Thanksgiving dinner draws 233 people

Organizers of the fifth annual Community Thanksgiving dinner at the Clarendon School Cafeteria say the event fed a total of 233 people with no charge this year.

Attendance was slightly down this year in terms of participants and helpers, volunteer Laura Paul told the Enterprise, but everyone still had a good time.

All this and much more as The Enterprise reports in this week's amazing edition!

Fund established for Olivas family

A love fund has been established for Stella Olivas and her three children at the Donley County State Bank, and donations are also being accepted at Lowe's Family Center.

Stella had a brain aneurysm last week and is having several medical procedures done to help with swelling and other complications that have occurred. She is a lifelong resident of Donley County, raised in Lelia Lake and now residing in Howardwick with her children.

Stella's friends are asking for help for her with bills and other things her family needs during this holiday season as she is the only source of income they have due to a tragedy that took her husband's life in 2011.

CEDC seeks listings for new web site

The Clarendon Economic Development Corporation is inviting local property owners to list their available commercial properties on the CEDC's new web site. The site is still under development but will include a listing of commercial properties for sale or rent in Donley County for people who may be interested in establishing a business in our community. Interested owners are asked to contact CEDC Director of Tourism & Economic Development Chandra Eggemeyer at 806-874-2421, email her at tourism@ cityofclarendontx.com, or come by the CEDC office in the Mulkey Theatre for more information.

A Truck-load of giving

Hedley National Honor Society sponsored a canned food drive in the weeks leading up to Thanksgiving. Canned food and non perishable items were donated to the Hedley Senior Citizens on Wednesday. The items literally filled up the back of a pickup. Pictured with a small portion of the items are NHS advisor Garrett Bains and NHS members Kassie O'Dell, Kristen Liner, Caden Farris, Emily Blum, Coltin Kingston, and Austin Adams with Hedley Senior Citizen Director Patsy Spier.

"We would like to first praise God for providing us with His resources," Paul said. "We also would like to thank all who took part whether it was serving, fellowshipping, or participating.

Paul said the food was kept in the local area with much of the remainder going to the nursing home.

"We would like to commend those who made sacrifices time, resources, and talent this year. If it were not for the prayers and willing hearts to serve, the Community Thanksgiving would not be able to happen."

The Community Thanksgiving is managed by Christ's Kids Outreach Ministries. For more information, contact Paul at 806-874-2573.

Conservatives talk secession and compromise

The impact of the President Obama's re-election has draw some interesting reactions from the right.

On the most extreme side we've seen people calling for secession with people in almost every state going to the White House website to petition the president to let their state leave the Union. The petition for Texas has more than 117,000 signatures according to our latest information, which seems like a lot of people but really isn't.

Texas has a population of more than 25 million people, so the petitioners are less than one-half of one percent of Texans. It's hard to pin down since polls weren't around back then, but by contrast it is believed that about 40-45 percent of colonists supported the American Revolution. The thing that always

For those who didn't see the movie, Thelma and Louise (played by Geena Davis and Susan Sarandon), while running from the law after giving a wife abuser what he deserved, drove a 1966 Ford Thunderbird convertible over a cliff of the Dead Horse Point State Park, just north of Moab, Utah. I've been there and it is a magnificently spectacularly drop off of several thousand feet. Absolutely nothing could survive a plummet off that cliff.

We the People may have the opportunity to experience a similar economic plummet if the Congress doesn't get its act together and find a way to avoid making the plunge. In their infinite stupidity, the Congress actually decided to make such a possibility feasible in the event that they couldn't get together and do what is best for the United States, which I will concede, difficult to ascertain. Well, surprise, surprise. They couldn't get together to pass the needed legislation, primarily because of different policy positions. Policy is the name we give to our future mistakes. And it does take a certain kind of man to be in politics - a small one, with a small mind. I'm amazed that such little men can make such a big mess. About the only thing they can pass is gas.

investors will lose faith in America's ability to come to grips with its budget fiascos. When they do, there will be a choleric type run on Treasury Bonds, interest rates will spike, and the U.S. economy will plunge back into darkness and despair.

This isn't going to happen. First of all, just because it happened to Greece doesn't mean it will happen to us. In case you haven't noticed, we are not Greece, and it's pretty much impossible to see how this could actually happen in the United States, in light of our situacisely not what we want to see happen in tion.

amuses me about talk of secession is that automatic reactions that range from a) Texas reserved the right to secede as a condition of admission to the Union in 1845, to b) the Civil War and/or the Supreme Court has determined that no state can secede. Neither position is correct.

Owing to its size, the Congressional joint resolution admitting Texas to the Union does allow it the option of dividing into as many as five states, but it nowhere says that Texas can leave. On the other side, the failed War for Southern Independence showed that the north had a greater industrial capacity and military might than did the south, and, as far as the courts go, the federal government is never going to say it is okay for states to break away. But states certainly can secede, and history proves it.

If you read the Declarations of Independence of both the United States and Texas, then it is pretty clear the founding fathers were secessionists. They believed to the death that sometimes people may need to dissolve their political ties with governments that are abusive to their liberties. Indeed, Jefferson wrote that people have not only the right but the duty to throw off their oppressors. However, governments - from London to Mexico City to Washington, DC - never agree that their own subjects can secede.

Of course, just because you can do a thing doesn't mean you should. A free and independent Texas is fun to contemplate. The Lone Star is big enough to take care of itself, and it would be nice to see "a whole other country" that embraced liberty and limited government. Enshrine personal and economic liberty in law, join NAFTA to enjoy free trade with the US and Mexico, and watch a new national economy take off like a rocket. Unfortunately, with the ideologues we currently have running our state, it is very likely that a new Republic of Texas would be plagued by religious intolerance, a mediocre commitment to higher education, and political agendas in school curriculums. We would, however, have a balanced budget and sport very nice highways in Dallas, Austin, and Houston. The question is moot though, because without a groundswell of popular support and the backing of prominent statesmen (who are in short supply these days), secession is an idea that is just never going to get traction. On the opposite end of the spectrum in reaction to the president's re-election, we see continued calls for "compromise" in Washington as the nation inches toward the so-called "fiscal cliff" - a series of automatic tax increases and spending cuts that will take effect in January and possibly throw the economy back into a recession. To that end, we are beginning to see some Republicans breaking away from the "no tax increase" stance, and the emboldened president continues to demonize the right, saying this week that the GOP will ruin Christmas if it doesn't back down. Will it never end? America doesn't have an income problem; it has an expense problem. The government just flat spends too much money, and the best our "leaders" in Washington can come up with is a plan to save $1 trillion over ten years. How does that help us when we have a $1 trillion annual deficit and total debt of more than $16 trillion? We can't tax our way out of that mess.

Can any of you seriously say that the Bill of Rights could get through Congress today? Hell, it wouldn't get out of committee.

Granted, these are difficult times for the deficit critics, who have dominated policy discussion for almost three years. If it weren't for their role in deflecting attention from the continuing problem of an inadequate economic recovery, thereby helping to preserve disastrously high unemployment, one could almost feel sorry for them.

Has anything changed? Actually, for one thing, the crises they predicted keeps not happening. Instead of fleeing from U.S. debt, investors have continued to frantically jump in, driving interest rates to historical lows. What? Yep, 'tis true. And beyond that, suddenly the clear and present danger to the American economy that the Varmint News Channel (Fox News) has been warning us about isn't that we'll fail to reduce the deficit enough; it is, instead, that we'll reduce a still recessed economy.

Even so, the deficit-critics are not throwing in the towel and skulking back into their palatial mansions. Yet another organization has risen from the muck surrounding Grover. Fix the Debt, is advocating for cuts to Social Security and Medicare, all the while making lower tax rates a "core principal." That last part makes absolutely no sense in terms of the organization's stated mission, but makes more sense if you look at the roster of big corporations, from that bastion of integrity Goldman Sachs to the United Health Group, that are involved in the campaign and would benefit from the aforementioned tax cut. Meanwhile, sacrifice is for the little people.

Should we take this latest song and dance seriously? Not really, these people are born-again hypocrites and have been dead wrong on everything so far. The truth is that, at a fundamental level, the crises story they are trying to sell to the great unwashed doesn't make economic sense.

We've all heard the story enough to make us puke: Supposedly, any day now, probably be no risk at all if weren't for the possibility that those pesky Republicans will try to, once again, hold the nation hostage over the debt ceiling.

And no, if the economy is still depressed, the U.S. government printing money to pay its bills will not automatically lead to inflation. 'Tis true that we might experience some inflation some years down the road. That might push down the value of the dollar. However, both of these things would actually help the U.S. economy right now. Expected inflation would discourage corporations and people from sitting on cash, and a weaker dollar would make our exports much more competitive.

In my opinion, it's time for Washington to stop listening to Grover and his disciples of doom and gloom. Actually, we could send them to Antarctic to study pink unicorns. This country is much stronger than we realize. We don't intentionally need to drive it off the cliff, while running from boogie men, like Thelma and Louise. Let's stand pat.

As an aside, Roger wrote a wellwritten, cogent column expressing his divergent view on the impending fiscal cliff. While I don't agree with it, it has much merit and valuable information. The problem with economic theory is that it's nigh impossible to know what is and what is not correct. Who knows, he may be right.

"Compromise," it seems, is still a one-side proposition. There can be no solution to this disaster without reforming – and cutting – entitlements, namely Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid. But Democrats have said those are off limits. The results will be that the Republicans will cave - as they usually do - and America will get a semi-solution that gets us past January. After that, "Dancing with the Stars" will be back for a new season, and politicians will be mostly quiet until 2014.

We can't afford to go over the cliff

You can't turn on the news these days without hearing about the looming "fiscal cliff." The stock market goes up and down daily as some small bit of good or bad news is reported about avoiding the economically catastrophic tax increases and automatic spending reductions that are set to occur at year's end.

I believe Congress and the White House can come together and reach the necessary bipartisan agreements that are needed to avoid the fiscal cliff and put America's economic house in order again. The stakes for our economy and our future are enormous. According to the Congressional Budget Office, the impending tax hikes and acrossthe-board spending reductions in most programs (known as sequestration) would drag America back into recession and push unemployment back above 9 percent. The underlying problem is out-ofcontrol deficits. For the fourth consecutive year, our budget deficit is over $1 trillion. Total debt now exceeds $16 trillion, and our country will be financially crippled if we don't deal with deficits. Several bipartisan solutions have been put forward, including a plan from the President's Simpson-Bowles Commission. The President has said repeatedly that taxes must be raised on those who make more than $200,000. But if

would raise taxes on everyone, the big threat is to middle class families. If action isn't taken by year's end, middle class families, small business owners, and retirees are going to take it on the chin in their 2013 taxes.

Also at risk if we don't avoid the fiscal cliff are my two top tax priorities. First, in states like Texas, which don't have an income tax, the deductibility of sales taxes for federal income taxes assures fairness with other states. If state sales tax deductibility isn't renewed by year's end, millions of Texas taxpayers will see their federal income tax bills swell by an average of $500 next year.

My second priority is renewing tax relief for middle class married couples. Before my amendment was made law in 2001, 25 million married couples were forced into higher income brackets and paid an average of $1,400 more than they would have as single people. This marriage penalty is, well, un-American, and my fix must be renewed. There is still time for Congress and the White House to come together on a comprehensive long-range fiscal plan to avoid punishing tax increases that will kill our weak economy, assure long-term Social Security and Medicare solvency (without cutting current benefits), and lock in prudent spending limits that will pare back deficits. The first step is for Congress and the White House to agree before year's end on a tax and spending framework that will avoid the fiscal cliff and put our country back on the right track.

Meanwhile...

It now appears certain that Barack Obama will go down in history as one of America's great progressive presidents. Like all presidents who fit in this category, he has expanded entitlements, grown the role of the government, become a savior to the down trodden, and has championed social justice.

Presidents like Teddy Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, John F. Kennedy, and Lyndon Baines Johnson have occupied similar statuses in the minds of the American public to the extent that they became known just by their initials - T.R., F.D.R., J.F.K., and L.B.J. As such it would seem fitting that, out of reverence, we henceforth refer to President Obama as simply B.O.

Uncertainty about taxes has small businesses stuck in neutral. Threequarters of small businesses pay taxes at individual rates. Until they know what their tax rates for 2013 will be, the businesses that account for almost two-thirds of new job creation are standing still - and more than 20 million Americans who are looking for work will be on hold, too.

Senior citizens who saved for retirement are at financial risk, too. Taxes on dividends are set for huge increases on January 1 - to as much as 40 percent. Retirement planning and financial security will go out the window for millions who did all the right things throughout their working lives.

Bronco JV falls short against Highland Park

Despite fighting hard, the Bronco junior varsity came up short against Highland Park at home last Tuesday night with the final of 28-33.

A slow start in the first quarter put the Broncos behind, but they were able to stay close to the Hornets. They only trailed by five points at the break, but could never swing the momentum to their side.

"It was the first game of the year and the guys were a little tight and nervous and it showed," coach Alton Gaines said. "Even though we lost the game, the effort and hustle was there, so I was very pleased with that."

Scoring: Ashton Smith 9, Bryce Hatley 7, Zach Cornell 7, and Chesson Sims 5.

The Broncos will travel to Canadian December 11 and will play in their own tournament in Clarendon December 13 and 15.

Broncos swat Hornets in season opener By Sandy Anderberg

Fresh off the football season, the Clarendon Broncos destroyed the Highland Park Hornets at home, 78-49. Good defense and spot-on offense allowed the Broncos to set the tempo of the game and shut down anything Highland Park offered.

The Broncos jumped out to the early lead in the first quarter of play and expanded that lead before the break. But, their third quarter offense was on target and they were able to keep the momentum to get the win. Defensively, the Broncos stopped offensively. Cole Ward nailed two three-pointers and hit several other shots to lead the Broncos with 21 points. Cody Wood was also a workhorse for the Broncos putting in 13, and Adam Topper was solid inside and helped with 10. "I thought we played well for our first game," head coach Brandt Lockhart said. "I was pleased the way we passed the basketball and hustled."

the Hornets and frustrated them Clarendon senior Jentry Shadle during the varsity girls' basketball game last Tuesday.

Lady Broncos roll Highland Park By Sandy Anderberg

The Lady Broncos shot 77 percent from the free throw line in their 84-30 romp over the Lady Hornets Tuesday night at home. Deborah Howard, Jency Burton, and Camra Smith all shot 100 percent from the charity stripe in securing the win.

The Lady Bronco team was on target offensively as they built on their lead each quarter while denying their opponent any points the second quarter of play. They were solid on both ends of the court and by halftime took a commanding lead of 37 points. Senior Jentry Shadle hit four three-pointers, and Ryann Starnes hit one. Three Lady Broncos finished in double figures with Shadle leading the way with 20 and Deborah Howard and Taylor Gaines putting in 15 and 14 respectively. "I thought we played with a lot of energy and were able to get some steals that lead to layups," head coach Molly Weatherred said. "I was pleased with our effort, but we still have a lot to get better at." Also scoring: McKayla Cartwright 9, Smith 8, Starnes 7, Burton 6, and Audrey Shelton 3. The Lady Broncos will play in the River Road Tournament November 29-December 1 and play Groom at home Tuesday, December 4.

Added Benefit of the Flu Vaccine

A Canadian medical research team is reporting a discovery that for one year after people received the annual flu vaccination, their risk of a major heart events, including heart attack, and stroke dropped by as much as 50%. The risk of cardiac death in these individuals was reduced by as much as 40%. This group of researchers presented their findings recently at the Canadian Cardiovascular Congress. In one of two studies presented, over 3,200 individuals were evaluated. Some evaluations in the study went back as far as the 1960s. Scientists who have looked at these study results feel that there may be a link between the flu vaccine and a reduction in inflammatory substances in the body that can inflame blood vessels and trigger heart attacks. This largely unexpected finding may lead to more encouragement by health professionals for older adults and those with a history of heart disease to get their vaccination against the flu each year.

Currently, vaccines for the prevention of influenza (the flu) are produced and distributed each year in the late summer or early fall by FDA approved pharmaceutical manufacturers.

Weather Whys?

Q: What causes frost to form? A: Frost forms when the temperature at the ground reaches freezing, says Brent McRoberts of Texas A&M University. "Very often on calm, clear nights, the temperature near the ground can be several degrees cooler than temperatures above the ground," he explains. "The thermometer might read 34 degrees on top of a roof, but at the ground, it might read 32 degrees. This is because the ground loses heat quickly. So water vapor in the air, because it is so cool, condenses as supercooled dew and then turns to frost and maybe ice. Frost tends to form on glass, such as car windshields or windows, metal or rock surfaces first because these tend to lose more heat quicker. So usually, a car windshield will frost over before vegetation does."

Q: Does frost form quicker in some areas than others?

A: Yes, McRoberts says. "Cold air is dense and it tends to sink," he explains. "On a calm night, cold air will tend to sink into low spots. That's why valleys can be much cooler than the surrounding area because the cold air from the hills sinks into the lower areas. So when the cold air starts sinking, frost will form quicker in the low spots than the high ones. It's not uncommon for some valleys to be cooler by 10 degrees or more, thus more frost tends to form in these low areas. Also, some soil types, such as sand, retain less heat than others, and frost tends to form quicker on these."

Clarendon Church of Christ SAVED BY FAITH ONLY?

(Ephesians 2:8-9) "For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest anyone should boast." Here is a passage, maybe "the" passage that many believe teach that we are saved by faith "only." I emphasize the word "only" so that I might point out that the word is not in the passage above. It is inserted by man. Now, if faith was the only thing the New Testament ever mentioned concerning our salvation, we would have to conclude that faith by itself saves.

Now the passage above tells we are saved "not of works." Yet, read the following passage: (Ephesians 2:10) "For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them." Some would say that maybe the Bible contradicts itself at times. Many would just ignore this passage because it doesn't fit their predetermined understanding of the Bible. That passage plainly teaches that God created some works and we are expected to do them.

There is no contradiction here. In verses 2-8, a different kind of work is considered than in verse 10. In the first passage it is discussing works of merit, and in verse 10 it is speaking of God commanded works that are required. How would I prove that we are saved by faith and by doing the works of God that are commanded? (James 2:24) "You see then that a man is justified by works, and not by faith only." That is the only verse in the New Testament with the words "faith" and "only" together. In that verse it tells us that we aren't justified by faith only. Does that contradict Eph. 2:8-9? No, because Eph. 2:8-9 never said salvation was by faith only. It said we are saved by faith and not by works of merit. If you read verses 8-10 in totality you will see that we must have faith and do the works that God has prepared for us. James simply reiterates the same thing. Faith only or works only won't save anyone. Faith and ignoring the works of God won't get us to heaven and neither will doing God's works while ignoring a strong faith. If we just accept what the Bible teaches us then we are being fully obedient. Why should anyone limit themselves to a partial obedience to the Bible? It will avail us nothing to do so. Matthew 7:21, Jesus said: "Not everyone who says to Me Lord, Lord shall enter the kingdom of Heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in Heaven." There it is!

Ad Sale-abration!

If we do "all" of God's will we can go to Heaven. It isn't a buffet with choices that can be picked over or outright ignored. All commands to the church in the New Testament are to be obeyed to the best of our ability. If we do that we have nothing to fear but every reason to rejoice. I pray that you and I would seek to do all of God's will and that we would all be joined together in our heavenly eternal home, when this life is done.
