Groundwater from the City of Clarendon empties into the raw water treatment portion of the Greenbelt Water Authority Filter Plant Monday afternoon.

Groundwater online at Greenbelt

Groundwater from the City of Clarendon is now taking a little bit of pressure off a dwindling Lake Greenbelt, and City Hall has received its first payment from the water authority.

Greenbelt Water Authority General Manager Bobbie Kidd carried a check to City Hall for $5,705.20 on Monday for May water usage. Water from the city's well field began being mixed with lake water after the wells were officially permitted by the groundwater district on May 17.

Kidd said the Clarendon was approved for 1,718.5 acres of water rights after private wells were deducted from the town site. The city's approved acreage will be reduced in the future if any new private wells are dug.

Five wells on the north side of the city are now satisfying between 25 and 40 percent of the needs of the Greenbelt system depending on the demand for water. Kidd said, on average, the wells will satisfy about 30 percent of the demand.

The wells are pumped at alternate times to allow times for each well to rest and recover.

Greenbelt also continues to develop additional water sources and has been permitted to place four wells on Kelly Creek. The water authority previously drilled test holes in that location in 2010 and will drill another next week.

Greenbelt will then go through a bidding process to develop a Kelly Creek well field and lay pipe to tie into the system.

Even with the added supply to the system, water restrictions remain in place for Greenbelt's member cities, including Clarendon and Hedley.

The Greenbelt Reservoir this week is holding about 2.39 billion gallons of water and is at 12.3 percent of its capacity.

CHS seniors' scholarships total $384k

Members of Clarendon High School's Class of 2013 have been awarded more than $383,500 in scholarship funds, according to Principal Larry Jeffers.

School tax rate ratified by vote

School funding in the Clarendon Consolidated Independent School District got a boost Saturday, June 1, when voters ratified a 13-cent property tax increase by a wide margin.

More than 78 percent of those participating in the district's tax ratification election approved of the higher rate, passing the increase by a margin of 234-65.

Early voters provided the biggest boost to the tax, voting in favor of the measure, 169-18. Election Day voting was closer with the tax still meeting approval, 65-47.

Superintendent Monty Hysinger said the district was pleased with the outcome and said the Board of Trustees felt the tax increase was a necessary step in the face of declining enrollment and cuts in state funding.

Board President Wayne Hardin said trustees would be sure to spend the revenue well.

"We certainly appreciate the vote of the people," Hardin said. "Now it is up to us to be good stewards of that money. We still have some hard decisions to make, but we will use the money wisely."

The new tax rate of $1.17 per $100 valuation is expected to generate $165,570 in local revenue and an additional $145,228 from the state for a total of $310,798 in new money.

CISD officials said they needed that money to help bridge a projected $434,960 budget deficit for 2013-2014. The school has been hit with declining revenues due to state budget cuts and declining enrollment.

In Austin, Hysinger said the Legislature has restored some of the money that it cut from public schools two years ago, but at press time, Gov. Rick Perry had not signed that into law.

Hysinger said he expects schools will see some lost revenue restored, and he anticipates being between $50,000 and $100,000 in the black in the next fiscal year.

Celebration dates set for July 4-6

The dates for the 136th annual Saints' Roost Celebration have been set, and activities will be held July 4-6 this summer.

The bulk of this year's activities will take place on July Fourth with the Craft Fair starting at 9 a.m. on the Courthouse Square, followed by the Old Settler's Reunion and Kids' Tricycle and Bicycle Parade both starting at 10 a.m.

Inflation is on its way to you

By Gerald P. O'Driscoll Jr.

In December 2008, the Federal Reserve drove down the overnight federal funds rate to near zero. In March 2009, it announced an aggressive program to purchase mortgage backed securities.

These actions were followed by successive rounds of monetary easing, which were unprecedented in size and scope. Economists have been predicting an outbreak of inflation. Were they wrong?

Critics say the absence of inflation proves the doomsday forecasts were wrong. Some critics, like Paul Krugman, argue even more monetary stimulus is needed. They point to consumer price inflation, which was 1.1% for the last 12 months ending in April, to argue there is ample room for further monetary easing.

Yet Fed Chairman Bernanke's congressional testimony on Wednesday suggests the Fed is beginning to doubt the wisdom of continuing its current policy of monetary ease.

The bottom line is that prices are rising faster than the CPI suggests.

Inflation is defined as a general increase in prices, but the increases need not and normally do not occur simultaneously. But first, I turn to what is causing the apparent inflation shortfall (even a whiff of deflation).

Milton Friedman taught us that inflation is always and everywhere a monetary phenomenon. Much money has been created and, other things equal, there should already be considerable inflation.

Other things have been far from equal.

The unprecedented leveraging up of the balance sheets of homeowners, consumers, and, above all, financial firms fueled a housing boom. When the boom collapsed, borrowers and their lenders found themselves overly indebted relative to the reduced value of the underlying assets.

All the players scrambled to deleverage, i.e., reduce their debt burden, at the same time. An entire credit structure unwound. This process has been going on at least since the collapse of Lehman Brothers in the fall of 2008. Deleveraging has many consequences, one of which is a scramble for cash and other forms of liquidity.

If banks have cash (reserves), they do not want to lend them and especially not to other banks. Each bank assumes rationally that other banks are in as bad shape as they are.

That causes a breakdown in the interbank lending market, which in normal times funds lending. The process is both a scramble for liquidity, and an effort to recapitalize institutions whose balance sheets have become impaired.

There has been money growth. The 12-month growth rate as of April 2013 for M1, a narrow measure of money, was about 12%; the 12-month growth rate for M2, a broader measure, was 7%. The stimulative effects of money growth have been muted by the decline in velocity (which is a rise in the demand for money).

And there has been price inflation, here and around the world. A consumer price index is a measure of only a subset of all prices.

Prices of consumer goods for Americans have been held down for decades by the entry of China and India into the global economy. That process continues as other low-wage economies export more and more goods to the world.

Money has many channels through which it flows in the global economy.

As we learned in the 2000s, a policy resulting in low (even negative) real interest rates affects the prices of long-lived assets disproportionately and in advance of impacting consumer prices. In an inflationary episode, prices of goods often increase sequentially, and not in tandem.

That sequencing of price increases was understood by economists as diverse in their viewpoints as Keynes and Hayek.

The process involves changes in relative prices and resource allocation, and was first explicated in the 18th century by the Irish economist Richard Cantillon.

Home prices are once again on an upward march, and we will see whether the Fed is helping inflate another housing bubble.

If a bubble is defined conventionally as an unsustainable rise in prices, bond prices are a bubble from any historical perspective. I leave it to the readers to exercise their own judgments on equity prices.

The dollar is the dominant global currency, and its quantity affects prices globally. That channel is most apparent for countries that tie or peg their currencies to the dollar. That list includes countries like Hong Kong, Singapore and even China.

Chairman Bernanke's global helicopter drop of dollars helped fuel housing booms in Hong Kong and Singapore while the U.S. housing market remained in the doldrums.

Countries like Brazil are experiencing substantial price inflation in their consumer goods. For April 2013, the annual rate there is 6.5%.

In short, if you want to see the inflation, look beyond U.S. consumer prices and look around the globe. Monetary expansion has effects beyond domestic consumer prices. There is no presumption that an expansionary monetary policy affects consumer goods prices first.

Inflation is already here, and more is coming to your neighborhood soon. If the past is prologue, the Fed will wait too long to react to inflation.

Gerald O'Driscoll, a senior fellow at the Cato Institute, was vice president at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and later at Citigroup.

Earth is getting warmer... really it is

I know, I know – global warming again? Really? Hasn't it been decided by the tea partiers, right-wing wackos, and other climate change deniers that climate change and more specifically, global warming, does not exist and has never existed. Surely those who advocate global warming and the potential threats it represents, are simply left-wing wackos who are determined to destroy capitalism, whatever the cost.

Regardless of what we want to believe, even hope to believe, the earth is growing warmer and will continue to do so, unless another volcano blows its top and cools things off for a decade or so. This is a fact. Global warming deniers are a danger to themselves and to the world at large because there are so many of them, and they are as pesky as they are determined. Now, a lot of these pesky people are, in most instances, nice folks – well balanced and well-meaning. However, mention climate change and they absolutely go ballistic, all the while wailing and gnashing their teeth. 'Tis a sight to behold!

Now personally, contrary to some folks' opinions, I am not in a panic about climate change or the lack thereof. I'm just stating the scientific facts as they are currently understood. Given the choice of global warming or global cooling, I'm for global warming. It's difficult to grow veggies on ice bergs. Everyone, at least those who are capable of rational thought, knows that the climate is never static. It's dynamic and ever changing, pretty much as it has always been.

I do not care if it's manmade or the product of cyclical variations. The political battles have been fought and the climate change advocates have lost – fair and square. Mankind, being true to its nature, will not willingly sacrifice one iota of present comfort and ease just to create a better future for those who come after us. Ain't gonna happen, at least not in my lifetime.

The only way we will address global warming is if we are forced to, by a cataclysm or some other disaster. I'm cool with that. I'm not convinced we could do anything about the possible adverse effects of global warming if we wanted to. The climate change advocates don't want to do anything that does not end the burning of fossil fuels. They will not even allow geoengineering experiments to be conducted, lest those experiments allow politicians to consider alternatives other than reducing our carbon footprint, which is heavy, and getting heavier.

For example, each year the world burns three cubic miles of fossil fuels to provide for our energy needs. One cubic mile of oil would fill a pool that was a mile long, a mile wide, and a mile deep. Folks, that is one trillion gallons of gasoline. To replace just one of those cubic miles of fossil fuels with a source of energy that will not add carbon dioxide to the atmosphere – say nuclear power – would require construction of a new nuclear power plant a month for 50 years; if we wanted to switch to wind energy, which is plentiful in this neck of the non-woods, would mean erecting thousands of windmills each month for decades to come. People allegedly in the know say that the world will consume nine cubic miles of fossil fuel per year within the next 50 years. Personally, I'm not sure if we have that much left, and it will get pricier as it gets scarcer.

Even so, it is impossible to talk seriously about climate change without talking about economic development. Climate experts have argued that we ought to stop emitting greenhouse gases within 50 years, when demand for energy will have increased three times. Seriously people, we are not going to quit emitting greenhouse gases. It is madness to think otherwise.

Now, Dubya, along with his Republican cohorts and a bipartisan Congress did take global warming moderately seriously. They passed a law, which Dubya supported and signed, that mandated that we quit producing 100-watt and 75-watt incandescent light bulbs by January of this year. The 40-watt and 60-watt bulbs will follow shortly. Well, that ought to remove a couple of inches out of the three cubic miles of fossil fuel we burn each year. Meanwhile, we the consumers lost another choice about how we are to live our lives. Is the lost freedom worth it? Absolutely not. Anyway, Dubya and the Republicans started America down the pathway to a smaller fossil fuel footprint. Somehow, I think we the people lost more.

It must be noted that global warming does offer us some remarkable benefits. In the middle (that's us) and northern latitudes farm production is expected to increase. This bounty results from the increase in rainfall that global warming is expected to bring, particularly in our area. The tropics, on the other hand, should see a drop off in farm productivity. There, heat stress will increase and yields will decline. Climate change, it seems, is not so much a reduction in productivity as redistribution. This redistribution will adversely affect the poorest people on earth, while the richest will benefit. This is not a new phenomenon.

Folks in the Texas Panhandle should be just fine in the near future, at least until temperatures begin edging up towards 120. We might then see a modest effort to abate the negative effects of global warming. Until then, please pass the sun screen and umbrellas.

The OFARMA Bill

Fred jumps to warming conclusion

Fred strikes again. Fred and I have been in agreement for a few weeks and I was sure that it must be a sign that the second coming was just around the corner. So sure in fact that I quit complaining about my lovely wife's credit card debt as surely we would be raptured and beat them out of it!

But no, as he has jumped back on the global warming bandwagon. He just can't stand the prosperity of logical thought for any substantial length of time. He is in a panic that the carbon dioxide concentration on the top of an active volcano in Hawaii has reached cataclysmic values. Let's take a look at this and you decided for yourself.

Mauna Loa has been erupting for 700,000 years and has been above the ocean surface for 400,000 of those years. It continuously spews huge quantities of inorganic carbon dioxide into the atmosphere so it would seem normal to have a higher than average level in the neighborhood of the source, would it not? I do not think that it is reasonable to conclude that we have a crisis based on such flawed data.

Geoengineering is typical left wing foolishness. It would seem to be like catching a rattlesnake with your bare hands. Now that you got it what are you going to do with it? Store the carbon dioxide where? How about here in Donley County? It is in your backyard now. Are you going to store it as a gas or a solid? Dry ice would take up much less space than the gas but would require huge energy usage for eternity. Where would the electricity come from? Fossil fuels that would produce more carbon dioxide are the most efficient but that does not seem to make a lot of sense if we are trying to remove it from the air.

What about the huge mountain of rock removed from below Donley County to make room for storage? A giant slag pile is just what we need to promote tourism.

NOAA says that the global temperature peaked in 1997 and has been decreasing ever since. It does not seem that Fred and his Spotted Owl cohorts allow the facts to influence their opinions.

Save time, trouble - prepare now for a storm

Preparing for a storm before it happens is not only important, it's smart. Now is the time to make a list, research companies and make decisions about how you will handle home and car repairs, researching companies and getting things back to normal after a storm. When you don't know what to do or who to call to help with both temporary and permanent repairs, BBB resources are the answer and BBB staff are ready to help. BBB files indicate that making hasty decisions in a time of need, especially about large projects, could result in higher costs.

"Knowing ahead of time who you can trust when your roof is in bad shape or your trees are down, helps keep your mind at ease during a storm," said Janna Kiehl, BBB CEO. "The best advice we can give is to be informed, educated and ready."

Tips for a starting point to prepare before a storm: Check with your insurance company now about what is covered, how to file a claim if necessary and any deductibles. Start with Trust.

Industry specific lists of accredited businesses are also available. If a company has a low rating or unaddressed complaints, move on to a company that has a better rating or an accredited business. Studies show consumers prefer to do business with accredited businesses. Obtain bids from several companies. Review the bids and compare like services and remember the lowest bid is not always the best price.

"There's a lot more to price and to the overall business transaction than price alone," said Kiehl. "Comparing apples to apples and seeking a positive and professional relationship is just as important."

Immediately after a storm, you will want to get things back to normal in a hurry and you're guard may be down. Be patient and ask if temporary repairs can be made. It will take time to get back to normal. Beware of: "Too good to be true" offers. Companies who will not submit information in writing, or do not put their promises in a contract. Blank contracts or holes in the contract. Paying cash or making a check out to an individual, instead of a company.

Paying money before the work is started. Paying all the money before the work is finished.

Companies who won't give you straight answers to your questions. Claims that your home is unsafe. If you are concerned have an engineer, architect, or building official inspect it. Companies offering a bargain price for left over materials. Established, reputable companies do not utilize left over materials this way.

Don't give in to attempts to pressure you into making an immediate decision. After a storm, make temporary repairs if possible and wait for the company to do business with that's right for you!

Call Forwarding Scam Runs Up Victims' Phone Bills

Consumers are reporting a resurgence in a classic phone scam.

bob's whittlin'
by bob watson

Victims who fall for this con allow an unknown caller to run up their phone bills without their knowledge. How the Scam Works: You receive a collect call and accept the charges. When caller comes on the line, it's clear you don't know him. But he begs you not to hang up. He claims that he has been arrested for a minor violation and is trying to reach his family. Unfortunately, he's dialed the wrong number and will only be allowed one phone call.

The caller asks you to help him by forwarding his call. He instructs you to dial *72 and the phone number he needs to reach. You dial the numbers, thinking you are doing him a small favor. But you really just allowed the scammer to bill unlimited collect phone calls to your account. The *72 code causes all your subsequent incoming calls to be forwarded. The scammer can make collect calls to your number and have them automatically forwarded to the person he wants to reach. Even though you aren't answering the calls, the charges will still be billed to your account. You may not realize this has happened until you receive your next phone bill.

The scam is most frequently used by inmates looking for a way to make "free" collect calls. But identity thieves can use this technique to "steal" your phone number. They set up your number to forward to themselves and answer when your bank calls to check up on suspicious charges/withdrawals. How to Spot a Scam: Protect yourself from call forwarding scams by following these tips: Place a collect call block on your account. If you don't need to make or accept collect calls, telephone service providers often allow you to block them for free. If you receive unwanted calls from a nearby correctional facility, contact them directly and request that your number be blocked. Read your telephone bills carefully. Watch for any unusual charges.

Pay attention to your phone's ringing. If your phone frequently rings only once or is not ringing at all, this could be an indication that your line has been forwarded. If you believe your phone is being forwarded, dial *73 or #73 to deactivate the feature.

Red River Water Authority increases rates

If you are a customer of the Red River Water Authority, you probably received the letter dated May 28, 2013, informing you of the rate increases for the Utility Division's water systems which includes Howardwick. The basic rate will be $40.75, which includes up to 2,000 gallons, with a higher rate with more usage. The company did send a representative to explain the situation in May, and the Aldermen voted to accept the rate increase. I began to wonder, "Who are they?"

The Red River Water Authority was formed in 1959 as a political subdivision of the state that encompasses all or parts of 43 counties lying within the watershed of the Red River and tributaries which includes the Salt Fork of the Red River for us. Most of the territory is rural or small towns and communities; the largest town is Wichita Falls. It is governed by a board of nine directors who are appointed by the governor and approved by the legislature.

The water system for Howardwick was installed by the original owners, Sherwood Shores, with wells and storage tanks and no, Howardwick does not get water from Lake Greenbelt, just the wells. Sherwood Shores declared bankruptcy in the early 1980s, and Red River came to our rescue by buying and managing the water system.

The reason for the increase, as presented to the Board was to replace our aging storage system with two new tanks. If you drive by the storage facility you see four tanks, two are not usable because of leaking and the third is under constant watch for leaks, leaving one reliable storage tank. Two new ones would meet our needs for many years. Then, being the conservative I am, to look at those words; "Political subdivision" and "Water Authority" in the same sentence and I get scared. I know we have to keep a close eye on these people. After all, it is our money and our water we are talking about.

Ole Jim and I moved to Howardwick in 1983, we have lived in the same spot for 30 years. It doesn't look like it did 30 years ago, in fact it continues to change each year. When we put in the front picket fence, we planted wild flowers along the perimeter and this year they are very pretty, bringing in butterflies and bees, including a few of those big bumble bees. Well, Buffy the Wonder Dog, doing her job of protecting her house has declared war on the bumble bees. So far she has escaped a sting, but a scolding lasts a few seconds and she is chasing the bee again. I expect to hear a cry and see a swollen nose in the near future.

We were among the crowd at the block party last week and the Mulkey Theatre looks great. The inside has been cleaned out, but no work has been started inside yet. I think that is the largest part of the job but I want to say, "Good job, well done."

Ward to celebrate 90th birthday

Buford and Geraldine Holland enjoyed the day with family and friends for his 90th birthday. On June 29 another special person is celebrating her 90th birthday, and that is Eunice Ward. She is having a party at the Hedley Baptist Church from 2-4 p.m. (no gifts, please). Please tell these wonderful people Happy Birthday the next time you see them.

There has been a change in location for the June 15 baby shower for B.J. (Like) Waddell. It will be held Saturday from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. at the Donley County Senior Citizens Center on Fourth Street in Clarendon. Her theme is pink, purple, and white; and Miss Aliceson Gail will make her appearance around August 9, 2013.

The Hedley Senior Citizens will be out and about selling raffle tickets for the Cotton Festival. We have a $1,500 Hunting Package this year.

Heat oven to 375°F. In small bowl, mix feta cheese, green onions and 3 tablespoons of the beaten egg. Do not unroll dough; separate long roll into 2 shorter rolls at center perforations. Unroll 1 roll until 1 rectangle can be separated from roll. Refrigerate remaining dough. Press dough into 7 1/2x5-inch rectangle, pressing diagonal perforations to seal. Cut rectangle into 6 (2 1/2-inch) squares. Top each dough square with slightly rounded measuring teaspoon feta cheese mixture. Fold dough over filling, forming triangle; press edges to seal. On ungreased cookie sheets, place triangles 2 inches apart. Repeat with remaining 3 dough rectangles and feta cheese mixture. Brush tops with remaining beaten egg. Sprinkle lightly with Parmesan cheese. Bake 9 to 11 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm.

Remember summer safety water tips

Water sports, swimming pools, and going to the beach are some favorite summer activities for children.

However, the Center for Disease Control reports that hundreds of kids are seriously injured or drown each year in home swimming pool accidents.

Never, never leave your child unattended in water!

Swimming pools are the number one summer danger for preschool aged children. Many of these tragic accidents occur when a parent or caregiver is temporarily distracted. Leaving your child unattended even for a few seconds could lead to tragedy.

The American Academy of Pediatric suggests following these pool safety tips:

Never leave your child alone in or near water, even for a moment. Fishponds can also be a serious risk of drowning for young children.

Install at least a four-foot fence on all sides of your pool with a locked gate or ladder.

Empty and put away kiddie pools after each use.

Keep rescue equipment and a phone by the pool.

Remember that kids who have learned how to swim should still be closely supervised.

The Clarendon Broncos were named the champions of the Hoop 10 Basketball Tournament this weekend in Amarillo. Team members include Chance Lockhart, Keandre Cortez, Clay Koetting, Bryce Hatley, Colt Wood, Seth Greer, Riley Shadle, Marshal Johnson, and Taylor Knorpp. The team is coached by Che Shadle and Lance Wood. The won all three of their games over two days to receive the top medals.

Obituaries

Lowe

Wayne Gilbert Lowe, 82, of Amarillo died peacefully on Wednesday, May 29, 2013, at Ware Memorial Nursing Home after a lingering illness.

Services were held Friday, May 31, 2013, in Westminster Presbyterian Church in Amarillo with Dr. Clay J. Brown, Pastor, officiating. Burial followed in Citizens Cemetery in Clarendon with US Army Honors and Masonic Rites. Arrangements are under the direction of Robertson Funeral Directors of Clarendon.

Wayne was born November 24, 1930, in Clarendon to Walter and Genoah Lowe. He lived on his family's ranch near Clarendon attending schools at Chamberlain Community School and later Clarendon schools before serving in the US Army in the Tank Corp during the Korean War.

He was awarded the Purple Heart for his service. He then attended West Texas State University, obtaining his Bachelor's degree in 1956, and a Masters degree in 1963. He retired from teaching in 1987, having taught in Amarillo schools for 31 years. In addition to teaching Wayne ranched full time until 2004 when he hung up his saddle and spurs.

Wayne married Tomi Fowler on November 26, 1975, and they enjoyed 37 years together before he passed away.

He is survived by his wife, Tomi;

a brother, Doug Lowe of Clarendon; a sister, Jane Tice of Nacogdoches; daughter, Nicki Arnold and husband Tom of Plano; two grandsons, Kris Arnold and Brandon Arnold, and 4 great grandchildren; nephews, Charlie Lowe and David Lowe, and niece Mandy Tice.

Honorary pallbearers include Charlie Bogard, Fred Molesworth, Jiggs Mann, Bill Craft, Will Chamberlain, Harold Lindley, Clovis McCary, Steve Allen and Mike Smith. Wayne was a member for over 50 years of the Clarendon Masonic Lodge #700 AF&AM.

In lieu of flowers memorials can be made to Westminster Presbyterian Church or Citizens Cemetery Association in Clarendon.

Sts' Roost Museum to host annual members dinner

The Saint's Roost Museum Board of Directors will be hosting the annual members only appreciation dinner on the grounds of the museum Friday evening, June 7th, at 6:30 p.m. This is going to be a really fun evening as a Hawaiian Luau is being planned.

The featured guest artist this year is our own local artist, Mary Martin. Mary grew up on a farm in Lakeview and graduated from Lakeview High School. She attended Clarendon College, graduating in 1970. She married Mitchell Martin that summer. They have one daughter, Jessie, and four grandchildren.

Mary has always loved art and started sketching at a very early age. She did not begin painting until after she and Mitchell married. Mary's earliest paintings were mostly portraits and scenery. She has also done lots of western art and still life. Her love of western art and scenery probably derived from being a rancher's wife and living on ranches.

Mary retired from the USDA's

Farm Service Agency in November 2012 and now has time to pursue her passion of painting. Not ready to really retire, Mary is working to build a business and do paintings for the public.

Mary will have several paintings on display in the museum for all to view and enjoy.

If you are not already a museum member, we urge you to come on out and enjoy the evening. Annual memberships are available at the door for $25.00 annually per family.

Drugs in the News

New Labeling Changes for Sleep Medication

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has recently approved label modifications to lower the dosages of zolpidem, an effective sleep medication. One of the side effects of zolpidem is reduced mental alertness that sometimes occurs hours after taking the medication. The labeling changes affect these medications: Ambien, Ambien CR, and Edluar. The FDA has recommended that women take a lower dosage (5 milligrams) of immediate-release zolpidem because it takes a longer time for women to clear zolpidem from the body, thereby experiencing side effects for a longer time than the majority of men. Dosage recommendations for men are 5 or 10 milligrams of immediate-release zolpidem. For extended-release zolpidem, the new initial dose for women is 6.25 milligrams for women and either 6.25 or 12.5 milligrams for men. Zolpidem-containing medications are primarily used to manage insomnia, or the reduced ability to fall or stay asleep. The benzodiazepine class of medications (Xanax, Valium) is more commonly prescribed than non-benzodiazepines (Ambien, Lunesta) to help start the sleeping process.
