A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Bookworm no shoe-in

Things aren't looking good for a barefoot bookworm in Columbus, Ohio. Robert Neinast has sued the Columbus Metropolitan Library, saying that the ban on going barefoot there blocks a healthy lifestyle and his First Amendment rights.

During a recent hearing in U.S. District Court, Judge Algenon Marbley told Neinast, a software writer from nearby Pickerington, that he wasn't inclined to let the case go to trial.

The library's attorney, Philomena Dane, told the judge that the library has the policy to protect patrons' safety and avoid injury lawsuits.

Neinast wore a dark suit and black shoes in court.

"As I said in my affidavit, I wear shoes on formal occasions, and it doesn't get much more formal than this," he said after the hearing.

Ready, get set, slurp

Andy Elf won the heart of seafood lovers everywhere by gobbling 80 freshly steamed mussels in a minute during the 16th annual Penn Cover Mussel Festival in Coupeville, Wash.

Thousands of visitors sampled chowder from nine restaurants last weekend in the Whidbey Island town about 45 miles north of Seattle.

Seven eaters put their innards on the line for the contest Sunday at The Captain Whidbey Inn overlooking the cove where the mollusks are harvested.

Elf's effort won him a $50 gift certificate to the Inn and a Mussel Muncher sweat shirt. He said he would be back to defend his title next year.

Channel 6 survives cable takeover attempt

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Channel 6 signed a new contract with Classic Cable on Friday, and station owners say the break came with the outpouring of community support for the station.

"They just did an about-face," Magann Rennels said Tuesday. "They were just different people to deal once they heard from the people of Muleshoe — there was a different tone of voice in talking to me."

A petition campaign by Buck and Carolyn Johnson delivered 1,041 signatures to Classic Cable's advertising arm in Weatherford, Okla., Rennels said, aside from the "phone calls, letters and prayers."

"I believe the people of Muleshoe saw a miracle last week, and I don't say that lightly — I know what a miracle is," she said. Channel 6's attorney had said the petition drive was alright but probably wouldn't have an effect, she said.

Rennels said the cable company's proposal would have directed advertising revenue to Cable Network Advertising rather than Gil Lamb Advertising, with her selling advertising for the Oklahoma company, and no local video or programming.

"It's only because of the people of this community and area that we're able to stay on," she said.

Students form gospel group, release CD

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Four Muleshoe students who have formed a band called 184 Christ and released their first CD will be honored at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the First Assembly of God.

Micah Ruthardt, a 17-year-old junior; Andy Scott, an 18-year-old junior; Logan "Bobby" Ruthardt, a 14-year-old eighth-grader; and Cory Hunt, a 17-year-old junior; say they picked the band's name because they have made a 180-degree turn for Christ themselves.

The group also leads a weekly Fellowship of Christian Students meeting as well as other services, both youth and adult.

Muleshoe's newest recording artists — (from left) Micah Ruthardt, Cory Hunt, Andy Scott and Logan Ruthardt — run through a brief practice Monday at First Assembly of God. The band, known as 184 Christ, will be honored with an album-release celebration at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Muleshoe's First Assembly of God.

Pipeline plan may be up to towns

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

A spokesman for Smith Engineering in Roswell, N.M., said late Tuesday the future of a proposal to bring Hartley County water as far south as Muleshoe may rest with the cities involved.

Smith Engineering recently presented the proposal to High Plains Underground Water District No. 1 in Lubbock.

"We gave them pretty much the same presentation we gave earlier in Clovis," the spokesman said. "Their feeling was that the communities in West Texas ought to drive the plan, rather than the district taking the lead."

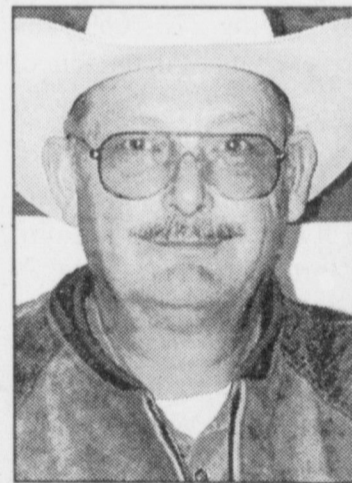

The proposal includes a short pipeline from Hartley County, Texas, across the state line to Ute Reservoir in New Mexico. From there the water would join the proposed Ute pipeline south to Curry County, where a branch line would be built to Farwell, Bovina, Friona and Hereford, with small branches to Dimmitt and Muleshoe.

Hereford City Manager Rick Hanna said he had been contacted about the project, but not since the Lubbock meeting.

"We're certainly not ruling that out, if it's cost-effective," he said. Muleshoe City Manager David Brunson and Friona City Manager Paula Wilson said they have not been contacted.

"We'd certainly be interested," Wilson said. "Any time a pipe full of water is going past your town, you'd better be interested."

Library's reading contest to conclude on March 28

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Friends of the Library who are participating in the adult read-athon fund-raiser must turn in their pledges by March 28, librarian Dyan Shipley said Tuesday.

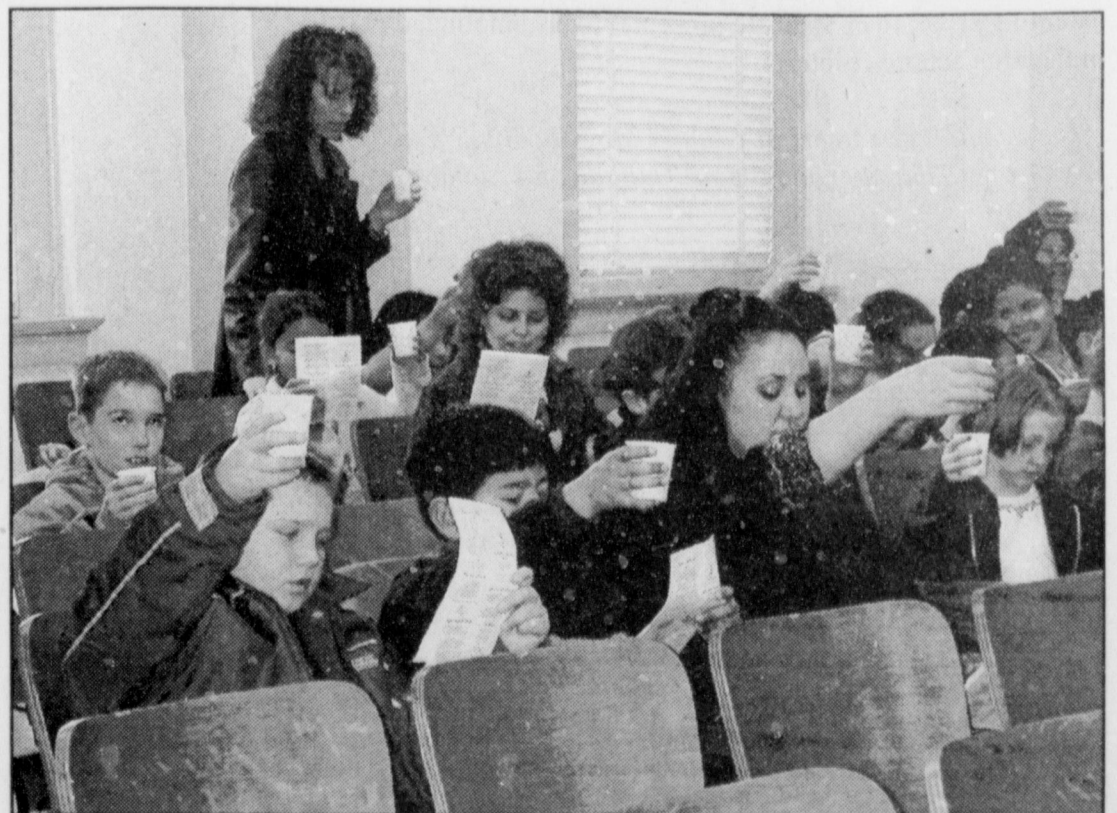

The prizes will be awarded April 1.

Those include two round-trip tickets to anywhere Southwest Airlines flies, as well as a DVD player for the adult who reads the most pages and a CD player for the high school student who reads the most.

The event is "intended to obtain broad-scale involvement from community members in the life of the library and also to increase interest in joining the Friends of the Library."

Funds raised will continue the renovation under way at the library.

Funds are being raised through pledges, either by the page or by the book, based on what is read by participants. Anyone who is not contacted and wishes to contribute may contact any member of Friends of the Library or call 272-4707.

Compost mixture makes a good moisture holder

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Most area gardeners are concerned about keeping down water usage (although probably not as concerned as they ought to be).

Whether your soil is sandy and won't hold moisture or clay that holds too much moisture, mixing in compost will help. One-third compost to 2/3 garden soil is a good mix.

The key here is adding organic matter to the soil. The compost soaks up moisture and tends to hold it, rather than having the water percolate on down as it does in soil alone.

Soils in dry climates tend to be lacking much organic matter, since obviously we don't have the lush plant growth that wetter areas have.

New Mexico and Texas gardeners can get one of the best products in composted cotton burrs. Santa Fe's High Country Gardens recommends mixing half-and-half composted cotton burrs and composted manure, then mixing that into the top few inches of soil.

Using this technique and then mulching, you'll find your water use to be considerably less, I think.

Joy Pattison of Clovis wrote in to suggest another source for pigsqueak (Bergenian cordifolia): Wayside Gardens (1 Garden Lane, Hodges, S.C. 29695-0001 or call 800-845-1124).

This catalog offers a variety called 'Perfecta' with the familiar bright flower color—almost like the watermelon-red familiar in crape myrtles, plus the delicate shell-pink red-centered 'Silberlicht' I have written about before.

Prices on both varieties (as of last year) were $6.25 apiece or three for $17.25.

The Wayside Gardens catalog is another valuable resource to keep around—excellent color photos identify everything they offer.

Of course, with so much space devoted to pictures, the selection is about 1/10 what you get with someplace like Heronswood, but the Heronswood catalog has no pictures (it would have to be delivered by truck freight if it had pictures like Wayside Gardens).

Until very recent years, Wayside Gardens stood alone as the Cadillac of mail-order nurseries. Even though it has a lot of competition now, I don't think any place is better. You certainly won't go wrong dealing with them.

I hope everyone who participated in the Great Backyard Bird Count (Feb. 15-18) got their results counted.

Mrs. Jason Hicks of Clovis mailed hers to me and it didn't arrive until a couple of days after the deadline for posting. I expect they'd have still accepted her results, but luckily her son noticed that her figures were not on the Internet site and entered them.

She noted on the back of her report, "This was fun. I've been feeding the birds for several years and enjoy them from my back porch."

Notable in her report are pine siskins (up to a dozen one day), which are always entertaining at seed feeders—the constant flashes of yellow as they flit from place to place are outstanding, too.

I haven't seen a single cedar waxwing this year, and she reported as many as 15 one day. You are likely to see these in small flocks sitting quietly and regally in trees or else feasting on berries.

Eight blue jays in one day also seems noteworthy. She had a rufous-crowned sparrow one day, American goldfinches and a single red-shafted flicker all through the counting period.

The biggest surprise to me was a mockingbird on Feb. 18—I never see them at the farm this early.

She also noted only one great-tailed grackle visiting one day during the count, and added in parentheses "glad they have left for awhile!"

Surely there's a government program that could gather all the grackles and ship them to Washington, D.C., or some other deserving place.

My only "bird news" recently is that a pair of cardinals has made its appearance and I especially see the female often, visiting the feeders. Looks as if there will be a repeat of last year's nesting.

STUDENT-COMMUNITY ACTION CLUB

The Student-Community Action Club meetings in January and February were filled with planning the next Heritage Center Tour de Muleshoe bike ride.

Chaplain Andy Ramirez opened both meetings with prayer. President Carmen Flores conducted the business meetings; Secretary Megan Barrett read the minutes and Treasurer Candace Hutto gave her reports.

This year's Tour de Muleshoe will be in June, and club members anticipate this fun day by preparing for their annual bake-auction, which may hold over Channel 6. All money made on these projects is donated to the Muleshoe Heritage Center. Members also staff one of the rest stops on the tour.

The January meeting was held in the home of Kristen Magby. Members enjoyed a delicious meal at both homes prepared by the students and their mothers.

Suzanne Messenger introduced the January citizens of the month, high school principal David Jenkins and assistant principal Vincent Erdmann. Both gave short speeches noting the exceptional community support in Muleshoe.

During the February meeting, Gracie Adrian introduced SCAC's February citizen of the month, United Supermarket manager Mike Holt. He reported that United stores have helped many charities, including raising $5,000 for the local Meals on Wheels.

Another was the Children's Miracle Network, when compared even to Lubbock United stores, Muleshoe was the No. 2 store in this fundraiser. United also is a sponsor of the Tour de Muleshoe.

Holt discussed several characteristics of a good citizen, including have a vision for the future. He mentioned that his brother, Todd Holt, and nine other 1982 Muleshoe seniors were among the first to want to save the Muleshoe Depot.

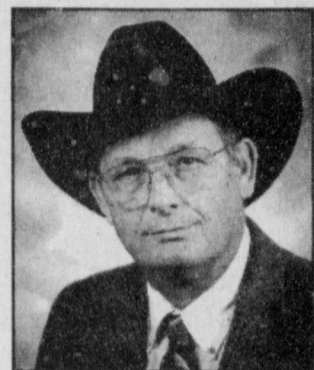

From this effort, SCAC was organized in 1983 as well as the Muleshoe Heritage Foundation.

Regarding the bake-auction, Suzanne Messenger said she had checked with Jenkins and learned that April 12 and April 20 are both relatively free of school activities, so members voted to hold the bake-auction April 20 if Channel 6 agrees.

Committees were appointed to begin preparations. President Carmen Flores thanked both hostesses for having the meetings and club members for bringing canned goods for the Bailey County Food Pantry.

Adrian invited members to her home for the March meeting, at 7 p.m. March 18.

Snap judgments deserve a second look

KATYE'S KALEIDOSCOPE

By Katy Cook

Have you ever just gone somewhere where there are sure to be a lot of people? Like the zoo or the mall? I love to go to sit at the mall and watch people.

I like to make up their life stories, why they are wearing what they are wearing, where they bought their clothes, why they are smiling or frowning.

Most of our lives are based on snap judgments. It's just lucky for us that's not all our lives are based on.

Having just moved to Clyde, Texas, in July, I've gone through and made a lot of snap judgments.

My best friend, Mandy, and I were talking the other day and it turns out that both of us thought the other was crazy when we met. Neither of us thought we would be the other's best friend.

Now not only do we do a lot of stuff together, we say things at the same time and even make the same facial expressions at the same time, right out of the blue.

If either of us had just said, "Wow, she's weird," and gone on with our days, neither of us would be having as much fun as we are.

We meet people under all kinds of circumstances — just plain bad days, loss of loved ones, too much sugar in the morning, there's no end to the kind of situations people are in when we meet them.

I'm really glad people have given me second and third chances — I know I need them. There are some people I've met that I know hated me at first, but when I took a second glance at them, and they gave me another look, we ended up being pretty good friends in the end.

Always take a second look. No matter what the other person did, might have done, or who they look like, hang around with, or remind you of, they deserve a second glance — just as much as you do.

Texas Tech sponsors March rodeo school

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech University's Rodeo Association is sponsoring a bareback and saddle-bronc riding school March 15-17, with proceeds to benefit rodeo scholarships at Texas Tech.

The clinic is scheduled for C-T Arena in Idalou, about five miles east of NW Loop 289 on U.S. 82.

Chris Guay, instructor of animal science and rodeo team coach, said this school gives students a chance to brush up before the first college rodeo of the semester, which is March 21-23 in Odessa. High school rodeos also begin in March. Instructors for the bareback clinic are Guay, who was 1991 Texas Circuit champion; Forest Bramwell, a National Finals Rodeo qualifier, who was fifth in the 2001 Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association world standings; and Wes Stevenson, a champion bareback rider, ranked 19th in the PRCA in 2001. Saddle-bronc instructors are Paul Peterson and Gary McDaniel, both PRCA top 20 riders. Also on the agenda is a goat-tying school on March 17. Amanda Kay, 1995 and 1998 national champion goat tier, and others from the Texas Tech rodeo team will teach the session. This clinic will be Sunday only, at Dub Parks Arena, Fourth and Quaker in Lubbock or, in case of inclement weather, at the Livestock Arena, Main Street at Indiana Avenue. Cost of the saddle-bronc and bareback school are $250 per event, while the goat-tying is $125. One may audit either of the schools for $50 per day. All proceeds benefit rodeo scholarships. Registration, along with a $50 deposit, is due by March 13. All participants must sign a release and provide proof of insurance. Participants under age 18 must have a parent sign the release. More information is available by contacting Guay at (806)742-2455 or at cguay@ttacs.ttu.edu.

4-H program pairs kids with farm animals

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

AUSTIN — Deep in the heart of Texas lies a sprawling city of more than 600,000 residents. Austin, an intensely urban area, is not only the state capital, but is home to a large segment of Texas' music and technology industries, not to mention the main campus of the University of Texas with its 50,000-plus students.

So how is it possible — in a city with hundreds of restaurants, Broadway-quality entertainment and nationally broadcast sports events — that a group of elementary and junior high students on four Austin campuses have teamed up with a bunch of goats?

That's just one benefit of 4-H's CAPITAL program in Travis County, said Lillianne Goeders, the Texas Cooperative Extension agent who heads the program.

She defined CAPITAL (Children and Parents Involved in Technology and Literacy) as a character-education program that teaches about such traits as conflict resolution, problem-solving and responsibility in ways that children find fun.

And what could be more fun for kids or teach more about responsibility and problem-solving than interacting with animals?

"Three years ago, a grant from the Travis County Commissioners' Court allowed 4-H CAPITAL and the Austin Independent School District to create a unique partnership that has students raising goats and rabbits on site at local schools," Goeders said.

This program "allows urban youth to participate in projects that develop life skills such as responsibility, leadership, teamwork and special skills, including animal showmanship, grooming, care and feeding, and general knowledge of animal husbandry," she said.

Besides all that, she added, "it's really cool. The kids wouldn't have a chance to do this otherwise."

Neither would their parents, who are heavily involved in the program.

"Parents participate in building and maintaining equipment, help with feeding and grooming, attend Family Fun workshops and event, participate in validation and shows, and chaperone field trips," Goeders said.

The benefits of the program extend far beyond the goat pens.

"Parent and teacher surveys indicated universal improvement in performance, growth and choices made by students," Goeders said, adding that "100 percent of teachers responding indicated that students had shown improvement (in schoolwork) and were performing well in class."

Not only are the kids learning about feeding, watering and grooming the animals, she said, they also learn a certain amount of veterinary science in caring for the goats.

Fifth-grader José Luis Chávez, 10, said he has enjoyed training the goats for show and working with them throughout the year. "I learned that goats can jump really high!" he said, in a voice of experience.

Alejandra Robledo, 10, a fourth-grader, and her fifth-grade sister, Analecia, 11, both work with the goats.

"If my sister gets sick, I have to (take care of) her goat as well," said Alejandra, adding that the goats "can be calm, friendly and I think they are cute."

"I like getting to walk them best," her sister said.

"There's three different kinds of goats," Analecia said, describing the goats she and her classmates work with.

"These are meat goats."

Last year Angelica Castro, now 11 and a sixth-grader, found out the hard way about why her goat was called a meat goat when she took him to a show and then had to tell him good-bye.

"I got too attached," Angelica admitted.

Still, she's back this year, working with another goat she has yet to name, and planning to win something with him at this year's show.

Since the goats started "going to school" about three years ago, not only have the numbers of students in the project increased, but so have the numbers of goats.

"We've gone from five or six goats to 25 in three years," Pierce said. "I daresay there's not another program anywhere like it. To (have) livestock on school grounds is unheard of!"

JoAnn Kugle, 4-H CAPITAL staff member in Travis County who works the kids and their goats, assigns each student to a livestock-related job — such as wrangler or foreman — and then the jobs rotate among the team members, Goeders explained.

That way, each student gets to do each job relating to his or her goat.

The students work with and learn about goats for almost the entire school year, including the first month or so before the goats arrive on campus, said James Henderson, Extension urban animal science coordinator.

"You can really see the difference in the kids from beginning to end," he said. Often, "inner city kids don't know anything about animals. (Before joining in the program) some of them have never seen a goat!"

After learning about animals in their classrooms during the first month or so of the school year, the students are eager for the hands-on experience of goat-raising, he said.

Some lessons prove unforgettable.

"Last year we had a goat chew on a plastic grocery bag. He choked and died," Henderson said. "It became a life lesson. It showed the kids things do happen," and the importance of being careful.

Treatment of Guantánamo detainees is exemplary

During my recent visit to Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, to observe the detainees from the war on terrorism, I came face-to-face with good and evil.

In the terrorists, I saw the greatest wickedness this world has to offer. But in their guards I saw commitment, bravery and triumph.

For nearly 100 years, the United States has operated a 45-square-mile military base at Guantánamo. As the ranking member on the Senate military construction subcommittee, I was invited to travel there with Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and other leaders of the defense and military construction subcommittees.

Our mission was to observe Camp X-Ray, the holding camp for terrorist detainees, and assess the future needs of our military to support the continued detainment.

I wanted to visit our troops and observe the challenges of their mission first-hand, since we have never dealt with such an enemy or fought such a war. Our troops are forging new territory daily, and they are doing an incredible job in the face of uncertainty.

CAPITOL COMMENT

U.S. SENATOR

Unfortunately, support for their hard work has been minimized by questions raised over the treatment of the terrorists at Camp X-Ray. All the senators who were there, Republicans and Democrats, agreed that the detainees are being treated with decency and humanity — far more than they have demonstrated in return.

The detainees are in clean facilities with access to excellent medical care — the same care given to our U.S. soldiers at the base.

We also have made efforts to respect their religious beliefs by providing culturally appropriate foods and an Islamic cleric to facilitate their calls to prayer. This treatment does not mean we have forgotten the treacherous nature of these men; we are just acting as a civilized nation should.

On Sept. 11, these terrorists demonstrated an absolute lack of respect for human life. They have proven to the world that they are violent, vicious and dangerous. They continue to pose an enormous threat to our soldiers, even under the strictest security. They are willing to kill themselves to destroy Americans and the liberty and freedom we represent.

Let me also point out that these detainees are not prisoners of war. They are illegal combatants who do not meet the basic prisoner of war standards laid out in the Geneva Convention.

We are engaged in an unconventional war against an unlawful enemy — they have no military uniforms or backgrounds. These men hide in caves, hide their weapons among innocent women and children, and act with utter contempt for the law of war.

We must retain the ability to interrogate, detain and prosecute them for the vicious acts they have committed, and to obtain information that will foil future attacks.

More than 300 soldiers stationed at Fort Hood have been sent to Guantánamo Bay. The security of those soldiers is one of my top priorities.

As a member of the subcommittee charged with such oversight, I will be asked to approve funding for expenditures at Guantánamo Bay.

Tightening security on the island is of utmost importance. Our troops are operating in a highly volatile situation, in an ongoing state of alert and faced with an uncertain and vicious enemy.

We need to secure the base, police the detainees and protect our troops. I will do everything in my power to make sure this happens.

In the face of an uncertain enemy, our resolve remains certain: We will root out terrorism, preserve freedom and emerge victorious.
