Weekend fires burn 590 acres

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise
High winds and dry conditions were primary factors when about 590 acres of Donley County land burned on Sunday, February 27.

According to First Assistant Fire Chief Jeremy Powell of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department, two different fires blazed that day.

"That was one of the worst days I've seen," Powell said. "The winds on both fires were 30 to 40 sustained with gusts of 60 miles per hour. The relative humidity was around nine percent. The atmosphere was really dry."

The first fire, reported at 2:50 p.m., was at the Crofoot Ranch (formerly known as the Bittercreek). The fire was a re-ignition of a prescribed burn held there on February 24. It was contained within an hour with the help of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department, Texas Department of Transportation, Donley County motorgraders, Clarendon EMS, and the Donley County Sheriff's Office. It burned roughly 40 acres.

The second fire was reported at 6:18 p.m. at FM 203 and Co. Rd. 28 northeast of Hedley. It was under control by 12:30 a.m., but it flared back up again at 5:30 a.m. The fire was finally extinguished by 9:30 a.m. It burned a total of 550 acres from Co. Rd. 28 to Co. Rd. 31, which stretches three miles long. The cause of this fire is unknown.

Mutual aid came from Memphis VFD, Wellington VFD, Hedley VFD and Samnorwood VFD. Other responders included TxDOT, Donley County Sheriff's Office, and Clarendon EMS.

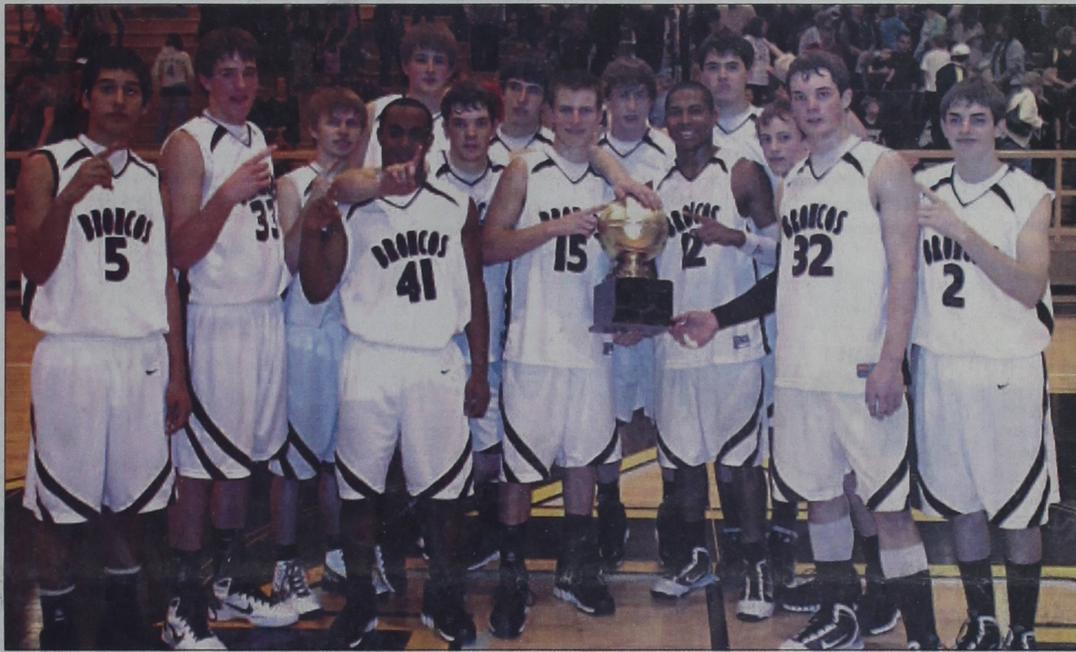

The fires threatened no structures, and caused no injuries. The second fire posed a threat to some farm equipment, but none was damaged.

"People need to be cautious on days when wind is extremely high," Powell said. "Make sure to avoid any kind of burning."

Broncos advance

CHS wins Area title, 51-42

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Broncos are moving on in post-season play after being named Area Champions by defeating Canadian 51-42 in Amarillo on Friday night.

The win put them in the Regional Quarter Final game against Gruver, which will be played on Wednesday night, March 2, at Tascosa High at 7:00 p.m.

Game results and further play-off information will be posted on www.ClarendonLive.com as it becomes available.

The Broncos were in a dog-fight Friday night as they tried to put space between them and the Wildcats. It was not easy, but senior standout Johnny Gaines took control of the game and the scoreboard as he finished with 34 points in the game.

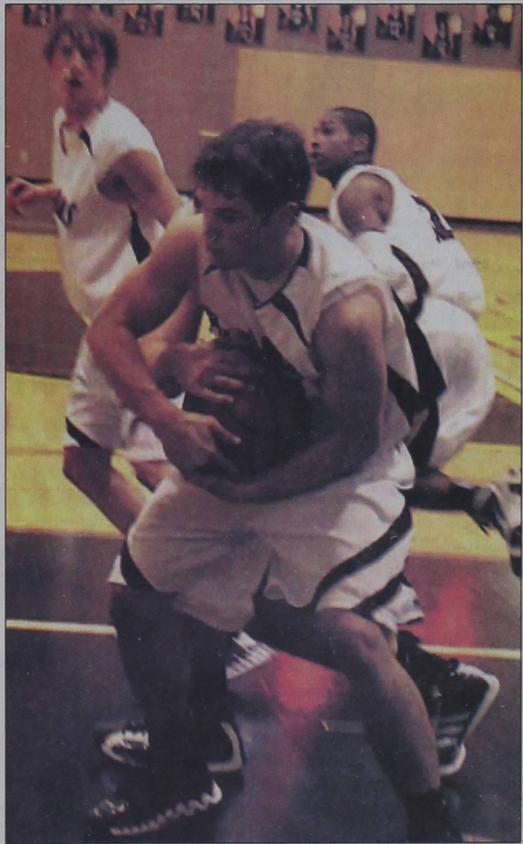

The inside work of the Broncos paid off as well as they slowed Canadian's big post player who finished with 17 points. The final minutes of the third period were crucial to the Broncos as they went on a scoring run to build an eight-point lead. The Broncos hit several key free throws late as the momentum was clearly on Clarendon's side.

And the Wildcats could only stand back and watch as the Broncos backed up their number one ranking by grabbing the win and the trophy. The Bronco offense was slightly off, but defensively, the Broncos were able to convert on turnovers.

"We did a good job playing defense and were able to turn those into points," Lockhart said. "Overall, it was not a good shooting night, but I thought we played with great effort."

Also scoring: Brayden Phillips 6, Chris Crump 6, Justin Shillings 3, and Mike Crump 2.

Local man gets probation on drug charges

A Donley County man was placed on probation on drug-related charges when the 100th District Court met in Childress last Tuesday, February 22.

William Michael Shults was placed on probation for a period of three years for the third degree felony offense of possession of controlled substance in a drug free zone. Shults pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication.

Shults, a resident of Clarendon, was arrested in Donley County on July 26, 2010 and pleaded guilty to a complaint and information filed by the State on November 3, 2010.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Shults is required to pay a $3,000 fine to Donley County, and is also required to pay $443 in court costs, $140 restitution, and complete 200 hours of community service. If Shults violates probation, he could face up to ten years in the Institutional Division of the TDCJ.

The court also heard four other pleas. Osvaldo Castaneda - Landeros was placed on probation for a period of ten years for the first degree felony offense of possession of a controlled substance. Castaneda-Landeros, resident of Tulsa, Oklahoma, was arrested in Carson County on November 25, 2010.

Francisco Alberto Clelaya Cebros was placed on probation for a period of ten years for the second degree felony offense of possession of marijuana. Cebros, Orientie Porto Penasco, Mexico resident, was arrested in Carson County on January 28, 2011 by DPS Jerome Ingle and pleaded guilty to a complaint and information filed by the State on February 18, 2011.

placed on probation for a period of three years for the third degree felony offense of fraud by altering a prescription. Atkins of Hollis, Okla., was arrested in Collingsworth County on Nov. 15, 2010.

Hampton, a resident of Childress, was arrested in Childress County for the offense that took place on May 25, 2005.

College, school funding at risk

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

Clarendon College and local public schools are bracing themselves for what could be severe budget cuts as state legislators deal with a huge revenue shortfall this year.

Local officials are not yet sure how badly their budgets will be impacted as lawmakers in Austin search for ways to bridge the gap of an estimated deficit of between $15 billion and $27 billion, but they say people need to act now and makes their voices heard in support of education.

CC President Phil Shirley testified before the State House Appropriations Higher Education Subcommittee in Austin two weeks ago, and he reports that the college is facing the possible loss of between $800,000 and $1.3 million over the next two years. In the worst case, Shirley said CC would have to shed between 10 and 15 employees and look at every aspect of college spending.

"Nothing will be sacrosanct," he said. "We'll look at programs, the course offerings, everything. We're just going to try to protect our students as much as we can."

Gov. Rick Perry has said he is against balancing the budget by using the state's Rainy Day Fund, which is expected to reach $9.8 billion by 2013. But many people, including Shirley, say now is the time to tap the fund.

"It is a wet and rainy day," Shirley said, "and I can't imagine how we could get to a time that we need it more. This is what it's there for."

Shirley says citizens need to speak up and let lawmakers know that education must be a priority.

"We have not shown that we care [about our community college]," he said. "They need some voices that they can hear down there. If people got together and spoke up, I feel they would back off."

Clarendon School Superintendent Monty Hysinger agreed with Shirley and said it is time for the public to get involved.

"People need to understand the seriousness of what's happening," Hysinger said. "I've never seen it this bad."

Clarendon ISD has been told to expect a reduction in state funds of between five and 15 percent, which amounts to $250,000 to $750,000 per year, Hysinger said.

"We can deal with $250,000, but we would have to look at attrition," Hysinger said. "It would get rid of any discretionary spending, and beyond that would come from employees or programs."

Some changes that Hysinger

Act now in support of education

The Texas Legislature is facing some hard choices this year as lawmakers grapple with a budget shortfall of somewhere between $15 billion and $27 billion, and now is the time to let them know exactly what it is that you as taxpayers care about the most.

editor's commentary
by roger estlack

Texas Republicans have a track record of cutting budgets to make ends meet rather than raise taxes, and that's generally a good thing. Unfortunately, some items which should be near and dear to folks in Donley County are now on the chopping block – open government, historic preservation, and funding for education.

OPEN GOVERNMENT is one issue that should be of utmost importance to every Texan. But a concerted effort is underway by the Texas Association of School Boards and the Texas Association of School Administrators to allow school districts to satisfy public notice requirements by posting them on their website rather than publishing those notices in your local newspaper.

House Bill 1688 by Rep. Linda Harper-Brown does that, and Senate Bill 468 filed by Sen. Florence Shapio has the same goal by supposedly relieving schools of "unfunded mandates." And House Bill 1833 filed by Rep. Mark Shelton would make a notice of a public meeting to discuss a school's budget and proposed tax rate optional.

The cost of public notices is small, and Texans should not favor any measure that allows schools – or any local government – to take their dealings out of the public view. Taking public notices out of newspapers just makes it that much easier for elected officials to do whatever they want without the public's knowledge. The people behind these measures should be ashamed of themselves for seeking to take government out of the sunshine in the name of saving money.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION is a relatively small part of the state budget, but one that Donley County folks have a stake in as the home of one of the first courthouses to be restored using state funds and the location of numerous historic sites. Heritage tourism is on the rise here and elsewhere in rural Texas, but unfortunately, the Texas Historical Commission, as well as the Texas Commission on the Arts, was almost completely defunded by early proposals in Austin this year. However, an outpouring of support from preservationists and people who realize the value of protecting our history has reportedly turned the tide at the State Capitol so that much of THC's core programs will still be funded. But the battle isn't over.

EDUCATION FUNDING ought to always be one of the state's number one priorities. It is a core function of Texas government. Sadly, education has become a highly politicized topic, and the debate often revolves around party agendas and standardized tests rather than focusing on simply preparing students to be the civic and business leaders of tomorrow.

Public and higher education in Texas will receive cuts in funding in the coming biennium, and it is going to be painful. But Legislators need to know that Texans – including those of us in Donley County – view education as a high priority and that we want to see it funded as best as it possibly can.

Officials at Clarendon College and at Clarendon and Hedley public schools don't know yet exactly how much their budgets will be cut, but they know it isn't looking good. Clarendon ISD could lose as much as $1.5 million over the next two years, and the college could lose more than $1.3 million. Hedley ISD believes it could lose about $240,000.

That's more than $3 million which could be missing from the local economy in education funding alone. It's commonly held that a dollar that comes into a community will change hands seven times before it leaves a community, which means the area could suffer the loss of $21 million in economic activity over the next two years. Dark news, indeed, and that doesn't even begin to account for how cuts in other state funded programs – libraries, Medicaid, etc. – might hit the county.

Hedley school officials say cutting positions isn't an option there because they don't have any extra people, but Clarendon ISD and Clarendon College both say a "reduction in force" would be necessary, which would mean a loss of jobs. And those are good paying jobs with benefits that cannot be replaced by other sectors of our economy.

Cuts in education funding would mean fewer opportunities for our children from elementary through college, fewer chances for job training on the college level, and a limit on the growth of our college enrollment, which would also hurt our economy in terms of fewer students coming here than might otherwise.

Our outstanding school system is a valuable asset for our community. And Clarendon College – along with Greenbelt Lake – is often credited as what keeps this city from dwindling the way so many rural towns have over the years. We need to protect our schools and our college, and that means it is time to take action.

Today, take 10 or 15 minutes to send a message to Rep. Warren Chisum and Sen. Robert Duncan and let them know that you understand the predicament the state is in but that you strongly support funding for public schools and for Clarendon College. Be polite and respectful in your letter or phone call. Neither Duncan nor Chisum wants to harm our schools or college, but they need to hear from you to give them ammunition when dealing with their colleagues and other competing interests for state funds.

Write a letter to Rep. Warren Chisum, P.O. Box 2910, Austin, TX 78768, and Sen. Robert Duncan, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711. Or telephone by calling Chisum at (512) 463-0736 or Duncan at 800-322-9538. This could be the most important thing you do for your community this year.

Congress' annual debt-ceiling dance

By Dr. Mark W. Hendrickson

Once again it's time to talk about raising the statutory limit on the U.S. government's debt—the so-called "debt ceiling." Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner has estimated that Uncle Sam will reach the debt ceiling before Tax Day, possibly even before the end of March.

Even earlier, on March 4 to be precise, the current appropriations resolution that is funding government spending will expire.

Are these two stories giving you a sense of déjà vu? They should. These two closely related issues are perennial events. Congress has raised the debt ceiling 74 times in the past 70 years, and, of course, passing an annual budget is necessarily an annual event.

The same two sides square off against each other on both issues. On the one side are the (relatively) fiscal conservatives, the so-called "deficit hawks," the belt-tighteners; on the other are the budget-busters, the "deficit doves," the big spenders.

The big spenders are riding a long winning streak. Every time federal debt has reached the debt ceiling, Congress has raised it.

Prediction: There may be some fireworks first, but Congress will soon raise the debt ceiling again, and raise it significantly. Look at the numbers: President Obama has mentioned a possible $30-billion reduction in spending from a pending $1.65-trillion deficit this year. Speaker Boehner has countered with a proposal that is doubly large: $61 billion. One is tempted to say that the hotly contested debate between shrinking the deficit 2 percent or 4 percent is a tempest in a teapot.

Let's look at the numbers another way: Even if $61 billion ends up being trimmed from the budget, Uncle Sam will still spend over $3.6 trillion this year. Here's a trivia question for you: Who was president when Uncle Sam spent $2 trillion in a year for the first time? Give yourself an "A" if you answered George W. Bush.

Federal spending has nearly doubled in the last decade—a decade of anemic economic growth, as is the rule when government expands at the expense of the private sector. Obama has talked about hitting "reset" buttons on other issues. Why not get serious about runaway government and reset federal spending to where it was, say, five years ago? The sad thing is, even such a gigantic pruning as that would still leave Congress having to raise the debt ceiling, because the deficit would still be enormous, further adding to the national debt.

Every year, we go through the same ritual before passing a red-ink-drenched budget. Deficit hawks protest the immorality of burdening the next generation with debt and warn of potential catastrophe if the government goes further into debt. What they are up against is this:

There are far more lobbyists defending specific dollars of federal spending than there are in favor of cutting them, and besides, the big spenders don't worry about deficits because national bankruptcy serves their agenda. Perhaps someday there will be enough tea partiers in Congress to force across-the-board cuts or eliminate rafts of federal agencies, but not yet.

As for the debt-ceiling dance, it, too, follows a familiar pattern. The belt-tighteners warn of eventual chaos when the federal debt finally reaches a breaking point; the big spenders warn of the immediate inconveniences that would result from failing to raise the debt ceiling, and thereby partially shutting down government.

In what amounts to a high-stakes game of "chicken," the big spenders always win, because the fiscal conservatives always blink. They know that a majority of the public fears the disruption of a government shutdown today more than they do a potential major upheaval at some unspecified date in the future. We fiscal conservatives have come across like the boy who cried, "Wolf!" We have warned about the perils of red ink for years, but Armageddon hasn't come. I think we will be proven right eventually, but we can no more foretell when the federal debt will blow up than one can predict which straw will break the camel's back.

Have you asked yourself why we are debating raising the debt ceiling above $14.3 trillion? Answer: because earlier congresses didn't rein in spending and curb the national debt at $10 trillion, $5 trillion, $1 trillion, or less. The big spenders always prevail in the annual budget ritual and the debt-ceiling dance. Someday, we will mourn that fact.

Texas' 175-year legacy of freedom

One hundred and seventy five years ago, 59 brave men risked their lives to boldly put forward their belief that Texas must and ought to be a free nation. The signers, our state's forefathers, knew that by putting their name on this new declaration of independence, they were also putting their families and livelihoods in peril. But they were willing to risk it all for liberty.

I recently participated in Washington-on-the-Brazos' 175th anniversary celebration of the Texas Declaration of Independence. It was truly a special occasion that brought together the descendants of all 59 signers and thousands of proud Texans to commemorate one of the most pivotal events in Texas' long legacy of freedom and patriotism. My great-great-grandfather, Charles S. Taylor was willing to sign the document that secured our freedom, and I am humbled to occupy the Senate seat from Texas that was first held by another signer, Thomas J. Rusk. They were both from Nacogdoches, Texas' oldest town.

In the time leading up to the Texas Revolution, colonists were living under the centralized power of the Mexican government. Its steel grip on trade, religion, and taxation, conflicted with the yearning for independence that drew early American settlers to Texas.

The accounts of our revolution have become some of the most dramatic stories of patriotism in both Texas and American history. We remember the sacrifice of Colonel William Barret Travis, Davy Crockett, Jim Bowie, and the 189 men bravely defending the Alamo against Santa Anna and his thousands of trained Mexican troops. Outnumbered by more than 10 to one, for 13 days of glory, the Alamo defenders bought critical time for General Sam Houston, knowing they would never leave the mission alive. Had they not laid down their lives in that seminal battle, Sam Houston's victory at San Jacinto just two months later would not have been possible. And Texas' freedom might not have been won.

The signers of the Texas Declaration also used their voices, professions, and positions of influence to wage critical battles in the revolution. In 1836, my great-great-grandfather, Charles Taylor was land commissioner in East Texas, responsible for issuing titles and collecting fees. He served as alcalde, essentially the mayor, of Nacogdoches Territory. Thomas Rusk was serving as the secretary of war for the Texan insurgents. Rusk asked Taylor to allow the fees entrusted to him to be used to purchase weapons for the Texas army. Taylor ultimately agreed, believing that the people who paid the taxes wanted and deserved the freedom to govern themselves. With this money, Texan citizens were armed for the battle. They had no formal training and there was not enough money for them to have uniforms – but what they did have was the will to fight for something greater than themselves.

There was another contingent of brave Texans whose involvement in the revolution was significant, but sometimes overlooked: women who had to fight to keep their families together, or even alive.

The Runaway Scrape of 1836 swept up nearly every family in Central and East Texas. My great-great-grandmother Anna Maria Taylor was one of the thousands of refugees fleeing Eastward from the Mexican advance. With her husband Charles Taylor attending the convention of delegates at Washington-on-the-Brazos, Anna Maria, like other mothers in the Runaway Scrape, struggled to escape on foot. Tragically, and like so many other mothers of the time, she lost all four of her children during that time of adversity. But, the trials of the revolution were not the final chapters of their lives. After the War ended, Anna Maria and Charles went back to Nacogdoches, where she bore nine more children.

Thomas Rusk pointed out that, "the men of Texas deserved much credit, but more was due the women. Armed men facing a foe could not but be brave; but the women, with their little children around them, without means of defense or power to resist, faced danger and death with unflinching courage."

In order to secure our bright future, we must preserve our rich history. It is important every generation of Texans pause to remember the patriots of the Texas Revolution: each soldier who gave his life in the fight for independence; the 59 men who put their lives in danger by signing that declaration of independence; and every man, woman, and child who struggled to make Texas the marvelous place it is today.

Funds: College, schools could suffer

says would be on the table would be to make HeadStart a half-day class, Pre-Kindergarten could be eliminated or turned into a half-day or tuition-based program, and even Kindergarten could be cut to half a day. Clarendon ISD might also have to end its policy of paying for high school students' dual credit classes at Clarendon College and put those tuition and fee costs back on the parents.

"The problem really is that the state created a new funding system for public schools two years ago, and they knew then that a deficit was in the future," Hysinger said. "It's not a result of poor management at local schools. Texas schools are growing by 80,000 students per year, and we're going back to 2005 level funding? We want our kids to be competitive."

Hysinger said even a five percent cut leaves no room for state mandated teacher salary increases.

Hedley Superintendent Eric Hough says he's following developments in Austin closely and says a 15 percent cut in state funds would impact his school by about $241,000.

"That would be difficult but not impossible," Hough said. "We've streamlined personnel about as much as we can, so we would have to look at putting off purchases and other ways to save money."

Hough agreed with Shirley and Hysinger that people need to let their elected representatives know if they support education.

"The more they hear from parents that just goes a long ways toward influencing decision making," Hough said.

All three men said they think the final state budget won't be as bad as the worst case scenarios, but they still said people need to speak up now.

"It is early, and things will change," Shirley said. "The big question is: 'What are our priorities?'"

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT: AN OLD WORN BIBLE

God's word is precious as it contains the words of life. Peter made this statement to the Savior when asked if he would leave as the crowds did: "Lord, to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life." We live in a situation where we can study God's word anytime we want. We are not molested for studying God's word and it is available everywhere. Most homes have at least one Bible. Even a motel room usually carries a copy. Why does this booksell more than any other yet read less than many novels?

It has become a relic in most homes. It is a decoration for the coffee table or something to slide back and forth in the back window of a car. The most valuable thing God has put into our hands and often it is treated with less respect than a Pizza Hut coupon. Sadly, more people know the expiration date and information about their credit card than they know the location of their Bible at this moment.

How beautiful when you see an old worn Bible! The pages have begun to "fluff" and turn yellow from the years of study by its owner. These folks understand its importance. 2Timothy 3:16-17: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly equipped for every good work." It is the greatest "instruction manual" ever known. The word of God "lights our path" and "directs our steps." In this world of darkness, we need all the help we can get.

His words teach us how to become prepared for the next life. It teaches us how to live in this one and get along with others (Matt. 7:12 = Golden Rule). It teaches us about Jesus and what He did for us. What He did will be in vain, though, for those who know nothing about Him, 2Thess. 1:7-9.

I pray that our country, our state, our town, would turn back to God and there is no better way to get started than to study the Bible. Graduation is around the corner, why not give the greatest treasure on earth to these young people? We can't change the past, but we can all begin today becoming a more spiritual people. There is nothing better we can do for our children than to give them a spiritual education. 4+ years at a university is fine, but meaningless if one doesn't have their spiritual future secure. All the money and a good career pale in comparison to a relationship with God. You can't know Him or gain this relationship without studying His book.

My prayer is that we "wear" out our Bibles. We will never regret this decision.

medium bowl with a fork or whisk. Dip 8 bread slices into the milk mixture and place onto a baking sheet. Spread about 1 tablespoon pecan mixture onto each dipped bread slice.

Dip the remaining bread slices into the milk mixture and place over the pecan mixture to form sandwiches. Bake for 20 minutes or until the sandwiches are lightly browned. Sprinkle with the confectioners' sugar.

Tip: When cooking a sugar mixture on top of the stove, use a heavy-bottomed saucepan. The thicker the bottom, the less readily the sugar will burn.

Bronco baseball squad defeats Fritch

By Sandy Anderberg

In their first regular season game, the Broncos flexed their muscles against a good Fritch team and came away with a 6-5 win.

According to coach Brad Elam, the team was stacked with several young players who stepped in while the basketball players are still in post-season play.

"We had many young players step up and make plays when the game was on the line," Elam said. "(I was) extremely happy with the results of the game."

The Broncos got up early on the Eagles at 4-2, but Fritch tied the score midway into the game.

"They tied it, but we were able to score two in the bottom of the fifth for a two-run lead," Elam said. "We then held them off in the sixth."

Several players contributed to the score and the win and defensively, the Broncos stayed determined. The Bronco offense took control with many crucial hits.

"The top of the lineup was huge," Elam said. "Trevor Cobb, John Levario and Troy Chambless scored two runs a piece and five different players drove in runs. Cobb drove in one on his first homerun of the season and Rowdy Speed and Dusty Rice drove in runs in the key fifth inning. Chambless and Dillon Nicholl had RBI's in the first inning.

The Broncos had great results from the mound as well. "Chambless pitched four good innings striking out 11 (batters)," Elam said. "Cobb pitched a good inning and Caleb Mitchell came on to close the game out in the sixth."

On Saturday, the Broncos inched by Arbor Christian Academy at 3-1. Troy Chambless was on the mound and nearly threw a shutout, as the Lions did not score until the final inning.

The Broncos earned their first run in the third inning when and scored again in the fourth and sixth.

"There was not much offense in this game, and we managed only three hits," coach Brad Elam said. "But we were able to take advantage of some of their errors."

According to Elam, John Levario, Rowdy Speed, and Dusty Rice had hits with Speed doubling in a run. Chambless scored two runs and Chance McAnear scored the other run.

"Chambless had a big day on the mound striking out 13 (hitters) and giving up only three hits," Elam said. "He did tire a little late, but was able to battle through it to strike out the last batter with bases loaded. I am pleased with the results again playing with so many younger kids."

The Broncos will play in a double-header Saturday, March 5, at West Texas High School beginning at 1:00 p.m. and travel to Electra to play their District opener Tuesday, March 8, beginning at 4:30 p.m.

Lady Broncos fall short, 2-8

By Sandy Anderberg

The Lady Broncos participated in the Fritch Tournament over the weekend where they played several games.

Their last game was for the Championship against Borger. They lost 2-8 in a shortened game.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Broncos routed Quanah at home 16-0. The game was cut short in five innings due to the run rule. Danielle Ford and Jency Burton pitched the game with Ford getting the win (2-0). Audrey Shelton was behind the plate until she was injured, and Trevela Dronzek finished the game.

The Lady Broncos will participate in the Dumas Tournament March 3 and 5.

They will play Childress at home on Tuesday, March 8, beginning at 4:00 p.m.

Jacob Pigg

Pigg invited to play football overseas

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

When offered the opportunity of a lifetime, Clarendon High School junior Jacob Pigg is jumping at the chance.

Not very many people get to play football in Australia and Hawaii, and Pigg is determined to pad up and go "down under."

"The only time I thought I would be leaving American soil was in a Kevlar vest and helmet," Pigg said.

"Now I have the chance to represent my school, Texas, and the United States in Australia, and I think it will be a great experience."

Pigg, who received First Team All District Offensive Line this year, will go to Australia July 7-July 15, and from there he will travel to Hawaii until July 18.

He will play for the North Central Conference Team with his American teammates against Australia, New Zealand and other American teams.

"I think it's going to be fun to play with some of my competition I've been playing against in high school," Pigg said. "I'm going to meet a lot of people and make new friends."

The trip is not free though. In order to raise $4,400 for his traveling expenses, Pigg will set up donation cans in local stores.

Other donations can be sent to Pigg at 2463 CR 5 Lakeview, TX 79239.

"Your support and donations will be greatly appreciated," Pigg said.

"I'm grateful for the community's support during football season, and I'd appreciate it if they'd support me on this trip."

Drugs in the News

Fluoxetine Benefit in Stroke Recovery

Researchers have found that fluoxetine (Prozac), a widely used medication used for depression, could improve a person's ability to recover from a stroke, when given after an ischemic stroke. This new study was reported in The Lancet Neurology. Ischemic strokes are caused by a lack of blood flow to the brain. Paralysis and weakness in the limbs on one side of the body can occur. This study assigned 118 people to treatment with either fluoxetine or placebo after stroke onset. After three months, significantly greater improvements in overall (both upper and lower limb) motor function were found in those persons who took fluoxetine versus placebo. In addition, those who received fluoxetine were found to be significantly more physically independent than those in the placebo treatment group.

In general, fluoxetine was well tolerated and side-effects were mild. However, some experienced nausea and abdominal pain. The positive effect of fluoxetine on motor function suggests that there may be a new treatment for the treatment of ischaemic strokes that includes the use of the SSRI type drugs.

Mobeetie museum hosts wildlife art exhibit

The Old Mobeetie Jail Museum will host a Wildlife Art Exhibit featuring the work of photographer R.D. "Dick" Wilberforce of Canadian, Texas and painter Herb Booth of Rockport, Texas. Works will be displayed from April 2-April 17 at the Visitor's Center in Old Mobeetie.

Wilberforce's photography exhibit will include works featuring wildlife, dogs, horses and cattle. Wilberforce is a veteran outdoor photographer whose images have graced over 125 magazine covers. These publications include Ducks Unlimited, Quail Unlimited, Wild Bird, Quarterhorse Journal, Wing & Shot and Gun Dog.

"I've been fortunate enough to enjoy documenting God's creatures and the outdoor world for over half a century," Wilberforce said. "You can't ask for a more challenging or rewarding life than one working with nature and the people who respect and enjoy it."

Original watercolors by Rockport artist Herb Booth will also be on display. Booth, who has wedded his artistic skills with decades of experience as a naturalist and hunter, is one of the best known and most sought after painters of sporting and wildlife scenes in Texas.

Booth's work has been featured in many of the nationally known sporting magazines. Some of this well known prints will be featured including prints of waterfowl done for Ducks Unlimited 1991 Central Flyway Collection, "Shiner's Show" from the February 2005 edition of Parks and Wildlife's magazine, and Migratory game bird stamps done for the National Wild Turkey Federation. He will also have books available for purchase.

In addition to Wilberforce and Booth, several works by Kenneth Wyatt, commissioned by the Old Mobeetie Museum, will also be on display.

The Visitor's Center, two blocks east of the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum, will be open daily from 1-5 pm during the 15 day exhibit. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend and take advantage of the opportunity to see this outstanding display of art.

Food safety training to be offered from Extension service

AMARILLO - Texas AgriLife Extension Service agents around the Panhandle will be offering a professional food manager certification training course called "Food Safety: It's Our Business" in three locations during March and May.

The program is designed to help food establishments meet Texas Department of State Health Services requirements, said Sandra Duke, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Hutchinson County.

The program will be offered at the following locations:

Gray County, March 22-23 at the Gray County Annex, 12125 E. Frederic Ave., Pampa.

Moore and Hutchinson counties, March 23-24, to be taught in Spanish only, at the Frank Phillips College Center for Access and Innovation, Room 102, 901 Opal, Borger.

Armstrong County, May 19-20 at the Armstrong County Activity Building, 901 S. Hurley, State Hwy. 207, Claude.

The trainings are open to anyone from the Panhandle region.

A $115 fee will be charged at each location, which will cover training, materials and the state food manager certification examination, according to Joan Gray-Soria, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Gray County.

Under the Texas Department of State Health Services jurisdiction, each food establishment is required to have one certified food manager on site, Gray-Soria said. Food manager certificates will be valid for five years. This program is designed to help prepare food-service managers to pass the certification examination, as well as provide valuable education regarding the safe handling of food, said Leicia Redwine, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Armstrong County.

Redwine said some of the known benefits of improved food safety include increased customer satisfaction, improved relationships with health officials, and prevention of bad publicity and lawsuits due to foodborne illness.

Sue Owens, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Moore County, said individuals attending the course will learn to: identify potentially hazardous foods and common errors in food handling; prevent contamination and cross-contamination of food; teach and encourage personal hygiene for employees; comply with government regulations; maintain clean utensils, equipment and surroundings; and control pests.

For more information about the Professional Food Manager Certification Training course of AgriLife Extension call Duke at 806-878-4026, Gray-Soria at 806-669-8033, Redwine at 806-226-3021 or Owens at 806-935-2594.

Real Housewives of Frontier shows a harsh reality

CANYON - Before the soccer mom and even before June Cleaver, women lived by the motto, "cleanliness is next to godliness." Literally.

"In Real Housewives of the Wild Frontier" on Saturday, March 12, at 2:00 p.m., Dr. Evelyn Montgomery demonstrates the reality of the socially demanding life of a Victorian housewife.

Victorians believed that everything about the home, its appearance, cleanliness, decoration and arrangement, influenced the morals of all the residents and told the world that the housewife and homeowner were respectable.

But hold your dust rag and consider that some of these Victorian wives moved to the frontier environment where all the prior domestic standards were nearly impossible to maintain. Even under dusty, dirty, grueling conditions women succeeded anyway, wallpapering with newspapers, building homemade whatnot shelves for the "parlor" corner of the cabin and planting gardens of eastern flowers in western soil.

Montgomery, curator at the Dallas Heritage Village at Old City Park, has researched the life of American housewives in the 19th century extensively and explains her findings in this presentation.

Reservations are required by Thursday, March 10. To RSVP go to panhandleplains.org or call Elaina at (806) 651-2258.

The program is free for PPHM members, WT faculty, staff and students and is included in the museum admission price for all others. People vying for the trip to Paris will receive a stamp in their PPHM to Paris passport at this event.

This event is sponsored in part by the Goodnight Lecture Series in conjunction with Women's History Month.

Predictors at best when things are worst

COLLEGE STATION, Texas – Every day Predictive Services Department Head Tom Spencer and his team study weather patterns, drought conditions and the status of vegetation across the state.

They gather wind speeds and moisture levels from the field. They monitor areas reporting high winds and low moisture levels, two of the key ingredients for dangerous wildfires. They study changes in land use and the long term wildfire risks that accompany them.

"I'm hoping a wildfire outbreak doesn't happen, but I'm glad we have the capabilities that we do," Spencer said of the thoughts that race through his mind when the predictions start to come together.

"It's just like hurricane or tornado forecasting. It's good to be able to do it and get the information out, but it doesn't change the outcome. The hurricane always makes land-fall somewhere, the tornado always destroys someone's house somewhere. These fires always occur and somebody is at risk."

Created in 1998, the Texas Forest Service Predictive Services Department is tasked with forecasting fire danger. Spencer has led the department since its inception and his team is divided by their specialty – gathering weather data, studying vegetation and mapping wildfire risk.

Spencer then consolidates all their information, focusing on the bigger picture as he develops a longer term forecast.

As they complete the process, they also produce several maps – including fire danger and drought maps – that detail conditions and are available to the public.

The research and forecasts have proven invaluable to Texas Forest Service fire managers, who are tasked with planning when and where additional people and equipment may be needed.

"Tom Spencer's job is to produce seasonal forecasts, as well as short term weekly and daily forecasts – and he's never been wrong," said Mark Stanford, fire operations chief for Texas Forest Service.

But Spencer is quick to point out that the agency doesn't do it alone. When the team spots an alarming trend, they immediately alert their partners: National Weather Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the USDA Forest Service, as well as a host of other agencies.

"We want to make sure we're on the same page and seeing the same thing," Spencer said. "We get feedback along those lines and it helps us develop a more comprehensive operating picture of what's coming."

With the advancements made during the last three decades, the climate indicators have become pretty consistent, Spencer said, explaining that everyone generally is on the same page.

And when everyone is in agreement, Spencer said, it's time to notify the public. When your job focuses on predicting disasters, the most rewarding aspect is helping people better protect themselves.

"That's really what we're all about and why we do this, and it's why the National Weather Service forecasters do what they do," Spencer said. "We can't stop a disaster, but hopefully, our work helps limit the amount of damage that results from one. The safety of our citizens is key."

Honoring Texas farms and ranches

Maintaining a family farm or ranch for 100 years or more takes a lot of hard work and true Texas grit. The Texas Department of Agriculture recognizes the families who have remained committed through the Family Land Heritage Program.

This year, farms and ranches established in 1911 or earlier are eligible to be honored. The land must still be owned and operated by the descendants of the founder, either through blood, marriage or adoption. The deadline for applications is May 1, 2011, and there is no cost to apply.

With 100 years of history, a family farm or ranch in Texas has a great story to tell. Proof of this can be seen in the 4,200 farms and ranches recognized over the years by the Family Land Heritage Program. Their profiles tell the story of their ancestors' perseverance and search for opportunity in Texas. This history is what has helped build today's $100 billion Texas agriculture industry.

Those who choose to carry on their family name through agriculture are enriching a Texas way of life. The Family Land Heritage Program recognizes these families for their contribution to a powerful agriculture industry and to all citizens of the Lone Star State.

A variety of homestead exemptions could lower your property taxes!

A homestead exemption lowers the property taxes on your home by lowering its taxable value. If your home is valued at $50,000 and you receive a $15,000 homestead exemption, your home will be taxed as if it were worth $35,000.

Who qualifies for an exemption?
 Anyone who owns a home on Jan. 1 and uses it as a primary residence on that date is entitled to a $15,000 homestead exemption to lower school taxes this year...and it doesn't matter if your home is a house, condominium or mobile home. Counties, cities and special taxing districts may also offer homestead exemptions.

Are other exemptions available?
 If you're disabled—or if you're 65 years old or older—you are entitled to an additional $10,000 school tax exemption on your home. And if you qualify for the 65 or older or disabled exemption, you're also entitled to a permanent, locked-in "ceiling" on the school property taxes on your home. (The county, city or junior college may adopt a tax ceiling to lock in 2011 taxes as the highest amount for 65 and older or disabled homeowners.) The age 65 or older homeowners school tax ceiling transfers to the surviving spouse, if the spouse is 55 years of age or older at the time of death and lives in and owns the home. The age 65 or older homeowners (or their surviving spouses 55 years of age or older) also may transfer the percentage of school tax paid, based on their former home's school tax ceiling, to a new home.

If you're a disabled veteran who receives from the Veterans Affairs (VA)—(1) 100 percent disability compensation due to a service connected disability and (2) a rating of 100 percent disabled or a determination of individual unemployability, you are entitled to an exemption from taxation of the total appraised value of your resident homestead. A surviving spouse does not qualify.

Do I have to apply each year?
 No. If you had a homestead exemption on your home in 2010, you won't need to reapply for 2011 unless your chief appraiser requires it. However, if you haven't received an exemption on your present home—or if you've moved to a new home—you'll need to file for an exemption for 2011. If you are 65 this year, you may file for the age 65 or older exemption up to one year after the date you turned 65. And if you became disabled, you need to file for the disabled person's exemption.

When and where should I file?
 File applications before May 1 at your appraisal district office. If you need more time, contact us at:
