CC receives $300k grant

By Ashlee Estlack, Clarendon College

Clarendon College was awarded $300,000 in grant funding recently from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB) to assist the college in expanding the scope and reach of its Developmental Education program.

The new grant funding will assist the college in improving the success of its developmental students by redesigning the developmental program and associated courses at the College. This includes restructuring assessment and placement, improving content and delivery using new technology and software, and transforming academic and career advising.

"We are very excited about this grant," said Clarendon College Dean of Students and Institutional Research Tex Buckhaults. "Through the use of student advocates, a revised advising and placement process, supplemental tutorial labs, and meetings with advisors, we look forward to an increase in the overall success of our developmental students."

"Developmental education has been greatly assisted through this program," CC President Phil Shirley said. "It has long been felt that developmental education needs assistance from as many sources as possible in order to assure that fewer and fewer students are developmentally impaired. I am very grateful for the support that this grant provides and we will not fail to use its resources wisely."

District court hears 3 pleas

The 100th District Court heard three pleas when it met January 22 in Clarendon.

District Attorney Luke Inman prosecuted the cases for the State of Texas with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

A total of $10,000 in fines was assessed as a result of the pleas that took place on January 22. In addition to the fines, the defendants were required to pay a total of $1,712 in court costs and $623.56 restitution.

Emzy Dewayne Harris, 25-yearold resident of Clarendon, pleaded true to allegations listed in the State's Motion to Adjudicate Guilt and was convicted and sentenced to nine years in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

On July 29, 2009, Harris originally pleaded guilty to the second degree felony offense of indecency with a child that occurred on June 1, 2009, in Donley County.

The State filed the motion to adjudicate on January 25, 2012, alleging one violation of community

The Second-Term Blues' Have Begun

By Gene Healy, Cato Institute

Last Wednesday marked the anniversary of President Clinton's historic pronouncement, in the 1996 State of the Union, that "the era of big government is over." "Not by a long shot," President Obama seemed to say in his second inaugural last week.

It was "a surprisingly liberal speech" remarked MSNBC's Chris Hayes: Obama warned us we were in for a "long and sometimes difficult" march toward "sustainable energy sources" and - because this president "reject[s] the belief that America must choose between caring for the generation that built this country and investing in the generation that will build its future" - perhaps a presidential war on math.

Maybe it's the era of "collective action." "Preserving our individual freedoms ultimately requires collective action," Obama insisted - but given his frequent, first-term recourse to government-by-fiat, you could translate that to "expanding my administration's power requires unilateral action."

Obama put it more delicately in an exclusive interview with the New Republic last week, allowing that "a judicious use of executive power can move the argument forward or solve problems that are of immediate enough import that we can't afford not to do it."

On Friday, in Canning v. NLRB the D.C. Circuit begged to differ. Obama had violated the Constitution with recess appointments of three members of the National Labor Relations Board, the court held.

In a tart reprimand, Chief Judge David Sentelle wrote that the president's attempted end-run around the Senate confirmation process, "would demolish the checks and balances inherent in the advice-andconsent requirement, giving the President free rein to appoint his desired nominees at any time he pleases," on the "weekend," over "lunch," or even, as in this case, "when the Senate is in session and he is merely displeased with its inaction. This cannot be the law."

Congress hasn't been nearly so bold in defending the Constitution against the president's various assaults. But at Sen. John Kerry's, D-Mass., confirmation hearings last week, Rand Paul, R-Ky, the Senate's libertarian gadfly, showed once again that he knows how to spoil chummy comity on the Hill:

"I agree with candidate Barack Obama who said in 2007 that the president doesn't have the power under the Constitution to unilaterally authorize a military attack," Sen. Paul told the nominee: "I'd like to know if you agree with candidate Barack Obama or if you agree with president Barack Obama, who took us to war in Libya without congressional authority."

Kerry waffled his way through several weak rationales, finally settling on, "the problem is, it just doesn't work in some instances."

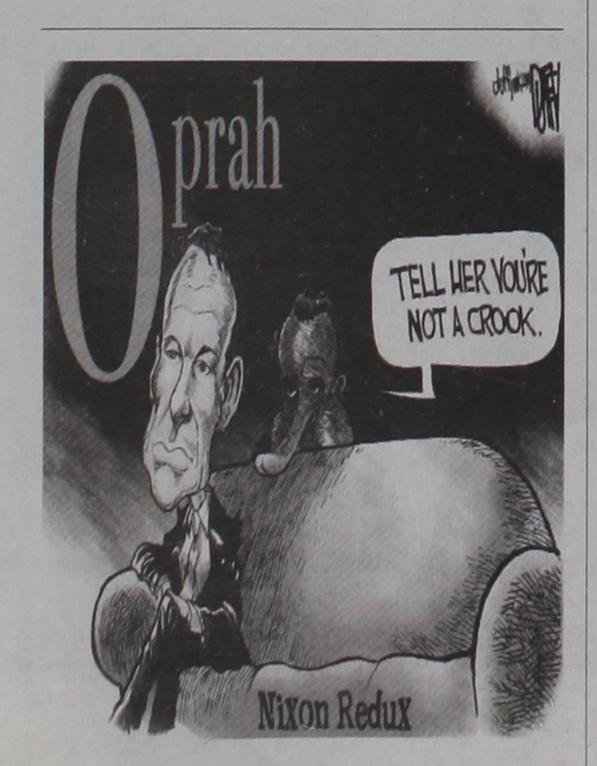

We're a long way from sufficient congressional push back on unauthorized presidential war-making. But Congress is certain to push back hard on Obama's "legacy project," using the bully pulpit to push new gun control legislation. That effort is more likely to result in electoral backlash than in sweeping new restrictions.

Recounting the problems of "lame-duck presidents" in Presidential Studies Quarterly, political scientist David A. Crockett notes that second terms are characterized by "sixth-year curses" and "second-term blues" for reasons ranging from "re-election hubris, administration fatigue, [to] leadership failure." The short honeymoon usually gives way to scandal (think "Watergate, Iran-Contra, the Clinton impeachment, [and] Katrina") and "a second midterm loss that's usually worse than the first."

In the run-up to Obama's re-election campaign, we saw a rash of speculation about the president's mood. "Does Obama really want to win?" the Washington Times asked; "Is Obama Depressed?" a Fox News panel debated on "The Five."

I'm not much for long-distance psychoanalysis, but if this president does tend toward the melancholy, before long, he's really going to need a hug. The "second-term blues" are on their way.

Do you know all of CC's benefits

the quick,

the dead,

& fred

Over the past couple of weeks, I've been highly engaged, using my sleuth-like (not sloth-like) capabilities to discover and evaluate interesting new opportunities for the lucky citizens of Donley County. I'm talking gem-like opportunities, as in the Pearl of the Panhandle, Clarendon College. In case you haven't noticed, Clarendon College is currently the single largest driver of economic and cultural growth in Beautiful Downtown Donley County. I've discovered that there are additional benefits offered by CC that I was unaware of.

Consider, for example, the Clarendon College cafeteria. It is not solely for the use of the students and staff of CC, it is also available to us, the general public, provided of course that we have money. However, it does not require a large amount of money; say $4 for breakfast, and a little less than $7 for lunch and dinner. Breakfast and Sunday Brunch are buffet style, meaning you can go back for seconds as often as you wish, within reason - lest you inadvertently add too many dimples to your backside.

Two weeks ago, I entered the cafeteria stealth-like, to check out the food, which I had heard from multiple sources was very good. I can report that not only is it good, it is plentiful, and it is presented in a pleasing manner. Furthermore, the people - folks like Katrina, Mandy, Linda, Beth, and Cissy - serve it with style and grace - all decked out with fetching smiles.

This past Sunday, I went back to check out the Sunday Brunch, not as covertly - mainly because I knew many of the Sunday patrons. Yet again, the food was excellent, including a salad bar with fresh ingredients. As usual, seconds and more seconds were available, depending upon how many dimples you can tolerate.

HiGH!

While dining leisurely on the tasty fare, I took the liberty to chat, as I'm prone to do, with a few of the patrons, both students and local citizens. When by fred gray asked why they choose to eat at the college, one of my friends replied that the food is good, the facility is clean with a nice ambience, and the price is right. Also important, she added, the company was excellent. It seems that our more experienced citizens enjoy being around the college students, watching the festivities as the students interact while eating. The Sunday crowd was about 2/3 college students to 1/3 local citizens - a nice mix. The morning breakfast crowd was mostly college students and staff, with a few locals scattered about for flavor. The early morning dining was considerably less frisky than the lunch and dinner crowds.

After eating, as you exit the cafeteria if you proceed due west, you will come to a running track, which is also handy for walking off those pesky dimples. I field tested the track and it worked just fine, for a while anyway. After a few trips around the oval, it seemed like the grade of the track elevated with each lap thereafter and I soon felt like I was running uphill.

Located due north of the cafeteria is the CC library, also open to the public. If you have a local library card you may also use the college library, including the computer room. I had the opportunity to chat with two of the librarians, Pamela Reed and Annis Stavenhaven, as they guided me on a brief tour of the library, tained.

The library offers a veritable cornucopia of knowledge and wisdom, requiring only a modest investment of time and focus to reap an invaluable abundance of information. The library includes a great room, chock full of computers for online study and browsing.

Next door, on the other side of a nice plate glass wall, is the magazine reading room, filled with reading material for every taste, even including tea party types. The remainder of the floor space is used to display a fair assortment of books, covering pretty much every subject known to man. Then again, I guess if there was a subject unknown to man, there probably wouldn't be many books written about it.

The library hours are fairly generous, closing each evening at 10 p.m., excepting Wednesdays, when it closes at 9 p.m. The main thing I've heard from the students I've talked with is that they wish there were more things to do locally. If the students don't have adequate leisure time activities, perhaps they ought to at least be able to spend quality time in the library edifying their brains. Why not have the library open 12 hours a day, seven days a week, like they were when I was a university student?

Clarendon College not only adds to our economic bounty, it also provides us with unique opportunities to learn. The college offers us many opportunities to improve and enrich our lives; with good food, enhanced learning activities, exciting sports and rodeo events. I want to encourage everyone to spend a little time getting better acquainted with Clarendon College. Let's all get to know our college students better by reaching out to them and participating in more activities. It's great fun!

Reader urges selling spring water

In the January 17 edition of THE Enterprise, your column was about home grown products. I would like to add water to that list.

I have addressed this issue in the past, and it was ignored. Donley County has an abundance of natural spring water gushing from the ground. We have the third largest natural spring in the state. All we have to do to claim this water, according to the State Water Board, is build a reservoir before the water gets to the Salt Fork of the Red River. When the water reaches that point, it belongs to Oklahoma. Why are we giving our water away?

A dam could be constructed somewhere past the point where Skillet Creek, White Fish Creek, and Rock Creek run together before reaching the Salt Fork. It wouldn't have to be very big, just enough to put in a pump station and water bottling plant. This would create some jobs in the county and help Hedley grow.

Just an idea that we should take advantage of before another county or city takes it. The states owns the water when it comes out of the ground and could award it to any municipality that claims it. What a shame if some city down state trucked our water away.

Trees for sale at the Donley County SWCD

The Donley County Soil and Clarendon is taking orders for trees.

It is common knowledge among farmers and gardeners that windbreaks have a positive effect on crop growth. By retarding the wind, these barriers start a chain of favorable growing conditions. For instance, less moisture is lost through evaporation, the temperature is lowered, and there is an increase in the rela-·tive humidity.

According to a report by the US Department of Agriculture, a mature windbreak will cut a 30 mile per hour wind to less than 15 miles per hour, greatly reducing its power to erode soil and damage crops. Furthermore, the wind is slowed down wind for a distance of 15 to 20 times the height of the trees.

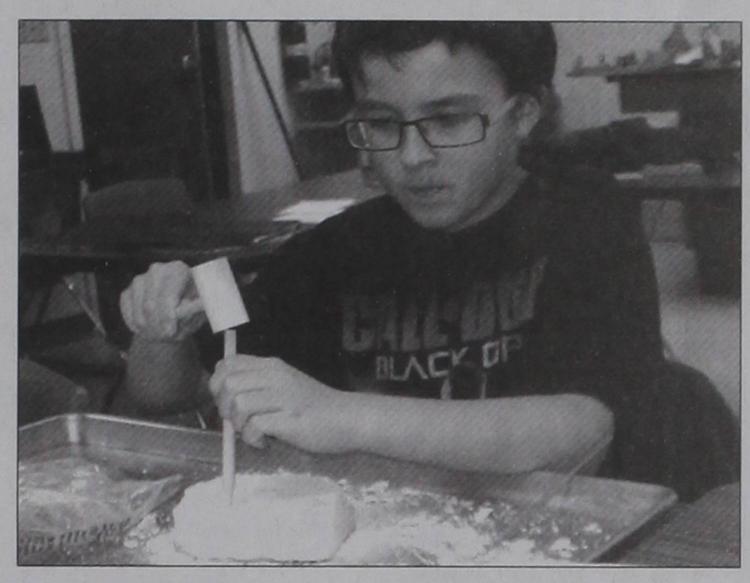

In addition to benefiting crops, windbreaks also reduce heating and cooling costs for homes and buildings. In fact, a study by researchers at Kansas State University indicates that an unprotected house exposed to 20-mile-per hour winds requires almost 21/2 times as much heat as the same house exposed to a five-mileper-hour wind under identical temperatures.

Windbreaks also increase comfort around feedlots, barns, and water tanks and are effective n sheltering livestock on the range or pasture.

Clarendon Church of Christ NAVAJO MISSION WORK

The Clarendon church of Christ is involved in the Navajo Reservation, spiritually speaking. It is literally another country within our country. The Navajo reservation is in 4 states primarily. It is in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah, basically the four corners area.

Our forefathers did the Indians no favor settling them in this area. Much of it is poverty stricken. The Navajo Indians do not draw a government stipend or check every month just because they are Indians. Much of the land they inhabit is worthless. The minerals and metals are owned by the U.S. government so the Indians have no access to the money from that. Worse, the water under the ground they live on is owned by the U.S. government and much of it is sold and piped away. Some of the communities have to haul water from community spigots to their homes for drinking, washing, flushing, etc. Needless to say, the Indians are often living in 3rd world country conditions.

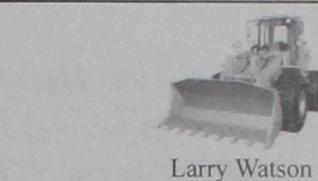

Our congregation is supporting two full time missionaries and help with a few more as we are able. We also help with projects like building new classrooms or sheds. We have gone out and reroofed a church building. We take clothes to the reservation. The clothes are often "door-openers" as they are much needed.

The Navajo are people who are not easily converted to Christianity. For one, they are a matriarchal society. Unless "grandma" is converted, you have a tough time with anyone else. She holds much power in each family. To be shunned from her table is a big deal. Also, the Navajo has very different beliefs. They believe that their people came from one big hole in the ground. They won't build a door facing north as that is considered evil. Some are heavy into the peyote religion. A medicine man will get people high on peyote and give them "interpretations" of their "dreams" which are really hallucinations caused by the plant. You can see how tempting that religion would be to some. It was actually introduced to the Navajo by the Apache.

The leadership of our congregation decided instead of spending our tréasury to do mission work in a country 10,000 miles away, why not right here? It is close enough that some of us get to go out several times a year to see how the work is going. It promotes accountability and encourages involvement from our members. Maybe in the future when we have some of our Indian brethren down, you might like to meet them. I will post that when possible in the Enterprise. Also, from time to time we host the annual American Indian Mission seminar, you might like to come and meet the missionaries from all of the works.

I am proud of what our little church is involved in not only locally but throughout the world. I pray that we can advance God's Kingdom wherever we can.

Drug Combo for HCV Infection in Children

A recent study published in the Journal of Clinical Infectious Diseases reported that children and adolescents infected with hepatitis C virus (HCV) can be safely and effectively treated with peg-interferon (PEG-IFN) in combination with ribavirin (RBV). Hepatitis C is an infectious disease that primarily affects the liver. It is caused by the HCV virus. In some cases, their infection will go on to develop liver failure, liver cancer or life-threatening esophageal and gastric problems. The PEG-IFN and the antiviral drug RBV are the drugs of choice for the treatment of HCV. The combination of both drugs is highly used for the treatment of HCV infection in adults. Data supporting the use of this combination in children has been sparse.

In this study, 8 clinical trials that evaluated a full course of treatment with PEG-IFN alpha-2a or alpha-2b and RBV in children and adolescents were included. The results showed that the drug combo was effective in treating children and adolescents. In addition, the combination was considered safe. Few treatment discontinuations occurred.
