric on the ironing board. Place the garment gently over the ironing board, wrong side up. Press with steam iron.

Short seams in napped or pile fabrics can be pressed over a stiff brush. Turn the bristles up. The nap interlocks with the bristles and the fabric can be pressed without marking.

Matelasse is another fabric in which the technique is different from regular pressing. To press this fabric, let the iron stand on its heel, and move the wrong side of the seam across the base of the iron horizontally as you hold the seam open. Darts can be slashed open and pressed the same way.

A new bacon made with a special curing process is on the market. The manufacturer says it gives less shrinkage and spattering and slices separate easily, even when the bacon is first taken from the refrigerator.

SAN ANGELO, June — The release of an additional 200 Afghan, white-winged pheasants and 200 Texas-reared gray francolin partridges occurred last week in selected areas near Tahoka, Big Spring, Seminole, and Stanton, according to Permian Basin wildlife biologist Herbert Kothmann.

Both white-wings and gray francolins have been previously released experimentally in several Permian Basin counties and thus far limited reproduction has occurred on about half the release areas.

Biologists plan to release additional birds if sites reproduction has occurred and chances of survival are evidently best.
