Man, Woman Of The Year Honored At Banquet

Mrs. Edgar (Nadine) Hammonds Sr. was honored as Woman of the Year and Maurice Huffaker was named Man of the Year for 1985 as the Tahoka Chamber of Commerce had its annual banquet Friday night in the Tahoka School cafeteria.

A crowd of about 150 persons applauded the selections of the outstanding citizens and heard speaker Mrs. Merle Anthony of Wichita Falls urge the group to "stand up for what you believe in."

Mrs. Anthony captured the crowd's attention with an address which combined elements of patriotism, history and humor. "The American way, the Texan way is to teach people to be proud and disciplined," she said. She also said that citizens need to be strong supporters of the community in which they live. "When you take a living out of a place, you need to stand up for it."

Mrs. Hammonds, who has been ill, was able to attend part of the banquet and was brought to the event to receive her award. She and her son, Edgar Hammonds Jr., voiced her appreciation to the people of Tahoka for the honor.

Lora Davis, chamber director who made the presentation of a plaque to Mrs. Hammonds, said that several persons had nominated Mrs. Hammonds for the honor. She remarked that Mrs. Hammonds is the only woman to ever serve for any period of time on the Assembly of God church board, that she has taught Sunday School for 65 years, starting when she was 13 or 14 years old, that she has volunteered to help with nursing home services for the last 11 years and has held special singing services at the home for 16 years.

She was church secretary for about 20 years and played piano for church worship services for 61 years, starting in 1925.

Huffaker, cited as "a man who is present to help out everytime there is any kind of community function," was given a big ovation when it was announced he was the winner of the Man of the Year award. Making the presentation, outgoing Chamber President Dalton Wood said "Maurice is a quiet worker whose services often aren't noticed by the public," and it was observed that he always cooks for barbecues, fish fries and other events in the city.

Born in Wilson, Huffaker has lived in Lynn County all his life, and has been farming since 1944. He and his wife, Grace, have three children and eight grandchildren. He has served on the Tahoka school board, board of equalization, as president of the Old Settlers Reunion, and in many capacities of the First United Methodist Church, where he presently is lay delegate to the annual conference. He also serves on the board of directors of the Ed Robb Evangelistic Assn. and is a member of the Pioneer Museum Assn. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and has supported all its activities.

He has assisted the firemen in the fish fry, Rotary Club with cookouts, Chamberettes with their Thanksgiving dinner and barbecues for the Old Settlers and the Livestock Show Assn.

Huffaker thanked the crowd and the chamber for the honor, commented that the compliments were "laid on a bit thick," and said "It always is a pleasure to serve the community."

Wood was emcee for most of the program, but introduced new Chamber President Weldon Self and relinquished the duties of office. Wood recognized directors whose terms expired and remaining directors. Self introduced the new directors, including Wayne Crowell, Stanley Gill, Binie White, Jimmy Huckabey, Ray Don Box, Steve Sanders and Lenda Wood. Mrs. Harold Green of Tahoka, state president of Texas Federated Women's Clubs, introduced Mrs. Anthony.

The dinner was prepared by Tahoka Chamberettes and served by 4-H members.

Seven In Race For Wilson School Board

Seven persons are on the ballot for three seats to be determined by voters in Wilson Independent School District in an election scheduled for April 5. The top three persons receiving votes will be elected.

On the ballot are Woody Follis, Antonio (Tony) Villarreal, Lowen Young, Robert Abbe, Gary Russell Moore, Donald Klaus and James Wuensch.

WHEN YOU buy oil, shortening, yeast and potato chips, you need to buy those with no butylated hydroxyanisole (BHA) in them, says a publication called Food Additives Explained. The reason, says the guide, is that BHA, a preservative and antioxidant used in almost every processed food containing fat or oil, is known to be capable of causing allergic reactions and affecting liver and kidney functions.

It also is pointed out that if butylated hydroxyanisole is used, it must say so on the label. "Well, I never have read the label on my favorite potato chips to see what's in them. If they taste good, I buy them. That in itself is a pretty good indication that they're not good for me, going by the usual rule that anything good for you tastes bad and vice versa.

As for oil, shortening and yeast, I don't buy those things much. I do put some 10W30 in some of my vehicles, but rarely in my mouth. And I don't need any shortening; I'm short enough already. I don't know anything about yeast except it makes things rise. This may be what I need in my bed in the mornings, bad as I hate to get up.

I guess I'll try to watch for that stuff from now on. But gee, that butylated hydroxyanisole sure tastes good.

THE PARENTS of an 8-year old boy who was away at camp for the first time hadn't heard from him, so they called him and were a bit disappointed to learn that he hadn't missed them at all.

"Have any of the other kids gotten homesick?" his mother asked.

"Only the ones with dogs," the boy replied.

THE KIPLINGER Texas Newsletter notes that with oil prices down and the state's economy hurt, a lot of businesses are looking for ways to survive. One of the things they suggest is that businesses need to look for international trade.

Obviously they are talking about the big businesses. The foreign market for newspapers published in Tahoka, for example, is fairly limited.

Theft Of Golf Clubs Listed;

A set of McGregor irons valued at $550 was reported stolen from Mike Lankford of Tahoka, who told officers the clubs were removed from a golf bag, leaving the bag and woods, after someone broke into his cart house at T-Bar Country Club.

The theft occurred between Wednesday and Saturday of last week. Crime Line has offered a $150 reward in the case.

A 106th District Court grand jury this week indicted four persons on felony charges. Indicted for burglary of a building in O'Donnell were Robert Miller and Fredrico Sotelo, both of O'Donnell.

Indicted on charges of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute were Milton Lozano, 38, and Maria Yolanda Trevino, 28, both of Big Spring. Maria Rita Lopez, 35, of O'Donnell pleaded guilty of charges of forgery by passing and was sentenced to five years, probated, by District Judge George Hansard.

Judge Hansard also assessed a 10-year-term, probated, for Brian Harston of Tahoka after he pleaded guilty in January of charges of indecency with a child, according to information received by the Lynn County sheriff's department this week.

Tickets issued by police during the past week include one each for failure to yield right of way at a stop intersection, running stop sign and no proof of liability insurance, failure to use safety restraints, exhibition of acceleration and one citation for no proof of liability insurance.

THE FINNEY CHRONICLES: Part II

'Lend Me Your Gun, And I'll Stop The Riot'

(This is the second of a four-part series of articles detailing some of the events recalled by C. Edmund Finney of Tahoka, who through the years has known many famous people and has pursued many occupations, some very briefly. Photography, however, was his main profession for many years before he retired from that activity.)

BY DALTON WOOD

Sometime in the early 1920s, young C. Edmund Finney moved to Watts, Calif., with his mother and two brothers and in those days a young, strong man took whatever work he could find to help support the family. Watts, now a black section of Los Angeles, was in those days a separate city of about 35,000, "a real nice blue-collar town," Finney recalls.

Finney had been doing some day-to-day construction work and some boxing and baseball playing in Watts, when the city bought a new fire engine and they couldn't get it to run properly. Finney, who said "the Model T had made a mechanic out of me," remembers that the new fire engine was a 16-cylinder in-line Buda engine, which he got running "with no trouble at all."

About a week later, he said the mayor of Watts came around and asked him if he'd like to be a fire captain. Finney said he told him he knew nothing about the fire department, but the mayor hired him anyway because he could keep the fire engine running. "So I got this job and it paid about a hundred dollars a month, which was a very good salary in those days."

"I wasn't afraid of man, devil or beast"

Rioting in Watts, for which the area is best known in recent years, was not unheard of even then, and some time after Finney became a fireman there was a riot when a carnival came to town and "a bunch of hoodlums" raised a commotion. Finney said one of the night policemen, a black man, came and woke him up at the fire department and asked him if he could man the dispatch for the police department because a riot was underway.

"I told him, 'I don't know anything about that dispatching business, but if you'll lend me your gun, I'll stop the riot.' So he handed me his gun and I picked up a baseball bat as I walked out of the station. I was 6-2½ and weighed 235 pounds and I wasn't afraid of man, devil or beast. I just waded into that riot with that baseball bat and in about 15 minutes I had it under control. I must have knocked out 25 or 30 men...So the next day I had made a policeman." He added that there were no more riots in Watts while he was on the force.

With the annexation of Watts by Los Angeles, Finney was moved to the LA Police Dept. He said he walked a beat for a while, but was a detective when he quit after about two years on the force.

After that, Finney worked in a cabinet shop and later as a clerk-typist for the City of Los Angeles water department. "I was supposed to be secretary for an engineer named Porter...I'd go up to his office and take a pad and made doodles on it while he talked and then I'd go back and type his letter, one-fingered. I just pretended to know shorthand."

Finney told of a couple more jobs he acquired which he really knew nothing about until he tried them.

"On the bottom of the ocean floor with a blowtorch"

"During one of my unemployed periods I was walking down Los Angeles Street in Los Angeles and I saw a sign which said 'Lathe Operator Needed.' So I took the sign down and went in and said, 'here I am.' The superintendent said 'come with me' and he took me over to a fearsome-looking big lathe and he asked if I had ever operated one like it. I said I'd never even seen one that looked like that. So he called a guy over and told him to 'teach this young man how to operate this lathe.' I worked there four months.

"There was an enterprising young man in the tool shack who knew the lathe, and whenever I had to make something new I'd go over to him and say 'why don't you set up my machine? I need to go to the bathroom', and he'd set it up for me.

"One day about four months later they came and laid a blueprint (See FINNEY, Page 2) down in front of me, and I couldn't even read a blueprint. They said, 'We're in a hurry for this--you'd better tear that lathe down and start this new plan. So I said okay, and I got the tool shack guy over there and he couldn't read it either. So I quit.'

Another time, during the depression, he went to Seattle, Wash., to visit a friend and he saw 'this boat tied to a dock and there was a sign that said they needed a deep sea diver. So I went in, out of curiosity more than anything else. An hour later I was down on the bottom of the ocean with a blowtorch cutting these iron bars that held this thing they poured concrete in.' Finney said it was similar to the lathe job in that a man showed him a diving suit and asked him if he had ever seen one like it, and he said he had not, so they showed him how to put it on.

'I got $25 a day, and I worked 10 or 15 days. The first day the torch would go out before I'd get to the bottom.... It was about 85 feet deep. I was completely encased in this rubber suit, but down there you are all by yourself, and the most fearsome creatures would come by you.' He said he quit that job when he got enough money to return to Los Angeles.

Finney said he started into photography when he and his brother Frank bought a pony and a big 8x10 camera which Finney modified to suit his purposes. 'We'd buy outdated film at sales and we'd go from house to house taking pictures of kids on this pony. Well, it was overdone in Los Angeles, and we had a hard time finding the kids to put on the saddle. So we bought a trailer and we had a Model T Ford and we loaded that pony into the trailer and we went through Arizona, New Mexico and Texas and we'd stop in every little town. It was a novelty there and we did a land-office business.'

In Louisiana, "we paid a lot of fines"

He said that when they got to Louisiana, however, they were frequently fined because of a law that outsiders couldn't solicit business without a license.

'I don't think the towns ever got any of the money. Every town we came to, a policeman would come out and arrest you and you had to pay him a fine. We never got in jail, but we paid a lot of fines... We usually made arrangements with a local photographer and I'd give him a cut on the deal. I carried the chemicals in the car and we'd do the processing in the hotel room. I had a box built on the back of the camera and I just used it for an enlarger... We went on to Georgia and then came back. That took about a year and we made some money. That's really how I got into photography. Later, on the L.A. Police force, I was in the records division and I would substitute sometimes for the police photographer.'

Finney said he also worked for a time as a newspaper photographer for the Los Angeles Examiner, and also worked at times for Pathe News taking newsreel pictures ('You remember those silent pictures? I never worked steady for them; I'd work for a year, then for three months, or whenever they needed a photographer down in Mexico or South America, they'd call me and I'd take the job...I was even in Paris once.')

For a time in the 1920s Finney worked at Santa Paula, Calif., about 40 miles north of Los Angeles, where a dam broke and ruined farmland for miles along either side of a valley, washing off topsoil where oranges and lemons had grown.

"If you'll charter a plane, I'll take the pictures"

'We had a lot of claims from farmers who owned the land. We had a corps of land investigators who would measure the remaining topsoil to help determine the loss, and a lot of claims were disallowed. One day the recorder said to me 'It's too bad we can't get an aerial photograph of this valley.' Finney said the man went on to explain that there was just one firm around which did that kind of photography, and the department budget wouldn't allow the high expense of getting it done. Finney said he told the man, 'I've got a little camera. If you'll charter a plane, I'll take the pictures.'

Finney said the camera he had was a little box about 3 inches square, using 35mm film, and made by Agfa. 'It was fixed-focus camera, but at infinity it was sharp as a tack. So we hired a Jenny at Ventura, Calif., an old Jenny held together by bailing wire, with a drunken pilot.'

'We laid a piece of quarter-inch plywood down in the fuselage and I'd lay with my feet to the head of the plane, and I cut a little hole and made a rack out of coat hangers to hold the camera. This guy would orient the plane, and it would move up and down, so I had to build a rectifying enlarger...In fact, Fairchild aerial surveys stole the idea from me and patented it, and got rich on it. Anyhow, I made maps of that whole valley. The enlarger I used was an apple box with a high-powered tungsten bulb in it and I used the same lens to throw them up on a screen. The screen was the size of a wall, and I developed those things in pans and they stood up in court.'

Finney cited the Santa Paula project of making those enlargements from the tiny negatives as the beginning of his serious interest in photography. He said he wrote to the camera manufacturer asking some questions about the camera and telling them in detail what he had done, and they published it in a magazine. 'I got hundreds of letters from people wanting to know how I did it.'

"I lied about my age and enlisted"

Asked if he had ever been in military service, Finney replied that he was in service in World War I about three days. 'I lied about my age and enlisted and my mother came down and got me out. In World War II, I joined the coast guard. Vic Mature one night...talked me into enlisting in an unpaid job in the Coast Guard. There was a manpower shortage in World War II and you could be patriotic and volunteer for unpaid service. So I went to work for the Coast Guard at

The couple will be married April 19 in the First United Methodist Church in Munday.

'Did I know Victor Mature before the war? Oh, yes, I knew all of them. I used to ride a bicycle about 15 miles to Universal City and I got several dollars a day as a cowpuncher in some of those movies.... If I got shot off a horse I got $14, each time I did a fall. I was an extra in several movies. I can't remember...I worked with this movie star who would kill somebody and then he'd rub his nose with the barrel of the gun and blow the smoke away...' Finney later said the star was Harry Carey.

"If I got shot off a horse I got $14"

6 in the morning and left the Coast Guard at 6 o'clock in the evening, and I did a variety of jobs. I finally made one convoy down to the South Pacific and back. I was in the Coast Guard for the duration of the war.

Finney said he never ran for office, 'although I pert near became a congressman one time. When Roosevelt first ran for president I was chairman of the Southern California Democrats Assn. and the ward rulers kept telling me what to do.' He said he was supposed to be on the ballot as a congressional candidate, but that the Democratic leaders told him he'd have to quit seeing the girl he was going with at the time if he wanted to be on the ballot. 'So I told them they'd have to find somebody else. We had a hack writer named Cecil King who they substituted for me and he got elected. I think he's still in Congress; I'm not sure...I think I could have been elected, because anybody on the Roosevelt ticket that year could be elected.'

(NEXT WEEK: Marriage, playing tennis against Big Bill Tilden, and one fling at football).

FARM RECEIPTS STEADY BUT INCOME DOWN

—Texas farmers sold about the same level of agricultural commodities in 1985 as a year earlier, but net income continued to decline, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cash receipts from the sale of farm and ranch products totaled about $10.1 billion last year while net income dropped to about $1.4 billion, down from just over $2 billion in 1984. Large crops and livestock supplies and reduced exports again resulted in low prices to farmers and ranchers during 1985. At the same time, costs of energy, chemicals, interest and other production inputs remained high and pushed farm income lower.

Dear Mr. Wood:
Just a few lines to tell you that on several occasions I have received my copy of the Lynn County News along with someone else's copy. One time there were four copies—I have always returned these papers to the post office marked "sent to the wrong address". I look forward each week to my paper and feel sure the other people feel the same—yesterday (March 11) was the day my paper reached us, along with an extra one for Mrs. Charles King, Porter, TX. We live about 60 miles apart. I will, however, deliver her paper to her personally. You see, she is our daughter, I doubt this will ever happen again, but since it was such an odd thing (receiving my own daughter's mail) I just had to tell you about it.

Thank you for your time.
Mrs. Elmer Hillin
P.O. Box 309
Romayor, Tx.

Editor of the Lynn County News:
It is my pleasure to write to you today to express how much your Lynn County News has improved—much more interesting! My little granddaughter, Carolyn House, introduced me to your paper as a birthday gift in January and I wish to thank her publicly for sending it to me.

Two of my sons and families, James C. and Joseph W. House, recently moved from El Paso to Tahoka. I am also a friend of another of your outstanding citizens, Mr. Winston Wharton, father of Ann Wharton House, deceased, who was the wife of my oldest son, James C. House.

I have been living in Port Townsend, WA. for three years. It is a beautiful country and quite different from Texas. However, my mesquite roots grew deep, and I miss my old stomping grounds. I have three other sons, William W. and Colby Lynn and Thomas F. House. William lives at Lake Isabella, Calif. and teaches school there. Colby lives at El Paso, works with the phone company. Thomas lives up here and works at the paper mill. All have fine families.

It has amused me, having people remark about my accent! Some have even called it "a drawl", but I assure them that I do not drawl, just speak more slowly!

Your paper of Feb. 27 arrived today, and I was so pleased with the improvement that I felt I must let you know.

Please keep up the "New Home News" and the close, personal approach.

Thank you,
Sincerely, Charity A. House

Dear Sir:
I like to think of the little boy on Falls Creek, when he was 10 or 9 years old, in 1916 or 1915.

This little boy had caught three opossum in his traps and could have sold them to his dad for 50 cents each. At a total of $1.50 at that time this little boy wanted to own one of the little white pigs that belonged to his dad so he traded the three opossum pelts for the pig.

There was plenty of maize and corn in the barn that I could feed this pig and my dad did not charge me for the feed bill. I kept this gilt until she "found" five little pigs. (Back then our parents used this word "found", when a cow "found" her calf or one of the mares "found" her colt). Well, after my gilt "found" her pigs I had noticed a sure enough roan heifer and thought I may trade my "hog crop" for this fine calf.

I waited to find the right time to ask dad how he would like to trade this heifer for my sow and pigs. It did not take long for him to decide if he was furnishing the feed for the sow and pigs that might as well own them.

The heifer was still at her mother's side and could graze in the pasture. The trade was made and I owned one of the prettiest roan heifers. I kept her until she "found" her calf then in a short time sold the pair for $75.

Time has caused me to forget who bought the pair. That was by trading with an understanding dad that I realized $75 for three opossum pelts.

The truth and fiction in this story are too closely related for me to make out which is which. It is a good story, eh?

Gentlemen:

According to the Feb. 1986 edition of the T.E.A. Direct Line, you are soliciting comments from teachers about the proposed statewide teacher appraisal system. Great, I would like to make a few comments.

I believe that the proposed system would be a gross waste of time, effort, and money. First, at least two different appraisers must observe each teacher on four different occasions. Second, after each observation, the appraiser must fill out an eight-page evaluation form. Third, the appraisers must then find the time to share the results of those evaluations with each teacher and to make recommendations for improvement. If my supervisors are not capable of judging my effectiveness in the classroom with less time and effort, I am doubtful that they are capable of making that judgement at all. Though teacher evaluation is an important administrative responsibility, administrators do have a great many other important tasks to perform. Using the proposed evaluation system, administrators would not have time to do anything else. Maybe we could hire outside evaluation teams (some schools are already doing this). I am sure that the cost of such teams would not be more than excessively burdensome on the taxpayers.

CHAMBERETTE LOGO WINNERS — Tahoka Chamberettes voted Friday on the entries in their logo contest, and were pleased with the number of entries received. "It was difficult to make a choice from all the entries — there were so many good ones!" said one Chamberette. Shown from left are the winning logo, submitted by Juaneel Jones; second place entry, submitted by Dr. Lonnie Vickers; and Chamberettes were so amused by the "lady cook" submitted by Dalton Wood they voted to have that logo put on their "official" aprons. "I am going to donate the $20 prize back to Chamberettes," said Mrs. Jones, "to be used for purchasing the materials to paint the logo on our concession stand."

Any teacher evaluation system needs to accurately evaluate the teacher's classroom performance and to be as economical as possible with both the administrator's and the teacher's time. Whether or not the proposed system would accurately evaluate a teacher's classroom performance may be a matter of opinion. However, it is obvious that the proposed system would consume an excessive amount of time for both administrators and teachers.

It appears that the main purpose of the proposed evaluation system is to cut the budget. If money is that scarce, please just be straightforward and honest with us. Please allow me to present an alternate proposal. First, forget about teacher evaluation. Second, abolish the career ladder. Third, cut the pay scale. Using my plan, you will arrive at the same desired teacher shortage even faster and at less expense to the taxpayer.

Yours truly,
Thomas G. Sullivan

"HELP SAVE A CHILD TODAY"

Although the use of containers that cannot be easily opened by children has cut down considerably on accidental poisonings, there are still far too many unnecessary deaths and injuries caused by carelessness. If every one of us made it a point to eliminate just one potential danger, think how many more children's lives might be spared.

How about checking in your home today to be sure that prescriptions and other medicines are out of a child's reach and are away from where little hands can get at them.

By Rev. Hazel House

SCRIPTURE:
St. John 11:38-44;
Romans 10:8-13, I John 2:25
Amen!

"And he that was dead came forth..."

Are you in near despair over one whom you love that is lost and separated from God without Christ as Savior, without hope? Read about Mary and Martha and Lazarus and Jesus.

Are you this one who is lost — Are you dead in sin? Read the above stated scripture.

No man has life, except in Christ Jesus. All of us have sinned and come short of the glory of God — God made us in His own image, in perfection to be His glory — so we are all dead in sin until we come to know that Jesus did truly die on the Cross for our sin and accept Him, turning from our sin to Him and giving ourselves just as we are to Him. Then He saves us; we are born again, we are His new-born child. Just a child, not full-grown, we grow up under His protective, guiding, loving, comforting providence. He provides both food and shelter and delight and joy, and strength as we follow Him. But we must continually seek Him that we may receive His power, His mercy, His forgiveness, His cleansing, so that He can come in and live in us, that others may see Him in and through our lives.

We come forth from death into life, even as Lazarus came forth, when we hear Jesus speak to us to "Come, follow me." And we come just as we are, bound hand and foot by sin, but we must come, as He said.

When Jesus called Peter and Andrew his brother, who were at work as fishermen. He said, "Follow me" and they left their fishing nets, and followed Him. Have you really left your "fishing nets"?

Then Jesus sets us free! But like all freedom, we must nurture it and avail ourselves of its highest privilege if we are to keep it. We stay free only as we "follow" Jesus, as we stay near Him; read God's Word, believe it, seek fellowship and worship with other Christians, pray, and in love for Jesus, look for something to do that He would do if He had a physical body, if He were present (as He is)!

How do we hear Jesus call us to come? In many and varied situations, but if you have read this far, you are hearing His call to come and follow Him. So, do it! Whether it be to new service in His name, or if you are hearing Him for the first time. Determine to leave the sin that possesses and binds you, knowing full well that you cannot by your own strength. But God is stronger than any sin, any temptation, and He promises in His Word that He will make "a way to escape." (See I Corinthians 10:13).

Jesus died because He loves you and me, and He loves that we might know His power to give eternal life. Since He said He could save you from sin and death, then He can and He will keep that promise. I know He will, for He has saved me and brought me from death into eternal life.

Will you trust Him, believe He is what He said, and come to Him for the abundant eternal life you need? Are you grateful that God would care about you enough to die that you might live? The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ. Will you accept the gift, take Jesus as your personal Savior and let Him save you and keep you?

Come, just as you are, and follow Him — give yourself to Him and He will make you His own child forevermore! This is His promise!

Farming requires multi-skills

Today, successful farming requires immense knowledge and management skill from American agribusinessmen and women.

The three basic "inputs" for agricultural production are land, labor and capital.

Land is no longer the major production tool. The productivity of the land now depends upon the skill and knowledge with which capital is applied -- the use of mechanical power and machinery, fertilizer, lime, better seed, pest control chemicals, and the technology applied to conserve and enhance the land while in productive use.

The total volume of all resources used in agriculture -- land, labor, machinery, and supplies -- has changed little since 1955.

The composition of inputs, however, has changed drastically as farmers have struggled to be more productive and more efficient. Farm labor inputs have declined rapidly; farm real estate has remained relatively constant. All other inputs, chiefly purchased, have increased rapidly. Purchased inputs are nearly 64 percent greater than in 1955; nonpurchased inputs have declined 40 percent.

The management of these inputs and resources demands increasing skill and knowledge from U.S. farmers. Farming today is a very complex business.

Ag industry big employer

American agriculture employs more workers than any manufacturing industry. Only government and the construction, trade, finance and service industries employ more people than agriculture, and agriculture's role as a purchaser of inputs or supplier of its output looms large in several of those.

Food processing, of course, is highly related to agriculture, as are textiles, transportation and trade -- all users or marketers of agriculture's output. Also, agriculture is an important customer of the chemical, machinery, finance, real estate, and service industries.

AGRICULTURE America's Heartbeat
Vital to Us All

U.S. agriculture

Heartbeat of America's economy

At the time of the American Revolution the United States was almost totally agrarian. Ninety percent of our population was engaged in farming and 60 percent of income went for food. Almost all our exports were agricultural products, and the basic structure of society depended on the agrarian economy.

Through time the U.S. agricultural system has produced an increasing abundance of food and fiber, using relatively fewer resources. The unparalleled productivity gains in American agriculture have resulted in a broader choice of nutritious food available for a declining portion of income.

Today Americans spend less than 17 percent of family income on food. Only 3 percent of our labor force is engaged directly in farming. And agricultural products now account for only about 20 percent of total exports. The importance of farming seems to have diminished. But it would be erroneous to conclude that agriculture is no longer vitally important to our economy. The food and agricultural sector -- as a source of productivity gains, a user of resources, and a source of employment -- remains large and important by any standard.

Increased agricultural productivity, the rise in output per unit of input, has been a major contributor to improved living standards for Americans. Where just 10 years ago one farm worker supplied food and fiber for 47 people, he now supplies enough for 78, up from a mere seven persons at the beginning of this century. Total agricultural output has more than doubled in the past 50 years, though the agricultural land base has not substantially changed.

These increases in agricultural productivity have contributed to the domestic economy by enabling consumers to upgrade their diets at lower cost while simultaneously expanding their consumption of non-food items. At the same time increased productivity has facilitated the transfer of production workers from agriculture into industrial and service industries, expanding the supply of nonfood goods and services, and enabling our economy to meet the new demands of consumers.

The great strides in productivity have been accompanied by major changes in the input mix. From the earliest periods of American history hand power gave way to horsepower then to mechanical power, and ultimately to "science power." New technologies introduced over the past 50 years have resulted in a nearly fifteenfold increase in fertilizer use, a fivefold increase in tractor numbers, and a tenfold increase in tractor horsepower used in farming. Purchased inputs are 2.6 times their 1930 levels and farm labor input only 30 percent of 1930 levels. Farms are larger and significantly more dependent on capital and purchases from the nonfarm economy.

As farming has come to rely more on purchased inputs and less on inputs supplied on the farm, the sector has become more fully integrated with the general economy. Consequently, farming is influenced by and has an influence on the same factors that determine conditions in the general economy.

Annual Ag Day salutes farmers

Thursday, March 20, is AGRICULTURE Day in the United States. Each year, the Agriculture Council Of American Education Committee designates the first day of Spring as a special day to salute the nation's producers of food and fiber.

American farmers and stockmen deserve this special recognition for they make an immense contribution to our country's economic prosperity and the high standard of living enjoyed by Americans.

Any way you cut it, farmers are important to the U.S. and its citizens. Here are a few reasons why:

- Agriculture employs more workers than any manufacturing industry. The flow of farm products -- in addition to related dollar purchases and expenditures -- requires the services of nearly 23 million people, a full 20 percent of the labor force throughout the U.S. economy.
- Annually, farm operators spend about $131 billion for goods and services to produce crops and livestock. Hence, farmers are important consumers as well as producers.
- American farmers today produce over 76 percent more crop output on the same number of acres than did their fathers. One farmworker now supplies enough food and fiber for 78 people. Only 10 years ago, the farmworker was producing enough for 47.
- The increased productivity and efficiency of American agriculture has contributed largely to a higher standard of living. Today Americans spend less than 17 percent of family income for food compared to 28 percent in 1930.
- Agricultural exports totalled $38 billion in 1984 and generated $80 billion of economic activity in the U.S. economy.

Consumers benefit from farm efficiency

American farmers are efficient producers, a key fact that translates into more buying power for the consumer.

American farmers today produce over 76 percent more crop output on the same number of acres than did their fathers. Today, one hour of farm labor produces 14 times as much food and other crops as it did in the 1919-21 period.

One farmworker now supplies enough food and fiber for 78 people. Only 10 years ago, the farmworker was producing enough for 47.

Because of the farmer's efficient output, we can enjoy a satisfying quantity and variety of food.

And despite recent rises in food prices, family income buys considerably more food today than 30 years ago, partly because agriculture has become much more efficient and partly because consumer incomes have risen faster than food prices.

The tremendous productivity and efficiency in the U.S. food and fiber system also equates to lower food prices for American consumers than others throughout the world.

Farmers are consumers, too

Like everyone else, the American farmer is a consumer as well as a producer. And farmer purchases to support production agriculture alone significantly impact the nation's economy.

Annually, farm operators spend about $131 billion for goods and services to produce crops and livestock.

Farmer's annual purchases include:

- $13.2 billion for farm tractors and other motor vehicles, machinery and equipment. About 150,000 employees are required to produce farm equipment alone.
- $16.4 billion for fuel, lubricants, and maintenance for machinery and motor vehicles used in the farm business. Farming uses more petroleum than any other single industry.
- $22.4 billion for feed and seed.
- $8.9 billion for fertilizer and lime.
- Products containing 360 million pounds of rubber -- about 5 percent of the total used in the United States, or enough to put tires on nearly 7 million automobiles.

A Visit With Your County Agent
By Stanley Young

Check Alfalfa For Alfalfa Weevils

This is the time when producers need to examine their alfalfa for the presence of alfalfa weevil larvae, cautions Stanley M. Young, Lynn County Extension agent for agriculture.

Unseasonably warm weather has resulted in the alfalfa weevils appearing a couple of weeks early this spring.

With the beginning of warm spring weather, overwintering female weevils begin laying eggs.

The young larvae which hatch out are very small, yellow-green in color and feed in the growing tips and developing buds. Older larvae are green with a white stripe down their back.

"We expect to have our peak alfalfa weevil activity in April in our area," said Young.

If larvae numbers are high enough to reach the economic threshold, one properly timed application should give control. Treatments should be applied in alfalfa two to six inches tall when two or more larvae are found per plant or when 30 to 50 percent of the plant terminals show weevil feeding damage. Plants 7 to 14 inches tall should be treated when 25 or more weevil larvae per square foot are present. Several effective insecticides are registered for alfalfa weevil control.

The alfalfa weevil has only one generation per year and is only a pest of first cutting. After the larvae finish feeding, usually by mid May in our area, the larva spins a net-like cocoon on the plant or in the soil debris. The adult weevil emerges from this cocoon and leaves the field. The weevils stay out of the alfalfa fields all summer and re-enter them in the fall. The adults overwinter in the field and the cycle then repeats itself.

Since the larvae are a pest of first cutting, it is possible to cut a little earlier than usual and avoid chemical treatments. Cutting results in exposure and a lack of food which kills many of the remaining larvae. Winter grazing by livestock helps reduce weevil populations, the county agent said.

GYPSUM BLOCKS

This picture shows a simulated version of what a set of gypsum blocks would look like in a hole in your field. In one hole the blocks are installed at 4-3-2 feet. The wires that come to the top of the ground need a knot tied in the wire for each foot of depth, i.e. the block which is 4' deep will have a wire with four knots. Colored tape could also be used to designate the depth. One irrigator has reported that he cut his irrigations from 6 per season to 3 and increased his yield. The right amount of water at the right time is what gypsum blocks tell you. If you installed blocks in 1985, you must install new ones for the 1986 crop, according to the SCS Office at Tahoka.
