Water project progressing

The process of bringing groundwater to the Greenbelt Water Authority system is getting closer to reality this week as contractors began the process of laying pipe from Clarendon to the authority's filter plant.

Greenbelt General Manager Bobbie Kidd said Monday that the five wells in north Clarendon have all been tied together, and workers were busy laying the main line on North Sully Street that will carry the city's groundwater to the plant.

Most of the work on the wells has been completed, and the groundwater district is on board with the plan, Kidd said.

It has taken several months to bring the old wells back online since the city stopped using them in 1968, after relying on them for decades. At least one well is documented to have been dug in 1887, the same year Clarendon moved to its present location.

As part of the modern project, the wells were re-drilled and cased and tied together. Kidd said he expects to be pumping in three weeks or a month, and the groundwater will be blended with surface water from Lake Greenbelt in an effort to ease pressure on the reservoir, which has been hard hit by the ongoing drought and two summers of intense heat.

"It's still only supplemental water," Kidd said, noting that Greenbelt has plans to develop four additional wells on its property on Kelly Creek.

"We'll have a public hearing about that in May at the groundwater district," he said.

Greenbelt remains on the state's "six-month watch list" where it has been since last summer, Kidd said, and the water authority is moving forward with plans to secure additional water rights for the future.

A $10 million application has been made to the Texas Water Development Board's Revolving Fund to develop a project to bring water from the north, but Kidd said the authority won't know the success of that application until late July of this year. In the meantime, Greenbelt is pursuing other funding sources for that project.

CC Regents okay purchase of Amarillo property

Clarendon College Regents last week gave administrators the green light to make an offer on an Amarillo facility that could house a cosmetology program in that city.

CC President Phil Shirley said Tuesday that the college hopes to hear back from the property's owners in about a week.

"I'm happy to see this project in Amarillo moving forward," Shirley said. "It will represent a momentous change for us in the way we have done business in the past, and the cash flow will benefit Clarendon and our other locations."

During the regents' regular meeting last Thursday, board members again discussed the risk and promise associated with CC venturing into Amarillo. With the blessing of Amarillo College, Clarendon has spent several months considering the expansion and development of a program that CC officials believe could attract as many as 70 students.

Frank Phillips and South Plains colleges have been seeing huge growth in their cosmetology programs, and CC believes - even at two-thirds of the expected enrollment - an Amarillo-based cosmetology program could pay for its initial start-up cost and become an important source of revenue that will benefit the Clarendon campus.

"This will be a 'cash cow,'" Shirley told the board. To which Chairman John Howard responded, "Well, we do have a reputation for judging livestock."

The cost of acquiring and renovating a building in Amarillo is estimated at $400,000, and CC has to move quickly to be ready for the state to inspect the facility after July 1 and for classes to begin this fall.

In order to limit the college's risk, CC is pursuing a lease-purchase option on a facility that was looked at by several college personnel and two members of the board.

CC Vice President Ray Jaramillo said new programs are also being developed in Clarendon as well as Pampa and Childress, and he updated the board on developments with a new Commercial Driver's License program being developed in Gray County through a partnership with Haliburton. He also said CC is moving forward with a welding

Three 'die' in mock accident

Three students "died" this week and a fourth was "arrested" and facing a long jail term when the Clarendon High School Student Council staged a mock accident for a "Shattered Dreams" program.

Classmates and teachers on Monday morning observed the aftermath of the imaginary accident in which group of drunk students ran their vehicle in to the back of another student who had not been partying. The innocent student driving the second car, portrayed by junior Darbe Woodard, had her arm severed, was partially ejected, and was pronounced dead at the scene.

One passenger of the first car, portrayed by senior Trajen Johnson, was "killed" on impact, and the other passenger, played by Rolland, was loaded into a waiting LifeStar helicopter but later "died." Senior Elizabeth O'Rear played the drunk driver and was freed from her vehicle by emergency personnel and then "arrested" and charged with two counts of intoxicated manslaughter.

Student Council member Samantha Sanderson told the Clarendon Lions Club Tuesday that the program had been in the works since October and was intended to get students to think about how what they do can affect people.

"Hopefully it showed kids that your actions have consequences and that it might not only affect you but also other people," she said.

All four student actors were then secluded from their families and friends for the rest of the day and overnight at the First Baptist Church to drive home the impact that they were now "gone" from the student body. Their parents wrote letters to them, and then they wrote letters back to their parents.

On Tuesday morning, Pastor Lance Wood then led a "memorial service at the CHS Auditorium that featured a presentation of photos of the "lost" students. The four students then rejoined the student body, and Rolland read the letters from and to his parents.

"It was a very moving time," Sanderson said.

Participating in the "Shattered Dreams" project were the Clarendon Volunteer

Fire Department, Associated Ambulance Authority, North West Texas Hospital's LifeStar, the Texas Department of Public Safety, the Donley County Sheriff's Office, Robertson Funeral Home, First Baptist Church, the high school and junior high student councils, the CHS FCCLA, the CHS Junior Historians, and the CHS National Honor Society.

Mulkey to be lit up at block party

Mark your calendars this Memorial Day Weekend for the Mulkey Block Party to be held Saturday, May 25, 2013.

The 1946 Mulkey Theatre will be the center of attention as the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation formally lights up the neon in a celebration of the completion of Phase One renovations to the theatre.

"Insufficient Funds" of Amarillo will set the mood for the evening, playing music from 6 to 9 p.m. and plans are being made for several fun activities to be held during the evening. Kids' activities will be set up by 5 p.m. and local food booths will be available for $20 per space.

A classic car show and a Harley-Davidson show are also in the works, and folks will be encouraged to bring their lawn chairs to sit and enjoy the music and the celebration.

Interested business and organizations can also sign up now to sponsor Mulkey commemorative T-shirts for $50 per sponsor.

The next step to "Bring Back the Mulkey" will be to undertake interior renovations, but officials plan to have the theatre itself open during the Block Party for tours so folks can have a peek inside the building before work begins.

Watch the Enterprise for more information in the coming weeks. To sign up for booth space or T-shirt sponsorships or for more information, call the Clarendon Visitor Center inside the Mulkey Theatre at 806-874-2421.

CISD moves closer to tax rate election

Clarendon ISD Trustees reviewed a timeline that will lead to an election seeking an increase in the district's property tax rate from $1.04 per $100 valuation to $1.17 when they met in regular session March 21.

Although the board still has not taken any formal action on the subject, trustees are expected to propose the $1.17 tax rate at a called meeting on Monday, April 15, which will trigger the timeline, leading to a formal adoption of the tax rate on April 26 and causing a rollback election that will be held on Saturday, June 1.

CISD officials say raising the tax rate above the $1.04 limit set by the state will help the district cope with reductions in state funding by bringing in about $350,000 in new revenue. If the $1.17 rate is proposed on April 15, the district will hold a public hearing on the rate on April 26 prior to adopting it.

In other school business, the board accepted a bid on tax delinquent property in Howardwick, for $4,161, and listened to several administrative reports.

After meeting in closed session for an hour and a half, the board accepted letters of resignation from two retiring teachers - Lyndal Gillen and Katherine Williams - and approved the superintendent's recommendations to offer the following contracts:

One-Year Term Contracts of Employment to the following professional support staff: Melody Hysinger, Sharon Elam, Ken Baxter, and Linde Shadle.

One-Year Non Chapter 21 Contract of Employment to the following professional support staff: Michael Keough.

One-Year Probationary Contracts of Employment: Mason Cargile and Leslie A. White.

A careful look at homicide and guns

Since the horrible school shooting in Connecticut, much has been said and written about guns, and their constitutional protection. Their availability to Americans has been debated, argued about, discussed, and cussed, with little effect on current gun laws. This is good. The last thing we need is a bunch of knee-jerk reactions that result in poorly thought out and poorly constructed new laws needlessly going on the books.

David Brooks, the conservative op-ed columnist of the New York Times recently wrote a column that sheds an insightful and cogent light on the role that guns play in killings, whether single homicides or mass murders. His insight merits sharing.

Brooks suggests that the recent shootings are not the result of our gun ownership; in fact guns are not the ultimate culprit in those vile murders. He adds that there are other considerations, referred to as a "killing chain" that is involved in these horrific acts of depravity. In short, there is a complex series of links leading up to the homicides.

The killers come from different neighborhoods, family backgrounds, cultures, gangs, and mental states. Mr. Brooks suggests that we need to consider how the killers got into crime, prior arrests, prison time, drug use, etc. We need to consider how the murder weapon was acquired, what sort of police presence there was, and what incited the murders.

In other words, we need to consider a long, complex killing chain, an integrated series of links leading up to the killing. Brooks adds, "Over the past 25 years, American authorities have tried to interrupt that killing chain at almost every link except one. In a hodgepodge but organic manner, there have been vast changes in proactive policing, mentoring programs, gang eradication programs, incarceration rates, cultural attitudes, and so on. The only step in the killing chain that we haven't really touched is gun acquisition."

He adds that federal gun laws have become more permissive over the last several years. Even though these laws have become more lenient, murder rates have decreased significantly over the same period of time. So, it can't be the increased availability of guns. So, what is it? According to Brooks, the de facto approach - influencing the entire killing chain except gun acquisition - has nonetheless contributed to a phenomenal decline in gun violence. He adds that murder rates across the land have fallen by 50 percent, back to levels not seen since the administration of John Kennedy. He adds, "Thousands of people are alive today because homicide rates dropped so precipitously."

The recent massacres have resulted in yet another debate about gun violence. If our society was purely rational, which it isn't, this debate would have started with a series of questions: What is the reason for the dramatic drop in gun violence? What can we do to continue lowering the murder rate even more? Brooks suggested that these general questions would have led to a series of more specific questions about police procedures, probably the most direct way to prevent shootings. How can we focus police resources on those areas that host most of the killings?

In a recent study, Robert Maranto of the University of Arkansas pointed out that New York police chiefs and precinct leaders are held accountable for changes in the murder rate in their areas. New York has seen an 80 percent drop in the homicide rate. Why aren't police officials in other areas of the country held to similar requirements?

These questions are rarely asked by politicians and gun opponents. Instead, they focus on just one area of the killing chain, the acquisition of guns. People focus on guns because they are easy to blame, even though they are not the root cause of these shocking killings. People are uncomfortable with the human element in killing so they focus instead image of the gun as the culprit, rather than the frightening idea that some people can be so cold blooded and cruel.

According to David Brooks, "The reality is that gun acquisition is probably the link on the killing chains least amenable to influence." He adds that we live in a country that already has about 250 million guns floating around. And, it's almost impossible to retroactively get a grip on them. There is no way we could, or should, take them out of circulation.

Past attempts to control guns have not even slightly reduced gun violence. Brooks reminds us that the Gun Control Act of 1968, the Brady Act of 1993, and the Assault Weapons Ban of 1994 all failed to reduce homicides significantly. Actually, a 2002 study by the American Medical Association found that the Brady Law did not lead to a reduction in the overall murder rate.

According to Brooks, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention did an analysis of 51 studies of a series of gun control regulations. It could not find evidence to prove the effectiveness of gun control laws. A 2012 study conducted at Arizona State University and the University of Cincinnati found that waiting periods and background checks had little statistical effect on gun crimes.

I'd start with universal background checks, even though it alone will not do much good. Drug dealers are not going to out of state gun shows to by their weapons. Even so, those checks are a good first step in a series of policies to reinforce gun trafficking laws and reassert police control over the areas of concentrated violence, the metropolitan areas.

Brooks concluded, "We have a successful history of reducing gun violence by spreading efforts across the killing chain. We have a disappointing history of trying to reduce violence with a gun-obsessed approach. Let's focus on what works."

We must focus on changing behavior rather than trying to control gun acquisition, which does not work.

It's about the people, not numbers

During his 2012 budget negotiations with House Speaker John Boehner, President Obama famously declared that "we don't have a spending problem."

This past week, responding to a question about our $16 trillion national debt, he told ABC News that "we don't have an immediate crisis." When asked in the same interview if he would offer a budget that would eliminate the deficit, his answer was a blunt, unequivocal "no."

texas times by sen. john cornyn

For their part, Senate Democrats have returned from a four-year budgeting hiatus to unveil a plan that would raise taxes by up to $1.5 trillion, increase spending by 62 percent, and add $7.3 trillion to a national debt that already eclipses our economy. Not surprisingly, their budget does not balance.

Since President Obama took office, his tax-and-spend policies have given us $6 trillion dollars in new debt, chronically high unemployment, rising insurance premiums, and a credit-rating downgrade. These are the policies that gave us a failed "stimulus" program and a government takeover of our health care system that continues to discourage job creation. With the federal government's unfunded liabilities surpassing $100 trillion and annual interest payments on our debt exceeding $200 billion, we simply cannot afford more of the same.

Make no mistake, this debate is not just about numbers in a ledger. It's about people. It's about the longevity of a great nation and its ability to care for its citizens. As a B-17 pilot in World War II, my father fought to ensure that his children and grandchildren could grow up in a country of prosperity; a country where hard work is dignified and opportunities abound for all. He and countless other members of that greatest generation left their country better than they found it. As I look to his grandchildren - my two daughters - I cannot help but wonder if they and their children will be able to say the same of my generation.

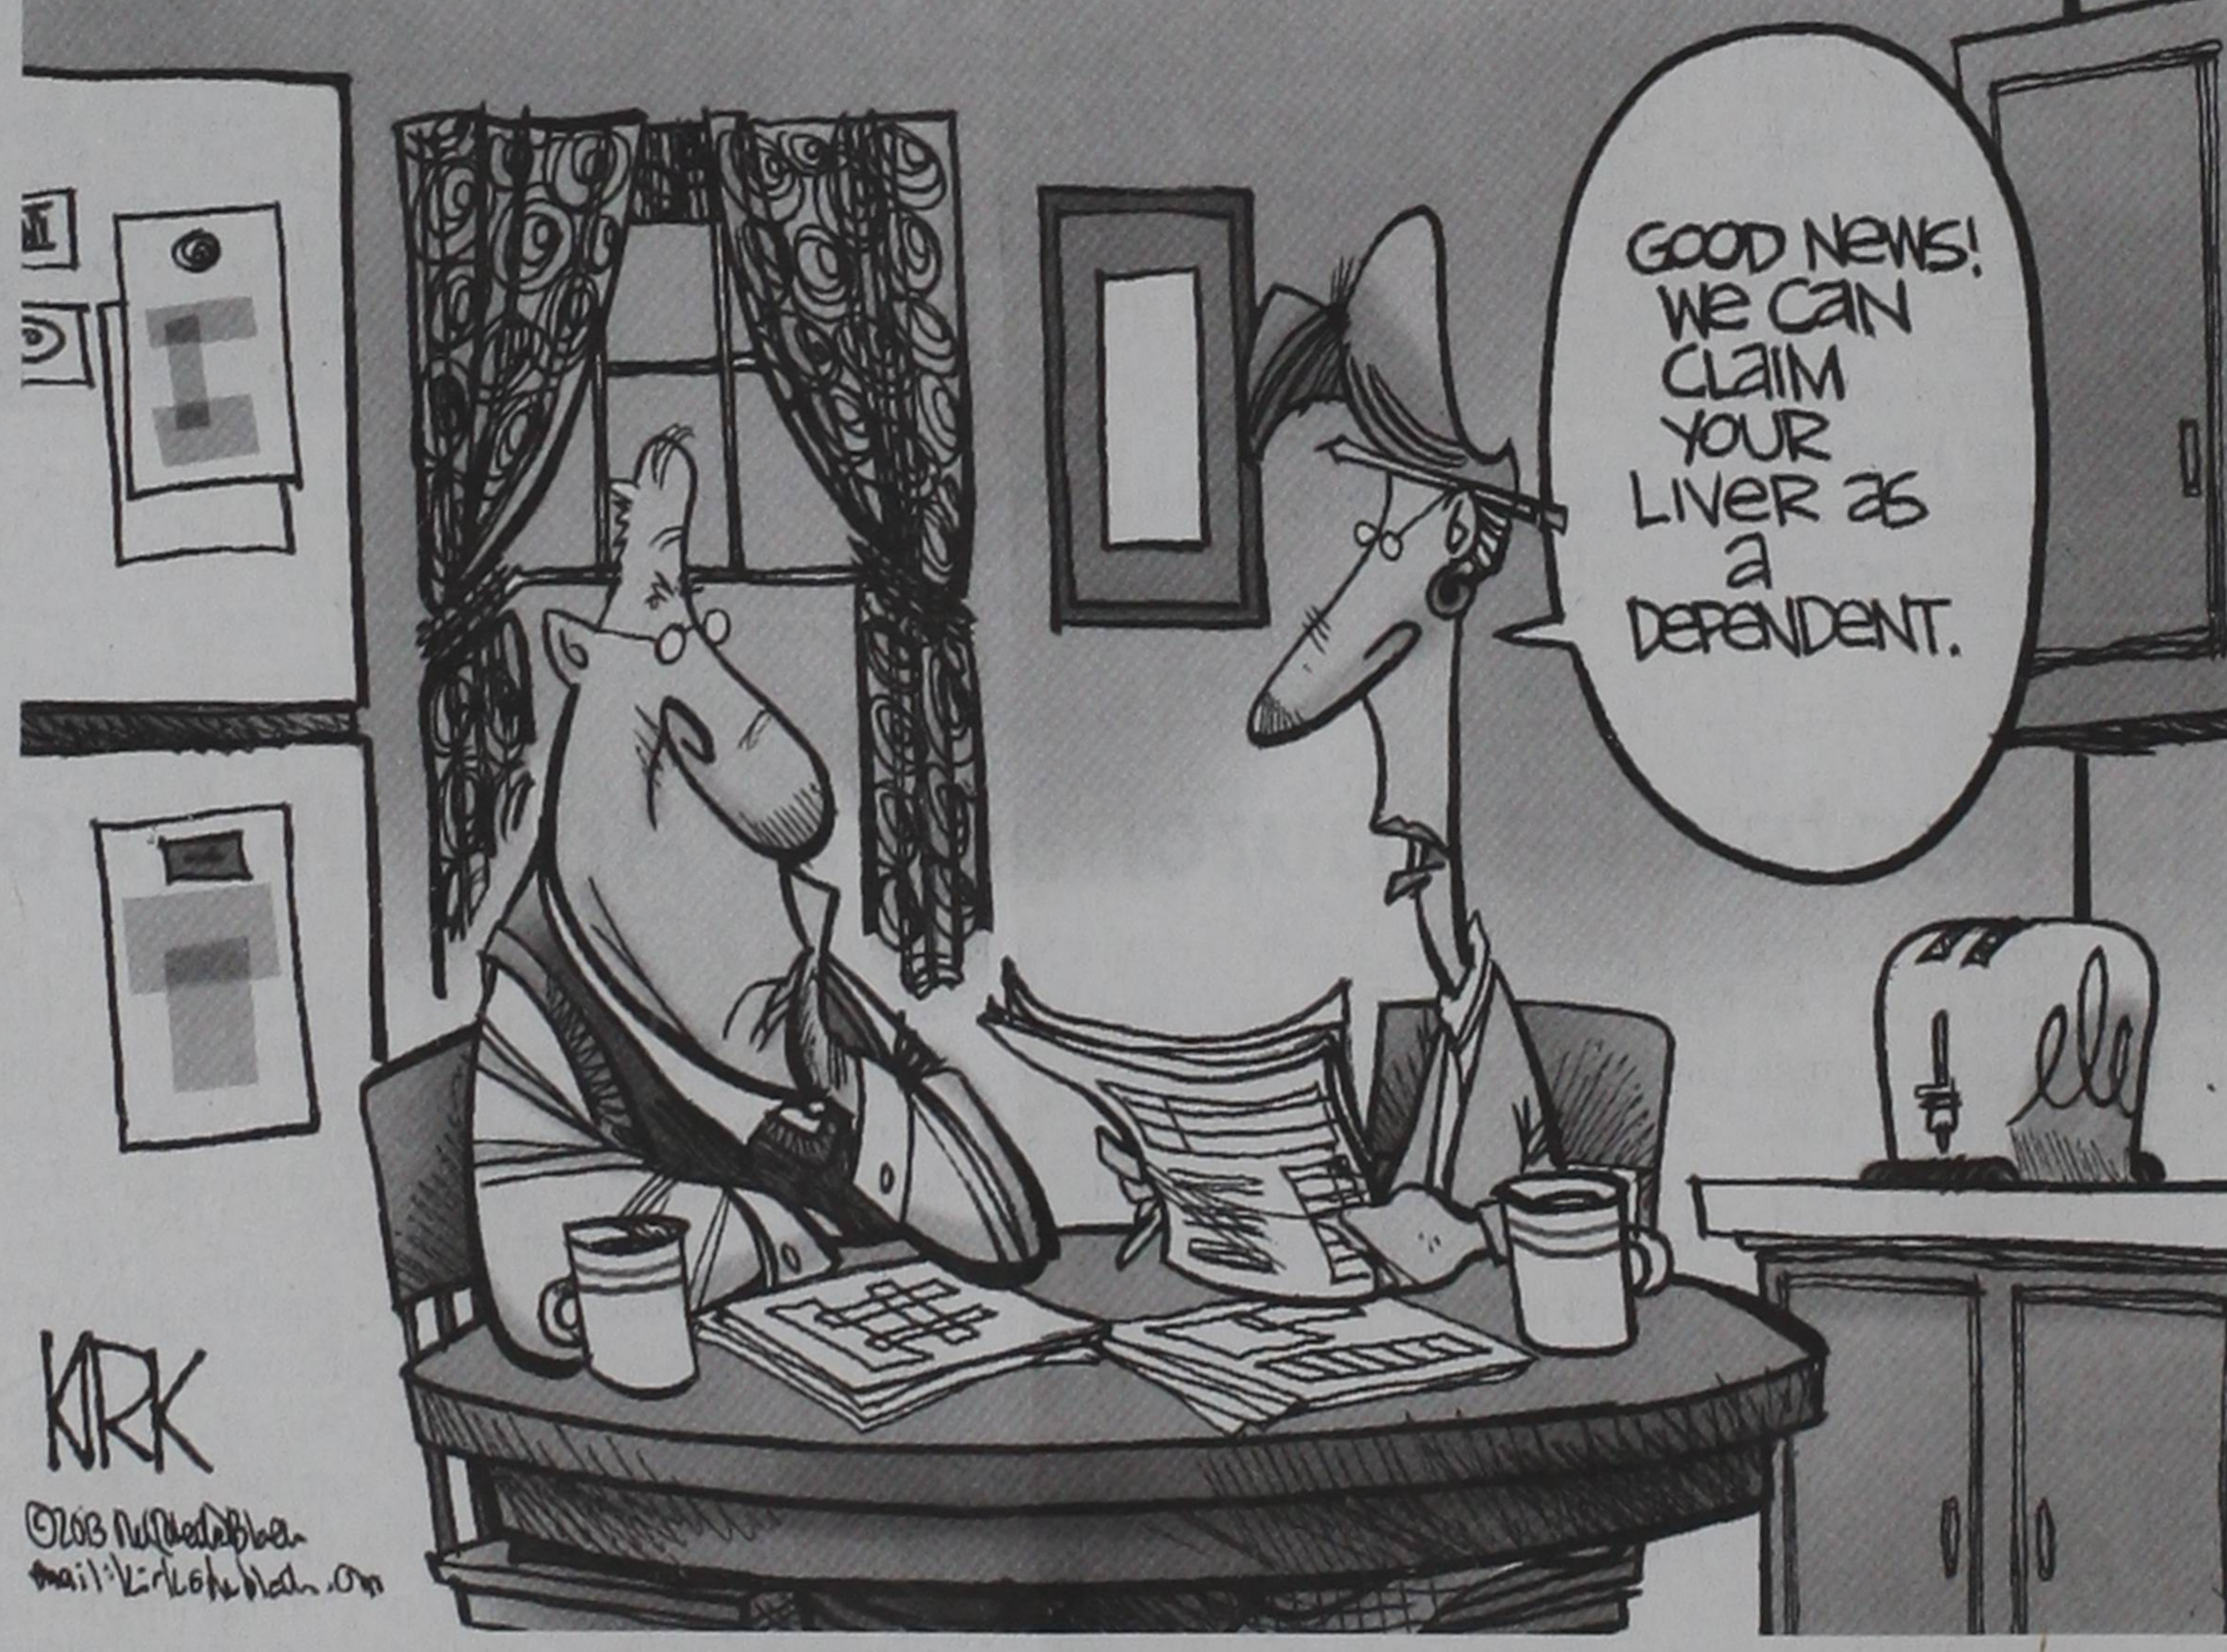

Every dollar this administration taxes and borrows is a dollar ransomed from the prosperity and well-being of future generations. This has created a growing economic burden that threatens the programs that Americans rely on: the Social Security checks that keep the heat on in the winter; the Medicare payments that bring comfort to the elderly, and the Medicaid services that assist our citizens who need their country's help the most. If we continue down the President's path, these programs will not exist when the children and young adults of today enter retirement.

As a parent, I want nothing but the best for my children. As an American, I want to see my country prosper and protect her citizens. As a senator, I cannot stand by and watch this administration wage war on America's youth.

This is why I have sponsored a Constitutional amendment to require the federal government to balance its budget. We must ensure that our country lives within its means, lest we rob future generations of the quality of life that is an American's birthright. This is a moral obligation, and if we fail to meet it we will have spoiled the gifts of American prosperity that have been nurtured and handed down to us, generation after generation.

The Balanced Budget Amendment, which is backed by every Republican senator, is a sincere approach to putting our fiscal house in order. The alternative couldn't be clearer: more debt, more fiscal cliffs, and a one-way ticket to a European-style meltdown. Rather than wage more political battles while we jeopardize our children's future, policymakers must face these issues with the honesty, the moral clarity, and the determination they demand.

Nominate a veteran for Hall of Honor

Once again, it is springtime in the Texas Panhandle, and plans are already being made for the Annual Veterans Hall of Honor Banquet. This project was started in 1990 and was initiated to recognize and honor those outstanding Panhandle veterans who have distinguished themselves in the service of our country. Over the years, we have inducted individuals from Pampa, Amarillo, Canyon, Claude, Miami, Higgins and other area towns. These honored inductees have been recipients of such awards as the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross and even three who received the Congressional Medal of Honor.

We can never completely show our appreciation to these individuals for their bravery, love of country and unselfish sacrifices, however in this small gesture, we hope to let the living and deceased know they are not forgotten and their sacrifices were not in vain. Unfortunately, some of those we honor have gone on to their final resting places however, we feel confident where ever they are, they will hear their names called and know they have not been forgotten.

In years past, to be eligible for induction into the Hall of Honor, the nominee needed to meet one of four criteria; born here in the 26 county Texas Panhandle, raised here, went into the service while living here or served at the Pampa Army Air Force during WWII. Because the interest in this program, the board of directors has elected to expand the eligibility to include those individuals stationed in the 26 counties during their service, and individual who moved to the Panhandle after being discharged and made significant contributions in or to the military services and individuals who served in the Merchant Marine, Coast Guard or civilians such as those who fought besides the Marines at Wake Island in WWII.

To nominate a deserving individual, we need a short narrative on their life, the branch of the military services they served in, the awards they received and if possible a copy of citations that accompanied the awards, plus any copies of newspaper clippings pertaining to the nominee. In the narrative, we are encouraging the writer to tell about the nominee's contributions to his or her community following his years of service in the military.

This will give our selection committee a better idea as to the overall merit of the individual. We need to have all the nominations in no later than June 1st. After the selection committee has made their selection, the new inductees will be notified. The banquet will be held on Saturday, August 17, 7:00 p.m. at the VFW Post, 105 S. Cuyler in downtown Pampa. Please address all nominations to me in care of:

Panhandle Veterans Hall of Honor c/o John L. Triplephorn FREEDOM MUSEUM USA 600 N. Hobart Pampa, Texas 79065

I will look forward to receiving all nominations, and it is truly an honor for me to be associated with such outstanding veterans.

Tips for keeping your children safe on the Internet

Depending on the ages of your children, they may be spending anywhere from two to seven and a half hours a day on the Internet. Whether they are young children playing simple games, or older ones doing research for school, socializing through email or social networking sites, or playing more sophisticated games online, most children are on the Internet at least some time every day.

Less than a generation ago, the Internet was available solely through computers. Today, it can be accessed through mobile phones and game consoles, as well as the computer. Doubtless, devices and applications will continue to be developed that will allow faster and easier access to the Internet.

The Internet is a double-edged sword for children. It opens new worlds to them. They can learn about numerous subjects, get help with homework, and make new friends. Children can keep in touch with friends and family no matter where they live. They can even share pictures and videos, on cell phones as well as on computers. New advances even allow users to speak to and see each other in real time online.

The opportunities offered by the Internet, however, also make children vulnerable to certain risks. Many children (and even some adults) do not understand the consequences of disclosing personal information, such as full name, address, email address, phone number, cell phone number, social security number or other information that allows them to be contacted online or offline.

For example, submitting personal information to a website operator for registration purposes will allow the operator and anyone with whom he shares that information to contact a child, or the child's parents, with unwanted marketing solicitations.

In addition, children's use of the Internet, whether on computers, cell phones or other devices, without parental supervision, can lead to exposure to inappropriate information, spreading gossip and inappropriate pictures, bullying, stalking, and even overtures from predators. Remember, the ability to post personal information in chat rooms, forums or other groups allows anyone on the site to see that information and contact your child.

One thing parents can do is use filters and parental settings on home computers. Remember, however, that when your children go online at their friends' homes, those computers may not have the same filters and settings. Equally important, the filters on your home's computer do not extend to your child's mobile phone. Find out what limits and security are available for your child's mobile phone from your mobile phone service provider, and think about turning off web access features or turning on filtering features.

What you and your child should know about the Internet: The increasing number of virtual worlds, in which users can communicate through instant messaging, chat boxes, private messaging, or message boards, makes use of the Internet more and more interactive. While adults may realize that the Internet can allow many more people than they intend to see what they post, this is a hard concept for children to comprehend.

Federal law, the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act, (often referred to as COPPA), and CARU's self-regulatory guidelines on privacy protection (commonly referred to as the Guidelines) aim to limit the collection of personal information from children under 13, and require parental consent before a website operator can collect personal information from or allow the posting of that information by children.

Remember, however, that neither COPPA nor the Guidelines can take the place of attentive parents who communicate effectively with their children. The most important thing that parents can do to keep their children safe on the Internet is to talk to them about it. Explain, in a way that your child will understand (but that will not scare them), that use of the Internet, in addition to offering information and socializing, can be a source of potential harm.

Explain the precautions that you take when posting words, pictures, or films online. Remind them that once something is online, it can be used by anyone who sees it. Discuss the websites they currently visit or those they wish to join and let them know you want them to be even more careful.

Educate Yourself. Know the details of all the sites your children currently visit or would like to visit, and see for yourself what activities are available, and what personal information each site allows children to post in chat rooms, forums, etc. Many sites require children to register before they can participate in the site's activities. Visit these sites and find out what personal information (for example, full name, email address, street address, etc.) they require children to submit for registration and whether they allow children to post personal information in forums, chat rooms, etc.

While sites targeted at children under 13 are required (under the Guidelines and COPPA) to post privacy policies, not all do so. If a privacy policy is posted, don't assume that it reflects the site's actual practices. Know what has to be listed in a privacy policy: name, address, phone number and email address of the website operator; the types of personal information collected from children; how the information is or may be used by the operator; whether it will be publicly available through a chat room, forum or other means. See if the site's policy has all the necessary information.

Under the Guidelines and COPPA, websites are required not only to give you notice of what information your child can disclose online, but also to obtain your permission ("parental consent") before they collect any personal information from your child.

If you think a site has collected or disclosed information from your kids or marketed to them in a way that violates the law, report it to us at www.caru.bbb.org, at the Parent's Corner.

While it is not always possible to insure that children only visit sites that you have ascertained are safe and secure, do your best - keeping in mind that children are often more knowledgeable about the use of technology than we are. If your child uses social networking sites, explore the privacy settings offered by the site, for example, limits on the people with whom your child can interact, and the types of information that can be posted. Some social networking sites allow only pre-written (canned) chat, and make it impossible to share personal information.

Even if your child is 13 or older, and not covered by COPPA or CARU'S Guidelines, let them know that you are careful about your own disclosure of personal information on the Internet and encourage them to do the same. Remind them that with greater freedom, comes greater risks and responsibilities.

Contact CARU. CARU has jurisdiction over websites that are either directed to children under 13 years of age or those where there is a reasonable expectation that a significant number of children will be visiting. This means that CARU looks not only at sites that are aimed at children under 13, but also those, like teen sites, that many "twens" (children 8 -14) will want to visit. If you have concerns about any such websites, please go to the Parent's Corner at the CARU website at www.caru.org, where you will find more information on their organization and an online complaint form.

Important Links: For more information on children and the Internet, go to the FTC website, www.ftc.gov, or go directly to OnGuardOnline.gov, where you will find a guide called "Net Cetera - Chatting with Kids About Being Online." Be safe out there and be vigilant in protecting our children or grandchildren.

Easter in snow, and the 'tail' of Easter

Well, say "goodbye" to the apricots and peaches. With 23° temperature Sunday morning, they are gone. A few places received snow or some rain. We missed it again, so keep praying.

Maybe this was the big Easter freeze. You know we always have one. Girls have spent all that time buying a perfect frilly Easter dress with the perfect shoes, but the weather is cold, and they are forced to cover it up with a big bulky coat. The cute white or pastel sandal is left in the shoe box for a warmer day. Then it is time to hunt the eggs in the cold weather.

I never remember snow at Easter, but my grandchildren have hunted eggs in the snow in the Catskill Mountains of New York. We have hidden them in the desert around Albuquerque and Idaho, and with the rain we have had this year green grass isn't hard to find. After all, fun is where you make it.

Of course Easter is celebrating the fact that Jesus arose from the dead and saved me from sin, so I may join my loved ones in heaven, but there are many traditions associated with Easter. Where did the Easter bunny come from and why do we hunt eggs?

According to the Farmer's Almanac how the Easter bunny tradition began is not entirely clear, but it appears in German lore with tales of a bunny that brought eggs to good boys and girls.

The bunny was also associated with spring time and new life. Children would build nests in secluded places in the house and barn, hoping to find it full of brightly colored eggs. Boys used their hats and girls used bonnets to make nests. It is plastic eggs and an elaborate basket now, but the tradition continues with the most eggs found usually rewarded.

A "Meet and Greet the Candidates" is being planned for April 9 between 6-7 p.m. at City Hall. The candidates for mayor and alderman will be on hand to answer questions and visit. Mark the date on your calendar so you will become the informed voter and our little community will thrive until the rains come and fill our lake once more.

Our condolences to the family of Jim Homer, a local resident who passed away March 12, 2013. Our prayers are with you.

Drain on a paper towel-lined plate. Crumble. In a large bowl beat together eggs and milk. Mix in cheese, bacon, onion and green pepper. Stir in the thawed hash browns. Pour mixture into prepared casserole. Cover with aluminum foil and bake in preheated oven for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake for another 30 minutes until eggs have set.

New Acne Treatment for Young Children

Recently, the FDA approved Epiduo (adapalene 0.1%/ benzoyl peroxide 2.5%) gel to treat acne in children as young as 9 years old. Clinical trials showed that the gel was safe, effective and improved acne conditions in children with early acne. The focus of acne treatment has been on teenagers, leaving the younger age group with limited FDA approved treatment options. Epiduo provides the first treatment option for children who are dealing with acne sooner than the traditional age.

Acne vulgaris is the most common skin problem in the U.S. It presents as areas of scaly red skin, blackheads, whiteheads, pimples, nodules and possibly scarring. Benzoyl peroxide in Epiduo kills the bacteria that lead to breakouts and helps prevent pimples from coming back. Adapalene, the other ingredient in Epiduo, unclogs blocked pores, helping to stop pimples from forming under the skin's surface and decreasing the redness, swelling and inflammation associated with pimples. Individuals taking Epiduo gel should avoid exposure to sunlight and sunlamps and wear sunscreen when sun exposure cannot be avoided.

A memorial service was held for Jose E. (Hippy Joe) Jaramillo Jr. on Saturday, 16 March 2012 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Clarendon, TX. The service was conducted by Father Arokia Raj Samala.

Jaramillo

Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO) filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) on March 19, 2013, its Petition requesting approval of its proposed Military Base Surcharge Tariff.

Section 36.354(a) of the Public Utility Regulatory Act (PURA), at Texas Utilities Code § 36.354, provides that each electric utility in an area where implementation of full customer choice has been delayed by the Commission in accordance with PURA Section 39.103 shall discount charges for electric service provided to a military base. Section 36.354(b) of PURA establishes the discount to be provided to military installations as a 20 percent reduction of the base commercial rate that the electric utility would otherwise charge to the installation.

Section 36.354(c) of PURA provides that the electric utility may assess a surcharge to all its Texas retail customers to recover the difference in revenue between the revenues from the discounted rate for military bases and the base commercial rate. Tariff Sheet No. IV-16 provides the Military Base Adjustment Factor per billing kWh as reflected below:

Rainwater harvesting workshop set

AMARILLO - A rainwater harvesting workshop will be held April 13 at the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service office in Potter County, 3301 S.E. 10th Ave., Amarillo.

This course will provide an overview of rainwater harvesting, its uses and applicability to conserving rainfall as a natural resource, said Brandon Boughen, AgriLife Extension agriculture and natural resource agent for Potter County.

The workshop will begin with registration at 2:30 p.m. and will end at 5 p.m. Cost of the workshop will be $15, payable at the door, and preregistration is recommended, Boughen said.

Concepts and techniques Boughen will introduce are passive and active rainwater harvesting, including rain gardens, landscape design, rain barrels, sanitation and maintenance.

He also will discuss use of rainwater for wildlife, livestock, pets, landscape and vegetable production, and in-home use.

Everyone attending the workshop will have the opportunity to see a rainwater barrel built and may purchase as many harvesting barrels as they need, Boughen said.

For more information or to reserve a seat, contact Boughen at 806-373-0713.
