THIS WEEK

2 Fred is baffled by a poll on Americans' lack of faith in science.

4 Ben reports on the fun and the facts of a first grade field trip.

5 The Colt Band sweeps a UIL contest and brings home a trophy.

7 And the Broncos pull off a win over West Texas High.

All this and much more as The Enterprise reports in this week's amazing edition!

Hedley voters can cast ballots early

Early voting is underway as Hedley elects new school board members and city aldermen.

The Hedley Independent School District will elect three members of its Board of Trustees Incumbent Ted Wright is joined on the ballot by Troy Monroe, Michelle McCann, and Holly McCleskey.

Hedley Mayor Leon Ward is unopposed for re-election, but three people are running for two seats on the Board of Aldermen. Challenger Diana Postma faces incumbents Lonnie Roby and Carrie Butler on the ballot.

Early balloting by personal appearance started Monday and continues through next Tuesday, May 6, at the school office and Hedley City Hall. Election Day is Saturday, May 10, and polling for both boards will be held at the Hedley Lions Den.

Officials encourage child immunization

National Infant Immunization Week is April 26 to May 3, and the Centers for Disease Control is running a campaign to highlight the importance of protecting infants from vaccine-preventable diseases.

The Texas Department of State Health Services is urging all parents and guardians to review their children's shot records to see if they are in need of vaccines. If you are not sure or would like to see if you qualify for free vaccines you can call the local TDSHS office in Clarendon at 874-3211.

TDSHS will hold four Immunization Clinics here during the month of May.

Immunizations will be given on May 1, 8, 15, and 22 at the TDSHS office at Five Medical Drive from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1:00 to 3:30 p.m. with the first 15 clients being seen.

Methodist to hold tasting on May 21

The First United Methodist Church will hold a Spring Tasting on Wednesday, May 21, from 11:30 to 1:30 at the church.

The public is invited to come sample the home-cooked dishes and desserts. Admission is $10 in advance or $12 at the door, and recipes for the dishes will be available at the tasting.

Tickets will be available at Every Nook & Cranny beginning on May 5.

Local man arrested following assault

A Clarendon man is out on bond this week following an alleged assault on April 21.

Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn said 41-year-old Billy Chadwick turned himself in and was arrested that same day.

Justice of the Peace Denise Bertrand arraigned Chadwick on a first degree felony charge of Burglary of a Habitation with Intent to Commit Assault and set bond at $50,000.

Clarendon awards paving bid

The Clarendon Board of Aldermen awarded a contract for street paving to MH Civil Constructors, Inc., during their regular meeting last Tuesday, April 22.

The Amarillo-based contractor submitted the only bid for work that was authorized by city voters in 2012. The bid with alternates was for a total of $677,362.56.

The project will include Sixth Street from Koogle to Goodnight Street; Third Street from Allen to Bugbee Avenue; Allen Street, from Third to Fifth; Sims Street from Third to Fourth (west side of Broncho Stadium); and Carhart Street, from Sixth to Hwy. 287.

A two-block section of Sixth Street beside the baseball fields will be paved in concrete, while the rest of the streets will be two-pass seal coats with either rollover curb and gutter or standard curb and gutter. City employees will do the excavating for the curbing as well as the base work for the paving.

The project also calls for seal coating Clarendon Avenue from Bugbee to its west end (along the south side of the Clarendon College campus) and Regent Avenue from US 287 to Clarendon Ave. (which winds up the middle of the CC campus by the Bulldog Gym).

Mayor Larry Hicks told aldermen he hopes the project is completed by October 1.

In other business, Aldermen approved clean audits of the city and the economic development corporation; authorized the purchase of eight new computers for the Burton Memorial Library through the Harrington Library Consortium, and awarded $1,000 to the Christ's Kids Ministry for its summer lunch program.

Aldermen resumed discussion of proposed regulations of gaming machines. Alderman Doug Kidd asked for more information and expressed reservations about the city making money on a business of questionable legality, but Alderman Larry Jeffers said he thought the city should regulate the business whether it made any revenue or not. No action was taken.

H'wick pair nabbed for burglary

Two Howardwick residents were in the Donley County Jail for burglarizing the Sandell Drive-In as the Enterprise went to press Tuesday.

Sheriff Butch Blackburn said Brenda Blevins and Jeffrey Wyrick were arrested Monday, April 28, for Possession of Stolen Property after officers executed a search warrant at their home at 258 Palacia Drive in Howardwick.

Among the items found in the home was a large amount of candy and a trash believed to have been stolen from the drive-in theatre in Clarendon on either April 23 or April

Blackburn said his office will be filing burglary charges on both individuals for the Sandell break-in. He also said his office is investigating evidence taken from the home that appears to be related to an April 26 break-in at the Howardwick Baptist Church.

Blevins, age 28, has a small criminal history, but Wyrick, age 32, has an "extensive" criminal history, the sheriff said.

According to Enterprise files, Wyrick was arrested on August 25 of last year in connection with three local burglaries, including one at the Clarendon Country Club from which a large safe was stolen.

We can't save the environment without freedom

By Randal O'Toole, Cato Institute

The first Earth Day took place in 1970, when I was a high school senior, and that day set the course of my life for the next 25 years. Convinced of the need to protect the environment and realizing that forests were a key part of the environment in my home state of Oregon, I elected to attend forestry school, graduating in 1974.

Over the next two decades, I helped almost every major environmental group in their efforts to save public forests from what we thought were the rapacious hands of timber companies. But I soon realized that the real problem was that Congress had inadvertently given public land agencies budgetary incentives to lose money harming the environment, and disincentives to either make money or do environmental good

This insight helped me see that creating markets for all resources would allow them to compete on a level playing field. Recreation fees, for example, could reward public land managers for protecting things that recreationists care about, such as scenery, diverse wildlife habitat, and clean water. Though economists estimated that recreation was worth more than any other public land resource, Congress didn't allow managers to charge for most recreation.

Many environmentalists in the 1970s and 1980s were receptive to my ideas of reform. Our common goal was to protect the environment, and they happily accepted any tools that would solve a particular environmental problem best. Soon, Congress passed a law allowing federal land agencies to charge recreation fees and to keep those fees.

Unfortunately, things changed in the early 1990s because of two events: the fall of the Soviet Union and the election of Bill Clinton to the White House.

Polls showed that the fall of the Soviet Union persuaded most Americans that government was a poor solution to most problems. One of the few exceptions was environmental protection, which many Americans still believed needed government regulation. This led many self-described "progressives," who believe in more government control, to push their agenda by joining the environmental movement.

Meanwhile, Clinton's election changed the financing of the environmental movement. From 1981 through 1992, environmental groups raised much of their money by charging that Republicans in the White House threatened the environment. With a Democrat as president, grassroots funding for environmental groups plummeted.

To make up the difference, most groups turned to foundation grants. But foundations demanded that the groups they funded all adopt the same strategy. Progressives took this opportunity to demand that their strategy — transferring power from on-theground forest managers to political appointees - be the one that was adopted. For example, they opposed recreation fees because, with everything controlled from Washington, they didn't think they needed to rely on incentives.

The progressive goal was not environmental protection but government control. They believed they knew how every acre of land in the country should be managed, which forests should be cut, which crops should be planted on which farms, and how many urbanites should live in apartments instead of singlefamily homes.

The constitutional rights and personal desires of property owners, the expertise of public land managers, and the housing preferences of homebuyers were unimportant compared with the greater good that could be achieved through central control of our natural resources.

When free-market environmentalists showed that most environmental problems could be solved with better incentives, progressives latched onto climate change as the one issue that demanded complete government control. "Climate change is a collective problem that demands collective action," enthuses Naomi Klein, and it "supercharges the pre-existing case for virtually every progressive demand on the books."

Giving government power to solve a problem is not the same as actually solving the problem. Instead, that government is more likely to make the problem worse as it abuses its power. Klein's own proposals for climate change — "subways, streetcars and light-rail ... everywhere" and high-density "housing along those transit lines" — will have practically no effect on climate but devastating effects on our economy.

Air, water, wildlife, forests, and other things we call "the environment" are precious and deserve our care. But freedom is also precious. The most important lesson of my four decades as an environmentalist is that you can't have one without the other.

Poll: Religion trumps belief in science

Well, I was going to write another missive about the continuing goings-on with Senator Ted Cruz and his cohort in crazy, Mike Lee, of Utah. However, I decided, what's the point? Nothing is going to change until rational people retake control of the political and democratic processes, and elect intelligent, rational people to represent us. (Excepting Representative Thornberry, who is anything but dumb and irrational.)

Rather, I would like to address the thoughts and beliefs of those who elect these fools we currently have in office. A few weeks ago, the AP-GfK Poll came out with some rather shocking results; at least they were shocking results to me. I dang near fell off of my throne while reading them. (I'm glad that my apartment bathroom is outfitted with those heavy-duty wall handles to keep the less firm more firm.)

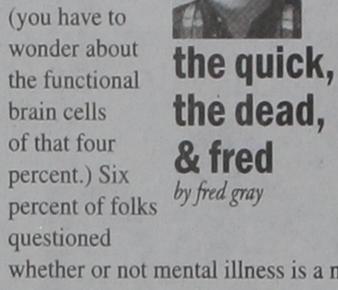

Most Americans know that smoking does, indeed, cause cancer. Yet, they express bigger doubts of concepts that the large majority of scientist, really brilliant people - perhaps the smartest people on the planet - consider to be truths. There is no way that these people can cast accurate opinions that are so far from their experience and intellectual ability.

Consider this: Americans have more skepticism than confidence in global warming, the age of the Earth, evolution, and have the most trouble believing a Big Bang created the earth, our solar system, and the universe some 13.8 billion years ago.

The good thing about this poll is that rather than quizzing the actual veracity of scientific knowledge, the survey asked people to rate their confidence in several statements about science and medicine - both extremely important fields of research.

On many of the questions asked there was broad general acceptance.

Only four percent of the people doubt that smoking causes cancer (you have to wonder about brain cells of that four whether or not mental illness is a medical condition that affects the brain (what else would it be, a social condition?) Eight percent of folks are skeptical that there's a genetic code inside our cells this is probably the eight percent who are often found on the various Darwin winner's lists, you know - Jerry Springer types. Even more people - 15 percent have doubts about the safety and efficacy of childhood vaccines. I'm glad that my parents were not part of this group.

A bit over 40 percent of We the People say they are not too confident, or outright disbelieve, that the earth is warming, mostly a result of manmade heat-trapping gases. This folly is so absurd that it warrants a sneer. Also, another 40-plus percent of folks - mostly from the hills of West Virginia and Appalachia, doubt that the earth is 4.5 billion years old, or that life on Earth evolved through a process of natural selection, even though (thankfully) that most people were at least somewhat confident in each of those concepts. Sadly, a narrow majority - just over 51 percent questions the Big Bang theory. Those results cause great despair in our most intelligent scientists, including several Nobel Prize winners, brilliant people who personally vouched for the science in the statements tested, calling them scientific facts.

On the other hand, those who don't religious beliefs.

choose to believe these scientific facts, use the bible and religious tradition to argue against these truths. Now, we all know, that the bible and faith cannot be measured and relied upon to be true in the scientific sense. They are matters of faith - the belief in things unseen... Beliefs and values often trump science, when they conflict, to most people.

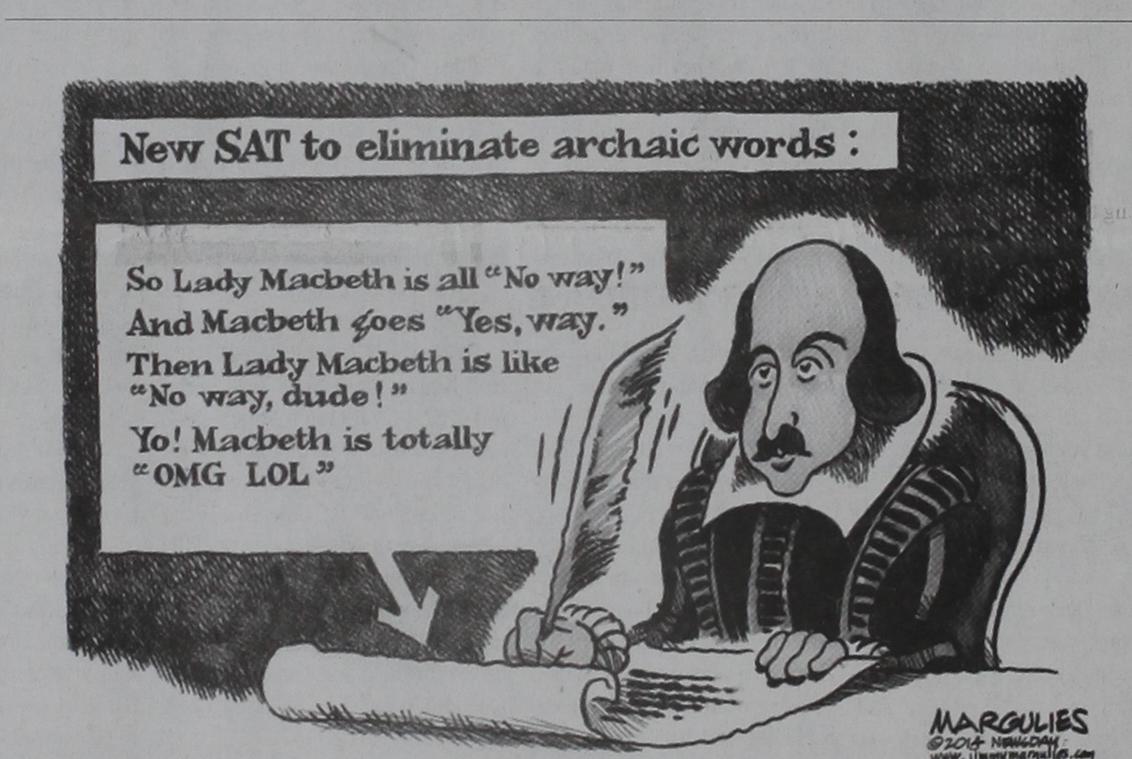

When you are putting up facts against faith, facts can't argue against faith," said 2012 Nobel Prize winning biochemistry professor Robert Lefkowitz of Duke University. "It makes sense now that science would have made no headway because faith is untestable."

For most people, evolution, the age of the Earth and the Big Bang are all compatible with God, except to Bible literalists, said Francisco Ayala, a former priest and professor of biology, philosophy and logic at the University of California, Irvine. And Darrel Falk, a biology professor at Point Loma Nazarene University and an evangelical Christian, agreed, adding: "The story of the cosmos and the Big Bang of creation is not inconsistent with the message of Genesis 1, and there is much profound biblical scholarship to demonstrate this."

According to Anthony Liserowitz, the director of the Yale Project on Climate Change Communication, "the poll highlights "the iron triangle of science, religion, and politics." Scientists are only too aware that they have the shakiest leg in the triangle.

Leiserowitz noted sometimes science wins out even against well-financed and loud opposition, as with smoking.

Until the voters are willing to invest the intellectual capital needed to understand the complicated and confusing questions of faith versus science, we are going to have to deal with candidates who are willing to pander to people's fears and worries about their faith and

Dentists and the Judge know for sure

Until now, it's been a teapot-sized tempest, bubbling on the edges of awareness, but when two corporate behemoths square off and a federal judge steps in, the issue heats quickly to full boil. Dentists across the fruited plane - and beyond – are smiling. They may even decide to renew their professional oaths.

In the blue corner is dental floss (Johnson and Johnson) and in the red corner is Listerine (Pfizer). After swishing for awhile, flossing hourly and considering briefs from dueling attorneys, the referee - Manhattan Federal District Judge Denny Chin - has ruled.

And the ruling is a mouthful. Contrary to claims on its labels, websites and TV ads, Listerine CANNOT claim to be "as effective as flossing." Thus sayeth the judge....

For decades, dentists have recommended regular flossing. Most of us have listened to their admonitions with "yeahyeah, sure-sure" assurances that we'll turn over new flossing leaves. Then, we rush back to our workaday world. Flossing, performed with such grace and ease by dental professionals, quickly is out of sight and out of mind. Sadly, only 13% of Americans heed dentists' sermons. (Granted, most preachers would settle for this percentage.)

One hygienist figures serious flossers number in the single digits when fibs and lies are factored in. One patient, bragging that he flosses regularly, says he does so seasonally - every third month.

What about mouthwash? Well, more people ought to use more of it more often. Pfizer contends that half of the populace has periodic bouts with bad breath. Dentists, on the receiving end of exhales the idle daily, feel the american scale weighs heavily in favor by don newbury of the non-users....

Oral hygiene deserves this new spotlight; it's been ignored too long.

We used to joke about it. "Halitosis is better than no breath at all," we laughed. Dentists, miffed when patients grouse about spending $100 for a 20-second tooth extraction, offer well-worn responses: "I can pull it slower." A half-century ago, when vaunted all-female and all-male colleges shared the same river, a joke trickled down from New York State, where Vassar enrolled only females, and Colgate, only males. The punch line? "Surveys say Vassar women prefer Colgate men to tooth decay, four to one."...

I digress – again. Perhaps the judge took his cue from the Federal Communications Commission that recently levied hefty fines with its "you can't say that or show that" edicts.

He maintained that Listerine advertising poses a "public health risk" that could "undermine the message of dental professionals."

Pfizer heard him loud and clear. The company sprang for $2 million to hire 4,000 workers to crisscross the United States. Their jobs? To paste over the "as effective as flossing" claims on Listerine labels in all stores. Labor Department people are smiling. For a few weeks anyway, US employment figures will be up....

It wasn't announced about wording on the stickers. Several possibilities come to mind, including:

"The judge owns stock in Scope"

"Our claims remain true for denture wearers or the toothless," or

"For heaven's sake, use one or the other," or

"First job I've had since temporary

Santa," or Don't expect the ultra-liberal who believes in killing NOTHING to endorse this suggestion: "Don't use. Help rehabilitate the germs that cause bad breath." You get the drift.... However, let's keep oral hygiene conversations going - over backyard fences, down the block and in coffee shops. This could help reduce bad breath, improve oral hygiene and encourage dental professionals.

They'd probably stage a parade if serious flossing gets up to 15-20%.

And, at meals on "hug your dentist" day, we could promise to chew each bite 28 times, swish mouthwash and floss like we think it matters....

Ear Drops Better Following Ear Tube Insertion

A recent study conducted in the Netherlands shows that ear drops containing an antibiotic and glucocorticoid may help stop discharge from the ear after tube insertion better than taking antibiotic medicines by mouth. Discharge from the ear (uncomplicated otorrhea) is a common occurrence after a tympanostomy tube is inserted into the ear in most children with inner ear infections. In this study, the discharge cleared up within 2 weeks in more children who had eardrops than in the children who were taking antibiotics by mouth. There were no adverse events or complications reported after two weeks.

One of the most common ear drops used in children for ear infections in the US is Ciprodex. It contains an antibiotic called ciprofloxacin and a glucocorticoid called dexamethasone. Ciprofloxacin helps kill bacteria by destroying important enzymes needed for bacteria DNA replication. Dizziness and feeling lightheaded are common side effects of ciprofloxacin. Dexamethasone is a powerful corticosteroid that helps reduce inflammation.

Run for state

Running the 400 meter run is Bronco Abby Johnson at the Regional Track Meet last weekend in Levelland. Johnson performance landed her a trip to the state track meet.

Family affair at State Track Meet

By Sandy Anderberg

Cousins Sarah Luttrell and Abby Johnson are headed to the state track meet with recent accomplishments in the Regional Track Meet held in Levelland.

Luttrell competed and qualified in the 100-meter dash and Johnson qualified in the 400-meter dash. Bronco Charles Mason earned a wildcard spot in the long jump and qualified for the state meet.

Luttrell and Johnson have been active all season and were successful in posting great times in their races. Mason sat out the first part of the season healing a hamstring injury and participated in only about four meets.

Luttrell competed in the 100, 200, long jump, and sprint relay. She finished second in the 100-meter dash with a time of 12.72 for a state trip and Johnson had a time of 1:01.77 in the 400-meter dash for second place and a trip to Austin. Mason recorded State bound a jump of 22'11/4" for third place and a wildcard. That card came through for him and he will jump at the state meet the second weekend of May.

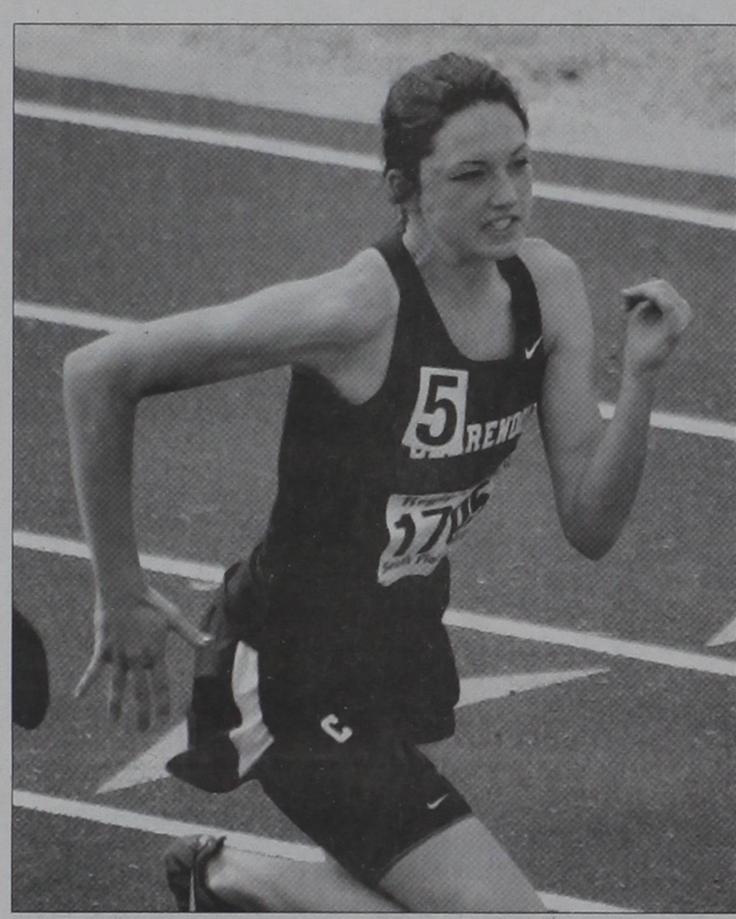

The Lady Bronco sprint relay competed at the Regional meet and finished in seventh place with a time of 53.17 and was run by Amelia Weatherton Taylor Gaines, Taylor DeGrate, and Sarah Luttrell. Weatherton also competed in the 100-meter dash finishing with a time of 13.19. DeGrate gave it a good shot in the 100-meter hurdles and finished just two out of qualifying in fourth place with a time of 16.70.

Luttrell also long jumped at a distance of 16'734" for sixth place and Gaines finished fifteenth in that event with a distance of 15'0". Luttrell and Johnson competed in the 200-meter dash and finished fifth and sixth with times of 27.71 and 27.89 respectively. Caleb Cobb made a great attempt in the 800-meter run finishing fifteenth with a time of 2:17.61.

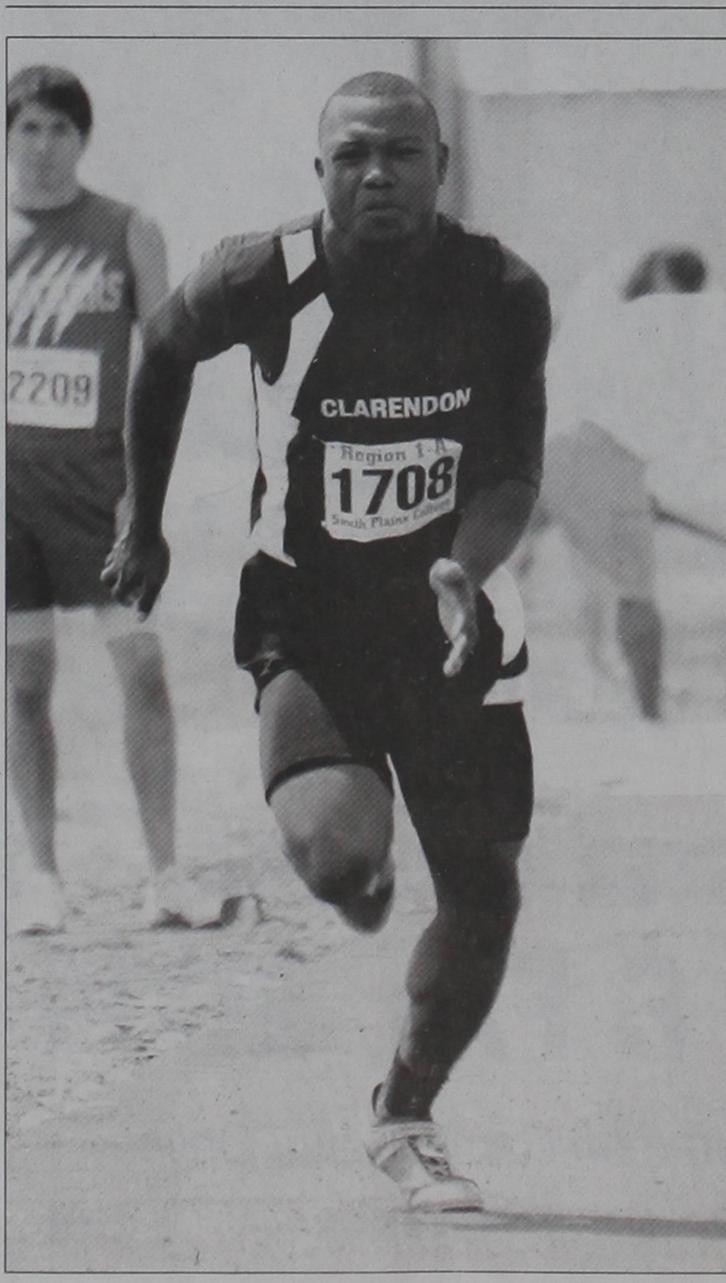

Coach Alton Gaines was pleased with his athletes' performance at the regional meet.

"It was an awesome effort by the girls," Gaines said. "Each girl put themselves in a position to get one of the two top spots; we just came up a little short in some events. But we did get two girls that qualified for the State Meet. Sarah Luttrell and Abby Johnson did a great job. We are very proud and thankful to be their coaches."

Broncos pull off win against West Texas

By Sandy Anderberg

With a huge 12-2 win over West in two runs. Texas, the Broncos are headed to post-season play on Thursday of this week.

The game will be played at home on McClelland Field against Hale Center beginning at 5:00 p.m.

Coach Brad Elam knew his team had to win to participate in post-season play and felt they came into the game with WT focused to do just that.

"A win would put us in the playoff and the kids came focused and ended the game after five," Elam said. "We had a 5-2 lead after the top of the fourth and had a big inning to break the game open. Bryce Hatley had a big game reaching base all four times including a big triple and he said Caleb Cobb had two hits and drove in two runs.

Elam went on to say that Brandon Miller reached base all four times, had two rbi, scored two runs McAnear scored in the third inning." and stole two bases. Zack LaRoe had two runs scored and Keandre

Lady Broncos play warm-up game against Fritch

By Sandy Anderberg

The Lady Broncos finished their year at 15-4 overall and 9-3 in District for a second place finish in their district race.

Clarendon took on Ralls in the first game of the playoffs scheduled for April 30. Results will be printed in next week's ENTERPRISE.

In a warm-up game, the Lady

The Ken Shelton Family

WORDS CANNOT EXPRESS the gratitude that we, the family of Mac and Noel Devin, feel for the people of Clarendon and Donley County who have been so loving and supportive of us in our time of sorrow. Friendships are never held so dear as when the loss of a loved one reveals their truest meanings. Your many kindnesses have sustained us and blessed us in ways we will always cherish. Mac and Noel loved life and each of you. That so many have returned their love to us fills our hearts with comfort. We wish we could name you all individually, but it has truly been overwhelming the depth and breadth of love and support that this community has shown us. Your actions whether in the form of prayers; donations to scholarships; gifts of plants, flowers, or food; or a simple kind word or remembrance - have justified everything we felt for the place that was our home. You have all been wonderful and we thank you so much. May God enfold you with his blessing and loving care. Karla Devin Nelson Devin
