The Marriage of Mr. John Smith.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "SILVER WEDDING."

Not a sign was seen, nor a funeral note,
As the man to his bride was hurried;
Not a woman discharged her funeral gown,
On the spot where the fellow was married.

We searched them just about eight at night,
Our eyes were sorely tried;
By the light of the moon, and the stars,
We sought for the man and the bride.

New York Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4, 1853.

Since my last letter we have been favored with visits from two members of the Cabinet, Messrs. Dobbin and Marcy. The former came on official business, and during his sojourn here made a formal inspection of the Brooklyn navy yard. He left this city for Boston, where he is at present staying. The chief object of Mr. Marcy's visit is said to have been the reconciliation of his presence of the conflicting wings of his party; to what extent he succeeded has not transpired. Before leaving the city he visited Vanderbilt's famous steam yacht, the Northern Star, which has just returned from making a maritime tour of Europe. It has consequently been rumored that Government intends purchasing this vessel for the purpose of sending on the minister to China, and letting it remain there for his use and at his disposal. As the superfluous funds in the Treasury have already created a little discussion, and are likely to cause some trouble before they are finally disposed of, it would not be a bad plan to invest in this way a portion of the overplus—especially as it seems to afford the only means of getting a representative to the Confederal Empire in time for his negotiations to do us any good.

The great village of Tarrytown, which lies on the Hudson River, about thirty miles above the city, was thrown into an unprecedented state of excitement on Thursday last, by the dedication of a monument to commemorate the spot where Major Andre was captured, Sept. 23, 1780, by three American soldiers, Flavel, Van Wart, and Williams. Governor Seymour has present and announced the dedicating address. Mr. Raymond, of the N. Y. Times, delivered the oration of the day, which was a highly interesting one, filled with reminiscences of that trying period. The military turned out in great numbers both from Westchester and the adjoining counties, and made a brilliant display. The monument is 25 feet in height, and consists of a conical shaft mounted on a square pedestal. The marble is from a Sing Sing quarry and is the gift of the State. The erection, which is it is reported will cost $1,500, has been undertaken by the people of Westchester county. The monument stands on the exact spot where the captive took place; William Taylor, a colored man who owned the ground, having presented it to the Association to be thus commemorated.

RHODE ISLAND LETTER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 19th.

Messrs. Brown & Brady:

The weather is delightful; the sky is clear and a cool breeze invigorates the system and makes hearty exercise agreeable. A long rapid walk at an early hour, is a great luxury. The country presents to our view new beauties. The fields are not decked with flowers but as great and pleasing a variety of colors, unfold from every woodland. The leaves touched by frost, assume a gorgeous hue, which like a hectic flush precedes their decay and fall. Southwesterners are busy with preparations for a homeward journey, and as soon as there is any indication of the final departure of the dread scourge which has desolated so many of their homes, the tide of travel will set southward with redoubled force. How many will find relatives and friends gone to that bourne from whence no traveler can return. But in all our troubles and afflictions we should ever remember that we daily receive many more blessings from the hand of the Great Giver, than we deserve or are thankful for, and the darker the cloud which overhangs our sky becomes, the brighter appears his ineffable goodness towards us if we will only look upon it, or not suffer it to be overshadowed.

COL. PICKETT'S SPEECH AT AULAVILLE.

In the last Antigua (Alabama) Mercury we find a speech of this gentleman upon the subject of Education, occupying six columns of that paper. The positions which he assumed have been ably maintained, and ingeniously illustrated by remarkable events in history. Regretting our inability, for the want of space, to give our readers the whole of this admirable address, we copy some portions, which we think, for their good sense, truth and originality, ought to go before the public.

The most prosperous and enterprising State in the South is that which lies upon our eastern border. She has time and money and steady and able men, who are not only able to compete with the most advanced States, but to surpass them. Georgia is truly a great State, and a pattern for our and all Southern States. Her limits are so large as to comprise ninety-nine counties—the soil of which is as diversified as the climate—yet her people and her products are brought together, in the space of a few hours, by means of the great internal improvements to which I have alluded. Evidence of remarkable prosperity are observable in all directions in that State. The water falls are seldom left as nature formed them; but Factories and four mills are propelled by their power. In Augusta, the Savannah river has been conducted to the most elevated ground by a long canal, which is studded also with mills and factories. There is, too, a general intelligence existing in Georgia that we do not find in any other State. Whatever is liberal and useful in other States appertains not to Georgia. I have reference, of course, to her public spirit. The people look to the interest of their whole State, and effect improvements upon a scale of magnitude and importance. Barriers of great depth are raised; the mountain spurs are leveled; mountains themselves are tunneled; costly bridges are thrown across rivers—all for the tract of railroads. From the Tennessee river to her distant seaboard, Georgia opens to her people every facility; the young the middle-aged, and the old rapidly travel from one portion of the state to another. No one can visit Georgia without becoming satisfied that she possesses a great and happy people. What has produced this energy and enterprise of her citizens has produced it. I admit that they have; but I contend that female education is the foundation of the whole of it. I have traveled in Georgia in all directions, and never did I enter a county without finding a prosperous Female Academy—and in some instances two or three of them. Soon after the termination of the Revolutionary war, the citizens of Georgia began to establish female seminaries of learning. Such a policy resulted in the education of a vast number of females, who, becoming mothers, have instilled into their sons correct principles—such as the importance of acquiring knowledge, or cultivating habits of industry, and of avoiding vices which allure to destruction. It has ever been my opinion that on the mother, much more than on the father, depends the destiny of the son. From her he imbibes that nourishment that rears him in his infancy; in his boyhood he acquires from her principles which shape his course in after life. History establishes the correctness of this position, and your daily experience will not allow you to controvert it. John Randolph, of Virginia, remarkable for his genius and unsurpassed as a political debater, has stated that to his mother was he indebted for that deep veneration which he had for his Maker, and for his success in life. His first hours of remembrance find him at her feet, repeating that prayer which our Savior taught his disciples to offer. As his mind expanded by age, she imbued it with an ambition to become useful and great in life. Henry Clay, his contemporary and great political antagonist, whose eloquence has excited vast popular assemblies and the great deliberative bodies, owed to his mother those incitements to energy which made him the great man that he was. His father had died, leaving his mother on a small farm, with several children. She made him rise early, work in the field, devote his leisure hours to study, and never failed to inspire him with honorable principles and a determination to become a distinguished and useful man. Who does not remember the brilliant career of Henry Clay, whom his mother sent with a bag of mill through the slushes at Hanover county? Andrew Jackson, who lived in the times of Randolph and Clay, had a father, an illiterate tradesman, a well meaning man, with nothing remarkable in his character. He died, Andrew, when a child, was living in the Washer Settlement of South Carolina with his mother, an Irish woman, who had two other sons and a farm of no great extent. From this woman Gen. Jackson derived all his greatness. She usually kept one son at home to help her to work, and sent the others out to fight in this manner they fought by turns. On one occasion, when her three boys were at home, when Andrew was returning from the army, which the British officer gave him for not cleaning his boots, and another son was recovering from the small pox, she came over with from Ireland, then impressed by the British in Charleston. She engaged several other Irish women of the neighborhood in the extreme of relieving them. They spun

WHERE WILL THE PACIFIC RAILROAD END?

Many very well meaning people who talk of connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific seaboard by means of a railroad, seem to regard it as a fixed fact, that the line of the road must pass somewhere near St. Louis, penetrating the Rocky Mountains in the region of snows and trackless deserts. Such people lose sight of the fact that there is a Southern route, where there are no mountains to cross, no sandy plains, and no snows to obstruct the use of the road during a great portion of the year. They forget, while they are discussing the practicability of rival routes, that we of the slow-going South have already got a road partially completed, running from the Atlantic within a short distance from the Gulf of Mexico, with only a few miles unfinished. In order to complete the connection with New Orleans; and that beyond our port, Westward, the work is going bravely on, and the cars already thundering through the forests on the opposite side of the Mississippi, in a direct line to the Pacific. While they concoct wise plans for building the road, we are already at work. While Robert J. Walker and others of like magnificent ideas are engraving quires of paper in subscribing imaginary millions, we of the South have seized the pick-axe and the spade, and have gone to doing what they only contemplate.

New Boat for the Galveston Trade.

The J. H. Bell—Capt. Fowler's new boat for the Galveston and Brazos river trade, was launched from the ship-yard of the Messrs. Howard, at Jeffersonville, Ind., on the 25th ult. In a notice of the boat, the Louisville Courier says:

"The J. H. Bell was built for the Galveston and Brazos river trade. She is 1380 feet in length, with 35 feet beam and 29 feet draft, and the strongest and best fastened vessel ever turned out, and the owners deserve great credit for such an excellent job. Her promptness and strict attention to business, well merits the increased amount of work they have on their hands. The J. H. Bell is to have two engines, with cylinders 24 inches in diameter, and 8 feet stroke, and 3 boilers 28 feet in length, and 42 inches in diameter."

The Cuban residents of this city and others who sympathize with their revolutionary efforts, held a meeting last Saturday evening to take measures for procuring and presenting a testimonial for their respect to the Hon. D. M. Barriera, an American Minister to Spain. This gentleman has peculiar claims on their gratitude in consequence of the efforts he so successfully made to alleviate the sufferings of their countrymen, when prisoners in Spain and Africa, as well as his patriotic exertions in favor of Cuba. A Committee has been appointed to draw up an appropriate address to be presented to Mr. Barriera along with some more substantial evidence of their respect. John S. Tharner, so long a sufferer from the tyranny of Captains-General, took a prominent part in the proceedings.

Wheat.

From S. R. Eggers Esq., one of the proprietors of the Steam Mill at Round Rock, the following particulars have been gathered in regard to the wheat crop of Travis and Williamson counties. There have been twenty-five hundred bushels of wheat ground at their mill, and they are grinding from one hundred and fifty to two hundred bushels per day.

The following is a list of the products of the different farms so far as he knows: Messrs. Talbott, 1,700; Williams, 900; Mr. Anderson, 1,700; Richard Sanson, 1,000; Mr. Anderson, 1,200; Mr. Cook, 400; Mr. Capt. N. Merrill, 300; Thomas Allen, 1,000; in the aggregate, 8,100 bushels grown on Brushy and the San Gabriel. In addition to this there are numerous smaller crops of wheat from twenty to two hundred bushels. Nearly every farmer in Williamson county has raised enough to make his bread for the year.

The mills of Mr. Glascock have ground two thousand bushels, and a large quantity is yet on hand. It is thought one-fourth of the crop is not ground.

INDIAN NEWS.

Mr. O. Hedgecock, now on the Brazos river, making surveys for the Texas emigration and Land Company, reports that a party under the control of Thomas Lickie Esq. took four Indian prisoners, who were supposed to be watching their movements with hostile intentions. When first discovered they were in the prairie and making for the timber. The surveying party succeeded in cutting them off from the woods, and marched down upon them. The Indians prepared to fight—ordered the surveyors to stop; but not intimidated they rushed upon them, disarmed and made prisoners of them all. One was armed with a gun, two with bows and arrows, and one with a lance. They were taken to camp and well treated for the purpose of conciliating them, which succeeded. Mr. Lickie smoked with them. They expressed great friendship for him and the rest of the party, and brought into the camp six other Indians who had remained concealed. They told Mr. Lickie they were on a murderous expedition in order to avenge themselves for the death of a fellow settler, that having been so well treated by him and his party, they would not interrupt him or any of the surveyors, but would go down about Fort Gibson, kill some one and steal horses. This was but a few days before the commission of the depredation upon Noland's creek on the night of the 6th inst.

Such a consummation will doubtless be matter of some astonishment to the capitalists (if) who subscribed so liberally to the snow and ice line through the Rocky Mountains. The fact may seem strange, but we have a Pacific Railroad already partially in operation. Such, however, is the fact. Any one at all inquisitive should only take a trip to Algiers, on the opposite side of the river, where can be seen a small steamer in construction of the fact. Our Pacific Road is underway. By next spring it will have penetrated the beautiful country of the Atlatl, passing through the Bay of Biscaya and into the Gulf of Mexico. The sailing will soon be reached, and then—what becomes of Mr. Walker's ten millions of stock, existing only on paper, and "Old Bullion," much cherished property of having this great enterprise may then be so far ahead of them that they will find it difficult to overtake us. Hares for the New Orleans and San Francisco Railroad?—Clear the track!—N. O. Crescent.

Several important additions have been lately made to our current literature. Prof. Sillman, of Yale College, has issued, through the medium of Putnam's press, his "Visits to Europe in 1851." Like Sir Charles Lyell in his American tours he views most that meets his eye through scientific spectacles, ever anxious to obtain and record information on these subjects to which he has devoted his life. Yet he has gathered much that will have its attractions for the miscellaneous reader, and need not fear comparison with the thoughtful and one-tourist who have preceded him. Another book of travel has also made its appearance from the Harpers' gigantic establishment, entitled "Men and Things in Europe." It is from the pen of the Rev. Nicholas Murray, better known in controversial circles as Knowles, the Vermont knight-errant ever ready for a tilt with a portion of papacy. The author, as was to be expected, takes his views of things from a religious point of view. His wanderings through England, France, Italy, and Switzerland, form the subject of this volume. Mr. Hadley, the famous abbot of "Washington and his Generals" &c. has likewise taken the field with a new book. It is history of our "Second War with England," and is written in Mr. Hadley's brilliant but incoherent style. It is a pity the author had not studied anatomy and rhetoric a little more carefully before presenting himself at the tribunal of literary criticism. Among game works, we have an interesting reprint of the William Hamilton's works, or without which no man of comprehensive and metaphysical tendencies can claim his library to be complete. This old philosopher, in the vicinity of Aquinas is blended with the simplicity of Plato, has a wonderful power of thought and makes his thoughts attractive by their neatness and strength without the aid of adjectives.

The Saturday low prices have terminated this week for the Crystal Palace Directors. The total number of visitors last Saturday was 144, of whom 17,325 were admitted on tickets at the doors. The total Cash receipts were $208.

The French have a well-earned reputation for their skill in surgery; the late operations conducted with this science, which they have forward for exhibition, are some evidence hereof. It is noteworthy among these cases of amputation, the individual seems to ward the pain he experiences and beauty of face, to that of a Paris man named Chamere. The very sight of his countenance induces, daily, sitting and sleeping, is enough to make the flesh creep and pall.

The Board also state that nine deaths occurred from yellow fever, which is an increase of eight over the previous week! Since the Board have made their report, some additional cases of yellow fever have occurred, only one of which, however, has terminated fatally. We have a set of "old granaries" in our Board of Health; and some of them deny the existence of the fever, and the next they proclaim the fact.

The season for amusements opens promisingly. One Bill sustained by Strackob and little Adeline Path gave a grand concert on Saturday, which was attended by a large and appreciative audience. Gottschalk is advertised for another in a short time. The Germans also will soon commence a series of concerts. They have given two in this city during the past two or three years and are great favorites. It is Orchestra music which for concert is much more pleasing than any other instrumental music.

DELTA.

It is estimated that no less than four millions of dollars have been spent by Southern States in eight-eighths and pleasure hunting at the North.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Seventy-five tons of bibles and testaments, or 100,000 copies, have been circulated in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northern Illinois during the past six years, leaving an indelible impress on the character of thousands.

It is stated that of five hundred and thirty-three young ladies who failed last year more than one half of them fell into the hands of gentlemen. Only two had the misfortune to fall upon the floor.
