Greenbelt reports lower water usage

Greenbelt Water Authority is reporting this week that Hedley and Clarendon led the way among its member cities in reducing water consumption last month.

Compared to July figures, Hedley reduced its water usage by 36.35 percent in August and Clarendon dropped its consumption by 29.60 percent.

The water authority's drought contingency plan seeks a 30 percent reduction in usage under current conditions.

Quannah and Crowell reduced their consumption by 26.73 percent and 22.04 percent respectively. Childress reduced its usage by 11.80 percent.

The Red River Water Authority, which purchases water from Greenbelt, reduced its consumption by 4.35 percent.

Despite cooler weather and a little bit of rain, the reservoir level continues to drop. Greenbelt reported the lake depth was 46.75 feet on Tuesday, that's down from 47.03 feet last week.

The authority says it appreciates everyone's efforts during this time and says there is still an urgent need to conserve water.

Where were you? Enterprise fans share their memories of 9/11

Ten years ago this Sunday, America watched in horror and outrage as terrorists killed thousands of our citizens.

The images of the collapse of the World Trade Center towers, the smoking hole in the side of the Pentagon, and the burning wreckage of Flight 93 have been etched into our collective memory, and everyone who was alive at the time knows just where they were and what they were doing when they first learned of the attacks.

To commemorate the anniversary of 9-11, the Enterprise asked its readers on Facebook to share with us their memories of that terrible day.

Jennifer Benton Scoggin - I was in my first month of teaching elementary music at Krum ISD. We could only get bits and pieces of what was happening; and, of course, I was stuck in my classroom. It was horrifying with my family scattered over two counties and not knowing what was going to happen. When we all finally got home, we couldn't tear ourselves away from the TV. We went through the motions of our lives for days while being glued to the news every possible moment. The event was especially poignant because just four months earlier I had spent some wonderful hours with a choir group from my previous teaching job at the top of the World Trade Center; therefore, I was mourning that memory as well as the loss of so many lives.

Audrey Jones - I was in Mrs. Perryman's fifth grade class.

Leitha Martindale Watson - Working at Clarendon Elementary, it started out as a wonderful day, as it was Cody's 18th birthday..... but that soon changed.

Chantelle Kelly Naylor - I was a junior at CHS. It was first period during band.

Lura N Larry Helms - At work, typing away...radio in background announced that a plane had hit the World Trade Center in New York. We turned on TV and stood thereterrified at the horror.

Shannon Armstrong - The morning of 9/11 started off like all others. I was getting ready to go into work at the New Mexico

Tiffany Dawn McAnear - Stationed at Robins AFB in Georgia, prego with Chase. We were headed off base for a doc. appointment, saw it when we got there on the TV, could believe it. Barely got back on base in time after the appt, before they locked down the whole place.

Joanna Jarvis - I was living in Baton Rouge and going to physical therapy.

Dana Estlack Heim - Living in Wahoo, Nebraska on my way to work at the law firm in Omaha, Nebraska. Was talking to my husband about how to celebrate his birthday. Unfortunately it is on Sept. 11.

Scarlet Estlack - I was in grad school. We were finally getting cable installed. Someone called and told me. I didn't believe them. My first day of cable was spent seeing that, sadly, it was true. God bless our country & keep her brave & strong!

Kassie Seitz O'Neal - I was working at Crow Hollow Feed Yard and it came over the radio!

Dee Thompson - Sitting at my apartment in Tyler, Tx. With my roommates skipping school.

Nikki Shahan - I was a senior in high school and when went to 2nd period we watched it on the TV. Still remember the numb feeling and how horrible it was to watch.

Michael McFarland - Just got home after working night shift went to my room and was called in the other room by my mom just in time to watch the second plane hit. I remember crying as the firefighters ran in while the buildings were falling.

Jessica Wright - I was living in Dalhart. I had taken my kids to school and went back home. I had not turned the TV on or anything. Everything was eerily quiet. I could not figure out why there were no cars going by or any sounds. Everything was silent; it was weird. I then heard the sound of sirens, but that was it. I had the feeling I needed to go see what was going on, so I jumped in my car and did not see another car except for the police cars. I went immediately over to my ex-in-laws to feed her animals while they were out of town and I decided to turn on the television. The first thing I saw was the towers burning, and I immediately felt terrified and sick to my stomach. They began showing different videos from people that were at different locations like in other buildings that had started filming thinking that the first plane crash was just an accident, and then screaming in terror after watching the second tower being attacked. My brother and sister-in-law showed up, and I almost lost it. I started crying and getting really scared wondering what else was going to happen. I will never forget that day, ever. I found out that the sirens that I heard and the cops I saw speeding [were going] out to the airport and to shut it down.

Carolina Selvidge - We were in Clarendon.

Joanne Johnsen - I was in my car when it said on the radio. Could/did not want to believe it, got to my sister's house and she runs out tell me we are under attack.

Beth Foster Newman - High School Geometry with Ms. Hill. We all assembled in the auditorium and watched it on the big screen. Didn't seem real.

Shonda Phillips Cummins - I was working at Hi-Plains hospital in Hale Center, Texas. I remember having the TV on and just staring in disbelief and tears in my eyes.

Kyle Allen - I was in District Court in Quanah for a hearing. A lawyer came in and said a plane had struck one of the twin towers. We had no idea at the time that it was a commercial jet. There was a kid in a Cessna that had landed on the White House lawn a week before so we thought it may be a copy cat. When I got home and turned on CNN later in the morning, I was in shock. A friend of mine from Ireland was living in Derry and witnessed Bloody Sunday in 1972. He has lived there in that area during all the troubles, bloodshed, and bombings. He called me and said that they were sitting in the pub and it was hard for him and his friends to grasp the gravity of what had happened. It was then that it really struck me how big the event really was. He had lived through terrorism in his own town for decades, lost friends, lost family, and still he was struck by the enormity of the acts on 9/11.

Trustees approve $5.4M budget

Clarendon ISD Trustees approve a $5.4 million budget last Tuesday, August 30, reflecting a loss of more than $400,000 in state funds.

Superintendent Monty Hysinger said the new budget is about eight percent less than the current budget, and he said falling enrollment is hurting the school district in addition to general education cuts by the state.

CISD also lost more than $100,000 in federal stimulus money which expired.

"We were at 533 two years ago and at 503 at the end of the school year this year," Hysinger said. "Today [Sept. 5] we're at 488."

Hysinger said he thinks the economy and demographics are behind the falling enrollment.

"We lost a large senior class, and our lower grades are tending to be smaller," he said. "I think it's a sign of the economy and the times as people have to look for work elsewhere."

Hysinger said enrollments in Claude and Memphis are up but many districts are down.

To deal with the loss of funds, the school reduced 6½ positions and tightened its belt wherever possible.

Looking to next year, Hysinger says the school will lose another $127,000 in expiring federal funds and state funds will be cut by another $100,000 to $150,000 depending on enrollment.

Trustees adopted the same tax rate as last year, $1.04 per $100 valuation, but that is legally the highest the district can have without going to the voters.

"We've had that rate the last four years," Hysinger said. "We plan to work like crazy to stay at $1.04 next year and see what the legislature does [in 2013]. If we don't get some relief, we may have to ask the voters for some support."

Hysinger said he believes the case can be made that Clarendon ISD is being prudent with its funds while still being progressive with some programs - such as the school's laptop computer initiative - and working hard to maintain its facilities.

"We're positioned as good as we can be," Hysinger said.

Hedley ISD holds line on tax rate

The Hedley ISD Board of Trustees adopted a $1.57 million budget and held the line on taxes when they met last Monday, August 29.

Superintendent Eric Hough said the budget for fiscal year 2011-2012 is about four percent less than last year and deals with the loss of about $70,000 in state funds.

"We'll be using substitutes less and have made some personnel changes - replaced a full time position with a part time, for example - and doing everything we can to offset the losses," Hough said.

A motion to raise the school's tax rate by one cent to $1.07 failed on a 3-3 vote, Hough said. Trustees then voted unanimously to maintain the current tax rate of $1.10 with $1.04 for maintenance and operations and a debt rate of $0.06.

Hough said enrollment is currently at 125 students, which is down ten from the high point last year.

"We've been graduating larger classes than what is coming into the lower grades," Hough said. "I think it just fluctuates, and we're in a down time right now."

Roosevelt's influence on football

By Dr. Gary Scott Smith

For more than a century baseball has been called America's national pastime, and Major League Baseball is flourishing today. However, in recent decades, football—college and professional—has surpassed baseball in popularity and prominence. For many men and some women, fall weekends and football are synonymous. Both the National Football League and major colleges attract huge audiences to stadiums and television sets to watch games, and football fantasy leagues abound. The NFL owners' lockout and potential cancellation of the NFL season caused widespread consternation.

And yet, a much greater "tragedy" was averted in 1905-1906, when President Theodore Roosevelt helped save college football. Although professional football did not begin until the 1920s, about 50 years after the origin of professional baseball, it might not have existed without Roosevelt's earlier decisive action.

People rarely die from playing football today, but dozens did in the early 20th century. However, hundreds of players still experience concussions and major injuries, and a 2009 study reported that retired NFL players 50 and older are five times more likely to suffer from dementia than other Americans. That year, best-selling author Malcolm Gladwell called football "morally unacceptable," and in 2010, "Time" argued that the sport was "too dangerous for its own good." Nevertheless, these assaults on football pale compared to the battle waged by college presidents, professors, and journalists in the late 19th and early 20th century to outlaw the sport.

In "The Big Scrum: How Teddy Roosevelt Saved Football," journalist John J. Miller examines the fascinating early history of college football. He carefully situates his story in the context of the professionalization and commercialization of sports, the influence of "muscular Christianity," and changing views of medicine, nutrition, and physical fitness. Miller explains why college football became so popular by analyzing the contribution of the media; college alumni; pioneering coaches; the widespread belief that football promoted character, leadership, teamwork, and fitness; and the sport's association with toughness and manliness.

Miller focuses on the lives of Roosevelt, Walter Camp, Harvard president Charles Eliot, and their support for, role in developing, or condemnation of, football.

Roosevelt did not play football at Harvard, but he attended many of its football games during and after college. Once the nation's greatest advocate of fitness and "the strenuous life," Roosevelt boxed in college, hunted deer and caribou, climbed mountains, raised cattle in the Dakotas, led a charge of his "Rough Riders" up Kettle Hill during the Spanish American War, played tennis, and as president walked so fast that the Secret Service scrambled to keep up.

More than any other individual, Camp, who either played or coached at Yale from 1876 to 1909—college football's first powerhouse (Yale was 319-14-16 during this period)—is properly called the sport's founding father.

Eliot led other college presidents who teamed with professors and leading muckraking journalists to prohibit football, which they denounced as a frivolous, brutal, and sometimes fatal sport. In 1893, the influential "Nation" magazine warned that colleges were becoming "training grounds for young gladiators," while in 1897 the New York Times castigated football's trend toward "mayhem and homicide." Eliot compared football with prize fights, cock fights, and bull fights, complained that its supporters were either ignorant of its horrid effects or barbarians, and tried to abolish the sport at Harvard.

Supporters countered that football taught competition, resolution, courage, and endurance and channeled "masculine impulses toward productive ends." Roosevelt censured the foes of football as "wrong-headed idealists" who failed to recognize that almost all human endeavors involved risks and "threatened to feminize an entire generation." Only "through hard and dangerous endeavor," which football embodied, Roosevelt asserted, would Americans ultimately achieve "true national greatness."

In October 1905, the president invited the coaches of Harvard (where his son Ted was on the freshman team), Princeton, and Yale to the White House to discuss the need for rule changes to reduce football's brutality (18 players died during the 1905 season alone). The coaches drafted a joint statement declaring their intention to play the game in an honorable, fair, less rough manner. Subsequent meetings of college coaches in late 1905 and early 1906 led to significant rule changes and the formation of the parent body of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. These changes substantially reduced football's brutality, greatly diminished public criticism, and preserved the game.

Miller concludes that although Roosevelt was not "football's savior," he was probably "its most indispensable fan." Although Miller details numerous deaths and serious injuries produced by early football, it is clear that he is pleased that the sport has survived and thrived, as are millions of other Americans. Miller may overstate Roosevelt's role in "saving" college football, but his entertaining book shows that the outspoken, winsome Republican was a major force in the game's continuation and development.

Obamacare is constitutionally infirm

By Dr. John A. Sparks

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that the key feature of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, better known by many as "Obamacare," is unconstitutional.

The "individual mandate" portion of the legislation—a provision which requires all Americans to purchase health insurance or suffer a monetary penalty—was found by the panel in a 2-1 decision to be constitutionally infirm.

The two judges who wrote the opinion, one a George H. W. Bush appointee and the other a Clinton appointee, used 207 pages to analyze the legislative intent of the enactment, to explore the existing pertinent case law, and to carefully consider all the possible arguments for the individual mandate offered by both sides.

In the end, their conclusion was that the question before them was "whether the federal government can issue a mandate that Americans purchase and maintain health insurance from a private company for the entirety of their lives." The answer they gave was a resounding "no," to which every American should respond with an "amen."

The opinion reminds us that the Constitution creates a federal government of numbered or enumerated powers. When Congress acts, it must stay within the boundaries of those powers. In other words, the federal government is not unlimited; it is limited. If Congress exceeds those powers, it is acting unconstitutionally and the Supreme Court must rein it in. Chief Judge Dubina and Judge Hull have done exactly that.

The Obama administration argued for the constitutionality of compulsory health insurance by asserting, among other things, that Congress has broad power to "regulate interstate commerce." True, said Judges Dubina and Hull, the definition of interstate commerce has been expanded, especially from the New Deal to the present.

As the opinion says: "Every day, Americans decide what products to buy, where to invest and save, and how to pay for future contingencies such as their retirement, their children's education and their health care. The government [Obama administration] contends that embedded in the Commerce Clause is the power to override these ordinary decisions and redirect those funds to other purposes."

That is exactly the issue. Will Americans retain the right to decide how much and where they will spend their money for health care? Or will they allow the Leviathan State to usurp that right? If the latter, then they should not be surprised to find that Congress' voracious appetite for control of our daily lives will not be satisfied with health care, but will seek to dictate our choices of schooling, food products, energy, housing, and wearing apparel.

Because the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, by contrast, has held in favor of the constitutionality of compulsory health insurance, thus creating a conflict among the Circuits, this case will undoubtedly be heard by the Supreme Court. There will be no more important decision on the Supreme Court's docket, for the outcome will determine whether we will remain a nation with a limited government dedicated to the preservation of liberty or become a nanny-state with the federal government as our nurse.

Obama needs to grow backbone

By Tom H. Hastings

The Tea Party could have been a tiny afterthought, ridiculed or ignored by the many Republicans who switched to supporting Barack Obama.

President Obama could have been riding high on approval ratings that virtually guaranteed his re-election in 2012.

These two things would have been logical sequelae to his brilliant first term if his first term had featured serious political courage instead of mere charismatic speechmaking. Barack Obama, so far, is a coward, unfortunately, and unfit to really lead. He might have made a fine president in an easy era of prosperity and fat surpluses, but he is a poor choice when it comes to choosing a champion, someone who will fight for the people instead of caving in to the likes of John Boehner, Mitch McConnell, Lindsey Graham and the other crackers. Indeed, Barack Obama could have shown the world how to eclipse the job growth rate of Texas under Rick Perry only by making the environment cleaner, not dirty like Perry, and by improving health care, not making it inaccessible like Perry, and by strengthening education rather than cutting it and dumbing it like Perry.

How? How could our first black president have possibly achieved all those things in the aftermath of a Bush warmaking spending spree that wasted so much of the gas from the tank?

Well, he would have needed to come in swinging, ready to fight, politically, for the people, instead of ready to compromise. I teach in the field of Conflict Resolution and the basic negotiating lesson here is that you always compromise on those items which can be shifted around until everyone gets a fair deal, but you never compromise on basic ethical principle. Barack Obama could have had the principle that the welfare of the people comes before the welfare of the owner class. He could have assembled a scrappy team that knew how to frame legislation that would be radical in its shifts toward benefiting average working people. There are historical precedents, of course, and he could have used them and improved them.

Barack Obama inherited a major economic mess, created for the most part by the Bush regime. When Franklin Roosevelt inherited a disastrous economy created by Republican lack of governmental regulation, he made bold new policy that put millions to work building infrastructure still enjoyed by all Americans and everyone who visits, from park lodges and trails to beautiful bridges. Roosevelt didn't do that by turning over $ trillions to the same financiers who had created the Great Depression. He created government programs that put people to work, making the most of the skills they already had and teaching skills to young ones.

The Civilian Conservation Corps operated from 1933-1942 and focused on providing work for some 2.5 million young unmarried men, on projects that conserved and developed natural resources on public lands. The Works Progress Administration operated from 1935-1943 and provided about eight million jobs, focusing on the goal of one job per family where they had been unemployed for a long period. Updating these sorts of programs to reflect our current gender mores, population growth, and infrastructure needs would be a hard sell to a Republican Congress. But Barack Obama is going to have a harder sell to the vastly hurting and disappointed America electorate if he can't make those sorts of hard sells to other politicians.

Roosevelt gave folks what they needed. His base was so huge he couldn't lose, even though corporate officials dreamt of his ouster. His radical executive moves provide a blueprint and that blueprint has so far been ignored by Obama. His paradigm is closer to Rumsfeldian—privatize everything that the government does in order to massively enrich the owner class—than Rooseveltian, which angered the owner class and saved working families.

Can Obama grow a backbone and save anything at his late date? Stranger things have happened, but so far all his moves have been classic cave-ins to bullies. We usually elect people who will stand up to bullies. We thought he would and, so far, we have been wrong. We'll see how this plays, starting with his upcoming speech. It will either be a revolutionary departure from his corporate bailout model or it will fall flat in failure, and his fate will be sealed.

Don't park in handicapped spots

Friday I was parked between the elementary and the west end of the [Bronco] football field, waiting on my daughter so we could go to the Pep Rally. I was parked facing north; and while I was waiting, a woman pulled up and parked in a handicapped spot facing south. I was so shocked for the simple fact that I know this woman and she nor anyone in her family is handicapped. I am sure she thought she would just be 30 minutes or so.

When I came out of the gym, I looked, and there were a total of four vehicles parked in the handicapped parking that shouldn't have been there or at least they did not have anything stating they were handicapped. Across the way, a vehicle was parked a good way from those spots, and it had handicapped tags.

If I had had my husband with me, I would have been very upset if I had come late and not been able to get a spot closer to the building because of those vehicles. The funny thing is there were plenty of other parking spots available. A couple of them were even closer.

I realize it is so easy to just pull up in a handicap parking spot at school, even when they are all vacant. But you have no idea when someone will need one, even if it is just a pep rally and they won't be long. Please don't take these spots from people like my husband and others. We live in Clarendon, Texas, and we care about others.

Thank you,
Tessie Robinson

CC students enjoy annual ice cream social

We made it through the first week of the semester and are gearing up for more happenings in the coming weeks.

The students moved in last Sunday and were treated to a hamburger cookout that night. On Tuesday they were treated with the annual Ice Cream Social with ice cream and goodies provided by churches and organizations around town. We want to thank everyone who made ice cream or provided goodies for this event. Also, thank you to everyone who came out and welcomed our students to town. They enjoyed the evening, and we sincerely appreciate your generosity.

The volleyball team competed against Ranger last week in their home opener, and the ladies were on the road this weekend in Colby, Kansas for the Colby Community College Tournament. A story on the Ranger game can be found on page five.

The Lady Bulldogs were competing in Vernon in a tri-match at press time and are scheduled to play at the Otero Junior College Tournament in Colorado this weekend.

They will return home on Monday, September 12, to take on Lubbock Christian JV at 7 p.m. in Bulldog Gym. Scores from those games will be in the paper next week.

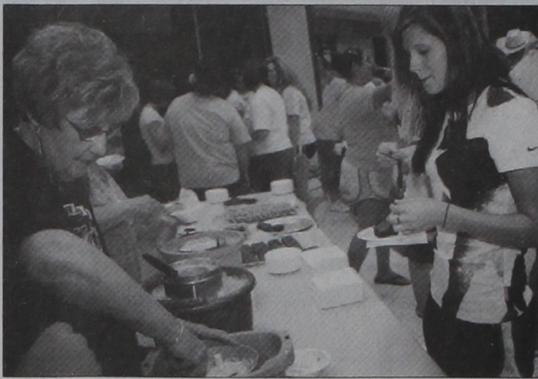

An alcohol awareness program, "Shot of Reality," will be presented to our students next Tuesday night at 9 p.m. in the Bairfield Activity Center.

Plans are coming together for a Constitution Day event scheduled for next Friday, September 16. I'll have more details on this event next week, and it will be open to the public.

to get our students involved in the community this year, and we are looking for places around Clarendon for students to do volunteer work. Contact Jamie Durham at 874-4837 if your organization could use some help or if you have ideas for volunteer opportunities.

Hedley Lions hold annual chicken BBQ

The Lions Club's Chicken BBQ was a big success. If you missed it, you missed some great BBQ Chicken and good fellowship. Bobby Hoggard even made home-made ice cream and sold it for $1.00, and the proceeds went to the fire department. You missed a good time.

On Facebook, the Hedley ex-students have been having an online reunion. The link is "Can't Resist... Remember in Hedley when...". There are some wonderful memories coming through, and I plan on printing them all for the reunion during the Cotton Festival.

If anyone out there would like to send me their memories thru the years at Hedley School, I will be glad to print them for the reunion. My address is PO Box 119, Hedley, 79237 or my email is pkspier1@windstream.net.

The 60th annual Hedley Cotton Festival is going to be here October 8, 2011. If anyone would like to be in the parade please contact Hedley City Hall at 856-5241. After the Hedley Ex-Student reunion on Saturday, October 8, there will be a continuation of the reunion at 7:00 p.m. at Dusty Wilkerson's building a couple of blocks from the school. Bring your oldie music and memories and come on down for some good fellowship and fun.

Also, the Lioness Club is trying to put together a Recipe Book for a fund raiser. We are accepting old and new family recipes. If you have some recipes you would like featured please send them to me. I would like to have the name of the person who owns the recipe and the date of that recipe.

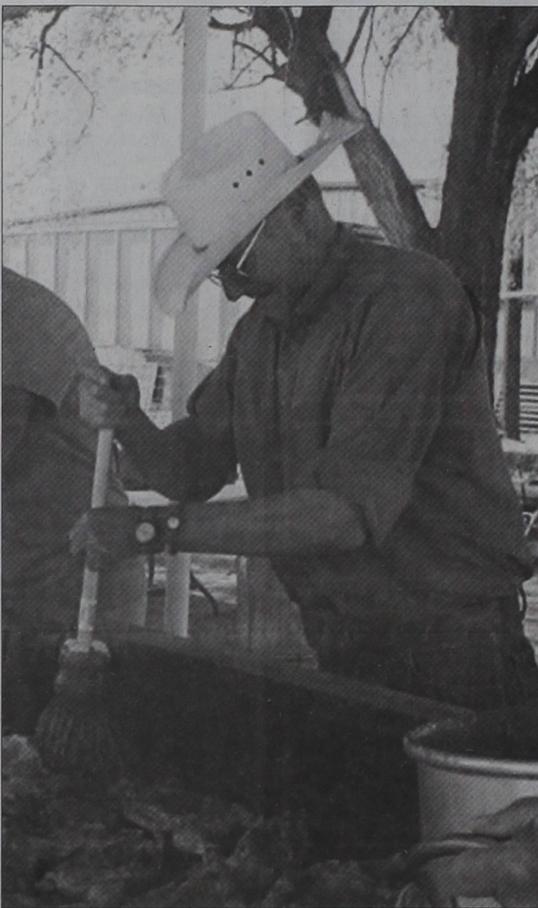

The motto on the front of the recipe book states "Some Old, Some New, but all made especially for you!" We would appreciate any help you would like to donate.

God bless America! Remember 911: May we never forget!

Recipe: Deviled Eggs: Boil your eggs as usual and put the yolks in a bowl. Put a small amount of Sweet Pickle Relish juice to help mash the yolks together, then add the Sweet Relish to taste, salt and pepper to taste, green onion (finely chopped), a dash of mustard (not enough to overwhelm the other flavors) and then use Miracle Whip to finish and then stuff eggs.

Pathfinders march through the 80s

By Jo Shaller

Some dedicated federated club women would credit The Pathfinders withdrawal from that larger group as the reason for a membership and civic participation slump in the 1980s. Perhaps the club just slowed down a bit by the fact of being 70+ years old. We dropped from meeting twice a month to meeting only on the second Friday September through May.

Members called upon husband and other family members for programs. Clarence Hamilton, Bill Watson and Ed Manning appeared before the club members often enough to be considered special members. Along with being a talented musician herself, Mary Bray often invited her various family members to accompany her. Carolyn Hamilton's daughter, Carol Hinton, shared their memories of being part of the filming of the movie Hud in Claude.

Katherine Green was in the catering business in the '80s and graciously served mother-in-law Naomi and her fellow club ladies as well as giving programs. Mary Hazel Van Zandt's son-in-law and daughter-in-law were also talented speakers.

Local townspeople who shared their time and knowledge with the Pathfinders were James Ivey Edwards, Clarendon College's Art Department; Pat Robertson, Paramedics; Delbert Robertson, Home Emergencies; Zell SoRelle, Restoration of Old Houses; Annis Stavenhagen, City Library; Terri Floyd, Self Esteem; Jo Schollenbarger, Surname Etymology; and Bobbie Floyd, Accessories and Scarves.

Oneta Thomas was our club's nominee as an Outstanding Woman of the Year in the Texas Panhandle. She represented us so well at the West Texas State University in Canyon

Most of our meetings were held at the Patching Club House, but members who graciously opened their lovely homes for special occasions were Ruth Robinson, Mabel Mongole, Mrs. Gene Timmons, and Dorothy White. At least two anniversary luncheons were held at Mrs. Bromley's Dining Room. In 1987 the entire club was invited to lunch at the Palo Duro Retirement Village in Canyon. Long time member, Mabel Mongole and her sister Edgar Mae had recently relocated to that family.

Our In Memoriam page lists Mrs. Harriott Kunz, 1982; Mrs. Lilac Lowe, 1982; Mrs. Edith Shelton, 1986; Mrs. Vera McCurtry, 1986; and Mrs. Verdine Herrington, 1989 with the quotation "To Live in Hearts We Leave Behind is Not to Die." Clarendon, their family, and The Pathfinders were fortunate to have these ladies in our lives.

Cub Scouts to hold registration Thursday

Walker wins men's golf game at CCC

By Sandy Anderberg

Jeff Walker shot a net 62 to take first place in the weekly men's game at Clarendon Country Club last Wednesday. Charlie Davis turned in a net 64 for second, and Gene Rogers shot a net 64 for third.

Sherol Johnston shot a gross score of 83 to win the ladies game on Thursday and Ouida Gage won low net with a 69. Tanis McMorries and Gayle Rogers tied for second low net with a 70.

The team of George Leathers, Sherol Johnston, Michael Thompson, Kevin Wood, and Kaleb Wood won the Friday night nine-hole scramble with a seven under par. The other four teams came in at five, four, and three under.

Forty-seven players made up 11 teams in the annual Labor Day scramble. Two teams tied for first place at 13 under par and the winner was decided on a putt-off. The team of George Leathers, Russell King, Dana Dunbar, FG Crofford, and Wes Smith took the top spot. Second place went to Redell Johnston, Bret White, Eddy Eads, and Lacey Eads. Third place went to the team of P.J. Lemons, Virgil Eddleman, Jesse Lincycumb, and Paula Wood.

The men's and ladies club championship will be held this weekend September 11-12. You may call the Pro Shop to enter. The Friday night nine-hole scrambles will continue through September.

Hedley Owls fall to Jayton Jaybirds

The Hedley Owls traveled to Jayton last Friday night to battle the Jayton Jaybirds.

Hedley senior Chris Blackburn recovered a Jayton fumble on the 1st series of the game, but the Owls were unable to take advantage of the opportunity. The Jaybirds got on the board first and took a 7-0, but the Owls struck back with a Nicco Bennett long touchdown run. The extra point missed and the Jaybirds took a 7-6 lead into the 2nd quarter.

The Owls offense never could gain any traction, and the Jaybirds added a late half score to hold a narrow 14-6 halftime lead.

Hedley struck early in the second half as Blackburn punched it in, and Coltin Kingston added the PAT to tie the game up at 14. Jayton added a couple scores in the fourth, and Hedley never could find the endzone again as the Jaybirds stretched the lead to 27-14.

The win moves Jayton to 1-1 on the season and drops Hedley to 0-2. Hedley plays their first home contest of the season this Friday night against the McLean Tigers. The game will kick off at 7:30.

Broncos corral Longhorns

By Sandy Anderberg

Bronco senior Wes Williams showcased his senior skills as he scampered for 175 yards on 24 carries that resulted in two touchdowns in the Broncos' 31-21 blast over Vega Friday night at home in Bronco Stadium.

Rebounding nicely from their one-point loss in their season opener against New Deal, the Broncos racked up 281 total yards in the win and it was the first for the season.

Vega's strength came in the air, but their running game was easily handled by the strong Bronco defense that put up a brick wall.

Vega finished with a minus 22 yards rushing. Offensively, first-year varsity quarterback Chance McAnear hit Diego Santos on a 32-yard pass before half time for a five-point advantage going into the locker room.

The other scores came from Williams when he returned a Longhorn fumble for 18 yards and then ran it in from four yards out. The Broncos' dominated the second half of play with a one-yard score by McAnear and a two-yard run from Williams.

The Broncos will travel to Wheeler Friday, September 9, to take on the Mustangs beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Obesity Medication Improves Quality of Life
 The manufacturer of an experimental/yet-to-be approved weight control/obesity drug, indicates that an improvement in the quality of life following the use of Qnexa (phentermine and topiramate) occurred in those who are overweight and obese. This combination product, which has been investigated for several years, has been shown to reduce weight by as much as 10% to 15% of a person's body weight over a period of 12 months by suppressing the appetite and decreasing hunger. It has also been evaluated as a treatment for sleep apnea. PEAK program begins 2011 jailbird project

Clarendon High School's 2011 Jailbird project is now underway to raise funds for the PEAK Scholarship Program. For CHS Seniors who qualify, a PEAK Scholarship will pay the costs of tuition and fees at Clarendon College after the student's financial aid and other scholarships are applied.

Although Clarendon's elementary and middle school campuses also raise funds for PEAK, the jailbird project is the high school's method of fulfilling its financial commitment. This year's group of jailbirds has recently begun its fund raising and their individual and collective efforts will be show-cased at halftime of the Bronco football game with Sunray on Friday, September 30.

Jailbirds will be locked in a mobile jail and carted to the middle of the field at halftime. Each jailbird will be asked to yell out the amount of money he or she has collected and, if the amount is $300 or more, the jailbird will be set free.

Notice of Public Hearing on Tax Increase

The City Of Clarendon will hold two public hearings on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in the preceding tax year by 0 percent (percentage by which proposed tax rate exceeds lower of rollback tax rate or effective tax calculated under Chapter 26, Tax Code). Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property and the tax rate that is adopted.

The first public hearing will be held on Sept. 15, 2011, at 7 p.m. at Clarendon City Hall, 119 S. Sully Street

The second public hearing will be held on Sept. 20, 2011 at 7 p.m. at Clarendon City Hall, 119 S. Sully Street

The members of the governing body voted on the proposal to consider the tax increase as follows:

The average taxable value of a residence homestead in Clarendon this year is $ 36,716 (average taxable value of a residence homestead in the taxing unit for the current tax year, disregarding residence homestead exemptions available only to disabled persons or persons 65 years of age or older). If the governing body adopts the effective tax rate for this year of $ 0.710431 per $100 of taxable value, the amount of taxes imposed this year on the average home would be $ 260.84 (tax on average taxable value of a residence homestead in the taxing unit for the current tax year, disregarding residence homestead exemptions available only to disabled persons or persons 65 years of age or older).

If the governing body adopts the proposed tax rate of $ 0.710000 per $100 of taxable value, the amount of taxes imposed this year on the average home would be $ 260.88 (tax on the average taxable value of a residence homestead in the taxing unit for the current tax year, disregarding residence homestead exemptions available only to disabled persons or persons 65 years of age or older).

Members of the public are encouraged to attend the hearings and express their views.
