Kitty's Korner

By Kitty Montgomery

Ozona may have its shortcomings in some areas, but at least it doesn't have a city government competing with a county government, and the problem of financing both.

I have noticed that a city sales tax vote has been called for our sister city, Sonora, the last of February. I can't imagine voters there going for it, but many cities have.

I don't know the situation in other cities, but I do know that a city government in Ozona would be a duplicate of the county government and a wasteful tax burden on the resident.

Being the only town in the county, it would be nothing less than downright stupid for Ozona to have a city government. Enough wrangling goes on as is without having a city government fighting with a county government for the voter's tax dollar.

We may be considered out of step, having no mayor and all, by those little towns having all kinds of tax supported agencies, but we can laugh all the way to the bank.

Although it is tragic, the hordes of drop-outs and hippies being picked up here has its amusing moments. There are times when the space between the courthouse and the annex resembles a hippie commune. Usually they are picked up on a minor traffic violation and then officers find that they are in possession of illegal drugs, driving a stolen car, or guilty of some major offense.

However, to get back to where I started, as I was leaving the office one day last week John Harris drove in with the most out-of-sight crew I ever saw. If they had ever shaved or bathed, they didn't look it and one large, hairy creature was wearing a dirty, but brightly striped night shirt that came just below his knees. I have it on good authority that that was absolutely all he was wearing too. It was impossible not to laugh at the sight of this young man, but also impossible not to wonder how he got that way.

Those who advocate the legalization of marijuana should sit in this office day after day and see the results of its use. Almost without exception, the youngsters who are picked up here are under its influence or have it in their possession. Most of their stories are tragic and I have yet to see one who looks healthy and happy. This alone should convince all that drugs for kids is not the answer.

There is always an end of the road somewhere for these kids and it is never pretty. Why they even try it is a mystery to me. It's like the alcoholic who didn't know he was one until he started drinking and found that he was hooked.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR PARENTS

Popular entertainer Sam Levenson is known for his humor and his sharp repartee. But that Sam Levenson, the performer, has another side to his character, it is well demonstrated by the altogether serious and non-funny rules for parents which he calls his "Ten Home Remedies for Juveniles." They read as follows:

1. Thou shalt guard thy children in the home and on the street.
2. Thou shalt make thy home a sanctuary of love and devotion.
3. Thou shalt honor the teachers of thy children and teach thy children to honor them.
4. Thou shalt not condone the faults of thy children through a misguided sense of family loyalty.
5. Thou shalt teach thy children respect for the law and keep them from the companionship of children who indicate disrespect for the law.
6. Thou shalt not lead thy children into temptation by providing them with the means thereof: too much money, a car, or adult privileges.
7. Thou shalt enforce decency in the dress of thy daughters, and dignity in the dress of thy sons.
8. Thou shalt protect the morals of thy children from the indiscretions of youthful ardor and inexperience.
9. Thou shalt conduct thine own affairs in such a manner as to set an example worthy of imitation by the children.
10. Thou shalt not permit thy children to bear arms except in the service of their country.

Before I joined the Payroll Savings Plan all I could save was string.

When it comes to saving money, most of us can use all the help we can get.

Joining the Payroll Savings Plan is one easy way to force yourself to save. When you sign up, an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's automatic. Everything is done for you.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/2%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970...

with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Stick with the plan and before you know it you'll have a bankroll waiting. That's when you'll find you can do a lot more with money than you can with string.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

SENSING the NEWS

By Anthony Harrigan

CAPTIVES OF HANOI

In allowing a Canadian television team to interview two American airmen held prisoner in North Vietnam, the Hanoi regime sought to present the captives as opponents of America's Asian policies. The communists also endeavored to give the impression that the prisoners of war are well treated. As usual, Hanoi was engaged in trickery.

Americans trotted out for questioning by Western newsmen aren't free to express their real feelings. If they report the brutal and degrading treatment to which they are subjected, they or their fellow prisoners may be tortured or killed. Even if the men being interviewed don't fear for themselves, they aren't likely to say anything that will endanger their comrades.

If the television networks want to present an accurate account of life inside a North Vietnamese prison, they can interview the handful of Americans who have been released as an international political gesture. One of these former prisoners of war is Lt. Col. Norris M. Overly, USAF, who was shot down over North Vietnam in 1967 and spent five months in communist captivity.

In a recent talk at the annual Air Force Association meeting, Col. Overly told how he was wored to a 50-gallon oil drum and transported across the country. Women, children and old people, he reported, "would pick up rocks and come right up to you and bash you in the face."

Col. Overly was confined for a time in a little hut divided into 12 bamboo cells. He was placed in one of these cells, lying on his stomach with his feet in wooden stocks. His arms were tied behind him with wet ropes. He was forced to stay in this position for 29 days.

Arriving at the main POW prison in Hanoi, Col. Overly was placed in a tiny cell. Many of the cells have leg irons on the bed boards. The prison routine is arranged in such a way that the prisoners don't see each other and have no way of butressing their morale by a group presence. During the day, the prisoners are exposed to endless propaganda broadcasts. "This is what our men have been going through," Col. Overly said, "some for as long as six years."

While American New Left spokesmen regularly visit Hanoi and report the prisoners are being well-treated, Col. Overly described the true conditions. "I think we can safely say," he concluded, "that the North Vietnamese will go down in history as the most inhumane and cruel enemy we have ever fought because of the sheer number of years they are making so many of our men suffer."

Col. Overly's testimony should be borne in mind when one hears New Left apologists for Hanoi say that we should accept their "peace" terms and allow them to have a role in the government of South Vietnam. To allow this brutal regime to extend its will over additional millions of people would be an unconscionable act.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Parents vs. Grandparents

Jane and Eddie, a young married couple, showed almost no interest in their baby boy. Out of sheer necessity, Jane's parents took over the task of bringing him up.

But when he was three, Jane and Eddie decided they wanted him back. The grandparents refused to part with the boy, so the two couples squared off in the courtroom to fight for custody.

"Parents outrank grandparents," argued the younger pair. But it also appeared that Jane and Eddie drank too much, worked too little, and had no home of their own. The court ruled that the boy was better off where he was, with his grandparents.

It is not rare for parents and grandparents to disagree about the custody of a child. Generally speaking, the law puts its main emphasis on what is best for the child, even at the expense of parental sensibilities.

Nevertheless, in most instances, parents are indeed favored over grandparents because they are the "natural" custodians of their own offspring. As one court put it: "The law seeks to work in harmony with nature, and to continue those ties which bind man to his own flesh."

Thus, in another case, parents regained custody of their daughter even though they had no savings, no life insurance, and only a modest income. Noting that their income at least was steady and their habits sober, the court said:

"Unless they are to be deprived for all time of the love of their child, and of the opportunity to give her their love, they should be given that chance now."

Are a child's own wishes taken into consideration? Yes, if he is mature enough to have independent views. But usually this factor is not decisive by itself.

A 15-year-old boy, transferred to his parents' home after many years with his grandmother, was unhappy about the change. He said in a court hearing that, because of squabbling between his mother and father, he wanted to move back with his grandmother.

But the court held that the boy's discontent was not enough reason to grant his request. The court said he would probably soon get used to the shift from a sheltered existence with his grandmother to the normal abrasions of family life.

Conservationist Urges Greater Deer Harvest

If past records are a guide, the 1970 deer harvest will fall far short of that needed for sound range and wildlife management, an SCS wildlife specialist told a state meeting of the American Society of Range Management in San Angelo December 4. Clitis Sinclair, Crockett County SCS conservationist, reports.

James Henson, SCS biologist from San Angelo, said the deer harvest last year was more than 500,000 short of the number that should have been killed. He said that half a million deer represent not only lost income for landowners who sell hunting rights; it also means lost pleasure for hunters as well as over-population of deer on much of the state's grasslands.

"Deer have a high reproductive capability," Henson pointed out. "Herds on good rangeland with adequate food increase at the rate of from 25 to 40 percent per year. At least 25 percent of an established, healthy herd should be harvested each year to prevent over-population."

He said that since the state has about 3.1 million deer, some 780,000 should be killed each year. During 1969, less than 262,000 deer were reported killed which is only about 8.5 percent of the total.

"Deer and other kinds of wildlife cannot be stockpiled," the biologist pointed out. "If certain animals are not harvested by hunters, they will die of other causes."

Deer and livestock must be kept in balance with the kinds and amount of forage plants available, Henson emphasized. Rangelands can easily increase livestock numbers but have more difficulty controlling wildlife numbers. Hunting is the chief tool used in adjusting game.

The problem with much of Texas rangelands is that they are already fully stocked with livestock, Henson stressed. There would be no conflict if deer ate one kind of plants and livestock another; however, this is not the case. Even on well-managed rangeland which supports a wide variety of forage plants, deer and domestic animals compete for certain plants. Browse is the staple item in the year-long diet of deer. Succulent grasses and forbs, however, are essential components in the deer diet during the spring and summer. Without these foods, deer do not reproduce successfully.

He said that in terms of plant preference, goats, sheep, and cattle - in that order - are competitors with deer.

Henson told the group that he had made a study of Texas deer leasing practices and had found that deer leasing net-returns vary from a few cents per acre to $2.95 per acre. He said that the modified season lease method, with provisions for extra hunters to harvest surplus antlerless deer, yielded the highest net-return. Some 32 million acres were leased for deer hunting last year.

Ranchmen have a greater opportunity to manipulate livestock, deer populations, and deer habitat than anyone, Henson said. If he decides to produce the maximum amount of livestock, he produces fewer deer. If he wants to increase deer production, he can decrease livestock numbers which will leave more food for deer.

Habitat manipulation is also up to the landowner since about 88 million acres of Texas grasslands are covered with one or more kinds of brush. One-half of this area is so badly infested that forage for wildlife and livestock is sharply reduced. Although deer use open grasslands and clear areas, they prefer to feed near protective woody cover. Henson urged ranchmen who control brush to leave strips or patterns for deer cover.

He also urged ranchmen and range managers to make sure enough deer are harvested each year to prevent over-population of deer which help damage the state's grasslands. He also pointed to the possible increased income from hunting leases if deer kills were tripled in the state.

Tips For Gardeners

From The Ozona Garden Club By Mrs. Bailey Post

Have the recent balmy days tempted you to want to begin gardening in earnest?

January and February are unpredictable weatherwise, so garden work must be limited mild days between cold snaps.

Some have asked about when to prune. For best results, delay some pruning until late February or early March. All summer flowering shrubs and deciduous trees should be pruned before March. Pecans, fruit trees, crepe myrtle, etc. do not need to wait. For evergreens if the cuts are made just before new growth begins in the spring, the wounds will heal much faster and there will be less danger of insect and disease problems. Too, you will have less time to look at bare, newly cut branches if pruning is delayed. Some of these are photinias, cherry laurel and loquat. Nandinas that have grown too tall and leggy will be more attractive if cut off at staggered heights from within three inches of ground up to wanted heights when new growth is mature. If your nandinas fail to produce berries there are a number of possible reasons, not enough sun, too much nitrogen, not enough phosphate fertilizer or rain during the blooming season that interferes with pollination. Also, single plantings may not be as well pollinated as group plantings. Nandinas are one of the most colorful, easiest to grow, and less trouble with disease and insects for our area.

Rose pruning may be done anytime now, but I wait until between the tenth and fifteenth of March to avoid a late freeze killing the new growth and having to be cut back again. Deciduous (bare-root) shrubs and trees may be purchased at a more reasonable price than balled and burlapped plants. They should do well if planted carefully. Inspect for bruises, tears, or breaks and prune back beyond the injured point. Remove excessively long and unwieldy roots. Also prune back tops of plants. Spread roots and gently fill in about them with top or mixed soil. Set plants at same depth as they were in the nursery or yard if just moving them. Apply water while planting to drive air pockets out. After soil has been filled in around the roots, tamp down surface to stabilize plant. Leave a space six inches around the trunk or stem of the plant to catch water. This can be filled in later. This is a good time to inspect your garden tools and accessories for repairs that might be needed.

WASHINGTON AND SMALL BUSINESS AS HEARD BY HEARD

Iowa Sweet and Sour Ribs
H. R. Cross, the perennial Congressman from Iowa has for some time been sour on a sweet deal.

Back in February he protested volubly a decision of the Small Business Administration and it appears he is making points. For he reports the following:

"Last February 1," he comments, "I called attention to the outrageous decision by the Small Business Administration (which has a history of outrageous decisions) to guarantee a $274 million lease for a fledgling sugar refinery that wasn't even built and was to be run by men who'd never been in this highly competitive, low-profit margin industry."

"I am now pleased to note," the Iowa solon continues, "that on October 20 a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives issued a report which echoes my condemnation of this loan guarantee."

"The subcommittee report concluded that SBA does not have a reasonable basis to conclude that the Old Dominion Sugar Corp. would be financially profitable."

"It went on to state that 'it is evident, therefore, SBA's proposed lease guarantee can be summarized as taxpayer's money being used to guarantee rent payments by a company

Someone to thank

"God is a product of man's imagination," announced the dignified intellectual who occupied our TV screen. "God isn't dead," he argued as our children watched. "He was never alive!"

Mary and I felt that Christian children such as ours should realize that not everyone believes in God. Perhaps, knowing this, they could better understand the state of the world. We would encourage and answer their questions as best we could, confident that God would not allow their faith to be destroyed.

Later, before I tucked Kristen into bed, she clasped her hands and closed her eyes. "Dear Lord," she prayed, "thank you for Mommy and Daddy. Thank you for Zoomie (her goldfish) and Toddy and my new dress..." She stopped suddenly, and I raised questioning eyes to her. "Daddy," she said anxiously, "that man on TV doesn't have anyone to thank!"

Do you have Someone to thank? Come to church this Sunday.

publicized ill effects of the mind-expanding drugs, their use increases daily. I can't understand it, I guess in the long commercial of life, I'm just doomed to be "brand X." For some reason I just can't see what motivates this rapidly growing group.

There seems to be a great deal of discussion about the right or the wrong of some high state officials in the present financial scandal that has touched some of the highest officials in the state government.

I'm not an authority on these things myself, but common sense would force one to come to the conclusion that all is not above board when a poor country boy from out in the sticks gets elected by the home folks to represent them in Austin and the next thing you know he is independently wealthy and being mentioned as a possible candidate for president.

I see by the daily papers where one of my favorite lawmakers, Hilary Doran, is pushing the legislature to let the people vote on Daylight Saving Time for Texas in the general election of 1972. He feels that if the people of Texas do not want it, the next legislature will do away with it. We all hope he can swing it and whether he does or not, his stock went up considerably in his district just for the idea.

Most of the clubs and organizations have elected new officers lately here in Ozona and I'd like to give a hint to the reporters for the various organizations. Unlike large daily newspapers, the Ozona Stockman confines most of its news stories to local people and local happenings, strictly serving this community and those interested in it. The following quote from the Byliner will be helpful:

"Do not send anything in unless it has a 'local angle' - local area people attending, local people being named to committees - local people receiving appointments - local people being on the program. "Nobody in a community (other than yourself) is interested in a regional, state or national meeting unless it has local flavor to it."

Crockett Cancer Unit Wins Award

The Crockett County Unit Board of the American Cancer Society met at the Ozona United Methodist Church Wednesday evening. Mrs. Vic Montgomery presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Charles Williams.

Reports were given by chairman of Campaign, Memorial, and Service and Rehabilitation Committees, Mrs. C. E. Davidson III and Mrs. Jay Berry, new board members, were present. Mrs. Davidson is Special Events Chairman and Mrs. Berry represents the local chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority and will be a key worker in the April Crusade. Frank Graham, District Field Representative, presented a Golden Achievement Award to Crockett County Unit and to Mrs. M. E. Nicholas, 1970 Crusade chairman, "for reaching an all-time high in Crusade income and for exceeding the per capita goal of the Texas Division." Mr. Graham noted that Crockett County exceeded its best year by 243%.

A film strip was seen by members on stressing the importance of regular health check-ups, a vital weapon in the fight to conquer cancer.

Ozonan Returns From Visiting Injured Brother

Mrs. Buddy Phillips returned Friday from Houston where she had been at the bedside of her brother, Michael Willborn, a student at Rice University, who had been critically injured the previous Saturday night by an unknown assailant in a Houston apartment complex.

Wellborn, 22, had taken his date home around midnight when two young Negroes forced themselves into the girl's apartment. One drew a knife and stabbed Wellborn several times before the two fled after several other residents came out of their apartments.

An ambulance was called and the injured youth was taken to Ben Taub General Hospital, suffering a punctured lung and spleen, and stab wounds to the abdomen, neck and scalp. He underwent surgery for the internal injuries and his condition was improved before Mrs. Phillips left Houston. He had been on the critical list for several days after the incident.

Early Day Ozona Resident Subject Of Feature Story

Mrs. M. O. Valentine, formerly Mrs. Blake Mauldin of Ozona, was the subject of a feature article in the Newport Daily Independent, Arkansas newspaper, entitled "Oh Pshaw!"

Staff writer Eliza Dolittle, a close friend of Mrs. Valentine's wrote the article. It gives an account of Mrs. Valentine's very interesting, long life and much of it is devoted to the years Mrs. Valentine spent as a resident of Ozona.

She was one of the first school teachers in Ozona and many of her pupils still reside in Ozona. She was one of the first women to drive a car in Ozona and helped organize the now disbanded Ozona Woman's Club. She lived with her husband on their ranch southeast of town, now the George Bean ranch, until his untimely death in a train wreck many years ago. She stayed here and ran the ranch for about a year and then went to Chicago to continue her studies. She later met and married Maurice Valentine and moved to Newport where she resides now. They travelled extensively before his death.

Although Mrs. Valentine is confined to a walker and seldom leaves her home on Holden Avenue, she has kept up her interest in the world around her and has just finished reading Shakespeare's "Henry V" to a small group. Her love of the stage and particularly Shakespeare is as intense as ever.
