ONION SEED LIKELY TO BE MIXED THIS YEAR.

Solomon Berlinger, United States Consul at Tenerife, where all of our onion seed comes from, has just made a report to Washington, and the report will likely interest the growers in this immediate section. The report is as follows:

"Tenerife has been for a large number of years the principal market in furnishing Bermuda, the West Indies and the United States, with onion seed for growing the onions that are generally known as Bermuda onions.

There are three kinds of seed grown, namely, the red, the white and the crystal wax.

Before planting the onions from whence the seed is grown they are carefully selected and put in the ground in October and early in November, the crop is ready to be gathered the following June and July.

The seed for shipment is packed in tin cans holding from 25 to 100 pounds, these again are placed in wooden boxes especially made to size, so as to avoid injury to the cans in transit.

The yield of seed is from 10 to 16 pounds for each 100 pounds of onions planted, some times it runs to 20 pounds and over, but this is considered extra ordinary.

The business of exporting onion seed to the United States started about eight years ago, when the Southern farmers, especially those in Texas, discovered that the onion known as the Bermuda could be grown on their soil, that it possessed the same flavor and was in all respects as good if not better than that coming from Bermuda.

In the year 1905 the declared export of onion seed at Tenerife was $46,612.85. Besides this about $15,000 worth was sent to England and afterwards shipped to the United States.

This year the declared export was $14,469.86 and about $5000 worth was shipped to England, which will no doubt be transhipped to the United States. All the seed is shipped before September 1, otherwise it would not reach the buyers in time to distribute it again to the farmers.

The onion seed crop this year was enormous and exceeded the demand; it is estimated that growers and dealers have a surplus of 10,000 pounds left on their hands.

In 1905 the entire crop was bought up and the prices realized were good, this result being partly due to the operation of a corner which, however, eventually came to grief.

Nevertheless, the good prices obtained not only induced the older growers to plant more extensively this year, but also brought other farmers into the business, and consequently the combination of increased output and smaller demand (much of the 1905 crop being still in the hands of the United States importers) has resulted in the present glut.

The cultivation of onion seed is a very risky business; while the plant is on the field it is liable to different diseases, which appear every year more or less, besides if not picked immediately it is ripe, the bulb that holds the seed is liable to open and the wind that prevails at all times of the year in these islands, scatter the seed, sometimes causing a very heavy loss.

Another feature is that of seed a year old not more than 20 per cent will germinate, while of fresh seed fully 25 per cent germinates.

There is no sure test of telling old from new seed, and the buyer must rely principally upon the honesty of the party from whom he purchases. Some experts claim that new seed can be detected by its strong odor, which it gradually loses with age.

I have been informed by one of the principal exporters of onion seed that the following is a very good test: Place some seed between a folded piece of flannel in warm water and let it remain there without disturbing it for five or six days; he claims that of the old seed not more than 16 per cent will germinate; of the new seed fully 80 per cent will germinate.

From all information received there will be very little red and white seed planted for 1907, and I would very strongly caution all importers to be very careful in placing their orders, and only to buy from responsible parties, who will guarantee the seed they sell to be new seed of the crop of 1907.

It has been the practice to a great extent to mix seed that remain unsold with that of the new crop, and no doubt it will be largely done next year.

In closing I may mention that this year's crop of crystal wax seed has all been sold; this kind of seed will be largely cultivated next year, the only kinds of onion seed that remain unsold being the red and white.

Is Doing Some Business.

Surveyor S. L. Chalk is a man that is doing some business these days. At present he is running three surveying outfit's and could put another in the field if he could get the men. He is expecting another Surveyor, Mr. Groos, of Encinal here today. The sub-division of a number of large ranches surrounding Cotulla is the cause of all this rush.

Don't forget the Democratic Rally at the Court House Tuesday night.

Letter From Max Goeth in Far Away Denmark.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Sept. 16th.—Believing that it might be of interest to you to get a letter from this part of the world I make use of a few spare moments to write. On August 13th I left Galveston on S. S. Kolon, landing in Bremen Aug. 30th. The voyage was an exceptionally good one and I enjoyed the jolly ship life. The passage through the English Channel is very pretty.

The high English coast with its magnificent cities is an interesting sight. From Bremen I went to Hamburg and for several days enjoyed the attractions of that great city. From Hamburg I visited various points in Northern Germany and on Sept. 11th started on a tour through Denmark, Sweden and Norway. I am now in Copenhagen or Copenhagen as the Danes call it. This historic old metropolis is one of the most interesting cities in the world. It is the great gathering place of the crowned heads of Europe; at present the royal yachts of both England and Russia are anchored in the harbor, one bearing the Czar and the other an English Princess.

The Danes impress me as a highly cultured people with a splendid system of Government. Here every resource is developed to its utmost extent and it is a lesson to a wasteful American to see how many people can make a living on a small area.

With best wishes to all my Cotulla friends, I am
Yours truly,
MAX GOETH.

W. E. Rasmussen is in from his ranch up the river this morning.

Mrs. Motheral of San Marcos is visiting her son in this city. Dr. J. D. Motheral.

A norther blew up about 9 o'clock last night and it was quite cool this morning. The thermometer was down to 51.

From Kansas to Texas.

J. J. Werner and family of Paola, Kas., were arrivals on yesterday's train and came to make Cotulla his home. They immediately moved into Col. Miller residence which Mr. Werner bought a couple of months ago.

Mr. Werner owns a section of land down the river and will open up a farm this winter. He expects to give fruit a thorough trial. He has also purchased some business lots and we understand he will build a brick business house in the near future.

Cotulla welcomes this estimable family.

Rain Covers All Southwest Texas.

A slow soaking rain fell all day Thursday and all of Southwest Texas was covered. The fall did not amount to a great deal but with the splendid season in the ground was sufficient to keep fall crops growing by jumps and was of great benefit to the young onion plants along the Nueces Valley.

The Revival.

The revival that has been in progress at the Methodist church for two weeks will come to a close tomorrow night. Rev. Joe A. Biggs, who has been doing the preaching is an able man and good crowds have been turning out to hear him. The business houses have been closing for the morning service and the Skating Rink has not been opening till after the close of the night service. There has been several additions to the church and Rev. Biggs' straightforward manner of presenting the Gospel has resulted in much good to the community.

Don't stop to look back—the other fellow will get ahead of you. Keep moving.

To use the expression of the Falfarrins Facts, this is "the country of the heart's content."

This is the year, the month and the week when the editor must once more remind his delinquent subscribers how badly he needs that dollar.

The "old timer" who used to take a canteen full of water along, when he went out to round up his herds, now takes a "slicker" instead. Things have changed in Southwest Texas.

There is no better way of building up our town than giving to our home business men our entire and exclusive patronage. The more we help each other the more we help the town.

Just one month from today until the general election. In some of the adjoining counties politics are red hot, but there is nothing doing in LaSalle. There is no opposition to the local ticket.

The boy who saves his money becomes the banker, the merchant, the professional man. The boy who never saves a cent makes the man who "earns his bread by the sweat on his brow," who never owns a home or enjoys the luxuries of life.

Every member of the Texas Press Association regretted to hear of the death of J. F. Henderson, editor of the Corpus Crony, which occurred a few days ago while bathing in the bay. Mr. Henderson had quite a reputation as an editorial writer. Two newspaper men have met their death in the bay at Corpus since the meeting of the Press Association there in June.

The Grand Jury of La Salle convenes next week. The semi-annual meeting of this body used to have its terrors for a part of our populace, but things have changed in Cotulla. Nobody gets excited now.

The advertising merchant is the one who does the business in these days of push and enterprise. There are more newspaper readers today than ever before in the history of the world. The newspaper places your business under the eyes of the buyer. He sees what he wants, and knowing where to find it, looks up the wide awake merchant who asked him to come and see him. Success in these days of sharp competition calls for eternal vigilance. You can't keep a hustler down.

If perchance this item should be read by some man who lives far away from here, and who is dissatisfied, and longing for a home in Southwest Texas, the land of sunshine and health, we ask you to make some investigations about Cotulla, and the lands surrounding. We would ask you to come and see our town and look at our land and take into your lungs a few draughts of our pure invigorating air.

Men have various ways of carrying money. Grocers, butchers and millers carry it in a wad. Bankers in clean bills, laid full length in a pocketbook. Brokers only fold the bill once, doubling the money as it were. The young business man carries it in his vest pocket. Farmers and drovers in their inside pockets, whether it $50 or 15 cents. Printers usually carry their money in other peoples pockets.

The Express of last Sunday contained an interview with the Bailey matter. The article is reproduced in this issue of the Record. It has excited the comment of many prominent men of the State, who have declared that it set forth views calculated to make people think. Judge Earnest is of the opinion that Senator Bailey will come out of this muddle a stronger man in the eyes of the people than ever before.

There is not a man in our city, however indifferent to the claims of Christianity, who would want to rear his family here if there were no churches or church influence, for he at once recognizes them as the guardians of the morals of the community. What would be the condition of this community at the end of the next ten years if from this time until then the churches were closed? To what extent would life and property be safe? And yet, with all the organized agencies of the churches, the devil too frequently holds high carnival. What might we not expect if wholly divested of these good influences?

It wasn't a Missouri editor but a printer's devil who was going through his first experience on "making up" forms. The paper was late and the boy got the galleys mixed. The first part of the obituary notice of a pious citizen had been dumped in the forms, and the next handful of type came off of a galley describing a recent fire. It read like this: "The pall bearers lowered the body to the grave and it was consigned to the flames; there were few if any regrets, for the old wreck had been an eyesore to the town for years. Of course there was individual loss, but that was fully covered by insurance." The widow thinks the editor wrote the obituary that way because the lamented partner of her joys and sorrows owed him five years' subscription.

It takes money to develop any new country. The man with money is what makes the mortgage, and had you noticed that there were a good many men with money coming to La Salle?

Once in a while some of our subscribers take us to task for failing to publish "all that happens." Should we publish all that is told to us we would be with the angels in about twenty minutes after our papers were mailed. We try to print all items that are news, or that will encourage, help or cheer any of our citizens along life's rugged road. We all doubtless would enjoy reading "all the news" when it's about the other fellow, but our policy is to turn over to the gossips the spreading of scandals that only leave sorrows in their trail.

You have doubtless heard it said that if a man lives a certain length of time in Texas he will never be content to live anywhere else. Well, we for one, can testify that this is true. When a few mornings ago, we walked up on the train, and found that during the night we had been borne again into this glorious land of sunshine and exhilarating ozone, we felt indeed that there is, after all, no place like Texas, particularly this Southwestern part of it, and most particularly this immediate section of which our healthful little town of Comfort is the center.—Comfort News

We were asked this week by a delinquent subscriber why we kept on sending the paper after the subscription date had expired. Every weekly newspaper in towns of this size are forced to do this. Should we stop subscriptions when time expires nine times out of ten the subscriber would give us a "culling down" for insinuating that his credit was not good. Rather than to cast a reflection on the credit of a subscriber to pay a small debt, it is next to a necessity for a home paper to continue sending the paper after the time has expired. It is not necessary for the city dailies or weeklies to follow this rule, as their subscribers live at a distance and are not personal friends as is the case with a majority of our subscribers. Our subscribers should deem it an honor to know that we do not doubt their integrity and continue to send them the paper after their time has expired. Should any desire their paper discontinued they should notify us and remit to date if they have not already done so.

EXPECTATIONS SURPASSED.

We look through the lianagment of the Tyler Commercial College of Tyler Texas, that they have been very agreeably surprised at the enormous enrollment they have enjoyed during the month of September. More than 100 new students were added to their already large attendance. We also understand that their correspondence indicates even a larger enrollment this month than last; they are expecting to enroll more than 1200 students this year, which we understand, is more than double the number ever enrolled by any other Southern Commercial College. We are fortunate in having located so near to us the most extensive and modernized, the most widely known business and commercial college in the entire South, and one of the largest in the United States.
